MILLIE AND MOLLIE

"I've come to ask you for the hand of your daughter," said young Bromstumbling to the seat offered him by the girl's father.

"Which one?" asked old Dimmock, the coal merchant, laying down the newspaper. "Sometimes I think it is Mollie, and again I am sure it is Millie," replied young Bromley, genuinely perplexed. The old coal merchant looked sympa-

"You can't have both," said he, after an awkward pause.

"They're splendid girls, good enough for anybody!" exclaimed the young "I could be happy with either of

"I'm disposed to think," observed old Dimmock, "that you have been happy with both of them."

"So they've told me more than once," said Bromley, with the pleasantest light of recollection in his eyes.

Well, can't you make up your mind which girl you want to marry?"
Young Bromley did not answer for a moment, and then he said slowly: "Which do you think sounds the better —'Millie Bromley' or 'Mollie Bromley?' Sometimes I've looked at it in that way."

"I don't think there's much to choose," returned the old coal mer-choose," returned the old coal merchant, weighing the question with overy desire to be fair.

"You know," continued the young man, "there have been times when I've gone to bed perfectly charmed with the name 'Millie Bromley,' and in the morning 'Mollie Bromley,' and in the morning 'Mollie Bromley has caught my fancy. Millie, Mollie! Mollie, Millie—it's an awful puzzle."

"Of course you've proposed to one of ley.

"Then that is the girl you want to marry," exclaimed the old man triumphautly. "Why, it's simple enough, after all. You've taken quite a load off my mind. Which one was it?"

"It was Millie, I think," answered young Bromley hesitatingly.

"Think! Good Lord, don't you know?"

The young man flushed and looked reproachfully at the coal merchant.

"Mr. Dimmock," said be, "I'll put it to you as man to man. Which is Millie and which is Mollie?"

"Don't cross examine me, sir," rejoined the old man. "If you want to many one of the girls it's your basis.

mary one of the girls, it's your ousiness to find out."

"Heaven knows," cried young Bromley in anguish, "I want to marry either millie or Mollie, and have her all to myself. It's trying enough for a fellow to be over head and ears in love with one girl, but when there are two of them it's more than flesh and blood can stand."

"There, there, my boy," said the old coul merchant southingly, "don't take on so. Either girl is yours with my blessing, but I want to keep one for my self. Let me see if I can help you out," and going to the open French window

he called:
"Millie, Mollie! Mollie, Millie!" Yes, papa. we're coming two sweet, well bred voices from the shrubbery.

There was a tripping of light feet along the stone walk under the grape vine, and Millie and Mollie bloomed into the room.

"How do you do, Mr. Bromley?" they said together, with the same inte-nation and the same merry glint in their eyes.

Millio had auburn hair and brown cyes. So had Mollie. Millio had a Cu-pid's bow of a month, little teeth like pearls, and a dimpled chin. So had Mol-lic. Millie's arms, seen through her lic. Millio's arms, seen through her muslin sleeves, were round and white. So were Mollio's. There was nothing to choose between Millio's bust and Mol-lio's bust as they stood side by side.

"Well, papa?"
"Young Bromley tells me," began old Mr. Dimmock, after he had taken drafts of their fresh young beauty by looking first at one and then at the other and then dwelling upon the features of both with one eye sweep, "that my wife in the summer house—and—I kissed you. That was before supper, and later in the evening, when we sat on the front steps, I said that I couldn't live without you, and that we must get married."

"Before we go any further," inter-rupted the coal merchant, "which is Milles and which is Mollie? When your dear mother was alive, she could tell the difference sometimes, but I don't know to this day.

"Oh, how dull you are!" said the girls in duet. "I think this is Millie on the right."

spoke up young Bromley.
"Why, Mr. Bromley," said she, "I am Mollie."

"Very good; now let's go on," said their father. "Where were we? Oh, yee, young Bromley says that he asked you to be his wife, Millie, and declared be

"I beg your pardon, papa," said Mollie. "He told me that he couldn't live without me."

without me."
"Well, let's get our bearings," continued the old coal merchant. "Bronnley, you asked Millie to marry you down in the summer house, and you kissed her? That's correct, isn't it?"

"There's no doubt about that, sir,"

"There's no doubt about that, sir,"
said Bromley eagerly.

"And after supper when you sat together on the stoop you told Mollie that you couldn't live without her?"

"That I deny, sir. Oh, I beg your pardon, Molly, you needn't look so angry. I meant no offense."

"Did you kiss Mollie?" went on the old man relentlessly.

"No, sir; I"— "Yes, you did, Mr. Bromley," flared up Mollie.
"I admit," said the young man,
"I admit," said the young man,

struggling with his emotions, "that I kissed her when I said I could not live without her, but it wasn't Mollie." "Oh, Mollie!" said Millie. "How could you?"

"Now, Millie, do be reasonable," now, anne, do be reasonable, and Mollie.
Old Mr. Dimmock looked mystified.
"It seems to me," said he, with a show of impatience, "if I were in love with one of those girls I could tell the difference between them. So far as I can make out, young man, you have saked Millie to be your wife and have tried to make Mollie believe that you could not live without her. Now, to any one who does not know Millie and Mollie your conduct would appear to be confidence. perfidious. Of course as between you and Mollie I must believe Mollie, for the girl certainly knows whether you kissed her. " The old man eyed both his daughters. Millie was biting her nether lip, and so was Mollie. But Mollie was trying to op from laughing.

