NEW CHAPEL DEDICATED.

GARWOOD'S PRETTY EDIFICE SCENE OF EXERCISES.

Dr. Richards Preaches the Sermon. Elizabeth Presbytery in Attendance. Interesting Program Prepared.

Garwood, Oct. 3.—The pretty little Presbyterian Chapel on Spruce avenue, just completed, was dedicated last evening under the direction of the Presbytery of Elizabeth. The service began at 7.15 o'clock, and the edifice was crowded to the doors. The chapel is affiliated with the First Presbyterian Church of Cranford, and the Rev. Dr. G. F. Greene, pastor of that church, presided over the exercises of the evening. Nearly every member of the presbytery was present, and with the mayor, members of the Borough Council and Board of Education, occupied reserved seats.

Music for the evening was rendered by the choir of the First Presbyterian Church of Cranford, assisted by the choir of the chapel. The dedicatory service opened with an anthem by the choir. The invocation was offered by the Rev. Joseph B. Ferguson, pastor of the Greystone Presbyterian Church of Elizabeth. After the singing of a hymn by the congregation, the Rev. John Sheridan Zelle, D. D., pastor of the Westmont Avenue Presbyterian Church of Plainfield, read the Scripture lesson and offered prayer.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. William Rogers Richards, D. D., pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church of New York City. Dr. Richards took for his text St. John 4: 21. Referring to the Old Testament, Dr. Richards said that religion meant man and God brought together. This was the idea of the writers of the Bible. In referring to the New Testament he spoke of Paul's religious activity and of that apostle's theory that God called man to special service. Speaking of the new chapel, Dr. Richards emphasized the fact that it should be a soul-saving institution.

The Rev. John T. Kerr, of Elizabeth, next gave a statement and short history of the chapel. "The original idea of having a chapel in Garwood is so far in the past that it has escaped memory," said Mr. Kerr. "The work has often been deferred, nevertheless a church is now here in Garwood to-night. One year ago it was learned that money was in sight for the building."

Mr. Kerr told how ground was broken, how the committee had worked at Cranford and Garwood, and how the pastor of the chapel, the Rev. Edward Love

LEGISLATURE'S LEADERS

AVIS PRESIDENT OF SENATE AND BARBER FOR SPEAKER.

Pennington for House Leaders. Plans of the Republicans at Next Session if Victorious at Elections. Confident of Controlling Both Houses When Convened.

The Trenton correspondent of the Elizabeth Journal gives the following outline of the plans of the Republicans of New Jersey for the coming legislative session:

Republican leaders, confident of victory at the election of November 6, are planning now for the reorganization of the incoming Legislature and seeking to arrange a program that will be for the greatest good of the State at large. The presiding officers of the Senate and House for next winter were practically outlined upon last Thursday, when a conference of the leaders was held at the Interstate Fair, and since then the leaders of the majority forces in the two branches have been tentatively selected.

It is the present purpose of the leaders to place the work of the administration forces in the hands of Senator John Boyd Avis, of Gloucester, in the upper branch, and William Pennington, of Essex, in the lower branch.

AVIS HAS GOOD RECORD.

Mr. Avis has for several years been regarded as one of the ablest young men in the Legislature. He was speaker of the House for two terms, and his record there was one of complete fairness and honesty with friends and foes alike. He was also the author of some important legislation during his service in the House. Last year he made his appearance in the Senate, having been promoted after one of the liveliest campaigns his county has ever had. With his year's experience in the Senate and his services in the House behind him, Mr. Avis is sure to make a good leader on the floor.

Senator Avis will succeed as leader to the place of Senator Thomas J. Hilkey, of Morris county, who is slated for the place of president of the Senate, now held by Senator William J. Bradley, of Camden.

PENNINGTON HOUSE LEADER.

Mr. Pennington, the slated candidate for leader in the House, is one of the regular Republican nominees in Essex. He is a man of considerable ability, and with a large following of friends. In view of the fact that Essex county Republicans have repudiated the "new idea" of Senator Colby and his adherents, it has been thought well to reward the county with some of the important places in the next Legislature, and as the place of speaker had already been promised to Assemblyman Alfred N. Barber, of Mercer, it was agreed that one of the Essex delegation should be picked out as leader, the position next to that of speaker.

There does not seem to be at this time any question as to the political complexion of the next Legislature. If the Republicans get out their full vote they had succeeded in gaining many friends to the enterprise in his home town of Plainfield.

There will be a Grand Concert by the famous Neapolitan Truandors from Florence, appearing in their native costume under the leadership of Prof. Carlos Anteceras. Rare bargains have been featured for this opening day, and the general line of goods is as attractive as any to be found in the city.

The beautiful appearance of the building inside and out was commented upon by the speaker, who said that the style of the structure was in keeping with that of the homes in the community. The chapel would meet the needs of the people for some time to come. The building cost about $6,000, and it was proposed to furnish chairs for the Primary Department of the Sunday School, provide a place for the choir and furnish hymn books. After thanking all the friends of the enterprise Mr. Kerr handed over the chapel to the community by saying that if it should become a place for religious inspiration, a fireside and a place where children would be led into the right the desire had been accomplished.

The order of dedication was as follows: Scripture lesson, Lord's Prayer, dedication, the Rev. Mr. Love conducting; dedicatory prayer, the Rev. Eben B. Cobb, D. D., of Elizabeth; declaration by the Rev. W. I. Stearns, D. D., of Westfield, moderator of the presbytery; hymn, doxology, benediction.

