RELIEF COMMITTEE DISCUSS PLANS

Twenty Cases for Assistance Already Before Committee, Fourteen of Which Have Been Provided For

The Citizen's Relief Committee which was appointed by Mayor H. W. Evans a few weeks ago for the purpose of taking care of those in need and out of employment in this town, held a meeting in the town hall on Sunday afternoon for the purpose of going over the work and finding out what had been accomplished and how many families had applied for relief and how many for employment. W. A. Bishop, the chairman of the committee, presided and T. T. Harkrader, was chosen secretary.

Mr. Bishop stated that twenty cases for relief had been brought to the committee's attention and out of this twenty it had been found that fourteen were worthy and that they had been taken care of by the committee. It was also reported that the committee had found employment for six men who had applied for it.

W. Edgar Reeve and T. T. Harkrader were appointed a committee of two to devise an employment plan whereby persons who are out of employment and wish work could register and the committee would try to find something for those who applied to do. It was the general opinion of the committee that there should be some place where those out of employment could go and make their wants known. This was left to Mr. Reeve and Mr. Harkrader to attend to.

Mrs. Paul Q. Oliver, of the District Nurse Association, Mrs. R. E. Perry, of the Special Work Committee of the Woman's Club, and Mrs. J. B. Harrison, of the Westfield Branch of the Needlework Guild, were added to the membership of the committee. These ladies were present at the meeting and stated that they would co-operate with the committee in any way that they could. It was suggested that the committee keep in touch with the families that they have already helped and see that they have proper food and clothing. After discussing the plan of work to be carried out the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

Those present at the meeting were W. A. Bishop, T. T. Harkrader, Dr. G. S. Laird, W. Edgar Reeve, T. B. Hutchinson, Lloyd Thompson, S. D. French, Overseer of the Poor A. C. Fitch, Mrs. Paul Q. Oliver, Mrs. J. B. Harrison and Mrs. R. B. Porry.

MR. DOHRMAN'S LECTURE.

It is definitely announced by the Managers of the Children's Country Home, that Mr. John A. Dohrman will give his long promised "personally conducted tour" to the Italian lakes, for the benefit of the Home, in the Presbyterian Church, on Friday evening, December 18th, at 8:15 o'clock. The many pictures taken from Mr. Dohrman's own photographs that will be shown upon the screen on that evening, have been each one exquisitely colored by Miss Grace A. Smith, of New York, the well known lantern slide artist.

Mr. Dohrman states that the results by far surpass anything he has ever been permitted to show the many friends of the Children's Country Home on any previous occasion. The tickets are fifty cents, as usual, and can be obtained from any of the managers.

Those interested in the carrying out of the plans for gaining a substantial contribution of cash, food and clothing from the people of this place on Belgian Relief Day, which is to be held Saturday, December 5, met at the town hall Saturday night and effected organization by electing officers, appointing committees and adopting a tentative program of the day's events. There were about fifty persons present including a number of women. The meeting was called to order by Louis J. Hunter who explained what the object of the meeting was. POST OFFICE ROBBED BY COLORED YOUTH

Extracts Mail From Box of National Bank For Sake of Letters Containing Currency

The officials of the National Bank of Westfield, have been missing mail from their box in the post office for the past week. It seems that some time ago a piece of glass was broken from the box. This was noticed by Walter Dickerson, a colored boy, fourteen years old, who lives on Clark street. Dickerson, it turned out, would go to the post office and pull the mail out of the National Bank's box through the opening made by the broken glass. In this way he secured several checks and money amounting to five dollars. Cashier Kitts of the bank notified the post office officials regarding his missing mail and he himself watched the box. On Wednesday he caught the Dickerson boy in the act of extracting mail from the box. He took the boy to the police station. Post office Inspector Larrabee was notified by Chief of Police O'Neill and he will make a complaint before United States Commissioner Howell in Newark today when the boy will be taken before the United States Federal Court on a charge of robbing the mails.

This is not the first time young Dickerson has been in trouble, as he was in the local court some months ago on a charge of stealing bicycles.

INFORMAL DANCE GIVEN BY MISS TICE

Miss Marion Tice, entertained a large number of her friends at an informal dance at her home, 519 Highland avenue, on Wednesday night. Dancing was the main enjoyment of the evening, the music being furnished by Dushanek's orchestra. The Tice home was prettily decorated for the occasion, the color scheme being yellow. During the evening refreshments were served.

Among those present were Miss C. Adams, Miss D. Huntsman, Miss Anna Smith, Miss Catherine Day, Miss C. E. Dimler, Miss Olive Bird, Miss Ruth Day, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Conover, Frank Putnam, Howard Melick, Walter Johnson, Roy Love and Charles Kregger, of Plainfield; Miss Harriet Place and Harold Pouda, of Brooklyn; Miss Dorothy Cameron, Miss Elizabeth Morris, Miss Ruth Voorhees, Miss Beatrice Cameron and George Martin, of Danellen; Miss Marion Johnson, Miss Helen Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. L. JUDGE RUNYON FLOOR LEADER

Of State Assembly. Chosen Over Crosby of Essex by Vote of 23 to 14

The Republican assemblymen from all parts of the State gathered at the state house in Trenton on Tuesday for a caucus to fix a slate of house officers. They selected Assemblyman Carlton Godfrey, of Atlantic County, for speaker of the house and Judge William N. Runyon, of Plainfield as majority floor leader.

The result of the caucus was somewhat of a surprise as there was a three-cornered fight on for the speakership, the candidates being Godfrey, of Atlantic; John B. Kates, of Camden; and George H. Dalrymple, of Passaic. Godfrey however, was chosen, he receiving 20 votes to 13 for Kates and 4 for Dalrymple.

Judge Runyon was nominated for the position of permanent chairman of the caucus which carried with it the majority leadership. He was named over W. Clive Crosby, of Essex, by a vote of 23 to 14. The nomination of Judge Runyon was then made unanimous. Mr. Runyon asked for co-operation in order that he might fill his trying position as majority leader to the best of his ability and endeavor to make the house session a good and beneficial one.

The selection of Judge Runyon as majority leader is a high honor conferred on him as it is not usual that a new assemblyman in the legislature is chosen for this position. The people of Union County are to be congratulated upon having Judge Runyon in the assembly and as majority leader during the coming session of the legislature.

TO HOLD BRIDGE FOR RELIEF FUND.

The entertainment committee of the Westfield Golf Club will hold a Belgian Relief Bridge at the Golf Club on Saturday evening of next week to which everyone in the town is invited. The club members are asked to assist the committee in every way possible in getting as many as possible to attend. Handsome prizes will be offered. Tickets are now on sale at Frutcheys Pharmacy.

ANTHONY COMSTOCK VISITS WESTFIELD

Not in His Official Capacity. However, But Solely to Pay His Respects to Grandma Hanford

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Comstock called on Grandma Hanford, who by the way is in her 95th year, at Embree Crescent last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Comstock said that he had known Mrs. Hanford for many years and loved her as a mother. On his way home he called on "Gene" Hanford who he said was always a bad one and needed looking after.

Mr. Comstock said that he has been an officer of the government for forty-five years and that the men he has arrested would fill close to 100 trains and that the stuff confiscated would fill over 100 freight trains packed full to capacity.

Mr. Comstock recently returned from Europe where he had gone upon the invitation of foreign governments to assist in similar lines of work.

GLEE AND MANDOLIN CLUBS GIVE CONCERT

A representative and enthusiastic audience greeted the Wesleyan Glee and Mandolin Clubs last night at the Playhouse, on the occasion of their second visit to Westfield, under the auspices of the Men's League of the Methodist church. The college spirit, which at once created a bond of fellowship between club and audience, reached its climax in the final Wesleyan College song, "Victory", which was participated in lustily by Messrs. Beatty's, Aggar, Martin and Leslie, Wesleyan graduates, who were called forward to the platform for the occasion. The club easily maintained the reputation earned on its first appearance in town.

To emphasize the excellence of any particular selection would be difficult, for all were satisfying evidences of the careful training of the clubs, but judging from the four encores insistently given the "Jibbers Club", at the conclusion of the first part, the audience was particularly happy over the rollicking ditties sung by this quartette.

The baritone solo by Mr. Hammond, leader of the club, was well rendered and well received, as were also the readings by Mr. Luerich, and the violin solo by Mr. Raymond. On the club's first appearance here several years ago Frank Ham, Jr., represented Westfield as a member of the Glee Club. Last night George Beatty's, of Stoneleigh Park held the honor, he being a member of the Mandolin Club, of Wesleyan in its present tour.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE WELL ATTENDED

The union Thanksgiving service held in the First Methodist church yesterday morning was attended by the largest number of persons in a number of years. The services were in charge of Rev. G. Franklin Ream, pastor of the church, who read the proclamation issued by President Wilson. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. S. L. Loomis, of the Congregational church.