Old Mr. Dimmock had an idea. "I would like to clear up this thing to your satisfaction and my own, Brom-ley," said he. "Let me know whether Mollie kissed you when you told her you couldn't live without her?"

The young man got very red in the face.

"You mean Millie, of course," he replied, with embarrassment. "Perhaps she wouldn't mind my saying that she did kiss me in the summer house. she didn't kissme on the stoop. I kissed her."

"How is that, Millie, Mollie?" asked their father.
"Papa," said Mollie decidedly. "I couldn't keep Mr. Bromley from kissing me, but I assure you I didn't kiss Mollie looked her father straight in the eye and then shot an indignant shaft at Mr. Bromley. Millie hung her head and her face was as red as a poppy.

"I think," said the old man dryly,
"that it's plain I'll keep Mollie and we'll have that marriage before you make another mistake, young man."— New York Sun.

A Weapon of Ancient Pugilists.

The four ounce glove was unknown to the ancient pugilist. When the boxors and fighters came together in the old days of Greece, they were upon their hand the cestus, which was in itself a terrible adjunct to any fighter. But Dr. Daniel G. Briton has discovered that there was sometimes attached to the cestus a deadlier weapon, consisting of a three pronged fork of bronze.

This was known as the myrmox, and

This was known as the myrnics, and Dr. Brinton, who found this specimen, has given it to the museum of archeology in the University of Pennspivania. Clussical literature has frequent refercnoss to the myrmex, which is described as the deadliest weapon of the ancient in the decadest weapon of the adactive pugilist. The right hand was swathed in tough hide, bound in place with thougs and supplemented by small knobs of lead or iron, to which was fulfixed the myrmex. Dr. Brinton made his discovery in Paris by examining the Greek and Roman marbles in the Louvre. One of these groups represented a fighter bearing on his right fist the cestus and myrmex.

Combats in those days were much more brutal and dangerous that those of the modern prize ring. It is easily seen that a single blow of the myrmex might cause douth or permanent injury.

ABOUT ROYAL FEET.

Queen Victoria Wears a No. 8-The Empress of Germany Splay Footed.

Though it is an accepted fact of Spanish etiquette that "the Queen of Spain has no feet," so much cannot be said of Victoria, Empress of India. Oneen of Great Britain and Ireland. Short and pudgy as she is—something under five feet—the royal lady wears a No. 8 as do all her daughters.
Therein she shows her German blood

Dewey Got Even with Farragut.

When Dewey was first lleutenant of one of the gunboats which Farragut used as a dispatch boat the admiral used often to come aboard and steam up near the levee to reconnoitre. The Southerners had a way of rushing a field piece to the top of the high bank, thing point blank at the gunbeat and then bucking down again. Upon one such occasion Farragut saw Dewey dodge. "Why don't you stand firm, leutenant?" said he; "don't you knew you can't Jump quick enough?" A day or so after the admiral dodged a The licutemant smiled and held his tongue, but the admiral had a guilty conscience. Living Without a Stomach.

At Zurich there lives a woman who was deprived of her stomach five months ago by Professor Schlatter, of that city. It was a daring operation, but her only chance of life. The mysery is how she contrives to exist, but she is well, eats well, and has gained flesh since she lost her stomach. The secret is that the Professor, after re moving the stomach, joined the intes-tine to the digestive tube. It was known that digestion is not completed in the stomach, but goes on in the in-testine, by means of the pancreatic juice, and the intestine now does duty for a stomach. The woman lives chiefly on nilk, boullion, and meat cut Frames for Fans. Fan-shaped frames or standards for the mounting of rare fans, to be used as a bit of bric-a-brac, are, of course, to be had, and are useful when one's collection is not too large. A woman who had a number of beautiful faus contrived for their display by mounting them against a banner of maroon velveteen. The fans were opened and stitched fast to the velvet at convenient points where the stitches would not show and no injury could be done to the fan. The whole banner was then mounted on a brass rod and hung sometimes on a door against a portiere, and, on occasion, with the rod slipped out, and made fast to a screen panel.

The United States now take more coffee than the whole of Europe, where Germany leads with 136,390 tons. France coming next with 77,310, while tea-drinking England is satisfied with 12,420 tons.

Latest to Wash Fabrics. New wash fabrics called "benga-line fancies" are shown in a pretty range of colors and designs. Creped zephyra come from Scotch looms in delicate tints of green, cream, cell blue, and mauve. Smoothly woven French ginghams have a glossy twill stripe that looks like satin, and cotton crepalines are as lustrous of surface as silk. Watteau designs are printed on chiffon and sheer India and Swiss mus-lins. The colorings are exquisite, and the floral patterns extremely beautiful.

A Use (or Old Challie Fracks.

Fine all-wool challie dresses which have fallen a prey to moths and are no longer wearable cut into the pret-tiest soft pillow covers. It is usually easy to dodge the moth-holes sufficiently for cushion covers, and, made with a ruffle, they are, particularly if in ight designs, extremely effective. They ight designs, extremely effective. They are more durable than slik ones because of their laundering qualities, and soil less easily than those made of linen or dimicy.

Etamines Easily Frayed

The new etamines have a very open mesh and a silky surface. They are beautiful to look at and come in lovely sections speaker and are rectures de-seribing the natural resources and ad-vantages of California are illustrated with kinetoscope pictures taken directly under her supervision. The Densest Constation,

The greatest density of the popula-tion in the world is claimed for Bombay, and is only disputed by Agra, The population of Bombay amounts to 760 persons per acre in certain areas, and in these sections the street area only the entire population massed in the streets for any purpose, the density would equal 3,040 persons per acre.