The Collyites have so often protested their loyalty to the old party and so often promised to abide by the result of the primaries that no "cutting" is expected from them.

Some of the Democratic leaders profess to see a chance for their party to gain control of the Legislature by the election of Democratic Assemblymen in Hudson, Essex, Passaic, and one or two other counties by the aid of the Colby men but no one takes such views very seriously.

Fall Suits and Overcoats.

There's often a chill in the air these mornings and evenings that suggests the need of a Fall Overcoat. And you know a man looks rather poverty struck without one on a crisp morning. But the suit must not be neglected. In the middle of the day when you throw open your overcoat, you can't afford to display a shabby looking suit.

The Marshall & Ball provision of Suits and Overcoats is comprehensive. Here are both Suits and Fall Overcoats modeled on lines that appeal to conservative men, as well as those out with all the whims of fashion that dressy young men demand.

Yet every M. & B. Garment is correct in style and reflects the exercise of unusual care and skill from the selection of the fabric to the making of the button-holes.

IMPRESSIONS OF OTHER LIVES.

Of Such Stuff It Is Possible Dreams Are Made Of.

I think very often our dreams are a jumble of ideas that we have inherited, and that dreaming is largely a kind of free play of what I have called ancestral memory.

We dream of things which we have never experienced in our waking moments. I remember a very realistic dream. It was a battle, and I was in a regiment of cavalry that received an order to charge. The whole scene is vividly before me as I write, and were I an artist I could sketch the face of a man who rode by my side. I can feel the throb of eugeness, the shuddering of the horses' roofs in the mad rush as we quickened our pace to get to closer quarters with those we were pursuing.

Suddenly the squadron of men in front opened, wheeling off to the right and left, and we were looking into the iron throats of a masked battery. They opened fire upon us—a moment after the ear-splitting thunder, and I was in a hell of smoke, dust, blood, and metal; every piece seemed to sing a war chant of its own. Then I awoke, and I was shouting "God! I never knew it was anything like this!" Here surely is something experienced by an ancestor which has descended from generation to generation and taken its place in my collection of impressions.—Nineteenth Century.

RESENTED EVEN WISE ADVICE.

Legend Illustrating Superstition of Russian Peasant.

An almost superstitious value is attached to the possession of land by the poor Russian peasant. There is a parallel in the old eastern story of Nasir Eddin Hodga. He met a peasant one day with a donkey, over whose back hung two sacks, one filled with stones, the other with wheat, the stones having been added to balance the wheat. "Why not divide the wheat into two parts instead?" suggested Nasir Eddin Hodga. Delighted with the idea, the peasant did as he was advised, and hung the two sacks of wheat over the donkey's back. "And where are your lands, O wise stranger?" he asked, humbly. "I have no lands," answered the other. "Your estates, then, and your palaces?" inquired the peasant. "I have none," said the other. "Then your houses, your gardens, your orchards?" persisted the man, amazed. "What!" cried the outraged peasant. "Do you, who have no lands and no possessions, presume to give advice to me?" and he unloaded the donkey, rearranged the wheat and stones as before, and proceeded on his way.

Was and Is a Good Indian.

Wahadotta, or Gray Eagle, an Indian chief who took part in the Custer massacre, and, like many others of the victorious force in that fight, took refuge in the Canadian northwest from the vengeance of the United States, has recently died at Prince Albert, Saskatchewan. Unlike some of his companions, however, when the rebellious half-breed in Saskatchewan called the Indians to their aid he not only refused, but took an active part in the war on the white man's part. He was a peculiarly fine specimen of the red Indian, both physically and morally, for he was six feet four inches tall and conspicuously free from vicious habits. Not long before his death he renounced paganism and entered the Anglican communion, in which his children had always been brought up.

Story of a Blind Sparrow.

A woman ornithologist tells of a sparrow that was born blind, without any apparent eyes. "It was found, evidently fallen from a nest, and was fed and put into a greenhouse with a broken pane, through which the parents could, if they would, visit it. Both old birds were promptly on the spot, feeding it assiduously. It was missing one day; but has returned to its kind friends, who supplement the parental feeding. It hops about and makes its whereabouts apparent by the ordinary little 'chirp, chirp' of young birds. It may be imagination that notices a plaintive ring in the sound. In my long experience of ornithology I have never met with a similar case."

TOO GREAT A RISK— WHY BLINKS HEDGED.

Blinks—Has a husband a right to open his wife's letters?
Blinks (a lawyer)—Certainly, sir, certainly; open all you please.

"Well, here is a letter my wife has written to your wife and handed me to deliver. I feel pretty sure there's something unpleasant in it about me. I wish you'd open it, and, if there is, just burn it up."

"Humph! Does my wife know your wife is going to write to her?"

"Yes."

"And if my wife doesn't get this letter she'll soon find it out, won't she?"

"Of course."

"On second thoughts, I believe there is a new law which makes it a penitentiary offense to open a wife's letters. I couldn't take the risk, sir; indeed, I couldn't."—N. Y. Weekly.

One London Man Unafraid.

Every once in a while something happens to make us doubt all those prosperity stories. For instance, a man in London has offered for exhibition purposes to live 21 days on canned meat.

