Hangover Run will ring in the New Year

By NICOLE A. GAVINO

THE RECORD

Despite the bitter cold weather most have been trying to avoid, over 300 people are expected to come out to Tamaques Park this Saturday to shake off the old and run into the new.

On the first day of the new year, the Central Jersey Road Runners Club is holding their 12th annual 5-K Hangover Run. Race director Mark Zenobia said that he expects at least 300 entrants, ages 10-70, of all different running abilities.

"We wanted to have something to start to prepare for.

the new year, to shake the cobwebs out," Mr. Zenobia said. "We just want to have a fun race and a good time."

And although this new year holiday spirit is fun for the runners, the race is serious. Race-walker Marcus Kantz pointed out that "only the most serious runners are willing to race on that day."

Like Mr. Kantz, only the most serious will wake up the morning after New Year's Eve and head out into the freezing cold to actually run for a little over three miles. Ready for his eighth time racing in the Hangover Run, Mr. Kantz said there's nothing special

"You just have to do whatever you're without breaking a sweat." going to do to keep warm," he said. "The cold really doesn't hurt; it's nicer because it's crisp and clean."

In fact, the cold seems to be the least of worries for first-year runner Lois Yurow. Lois and her husband Richard Botos just moved to Westfield from Chicago, where running in these temperatures is the norm. What's on Ms. Yurow's mind is her pregnancy.

"I'm three months pregnant and that will be the new experience for me," she said. Although she does not anticipate finishing the race, she said, "my husband will do this

Her support and confidence in her husband is eagerly returned. She explained how he will finish the race at his own pace and then turn around, race back to her and finish it again at her pace.

Husband and wife will not be the only teams of runners at this race. Forty-eightyear-old resident Pat Bligh will be hitting the tracks with her son's 12-year-old friend Matt Masina.

Ms. Bligh entered her very first race only a month ago at Westfield's Turkey Trot, and now she's "got the bug," Even though she doesn't quite know what to expect Saturday, (Please turn to page A-3)

THE RECORD

The Westfield Board of Education will interview about 15 candidates next week for appointment to the board.

Earlier this month, the board accepted the resignations of Benjamin Rulf and Michael Fox for professional and personal reasons, respectively. With the legal responsibility to appoint replacements within 65 days, the school board offered the application for these vacancies to any eligible citizen.

Eligibility requirements for board service include U.S. citizenship, age of at least 18 years, ability to read and write, residence in Westfield for at least one year, and no conflict of interest with the school board.

By the deadline last Thursday, 16 citizens volunteered for candidacy. Those who meet the eligibility requirements will be interviewed by the board Jan. 3-5. So far, the board has determined that 14 citizens are eligible.

The 14 candidates are:

P. Jeffrey Christakos of 713 Marcellus Drive.

Robert H. Flast of 660 Fairmont Avenue.

Samuel D. Freeman of 260 Prospect Street.

Alicia Ruddy Zurlo of 825 Standish Avenue.

Neither the Westfield Board of Education nor any of the candidates released any additional information to The Record. School board President Susan Pepper said that the citizens can learn about the candidates during the interviews, which are open to the public.

Seven members still sitting on the board will interview the candidates beginning at 7 p.m. Monday and Wednesday and at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday. The public interviews will be held in the board meeting room at 302 Elm St. At press time, this schedule was still subject to time change.

After the interviews are complete, the school board will meet in pri vate session to discuss the candidates. The appointments will be made after further discussion at a public meeting. Mrs. Pepper said that sh hopes this can be done at the Jan. 18 meeting,

Those appointed will serve until the April school election when West field voters will elect four citizens to the school board.

High school students charged with possessing stolen property

Police arrested two Westfield High School students last week after responding to a 911 emergency call. William Rudd, 18, of Irving Avenue and a 17-year-old male juvenile were arrested and charged with possession of stolen property after being accused of breaking into a school display case and stealing school sportswear.

On Wednesday, police met school officials and the juvenile in the hallway near the cafeteria. The school officials said that the juvenile and Mr. Rudd had broken into the glass display case nearby. One claimed that he saw the two boys walking towards the empty case, and they had Blue Devils sweatshirts and sweat pants from the case hidden under their jackets.

The juvenile claimed that they found the items in the parking lot and they were bringing them to his locker so that he could return them to his counselor the next day. The school administrator detained the juvenile and called 911 but said that Mr. Rudd was not cooperative and left the school with the items.

Both boys were charged with possession of stolen property. The juvenile was transported to headquarters where he was turned over to his father. Mr. Rudd turned himself in to police the next day. He was served a summons and released on his own recognizance.

Westfield answers lawsuit regarding trash ordinance

By NICOLE A. GAVINO

THE RECORD

Last week, Westfield responded to a complaint filed with Union County Superior Court regarding Westfield's new garbage ordinance.

In September, the Town Council passed an ordinance which restricts garbage pickup before 6 a.m. The ordinance came only after months of resident complaints and council debate. On Nov. 5, Fanwood Disposal filed suit against the town, citing state Dept. of Environmental Protection and Energy (DEPE) tariffs as superseding the town ordinance.

According to their tariff, Fanwood Disposal is allowed to conduct business between the hours of 5 a.m.-6 p.m. President Steve Scioscia mentioned numerous safety problems his company has suffered since he held his trucks back an hour due to Westfield's ordinance.

Town Council members anticipated a lawsuit when they passed the ordinance, acknowledging that the state tariffs may supersede town law. However, they are confident that the town will win because they believe that there are too many problems with the state tariffs, including inconsistency and the state inability to enforce the hours of operation.

Sandra Thaler-Gerber, civil division manager of the Union County courts, said Westfield filed an answer to the complaint last Wednesday via a letter sent by Town Attorney Charles Brandt. The case is now undergoing pre-trial motions. However, she said "it may resolve itself fairly quickly."

The determination made in this case will supersede any matters of the Westfield police or the municipal court and will determine any further steps the town may take to ensure morning peace and quiet on Westfield's residential streets. Council members have spoken of appealing to the state regarding the DEPE tariffs, and have also suggested contracting out one super-hauler.

Regulations squeezing gas station owners

(Continued from page A-1) seven years ago. Saying it was easy regulations force upgrades. Ben to "see the writing on the wall," he sat down with an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) consultant and came up with a plan to upgrade the tanks. Although it was strain financially, he emphasized, "this is my livelihood, I had to do it."

Today, three 8,000-gallon gasoline tanks have vapor recovery systems, spillage containment, inground monitoring systems, tank monitoring and fiberglass piping all to the tune of $130,000. which he emphasizes was the cost seven year ago.

The same upgrade in 1993 could cost station owners as much as $200,000, said Mr. Petchow. Others this business," said Mr. Felner. maintain the cost can be as low as $30,000. But regardless of the cost, added. station owners are often left with little recourse but to "shut their pumps down." because banks refuse to loan money for this purpose.

faced what many experience when tive posture more than a month and Eli Felner, who have leased the station for 10 years, saw rent increase from $1,800 a month to $6,000 a month over a three-year period.