The choir of the church sang an anthem. Miss Dorothy French sang a solo. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. W. I. Steans, of the Presbyterian church. His subject was "A Reigning Lord and a Rejoicing Earth." The offering which was taken was for the benefit of the District Nursing Association and the new Italian church and amounted to $50.

A DAY AND NIGHT IN JERUSALEM.

The subject of the talk next Sunday evening at the motion picture service in the Westfield Theatre is "A Day and Night in Jerusalem" and it is hoped to have a moving picture of present day scenes in the Holy City. The motion picture last Sunday evening, entitled, "Home, Sweet Home", was enjoyed by the largest attendance so far this season.

It was noticed that the people in back of the hall do not join as heartily in the singing as those in front. It cannot be that time dims the "Kindly Light" that our little friends in front sing so lustily about for though the encroaching gloom makes the pitfalls more dangerous, yet it makes the light itself shine brighter.

Next Sunday evening can the older guard join in with more vim and show the younger recruits what veteran support really means.

FOURTEEN FAMILIES RECEIVE DINNERS

On Thanksgiving Day From the Members of the Boys League of the Methodist Church

The members of the Boys League of the First Methodist church made the hearts of fourteen families in this place happy on Thanksgiving morning when they presented them with their Thanksgiving dinner.

The dinners were distributed under the direction of Herbert R. Welch, the superintendent of the League. Four of the dinners were given to families in the Big Woods section and the boys say that they found some of the families in a very needy condition.

An amusing incident happened in connection with the dinners. On Wednesday night one of the boys brought a live chicken to the chapel of the church and as its legs was tied it was left there. The next morning it was forgotten until after the dinners had been taken out and when those in charge went to the chapel to clean it up they found the chicken roaming around the room.

On Sunday night, at the meeting in the chapel at 6:30, the boys who took the dinners to the families will tell of their Thanksgiving Day experiences. These boys are Burton Dezen-dorf, Raymond Hann, Conrad Johnson, John Davis, Paul Dezen-dorf, William Miller, Paul Davis and William Fredericks.

The boys will only be too glad at any time to distribute clothing and food to families who need it if it is sent to Conrad Johnson.

Fireside Council Doings.

Fireside Council met last evening and had a good time. After transacting the regular business and electing one new member, the orator furnished a good entertainment, with some parlour games.

It was very interesting to see several members try to pin the fish to the hook in the fishing game and Regent Carr and Organist Cosgrove were so near a tie it took close decision to settle it for Bro. Carr.

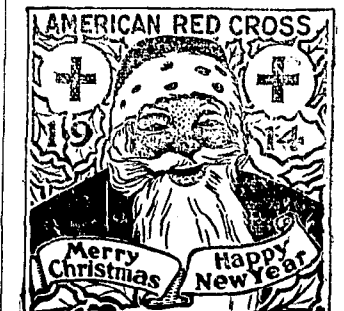

Doerfer and Spencer could thread nine needles in two minutes, more than any one else.

Bro. Faunce was the best blower in that contest—several other games were played and refreshments were served.

December 10th meeting, election of officers.

AMERICAN RED CROSS. (X)

Last year, $20,624.06 was realized throughout the state from the sale of Red Cross Seals. In most cases the money has been used wherever there is an organization, to help tuberculous patients by means of nurses, day camps, open air schools, exhibits, literature, lectures and publicity. School children, clergy, women's clubs and individuals are called upon to assist in the sale and distribution of these seals.

Every Seal you buy is a bullet in the fight against tuberculosis. Every Seal you use helps to protect you and your community against tuberculosis.

Clergy are being asked to observe November 29th, as Tuberculosis Sunday, to preach a health sermon, give a health talk or distribute literature which is appropriate for the occasion.

Auto Collides With Motorcycle.

An automobile driven by Mrs. E. Mason, of 520 Fairmount avenue, and a motorcycle ridden by William West-gahan, of Garwood, collided at the corner of North avenue and Elm street, on Wednesday night, about five o'clock. Mrs. Mason was coming into this place and West-gahan was on his way to Garwood.

Little damage was done to either the automobile or motorcycle. West-gahan and Mrs. Mason went to the police station and there Mrs. Mason agreed to pay for whatever damage had been done to the motorcycle. West-gahan was knocked off the cycle when it came in contact with the auto but was not hurt.

WOMANS CLUB HEARS DR. RANDALL

Well Known Speaker Discusses
Puritanism. Delightful Musical
Completes Pleasing Program

A lecture by Dr. J. Herman Randall, of New York City, a man of pleasing personality, was the occasion of an unusually large attendance at the Woman's club, on Monday afternoon, thus attesting to the popularity of the speaker who was no stranger to his audience.

A short business session preceded the lecture. The club was happy to greet its president, Mrs. Evans, who had been absent for several meetings. Mrs. Tubby told the club of an opportunity to help the Italian women of the Boston Settlement, who for lack of employment had been encouraged to do their beautiful lace and other work, some of which is now for sale at the Kate Greenaway.

Mrs. Robert Johnston, chairman of the library committee, reported that the club's annual gift of $50.00 to the library had been expended for Dr. Elcott's "Five Foot Book Shelf", with catalogue, thus forming an invaluable addition to the woman's club alcove.

The delightful music of the afternoon was rendered by two of the club's own talented members—Mrs. Paul B. Scott on the violin accompanied by Mrs. Harold Francis at the piano. The selections were "Romance", by Vieuxtemps; "Serenade", by Debussy, and as an encore, "Serenade", by Paderewski.

Puritanism, its strength and its weakness, was the subject of the afternoon's lecture. Dr. Randall stated that the original idea of the Puritans was not to withdraw from the established church but to reform it and that driven by persecution they attempted to establish a theory. This movement, which extended over a period of 20 years from 1533-1600, he defined as a universal struggle, intent upon the essence of reality against unreality and gave as its direct cause the influence of the English Bible.

The language felt this influence, the Bible furnishing the only literature of the rank and file of the people. They became so saturated with the scripture that a mosaic of Biblical quotations formed their daily conversation. The character felt this influence, producing such contrasting types as John Milton, the liberal, in close sympathetic touch with his fellowmen, and John Bunyan, the morbid extremist, whose conscience forbade his playing hockey and dancing on the green. The social life responded to this influence, leveling all class distinctions. To the Puritan there were only two classes, the Godly and the Ungodly. Theology felt this influence resulting in Calvinism which conquered half the world.

A movement so strong yet had its weakness, which even Cromwell realized, that of trying to establish the Kingdom of God by means of the sword. But to these permanent contributions of Puritanism, civil and religious liberty, simplicity of living, loyalty to duty and to the old Puritans, however stern, colorless, and fanatical, and above all serious, they may have been, we in America, and the people of England, owe our moral and spiritual development.

A successful sale of Thanksgiving "goodies", under the auspices of the "Special Work Committee" was held at the close of the program, part of the proceeds of which are to be used in cooperation with the Citizen's Relief Committee.

Concert by Irish Tenor.

John McCormack, the celebrated Irish tenor, will give a concert in the New Armory at Elizabeth on Tuesday evening of next week for the benefit of the National Association for the Education of Exceptional Children in Plainfield.

Mr. McCormack is one of the finest tenor singers on the American stage today and the entertainment which he will present at this time will be of a high order.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one remedy to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. AN ANDEAN TOUR

Will be the Subject of the Lecture by Mrs. Finney at the Washington School Tomorrow Night

Mrs. M. Claire Finney, who will give the lecture in Washington school tomorrow night, has resided in South America for a number of years and has traveled extensively in that continent. She has for some time been a lecturer on South American subjects in the New York School Lecture Course. She shows one hundred beautifully colored pictures of a trip down the western coast of the continent. After a brief stop at Colon and Panama she takes her hearers to visit the ports of Columbia and then Guayaquil, from which port she passes inland to Quito, the mountain capital of Ecuador. From Callao and Lima, and the other coast cities of Peru, two inland journeys are made across the Andes—one to the head waters of the Amazon river and the other to Lake Titicaca and the famous old cities of Bolivia.

In northern Chile are shown some magnificent views of the Andes while further south, after Valparaiso and the capital Santiago, another trip is taken by rail across the Andes to Argentina. The journey closes with views of the Strait of Ungellan and of Cape Horn.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE HOLD MOCK COURT

The Baptist Young Peoples Society held a subpoena social in the church parlors last Friday and the effort of the social committee was repaid by a large turn out. Many young people who are not members of the society were served with a subpoena to appear and show cause why they should not become members.

A mock court was held to try the cases. W. A. Dempsey presided as judge of the court and the proceedings were thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Those who took part in the court were: Judge, W. A. Dempsey; attorney for the state, A. B. Church; attorney for the defense, C. H. Robinson; court clerk, Miss R. A. Holmes; court crier, Howard Day; court officer, Horace Rockhill; jury, Miss Gladys Walker, Miss Mary Coles, Miss Bonnie Cowan, Russell Goltra and William Edgar.

After the court had been concluded and the jury had returned a verdict that all those who had appeared before the judge should be sentenced to become members of the society games and refreshments were enjoyed.