Funeral Bells.

The tolling of a bell at a funeral is a purely pagan custom. The idea was to drive away evil spirits. Funeral bells are known to have been used by the church in the sixth century, A. D.

Dislike Dark-Colored Objects.

Bees are said to have such an antipathy to dark-colored objects, that black chickens have been stung to death, while white ones of the same brood were left untouched.

The Love of Life.

Horror of annihilation is so instinctive in us that from the throes of mortal agony it hurls us back, by a mad leap, into the ardent agitations of life.

Fresh Meat and Grains.

Statisticians estimate that 22 acres of land are necessary to sustain one man on fresh meat. The same space of land if devoted to wheat culture would feed 42 people; if to oats, 83; potatoes, Indian corn and rice, 176, and if to the plantain, or banana, over 6,000 people.

Still Unexplained.

The humming of telegraph wires is a phenomenon which has not yet been satisfactorily explained. It is not caused by the wind, for it is heard during perfect calms. It has been conjectured that changes of temperature, which tighten or loosen the wires, probably produce the sound.

Most Active Volcano.

Mount Sangay is the most active volcano in the world. It is situated in Ecuador, is 17,120 feet in height, and has been in constant activity since 1728. The sounds of its eruptions are sometimes heard in Quito, 150 miles distant, and once 267 reports were counted in one hour.

Chinese Moral Law.

Chinamen wear five buttons only on their coats in order that they may keep in sight something to remind them of the five principal moral virtues which Confucius recommended. Those are humanity, justice, order, prudence and rectitude.

Beer in a Jug?

A Wisconsin chemist says he has discovered a method whereby a man can carry 480 schooners of beer in a small vat. It is appalling to think how many he could carry in a full grown standard size eastern shoe jug. —Baltimore Sun.

Where Colors Come From.

The cochineal bug furnishes many of the most brilliant colors, including the bright carmine, crimson, purple lake, and scarlet. The cuttlefish gives the sepia, and Indian yellow comes from the camel.

Ivory chips produce ivory black and bone black, and the exquisite Persian blue was discovered accidentally by fusing horses' hoofs and other refuse animal matter with impure potassium carbonate. Crimson lake comes from the roots and barks of certain trees; blue-black from the charcoal of the vine cholla; and Turkey red comes from the root of the madder plant found in Hindustan. India ink is made from burned camphor by the Chinese. —The Sunday Magazine.

Sharp But Not Clever.

A London scientist says that life in a metropolis makes young children sharp, but not clever, that it often destroys their chance of ever being clever, for it hampers the development of the brain naturally; it makes them superficial, alert, but not observant; excitable, but without one spark of enthusiasm; they are apt to grow blasé, fickle, discontented; they see more things than the country-bred child, but not such interesting things; they do not properly see anything, for they have neither the time nor capacity to get at the root of all the bewildering objects that crowd themselves into their little lives.

Fright Causes Drowning.

If a spectator would shout encouragement to a drowning or frightened bather it would have a good effect, for it will sometimes give him a little backbone, and that's all he needs. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred all the trouble is caused by fright. The swimmer is not even exhausted, and with an encouraging word he will start to swim again if in his fright he has not swallowed too much water. Even if a poor swimmer would only go near to a man in trouble and talk to him without trying to take hold, this would often tide him over his panic.

World's Favorite Fruit.

It is estimated by those who know that the apple is the favorite fruit of the world, but whether favorite or not, it is eaten more more than is any other fruit. When William the Conqueror went from Normandy to England, among the many good things he did was to have large orchards planted wherever he and his followers settled, and these orchards consisted principally of apples. The fine quality that grew so abundantly in France.

"A man is relieved and gay when he has put his heart into his work and done his best; but what he has said or done otherwise shall give him no comfort."—Emerson.

Upton Sinclair's new community experiment is destined to fail because it is based on the idea of getting people together in their every day life and affairs. The need of our time is to get people apart from one another, so they can have a chance to develop individually and learn something of the meaning of self-reliance. Folks vote, eat, wear their clothes and take their religion largely according as their neighbors do, rather than from any independent conviction about party, food, raiment or creed. The unfortunate result is, that politicians appeal successfully to a false party pride, the meat-packing industry becomes frightful, fashion, instead of comfort and income, dictates what clothes one shall wear, and a man is readily branded a heretic by the church. In union there is strength—sometimes.

It is said that when the proposition to banish Aristides the Just was put to a vote an Athenian was asked by Aristides himself what grievance the Athenian had against him that he was ready to vote for his exile. The reply of the voter was that he was tired of hearing him called Aristides the Just. Charles N. Fowler is running for the seventh term for Congress and has served twelve years. James E. Martine has never been able to defeat him, but is going to try again this year. Martine may be hoping that there are enough Athenians in the fifth district to exile Fowler the Invincible.

A little judicious letter-writing to the Central Railroad Company by a number of representative citizens of Westfield concerning a new station on the south side might avail somewhat. A display of interest of that sort has been known to help in similar cases. It should be suggested, however, that moderation in stating the case and requesting the improvement is more likely to produce desired results than ill-tempered epistles demanding that the company do that which it cannot be forced to do, and will not, unless so disposed.

There are cases where justice is practically denied because of the insufficient number of justices of the peace in a town. The example set by Salter Storrs Clark a while ago, when he accepted the office for one term from a high sense of public duty, should be followed by those who may be asked to serve this year.