"You would have to go a school for stupid people not to understand what happened," said frustrated Ben Felner, explaining that often the oil companies put the burden of the cost to upgrade the tanks on the person who leases from them. But on the other hand, he realizes that if he had owned the station it would have cost $225,000 to bring the tanks under compliance.

"You don't make a million in "You make a decent living," he

"A station rarely makes more than eight or nine cents on a gallon of gas. Auto repair is the "saving grace." However, he predicts that in two or three years half the stations open today will be gone have been hit just as hard by the thanks to "good environmental new regulations, but in a different controls," that "leave the ends loose.

ago. In anticipation of the new ruling, he decided his last delivery of gas would be in November. A few days ago his tanks ran dry and a sign went up in the window announcing that due to federal regulations the station would no longer be able to serve gas.

"I decided not to be in compliance because even if I hook up the monitoring systems I'm still legally responsible for any spills that occur," explained the owner. And that means that the state could seize his station, his home and any assets he has in order to facilitate cleanup measures.

Still, avoiding that possibility places the owner in line for another expense, the removal of all tanks from the ground within one year of Dec. 22, 1993. Even with the two-week reprieve Gov. Florio put into effect, the cost of removing the tanks on Mr. Di Paolo's property will be somewhere around $30,000, "if I'm lucky and there are no leaks." But it still is less costly than a cleanup, which could run $300,000.

"It's just not worth it to watch everything go down the pipe," said the station owner. So he will focus all his business efforts on auto repair. But even then there are concerns that regular gas customers will begin to use another station for auto repairs.

In Scotch Plains and Fanwood station owners were wary of discussing the latest news from Trenton, holding out hope that loans will become available for independent station owners to update their tanks. Many stations, owned by oil companies, are leased. Nevertheless, businessmen in this position reveal that rental costs have gone "sky high," in order to compensate for cost to upgrade the storage tanks.

"At this rate I'll be lucky to break even," said one frustrated station owner in Scotch Plains. commenting that "these oil companies are the kings and we are the serfs."

After years of working 18-hour days, one station owner said he is going to "throw in the towel," because there is no way he can afford to finance the tank upgrading.

"I don't have a choice," he said sadly, "I have to make a living Owing somebody $150,000 isn't my idea of running a business the right way. The state comes up with this stuff but never tells us how the heck we are suppose to pay for

"No wonder the small businessman is falling by the wayside."

A New Year's resolution In 1994, let's work together to prevent the senseless tragedy of drunken driving

Sometimes the lesson is never learned until popular people in the school. tragedy strikes home.

Teenagers are continually told that alcohol is a dangerous drug. And they're also warned that the combination of drinking and driving is particularly lethal.

But somehow, despite all the sermonizing and all the dramatic demonstrations, teens still drink alcohol. About two in five Americans will be and drive. At that age, most of us believe we're invincible and that we can beat the odds.

But 18-year-old Pasith Thiangtham, a senior at Highland Park High School, didn't beat the odds.

Authorities say the teen last Wednesday night was vomiting outside the window of a minivan drivers killed in traffic accidents decreased by 25 driven by his friend, 18-year-old Brett Morris. When Brett lost control of the vehicle while rounding a curve, Pasith was almost decapitated when his head struck the side mirror of a driving. parked pickup truck.

Pasith was dead within the hour.

Police say the two teens had been drinking prior to the incident. Brett has been charged with reckless manslaughter; authorities say his blood alcohol level was .16, more than the .10 legal limit in the state.

Such a death is tragic at any time of the year, drinking and driving. but this accident, just a few days before Christmas, hit Highland Park especially hard. Many students at Highland Park High School could not believe this could happen to one of the most will not be allowed to happen.

But it did.

And it could happen in your town.

The statistics are sobering. In one study by the New Jersey Division of Highway Safety, it was found that 30 percent of all auto accidents with victims taken to trauma centers involved involved in an alcohol-related accident at some time in their lives.

Those numbers should alone make anyone --teenager or adult - think twice about drinking too much. And, fortunately, that message has been getting through. The number of intoxicated percent over the last decade. Grass-roots organizations, such as SADD and MADD, have taken the lead in attacking the dangers of drunken

But still there are too many senseless deaths. And the message just doesn't seem to get through to everyone.

If you're a teenager, what happened to Pasith Thiangtham could happen to you. And if you're a parent, it could happen to your child. No one is invincible and no one can beat the odds of

In 1994, let's resolve that all of us - parents, teenagers, teachers and other responsible adults - do all we can to make sure tragedies like these

I was confident that I had satisfied my civic responsibility in reporting a potentially hazardous situation to the appropriate town authority. Since the tree was never removed, one.

I naively assumed that as a result of my calls, the tree had been inspected, but no problems had been found. Unfortunately, this was not the case!

The Tale: A March windstorm blew the to my front porch, driveway, and front yard. A cursory examination of the toppled tree clearly showed that it was not in very good condition, and should have ben taken down years before. A few sobering facts are relevant here:

-The Westfield Department of Public Works claims it has no record of any of my telephone calls about this tree. Thus ... the tree had never been inspected by any-

New Jersey state law mandates that before filing a claim against a municipality, you must first settle with your homeowner's insurance company. But ... most homeowner's policies cover only damage to the actual structure, and not the grounds.

The bottom line is about $1,500 difference between what it cost me to repair the damage, and what my homeowner's policy paid (including a $500 deductable). Now, for the really bad news!

The town's insurance carrier (Cigna Insurance Company) disclaims any liability, since there is no documentation to prove that the town was ever informed that the tree represented a hazardous condition.

Despite efforts on my behalf by Councilman Anthony LaPorta to convene a meeting with the mayor of Westfield and/or other town officials, the mayor indicated that he "had no interest in meeting to discuss the matter." Moreover, Mr. LaPorta was told by another town administrator that I "could bring a (law)suit against the town" in order to recover my losses. The reader can draw his/her own conclusion about such attitudes on the part of Westfields administrative officials.

Epilogue: In recent years, it seems that trees in Westfield have been falling with increasing frequency with every major snow, rain, or windstorm. My advice to Westfield homeowners: if you suspect that any town-owned tree surrounding your property is in danger of falling, you should quickly write a letter to the Town Engi neer indicating that the tree represents a hazardous condition. I would also advise you to send it by certified mail (with a return receipt) in order to have proof that the town of Westfield was properly informed of the situation. It may cost you a bit more postage, but it is a wise investment that will pay handsome dividends if a tree happens to fall on your house this

Gov. Whitman can make conservation come alive

By DAVID F. MOORE

N.J. CONSERVATION FOUNDATION

Christine Whitman's transition team has had only a few weeks to establish a new government in Trenton. Hundreds of replacement officials need to be decided upon to manage a $15-billion business.