LAY CORNERSTONE OF NEW BOROUGH HALL AND FIREHOUSE

Fitting Ceremonies Participated in by Many Speakers Prominent in Borough and County

The cornerstone of the new borough hall and fire house at the corner of Centre street and South avenue, Garwood, was laid last Saturday afternoon with appropriate exercises by Mayor Peter M. Eriksen. The exercises were not elaborate as it is the intention of the borough official to have a celebration when the building is dedicated.

The stone was laid with a silver trowel which was presented to Mayor Eriksen by Postmaster Richard Watt, on behalf of Liberty Hose Company No. 1. The trowel bore this inscription: "Presented to Mayor P. M. Eriksen by Liberty Hose Company No. 1, for the laying of the cornerstone of the Borough hall and fire house, November 21, 1914."

Before placing the stone in position Mayor Eriksen made a brief address in which he told of the progress made by the borough in recent years and of the steps taken which led to the building of the hall. He said that he looked forward to the time when the building of a bigger borough hall would be necessary and then the present building could be turned over entirely to the fire department.

Other speakers were Assemblyman-elect Arthur N. Pierson, of this town; Mayor Harwood-Fish, of Roselle Park; Freeholder George C. Teller and A. C. Beckley. The exercises were opened and closed by the singing of patriotic songs by the public school children in charge of Principal E. N. Rozelle. The invocation was given by Rev. Mr. Wellhoelter, pastor of the Presbyterian chapel. The firemen attended the exercises in full uniform and there was a large attendance of citizens.

The new building will extend thirty-five feet in Centre street and seventy feet in South avenue. The first floor of the front of the building will be used for the fire apparatus. This room will be twenty-five by forty-three feet with a hose drying tower at the end near South avenue. A door from this room opens into a room fourteen by twenty-two feet which can be used for the firemen's meeting room and court purposes. Back of this room will be space for the police cells. Entrance to this room can be had from South avenue.

Entrance to the Borough hall and council room will adjoin the fire department entrance on Centre street. The council room will be twenty-five by thirty-four feet and will occupy the front of the second floor. There will also be room on this floor for fire-proof vaults, committee room and offices for the borough clerk, collector and the Board of Health. The exterior of the building will be red pressed brick with white cement and limestone trim.

Yale But a Pup.

In an interview with Mr. W. G. Peckham, lately president of the Harvard Club of New Jersey, Mr. Peckham was asked, "What do you think of the Harvard-Yale score 36-0?" Mr. Peckham's answer was "I always thought 'Harvard was old' Harvard when Yale was, but a pup' just as the song says."

WHEN THE TIRED MOTHER GIVES OUT

What Then?—The Family Sufferers, the Poor Mothers Suffer—Mrs. Becker Meets This Distressing Situation.

Collinsville, Ill.—"I suffered from a nervous break-down and terrible headaches, and was tired all over, totally worn out and too discouraged to enjoy life, but as I had four in family and sometimes eight or nine boarders, I kept on working despite my suffering.

"I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and within two weeks I noticed a decided improvement in my condition and now I am a well woman."

—Mrs. ANA BECKER, Collinsville, Ill.

There are hundreds of nervous, run-down, overworked women in this vicinity who are hardly able to drag around and who are sure would be wonderfully benefited by Vinol as Mrs. Becker was.

The reason Vinol is so successful in building up health and strength in such cases is because it combines the medicinal tissue building and curative elements of cod's livers together with the blood making, strengthening properties of tonic iron. We ask every weak, nervous, run-down man or woman in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

SURPRISED ON HIS SEVENTY-SECOND BIRTHDAY

Edward E. Townley, was tendered a surprise party at his home, 638 West Broad street, on Monday night, in honor of his seventy-second birthday. The surprise was arranged by his daughter, Mrs. C. O. Reed, and was attended by about fifty of the friends of Mr. Townley and included a number of the veterans of the G. A. R., and members of the Woman's Relief Corps. Mr. Townley was completely surprised but made his friends welcome.

During the games, music and dancing was enjoyed, Townley's orchestra of Plainfield, furnishing the music. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion, especially the dining room, the table being set the entire length of the room and decorated with carnations. At each guest's plate was a miniature American flag. In the center of the table was a large birthday cake adorned with seventy-two candles. Supper was served at midnight and in the "wee small hours" the friends of Mr. Townley separated for their homes, all wishing him many happy returns of the day.

Among those present were the following:

CHAPTER XXXII.

Light Engine.

Toward the close of that summer's day it was the whim of that arch-manager of theatricals whom men call Fate to stage an anticlimax in the midst of a vast and hilly expanse of desolate middle western country—a rude and rugged dleak of earth which boasted no human tenancy within a circle of its far-flung horizon and was bisected, not neatly, rather irregularly, by the flowing double line of steel ribbons which marked the railroad's right of way over the old Santa Fe trail.

So much for the stage: the light effects were provided exclusively by the crimson and purple and gold of a portentous sunset; the properties employed were simply a special train and what is known as a light engine (meaning a locomotive unhandicapped by cars); audience there was none, if one except the actors—who were one and all far too deeply preoccupied with the interpretation of their several roles to be aware of the show.

They were not many in number: perhaps half a dozen aboard the special train—which was making away as fast as it could run toward the glory of the sunset; as many more aboard the light engine.

It was the engineer who started the trouble. After bringing his monster to a full pause, he turned upon his passengers and—not without plausible excuse—violently indicted Mr. Alan Law for abuse of his and his fireman's trustfulness. This the said fireman (climbing forward over the tender) vigorously applauded.

They had been engaged, both gentlemen asserted vigorously, for nothing more dangerous than a quick run across the prairies, in furtherance of the unspecified plans of Mr. Alan Law and his companion, Miss Judith Trine. After starting out, they had wickedly and maliciously been bribed by the said Law to put on speed and catch up with the special, in order that he might rescue from the latter a young woman, his bride-to-be and the sister of Miss Trine.

But—and here was the grievance—they hadn't bargained to be shot at with pistols. And precisely that outrage had been put upon them during and subsequent to the moment of rescue.

It was unhappy Mr. Barcus who precipitated the affair. This gentleman was suffering from a severe sprain to his sense of decent pride. In the service of Miss Rose Trine and her betrothed, Mr. Law, Barcus had blackened his face and hands to the hue of ebony and had garmented himself in the garb of a Pullman porter, surrendering himself to humiliating service to those aboard the special, suffering their insolence and scorn without a murmur, but with the tides of wrath mounting ever higher in his bosom.

And now, when at length he had won his freedom from that ignominious servitude, it was only to be sworn at and vilified, as a common nigger, by railroad hands!

It was the fireman (to be just) who brought the row to a focus by a slighting reference to that "shiftless and misbegotten dinge."

He repented quite promptly. Mr. Barcus jumped for his throat with a bellow of rage. The brakeman leaped for his shovel and brandished it threateningly. Mr. Barcus made nothing of that: he closed in without hesitation and got the fireman by the throat, proceeding to shake the breath out of his body with the greatest good will and dispatch. In the course of this entertainment the fireman slipped on the cab platform, trod on nothing, and went over backwards, taking Mr. Barcus with him to the ballast.

At almost the same moment Mr. Law, attempting to restrain the engineer from going to the assistance of his fellow-worker, ducked in under a vicious swing for his chin, grappled with his foe, tripped him up—and went with his to the ground on the opposite side of the locomotive from that occupied by Mr. Barcus and the fireman.

For the next several seconds he was very busy indeed keeping his face out of the ballast. The engineer was a heavy man, but active and infuriated. He fought like a demon unchained. It was all very exciting. Mr. Law was even beginning to enjoy it when he heard a woman shriek. At the same instant revolvers began to pop.

Mr. Law released his foe almost as quickly as he was released. Both rose as one man, to find Judith Trine beside them, a little smile of excitement playing round her lips as she looked up the track and watched the special slow down to a stop—several persons on the back platform plying busy trigger-fingers all the while.

As these last threw open the platform gates and dropped to the ballast, still perforating the air with many bullets, Mr. Law, Miss Judith Trine, and that late belligerent, the engineer, turned simultaneously and sought the rear of the tender.

On the opposite side they found Rose Trine and Mr. Barcus standing uncertainly above the body of the fireman, who, it appeared, had stunned himself in falling and remained insensible.

The appearance of Law and Judith from behind the tender, closely pursued by the engineer, who was in turn closely pursued by gentlemen with revolvers, stirred Barcus and Rose to action. Alan passed him at a round pace, pausing only long enough to seize Rose and drag her with him toward the special. Judith flung him a phrase of well-meant advice in passing:

"Come along, you simpleton—unless you want to be shot down where you stand!"

Mr. Barcus acted on that advice, as immediately as resentfully. Judith Trine was little before him at the steps of the Pullman: Mr. Law had already assisted Rose aboard. Mr. Barcus ungraciously gave place to the lady: his ingrained chivalry sorely strained by bullets that kicked among the ballast round his feet.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Pullman.