The Town Council members are not superstitious. They put into the form of a resolution on Monday night their disbelief in signs. Still, it may prove unlucky to tear down a sign before being certain that the owner has no remedy in damages.

The discussion in THE STANDARD for several weeks past of the ten greatest novels has excited much interest and favorable comment. Dr. Appleton Morgan, the eminent Shakespearean critic, contributes more interesting suggestions to-day.

The spirit of Roosevelt prevailed at this week's Town Council meeting. Whoever says it is not a reform council has not read the account of the session.

Never read a book without a pencil in your hand for marginal notations and the marking of special passages—that is, if it's your own book.

Fowler's Seventh Term.

The Republican Convention held at Elizabeth last Friday afternoon nominated Hon. Charles N. Fowler to succeed himself as Member of the United States House of Representatives from the Fifth Congressional District of New Jersey. This will make the seventh term for Congressman Fowler, and at the end of it he will have served continuously for fourteen years. The convention was presided over by former Mayor Fisk of Plainfield. William N. Rynow acted as Secretary. A strong platform was adopted, and an able committee appointed. Congressman Fowler had no opposition for the nomination.

Dr. Morgan Replies to Mr. Peckham.

Editor STANDARD:—My brother Peckham told me at the station this morning that I ought to apologize to your readers for calling Robinson Crusoe a "Novel." (What else is it?) I told him that apology would be welcome when he apologized for putting Thackeray next to Shakespeare. How about Dryden? How about Pope (who has furnished a larger number of quotations to English speech than any other author next to Shakespeare)? How about Scott, Byron, Shelley, Keats, Dickens (who has given us a larger number of equivalents for shortening speech so that we can avoid long descriptions by saying: that man is a Micawber, that man is a Talking-horn, that man is a Wemmick, etc.) than any other next to Shakespeare? How about Addison (who is said to have supplied the only character in fiction (Sir Roger de Coverley) that is a household word between the ears of Shakespeare and of Dickens? Put yourself right at once, Mr. Peckham, the lamp yet holds out to burn. In the words of Lady Jane "O be Early English ere it is too late." But I suppose Mr. Peckham will say that Dickens is not a Novelist but a Satirist, and Thackeray not a Novelist but a Cynic!

Since writing out my list at your instance, I have seen Mr. Ketchum's, and I approve. I certainly should have included the Pilgrim's Progress, had I not been afraid Mr. Peckham would call down hard on me for "John Inglesant" as uttered by itself, and not only beyond praise, but as it proved beyond its author's powers to equal. Of course I thought of Anna Karenina, but, on the whole, "Resurrection" is fully as representative of Tolstoy's genius, while more amenable to the Russian method, procedures of court and people, and of an even more impassioned interest. So I mentioned that. It irked me to omit Monte Christo, that most wonderful of romances (I am trying to win my brother Peckham's approval by not calling it a "Novel") or "Treasure Island," and I lawfully wanted to say "Great Expectations" instead of "David Copperfield," but deferred my own taste to the world's verdict. Personally, my own preference for all time is Anthony Trollope. His forty or fifty novels are such vivid photographs of the society and the civilization with which my own life time has familiarized me, that I cannot imagine a time thousands of years ahead, when they will not be prized as transcripts of the nineteenth century, and become works of sociological reference, and after that even, parables of posterity's priceless folklore (and they are always available for "the Young Person," too! There is no reason why a set of Trollope should not be in every Sunday-school library in English Christendom!)

As to "Henry Esmond," that is too great for omission. But ten out of a million is too attenuated a selection for most of us to grapple with. But may I ask your readers not to overlook "The Chaplain of the Fleet" (Besant and Rice) which is of much the same humble environment as Esmond, and in many respects almost its equal. And if they will happen to chance upon one of W. E. Norris's novels, "Matrimony," they will find a good picture of English holiday life that they will enjoy. And who can say enough in praise of Balzac's "My Novel?" I shall never forget that, the first time I ever looked upon English rural scenery, that story rose up before me and I could see the good priest give the gentle donkey the apple he had put in his pocket for Lenny, and Randal Leslie kicking away the stepping stones and all the rest. And I hope there is no Westfield schoolboy who has not read "The Adventures of Verdant Green" by Gilbert Bate.

Woman's Club Meeting.

The opening meeting of the twelfth season of the Woman's Club will be held in the Presbyterian Chapel next Monday afternoon at 8 o'clock. The subject for the year's work is "New Jersey." An extremely interesting program has been prepared. The year books, bound in the colonial colors, blue and buff, with an outline map of the State and its seal printed on the covers, have been sent to the members.

Dr. J. J. Savitz will deliver a lecture at this meeting on the "Topography and Geography of New Jersey." All members are urged to be present and to bring a guest with them, that as many as possible may have the pleasure of hearing the lecture. A Club Tea will be held at the close of the meeting.

Are you troubled with piles? One application of Manzan will give you immediate relief. Sold by James G. Casey, Druggist.

THE TOWN TO PROSECUTE.

COUNCIL INSTRUCTS TOWN ATTORNEY TO PROCEED AGAINST TELEPHONE COMPANY.

Also Directs Overseer of Roads to Order Sidewalk Signs Down—Elm Street Sidewalk Discussions—Weldon Gets Paving Contract.