Her decisions will shape New Jersey's future economy. She will be instrumental in judicious cies to be implemented within the next 20 use of the state Development and Redevelopment Plan. It calls for integration of capital expenditures by the state and its political subdivisions. It also calls for changing the way we have done our planning, zoning and subdivision business for the last several decades. Herstrong leadership is essential.

Coordination between various departments of funding. state requires forceful leadership from the top, Whitman has committed herself to doing so, which from my point of view is right on.

It is clear the old system isn't working. With the decay in our urban areas and the decline in farm and forest land, with the dramatic increase in lane-miles per capita of roads and our failure to reach water and air quality goals, we need to find a different way to measure success.

The number of housing starts or the number index, if it ever did. We're creating a third-world through the recession. country right here in this state we're in, and not enough of us are paying attention.

Integrated environmental management is working well, here and abroad. I've mentioned the effectiveness of the British Town and Country Planning Act and the Netherlands National Environmental Policy Plan in this space before. Canada and New Zealand have now also adopted national environmental plans, calling for sustainable environmental and economic poliyears

Portland, Oregon, and Seattle, Washington, have regional governments to reform housing and development planning and ensure suburban responsibility for urban decay. In Vermont, a dedicated fund has been set up, combining open space acquisition with affordable housing

In New Jersey, the Pinelands Protection Act has demonstrated that the principle of development concentration in towns and villages works.

A few years ago, Senator Bill Gormley of Atlantic County sponsored a bill to provide additional infrastructure to places where development was to be fostered in the Pinelands. It did exactly what it was supposed to do: fit the Pinelands Comprehensive Management Plan. The development economy of the Pinelands of cars sold no longer provides a quality-of-life area was better than elsewhere in the state all

Nor have tax rates in the Pinelands risen as much as in surrounding places. It's true some short-sighted politicians pandering to development interests push for changes in the Pinelands Protection Act. Yet the Pinelands development credit transfer program and the plan itself continue to work well.

Local implementation of the plan could stand improvement, and there needs to be a fairer system of protecting cooperating landowners from the unscrupulous. I hope Whitman can work on those issues.

Data published in the Camden Courier-Post show that from 1980 through 1991, only 9.3 percent of Pinelands development applications were rejected. That's an average; what's interesting is that in 1980, 20.7 percent were rejected and that percentage dwindled steadily, to 2.5 percent in 1991.

It shows that local governments and developers are adjusting to the rules.

Reasonable funding must be found for the State Planning Commission so that centers of economic activity can be designated under the state plan. That way, builders and citizens alike know where housing and commerce should be located, and the permit approval process can be shortened.

There's lots for the transition folks to think about as we head toward a new century. Let's hope the change of government improves the lot in life of all New Jerseyans.

Unsolved killings haunt kin, cops in quiet suburbs

Cases range from few months to more than 70 years old

By CHERYL MOULTON HEHL

FORBES NEWSPAPERS

At three o'clock in the morning he is wide awake, staring out the window into the quiet night, smoking one cigarette after another. This is just one of many nights he has walked the floor, going over and over the night of Aug. 3, 1993. And like the other 147 nights he has spent pacing the floor, there is no answer to the question of who killed Garwood resident Donnie Tomaio.

Garwood Police Chief Robert Ryan spends more nights like this than he would like to admit, and knows it will continue until the murderer who shot down the 49-year-old resident in the parking lot of the Garwood Knights of Columbus Hall is apprehended and put behind bars

The chief also knows that the more time that passes, the colder the killer's trail becomes.

His reaction to this unsolved murder is not unique Police Chiefs Cranford, Westfield, Scotch Plains, Fanwood, and Kenilworth acknowledged that they, too, are haunted by murders that were never solved. Some even continue to ponder killings that were solved years ago.

Westfield Police Chief Anthony Scutti, who is also president of the New Jersey Chief's Association, is a quiet, unassuming man. He has seen just about everything, he admits, but even this seasoned top cop finds it hard to forget the brutality of a murder scene.

Chief for the last six years, he was on the force when the List murders occurred more 20 years ago. His professional demeanor disguises the raw emotion that arises when he discusses the mark a murder leaves on the psyche of a policeman. And an unsolved murder, he points out, hits home on the most personal level.

For a moment his official posture as chief drops away as he describes the rarely expressed gut reaction an officer experiences when called to the scene of a ho-stunned the town after she was found bound, stabbed and sexually assaulted. The case was never solved and is still considered "a working file." Chief Scutti and Westfield detectives "are always hoping that someday ..." the murder will be solved. As for Chief Scutti, he remembers the murder well, because he knew the family. To this day the murder scene remains "very vivid" in his mind.

"I think about it constantly," the chief t of in a quiet voice, gazing off into the distance. But the professional posture returns within seconds, as does the belief that the guilty party will surface.

"We are always hopeful," says the chief in a professional tone. Still, his eyes betray his words. "Murder is a hard thing to forget," he says looking at the wall for a moment. "Very hard to forget."

Cranford files

For Cranford Police Chief Harry Wilde, every murder leaves an indelible mark. One that neither time nor resolution seems to erase. A case in point is the Michelle DeMarzo murder that took place in 1978. Although it occurred 15 years ago, the memory of the murder scene has speaks straightforwardly about the emo-

The body of Mrs. Iorio was discovered by her husband Dominic late on a weekday evening in December. Her partially clad body, was found in the bedroom of the family home, her wrists tied, adhesive tape covering her mouth. She had been shot twice in the head, but no weapon was found at the scene. Although robbery was thought to be the motive, Chief Wilde has very strong opinions on who the murderer might be.

"We have a suspect," says Chief Wilde, not hesithing at all, "it's just a matter of cracking the case." The Jorio case remains as "open," today, as it was 15 years ago. And, Chief Wilde said, detectives are still assigned to bring in the slayer of the lifelong Cranford resident.

'Someone took a human life in a calculating fashion." said Chief Wilde, who ironically lives on the same street where the murder took place. "They should not enjoy a moment of freedom. The killer should live in extreme discomfort, always looking over his shoulder." There is a hint of irony in his voice and of frustration. But not defeat.

Chief Wilde also rejects the perception that police are hardened to murder. He ment, the cases remain open. And a constant reminder that a murderer is on the loose.

"It's something that never leaves you," explains Chief Luce, whose voice suddenly changes, trying to describe the emotions of knowing a murderer is out there walking around. After spending 18 years on the force before taking over as chief, his theory on murder and the capture of the perpetrator is based on experi-

"Eighty percent of numbers are solved because they are sp. dance as and pas-sionate acts," said Chief Luce, indicating that murderers of this type leave evidence "all over the place." This trail of evidence leads police directly to the person who committed the crime. Arrests often come within days. But those murders that are premeditated pose an intricate puzzle that often opens the door to unsolved cases that continue to baffle and elude even the most diligent detectives. It is these type of murders, the 20 percent, that keep people like Chief Luce and Scotch Plains detectives still working to solve the crimes.