The Deepest lake.

The deepest lake in the world is Lake Baikal, in Siberia. In some parts it is 5,261ft. deep; its length is 397 miles, with an area of 15,000 square mlles. It is the largest lake in Asia, and the sixth largest in the world.

The Longest Year

The year 47 B.C. was the longest year on record. By order of Julius Caesar, it contained 445 days. The additional days were put in to make the seasons conform as nearly as possible with the solar year.

The most important island in the Capary group is Tenerife, whose famous mountain is known to navigators as one of the most imposing landmarks in the world. The mountain rises 12, 182 feet above the sea, the peak having the form of a sugar loaf. Considering the fact that the island is itself a mountain. springing almost perpendicularly from the ocean, the bottom of which is six niles below, Tenerife is the loftiest peak in the world. Beside it Mont Blanc is a pygny. Cotopaxi, Kinchin-junga and Monnt Everset dwindle by comparison. While all the islands are volcanic and all contain evidences of very recent action, Tenerife is the only one which still continues in eruption. The summit of the mountain is a circular wall, inclosing a crater a mile in diameter and over 100 feet in depth. From the offing, and even from the sea-shore, the sides of Tenerife seem as though carved by hand, but the im-uense size of the mountain is in promense size of the mountain is in pro-portion to this crater, although it seems incredible to the looker on that at the mountain top there should be one of the largest oraters in the world. The great crater of Temprife has been quiescent ever since the island was rediscovered by Europeans early in the fifteenth century, but in scores of places on the mountain side there are smaller craters which continually emit sulphurous steams and gases and occasionally throw of soft tissue paper, such as men use when shaving, if used to remove mois-ture and "shine" from the skin before powder is applied. Soap and warm water, with a thorough rinsing of clear, warm water, must, of course be used once a day; after that the pe user once a day, after that the paper should be aplied whenever the face needs cleaning. The case for holding this paper should be very like the shaving paper cases we have been making for years for brothers and cousins and uncles, but just double the star as the trans the start way he the size, so that each sheet may be as large as a full-sized handkerchief. Any woman who tries this paper for n week will wonder how she has ever dene without it.

The Beautifying Box.

In warm westher the face powder becomes almost a necessity, for a shiny, greasy complexion will spol freshest and prettlest tollet im aginable.

If powder is used luxuriously each day after the bath (and, by the way, when the powder is daintily per-funed it is a very subtle method of making my lady a flower-like presence) it becomes, if bought in the ordinary way, a rather expensive item. A dime and a very little time and labor will supply a plut boxful. The ably cost fifty cents. Half a poind of ordinary starch is to be well crushed under the rolling pin, mixed with two ounces of fresh powdered ordis root, then put through an ordinary of the put through through the put mary sifter and afterward shaken through an ordinary bag of black muslin. The orris root should be bought at a reliable wholesale druggist's, for, if fresh, the odor will be almost precisely that of newly gathered vloiets.

A simple and efficacious cure for plinples should be kept in the heautifying box. The very thing is a little "flour of suiphur" (an ounce will cost a few cents), blended with sufficient spirits of camphor to make a paste. The instant there is a hint of such a distigurement rub a little of the paste on the spot over night, and it should disappear by morning.

No beautifying box is complete without soap bags for the bath. These may be made of cheese cloth, or, betdelicacy of the skin after using for a week a bag cunningly filled will insure its constant use. The filling and donned his own, amid the cheers of should be a quart of bran, a table-spoonful of freshly powdered orris root, the same of almond and half an ordinary cake of white eastile soap, shaved in thin strips; mix well. The bags should be made with a drawing string.

Rock sait does not suggest anything to melt occasionally in the warm wa-ter for my lady's bath it will tone the skin and help to bring a dainty flush to the cheek.—Kansas City Star.

How Women May Succeed.

If there is any one thing which a woman can do well, to which she can give her whole energy, she will be likely to succeed in the doing of it. A woman was left a widow with children, and no money. She was sently bred and educated.

"But I know nothing theroughly," she said, "except cookery, I can cook."

"Then find opportunities to teach other women to cook," said a friend, A few appliances were procured, and she began lecturing and giving les-sons to women in cookery in the city In which she lived, and in the neighboring towns. She has carned a moderate but comfortable income for herself and her children.

A young girl, suddenly left penni-less, was an expert in nothing but dressing hair. She sought dilligently for business in one or two important inland cities, where confures were unknown, teaching women how to care for their hair and to dress it becomingly, and thus supports herself.

Still another gld, obliged to earn her brend, recollected that she had n peculiar skill in putting up luncheons for the children. She sent out cards and made applications to the mothers of the numlis of a large private school stating that she would furnish wholesome and dainty luncheous at recess.
An old colored woman with a white apron and gorgeous turban carried the white packages in a huge basket. The trade was unlaue, and proved so successful that k extended to the successful that k extended to the students of a great university in the same city, Ifau a dozen old "mammys" supplied their ravenous demand, affording a very satisfactory pecuniary profit to the young woman.

In unusual occupations there will be few rivals, and if they minister to the simple needs of a class of persons they will generally meet with success if conducted with ordinary good sense and Industry.

Nature Ilita Back.