"Come inside," Law suggested, "and introduce me to the brakeman. I presume I've got to fix things up with him—"

"If there's really any doubt in your mind as to that," Barcus said, rising, "I don't mind telling you you're right."

He paused as Alan entered the car before him and was greeted by a storm of vituperation that fairly blistered the panels of the Pullman. Mr. Seneca Trine, helpless in his invalid chair, thus celebrated his introduction to the young man whom he had never before seen whose life he had schemed to take these many years. His heavy voice boomed and echoed through the car like the sounding of a tocsin.

Alan made no effort to respond, but listened with his head critically to one side and an exasperating expression of deep interest informing his countenance until Mr. Trine was out of breath and vitriol; when the younger man bowed with the slightest shade of mockery in his manner and waved a tolerant hand to Barcus.

"He has, no doubt," Alan inquired, "his own private cell aboard this car?"

"Yes, suh!" Barcus agreed, aping well the manner of his apparent caste and color. "Ain't dat de trooff?"

"Take him away, then," Alan requested wearily—"if you please."

"Yes, suh!" Barcus replied, with nimble alacrity seizing the back of the wheeled chair and swinging it round for a spin up the length of the car.

Before Trine had recovered enough to curse him properly, the door to his drawing room was closed and Barcus was ambling back down the aisle.

His grin of relish at this turning of the tables on the monomaniac proved, however, short-lived. It erased itself in a twinkling when Judith shouldered roughly past him, wearing a sullen and forbidding countenance, and flung herself into the drawing room with her father.

The cause of her temper was not far to seek: at the far end of the car Alan was bending solicitously over the chair in which Rose was resting. One of his arms was around her shoulder. Her face was lifted confidently to his.

Barcus mused morosely on his apprehension of trouble a-brew, simmering over the waxing fire of that strange woman's jealousy. He didn't like the prospect at all. If only Alan and Rose hadn't been so desperately in love that they couldn't keep away from one another! If only Alan had been sensible enough to outwit the woman and leave her behind when he started in pursuit of the special! If only there had not been that light engine in pursuit—as Barcus firmly believed it must be—loaded to the guards with Trine's unscrupulous hirelings!

No telling when they might catch up!

The fear of this last catastrophe worked together with his fears of Judith to render that night a sleepless one for Barcus. He spent it in a chair whence he could watch both the door to the compartment Judith had chosen for her own (formerly Marrophat's quarters) and the endless ribbons of steel that swept beneath the tracks.

But nothing happened. He napped uneasily from time to time, waking with a start of fright, but always to find nothing amiss. Ever Judith stopped behind that closed door, and over the track behind was innocent of the glare of a pursuing headlight.

Nor did anything untoward mark the progress of the morning—unless, indeed, Judith's protracted sessions with her father behind the closed door of the drawing room were to be counted ominous.

Ever since lunch-time the girl had been closeted with her father; Barcus had been getting some well-earned and sorely-needed rest in his quarters; Alan standing his watch on the observation platform, in company with Rose; and the train booming along through an uncouth wilderness of arid mountains, barren mesas, and sun-smitten flats given over to the desolate genius of sagebrush.

Whatever had been the tenor of the communication between father and daughter, Judith eventually emerged from the drawing room in an ominous temper. Barcus, coming drowsily away from his compartment at the same time, was jarred wide awake by sight of the forbidding countenance she wore; and after a moment of doubt followed her back to the lounge at the rear of the car.

He got there in time to see her at rigid standstill, staring steadfastly at the two figures so close together on the observation platform. But on his appearance Judith shook herself together, snatched up a magazine, and plunged wrathfully into an easy chair, burying her nose between the pages of the publication with every indication of deep interest in its text.

Mr. Barcus, however, had learned the lesson of bitter experience to the effect that the outward bearing of Miss Judith Trine was no sure index to her inward humor—unless, that is, it might be taken to indicate the direct contrary of its semblance; though even this was no reliable rule. Reminding himself of this, he therefore invented a morbid interest in another magazine—round the edge of which he kept a wary eye upon the young woman.

For all her exasperation, Judith contained herself longer than might have been expected. Her continued show of placidity, indeed, lulled Barcus into a dangerous feeling of security. Persuaded that she meant to behave, he gradually ceased to watch her as narrowly as at first, and lost himself in a morose reverie whose subject was the seemingly permanent mourning into which he had plunged his face and hands for the purposes of his masquerade—staining them a shade of ebony upon which soap and water and scrubbing had no effect whatever. And he had invented a most excruciating method of revenging himself upon the druggist who had taken advantage of his confidence and sold him the ineradicable dye—when he was roused by the sudden flight of a magazine across the car, missing his head by a bare two inches, and the bang of a chair overturned by Judith as she jumped up and flung herself furiously toward the door.

Just what had happened on the observation platform Barcus didn't know, but he could readily believe that the lovers had just indulged in some especially provoking and long-drawn-out caress.

He overhauled Judith none too soon. In another moment she would have had her sister by the throat—if her purpose had not been to throw Rose bodily overboard, as Barcus suspected. Happily, he was as quick on his feet as Judith on hers; and almost before he had grasped the situation, he had grasped her—had seized her arms and drawn them forcibly behind her back, at the same time swinging her round and endeavoring to propel her back through the doorway.

It was a man-size job. For the ensuing five minutes he had his hands full of violently resentful and superbly able-bodied young woman. Only with the greatest difficulty did he succeed in wrestling her up the aisle and to the door of her compartment, where an even more furious resistance for some additional minutes preface the ultimate closing of the door upon the maddened Judith. Even then he might not draw a free breath: there was no way of locking that door from the outside; and he dared not leave go the handle, lest the girl again fly out and renew the battle.

Waving aside Alan's proffer of assistance, he acidly advised that gentleman to return to his post of duty and not let his infatuation blind him to what might at any moment loom up on the track behind them, Barcus stoutly held the door against the girl's attempt to pull it open and through another period when she occupied herself with kicking its panels as if hopeful of breaking a way out. A long pause followed. He heard no sounds from within. And wondering, he wondered what the devil she was up to. Then her voice penetrated the barrier, its accents calm and not unamiable:

"Mr. Barcus!"

"Hello!" he replied, startled. "What is it, Miss Judith?"

"Please let me out."

"Not much."

"Oh—please!"

Struck by the fact that she hadn't lost her temper on hearing his refusal, he hesitated. It was very true that he couldn't stay there forever, holding on to that knob,

"Will you be good if I let you out?"

"Perfectly."

"No more shenanigan?"

"I promise."

"Word of honor?"

"If my word of honor means anything to you—you have it."

"Well . . . I," he said dubiously.

In the same humor he turned and released the knob; promptly Judith opened it wide and swept out into the corridor, her mood now one of really fetching mockery.

"Thank you so much!" she laughed into his face of discomfiture; and dropping him an ironic curtsy, she turned forward and swung into the drawing room occupied by Trine.

"Wonder what she put that on for?" he speculated, with reference to the ankle-long Pullman wrapper which Judith had seen fit to don during her period of captivity. "Heaven knows it's not enough without wearing more clothing than decency demands . . . But you never can tell about a woman . . . I bet a dollar I've made a blithering ass of myself—letting her loose at all!"

He took his doubts aft, communicating them to Alan and Rose.

And his long conference with Alan and Rose on the observation platform afforded Judith ample opportunity in which undetected to suborn the train crew to treachery.

Whether she did or not, this is what happened in the course of the next hour: the special was forced to take a siding to make way for the California limited, east-bound; and when this had passed, the engine of the special coughed apologetically and pulled swiftly out, leaving the Pullman stalled on the siding.

From the rear of the tender the brakeman and fireman waved affecting farewells to the indignant faces of

"But will it?" Barcus doubted.

Somewhere far back along the line a locomotive hooted mournfully.

"It's got to!" Alan replied, helping Rose aboard. "If we can only get out of sight before they get here—"

"Don't worry," Barcus advised: "that's a freight whistle."

"Maybe you can distinguish the whistle of a freight from that of a passenger train—I don't say you can't; but I'll take no chances on your judgment being good. Hop aboard here if you're coming with us!"

Slowly the hand car stirred on its grease-hungry and complaining axles; slowly it gathered momentum and surged noisily up the track as Alan and Barcus, on opposite sides of the handlebar, alternately rose and fell back; slowly it mounted the slight grade to the bend in the track, rounded it, lost sight of the stalled Pullman on the siding and began to move more swiftly on a moderate down grade.

Behind it the thunder of an approaching train grew momentarily in volume, lending color to the theory of Mr. Barcus that what they had heard had been the whistle of a freighter rather than of the light engine. But just as Alan was about to advocate leaving the tracks and taking the hand car with them, to clear the way for the train, its rumble began to diminish, grew less and beautifully less, and was stilled.

"What do you make of that?" Alan panted across the racking bar.