In March of 1990, a decorated Vietnam

spoke of several unsolved murders, one dating back to 1920 which was solved. However, to this day "old timers," have maintained that the custodian did not murder the housekeeper in the case. The files are "buried deep in the basement," the chief said, but the custodian was convicted on circumstantial evidence and died in prison. However, until the day he died, he maintained he was innocent.

Who then killed the young housekeeper? There are those residents over the years who have theorized that the custodian was innocent.

In 1957, Anthony Parenti came on the force and was intrigued by the talk about the murder that still circulated. "I was curious enough to poke around and search through old records," he admits, suggesting that there was reasonable doubt about who committed the murder. Yet, he admits he was satisfied that the justice system was fair. A seed of doubt lingers in Chief Parenti's mind and the few old timers who are still around.

"I'm as perplexed about that as I am the deaths that occur in fires," says the chief, acknowledging that he has lost many nights sleep wondering how the fire started that killed a young mother and her two children in the 1970's on Halloween.

"We take it to heart," he admits, "and it gets to you. You don't want that happening in your town, the place where your family and people you care about live." But it is more than that, he says.

"In a community where people feel safe, we want to keep it safe," says Chief Scutti. But recognizing that murder in a small community hits everyone hard, he confesses that it is a rare cop who doesn't get "a knot in the stomach," when there has been a homicide.

Still, Chief Scutti has faced the fact he will always be on guard. If the phone rings at three in the morning, or his beeper (which is with him 24 hours a day) goes off, he gets "apprehensive," and he knows that he always will.

In New Jersey, a violent crime occurs every 10 minutes and 50 seconds, a murder every 22 hours. Small suburban communities like Cranford, Westfield Scotch Plains, Fanwood, Kenilworth and Garwood experience their share of brutal murders, some more than others. And while the majority are solved, there are never faded. And although the De Marzo tions he and other officers go through. Vet who had been working the night shift. Kenilworth file ... those that defy even the most persistent of law enforcement detective work. But sometimes, perseverance pays off.

Westfield is known nationally as the town that waited 18 years to capture John List, the man who brutally executed his wife, mother and three children in 1971 and then seemingly disappeared from the face of the earth. Chief James Moran, who carried an FBI contact sheet with List's picture on it in his wallet, never gave up hope that the Westfield resident would be apprehended. And while the List murders, and subsequent capture, remain imprinted on the history of the town, there are two other murders in town that remain unsolved.

Turner stain

In the late 70's, the murder of 29-yearold resident Glenn Turner left a baffling trail of dead end clues and the crime remains unsolved. Clues left at the scene led police to determine the victim had returned from New York City with a gentleman friend late on the evening of the murder. Sometime during the night, though, he was bludgeoned to death, the murderer escaping in the victum's car and abandoning it in New York City.

Although the Westfield police spent counfless hours working with detectives in New York following up on leads, the trail eventually went cold and the murderer has yet to be apprehended.

Chief Wilde was a detective back in June 1978 when both murders occurred. The mutilated body of 17-year old high school senior Michelle De Marzo was discovered at the Cranford Conservation Center. The news sent shock waves through the town and Chief Wilde who still visualizes every detail of the murder scene. The DeMarzo murder was quickly solved. In 1973 resident James Purick was shot to death in the bedroom of his home at 940 Raritan Road. His body was found across the bed, shot four times in the head and face. But without witnesses or evidence the trail became cold and the murder remains uunsolved.

While the Chief admits all murders are an assault on the victims families and the community, the ruthless slaying of 80year-old Doris Coves July 9 of this year was unusually brutal. And yet, police are actively pursuing all leads with hopes of solving the baffling murder that took place in the well-to-do neighborhood where "things like this do not happen."

Hoopers burn to death

Chief Parenti said the Hooper residence on LaGrande Street went up very quickly, trapping the three victims in flames. Even years later he recalls that he was directing traffic just one block away, within sight of the house, just an hour before the fire.

The arson squad determined that the fire could have started because of a candle in a pumpkin, but the Chief continues to wonder why the tragedy occurred. While there are no suspects, and the police consider the case closed, it is the uncertainty that haunts Chief Parenti.

"Sometimes I wonder if I had been directing traffic just an hour later, maybe I could have done something," he says, his voice drifting off.

"Until you can come up with a logical reason that shows conclusively what happened, it's always an open case," explained the chief, admitting "the curiosity will stay with me the rest of my life."

Kenilworth has also had its share of murders, all of which have been solved within hours or days.

Except for the one people say happened back in 1919, when a game warden was supposedly shot and killed in the borough. Although police records do not go back that far, Chief Brent David said the health department has on record a death certificate for the game warden. The chief said the murderer was never caught and no one knows very much about the mystery of the game warden.

"Maybe we are just lucky," said Chief David, "or maybe it's that our perpetrators have left so much evidence that we were able to wrap up the cases guickly. Yet he admits that all murders evoke emotions of obsession that inspire "a lot of hard work." And although today the borough does not have any unsolved mysteries, Chief David knows that the record is only good for a 24-hour period.

Donny Tomaio shot

Meanwhile, back in Garwood, Chief Robert Ryan sits at his desk, poring over stacks of files. It is the beginning of another day. Another day that the Donny Tomaio murder goes unsolved, and another night of walking the floor.

"It's the pressure from within," says Chief Ryan, "It bothers me that it has taken so long, but we are going to solve this case."

But until it is solved, Chief Ryan, Garwood detectives and the family of Mr. To-In Fanwood, Chief Anthony Parenti maio continue to wait and wonder.

conducted their annual Holiday Food Basket program, assisting 30 needy Westfield families, announced project chairman Bill DiLouie.

The food baskets were delivered the Saturday before Christmas and each provided a Christmas dinner for an entire family. A&P Food Bazaar of Westfield helped in assembling the food baskets and the program was funded by an $850 contribution from the club plus several Optimist members.

Founded in 1989, the Optimist Club of Westfield conducts service projects to benefit youth and the community. Membership is open to men and women who live or work in the Westfield area. The club meets monthly for dinner meetings at Aliperti's Restaurant in Clark and individuals interested in learning more about Optimist activities should contact President Rob Shaffer at 233-8375.

Westfield's 48-47 loss to Union Catholic in the Blue Devils'

By KIP KUDUK THE RECORD

To a man, the bowling team at Westfield High School and its head coach will probably agree the Blue Devils have not had the most talented team in their league during the 1990s.