The Town Council held a regular session on Monday evening and accepted the bid of William H. Weldon for the construction of sidewalks. Mr. Weldon's bid was 72 cents for a running foot, and was the only one submitted.

Mayor Perkins introduced a resolution directing the Town Attorney to proceed forthwith against the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company for all infractions of town ordinances and that the police department co-operate with the Town Attorney in securing evidence. The Mayor stated that the company had been guilty of many violations of the law in this town and should be brought to a halt.

Hearings were held for objections to the laying of sidewalks on certain parts of Central Avenue, Prospect Street, North Avenue and Union place. There were a number of objections to the Union place sidewalk and the ordinance for that work was held in abeyance until the objections could be considered in detail. Ordinances for the others were passed on first reading.

John M. Ledley, who is building a bridge in the neighborhood of First street, was given permission by the Council to close the street for three weeks.

The Treasurer was authorized to draw a warrant for $387.04 for interest on improvement certificates and $107.43 for interest on certificates of indebtedness, to the order of the Westfield Trust Company. He was also directed to issue a new certificate of indebtedness for $3500 to pay outstanding bills.

The chief of fire department requested permission to take the hose wagon and horse to the firemen's parade at Elizabeth next week. The request was granted.

Thomas Dixon, the tenant of the sewer farm, wrote the Council that he had bought another farm and wished to move there as soon as the Council could get another tenant to take his place.

J. W. Wall was given permission to build an extension to his newsstand at Broad and Prospect streets. The Council authorized the Town Surveyor to give a sidewalk grade to Sarah J. Brown and Edward P. Gilby.

The clerk was directed to instruct the Telephone Company to remove all old poles where new ones had been erected. The clerk was directed to inform the trolley company that the practical closing of Grove street by their repairs of the tracks must cease.

The Council directed the Overseer of Roads to notify all persons who have signs over the sidewalks in town in violation of the town ordinance to remove them within 30 days or the town will prosecute the offenders.

The Council discussed quite thoroughly the question of the safety of the tenements being erected on South Avenue and decided to take active measures against the owners for the least infraction of the building laws, the health laws or the State Tenement House Law. The first move was made by directing the clerk to call the attention of the State Commission on Tenements to the buildings in question and to request that an official inspection be made under the authority of the state commissioners.

Councilman Alpers introduced a resolution that the County Board of Taxation be instructed to add but 2½¢ to the town's tax budget instead of 5¢ authorized by a previous resolution, thereby reducing Westfield's tax rate two points, making it $1.78.

Councilman Russell offered a resolution to notify the trolley company to repair within 30 days the road between its tracks and for 18 inches outside of its tracks and to place such portions of the street in good condition within the town limits, as provided for in the charter of the company.

A long discussion ensued over the proposition to proceed farther with the ordinance to pave the southwesterly side of Elm street from Dudley Avenue to Newton place. Councilman Ledley stated that one of the former objectors had recently sold a number of feet of ground fronting on the proposed improvement, and that the purchasers would probably not object to the improvement. If they did not, the total frontage of the objectors would be reduced to less than half of the entire frontage, thus doing away with the reason for the opposition of Councilman Alpers to the carrying out of the improvement.

Councilman Russell suggested that the present ordinance which has already been passed on first reading be taken up on second reading and defeated, in order that the proceeding may be started anew. Councilman Alpers pointed out that it would be unnecessary to do this, as the ordinance was already good as far as it had gone, and that if the Council decided to make the improvement, the procedure would be that much advanced if the present ordinance was left undisturbed. This consideration prevailed and the matter was dropped for the present.

A resolution was passed to construct stone sidewalks on various portions of both sides of Westfield Avenue.

THE REASON WHY

We So Strongly Endorse and Recommend Vinol to the People of Westfield.

A member of the firm of Pratchey & Hathaway, our local druggists, says: "We do not believe there is a man, woman or child in Westfield whom our famous cod liver preparation, Vinol, will not benefit at this season of the year."

"We believe there is no need for so many people to find around run-down, tired out and debilitated, or for old people to remain weak and infirm when we guarantee Vinol will restore health and strength."

Continued the druggist: "For centuries cod liver oil has been recognized as the grandest of all body-building agents for wasted human strength and vitality, but on account of the unpalatable and system-clogging oil which enveloped its curative properties few could take it with benefit."

"In Vinol you get in a concentrated form every one of the curative and strength-creating elements of cod liver oil actually taken from fresh cod's livers, the useless, system-clogging oil eliminated, and tonic iron added."

"Vinol is guaranteed by over five thousand of the leading druggists of the United States to create strength for old people, for the run-down, tired and debilitated, weak, sickly women and children, and after severe sickness."

"We ask every such person in Westfield to try Vinol. It costs nothing if it fails." Pratchey and Hathaway, Druggists.

NOTE.—While we are sole agents for Vinol in Westfield, it is now for sale at the leading drug store in nearly every town and city in the country. Look for the Vinol agency in your town.

He is a humorist, cartoonist, impersonator and prestidigitator. Every member should make it a point to be present and enjoy the evening, bringing an application with him, if possible. All meetings for the remainder of the winter will be of great interest. Don't miss any of them.

AUGUST BLUME SERIES DIVORCE

Westfield Man Names Special Officer Fugate as Correspondent.