The penalty for stiff linen collar wearing for women is a ruined throat, Attendants at Turidsh bath houses massenses and others accustomed to viewing large numbers of women will all testify to the universal strip of ugly yellow skin that hands the throats of ladles whose nocks are oftimes flawless. Nature does not stime abuse; she hits back. Apply harsh and irritating ligatures to throat and waist, and there is a pretty crop of disorders of one kind all another to distress the woman who tortures her body into conforming to what is for her an impossible fashion.

Smart Traveling Gowns.

The navy and army blue serges, foulards, mobairs, and light-weight costume cloths are made into stylish tal-lor-costumes for traveling and general wear, that hold their own against all and novel gowns which the present season has produced.

A Clever Ruse.

At Scotch werldings, some years ago, it used to be the custom to batter the hat of the bridegroom at he was leaving the house in which the ceremony took place. On one of those occasions a newly married couple—relatives of the bridegroom-determined to carry out the observances of this custom to the letter.

The bridegroom heard them discuss ing their plans, and despatched a mes-senger to the carriage—which stood waiting—with his hat some time pre-vious to his departure. Then donning the hat of a male relative who had plotted against him—a new silk chimney pot of the latest style—he prepared to go out to the carriage.

No sooner had he got to the door than his hat was furlously assaulted, and almost destroyed. He walked out of the house amid the laughter of the bystanders and entered the vehicle: ter still, knitted or crocheted from bystanders and entered the vehicle; soft coarse cotton, like that used for then, taking the battered hat from his knitting wash rags. The softness and head, he threw it into the hands of its all present.

Fancy Grenadines.

The fancy grenadines are invely this year, as indeed are all the erw grenadines, for never was there such a wonderful and beautiful variety. elegant, also, are the silk nets, and difvery dainty, but if a quart is allowed ferent importing houses show different treatment of these handsome textiles. At one establishment the black net is in princesses form, over a sheath-shaped slip of cherry-red moire. At another noted house the beautiful black net has a foundation of ivory satin with bodice trimmings of white lisse almost covered with black guipure lace sprays and insertions. A third gown is decorated all over with cut jet bow garlands, arabesques, and This gown is made up over scrolls. nasturtium satin, and the collar and girdle are of brillant orange velvet.

For Slender Women. Less of the opaque white fabrics are shown among the season's patterned transparents than those in cream, anary, and Spanish yellow, willow green, cle! blue, reseda, rose, and vlo-let in exquisite tintings. In making up these textiles the greater portion show an alry overdress, loose from its gored under skirt, but united at the top, one belt holding both skirts. Less diaphanous looking tollets for rather stout women show the outside skirt sewed in with each gored breadth of the un-derskirt. The very popular frills and flounces must likewise be eschewed and but tall, slender women look well in frilled skirts.

Itain Water for Blankets. A city housekeeper contrives to have rain water to wash her blankets before putting them away for the summer She does this by tapping the eaves-pipe, using a large clean barrel to hold the water. It should not be put under during a shower, but after a steady rain has washed the soot and dirt from the roof, and the water is flowing clean. Nothing is better than this kind of water for the blankets. It is easy to manage their washing at home with a little care. Some housekeepers put them in a pair a week, but if an odd day towards the latter end of the week is taken, it can all be done at once.

The Wasp Pest.

This is the moment when in coun-ry homes a little preventive action will be productive of much comfort in relation to the wasp post. These beligerent little insects have by this time appeared and located themselves in their nooks in the crevices of piazza-

BROCADES BIDDING FOR FAVOR. Pink is the Desired Color Under Thin 1 Blaterials

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.) making a bid for favor, and the prospect now is that autumn will bring this particular variety of dress goods to the front once more. Fashlon, like history, is sure to repeat itself, even though it is never quite on the same old lines. Venetlan gulpure lace and insertion is the trimining on the babtiste goven, and a pretty touch of color is given by the belt and collar band of pale yellow green satin.

A delicate shade of yellow pink is one f the most favored colors for the silk linings under transparent materials of white, ccru, pale blue and gray. Some of the light India silk gowns are quite as pretty as the muslins, one model lined with pink silk being especially charming.

A series of broad tucks, sloping to ward the front to give a pannier effect of the modes of skirt decoration seen on thin gowns. Wide blas folds are sometimes substituted for the tucks, as they can be arranged in the various de sired forms much more easily. It is evident, too, among the latest sowns, that folds are a decided feature of dress trimming, an example of which is a white crepe de chine, trimmed up to the knees with wide folds of the same stuff put on in waved lines all around. The bodice is similarly deco-rated with bands of Venetian lace between the folds. A contrasting colu s sometimes employed for this mode of trimming, white taffeta being used with striking effect over figured fou-lards. The folds may be put on to lan a trillo over each other, or separated by their own width with a row of lace insortion between, as you fancy, and atill another pretty mode of using thom is to head each one with a tiny ruche bearing a of chiffon or satin ribbon, bear narrow space between the folds.

Rudolph-Wily did you insist on her charge me storage,-Atlanta Journal, sleasly massed.

It is noticeable that the beruffled sofa cushions again in favor. was a decided attempt to banish the long-popular double and single rullles Brocatied materials of all sorts are from these ubiquitous comforts, but cords and ruchings seem to fall in the desired effect, and the spring output is fluffy with flounces. Cushions covered with China silk are edged with a double ruffie of the same material. the under ruffle being of a delicate shade to correspond with the tone of the design, whether it be a woven de-sign or an embroidered one; as, for example, a bunch of yellow marguerltes embroidered on some cafe-au-lait silk has the under ruffle of the same yellow tint as the heart of the dalsles. Pink wild roses in a design upon a pale blue ground has the second ruffle of pale pink. A pretty but very delicate sofu pilion was covered with green China silk in the bright shade popular this spring, and over this is fitted a dotted muslin cover, the frill of the white showing prettily through the green silk ruffle.