However, the Blue Devils have been consistent enough to win the National Division of the Watchung Conference for four straight seasons. While Westfield's success within the conference has yet to spill over to the county, sectional Tirone said junior Todd Jakubik will also see varsity action. Even though he was an alternate, Jakubik's score was added to Westfield's total in all but two of the six games in Madison. In his first year of competitive bowling, sophomore Shane Flood rounds out the varsity seven.

"We could be dangerous," said Tirone. "The goal is to stay steady and be tough throughout the year. We'd like to stay as conference champs, but, it'll be tough. For that to happen the breaks must go our way and we'll have to be up for every match. When we bowl Linden we'll have to do very well." The Blue Devils have defeated the Tigers head-to-head in each of the last two years by identical 4-3 scores. Linden, the defending Union County champs, have everyone returning from last year's squad, including southpaw Mike Orth, who was selected as the county's Most Outstanding Bowler last year. to Tirone, the According Watchung Conference figures to be as competitive as it's been in a long time because of the emergence of teams such as Kearny and Scotch Plains-Fanwood and the continued excellence of mainstays Cranford and Union Catholic. Questions abound at Westfield Invitational

By KIP KUDUK

THE RECORD

Two years ago the Westfield wrestlers placed third in their own tournament and were delighted with their performance. Last year the Blue Devils fell eight points shy of capturing the title and felt letdown.

With a largely unproven and youthful lineup, it's anyone's guess as to how the Blue Devils will fare in today's Westfield Invitational Tournament, which begins at 9:30 a.m.

The only thing that seems to be certain, though, is that Westfield will tangle with its best and most evenly matched competition of the young season.

The Blue Devils sandwiched a fourth-place finish in the Wallkill Valley Tournament between a pair of easy dual meet victories over Watchung Conference foes East Side and Summit.

"The Wallkill Valley tournament was not that competitive, even though there were some strong teams there," said senior Paul Baly. "The teams there were either much better than us or we were much better than them. The competition here is more even and it's fun."

Three-time tournament title holder Howell, last year's champ, always fields a strong team, as does local rival Roselle Park, the reigning Union County champion. Dover, Piscataway, Morristown, Princeton and Roselle Catholic round out the field.

Within their familiar confines the Blue Devils have perennially measured up to the competition. In addition to having three champions and a pair of second-place finishers in each of the past two years, Westfield wrestlers have walked away with Most Outstanding Wrestler honors. Paul Jordan got the nod in 1991, while Cory Posey took home the prize last year as a freshman. Posey (140) and Baly (171) return as defending champs and both wrestlers, who are currently 4-0, will most likely compete in the same weight class as last year. Junior Jeff Checchio (130), a runner-up last year, and sophomore Kevin Sullivan (112), who was third last winter, will most likely be granted a high seed. In addition to searching for titles, head coach Don Mac-Donald will be hoping for continued progress of firstyear varsity wrestlers such as Frank DiGiovanni (189), Jim Flood (152), Paul Boudreau (119), Jarret Kamins (103) and Sean Sangwin (HWT). "It's important for us to win as a team, but I think it's more of an individual tournament," said Baly.

Two days earlier Westfield avenged last year's tie and a 1991 defeat at the hands of Mountain Lakes by besting the Lakers 100-70 at the Westfield Y.

Riley, Olden, Teitelbaum and Smith starting things off nicely with a victory in the 200 medley relay (1:57.52), helping the Lady Devils break out to a 10-4 which they would not relinquish.

Even though Mountain Lakes had as many individual winners as Westfield, the hosts' depth proved to be too much. Smith (50 free), Olden (100 free and 100 breast) and Hay (500 free) won races to maintain the Lady Devils' comfortable margin throughout.

"This victory just proves the immense strength of our team this year," said Riley. "We tied them last year, but this year we won by a sizable margin."

THE RECORD

The boys' swim team met its first challenge of the season at the Westfield Y last Tuesday against Mountain Lakes and managed to record its third victory of the season, 92-78.

Westfield started the meet with a second-place finish in the 200-yard medley relay. Brendan Lechner, Andrew Hughes, Walter Kapuscinski and Sean Schafer finished the race in 1:49.54.

Mountain Lakes placed first and second in the 200-yard freestyle, leaving sophomore Frank Coppa third in 1:56.85. When Tim Komano finished the 200-yard individual medley in second place (2:09.23), the Blue Devils trailed by

In the 50 free, Schafer notched Westfield's first triumph of the meet, (22.19), to tie the score 31-31, Junior Rob Schundler continued the pace and completed the 100yard butterfly first in 58.42.

"We kept thinking that if we didn't start to do well, we might not win," said Schundler.

Schafer returned in the 100 fine to place first in 49.96, putting Westfield on top, 54-40.

The Blue Devils maintained their lead until the end of the meet, garnering two more firstplace finishes.

The first was in the 200-yard freestyle relay when Dan Zemsky, Jon Jones, Schafer and Schundler (Please turn to page A-8)

(Continued from page A-7) touched the wall first in 1:33.04. The second was in the 100-yard backstroke, as Brian Ramsthaler finished first in 57.74.

"We didn't expect it to get this close. When we realized that we were tied at the break, we got psyched up," said Coppa. Lechner, Hughes, Schundler and Coppa teamed up for a secondplace finish in the 400 free relay (3:52.80), Westfield also claimed third (3:53.40) and fourth (4:22.01) in that event.

"We can't underestimate the teams we blew off last year," said Schundler. "We don't have as much talent."

Westfield paid a visit to Delbarton Dec. 17 and came home with a 112-54 victory.

Schafer placed first in both the 50-yard freestyle (25.10) and the 100-yard backstroke (1:13.90). In ior forward Shi-Kia Carter poured 145-pound battle, as Jim Flood the 200 free, Hughes finished first. Then, the junior teamed up with Zemsky, Lechner and Coppa to capture first place in the 200 free elay (1:51.90)

Colin McGee was the first to finsh the 500 free (6:20.10). Joining Zemsky, Kapuscinski and Ramstnaler, McGee helped the 400 free elay win in a time of 4:26.00.

The foursome of Romano, Jones, Eric Linenberg and Schundler blaced first in the 200-yard medley elay in 2:02.20. Romano and Jones also finished first in the 100-yard outterfly (1:09.40) and 100-yard preaststroke (1:13.40), respectively. The Blue Devils will start off the new year with a trip to Union Jan. l, at 3 p.m.

Girls' hoops pierced by Lady Lancers, 55-36

Westfield continued its tortuous early-season schedule Monday in the opening round of the West Orange Christmas Tournament and had little success during the first half of a 55-36 loss to Livingston (3-1), a team considered by most to be among the top 15 teams in the state.

The Blue Devils committed several turnovers in the first half against Livingston's full-court pressure and trailed 21-4 after one quarter and 35-10 by halftime.

"We were very nervous and were intimidated because we played them last year and knew how good they were," said senior captain Andrea Duchek, who scored four points and collected four rebounds. in Region III last year, could not "We played excellent defense, but, ve weren't working as hard on offense."