August Blume, manager of Coal Merchant Peil's stock farm, formerly the Fair Acres Driving Club track and stables, has commenced suit for divorce against his wife, Mary Blume, who was before her marriage a resident of Somerset County.

Mr. Blume has retained the services of Lawyer Paul Q. Oliver, who yesterday filed the petition for divorce. Edward Fogarty, of Westfield, a special policeman and engaged by Mr. Blume to transfer horses from the stock farm to the racetrack, is named as correspondent.

Charges against Special Officer Fogarty will be preferred at the next meeting of the police committee with a demand that Fogarty be removed from office.

Martine Against Fowler.

James E. Martine has concluded to try it again. He has run for office unsuccessfully since a time when, as Blackstone says, the memory of man raneth not to the contrary. To the surprise of many, and the disappointment of one or two, he was named by the Democratic Congressional Convention Wednesday to make the race again with Congressman Charles N. Fowler, his long time opponent for the coveted seat among the Solons at Washington. Martine's nomination was made after failure to agree during recess upon any other candidate. He had to be persuaded strongly before he would accept. John Moody, of Cranford, and William R. Wilson, of Elizabeth, were supposed to be receptive candidates.

AN ACHING TOOTH

It Has No Place in Cupid's Book

George was practically engaged. Of course, there were some preliminary steps to go through before the thing could be announced, for instance, Rose's mother had been cast for the past six months, and had never seen George. But Rose herself had protested, and the sky looked a regular robin's egg blue.

"Mother comes home to-day," said Rose, "and you must call around and see her this afternoon. Now there are two things that mother will not stand. One is inattentiveness, she says that young men are always inattentive to older women, and the other is profanity. Of course, I know that you'll be nice to mother, and I can't even imagine you swearing, but you must make a special effort for my sake to be particularly agreeable and not let even the slightest expletive escape you. And O, George, mother is so fond of boat riding; you ought to take her for a little row on the river this afternoon. It would please her so."

When Rose's mother arrived she did not impress George at all as a formidable person, and George invited her to go rowing with her. They secured a boat at the public landing and pushed off into mid-stream. The sun was shining merrily through light clouds, the birds sang and everything was pleasant except George. For as he took the first stroke with the oars he felt a curious throb, throb, throb in the middle of one of his lower back teeth.

It was mild at first, but each second it struck harder and grew more painful. Thump, thump, thump, it passed the claw-hammer stage for the ax, and left the ax for an imitation of a blacksmith's forge, and in two minutes it was pretending to be six canvas men driving in a stake for a circus tent.

Thump, thump, thump! It wasn't a toothache, it was a toothquake.

"Don't you love rowing?" asked Rose's mother.

"What's that? I mean—I beg your pardon."

"Don't you enjoy rowing? It has always seemed to me such a pleasant form of exercise."

"Rowing? Yes, it is."

Ordinarily George excelled in small talk, but to-day the tooth occupied his innermost thoughts.

"Aren't the birds singing sweetly this afternoon?"

No answer.

"I said aren't the birds singing sweetly this afternoon?"

"Sure—sure—very sweetly—very sweetly—very nice indeed—everything nice."

"And the scenery along the river shore. Don't you admire those old trunks with the moss draped so gracefully about them?"

Throb—throb—throb—went on the tooth. It was a triple action steam hammer now, sending off sparks that cut furrows along George's cheeks. It was swinging ahead in splendid form, pausing for nothing and slowing for nothing. It was like the winning pugilist in the last round of a prize fight: Bing—bing—bing—and then some.

"I was speaking to you, Mr. Brown."

"I was speaking to you."

"All right, speak again. Spit it out and have it over."

Rose's mother seemed to grow visibly in her indignation. She attempted to stand up in the boat. "Mr. Brown, you will put me ashore at once. At once, do you understand? If I had any idea you were this sort of a person, I should never have let my daughter encourage you."

George made a few forceful attempts at explanation, but the pain by this time had increased to such a point that his only thought was to get to a dentist. Rose had dropped out of sight altogether. Just as his once-to-be mother-in-law stepped out of the boat she gave it a slight shove with her foot. It capsized, landing George in shallow water, and with a whole mouthful of the cold stuff against the aching tooth. George would not have cared now had he been standing at the court of heaven. He broke into a shower of language that reminded one of a drunken sailor at his best. It was beautiful and convincing, and all about that one tooth. George went on through the last blankness until he had exhausted himself, and Rose's mother, two blocks away, was still running.

Then George went to the nearest dentist. He knew his life's happiness was wrecked, but he didn't give a dash if that Italian tooth was only out—that triple blanked, east iron, blighted piece of pestilence on the lower jaw. He got up to the dentist's door-way, he climbed the stair, and then, just as he was about to go in the tooth stopped aching. Stopped, absolutely stopped short, dead in its tracks. He couldn't even remember whether it was the one next to the eyetooth or the one just beyond that. And then as he went back out on the street with his clothes dripping and muddy, he saw that young dude Smithy taking Rose into an ice cream parlor.—Milwaukee Journal.

New Crossing Device to Be Tested.

Chicago railroad men have just been put in touch with an inventor of Toledo, O., who claims that he has invented a new style crossing that eliminates bumping on the intersection of tracks, which does not touch the track of the intersecting line, and which does away with the necessity for guard rails.

His First Attempt

Henry Finds It a Little Embarrassing

By KENNETT HARRIS

"Yes, I saw Hollister," said the young man in the irreproachable clothes. "Went out to dinner with him."

