ARTICLES TO APPEAR IN UNION COUNTY STANDARD.

Editor by Dr. Morgan Published in This Issue.

This issue is published the first in the series of "Some Annals of Westfield" by Dr. Morgan. The series is published in the Standard during the early Revolutionary period. Dr. Morgan treats Westfield's part in the Revolutionary war in this town, he claims, enjoyed and isolation not attributed to some who have written articles in this period. Dr. Morgan is a student of history, and what he must necessarily carry with weight of authority. In the later part of Dr. Morgan's series, "The Hill Episode," "Union County in the War of 1812," and the development of Westfield. Morgan's paper will be followed by a series of articles of local interest. W. G. Peckham has kindly written an article on "The Old Thirty Years Ago," and Ira O. Hart will contribute a paper on "Old Time Characters of Westfield." Councilman Robert H. Middlebrook will write an article on "The Development of Westfield; its Advancement and its Needs." Other articles by writers are as follows:

Theory and Practice of Education in the Westfield Public Schools, J. Savitz; The Practice of Education from the Standpoint of a School Teacher, Earl A. Merrill; The Reality of Westfield, Mr. James E. Hart; The Commercial Growth of Westfield, (writer to be selected); The Life and Sports of Westfield, Mr. W. Gladwin; The History of Westfield Public Library, Mr. Fred Eggert; The History of the Children's Country Home, Miss E. L. Stearns; Methodist, Dr. A. W. Hayes; Congregational, Mr. Fred S. Taggart; Baptist, Rev. C. L. Greenwood; Protestant Episcopal, Rev. Sydney L. Cross; Roman Catholic, Father Charles Smith.

HELPED MOVE THE LOCK-UP; CAME NEAR BEING A TENANT.

Michael Hardnametopronounel and Companions Paid a Fine to Escape.

Three young Italians were arrested by Officer Onufield at the O. R. R. station Tuesday night, because they insisted, despite repeated warnings, in making the steps leading to the south side of the depot a general hanging out place, from which point of vantage they "rushed the growler."

When arranged before Judge Toney, Michael Hardnametopronounel, the oldest member of the trio, declared that he was perfectly innocent of wrong doing, and had no desire to be put in the lock-up. He said that he had helped Mr. Willoughby move the lock-up from the old to the new police headquarters, and he knew what it was like. His companions also entered protests.

The Judge, however, refused to compromise. He said that, in as much as they had refused to comply with the requests of the police officers, he thought that a little punishment, in the way of a fine, would help to jog their memories. He, therefore, imposed the fine of $2.00 on each. Michael had no money, but Luigi Damadi produced a wallet and handed over the $6.00 to the police magistrate.

The Italians left the police station quietly, but when they had reached the street they began to talk it over in Italian, and, judging from their jesticulations and grunts, they felt very bad about the treatment which they had received.

GLUCK VS. PECKHAM.

Statement Made to Show Why Fine Should be Reduced.

In Gluck vs. Peckham, the following statement is submitted as the grounds on which motion is made to reduce the fine to $1.00 or to 6c. The briefs are to be submitted.

I. Defendant and his horse had moved into the gutter to avoid the automobile. The machine was thereupon turned towards the horse. Up to that time defendant had not said a word. All above is proven and not devised.

II. Defendant was in such danger and in such provocation that under the law that is a defense, that was disregarded.

III. The fine can and under the verdict of the law should be reduced to 6c, regardless of above. The verdict found "provocation."

IV. It took time to get the horse back into the road in his condition. Defendant was always nearer to his witnesses than he was to the automobile. The ladies and children who testified for defendant were nearer to him and are worthy of belief when they say that defendant used no improper language.

V. The misconduct charge consists of being offensive to the bystanders. All the bystanders without exception testified to the contrary.

VI. Under Judge Fort's decision there was a jurisdictional defect in the affidavit and summons.

VII. Constable Stitt wrongly prevented defendant from access to the jury room when the lawyer on the other side was admitted.

They Were Over-Joyful.

Morris Joy and Edward Welch, of Newark, were arrested by Chief of Police O'Neil for fighting in front of the fire house, Monday noon. They were arraigned before Judge Toney in the afternoon, and Joy was fined $2.00 and Welch sent to the county jail for ten days.

SPECIAL SCHOOL ELECTION.

To Vote Additional Appropriation for New School and Bond Issues.

In order to bring the appropriation up to the amount required for the building of the new Fourth Ward school house, the Board of Education, at a meeting on Friday night, voted to call a special meeting of the citizens to vote for an additional $5,800. The meeting will be held in the Washington School, Tuesday evening, June 30, at 8 o'clock.

The people will also be asked to vote on a resolution to rescind the action taken at a meeting in March, authorizing the issuance of notes to meet the cost of the lot and building, and, instead, to issue bonds for the amount then appropriated. The extra appropriation is also to be provided for by bond issue. At the time of the March meeting, the Board felt that, owing to the financial stringency, the bonds might not sell at rates advantageous to the district. It is thought, because of the improvement in the money market, a bond issue will be profitable at this time.

SENT TO MORRIS PLAINS.

Clarence E. Love Declared to be of Unsound Mind by Local Physician.

Acting upon the advice of physicians, the local authorities yesterday removed Clarence E. Love, son of Thomas Love, of Westfield, to the Morris Plains Insane Asylum. Love was taken to the lockup Wednesday evening by Chief of Police O'Neil. He was acting strangely on Broad Street, and it was feared that he might do harm were he allowed to be at large.

Love's unsound mental condition is attributed to a fall which he had in his early manhood, from the effect of which he is said never to have entirely recovered. He has periods of great mental depression in which he acts peculiarly. He has been in the Insane Asylum before. The physicians, it is said, do not regard his case as dangerous, but it is considered better that he be removed from his family to a place where he can be carefully watched and treated. It is thought that he will not be a permanent inmate of the asylum.

Love is married and has a wife and one child. He is about forty two years old.

FIELD DAY CELEBRATION.

Men's League Athletes Distinguish Themselves on the Track.

Our correspondent has not given us particulars about the Field Day meet of the Men's League of the Methodist church, at Recreation Park, last Saturday afternoon, but we understand that it was a great event, and some young bloods, who have never before been put to the test of the track, distinguished themselves by their fast sprinting. Frank Ham and John Bunhaus, it is said, took all the honors in the race, and Charlie Affleck and Gen. Haurford won the three-legged race in a walk. Tom Murray's brass band was the real thing in close harmony formation, and as Tom directed, he did an Old Virginia Hole-down, which, it is claimed, surpassed anything that George Primrose ever did in this line.