(2-0) pummeled Summit 51-12 last Wednesday in a bout filled with forfeits and Westfield pins.

Following a forfeit victory at 103 pounds, sophomore Kevin Sullivan pinned his adversary during the second period with a half nelson. Then, sophomore Paul Boudreau earned his first varsity victory and pin to stake the visitors to a commanding 18-0 lead.

At 130 pounds, junior Jeff Checchio recorded a quick fall and, after a 7-6 loss by Paul Hayes, Bruno Parenti claimed his initial varsity triumph via the pin.

In the feature bout of the afternoon, sophomore Cory Posey moved up to 145 pounds to battle Kevin Logue, who lost to Chris Posey 6-3 in the 135-pound finals of last season's Union County tournament. Logue, who placed fourth solve Cory Posey either, as the Blue Devil raised his record to 4-0 with a 4-1 decision.

Not too much action followed the (152) and Mike Liggera (160) won by forfeit and a double forfeit was and sophomore heavyweight Sean Sangwin won by forfeit.

The matmen will resume their dual meet schedule after today's Westfield Invitational when they host Kearny (2-0) on Wednesday at 4 p.m.

the Blue Devils have little to show for outstanding back-to-back efforts in losses to Linden and Union Catholic.

Last 'Tuesday's 48-47 setback against Union Catholic in the home opener was a real killer. Westfield (0-2) outplayed its neighboring rival and held the lead for the first 27 minutes before things went awry.

"In a three-minute span we fell apart," said head coach Stew Carey. "The ball was in the wrong people's hands when we were breaking the press, we were called for two offensive fouls and we made poor decisions on the floor. We threw the ball away and Union Catholic responded to every one of our turnovers."

Westfield, which held the Vikings to 19 percent field goal shooting (seven of 37) over the first three quarters, entered the final eight minutes with a 34-25 lead. After UC's run, senior guard Marc Koslowsky drilled his third threepointer of the contest to tie the game at 45-45 with 16 seconds remaining.

While Koslowsky was giving his teammates instructions on the court, Union Catholic point guard Mike Martinho raced past Koslowsky, made a lay up, was fouled and converted the free throw to complete the three-point play with 14 seconds to go.

On its final possession, Westfield found the area outside the threepoint arc tightly covered and it attempted a two-point shot with the hopes of getting fouled in the act. Instead, the Blue Devils made the shot, but were not fouled and time ran out.

Senior Mike Checkett led all scorers with 21 points and also grabbed a team-high 11 rebounds. Koslowsky contributed with 15 points and five assists.

incisions, experience less pain and beal faster.

Atients at St. Peter's Medical Center who are treated with these minimally invasive surgical procedures also have shorter hospital stays -- which can translate into significant savings in health care costs.

This revolutionary technique is often standard operating procedure at St. Peter's for:

- ▲ gynecological problems
- 🔺 🛦 urological problems
- ▲ gallbładder disease
- ▲ arthroscopic procedures
- 🛛 🛦 back problems
- ▲ chest, nasal, eye and vascular surgeries
- 🔺 interventional radiology

St. Peter's has played a leadership role in developing and refining many of these alternative surgical procedures. Physicians from throughout the nation have come to New Brunswick for training at our Surgical Institute for Minimally Invasive Procedures.

That's part of the reason St. Peter's was recently selected as "hospital of choice" for each of the most common reasons people in Central New Jersey use hospitals -- and why St. Peter's is now recognized as a place where bright, innovative physicians will find the resources and encouragement to develop techniques that can change the face of medical care.

For more information about minimally invasive procedures, ask your doctor...or call 1-800-ST PETERS.

'First Night' fever

Communities unite to create their own special New Year's Eve celebrations

By WILLIAM WESTHOVEN WeekendPlus Editor 🖝 t started in Boston in 1977, and six years ago debuted in New Jersey in Montclair. By 1992, it had spread to 105 communities across the country, including seven in the Garden State, and it may only a matter of time before there's a first night celebration near everyone.

Originally planned as an alternative to traditional New Year's Eve parties, First Night has become a way to draw friends and neighbors together for a downtown celebration fueled by community spirit (as opposed to liquored spirits - First Night-sponsored events are non-alcoholic in most locations). For those of you who have always wanted to experience Times Square on New Year's Eve. but are turned off by the crowds. and drunken rowdiness. First Night is a toned-down, familyoriented alternative.

All locations offer special admission buttons permitting you to attend concerts (everything from classical to rock, jazz and big band), theatrical and other events staged in such unusual locations as churches, town meeting rooms and even business locations like automobile showrooms, all within walking distance of the designated "town center." The buttons will also entitle you to discounts at restaurants and other locations. Roving musicians, clowns and other entertainers can also be found on the surrounding streets.

Last year was a big year for First Night in New Jersey, including Morristown, where the initial First Night event drew upward of 40,000 on an unusually warm night topped off by a Grueci fireworks display launched from the towers of the downtown Headquarters Plaza.

The entertainment lineup for this year's First Night Morristown, which is located in an around the Morristown Green, includes the Masterworks Chorus and Orchestra, the Solid Brass, the New Philharmoic of New Jersey, the Latin Jazz Express, Ralph Litwin's Dixiebilly Trio, the George Street Players, the Growing Stage, the Caroline Dorfman Dance Company, face painters, clowns and

Other First Night towns offer a similar mix, although most are smaller in scope.

One warning, however: due to limited seating in many venues, you may have to wait in line (possibly even outside) for several of the more popular entertainment events, so dress warmly and don't expect to see everything.

Button prices at most locations are in the $10 range; for more details, call the following numbers:

'Winter's Tales' to warm McCarter Theatre stage

Major new works to be presented during festival

By MICHAEL P. SCASSERRA WeekendPlus Theater Critic

General Inter's Toles '94" is a project which has been in the works at Princeton's McCarter Theatre through three previous winter seasons, seasons during which artistic director Emily Mann has presented major American theater on McCarter's mainstage. Now, McCarter is poised to present its first formal new play development program since Mann's influence took hold.

"We've been talking about establishing a new play series like this since Emily took over as actistic director," said Loretta Greco, Me-Carter's staff producer and one of the driving forces behind "Winter's Tales." "When ally new arbuid director comes to a theater, the transitional work becomes phonological. It really took two years for Emily to settle in, then during the third year, we received funding for new play development from the Ford Foundation. This helped to develop new mainstage works like Joyce Carol Oates's The Perfectionist and an upcoming Irving Berlin project, and it helped us to fully realize 'Winter's Tales '94."