"The obvious," Barcus returned. "The freight has taken the siding to wait for some other through train to pass. We'll have to look sharp and be ready to jump."

The grade became a trace more steep; the car moved with less reluctance.

"Let go," Alan advised: "it'll coast down the balance of this incline—and we'd better save our strength."

PARENT-TEACHERS OF MCKINLEY SCHOOL

Discuss Having Dancing at Meetings. Matter to be Taken up With Board of Education by Committee Appointed for That Purpose

The monthly meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association of the McKinley school which was postponed from last Thursday on account of rain was held in one of the class rooms of the school building on Tuesday afternoon. There were about fifty members of the association present and considerable business was transacted.

One of the features of the meeting was the reading of the report of Mrs. George H. Dougherty on the meeting of the National Congress of Mothers at Atlantic City which Mrs. Dougherty attended. The report was read by Miss Harriet Painter, one of the teachers in the school. J. H. McLaughlin, principal of the school, gave a short talk in which he explained the workings of the school savings bank which will probably be opened in the school by Robert W. Harden, of the Westfield Trust Company, about December 1. Mr. McLaughlin stated that the bank would be not only for the pupils of the McKinley school but for all the pupils of the other schools. He also stated that the school stood second last month in percentage of attendance, the high school being first.

The members of the association decided to hold a box social and entertainment on Friday evening of next week. The question of changing the day of the meeting was discussed but no definite conclusion was reached. In the future, whenever it rains so hard that there is but one session of the school, the association meeting will be postponed until the same day of the following week. Mrs. C. E. Cox presented a question box to the association which will be put in use at the next meeting.

The question of having dancing in the school in connection with the Parent-Teachers Association was discussed. It was thought that it would be a good thing for the pupils and that they could hire a teacher and charge a small fee for the lessons. A committee consisting of Mrs. S. J. Platz, Mrs. G. H. Dougherty and Mrs. W. F. Watts were appointed by the president, Mrs. A. A. King, to confer with the Board of Education in regard to this matter.

The next meeting of the Association will be held on December 10, and will be known as "Mothers' Day."

ITEMS OF INTEREST IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Meetings of the boys and the girls athletic associations were held last Wednesday at the close of the high school sessions.

Plans for devoting a little more time each week to singing in the night school are being considered by those in charge.

A course in American Citizenship for those who are interested is soon to be started in the Washington school.

On Thursday the Junior class of the high school held a meeting and elected officers.

Superintendent Bliss and Miss Christman of the English Department of the Montclair schools were recent visitors to the local schools for the purpose of hearing the oral English work.

Miss Anna G. Batty, of Schaghticoke, is substituting in the Lincoln school. County Superintendent Johnson paid a visit to the Washington school on Tuesday.

A number of pamphlets have been received concerning the subject of banking. They deal with the Federal Reserve Act, Inheritance Laws and methods of individual accounts.

A. M. MacCutecheon, a former teacher in the high school, was a visitor on Monday at the Washington school. The committees of the Board of Education on Instruction and Teachers met on Monday night with the teachers of the fourth grades. The topics discussed were the relation of the teachers work to the life of the child outside of the school.

STANLEY A. HUNTER GIVES INTERESTING TALK

The lecture given in the assembly room of the Washington school last Saturday night, under the direction of the Board of Education by Stanley A. Hunter was attended by a large number of persons and was highly appreciated. Mr. Hunter's subject was "Hindustan and the Himalayas" and was illustrated with many beautiful stereoscopic views. Mr. Hunter told his hearers of a 600-mile trip in the Kashmir Himalayas, the place where the three empires of Russia, China and Britain meet; of Mount Everest 29,002 feet high and the Kailash Pass; of the sights of North India, Benares, Agra and Lucknow.

Mr. Hunter was introduced to his audience by E. B. Thompson of the Board of Education. The lecture tomorrow night will be given by Mrs. M. Chairo Finney who will have for her subject, "An Andean Tour Through Three Zones."

ANTHONY FIALA GIVES LECTURE

First Entertainment of Presbyterian Men's Club Draws Record Crowd at The Playhouse to Hear Famous Explorer

The first entertainment of the course of the Men's Club of the Presbyterian church for this season was held in the Playhouse last Friday night and was attended by an audience which taxed the seating capacity of that theatre. The entertainment was in the form of a lecture given by Anthony Fiala, the explorer, who told of his trip and experiences on his exploring expedition with Colonel Roosevelt through South America and their explorations of the rivers Juruna and Tapajos. Mr. Fiala is an interesting speaker and as he had been heard at the Men's Club banquet a few weeks ago, most of those who attended knew what a treat was in store for them.

Mr. Fiala told of the travels he and the Colonel had together in this country. He said that he had some misgivings as to what kind of a traveling companion Colonel Roosevelt would be but these were soon dispelled as he found him to be most congenial and ready to do anything which came to hand. Mr. Fiala showed many pictures which he took while on the trip of the different cities of South America through which they went; also pictures of many rapids, rivers, jungles and natives of that country. He also exhibited a number of motion pictures which were taken with great difficulty by him.

Mr. Fiala was introduced to his audience by Walter R. Darby, the chairman of the entertainment committee of the Men's Club.

IMPOSE FINE FOR CRUELTY TO HORSE

The case of the New Jersey Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals against John Moore, captain of the Elizabeth District Volunteers of America, was tried before Judge W. B. Toucey in the town hall on Tuesday afternoon and a fine of $25 and costs was imposed on Moore.

The case was brought by Mrs. S. A. Van Hoesen, the state agent of the society, who claimed Captain Moore was driving a horse in this town on the fourteenth of November, which was sick and not fit for use, and that after it had been examined by Dr. Butler, of this town, and Dr. F. A. Zucker, of Elizabeth, two veterinarians, the horse had been shot. Mrs. Van Hoesen, who acted as her own lawyer, called a number of witnesses to testify to the condition of the horse when they saw it.

Captain Moore was represented by McCarthy & Sells, of Elizabeth. The defense put witnesses on the stand who were connected with the Volunteers, who swore that the horse in question was all right when it left the stable on the morning that it was shot.

Before the evidence of the defense was taken, lawyer Sells asked Judge Toucey to have the case continued as he wished to have an expert veterinarian testify as to what condition the horse was in. It turned out, however, that the expert Mr. Sells had in mind had not seen the horse and did not know its condition. The Judge refused to allow the continuance of the case. After the evidence had been taken, Judge Toucey imposed the fine as above stated.

Equal Franchise League.

PIANO MAKERS FOR 70 YEARS

In buying a piano it is wise to inquire about the standing and reputation of the maker.

Waters Pianos have been made and sold since 1845. They have always been noted for fine workmanship, perfect construction, durability, and beauty of finish. The full, rich tones of these pianos has a singing quality, both pleasing and lasting.

Waters Pianos are not expensive. While high grade throughout, they are sold at business prices, and on most liberal terms. The Waters three-year purchase plan, places a Waters Piano or Waters Piano Player within the means of nearly every self-supporting home. Although the payments are extended over a period of three years, there are no interest charges.

The growth of the Waters Piano business now requires four stores in New York City to care for its many patrons. These stores are located at 134 Fifth Ave., near 14th St., 137 West 42nd St., near Broadway, and West 125th St., near 8th Ave., and at East 141st St., near 1st Ave. Visitors are always welcome at any of the Waters Piano Warehouses.

Woman Suffrage Pro and Con

Women Aided Passage of Laws.

On April 24, 1912, Congressman Edward T. Taylor made a speech in the House of Representatives on the question of granting votes to the women of Alaska. After listing 150 laws which he claimed were directly due to the women voters of Colorado, he said in part:

"In addition to the above laws there are many others not specifically mentioned, and there are a great many beneficial provisions in those laws that I cannot take the time or space to give in detail. In reality, it would require fully one-third of the last ten volumes of our Colorado session laws to fully describe the laws that have been enacted as a direct result of the influence and energy of the women of the State generally. Anyone can check up or verify my reference to these laws by examining the Colorado statutes or session laws in any large library.

"I might mention many other general provisions like the establishment of a county visiting board in each county, composed of three men and three women, to examine all county institutions and supervise their sanitary and other conditions; requiring a woman physician in the insane asylum; requiring inspection of private eleemosynary institutions by a State board.

"The women's influence makes it much easier to secure liberal appropriations for educational and humanitarian purposes.

"Most of the visiting boards of the various institutions where people are involuntarily confined are composed partially of women, and they make those boards very efficient and prevent them from becoming political boards.

"Women always take an active interest in the enactment and strict enforcement of good public health laws, and laws for the moral welfare of society. Whenever they have a chance to express their sentiments there is never any doubt as to the result. Every politician knows in advance what it will be, and that is the reason some of them loudly proclaim that woman suffrage is a failure. Equal suffrage is a failure with some kinds of people. A married woman's heart is always in her children and her home—the foundation of the republic, and any measure affecting either is not a political question with her for a minute. There is only one side to it, and that is the right side. A woman's vote is always a patriotic vote.