The baseball game was something real exciting. It lasted just nine innings, and H. L. Abrams team won by the narrow margin of one run. The score was 59 to 58. The game was for the championship of the Methodist church in the county. There are no other teams in the running.

The ladies were present to enjoy the game and to cheer lustily for their favorites. The event was so successful that the member have determined to make it an annual occurrence.

FORGOT THE KEYS.

Youths Fastidious About Camping Out, Left First Essential at Home.

Two young Westfielders determined to spend the night in the woods, last Wednesday, in true camping style. They knew all about how to do it, too. It's a three mile walk and climb up the mountain to the shack, and the start was made promptly at three in the hottest day of the year (thermometer at 93 in the shade, please) with the following light marching order. Wheelbarrow, pulled by one and pushed by the other, containing cake of soap, a dozen eggs, side of bacon (for over night) potatoes, loaf of bread, tomatoes, lettuce (the oil and vinegar were forgotten by these dilettante woodsmen) cake, hot rolls for breakfast, full change of clothing (for the benefit of the birds), chops, books enough for a week's stay, and, heaven save the mark, pajamas!

Three miles in the broiling sun and when they arrived at their destination, tired, worn and exhausted, both had forgotten to bring the key. And then it rained, and rained some more, and rained again, until everything was wet through and through. Only "Uncle Alfred" at Pot Luck Palace, saved from utter misery, by giving them the helping hand which he holds out to all who come his way. A little more careful reading of the nature faking books combined with common sense will save many an error in judgment when it comes to "camping out."

MISS KIMBALL SURPRISED.

Friends Give Her a "Shower Party" at Home of Miss Hegeman.

Miss Mabel Frances Kimball was happily surprised by her friends last Saturday afternoon when a shower party, in her honor, was given at the residence of her friend Miss Estelle Hegeman, of Ross Place. As Miss Kimball entered the house with the hostess, the guests showered her with daisy heads and roses—and they said sweet things to her, and by the same token, presented her with some keep-sakes, by which she will ever be reminded of the delightful occasion. A musical entertainment, refreshments and very charming repartee, in which the other sex was very kindly mentioned, made up the program of the afternoon's enjoyment.

Among those present were, The Misses Bessie Smith, Gertrude Noe, Margaret Hutchings, Mabel Kimball, Estelle Hegeman, the Mesdames Harold Thompson, Fred Condit, William Vance, Charles Kimball, J. B. Wilson, J. W. Arkoll and George T. Crutenden.

RACES AT PLAINFIELD.

Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club Hold Matinee Tomorrow.

The Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club will hold a matinee at Plainfield Driving Park, Saturday afternoon, June 27th. All are welcome. Four classes and enough horses are entered to furnish good racing.

On the Fourth of July the annual Money Race will be held, and it is hoped that a large number of friends will come out on that day. A very fine card has been arranged and those making the trip will be well repaid. There will be three trotting and pacing events for purses, and in addition, a three mile steeplechase and two running races. These last named races alone will be well worth traveling miles to see. Stages will meet the trolleys on Park avenue as usual.

Pride of Our Flag Council Notes.

Pride of Our Flag Council, No. 100, Daughters of Liberty, elected the following officers last night for the ensuing six months: Councilor, Albert E. Snyder; vice councilor, Cora Hankins; associate vice councilor, Teresa Vonderschmidt; guide, Annie Vonderschmidt; inside guard, Emma Tompkins; outside guard, Thomas M. Wells; trustees, 18 months, E. M. Holmes. The above officers will be installed by the Deputy State Councilor at the next meeting, Thursday, July 9.

Pride of Our Flag Council, No. 103, Daughters of Liberty, initiated three new members at its meeting last night. They were Mrs. Kissie Lambert, Mrs. Belle Edgar and Mrs. Clara Jackson.

George Hankins, beneficiary of Eva MacIntyre has received from Pride of Our Flag Council, No. 100, Daughters of Liberty, two hundred dollars ($200.00) which sum is paid at the death of a member.

FELL FROM CHERRY TREE; BOTH ARMS ARE BROKEN.

John Platt, Jr., Lost His Balance, and Dropped 30 Feet.

While picking cherries in a tree at the rear of his home on Kimball avenue, last Monday morning, John Platt, Jr. lost his balance and fell to the ground, a distance of some thirty feet. Both of his arms were broken, his right arm in two places.

He was removed to the house where the family physician, Dr. J. B. Harrison was called and reset the broken bones. Young Platt's injuries are painful, but are said not to be of a serious nature. It will be sometime, however, before he will be able to join his playmates.

ADVANCE CLUB ELECTS.

Waller R. Darby President For Coming Year—Last Meeting of Season.

The following officers have been elected by the Advance Club for the coming year: President, Walter R. Darby; 1st vice president, Frank E. Wheeler; 2d vice president, Charles R. Pitcher; secretary, Mrs. M. B. Du cher; treasurer, H. E. D. Jackson; executive committee, Mrs. C. R. Pitcher, F. E. Wheeler, Mrs. Charles McDougall, M. B. Dutcher, Mrs. L. A. Clark; music committee, Mrs. W. R. Tubbs, Mrs. W. I. Stearns, Mrs. St. George Rathborne.

The last meeting of the club was held at the home of Mrs. Bartis on Euclid avenue, Friday night. Mrs. Harry Taylor played several piano solos. Mrs. Douglass sang with Miss Fink at the piano, and Mrs. Scarff playing the violin obligato. Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Douglass and Miss Fink played a sonata in three parts. And as a finale to the evening's musical entertainment the club sang "Old Lang Syne." Several readings were given by Miss Anna D. Cooper. The club will resume its activities in the fall.

DR. MORGAN HONORED.

Again Chosen Vice President General of "Society of War of 1812."

Dr. Appleton Morgan, of this place, was elected Vice President-General for New Jersey of "The Society of the War of 1812" at the Biennial Congress of that organization held at the Hotel Belvidere, Baltimore, last week. Dr. Morgan enters upon his sixteenth year as Vice President-General of the organization.

The officers elected were as follows: Mr. John Cadwallader, of Philadelphia, President-General; Dr. James D. Iglehart was re-elected vice-president for Maryland; Dr. Appleton Morgan was chosen the vice-president for New Jersey; Mr. Calvin Lord, of Boston, was made secretary-general, succeeding H. Randall Webb, and Rev. Henry Branch was chosen chaplain in place of Bishop Leighton Coleman, of Delaware, deceased.