Greco and Mattin worked along with McCarter literary manager Janice Paran to create a new play paogram proposal, which remained within a bare-bones budget. "We started with a list of writers we loved and wanted to approach to create a new work," said Greco, a graduate of Catholic University's theater program currently in her fourth season at McCarter. "Since we couldn' produce 12 full-length plays, we asked for writers to contribute shorr works. Some of the works we've ended up with stand on their own as short plays while others are segments from larger works-in progress."

"Winter's Tales 94," which runs Jan. 12-23, will consist of a busy series of staged reading ϵ short works as well as a fully realized production of a full-lenge, play, The Nanjing Race, by Reggie Cheong-Leen. The program will product 13 plays in just under two weeks; each work will be featured five times during the series. The readings will be script-in-hand presentations, each performed after anywhere from 3-10 hours of rehearsal time. "In order to accommodate each of the 'Winter's Tales' works, the theater's staff and rehearsal space is being stretched as thinly as possible," Greec said.

"Winter's Tales," Greco, Mann and Paran networked with literary managers at theaters across the country to find a work ready for a full production, but one not yet tried in the critical glare of a high-profile, high-pressure mainstage presentation.

The full-length work ultimately selected, Cheong-Leen's The Najing Race, will have a finished set and full production values, but Greco explained the play fortunately calls for a relatively stark, uncomplicated production which nonetheless allows the playwright the invaluable experience of working with a director, a design team, and a cast committed to the presentation of his text.

"We read so many clever, wonderful plays, but we really wanted something important, something relevant," Greco said. "One of the things that impressed me so much about The Najing Race is that it fit so perfectly with the other works in the series. The play is largely about the past. It asked, 'What do we take with us and what do we leave behind in order to move forward?' "

The Najing Race is a three-character drama about a Japanese-American businessman who, while on a trip to China, befriends two native hotel workers. One of the workers hopes his future leads him to America while the other refuses to relinquish the traditions of China's past. Cheong-Leen's play, to be directed at McCarter by Greco herself and to star Tony Award-winning M. Butterfly star B.D. Wong along with Thom Sesma and David Chung, fits neatly into the "Winter's Tales" series theme, "Approaching the Year 2000."

To create an intimate forum for the new plays, which will be presented with minimal props and modular set pieces, 150 audience seats will be set-up directly on the McCarter stage. The collection of short plays will be performed by an ensemble of 16 actors and, though mounted with a modest budget, will display the grandest of theatrical intentions.

In searching for a full length work to occupy the central slot of

"We have a very eclectic sampling of works in the festival," Greco said of the 12 short plays featured in the program. "The styles and tones (Please turn to page 6)

Farce flies from London to Paper Mill Playhouse

It Runs in the Family'
 set to open Wednesday
 By WEDNEWESTHOLED
 Weak pathol Editor
 Trying to find a good farce these days can be, well, a farce. But beginning

Wednesday at the Paper Mill Playhouse in Millborn, it'll get a lot easier. "Sometimes Etbink I'm the last of a dying breed," said Ray Cooney, writer, director and co-stal (with Robert Mandan) of It Runs in the Family, a contemporary Eutish farce coming directly off a successful 15month run in London to the Paper Mill Playhouse in Millburn beginning Jan. 6. "We used to have so many of these kinds of comedies in London, but we don't anymore. You don't in Europe, either."

Cooney, author of several comedies and farces, including Run for Your Wife ("It was successful all over the world, but it wasn't successful on Broadway," said Cooney) and Two Into One, has been a comedy specialist for nearly his entire 45 years in theater, and is something of an exnert of farce

"Everybody's got a different opinion (on the differences between the nature of farce and comedy]," said Cooney, "I would sum the difference is that comedy is ordinary situations inhabited by eccentric people, My farces are very real people, identifiable people, who are having to deal with situations that get totally out of control, which is really the same definition I would give to a tragedy. Tragedy and farce are really each side of the coin --- there's not much difference between the basic premise."

It Runs in the Family, however, will stick to the lighter side of the coin, in this case telling the story of a prominent doctor in London preparing for the triumph of his career, a lecture to 200 visiting neurologists that may well secure his knighthood. Unfortunately (but quite tragically, you understand), on this same day, a former nurse he once had an affair with visits him with some startling news - she gave birth to his child 18 years ago. Even more startling, the son, who just the night before learned his father was not killed climbing the Himalayas, had been up all night drinking, popping pills and deciding he must meet his father. In fact, the boy had just been arrested at the hospital after stealing his mother's car and crashing it through the hospital gate.

Of course, the doctor has no time for such a crisis, but naturally the boy escapes and the situation "gets more complicated and devious."

"How the matron comes to be walking along the window ledge and gets a syringe stuck in her backside Is far too complicated to get into," said Cooney with a laugh.

"The way the play starts out, if it had been written by Arthur Miller or Tennessee Williams, it could go off on a totally different tangent," Cooney continued, emphasizing the link between tragedy and farce. "It's just the way it's been dealt with."

Such basic premises are another trademark of Cooney's plays, which he said draw the same reactions "whether they're done in Paris, Sydney, Budapest of the Paper Mill."

"In the end, it's not so much how yoou make them laugh, because over the years, if you're reasonably professional, you know how to get the laughs," he said. "What you're wanting to do is like the characters and the story."

And because he avoids parochial references, he doesn't have to adjust the script or direction for American audiences.

Particularly in America, where he praised the audiences as the "most generous in the world."

"American audiences are so vociferous," he said. "They give themselves far more readily to it. I've been over here many, many times, and the audiences are so good and ready to laugh, which is wonderful."

Specifically, it's the third time for Cooney at the Paper Mill, which has previously produced Run For Your Wife and Two into One.

"The Paper Mill is a lovely showcase theater, the quality of the productions there are so excellent." he said. "That's why I'm so happy to come and do it. At the moment, there are no intentions to do anything further with [the play] but to let the audience have a good time, although I'm sure we'll take the opportunity to invite a few producers over to have a look at it."

'Canyon Man' to ring in new year at Hyatt

By WILLIAM WESTHOVEN WeekendPlus Editor

omedian Ritch Shydner likes to use his own life as source material for his standup comedy act, which comes to Catch a Rising Star at the Hyatt Regency Princeton in West Windsor for two big New Year's Eve shows.

A native of Pennsville in South Jersey, his personal source material begins with his former address: New Jersey Turnpike, Exit One. Joe Piscopo would kill for an address like that.

Shydner, though, sounds like he'd trade his current address for his old one if given half the chance.

"I'm an east coast boy, there's no getting around it," he said in a recent phone interview from his Loas Angeles home, where he pursues career opportunities like film (A Bronx Tale, Steve Martin's Roxanne), television (roles on Married With Children, Roseanne and Designing Women along with his own HBO special) and writing (his Male and Female Dictionary is about to be published by Disney's Hyperian Press). "I've been here for 12 years and I haven't adjusted. There's no seasons, there's no life rhythm. You get used to seasons, but here it's always the same. When they talk about weather here, that means air. Here, if you can't see the air, that's the weather."