Milk Toust.

Milk toast, as it is served on mine tables out of ten, is uneatable. Properly prepared, it is not only a good lish for the light menu allowed a convalescent, but is welcomed eagerly by the children of the family, certainly if grated maple sugar is sent around with To two cups of scalded milk-and the milk should be merely scalded, not bolled, and if there is a scum, which there should not be, it must be removed--to this amount of milk, stir in a paste made of a scant table-spoonful and a half of flour, wet in a little cold water. To the flour, while it is dry, add a good salt-spoonful of salt. When the paste is mixed with the milk, it should be cooked in a double boiler, stirring constantly. When it is about as thick as cream, a piece of butter the size of a walnut is added. The bread toasted dry is dipped into the sauce, each slice remaining until evenly tender, when it is piled lightly on a small platter, and what sauce is left noured over and around it. It should be eaten while very hot.

"Ferdinand," said she, lovingly, across the golden chrysanthemums, 'Ferdinand, dear, if I were to die, what would you do?"

He was just putting a piece of roast beef into his mouth and he chewed on in silence. Then, with the brutality of a man bent on his dinner, he said: "I'd send for an undertaker."

And he doesn't know yet why she wouldn't kiss him good-night.

Diamandi, a native of Pylaros, one of the Greek islands, seems to be a re-markable calcultor. After a mere glance at a black-hoard, on which thir-y groups of figures are written, he can, It is said, repeat them in any order and deal with them by any arithmetical process. It is said that he never makes an error in calculations involving billions, and he can extract square or cube roots with marvellous rapidity and accuracy. An eminent German specialist declared the other dag that all these ready-reckoners were dots. This is not the case with Dia-mandi, who writes poetry and novels in the intervals of business, and show onsiderable intellectual capacity.

He Seeded Something to Do.

AT THE THEATRE.

Next week August 1st, Tony Pastor resents the following big bill: The Sidmans, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sidman, in the grand character picture, "The Man From Red Hook," John C. Fox, late of Conroy and Fox and Katie Allen in "The Flat Next Door," characters: Dollie Dimple, a music hall soubrette. Katie Allen; J. Felix Doolittle, a man about town, John C. Fox, the manikin effect and dance is the idea of Melville Stoltz, Boyle & Graham, as Mr. Goodplayer and Sal Skinner, Pollie Holmes, the Irish Duchess, Callando, the lightning clay modeler, busts of all the war celebrities, Sampson, Schley, Dewey, Cervera, Toral, etc., the famous lady sharpshooters, Cook & Clinton, in their womlerful exhibition of rifle shooting playing a tune on the xylophone with rifle bullets, Flatow & Dunn, in an orig Borani Bros., the disappearing demons, Mr. and Mis. Byron Spanne, the farmer and the "Lean Gal," Sanford & Hensel, the German immigrants, McWaters & Tyson, comedy sketch duo. Nelson sisters, song and dance artists, Miss Ennice Hill, eccentric songs and dances.

Another bull's eye in the matter of immeial success, was scored at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre last week The best that is in continuous vaudeville, with the customary debut of a prominent dramatic star is in the score of features scheduled for production at Proctor's, week of Aug. Ist. The dram atic feature will be the popular Metropolitan comedian Frederic Bond. For his vandeville debut, he will use a dainty comediette, "Her last Rehearsal." A special company will support Mr. Bond.

The lions of the vandeville portion of the bill are Williams and Walker, the 'Kings of Koon-Dom." Williams and Walker are surrounded by a company of the cleverest "coons" in the profession. With the assistance of a corp of pretty "yaller gals," they will present their new stage creation, "Cake Walking Idealized." Among the remaining special features, recognized as leaders, are Lillie Western, Ri e and Elmer, C. W. Wiliiams, Joseph P. Carey, Lucy Nelson, Kathleen Warren, O. K. Sato, Nordheim, Swan and Barboyd, Troubadour Trio and others.

The seeker after theatrical amusement these days, must go to the "continuous Houses willingly, for they are all that is left for the patron of amusenments, these warm days. The offerings are so acceptable, however, that it must be looked gain at 10c, to go at...... upon as a survival of the fittest. The bill at the Pleasure Palce this week is an excellent example of a high class variety and illustrates splendidly, the resource of this kind of entertainment.

Keith's pretty little Union Square theatre is one of the coolest play bonses in New York. Every day the theatre is crowded with men, women and children and next week will be a gala one at this theatre. One of the strongest bills ever presented at a continuous performance house will be given. Every unmber or the long program is well worth seeing.

. Is it a Case of Suicide?

While playing in the woods near Dov er on Sunday two little girls found a man's coat and vest and a new satchel. On being opened the satchel was found to contain among other things a number of letters addressed to Eustis J. Batchelder, Westfield. N. J., and a contract between a man of that name and Alfred Berner, of Westfield. The chief of po-lice of Dover, was notified and searching parties are now scouring the wooded hills in search of the man or his body.

E J Batshelder came to Westfield in September, 1897 and went to work for Mr. Berner where he stayed until about four weeks ago when he was discharged as he refused to do his work. He was a young man about 22 years of age and of a very sullen disposition. When he left here he was supposed to have plenty of money with him. A letter from the young man's father, who lives at Johns burg, Vt., was received about two weeks ago in which the father said he had not heard from his son in over two months.