GOOD TIMES COMING.

Good times are coming—not exactly on the run, to be sure, but pointed this way—at least that is what the officers of the Peoples National Bank think, and with characteristic promptness they have expressed their conviction by installing another big safe—a massive affair of steel, weighing 8 tons, and designed especially for the safe keeping of securities and valuable papers of all kinds.

Cashier Walsh says that depositors have been saving money, even in these hard times, and nearly every day checks come in representing payments for investments in securities, or land, or houses; and then the depositor wants a secure place for keeping his bonds, or mortgages, or deeds—hence the safe deposit boxes and the big safe.

So if you have valuable papers of any kind, and wish to "sleep sound o' nights" you may do so by locking them up in the heart of 8 tons of burglar proof steel.

The safe is installed in the front office, but is protected from the merely inquisitive by a cage of heavy ½ bar iron, designed and built by the Anchor Post Iron Works.

The addition of these safe boxes is appreciated and a large number have already been rented. Westfield isn't a city—yet—but it is bound to have city accommodations, and Peoples National doesn't intend any banking facility shall be lacking.

—Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Cooper gone to their summer home in Branch.

SOME ANNALS OF WESTFIELD

This Was a Peaceful Hamlet in Revolutionary Times, says Dr. Morgan.

NOT A STRATEGIC POINT.

Hence There Were "No Indians, No War, No Fighting, No Whipping Post, Nothing but Peace and Good Will."

[This is the first paper by Dr. Morgan, on "Some Annals of Westfield," the others will be published in chronological order in the Standard, and will be followed by a series of articles by local writers, on questions of local import.—Ed.]

No Indians, no War, no fighting, no whipping post, no stocks, no ducking-stool. 'Nothing but peace and good will toward men.' Such a o the proceeds of what research into the History of Westfield my leisure has enabled me to make.

The late Julian Scott, of Plainfield, who was not only the most famous of battle-artists, but a discriminating collector of books, once presented me with a rare find of his which he picked up at an old print shop in Nassau street, New York City, for the price of two quail old prints "The Battle of Trenton" and "The Death of Gen. Mercer at Princeton" it happened to contain. The book was thrown in!

The book was entitled "Historical Collections of the State of New Jersey" and proved to be a sort of tabloid treatment of every township in the State, published at Newark in 1844. Turning to Westfield, I read, abbreviations and all, as follows:

"Westfield was formed from Elizabeth in 1794. Its extreme length is ten miles with an average breadth of five miles. It is bounded N. E. by Springfield, E. by Union and Rahway, S. by Piscataway and Woodbridge (Middlesex Co.) and W. by Warren (Somerset Co.) and New Providence. Much of the soil is fertile and in a high state of cultivation. Rahway river forms a part of the eastern boundary and Green brook the western. There are in the township 12 stores, 1 paper fac. 5 flouring m. 4 grist m. 1 saw m. cap. in manufac. $110,350 2 academies, 70 students, 14 schools, 441 scholars, pop. 3,150. WESTFIELD (the town) is 7 m. 2 from Elizabethtown on the line of the Elizabethtown and Somerville Railroad. It is a neat village containing about 60 or 70 houses in the vicinity of which is a Presbyterian Church."

And yet this description of that "neat village of Westfield" in 1844, does not do us much less credit than the following, which I copy verbatim from the very last edition (1900) of Lippincott's Gazetteer, published just about seventy miles beyond us, in Philadelphia!

"Westfield. A banking post village in Westfield Township, Union County, New Jersey, on the Central R. of New Jersey, 7 miles W. by S. from Elizabethtown. It has telegraph manufacturing. Many New York business men reside here. Pop. of the township in 1900, 4928."

Which seems to me something less than a Philadelphia publisher ought to be able to do for a self-respecting village not seventy miles off!

There are a good many things to the credit of the State of New Jersey that our summer residents, or even our oldest inhabitants forget, to wit: that New Jersey is the second oldest State in the Union having been first actually settled in 1609, Florida only being older. But while Florida only claims her greater age by reason of a technical settlement not carried further or followed-up, New Jersey was immediately colonized, and had actually been a highly settled colony—(to be exact—two colonies called "the Jerseys" the territory having been granted by his Majesty the King, with the same generosity with which Queen Elizabeth had given Virginia—lying anywhere between Labrador and the Carribean sea—to Sir Walter Raleigh and his cecilians—)! Actually, that is to say, for more years before the outbreak of the Revolution than it has been settled since!

We are apt to forget also, that, lying as New Jersey does along, the stretch of Atlantic coast connecting the great sea-entrepot of New York with the great inland entrepot of Philadelphia, it was for soil that was practically fought on the Revolutionary War! Of undred and a battles and ments of a sixty-eight were of a thirty-one were im- enough for chronicle. That the ant victory of the war was within five miles at Spring that the outrage became the

No Humbug.

No humbug claims have to be made for Foley's Honey and Tar, the well known remedy for coughs, colds, and lung troubles. The fact that more bottles of Foley's Honey and Tar are used than of any other cough remedy is the best testimonial of its great merit. Why then risk taking some unknown propa-riation when Foley's Honey and Tar costs you no more and is safe and sure.

Improving the Mind.

The best way to acquire elegant English is to study the poets and best essayists and to memorize idiomatic and graceful phrases. We may store the mind with beautiful thoughts as we store our houses with lovely pictures.

India Schoolboy Patriots.

The boys of the Kishoreganj school football team recently refused to play for a cup on the ground that it was of foreign manufacture. As a result 12 of the head scholars are expelled.

Alabama's Lawmakers.

Alabama is the only state in the union which holds a legislative session only once in four years. Her lawmakers and unmakers get $4 a day, and the quadrennial session is limited to 60 days.

"NONE BUT THE BRAVE—"

Elmo Drysdale was a peach.
Put her in a bottle, and label her "From California," and you couldn't have told her from the marvelous product of the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers.

There are not many like Elmo. She had been admitted to the third degree of the Order of Man Killers.
She did things with her eyes that old ladies disapproved, and she did them—well, she did them so that it hurt for about three months, and then healed.

Soft eyes and soft hair had Elmo, and, as we approach the footlights and speak with a sifting quaver while the orchestra sympathizes in G-flat, let us state that her mouth was the kind you'd like your way through 11 miles of dense, tropical jungle to Ides, and she had the figure of a thousand-dollar bank note—so fine a figure that her princess gown made no bones about showing it off upon every possible occasion.