"You don't say," exclaimed his equally irreproachable companion. "I haven't seen old Holly in years. And I live in the same town with him. That's the way it goes. How's he looking?"

"Pretty good," said the first young man. "Pretty good, your beauty! You heard about his marriage, didn't you?"

"Why, yes, I got cards, but I was in Minneapolis at the time, and couldn't get away. I haven't heard of any troubles, though."

"You ought to see him. I hardly recognized him myself—almost turned him down when he spoke to me. Say, he was wearing a fedora hat and he's grown a beard. You know what a sandy beard of hair he had? Well, you can imagine how he looks with a beard. It wasn't as if it was well trimmed, even. It was strangely and sacred as some old tramp's—and I'll bet he'd worn his trousers for two or three weeks since they were pressed. He looked cheerful, though."

"He always was a pretty cheerful sort of a chap. You say you went to dinner with him?"

"He was bound I should go. Said he wanted me to meet the missus. Living out in the suburbs—Willowbrook. Know it? Well, it's out where there's beautiful fresh air and lots of elbow room. You don't notice the mosquitoes after you've been there awhile. Holly stopped on the way down town and bought a thick beefsteak, a bag of grape fruit and a basket of peaches. He already had a few other packages to carry."

"Well, it took us pretty nearly an hour to go. When we got off a red-headed boy about four years old gave a whoop and rushed at Holly's legs and proceeded to clamber all over him. He was a dirty little larp, barefooted and clothed in a shirt and blue denim overalls. Holly acknowledged him as his son, Clarence Edward. Clarence Edward walked with us to the end of the station platform and then demanded a 'wile.' When Holly told him he had to walk he set up a doleful howl, and Holly turned the beefsteak and two other packages over to me and took him on his shoulders."

"We walked about a mile and a half, I should say, and then we came to a fairly decent looking cottage, and three more children rushed out and clung to Holly's legs—three! That made four. When we got to the porch Mrs. Hollister came out and—what do you think? She had a baby in her arms. That made five! Five! Think of it! They had one maid, but she didn't cook, and Mrs. Hollister had to go out into the kitchen and attend to the dinner. She left the infant with Holly and the other young ones helped him to amuse her."

"After awhile Mrs. Hollister came in and relieved us and a few minutes later dinner was announced. We all went in, kids and all. One of 'em was sitting up in a high chair and shoveling mashed potatoes and gravy all over himself and the tablecloth. And you ought to have seen that girl they had try to serve table."

"After dinner we went out on the porch and Holly gave me a cigar to smoke. I don't like to say anything about the quality of a man's cigars, and I haven't said a word about the dinner, but wasn't Hollister rather particular about his tobacco in the old days? We didn't get to talk much, because the kids got to chasing each other about the porch, and one of them fell off and cut his forehead. Mrs. Hollister had just got the baby to sleep and that woke it up again. Then Holly had to put the children to bed and one of them wouldn't go to sleep without a story. At last he came down and gave me a history of the suburb, and Mrs. Hollister joined us presently bearing a jug of lemonade."

"The funny thing about it is that Holly seemed quite to enjoy it all—bragged no end about the kids. I got sleepy about ten o'clock, and I believe they were both sleepy, too. He tells me he's given up the club."

"Oh, years ago."

"I suppose so. What do you think he said to me going back on the train?"

"I give it up."

"He said: 'Jimmy, you ought to get married and come out to Willowbrook to live.'—Chicago Daily News."

His Ambition.

A new vicar was being shown round the parish by his warden, says the Glasgow Times.

"The natives are a hardy lot, sir," he said; "but you haven't seen Peter Sparks—he's the quaintest character in these parts."

This individual turned out to be the sexton, and he was discovered ringing the church bell.

"Is not this bell ringing almost too much for you, my friend?" asked the vicar, sympathetically, noting the bent figure of the old man. "You must be a great age."

"Yessir, yessir," mumbled the old fellow. "Ow many years I've tolled the bell I can't tell ye, but it's beginning to tell on me. 'Owsoever, I've tolled the bell for five vicars."

"Dear me!" ejaculated the clergyman, unconfortably.

"And," continued the sexton, "I'll be happy when I've made up the 'alf dozen. I think I'll retire then!"

The sun was two hours high, but at the end of the rowing I halted: "Whoa!" and the old mule stopped short in his tracks, as he had a habit of doing whenever his long, alert ears caught the sound of the vowel o, even in the most casual conversation. I jerked the plow out of the furrow, hastily scraped the share of clanking soil with my bare foot, unhooked the trace chains and looped them over the hames; the lines I passed and tied through the bit rings and then jumped over the sharp-ridged back that quivered apprehensively at my touch and set off toward the house.

My mother was at the woodpile gathering chips into her apron.

"My land!" she exclaimed, in amazement. "What's the matter, Henry?"

I had expected that, I kicked that fool mule in the ribs, for he had stopped. "Nothing," I answered, suddenly, and then "Geddisp, you blame of sneeze!"

"But what?"

"I didn't hear the rest. I slid off at the watering trough and, taking out the bridle bit, waited for my mule to drink. He took his time, as usual, nuzzling in the water and turning away to survey the landscape."