The officials at Dover think the man's mind has become deranged and that he s wandering over the mountains near that city.

"The Purest and Sweetest that Nature can Yield,"

Where celery can be grown well it is a profitable crop, particularly if the grower has a home market, and sells direct to the consumer, as he should do to reap the full reward of his labor, and the capital invested. Good celery is a good salesman, it not only speaks for itself, but for all that goes with it. The gardener that grows good celery has his products sold in advance, bis coming is a waited with interest, and he will soon dispose of his load at good prices.

Celery is mostly grown as a second erop, although not unfrequently as a third. As a second crob it usually follows early cabbage, and the soil that to we early canding, and the son that is congenial to the one is to the other.

The best soil for celery is a heavy, deep, sandy loam, and the situation is naturally moist. It is useless to attempt the growing of celery on a dry, light soil, as it will not endure a drouth. In such seasons the gardener loses his crop. Good plants are the first requisites of good celery. They must be strong, vigorous and perfectly healthy. To seeme such they should be twice transplanted before selling; they should moreover have plenty of room to allow them to grow wide as well as tall. When first lifted from the seed bed set them five inches apart each way. Do not cut back to make the plants strong, as is a com-mon practice, but let them have sufficlent room to grow strong, as they naturally will without mutilation. Where cabbage is the first crop the soil should be sufficiently rich for cel-ery without additional minure, but should may be considered necessary let it be thoroughly rotted and pur under the plants, instead of around them. Make the trenches deep and put the manure at the bottom. Fill the trenches with soil thrown out, and set the plants on a level, never below the surface. Exercise great care in setting, so that the crowns of the plants are not covered, and to have the soil pressed firmly about the roots. Never plant the self-blanching varlettes, as the loss of color indicates weakened vitality. To have celery delicious and tender it is necessary to earth it up, no matter what the variety may be. For late white's use I prefer the best of the pink varieties, both because of their rich, narty flavor, and their excellent keeping qualities. If winter spinach is the first crop taken off in the spring, and this is followed by second early peas, celery can easily be made a third Crop.—American Agriculturalist. 🕠

tion calls attention to the fact that if properly used pure kerosene may be applied to apples, pears, quinces, plums, cherries, peaches, and a large variety of other trees for killing the San Jose scale. He shows that pear trees were sprayed in February and no scales were visible until the following September. These probably came from neighboring tres. The essential point and the one that must be observed carefully, is the use of the fluest spray possible that will apply a very thin coating at a time when weather conditions are tavorable for rapid evaporation. The trees themselves should be dry when the kerosene is applied. Any departure from these suggestions may prove in-jurious. At present there is no perfect sprayer or atomizer on the mar-ket. If this is secured the kerosene can be applied without much danger of bad results.

Best Soil for Kaspberries.

Any really rich land will grow rasp-berries, but a moist, well-drained clay loam is probably the best. For commercial purposes, select a few var-lettes that are well known in the market, as a shipment of one kind will sell much better than one composed of half a dozen sorts. Spring planning is most common and usually most catisfactory. Set as soon as the soil is in good working condition, putting the plants in rows six feet apart and three feet apart in the row. Give clean and thorough culture until the latter part of August.

Whitewash makes as good a preventive as anything that can be used. Apply to the trunk of the tree and carry it above the origin of the malu carry it above the origin of the main branches. The old dead wood should be primed out and burned at once. If the tree is badly infested with borers, cut it down and burn. If allowed to remain it will aid in spreading the trouble. If only a small por-tion has been injured, cut this away. burn the discused portions and whitewash the wound.

Sitolng Potatoes.

In France polatoes were buried in the interior of a crimson clover silo. The heat caused by fermentation cooked them and they came out in a much more digestible condition than when they went in. In another test the potatoes were surrounded by the whole corn plant and upon opening, both corn and potatoes were found in good condition. The cooking was less advanced than in the clover sile.

New Treatment for Lice,

Two hens, budly infested, were flipped in a bath of boiled elder flowbra, twigs and leaves, the elder con-coction being mixed with some soft soan. In both instances all the lice were killed and the plumage in ue Ties damaged.

A UNIQUE FEATURE OF THE CON-

Pleasure Taken by the Sightless in the Room Set Apart for Them-Fields of Literature Open to Thom-A Daily system of Readings.

All good Americans should hope to visit the Congress Library before they dle. It is one of the world's wonders, well worth a trip across a continent to

A sign points a directing hand tothe reading room for the blind, and following it you enter the strangest room in the library, and, indeed, the strangest reading room in the worll, for this is the only library known to contain special provisions for the blind. The idea of having reading room for the blind was suggested to Mr. Young, the librarian, by a woman whose heart had been touched by the plaint of a blind girl friend that there was so little opportunity for the most helpless class of persons in the world to have access to the literature for which they longed.

The room dedicated to this purpose is of good proportions, shady, cool, with great windows filled with growing plants, the touch and scent of which are a constant delight to the readers. The furniture suits the room and numbers among its pieces an unusually fine carved desk of historic value and a table to match. The blind appreciate this furniture very much and are proud of it, often feeling of the carving and speaking of its beautles. Around the walls of the room are ranged the cases containing literature for the blind, and the room is divided in the center by a large screen, behind which the readers can retire and so escape the observation of casual visitors. On the carved table is a beautiful vase a wift from a Washington woman, and it is daily filled with cut flowers, which come as offerings from seeing people to their less fortunate friends.