So much for Elmo. Too much, perhaps, for she was too much for almost everyone save Tommy Spindler. And even Tommy had Elmo pretty bad. The minute she gave him the high-stepping handshake, it was all up with Tommy.

Then they went at it.
Now, Tommy had seen girls before, and he knew the game. Violets he knew in midwinter, and five-pound boxes of chocolates, and cabs and theater tickets. But, curiously enough, such expenditures failed to capture her. Elmo had her chamber wall papered with love letters, and what she didn't have time to read she gave to her French maid to answer.

Tommy bought a 50 horse power auto, raised a Vandyke beard, wrote for the magazines, had a scandal with a show-girl—but it was no use. Elmo's pose was still the patronizing affable, and she refused to discuss personalities.

Tommy went and had appendicitis and jungle fever, but even this failed to interest Elmo.

An old man in whom he confided told him to neglect her. Tommy tried it for a week and Elmo didn't seem to mind it a bit. She bought a new hat and went to the opera with a boy of 17.

Then Tommy made a pilgrimage to the far east and engaged a prayer-wheel in an old Buddhist temple, seared it to a gas engine, and let it run for 40 days. At the end of that time his plea was answered. He arrived at home just as Elmo's engagement to a divinity student was announced. Tommy waited till the eve of the wedding.

That night, with four of his fraternity, masked and with false must-aches, he fell upon Elmo as she was coming home from church, thrust her into a cab, and drove her to a lonely vacant house in the suburbs. Here the divinity student was waiting, bound hand and foot. Elmo's screams had been muffled in a medicated veil, and when she came to her senses Tommy was in a dress suit. The four members of his fraternity supported her vigorously.

"Wilt thou have this man Tommy to be thy husband?" the divinity student muttered fearfully, prodded from behind with a hat pin.

"I will!" Elmo exclaimed in a firm voice.

"Did I do it all right?" asked Tommy, tenderly, when the guests had departed and they were on the sofa.

"It was perfect!" she murmured,
smacking her wonderful lips.

Then she grew calmer.

"There is no girl in the whole world," she said, slowly, "who doesn't simply long to be abducted. A hurried marriage is better than nothing, an elopement is good enough, but to be run away with against one's will—why, Tommy, Joan of Arc would count it an honor! Why do men know so little—when it is so easy?"

A Memorial Stone.

Upon the question of repairing a pavement at Swanger being raised it was elicited at a meeting of the urban council that one of the stone was used by Judge Jeffreys for the Bloody Assize, several of the condemned prisoners being hanged on the gallows from the stone, which had been taken from its original position and placed in the pavement about 50 years ago.
The council readily consented to hand it over to a gentleman who desired to restore the stone as near as possible to its original position, so that it might be preserved as a memorial not of Judge Jeffreys, it was explained, but of the "delightful times in which some of our forefathers lived."—London Chronicle.

Continued Evaporation.

"Look here," said the indignant lady customer, "I bought a pound of evaporated peaches of you yesterday and when I got home I discovered that I only had about three-quarters of a pound. How do you account for it?"
"Oh, I gave you a full pound, all right," answered the grocer, "but I suppose they evaporated some more on your way home."

We Care for Our Patrons Thruout the Summer.

WHILE individually vacations are indulged in by the managers and rank and file of this establishment, still, collectively, this store takes no vacation.

An ample force is on duty constantly, ready to serve you when you come, in mid-summer as in mid-winter.

And note this fact, which must be apparent to all—there is practically no diminution of stocks.

Here and there, of course, as the season wanes and changes come, certain lines are retired, but in almost every instance there is an influx of newer things to take their places so that the store is never permitted to take on the appearance of emptiness or dullness, and the visitor finds the exhibits ever interesting.

Walk thru the store, wherever or whenever you like, and you will find things looking fresh and fine—just as does a garden after refreshing rains.

Activity—constant change, is the watchword here, and, that being so, our stocks are always moving and being replenished with newer and often better things.

Whether you buy for self alone or for a family, or for a boarding-house, we can be of great assistance to you—we can help you—help you to select the things you like best and which will be of most service to you—help you to save money.

We invite you to come to the store often thru the summer season. Bring your visiting friends with you and let them share in the advantages which we bring to our patrons all the year round.

THE PASSING OF A DISTINGUISHED CITIZEN.

Ex-President Grover Cleveland died at his home in Princeton a few minutes before 9:00 o'clock Wednesday morning. Mr. Cleveland for many years had suffered from an organic disease. Heart failure was the immediate cause of death.

Grover Cleveland was a unique figure in the American politics. He was first known politically as Assistant District Attorney and Sheriff of Erie County, New York. He rose rapidly from Mayor of Buffalo to Governor of New York State, and finally reached the zenith of his political career as President of the United States, serving two terms, from March 4, 1885 to March 4, 1889 and from March 4, 1893 to March 4, 1897. Though he received all his political honors in New York State, he was born and died in New Jersey. His birth place was Caldwell, March 18, 1837, and he celebrated his seventy-first birthday a few months ago.

Mr. Cleveland's political career was turbulent. He was known as the Veto-Mayor of New York, and Veto-President of the United States. He was a man of indomitable will and aggressiveness. He rallied some of the biggest men in the Democratic party around him, including Daniel S. Lamont, William C. Whitney, his Secretary of the Navy, Charles S. Fairchild, Daniel Manning and Richard C. Olney, his Secretary of State.

During his first administration comparative quiet reigned at the White House, but in his second administration there was a depression in financial and industrial circles, the beginning of the free silver fight, the great bond sales, and the imbroglio with England over the Venezuelan boundary line disputes. A striking incident, also, was his determined action when the Chicago rioters were terrorizing the city. The President issued a law and order proclamation and called out the United States troops to prevent the rioters from interfering with the mails and to suppress violence that the local authorities were helpless to control.

President Cleveland became involved in a struggle with certain of the Democratic senators and representatives over the Wilson Tariff bill, and it was at this time that Senator Gorman bitterly assailed him on the floor of the Senate, and Senator Edmunds referred to him as the Charles the First of the American government. The Wilson bill afterward became a law without the signature of the President, who withheld his signature because he considered it inadequate in many of its provisions.

In 1895 the disputes between Venezuela and British Guiana became so acute that Richard Olney, the Secretary of the State, was called upon to write to the American Ambassador, at London, a statement of the facts as the American Government saw them and of this government's attitude with regard to the disputes. Mr. Olney declared that "the safety and welfare of the United States was so concerned with the maintenance and independence of every American state against any European power as to justify and require the interposition of the United States whenever that independence was in danger."