Many of his observations about life on the left coast can be found in his latest one-man show, "The Romantic Adventures of Canyon Man," which includes a testosterone-driven character who epitomizes the kinds of people driving four-wheel drive vehicles and ATVs through "a city paved over with asphalt."

Topics such as his transition from a wild single on the make to a sober husband and family man are covered in his show, all delivered with an unusual, revealing honesty.

"It's really being lazy," he said. "It's so much easier to talk about what happens to me, and when people laugh when I talk about things that happen between my wife and I, that makes me feel good because then it's not like I'm the only person going through this. They're recognizing the universality, or whatever — the common ground that we all live on."

True to his belief in common ground, Shydner even made a comment that disputes the rules regional humor, which require making fun of people outside of whatever part of the country they're in at the time.

"You find out how much the same people are," he said, talking about his travels around the country. "The cheapest device in standup comedy Virginia and make fun of the people in some other state, then go to that state and make fun of people in West Virginia. It doesn't matter where you go, there'll be people who get it and people who don't."

Clearly, Shydner gets it, so if you're looking for someone a little smarter, and ultimately funnier, than Andrew Dice Clay (who's playing the Paramount in Manhattan on New Year's Eve) to celebrate the New Year, here's a Jersey boy who's talking the talk and walking the walk.

Horror and glory

Disturbing 'Schindler's List' may be Speilberg's crowning achievement By JEFFREY COHEN WeekendPlus Film Critic egasuccessful though it was, it was clear watching Jurassic Park that Steven Spielberg was distracted. The thrills were all special effects, while the plotting and characters. which are usually at least interesting in a Spielberg film, were strictly by rote. Spielberg, clearly, was thinking about something else.

Now, we know that.

By now, you've probably read quite a bit about Schindler's List, the new Spielberg film dealing with an episode from the Holocaust. Critics who usually go far out of their way to take shots at film's most commercially successful director ever have been tripping bver their own word processors praising this effort as uncharacteristic, mature, profoundly disturbing, and moving, a film that opens a whole new chapter in Spielberg's career. It's all true.

Schindler's List is a three-hour-plus epic that actually justifies its length. The true story centers around Oskar Schindler (Liam Neeson, in a masterful portrayal that may actually put him on the map of leading men), a Czech businessman who came to Krakow, Poland as Jews were being displaced from their homes and forced into a 16-block-square ghetto by the Nazis. Interested in making piles of money, Schindler noted that Jewish labor was cheaper than Poles and used his SS contacts to secure positions for 350 Jews at an enamelware factory he bought with money from Jewish investors.

because we don't have that expected Spielbergian moment.

Even though Schindler isn't present at much of the horror – and there is a lot of horror in this true-life film — we are given the clear indication that he knows about everything that's going on, and slowly, inch by inch, he shows signs that even if he can allow it to continue, he can't allow himself to be part of it. He takes great pleasure, late in the film, in starting a new factory that will make shell casings that don't work, in order to slow down the war effort.

Make no mistake - Schindler's List is a grueling, difficult movie to watch, but Spielberg, being the consummate artist he is, knows how to take us right to the edge of the abyss, show us what's inside, and then pull us back just when we'd consider running up the aisle if one more awful horror is perpetrated on the screen. Some people will object to the portrayal of the almost-saintly Jews (although some Nazi collaborators have prominent roles) being led through unspeakable experiences yet again, but they will miss the point that telling the story again makes it more difficult for history to repeat itself. Others will point to the two or three examples of Spielberg's excess as undue emotional manipulation (although it's impossible to pump up the emotions on such an enormous crime), but they will overlook the other 90 percent of the movie, when Spielberg uses blackand-white photography, handheld cameras, and other devices to make the horror more documentary-like, the way it must truly have looked. The violence becomes a daily sight, arbitrary and horrible in its familiarity. The fact that Spielberg has won critical accolades and could very well take home that Oscar (not Oskar) that has so long eluded him is beside the point. Even at his most disposable, this director is the most accomplished, most gifted filmmaker of his time. And even if this is not his crowing achievement, it is a staggering one. It would be a pity if this film doesn't find the audience other Spielberg movies have enjoyed, since it can tell so many so much.

eriot VI.Ye VOLTO IN SOUL TOYON

Uninterested in actually running the business, Schindler enlists the help of a Jewish accountant. Itzhak Stern (Ben Kingsley; expect Best Supporting Actor talk). Stern, noting the hideous atrocities being performed regularly on those Jews deemed "non-essential" by the Germans, began falsifying documents to turn scholars and rabbis into sheet metal workers, saving their lives.

After the ghetto is exterminated (in a graphic, horrific sequence) and Jews are sent wholesale to concentration camps, Schindler begins a slow transformation from opportunist to humanist, and eventually is faced with the choice of keeping the enormous fortune he has amassed through owning the factory, and saving as many people's lives as the money will buy.

It's not giving anything away that Schindler saved the lives of almost 1,200 Jews, through a series of extraordinary circumstances and rare morality on Schindler's part. And the movie, masterfully directed by Spielberg, takes a number of extraordinary chances, all of which pay off beautifully.

The most daring of these is to keep Schindler at arm's length, to resist the impulse to give him a life-changing revelation. Yes, Schindler does witness the avoid atrocities going on in the ghetto, but the process from soulless businessman to hero is gradual, and more believable,

Wine with Reason Marilyn Cormack

It's almost New Year's - You need to get ready! What bottle of bubbly are you going to pop at your get together? No matter what you're planning, from the social event of the year to an intimate Deux a Deux, there is a perfect champagne waiting for you. For Instance:

- Sparkling wine that is too good to be true for its reasonableprice. Paul Cheneau Blanc De Blanc. Light & Citrusy. Great for parties.

-The Classic champagne for any gathering - Moet Et Chandon White Star, nobody doesn't like M&C.

- Champagne with enough taste to carry through an entire dinner - Bollinger Brut N/V.Big & Robust. Yeast for to die. A must.

- The sexiest champagne for just the two of you - For classic romantics, it's Perrier-Jovet, for you new agers, it's Etoile Sparkling wine from Chandon, Ca. Enough said.

- Names to bring if you must Impress with a name - Crystal, Dom Perignon, Tattinger and Krug.

-Names to bring if you must

-The driest, most citrusy, lean, cleanest sparkler around - Iron horse. California. No question about it. Or Cordonieu.

- The best, only slightly sweet champagne that will go with dessert - Mumms Extra Dry. Not cloy, very clean and refreshing.

- Sparklers for an ethic New Year's - Henkell, Korbel Brut,, FrexinetCordonNegro,M&RDry Asti, Great with salty & spicey foods.

- The Perfect Rose - Van Der Kamp Midnight Cuvée. Ok, maybe it's not perfect, but I'm prejudiced.

Happy New Year and Enjoy!