"Well, blith to-morrow, darn you!" I said, at last, and dragged him away to the barn. There I stripped the harness from him, filled his manger with hay and walked resolutely to the house. Mother was inside now, for which I was thankful, and I heard the grinding of the coffee mill. I was washing my feet in the tin washbasin when she came out again, shoeing flies before her.

"It ain't supper time yet, Henry," she said.

"I know it," I replied, forbiddingly. I got up without looking at her and paddled into the kitchen, carrying the washbasin with me. At the sink I secured a bar of yellow soap and a towel, and filling the basin with eastern water, carried it up to my attic bedroom and set it on a chair. Usually I made my toilet at the bench in the yard, but that seemed too public a place this particular evening.

I opened a drawer and got out the razor I had recently acquired—such a nice, bright razor! It was my first essay, but I shaved myself and not more than three slight cuts tinged the father with crimson.

I struggled into a stiffly starched shirt and assumed my Sabbath-day diagonals to the shirt-sleeves and took from another drawer a collar of celluloid, white and glistening, smooth and flawless, and a necktie that did not have to be tied, but was by a wonder of human ingenuity so constructed as to have that appearance. I had trouble with my shoes, for they were tight at the best of times, and a day's plowing barefoot is not the best preparation in the world for wearing a snug pair of congress gaiters. It was this time I heard my father's voice in the kitchen below and the clatter of the stoneware dishes.

The stair door opened and my mother called: "Supper, Henry."

"All right," I replied. "I'm coming."

But I wasn't hungry. I waited a few minutes, then put on my coat and went creaking down, nerved for the encounter. My father was seated at the table and my mother was placing a bowl of boiled potatoes at his elbow. They looked at me, but I avoided their eyes and "set up." There was an awful silence. I felt my face smarting and hot with the yellow soap.

"Ground pretty dry, Henry?" asked my father. His face was grave, but there was a twinkle in his eye.

"Yes, sir," I replied, and reached for the ham.

"Take care of your sleeve in the dish," said my mother gently.

I did not look up again until I said casually: "You don't mind if I take the sorrel mare and the buggy, do you?"

"Certainly not, son," said father. Presently he coughed. "Going to a political meeting, Henry?"

"Now, father!" said mother. I got up and pushed my chair back.

"I was just asking," said father, coughing again. "I didn't mean any harm."

I shook my head and hurried out. The sorrel mare whinnied as I came in, but there was no corn for her now. In three minutes she was being backed into the shniffs. I looked toward the house and my father was standing on the porch.

"Oh, Henry!"

I half raised the whiff. Should I pretend not to hear? Better take my medicine.

"Yes, sir!"

"I don't know but I'd have took the halter off afore I put the bridle on, but please yourself."

He turned and went back into the house as, scarlet to the car tips, I got out of the buggy. Not another word—not then. And dear me! Here's my own boy, beginning to get notions into his head about the ghast—Chicago Daily News.

Must Use The Knife

Said the Surgeon, but Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was taken and the Knife Avoided.

The Union and Advertiser of Rochester, N. Y., recently published the following interesting account of how William W. Adams, of 127 South Avenue, that city, was saved from a painful operation by the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Mr. Adams said: "Three years ago I was taken with kidney disease very badly, at times I was completely prostrated; in fact, worse had that the day was set for the operation to perform an operation upon me. But I decided I would not submit. I had been put in hot water baths, and, in fact, nearly every means was tried to help me. Then the day set for the operation I commenced the use of and from that moment began to gain, and it was not long before I was entirely cured and have had no return of the trouble since. My weight has increased and I never was so well as I am now. I have recommended Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy to many people, for it saved my life."

A Picturesque and Reasonable Outing.

The most picturesque town in America is only a hundred and twenty miles from New York. Mauch Chunk, in a narrow pass between the Lehigh River and the overhanging mountains, rises on the slopes like a quaint Swiss village. Historically the locality is known in connection with the discovery of anthracite coal. This discovery led to the construction of a bit of railroad which is the oldest in the country. Originally the track was laid to convey the coal to the river, but now it is maintained solely for recreation purposes. The cars are first hauled up a high hill, and from that point they travel by their own gravity around a circuit of nearly eighteen miles. As one ascends the steep slope the buildings below, the town and the nearer landmarks drop away in perspective with kaleidoscopic suddenness, and the doubling valley of the Lehigh spreads out in a thrilling panorama. Sights of great interest abound along the route. Old Indian trails over the hills are pointed out, the primeval forest envelops the track for long stretches, and glimpses of old mining settlements are caught in the valleys. At Summit Mountain a halt is made and opportunity is given to visit the mines. The burning mine which is situated here has been smouldering since 1832 in spite of elaborate and costly undertakings to extinguish the fire. Returning from Summit Mountain the car attains great speed, and, as the visitor always thinks, the inspiring ride is over all too soon. The New Jersey Central will operate one of its popular Excursions to Mauch Chunk on Oct. 14, 1906. Round trip $1.50, and special train leaves Westfield at 11 a. m.

Letter to W. B. Elliott,
Westfield, N. J.

Dear Sir: Here's the difference between two pure paints: one strong; the other weak.

O. P. Hanger, Staunton, Va., painted two new houses, the houses exactly alike: one another pure paint, the other Devco. Devco cost a quarter less for paint and labor.

People are generally paying twice-over for paint.

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVCO & Co.
New York.

P. S.—Charles Crieckenberger sells our paint.