"In fact, the most wise, scientific and progressive laws of any State in the Union for the care and protection of children and women in their personal and property rights, for the humane treatment of the delinquent, dependent and unfortunate classes and for the enforcement of the laws and betterment of society are on the statute books of Colorado today.

"I do not claim that the women are entitled to all of the credit for the enactment of all of these 150 laws. The newspapers, our governor, Judge Lindsey and other patriotic sons have devoted many years of their lives to the enactment of these laws and the betterment of our beloved commonwealth. But the mothers and daughters of Colorado have, in my judgment, been the controlling influence that has brought about the enactment of most and have greatly assisted toward all of them. In fact, they have indirectly assisted in the passage of a great many other good laws, and those 150 are 150 good reasons for the women having had a voice in their enactment. I have simply mentioned those as I recollect it, that the women took the most active interest in and for the passage of which I think they are entitled to the main credit. It should be remembered that we in Colorado have all of the powerful influences that always work against all reform legislation that they have in all other States, and no reasonable person expects the women to be able to overcome all of those influences and accomplish everything in eighteen years.

"The women of Colorado will continue to vote. The women of the world will continue to advance. The man or woman who tries to stop them will be justly relegated to oblivion. You politicians had better remember those three statements, because you will have occasion to reflect upon them. This is an age of individual liberty, and the male sex is not humanely, but only half of it.

"There will be no backward movement in the fight for equal rights. Not one foot of ground that has been gained will ever be surrendered. And the people who try to make a little temporary notoriety by an attack on the sex are doomed in the end to disappointment, defeat, and ignominious humiliation. The continued disfranchisement of women is a relic of antiquity that belongs to other days. Purblind politicians and people who cling to prejudice in spite of facts as plain as the noonday sun may keep on fighting and misrepresenting the good women of the suffrage States, but they are coming to be as absurd as old Canute when he placed his throne on the beach and commanded the waves to recede."

Belgian Relief Fund.

The enthusiasm with which the Belgian Relief Fund has been undertaken by chairman Hunter and the various committees bespeaks for the enterprise a most encouraging prospect.

When one considers the picture of an entire nation of seven millions of most industrious and honest people brushed aside or trampled under foot by an invading army—their homes, farms and factories destroyed, the country ravished, families torn asunder, widows and orphans driven from their humble homes—the most is little enough for a people such as the community of Westfield to contribute to the relief of this stricken nation.

While, no doubt, there will be some want and suffering this winter in Westfield, the already established committee will care for any needs that may arise at our own door, and this should not in any way interfere with a most generous response to the Belgian Relief Committee's appeal for this worthy and pressing cause.

Much To Be Thankful For.

Never since the days of our Civil War have the American people been called upon to render their Thanksgiving to Almighty God when there was such an abundant cause for the spirit and prayer of thankfulness to our Heavenly Father for the blessings we enjoy.

With almost every nation of Europe at war or threatened by complications in the terrible conflict, every citizen of the United States could join most heartily with his neighbor and resort to the house of public worship, and there offer up his prayer of thanksgiving for the blessings of peace which we enjoy.

While it is true that business and labor have experienced a most disastrous year, there are many signs of renewed confidence and business activity that should encourage us at this season and add to our reasons for thanksgiving.

Our House Leader.

Union County has been honored in the past by having her representatives chosen as the president of the Senate, speaker of the House, and leader of the House, but the election of the Hon. William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, as leader of the majority in the Assembly, he being a first year man, sets a precedent in New Jersey. It is seldom that a newly elected legislator is recognized to possess the ability that would warrant his election to this most important office.

While there is no doubt on the part of the citizens of Union County as to Judge Runyon's ability to fill this office with credit to himself and to his county, it was only the most energetic campaign conducted by the Union County delegation that brought victory and honor to Union County at this time.

We bespeak for Mr. Runyon the confidence of the people of his county, and congratulate him upon his election.

Our Policy in Mexico.

Just what will be the outcome of our watching and waiting policy in Mexico is very uncertain. Our hostile attitude toward the Huerta administration, and our friendliness to the Carranza-Villa revolution has seemed only to have affected the personal, without bothering the spirit or purpose of the people in control at Mexico City.

The result of withdrawing troops from Vera Cruz is, of course, most uncertain. How we can be assured that American interests and citizens are to be protected, is, to say the least, not apparent on the surface.

Before any form of government in Mexico can hope to succeed it must have the recognition of the United States under the present agreements with European nations. We certainly could not recognize a man such as

Villa, and it looks as though our failure to recognize Huerta had set in motion a state of revolution and guerrilla warfare that will waste the country and leave its people in a far worse condition than they would have been even under the leadership of a man such as Huerta, with all his badness.

There seems little doubt but that for the recognition of our government, and the support of Mexico's credit and means of financing and conducting their end of the war, the revolution would have been put down before this and a stable government in control of affairs. The question really is—"Has our Miss Fixit policy not utterly failed?"

The Initiative and Referendum.

The initiative and referendum is showing weakness and impracticability in many of the western states which have taken up with this fad in civil government. At the last election in California in addition to the names of the several local, county and state candidates there were thirty-seven referendum laws submitted to the voters for their consideration. While but 50 per cent. of the voters made any attempt to vote upon the laws submitted, it was very evident that of these voters but a few cast an intelligent vote on the amendments.

Several very bad laws were submitted and passed by the voters—laws which no legislature would have dared to pass because they were so against public sentiment. By placing these laws in the midst of a mass of good laws the voters seemingly read the first few good laws and being convinced they were all good voted the full ticket. In this way the bad bills became law without the voter knowing that he was being fooled by his own act. Let us hope that the evils of this and other like fads in government matters will prove their weakness before this wave of rainbow chasing reaches New Jersey.

The "Poor" Doctor.

The number of cases where families apply for the services of a physician to be paid by the town are far more numerous to the charitable bodies in Westfield than to the Overseer of the Poor. The application goes to them because the true status of the applicant is not known or examined, and the added suggestion of illness brings many gifts which a tender heart would not attempt in full health.

All doctors are "poor doctors" in Westfield, but it has been said by one that there are here two classes—The Lord's poor and the Devil's poor—the first is gladly cared for by any true physician while the latter are demanding in their wants, slovenly, fail to carry out orders and altogether a bane to the doctor's life. He wants no more of them than the church wants of the devil.

A case may always be referred by the ladies or those of charitable instincts to the Poor-master. He either knows them or looks up their records and if really poor—whether of either class refers them to a doctor and the town at large pays the bill. Is not that more reasonable than to expect the doctor to shoulder the whole expense?

It is not an oversight that the town does not employ a physician at a salary to care for any who may apply. In towns where that is done the tendency to call his services into account are made by many who really can and should pay for what services are rendered. He would be by far the busiest man in town—night and day; and mostly for those who do not now require the assistance of the overseer of the poor. He could have no practice of his own and his salary would necessarily be greater than the combined amounts now given the Poor Master and the Health Department.

Just by way of illustration, we will recount a case, as told by one of our doctors, asking for the Poor Doctor. A woman of middle class was deserted by her husband and left with two children. She had a couple of hundred dollars in the bank, owned two lots in town and a house and shortly after went abroad to collect a legacy from some of her deceased relatives. Her claim was that the town should help to support her as she was doing all her duty to society by bringing up her children in the way they should go.

REACH HOME SAFE AFTER CAPTURE BY GERMANS

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Miller, of this town, who have been in South America, for the past two years where Mr. Miller has been in the employ of the Arbuckle Company, arrived home late yesterday afternoon and are now at the home of Mr. Miller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Miller, 644 Elm street, where they will make their home for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller had quite an experience before they finally arrived in this country. They sailed from Rio de Janeiro on October 20, on the steamer Van Dyke, of the Lamport and Hoff line of British steamers, and after being six days out they were captured by the German battleship Karlsruhe. They were transported from this to a supply ship of the Germans and with six hundred and fifty other persons were landed at Para, Brazil, at the mouth of the Amazon River. Out of these 650 persons 110 were passengers with Mr. and Mrs. Miller on the Van Dyke. They sailed from Para on the second of November, on the steamer Byron, of the same line as the Van Dyke and reached home safely.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller lost about fifty per cent. of their baggage but say that they were treated as good as could be expected with so many on a supply ship which was only built to accommodate forty or fifty.

No lights were allowed on steamer at night and trip was made very cautiously.

Willis Lanning died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lanning, on Broad street, on Monday morning after a short illness. He was 22 years old and had lived in this town for the past thirteen years. The funeral was held from his late home on Wednesday and was private. It was conducted by Rev. G. Franklin Ream of the First Methodist Church. Interment was made at Washington, N. J.

Daily Thought.
No set of happenings in any land whatever, in Bible days or since, can claim more truly to be God's Providential orderings and opportunities than the events of our own day.—The Archbishop of Canterbury.