In December, 1895, President Cleveland sent a message to Congress in which he urged, that, as Great Britain had declined to arbitrate, the United States should name a commission of its own to investigate and should then "resist by every means in its power as a wilful aggression upon its rights and interests, the appropriation of any lands or the exercise of any governmental jurisdiction over any territory which after investigation we have determined of right to belong to Venezuela." As a result of this commission, the arbitration treaty was concluded late in 1896. In the light of history this will probably come to be viewed as President Cleveland's greatest act.

Early in 1895 President Cleveland entered negotiations with a syndicate of bankers for the purchase of gold by the sale of coin bonds to the value of something more than $65,000,000. Mr. Cleveland was most violently attacked for this action, but his friends have always insisted that the treasury could not have held out more than three days longer, and that most serious financial results would have followed. At any rate, the effect upon financial conditions was good and the Treasury was immediately relieved.

At the close of his second administration Grover Cleveland retired from public life, and as a private citizen he endeared himself to the American people by his constant devotion to his family, and his loyalty to his friends. He was still regarded as the leader of the conservative element in the Democratic party up to the time of his death, and his public utterances always carried with them the weight of deliberate judgment and honest conviction. He was the last of a line of Democratic leaders who believed implicitly in the old-time principles and traditions of the party, and conscientiously adhered to them. "Public office is a public trust," was Grover Cleveland's creed.

As President he was unfortunate enough to have been a victim of economic conditions over which he had no control. It is the anomaly of politics that men of high integrity, such as Mr. Cleveland possessed, are sometimes repudiated by unthinking people as being responsible for "hard times." Mr. Cleveland was assailed by his political enemies, who accused him of disrupting the money market, and of producing the money panic that occurred during his second administration. But to those who understand the theory of finance, Mr. Cleveland's worth is determined by the courage and fearlessness with which he went about his tasks in these trying times, and by the patience and fortitude with which he presided as Chief Executive in the face of bitter opposition within and without his party. Time has and further will ally the misunderstandings arising through this remorseless political conflict.

In the few years since Mr. Cleveland became a private citizen his reputation at home and abroad has been greatly enhanced. He stands today among the few men who have presided over the destiny of this country, as a fearless leader, an impartial judge, an uncompromising patriot, and if ever an advocate, only that because he was first a statesman. To what high pinnacle he shall be exalted the calm judgment of future historians shall have to determine; but it is not difficult to foresee that Grover Cleveland's place in American history will be by no means a secondary one.

—Mrs. E. S. Robinson, the State Federation Secretary, is attending the Biennial Convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at Boston, Mass., this week. Mrs. Robinson gave a tea to the New Jersey delegation at the home of her mother, Mrs. Charles Fuller, at Brookline, this afternoon.

A SAD, SAD STORY

Sympathetic Mrs. Massey Wept Optically.

"John," said Mrs. Massey, sighing and wiping her eyes with a certain modest ostentation, "did you read this piece?"

"Yes," said John, rattling his hall of the evening paper, and refusing to look up. "Yes, I read it."

"Then what's it about?" she demanded, giving him a look which was also of a demanding nature; "what's it about, then?"

But as for John, he scowled all over his physiognomy and preserved the silence of stoniness; and as they sat there, he pretending to be absorbed in his paper and she trying to break down this pretense by the silent power of a concentrated glare, let me tell you a little more about the time, the place and the persons of the drama.

Time, then: The present.

Hour: Eight p. m.

Place: The Masseys' sitting room, cozy and homelike, green-shaded lamp on the table, stuffed bird on the mantel-piece and all the linen worked by hand; on one side of the table sits Mrs. Massey, bright, plump and comfortable; across the table sits John, slumped, fed and pampered to the nines, credit man of a hardware firm downtown, short both of stature and of temper, choleric, peppery and of an irritable cast of countenance when crossed. Yes, such were Mr. and Mrs. Massey as they sat there in their sitting room, he rattling his paper and pretending to read it, and she setting him with her eye over the top of her paper, with an appropriate look of indignation on her comfortable face.

"What's it about, then?" she repeated. "John, what's it about?"

"Never mind!" snapped John.

"Never you mind what it's about? Can't you see I am reading?"

"But I do mind!" said Mrs. Massey, speaking with a spirit that can only be found in a woman who loves her bit of talk and who has had no better company all day long than a stuffed bird on the mantel-piece. "But I do mind!" she repeated. "So you see you might just as well tell me first as last!"

Thus trapped into the pit of his own digging, John groaned in his spirit and laid his paper down. Whereupon Mrs. Massey's contentment became too great for words and she mutely looked at the phenomenon of John The Trapped Man with a look that said, "O, this is very gratifying!"

"It's this piece in the paper," she said aloud, at last. "It made me cry."

"What do you want to cry for?" said John, with an alarming gesture of impatience. "It's nothing to do with you, is it?"

"John," she said with a tearful air of pride, "I was always that way. I remember when I was a little girl and used to recite 'Hesperides,' I was all right till I came to that verse:

"O, father, I hear the sound of bells;
O, say, what can it be?
But father answered never a word,
A frozen corpse was he."

"Aye, dear!" she said with a comfortable tremor, "John, I wish you'd just read this piece. Read it out. It's the saddest piece!"

"Chicago, February 28," began John, with a mean look.

"Aye, dear! Aye, dear!" said Jane, dabbling her eyes with her handkerchief.

"What's the matter now?" demanded John.

"Too!" said Jane.

"There's nothing sad in that, is there? Chicago, February 28—"

"Too-oo!" said Jane. "Aye, dear! Aye, dear!"

"It's so sad," she said, wiping her eyes and speaking in a faint, contented voice. "Go on, John. Go on."

"When William Nelson," continued John.

"G-r-r-r!" she gasped.

"A sad-faced man—"

"Poor things! Poor things!" she said, with a comfortable and tearful melancholy.

"—was arraigned before Justice Pennington this morning—"

She made a great to-do with her handkerchief and peacefully gasped for air.

"—for terrorizing the neighborhood the judge said: 'You don't seem to be such a terror this morning—'"

Jane sobbed away as though her swelling heart would break.

"Judge," he said, "I might have been a terror last night; but this morning I ain't even a quail of apprehension!"

John thereupon looked up in affected surprise, his mean look at its climax.

"Why, I don't see anything in that," he said.

"You don't?" she cried.

"Why, no; it's funny. That's what it is."

"Funny!" she cried.

"Yes; funny! Downright funny! and there you sat cutting up as if—"

"Read it again," she exclaimed, suddenly, sitting up straight and, speaking in sepulchral tones. "Read it again!"