The special attendant in charge of this room has a large responsibility resting upon her. She is Miss Etta Josselyn Giffin. The privilege of readlng in a room by themselves meant two things to the blind. It afforded an opportunity to read books that had hitherto been unobtainable, and it was an acknowledgment of them as a class. This acknowledgment is especially dear because their complete dependence on the good will of their seeing friends has made them looked upon as objects of charity, and this public recognition of them as a class possessing the intelligent needs of seeing people is soothing to their natural desire for independence. The collection of literature at their service embraces all the standard works, the Rible encyclopedias Dickens, Thackeray, Eliot, Emerson the great and minor poets, &c., and many musical correspositions.
The cost of printing for the blind is so great that only the well-to-do can attempt the collection of an individual library; hence the benefit of a reading room to them. The Bible, for instance, which can be condensed into a pocket edition for ordinary readers and bought for 2 cents and even less, when published in finger print covers a series of business let the eight volumes, and costs $100. A prayer book sells for $20, and a common writing slate for $1.25. This slate consists of a table, guide and stylus, and the rapidity with which the blind write is marvellous. As they read, they frequently pause to jot down on the slate some comments on the book they are studying. Their writing is done from fight to left, though they read from left to right. The correspondence among themselves is a great source of intertainment, education, and comfort, and where several are gathered in the reading room, after the reading is finished, a smart interchange of slates goes on, each reading with his fingers the thoughts jotted down by the oth-

> After the reading room for the blind was opened the library officials were anxious that everything possible should be done which would tend toward its successful and permanent operation. One suggestion that has re-sulted in constant and increasing pleas-ure came from David Hutcheson, superintendent of the general reading, room. It occurred to Mr. Hutcheson that if each day a good reader could be secured to read aloud to the blin1 visitors for an hour, they could become acquainted with much literature that has not yet been reproduced in the publications for the blind. With the co-operation of Miss Giffin, this plan was worked out. Mr. Hutcheson was a little timorous of its continued success, fearing it would be difficult to secure readers for each day, but, on the contrary, more readers have offered their services than dates can be found for, and very celebrated readers at that. The first person to read aloud was Mrs John Russell Young, wife of the Librarian. Thomas Nelson Page, Kate Douglas Wiggin, Grace Greenwood, Frank Stockton, and many other authors have contributed their quota to the daily reading matinee. On several occusions celebrities have given little talks rather than readings, and these are especially appreciated, particularly when they relate to travel. These readings have proved a most 'interesting feature of the feading room, and greatly extended the scope and opportunity of the room's frequenters. Many blind persons desired to avail themselves of the privileges of the reading room, and unable to do so, because they had no one to bring them to the library, so Miss Citin interested a number of women who were willing to act as escorts to the affiliated ones, and these escorts day by day bring their charges to the It is interesting to note that their la no distinction of color or nationality,

READING FOR BLIND, The first reader was a colored man who asked for Emerson'e Essays, say ing she was "hungry for Emerson. The literature called for by the readers is of a remarkably high order. The concentration 'required' of the blind for their reading creates a high order of intelligence, and a desire to jearn of the best. The room is well patronized every day, even in bad weather, though on wet days more men than women are observed. Many pleasant and lasting friendships are formed among the readers, and a systena of correspondence maintained Many letters of inquiry about the room are constantly received from residents of other cities .- New York Sun.

THE THREE KRUPPS.

And Their Wonderful Gan Works at Exsen, Germany.

The city of Essen is located in the center of a hilly valley, which abounds in coal and Iron ore, and the digging for both and the melting of the ore and casting the metal into ingots and rolling it into bars have been the occupations of the inhabitants for centuries past. Frederick Krupp, the founder of the great works bearing his name, was born in 1787, and when crucible cast steel was first introduced into England, and its importation from there into Germany had been made impossible through the edict of Napoleon called "the continental sperre," F. Krupp began to produce crucible cast steel, first in small quantities for files, stamps, rolls for coins and shears, but only slowly could be convince and persuade German manufacturers to use his cast steel, and after a life full of disappointment and hardships, he died in 1826, after a long and severe illness, leaving to his son Alfred little else than the old homestead, which still stands in the midst of the great works and the secret of his invention.

Alfred Krupp's energy and enterprise soon conquered. His first success was to be able to furnish a cast steel of a varying degrees of hardness, thereby increasing its adaptability for many new purposes. Next came the invention of the weldless car wheel tires, which were patented in 1853 in all countries, and furnished him capital for enlarging his plant. In 1865 he interested himself in coal mines, iron ore mines and furnaces, which should furnish the material for his own works and in 1867 he began to reap the harvest from his experiments, inaugurated long since, with steel cannons, and the great Fianco-German war of 1870-71 proved beyond doubt their superiorlty as against the old bronze cannons. Since then the success of these works and their growth has been phenomenal, and when Alfred Krupp closed the busy and successful and phllanthropic work of his life in 1877 at Villa Huegel, his princely home on the side hills of the valley of the Ruhe, the city of Essen, in recognition of his great work, erected in his memory a beautiful monument on the most prominent square of the city, and deputations from many nations mourned at his grave.

Essen is a city of ninety-six thousand inhabitants, and over twenty thoussand of this population are employed in the works of the able and energetic son of Alfred Krupp, Friedrich Alfred. Over 1,200 acres of ground are covered buildings and machinery. Many coal mines furnish fuel for the works, metal and large iron ore deposits in Spain, near Bilbao, have been purchased in addition, and a special fleet of steamers has been built which bring over 300,000 tons of this Spanish ore from Spain to the German coast and up the Rhine. Twenty furnaces at Dulsburg and Neuwicd-on-the-Rhine are reducing this ore for the Krupp works and are owned or controlled by

"TOAST" IN A CUP.