Smart Memory.
A philosopher has declared that every noble deed lasts longer than a marble monument, but the common experience is that the woman to whom you give your seat in the crowded car forgets the courtesy before she slips into the seat.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A NEW INDUSTRIAL POLICY

The Prudential Insurance Company is again pioneering the way in life insurance. It has recently announced a new industrial policy which is payable in weekly installments instead of in one sum. It is the belief of the Company that there is a widespread field of usefulness for an industrial policy providing for the payment of a certain amount each week in order to tide a household over a reasonable period, until the members have had a chance to readjust themselves to the changed conditions after the breadwinner is gone. By the terms of this new policy the beneficiary named in the policy receives the amount of insurance in regular weekly installments for thirteen or twenty-six weeks, as the insured elects at the time of his application. Such a policy is in accord with the original purpose of The Prudential, as shown by its charter, which sets forth that one of its objects is to provide for the wants of widows and families after the death of the insured.

It is not intended that the new offering shall replace the regular industrial policy, payable in one sum, but that it shall be supplementary to it, thus making the protection of the family more complete than has hitherto been possible for industrial policyholders.

Under the Prudential Weekly Income Industrial policy wage-earners can assure to those dependent upon their earnings in any way for support, the continuance, for a reasonable time, of at least a part of the income which death would otherwise take from them. Too frequently, because of the desire of the members of the family to give a final expression of their love and devotion to the departed one, the entire amount received under the regular industrial policy is expended for funeral expenses, or it may be that the cost of medical attendance through a protracted illness has wiped out their resources, with the result that they are forced to begin their struggle with the world deprived of the breadwinner and practically penniless. It is to guard against such a condition that The Prudential's new Weekly Income Industrial policy is issued, and it is believed it will prove a bulwark of family safety, keeping the home together and giving the dependent ones an opportunity to consider and determine upon the best course to follow. With a regular industrial policy to meet funeral expenses and a

TRAP SHOOTING.

At the trap shooting at the Westfield Golf Club last Saturday, R. S. Gales and A. I. Nichols killed 19 out of 25 birds which was high score among the fifteen members who took part in the shoot. Yesterday morning there was a big shoot and the prize was a large gobble.

The opening shoot for the Westfield Golf Club cup will take place on Saturday of next week. Spectators and members that want to go direct to the traps, have the trolley stop at the entrance of Lyde Park, located at the end of the golf course.

The Waiter.
The reason why the tipping system will never be abolished is that the attitude of the average patron, of the restaurant toward the high-mighty waiter is that of Alice, who wept with delight when Ben Bolt gave her a smile and trembled with fear at his frown.

Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.
It forms convincing proof of merit.
John W. Lohman, 25 W. Jersey St., Elizabeth, N. J., says: "I suffered from backaches so severe that often I could just keep up. Frequently I was so stiff and lame in the morning that I had trouble in straightening or bending. Colds settled on my kidneys and not only caused me pain but also brought on trouble with the kidney secretions. I found out some years ago that I could depend on Doan's Kidney Pills to cure me of these troubles. They did this and for some time I have not suffered."

NO TROUBLE SINCE.
On August 13, 1913, Mr. Lohman said: "I have tested Doan's Kidney Pills very thoroughly and as told in the statement I gave some years ago, they completely rid me of kidney trouble. I am always glad to say a word for Doan's Kidney Pills to others."

Impishly to herself in anticipation of the time and the event she was bidding with such patience as she could muster.

The whistle of a locomotive overtaking the freight sounded the signal for her to take action on her cherished plan.

Rising, she glanced out of the open door. A curve in the track below the freight, laboring up a steep grade, enabled her to catch a glimpse of a headlight, followed by a string of lighted windows, indicating a single car: the special, beyond a doubt.

Without hesitation, since the train was not running at speed, she dropped out to the ballast, wheeled smartly about, caught the handbar at the end of the box car as it passed and swung herself up between it and the caboose.

A trifle later the freight gained the summit of the grade and began to run more smoothly.

Climbing to the top of the box car she peered keenly through the gloaming, which was not yet so dense that she might not discern two heads protruding from the window of the special's engine, one on either side.

At a venture, she snatched off her coat and waved it wildly in the air.

An arm answered the signal from one window of the pursuing locomotive.

Marrophat, of course!

She turned and peered ahead. The freight was approaching a trestle that spanned a wide and shallow gully.

So much the better!

Dropping down again between the cars, she set herself to solve the problem of uncoupling the caboose.

In this she was successful just as the last car rolled out on the trestle

Its own impetus carried the caboose to the middle of the trestle before it stopped.

As this happened, Alan and Darcus, already warned of an emergency by the slowing down of the car, and for some time alive to the fact that the special was again in pursuit, leaped out upon the ties and helped Rose to alight.

Already the last of the freight was whirling off the trestle, its crew thus far unconscious of their loss.

And behind them the special was plunging forward at unabated speed.

There was no time to execute their plan of the first desperate instant—to run along the ties to safety on the solid earth: the distance was too great; they could not possibly make it.

With common impulse the two men glanced down to the bottom of the gully, then looked at each other with eyes informed by common inspiration.

Darcus announced in a breath: "Thirty feet—not more."

Alan replied: "Can you hold the weight of the two of us for half a minute?"

Darcus shrugged: "I can try. We might as well—even if I can't."

While speaking, he was lowering himself between the ties.

"All right," he announced briefly.

With a word to Rose, Alan slipped down beside Darcus, shifted his hold to the body of the latter, and climbed down over him until he was supported solely by the grasp of his two hands on Darcus' ankles.

Instantly Rose followed him, slipping like a snake down over the two men till she in turn hung by her grasp on Alan's ankles, then released her hold and dropped the balance of the distance to the ground, a scant ten feet, landing without injury.

A thought later Alan dropped lightly to her side, staggered a trifle, recovered and dragged her out of the way.

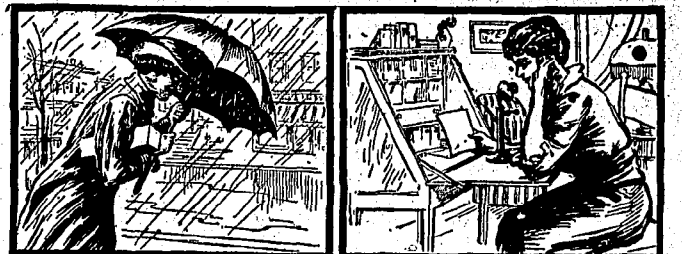

Darcus fell with a heavy thump and went upon his back, but demonstrated his lack of injury by immediately picking himself up and joining the others in a mad scramble for safety.

Overhead the special engine, hurtling onward like some titan bolt, struck the caboose with a crash like the explosion of a cannon. It collapsed upon itself like a thing of pasteboard.

That it had been constructed of more solid stuff was abundantly proved by the shower of timbers, splinters and broken iron that rained about the heads of the fugitives.

For all that, the gods smiled upon them for their courage: they escaped without a scratch.

Wittke's Stationery Store Entered by Burglars.

The news and stationery store of C. F. W. Wittke, at the corner of Broad and Elm streets, was entered by a burglar early on Wednesday morning and money to the amount of about $3, an overcoat, gold watch and a pair of new shoes, belonging to Edward Wittke, were stolen. Entrance to the store was made by opening a cellar window through which the burglar climbed. He then came up into the dining room where he obtained the watch, overcoat and shoes. He also went through the pockets of a coat of Mr. Wittke's which was hanging on a nail in the dining room and took some loose change that was in the pockets. He then went into the store and ransacked the safe which is in the front of the store behind the counters. He did not get anything from the safe but scattered its contents about the floor. He took a small cigar box from the show case which contained some pennies and other change.

This is the fourth time the Wittke store has been entered and robbed and it is the opinion of Mr. Wittke and the police that the same person who did this job did the others, as all the evidence points that way. The store was probably entered near morning as a New York newspaper on Wednesday morning was left in the store and Mr. Wittke's papers had not arrived at that time.

Stereopticon Lecture Tonight.

"Children's Play in Many Lands" is the title of an illustrated lecture to be given this evening at 8:00 in the parish house of the Congregational church. The lecture is free but a collection will be taken for the benefit of the Sunday School.

This is the third entertainment given under the auspices of the Sunday School with children as its subject, the others being "Child Life in Song" and "The Mind of the Child." The pictures have been selected from the collection of Underwood and Underwood and show the child at play in a variety of countries. The pictures will interest children. Those who have the training of children should gain some new ideas from the lecture.

Loyal Association Notes.

The workers in Union Council L. A. have been working like beavers to make the 25th anniversary celebration on November 30th, a notable event for their Council. Eight applications have been received, five of which have qualified to be initiated Monday evening in Masonic Temple, New York, along with the large class from New York and New Jersey councils.

A large delegation will meet at 200 Greenwich street, for dinner at 5:30 and go to the hall afterwards. Arrangements have been made for fifty. Let all come who can or meet at Masonic Temple, 7:30 P. M.