He read it again, with the meanest look that mortal ever bore, and she listened at first with a mournful ear, her handkerchief all ready in her hand; but as John read the article again, chuckling away at a great rate and wagging his head as though it would be the death of him, Jane's face gradually hardened, her mouth gradually tightened, her brow gradually wrinkled, until at last with a snarl and a snort of righteous indignation, she cried in trembling tones:

"You fool! You're reading the wrong piece!"

Grover Cleveland.

Notable Career of a Forceful American Who Made His Own Way.

Twice Elected President, He Became in His Last Years "The Most Distinguished Private Citizen in the World"—Always Dignified, but Not Wholly Devoid of Humor—With an Iron Courage and Remarkable Self Confidence He Seemed Always Prepared.

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

THE most distinguished private citizen in the world," said a celebrated Republican ex-senator, introducing Grover Cleveland at the dedication ceremonies of the St. Louis world's fair in 1903.

Nobody disputed the characterization. Mr. Cleveland had spent two full terms in the White House, divided by an interim of private citizenship, and he had survived his retirement for years. He was not like an ordinary ex-president, who retires from one term or from two terms served consecutively. This man had suffered defeat after victory and had won victory after defeat. That record is unique in our history. It added to that high distinction which inheres in any man who has held the greatest elective office in the gift of the world's nations. It made him indisputably the most distinguished private citizen in the world.

But the ex-senator mentioned had still further justification. Ever since the ex-president retired to the classic shades of Princeton his distinction has widened as a man, as a personage, one might say as a "character" in the best sense of that term when it needs quotation marks to qualify its meaning.

Affectionately Known as Grover.

Early in life Mr. Cleveland discarded his first name, Stephen. Therefore he tion. Yet he was not always devoid of humor.

At a White House reception some-how a seedy looking tramp got in line. He was immediately behind one Dr. Lucky, who was introduced to the president. Nobody was acquainted with the tramp. Both he and Mr. Cleveland seemed embarrassed for the moment, but the president rose to the occasion. Releasing the hand of Dr. Lucky, he grasped that of the tramp and said cordially:

"And you, I suppose, are Dr. Unlucky."

Messages to Congress Penned by Himself.

It is said that all the presidents together up to Mr. Cleveland's time did not leave so many state papers in their own handwriting as did this hard worker. Mr. Cleveland insisted upon attending personally to many affairs which other presidents turned over to their secretaries. His mind worked best through his arm and his finger tips. His messages to congress he wrote with his own hand, as, in fact, all his important state papers. Thus nobody could charge him with being a dictator.

President Cleveland's severe conception of dignity was indicated by his quarrel with Colonel Henry Watterson, the famous Kentucky editor. Once the president was too busy to go to the theater when young Mrs. Cleveland expressed a desire to hear Clara Mor-could not be called Steve by the people of the United States. But as the one great national character of his day he became respectfully and affectionately known as Grover. Everybody was interested in knowing what Grover was doing at his Princeton home. When Grover went fishing, everybody wanted to know how many he caught and if they were cats, suckers or flounders. When Grover went duck hunting, everybody waited eagerly to learn how many he bagged.

Even the simple story of the self-preservation frog was highly diverting to the great public. This frog Mr. Cleveland was using for bait. He had not had a bite for an hour. Finally he happened to glance down at his feet, and there on a rock sat little Mr. Frog, with the book in his skin, enjoying life in the open air.

Counting, at any rate, from the time when he first became president, Mr. Cleveland never evinced any of the personal magnetism qualities which are calculated to make people think of him by his first name, much less to "Teddy" it. Mr. Cleveland was always a dignified person. More than that, he was essentially austere and ponderous. Of course he may have been quite otherwise when he went fishing. The statement refers to his public appearances. He gave the impression of being a mountainous mass of mind, moving slowly, but surely, toward its ultimate goal, and when he reached the goal he stayed there and went into camp. He did not get there by jumps or jerks, by impulsive catching at conclusions, but by the laborious method of feeling his way and treading carefully, though perhaps not softly. President Cleveland was a big thinking machine in constant operation, but so well oiled that he made no unnecessary noise. He took his work so seriously and found it so exacting that no time was left him for the lighter side of things, even if he had had the inclination.

Colonel Watterson happened to be at the White House. The president requested him to escort Mrs. Cleveland, which the gallant Kentuckian was happy to do. Between the acts Mrs. Cleveland suddenly announced that she desired very much to have a chat with the noted actress. The colonel arranged for her to visit Miss Morris in the latter's dressing room. Delighted with her experience, Mrs. Cleveland enthusiastically told her husband about it as soon as the colonel took her home.

The president turned to Colonel Watterson and somewhat angrily reproached him for permitting the first lady of the land to visit an actress in her dressing room instead of having the actress call at the box. He had trusted to the colonel's age and discretion, he said, to protect Mrs. Cleveland from yielding to a "schoolgirl fancy" so undignified.

Grover Cleveland was the first Democratic mayor of Buffalo and the first Democratic governor of New York since the civil war. Then he became the first and only Democrat elected to the presidency since James Buchanan, who defeated John C. Fremont, the first Republican candidate, in 1856. These facts enhance his distinction.

Helped Fanny Crosby With Her Hymns.

From his boyhood Mr. Cleveland manifested those traits of iron courage which may be termed self confidence, so characteristic of his official career. Young Grover's first job away from home was a clerkship in a school for the blind. Fanny Crosby, the noted hymn writer, herself blind, was a teacher there. Young Cleveland used to assist her by taking down her poems in handwriting. The principal of the school upbraided Miss Crosby for utilizing Grover in that way. Grover heard of it.

"Look here," he said to the blind singer, "you have a perfect right to use my services in this way. Your hymns do much good for this school. You tell the principal no more time be objects."

Miss Crosby boldly stood up for her rights after that, and the principal meekly submitted, while the young amanuensis continued the poem which enabled him later along in life to write presidential messages legibly.

Mr. Cleveland made his own way in the world. His father, a Presbyterian minister, died when Grover was six years old. The boy after his brief experience in the school for the blind started for Cleveland, O. It is said that the name of that city was its chief attraction for him. But he visited an uncle in Buffalo on his way west and was induced to remain in that city. Grover's mother when he left home gave him a little Bible. Daniel Lamont, who was private secretary to Governor Cleveland and later a member of President Cleveland's cabinet, told a highly interesting story of this Bible.