Origin of the Use of the Word for After Dinner Speenhes

The word "toast" used for describing the proposal of a health in an after-dinner speech dates back to the medieval times, when the loving cup was still regarded us an indispensable feature of every banquet. The cup would be filled to the brim, with wine or mead, in the center of which would be placed a piece of toasted bread. After putting his lips thereto the host would pass the cup to the guest of honor seated on his right hand, and the latter would in turn pass it on to his right hand neighbou

In this manner the cup would circulate around the table, each one present taking a sip, while drinking towards his right hand neighbor, until finally the cup would come back to the host who would drain what remained and swallow the piece of toast in honor of all the friends assembled at his ta-

History teaches that the ancient Treeks, the Romans, the Assyrians and the Egyptians were in the habit of drinking one another's health at dinner. Indeed, at Athens, the etiquette concerning what may be described as the liquid courtesies of this kind wa very strict and elaborate, being known by the name of Philothe." The particlpants in the repast were in the habit of drinking to one another till they could darry no more, and they would pour out the remainder of the wine on the altar of any pagan delty that might happen to be handy.

At Rome the surno custom prevalled. Post-prandial oratory, however, was severely, condemned as out of place, and while the Greeks contented themand while the Greeks contents their selves with exclaiming, as they put the oup of wine to their lips, "I salute you; be happy," the Romans restricted themselves to the excismation, "Pro-Dime," which is the Latin for "I dring your health."—thicago News. THE ROYAL PALM OF CUBA. A Tree Called Blessed, of Which Every

Not only is the climate of Cuba fav-orable to the planting of crops whenever the farmer chooses to plant them, and the lands so rich that no fertilization is ever required, but nature seems of have, with a beneficent hand, reared many strange trees and plants to supply the wants of man without the necessity of his planting them himself. First among these are the palms, some twenty-six varieties of which adorn the fields of Cuba, glying shade, food and life. At the head of these stands the royal palm. This majestic tree consists of a tall, straight trunk of fibrous wood, supporting a cluster of pennated leaves, like a bunch of plumes on a long stick. It is a marvel of beauty and utility, yet it is one of the most common of all trees in Cuba.

The palm has been called the blessed tree, for every part of it has its usefulness to mankind. Certain medicinal qualities are claimed for its roots, and its trunk is easily split into strips, making excellent boards for the siding of houses, benches and even tables. As the trunk is without any bark, and its sentre is very porous, in-creasing in density toward the outer surface, which is nearly as hard as glass, it is only the outside hard shell of the trunk which furnishes these hoards. From this hard, fibrous wood some very prefty canes are made, which take a most heautiful polish. The leaves of the palm from the genire of the lrunk, first in the form of a acticate spire shooting up, which cradually unfolding itself, forms a new leaf. These leaves continue to grow from the centre spire to a great length, fr Dies Almost Immediately if Captured-forming the cluster which, in the case of the royal Palm, resembles so much a bunch of enormous plumes. wes, when they cannot grow any more, drop to the ground from the botsubstance buried deep down within the cluster of green leaves, and forms raw state or cooked as a vegetable, or made hato a preserve with sugar.

It resembles a said that its pride in its tail feaththin board, often as long as a man is tall, and the Cuban Insurgent, now struggling for Independence, makes it serve him a variety of purposes. For example, while I was in the field it frequently served me as a plate, by simply cutting off in section of it. I have seen a group of rebels using a "yagua" thus folded as a kettle in which to cook their breakfast of beef and yams. The water kept the fibrous wood from burning, and I was assured that the ood thus cooked required no salt other than that which was extracted from the "yagua" in the process of cooking.

It is related of an Irish recruit on sentry duty at Chickamauga, one night, that he challenged a figure in the darkness with the usual "Who goes there?" A Christian is always "on duly"— never "off duty." He must always let the uniform of holiness appear. He is set apart for the service of his Master incomittenity. Into his life there has entered a something which reminds him that he must always be on his best hehavior, and must always be seeking to live not to himself, but to Him whose he is and whom he serves, this actions are ever a matter of concorn to his Lord, and he takes pleas ure in noting that the life is one of complete self surrender, in little things and in those of greater consequence.

HOW CHAMBERLAIN MET HIS WIFE.

He Wasn't Afraid to be the Only Man Among a Number of American Heauties Many persons can recall the visit Mr. Joseph Chambertain made to Washington in 1887 as chairman of the Fisheries Commission. He was the social lion of the hour. A Balti more lady who met him tells the following story:

"He was a blg, burly man, caring so little for his appearance that at one of the most fashionable dinners of the season his crayat got turned to almost under bis ear and his shirt stud came unfastened, and he sat calmly oblivlous to either accident. . His brains and charm in conversation won him friends wherever he went.

"One day he called on a lady who happened to be giving a girls' lunchson. She went out at once to see bim, and laughlingly said that if he did not mind being the only man present she would be delighted if he would come in the dining room and take the va-cant place of one of her young friends who did not come. He was not afraid to face a lot of 'American beauties,' so ne accepted gayly, and the vacunt place happened to be next that of Miss budleout, daughter of Secretary, of War William C. Endicoff, of Massathusetts, a dove-like, slender girl, one of the greatest belies of the day.