Miss Emily Coles, of New York, has presented the Baptist church with a handsome new piano and forty hymnals.

There will be a meeting of the teachers of All Saints' Episcopal church at Miss Elizabeth Babcock's on Friday evening.

The ladies of All Saints' Episcopal church are busily engaged preparing for a fair to be held on the afternoon and evening of December 12th, in Fanwood hall.

Some of the local young people held a subscription dance in Fanwood hall on Wednesday evening. The time was pleasantly passed in dancing and at a late hour refreshments were served.

At All Saints' Episcopal church, the Rev. Oscar Stuart Michael, late rector of St. Johns' Church, Philadelphia, will preach on Sunday morning; services to begin at eleven o'clock; Sunday school at ten o'clock.

Some time last Saturday night vandals went in the cemetery of the Scotch Plains Baptist church and broke several of the tombstones. They apparently walked through the yard and knocked at every stone that they came to. It is too bad the culprits cannot be located and justly punished.

Special Thanksgiving Services were held in All Saints' Protestant Episcopal church on Thanksgiving morning. Special music was rendered by the choir. The Rev. Oscar Stuart Michael officiated. Offerings of fruit, vegetables and other edibles graced the chancel and were afterwards distributed to the poor.

TRAP SHOOTING.

At the trap shooting at the Westfield Golf Club last Saturday, R. S. Gales and A. J. Nichols killed 19 out of 25 birds which was high score among the fifteen members who took part in the shoot. Yesterday morning there was a big shoot and the prize was a large gobble.

The opening shoot for the Westfield Golf Club cup will take place on Saturday of next week. Spectators and members that want to go direct to the traps, have the trolley stop at the entrance of Lyde Park, located at the end of the golf course.

The Walter.

The reason why the tipping system will never be abolished is that the attitude of the average patron of the restaurant toward the high-mighty waiter is that of Alice, who wept with delight when Renolt gave her a smile and trembled with fear at his frown.

DOUBLY PROVEN.

Westfield Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

This grateful citizen testified long ago.

Told of quick relief—of undoubted benefit.

The facts are now confirmed. Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit. John W. Lohman, 25 W. Jersey St., Elizabeth, N. J., says: "I suffered from backaches so severe that often I could just keep up. Frequently I was so stiff and lame in the morning that I had trouble in straightening or bending. Colds settled on my kidneys and not only caused me pain but also brought on trouble with the kidney secretions. I found out some years ago that I could depend on Doan's Kidney Pills to cure me of those troubles. They did this and for some time I have not suffered."

NO TROUBLE SINCE. On August 13, 1913, Mr. Lohman said: "I have tested Doan's Kidney Pills very thoroughly and as told in the statement I gave some years ago, they completely rid me of kidney trouble. I am always glad to say a word for Doan's Kidney Pills to others."

MEN'S FORUM HEARS TRUSTEE THOMPSON

In Interesting Discussion of Moral Training in our Public Schools, Dr. Savitz to Address Club Sunday.

At the meeting of the Men's Forum of the First Methodist Church last Sunday morning, Everett E. Thompson, chairman of the Instruction committee of the Board of Education, spoke on the "Moral Training in the Public Schools." Mr. Thompson among other things said that a great deal of the moral influence of the child depended upon the personality of the teacher as she had a great deal to do with the moral development of the child; that the parents do not co-operate with the teachers as much as they should in this moral development. He referred to corporal punishment and stated that it was forbidden by the State law but he believed in the use of the slipper on a child up to a certain age if it was used judiciously.

He stated that there were fourteen states in the Union that have a law compelling moral instruction in the schools. He said that in this state there was a law which compelled the schools to open with the reading of the scriptures without note or comment, the repeating of the Lord's prayer and singing and all not to take more than ten minutes. He said that this rule was embodied in the book of rules which the local Board of Education had adopted. He said that the discipline in the local schools was as good as could be found anywhere; that the moral instruction question was a large one and that great educators as well as teachers did not agree on it; that moral instruction could be instilled in the mind of a pupil by a teacher in explaining the studies which were brought before the pupils especially in history, civics and literature; that in the personality of a teacher one good example was worth a thousand arguments.

At the close of Mr. Thompson's remarks there was an informal discussion among the members on the question. President George D. Bentsy presided at the meeting. Next Sunday Dr. J. J. Savitz, assistant commissioner of Education, will speak before the members of the Forum on "The Subject of Playgrounds."

She turned and peered over her shoulder at the freight train which was approaching a trestle that spanned a wide and shallow gully. So much the better!

Dropping down again between the cars, she set herself to solve the problem of uncoupling the caboose. In this she was successful just as the last car rolled out on the trestle.

Its own impetus carried the caboose to the middle of the trestle before it stopped.

As this happened, Alan and Barcus, already warned of an emergency by the slowing down of the car, and for some time alive to the fact that the special was again in pursuit, leaped out upon the ties and helped Rose to alight.

Already the last of the freight was whisking off the trestle, its crew thus far unconscious of their loss.

And behind them the special was plunging forward at unabated speed. There was no time to execute their plan of the first desperate instant—to run along the ties to safety on the solid earth: the distance was too great; they could not possibly make it.

With common impulse the two men glanced down to the bottom of the gully, then looked at each other with eyes informed by common inspiration.

Barcus announced in a breath: "Thirty feet—not more."

Alan replied: "Can you hold the weight of the two of us for half a minute?"

Barcus shrugged: "I can try. We might as well—even if I can't." While speaking, he was lowering himself between the ties.

"All right," he announced briefly.

With a word to Rose, Alan slipped down beside Barcus, shifted his hold to the body of the latter, and climbed down over him until he was supported solely by the grasp of his two hands on Barcus' ankles.

Instantly Rose followed him, slipping like a snake down over the two men till she in turn hung by her grasp on Alan's ankles, then released her hold and dropped the balance of the distance to the ground, a scant ten feet, landing without injury.

A thought later Alan dropped lightly to her side, staggered a trifle, recovered and dragged her out of the way.

Barcus fell with a heavy thump and went upon his back, but demonstrated his lack of injury by immediately picking himself up and joining the others in a mad scramble for safety.

Overhead the special engine, hurrying onward like some titanic bolt, struck the caboose with a crash like the explosion of a cannon. It collapsed upon itself like a thing of pasteboard.

That it had been constructed of more solid stuff was abundantly proved by the shower of timbers, splinters and broken iron that rained about the heads of the fugitives.

For all that, the gods smiled upon them for their courage; they escaped without a scratch.

A NEW INDUSTRIAL POLICY

The Prudential Insurance Company is again pioneering the way in life insurance. It has recently announced a new industrial policy which is payable in weekly installments instead of in one sum. It is the belief of the Company that there is a widespread field of usefulness for an industrial policy providing for the payment of a certain amount each week in order to tide a household over a reasonable period, until the members have had a chance to readjust themselves to the changed conditions after the breadwinner is gone. By the terms of this new policy the beneficiary named in the policy receives the amount of insurance in regular weekly installments for thirteen or twenty-six weeks, as the insured elects at the time of his application. Such a policy is in accord with the original purpose of The Prudential, as shown by its charter, which sets forth that one of its objects is to provide for the wants of widows and families after the death of the insured.

It is not intended that the new offering shall replace the regular industrial policy, payable in one sum, but that it shall be supplementary to it, thus making the protection of the family more complete than has hitherto been possible for industrial policyholders.

Under the Prudential Weekly Income Industrial policy wage-earners can assure to those dependent upon their earnings in any way for support, the continuance, for a reasonable time, of at least a part of the income which death would otherwise take from them. Too frequently, because of the desire of the members of the family to give a final expression of their love and devotion to the departed one, the entire amount received under the regular industrial policy is expended for funeral expenses, or it may be that the cost of medical attendance through a protracted illness has wiped out their resources, with the result that they are forced to begin their struggle with the world deprived of the breadwinner and practically penniless. It is to guard against such a condition that The Prudential's new Weekly Income Industrial policy is issued, and it is believed it will prove a bulwark of family safety, keeping the home together and giving the dependent ones an opportunity to consider and determine upon the best course to follow. With a regular industrial policy to meet funeral expenses and a

NEW TELEPHONE DIRECTORY OUT.

The fall issue of the New York Telephone Company's New Jersey Telephone directory is now being distributed in Westfield. The new directory contains 121,500 names on 436 pages, and it will have a circulation of 132,000 copies.

When the New York Telephone Company in February 1913, combined the local and suburban New Jersey Telephone directories into one book, so as to make it easier for subscribers to use the telephone information provided for them, the Company distributed about 140,000 telephone directories. The 1913 fall issue of the New Jersey book had a circulation of 150,000 copies and the new fall directory shows a circulation gain of 2,000 copies, despite the effect of the business depression upon the telephone business. The new directory has 6500 more listings and it is 20 pages larger than the directory issued in the fall of 1913.

As usual, the directories now in use will be collected as the new books are delivered, so that only the up-to-date directory information may be in circulation.