"I first saw it," said Mr. Lamont, "on a table in Cleveland's law office in Buffalo. When Mr. Cleveland became governor the little Bible was generally to be seen on the bureau in his bedroom in Albany. Just before his inauguration as president I found the book in his rooms at the Arlington hotel, Washington, and I carried it to Chief Justice Waite, requesting him to use it when he swore the new chief magistrate into office."

About 40,000 witnesses saw Grover Cleveland press his mother's gift to his lips on that memorable occasion.

Later the little Bible lay on Mr. Cleveland's writing table in his library at Princeton. On the outside cover it is inscribed in gilt letters the name "R. G. Cleveland," and on the fly leaf in his mother's handwriting are the words, "My son, Stephen Grover Cleveland from his loving mother."

Display of Self Confidence.

The late Senator Ingalls, himself a brilliant orator, once confessed that he was stricken dumb with wonderment by Mr. Cleveland's display of self confidence at his first inauguration. With 40,000 people in hearing and 70,000,000 waiting to read the words he was about to utter, this man, altogether new to Washington and to the national arena, stood forth to deliver his inaugural address offhand. He held in the palm of his left hand a scrap of visiting card on which he had noted the merest catchwords of his address. The sight of this scrap of card caused Senator Ingalls to say:

"Suppose his memory had failed him. Such things happen to speakers skilled by a lifetime of experience, and why not to Cleveland, a novice in the art? Yet he stood there, with all the confidence of a prophet of old, and without manuscript spoke for an hour to 70,000,000 people!"

This courage, this self confidence, characterized his entire career as president. He seemed always prepared. He had loaded his gun beforehand, and when he got ready to fire he fired. During his first term he vetoed 413 bills. This unprecedented exercise of the veto power astounded congress and caused the people to sit up and take notice. No adverse criticism swayed him. Among the bills vetoed were 237 private pensions. Cleveland, who helped to support his mother during the war on a meager salary as assistant prosecutor in Buffalo, had hired a substitute when he was drafted into the army. This was brought up against him by indignant Grand Army men, but he believed that the pension bills he was vetoing were improper under the laws, and he ignored the insinuations.

Mr. Cleveland devoted his entire congressional message in 1887 to the tariff. He characterized the then existing tariff laws as "vicious, inequitable and illogical." His bold stand for a reduction of duties contributed largely to his defeat for re-election the next year, though he received a majority of the popular vote.

It was in his second term that Mr. Cleveland's policy or principle of standing pat with his own convictions split his party wide open and made him millions of political enemies. He was unalterably in favor of the gold standard. In the summer of 1893 he called a special session of congress to repeal the Sherman act requiring the government to make large purchases of silver bullion. Succeeding chapters in the monetary struggle are of such recent history that it is unnecessary to mention them.

Perhaps the one act of President Cleveland which aroused the deepest indignation in some quarters and evoked the highest commendation from other quarters was the sending of federal troops to Chicago during the great railroad strike of 1894 "to prevent obstruction of United States mails" against the protest of Governor Altgeld of Illinois, who held that his state forces were adequate to cope with the situation.

Made Him a National Hero.

His vigorous assertion of the Monroe doctrine in the Venezuelan boundary case, even to the extent of inviting war with Great Britain, swept away partisan prejudices for the time and made President Cleveland a national hero.

"A public office is a public trust," in seven words, is Mr. Cleveland's noblest literary creation.

Time softens even political asperities. It is yet too early for unbiased history to be written around the Cleveland administrations, but one may venture the prediction that, when the scroll of history is made up, on the list of the greater American presidents will be the name of Grover Cleveland, "the most distinguished private citizen in the world" for many years toward the end of the nineteenth and at the beginning of the twentieth century.

A Made-to-order World of Summer Hosiery at Wanamaker's

For one hundred and fifty years Chemnitz has been the hosiery centre of Europe.

What Chemnitz is to the world-at-large Wanamaker's is to America.

Wanamaker's is one of that small coterie of great wholesale importers to whom all doors at Chemnitz are open, and who are able to obtain the very lowest prices on everything.

Quantity is our "open sesame." Buying for our two great stores—New York and Philadelphia—gives us a leverage which nothing can withstand. It more than puts us on a par with the wholesalers who sell to a chain of stores in all the smaller and even large cities.

Consequently prices you pay at Wanamaker's are about the same as most stores must pay the importer. You can see the saving for yourself.

Some of the largest and most progressive Chemnitz manufacturers even favor our orders to those of wholesale houses, because we give them ideas out of our contact with consumers.

Wholesalers are content with the same things year after year. Wanamaker's must have something new—something different all the time.

Our representative must go abroad at least twice a year, so enormous is our business.

He goes first to France—land of novelties. Sees everything—finds out the new colors—new embroideries—chooses the finest ones for you.

He goes to Germany—full of French initiative and art. Then he orders, knowing he is backed by Paris.

In this way you can find novelties at Wanamaker's fully a year ahead of almost any other large store or wholesale house, and at practically the usual wholesale price.

Our representative has returned from his last trip to Chemnitz, and we invite you to a HOSIERY STOCK COMPLETE with every good stocking made—from 12½¢ to $100 kinds.

We specially call your attention to the new novelty stockings for children to match their Summer—particularly gingham—frocks. Exclusively at Wanamaker's.

LOVE AND DEATH JINGLES

By Stuart B. Stone.

The lark of crimson beauty was ruffled now. A great, swift steamer was cutting its way through the waves of glowing fire, leaving an ever-increasing "V" of white billows. And now a strange, sweet sound of music came from the approaching vessel. It was a character of music the fair young doctor had not heard in his busy life.

The music ceased and there was a dull boom as of cannon firing, and the steamer turned, as though by magic, to a gondola of olden Venice. Balls of yellow and green fire ascended from the vessel and, exploding, lit all the heavens. Then the gondola became a three-masted schooner, and then an ocean greyhound, and finally a black, gun-bristling dog of war.

She was nearing the long pier and the fair young doctor saw a figure approach the railing and think a little bell. The figure was that of the prettiest kind of a maid—red-brown hair that shone like the crimson waves and eyes that laughed at the staring medical man.

"Ting-a-ling-ling!" went the pretty maid's bell, and it kept up its calling, fetching ring until the doctor dug his hands in his eyes—and awakened.

"Ting-a-ling-ling!" went the telephone in the corner.

The doctor crawled sullenly out of the good, warm bed. An hour ago he had returned from the ceremonies attendant upon the arrival of two new Johnsons at the little log house, where too many Johnsons lived now for comfort. And now remorseless duty called again.

"Ting-a-ling-ling!" went the telephone. The central girl fretted.

After the doctor had set his bare feet on a cruel steel instrument and driven a table corner into his fourth rib he bawled into the mouthpiece: "Hello! Who wants Dr. Raymond?"

"John Kimball is in a fearful shape," went a gruff voice at the other end. "Has a killing pain in his throat—I'm afraid he's a goner!"

The doctor hobbled over to a chiffonier and began the task of hasty robing. A photograph of a very pretty girl—the siren maid that had rung the changing craft's tinkle-tinkle bell—showed on the mantel in the freelight, and the doctor paused a moment before the pure, dear face before getting into his muddy boots. Then ting-a-ling-ling went the telephone again.

It was an excited feminine voice now: "Lawrence Dutton is awfully sick—thinks he is about to die—stomach hurts him—please, please hurry!"

The doctor dropped the receiver and groaned: "Dorothy—this will go hard with her!"

The girl on the mantel smiled at him and he hurried over and talked to the photograph: "I'll do my best, old girl. One is my friend and a real, real man; the other, my rival—your beloved—and a cur and a rascal. And where to go first, God only knows!"

The doctor muttered and creased his fine brow all the way down the steps, to the nearby stable, and along the road of muddled darkness.

"This is no thing," he growled, "for a doctor and a man to solve. Friend and gentleman, or knave and rival—lives in the balance—and the girl—well, I know what she would have me do."

The doctor fretted for two more miles of chill blackness, and then a great signboard showed, white and ghostly. In the hours of light the signboard read: "Two miles to Driscoll," on one side; "Four miles to Sweetwater" on the other.

Now the doctor halted his horse and hesitated. He started the Driscoll way, then turned back for Sweetwater. Finally he plunged down the Driscoll road, and in ten minutes he stood beside a ruffled bed.

"How is he now?" asked the doctor, gravely.

"I think I'm all right now," purred an offeminate voice—the voice of the siren maid's beloved. "I fear I ate one too many olives for supper, and I had really excruciating pains in my stomach. I can't bear pain, you know."

The doctor muttered his disgust: "I've got to get away from this kindergarten. There's a man really sick three miles over yonder." And the doctor put emphasis on the "man" and the "sick."

As he grasped at his little black grip the telephone rang—ting-a-ling-ling! The bustling maid hurried to the instrument and talked a staccato: "Yes—Oh, my!" kind of talk for a minute. Then she turned to the listening room:

"John Kimball died a minute ago. He hadn't been sick an hour."

When Fainting is a Feint.

Fainting, which anciently was known as swooning, is a term that seems to have come to us through the French from the verb, we still have in "feign." "Feign" has been spelled with an "a" and with an "e"; the spelling with an "e" retains its early meaning; the spelling with an "a" denotes cardiac syncope, or fainting. So great is the change made by a single vowel that a "feint" if "feigned" is a "feint."

A Large Bank For Rural Depositors.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of the Union Trust Company of New Jersey, Jersey City, which appears in this issue. We refer to it especially by reason of the fact that this enterprising institution is among the first to recognize the mutual benefit to be gained by offering complete banking facilities in a convenient form to the residents of the rural communities. Over two-fifths of the population of the State of New Jersey is represented in towns and communities which have no banking facilities whatsoever and it is logical to expect that much benefit can be derived by the depositor as well as the bank which offers banking facilities to this desirable class of citizens. President Ludlow, who by the way has made an enviable reputation among the banks of New York City as well as Jersey City, for his many evidences of the thorough understanding of good banking principles, stated in an interview as follows:

"We some time since recognized the fact that there was a vast number of citizens in this State who were extremely thrifty, with large means, but who had not been accorded the proper facilities for safeguarding their funds owing to their residences being in remote sections of the State or in towns which are too small to support banks. We are maintaining a department especially equipped to enter to this class of business. With the United States Postal Service as an auxiliary, we are able to render every banking facility through the mail."

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 600 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

Edward Monday, living at 10 Harmony street, Westfield, N. J., says: "I cannot speak too highly of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills as they quickly and permanently removed the pain across the small of my back. I suffered severely from sharp twinges through my loins which extended into my shoulders. There was also a weakness of my kidneys and when I caught cold the pain was greatly aggravated. Doan's Kidney Pills being highly recommended to me, I procured a box at Prutey's Pharmacy, took them as directed, the pains diminished, and in a short time I was cured of all my trouble. I am now enjoying the best of health and owe it all to the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

In the closing chapters will be found an account of "Conspiracy and Rebellion," the second rupture of Mrs. Eddy's ranks and the secession of thirty-six of the leaders of her church; "War in Heaven," the story of the Eddy-Woodbury feud, and some of the grotesque extravagances which lay behind it.

SOME ANNALS OF WESTFIELD CONT'D.

"Remember the Maine" of the Revolution (the Caldwell murders) occurred at Connecticut Farms now called "Union," three miles from where this memorandum is printed; and that actually the last hostile gun that was ever fired in the seven years war was also fired in Union County, to wit, at Tremont Point known in the histories as "Ruhwy Meadows"—these are rather exclusive facts for Union County to be proud of!

In the volume above mentioned, morised in with quaint little pictures of Jersey towns, almost all of them so nearly alike that any one of them might no for any other, are accounts of all these battles and skirmishes, incursions of Redcoats and hostile forages. But none in our own hamlet of Westfield. The reason why there was no fighting at Westfield is of course because our town lies in the end do sue just between the approaches to Morristown where Washington's great depots of war material were accumulated via Tappan and the Tappan Zoo. The British access to those (had he been able to force them) would have been via Elizabethtown, Connecticut Farms, Springfield and Short Hills.

And again, Westfield lays above the plain of the Jerseys along the coast through Perth Amboy and Monmouth which was his high road to New York bay. That soldiers were quartered here, during many of those seven years is proved by the old receipts for boarding and lodging them still preserved in the town. I have often, in my eighteen years summer residence in Westfield wondered what happened in Westfield, and what the sensations of its inhabitants were when the roar of Gen Green's artillery at Springfield must have been so distinctly heard! Did any Westfield men and women, boys or girls go over to "see a battle"? Or were they like that French peasant out of range at Sedan, who calmly plowed his wheat-fields in plain sight of four hundred thousand men try to wipe each other off the face of existence with every modern engine of human slaughter? Something must have happened here in Westfield on that day; and, somewhere or other among our oldest inhabitants today, there ought to be some tradition of the twenty-third day of June in the year 1780!
