GET SIX CENTS DAMAGES.
Central Real Estate Agency Will Have to Pay Only Nominal Damages.

The Central Real Estate Agency of Westfield was defendant in the Supreme Court Tuesday morning, in a suit for $2,000 damages brought against it by Ann M. Heffele and Francis A. Heffele, her husband, for alleged damage to a piece of property belonging to them on South Avenue, which adjoins property belonging to the Real Estate Company. A verdict for six cents damages was returned for the Heffeles.

On July 15 last the company contracted for the erection of a building on land adjoining the Heffele property. A week later the company became aware of the fact that in digging the cellar the contractor had trespassed on the Heffele land a distance of thirty feet. The company told Heffele of the mistake that had been made, and in order to set things right, offered to purchase his property. Heffele, however, started suit for $2,000 damages. The jury was out only three minutes. Reed and Coddington represented the defendants and Jerry Kierman was the attorney for the plaintiffs.

Messengers After Chestnuts.
Pearson's News Agency gave ten of their messenger boys a chestnut party last Saturday afternoon, when they brought the fast service contingent to Westfield and put them on track of a number of quarts of the real, uncooked, right-in-the-bush article. The boys made good in the hunt, and after passing their opinions on A. E. Pearson's mountain farm, eating a good dinner at his expense in spite of their opinions, and visiting around Carleton Place, they got back to New York in time to go to bed early though there are no affidavits to the effect that they didn't stay up and talk it over till midnight.

Town Council Session.

A short session of the Town Council was held on Monday evening with all present except Councilman Moody. The resignation of Special Policeman Edward Fogarty was received and accepted. No one was appointed in his place. A question arose about passing some improvement ordinances without the unanimous consent of the Council. Mr. Ledley contended that a law had been passed allowing the Council to make improvements on its own initiative by less than a unanimous vote, and he said that the Town Attorney knew that there was such a law and should have advised the Council to that effect. Mr. Oliver, who was present immediately took exception, both to the correctness of Mr. Ledley's contention and of the reflection upon Mr. Oliver's professional duty implied in Mr. Ledley's remarks. Mr. Oliver went to his office and returned with a copy of the laws bearing out his statement to the effect that there was, and is no such law as that to which Mr. Ledley referred. The Mayor entered a plea for all parties to regard the matter as a bit of pleasantry and the incident was closed.

Resolutions were passed specifying the portions of work that shall be completed this year under the contract for sidewalks with J. W. Manhattan. W. H. Weldon was granted an extension of time until December 1st for the completion of his contract for sidewalks.

Several assessments for improvements were confirmed and reports of town officers read and ordered filed. Judge Toney turned in $120 for fines collected in the month of September. Samples of the new badges which the councilmen are to have before they go out of office, were submitted and informally discussed.

Career of James N. Wort.

The following is taken from the Telegraph Age for October:

James Norris Wort, formerly well known in telegraph circles, who resides at Westfield, N. J., was born in Philadelphia April 15, 1833. His first telegraph employment was in May, 1848, when he became a message clerk and placed in charge of the batteries in the office of the Magnetic Telegraph Company in his native city. He became an operator in the year following. In 1853 he was appointed manager at New Hope, Pa., relieving James Merrihew, who afterward became general superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company, at New York. After a brief return to Philadelphia, he was transferred to the New York office at 5 Hanover Street; once again going back to Philadelphia, where he remained as an operator until 1859, when he was transferred to the Baltimore office, a position he retained until 1862. At the latter date he was appointed manager and superintendent of the Independent Telegraph Company, a new opposition line extending from Portland, Me., to Washington, D. C. It was at this time that his sensational arrest by the government occurred for alleged complicity in the bogus Presidential proclamation, which was afterwards traced to Joseph Howard, Jr. He then organized and became president of the Western Maryland Telegraph Company, extending from Baltimore, westward. In 1865 he constructed and introduced the first private telegraph line to connect business offices, etc., in Baltimore and Philadelphia, the construction of which he continued until the introduction of the telephone. In 1866 he organized and promoted the Baltimore Local Telegraph Company. In 1867, in conjunction with his brother, W. S. Wort, he secured a special grant from Congress giving his company, the American Atlantic Cable Company, the exclusive right for twenty years, to land ocean cables on the Atlantic coast, under which right the shore connections of the United States Direct Cable and the French Cable were laid, the work being done by Siemens Brothers, of England. In 1870 Mr. Wort engaged in the business of manufacturing Portland cement, and in 1884 retired permanently from business.

HAD NOT GONE THE LIMIT.

Extreme Point of Foolishness Yet to Be Reached.

"Have you ever been made a fool of by a woman?"
"Yes, I'm afraid I'm guilty."
"Have you ever lost money on a horse race?"
"Yes, I'm ashamed to say that I have."
"Have you ever rocked a boat?"
"If I must tell the whole truth, I cannot deny that once I did rock a boat, and while I am at it let me confess all my shame. I once had a fight over a professional baseball game; this scar over my left eye shows where I was kicked by a mule whose heels I attempted to tickle; there is on a certain hillside a gravestone where lies a boy at whom I pointed a gun which I didn't know was loaded, and I have written letters with the request that they should be burned after their recipients had read them, but I positively decline to admit that I ever played poker with a stranger on an ocean liner."—Chicago Record-Herald.

BAD HABITS OF SLEEPERS.

Many Devices Intended to Remedy
Common Nuisances.

Man is the victim of bad habits in his sleep as well as in his waking hours. So distressing are some of these habits of sleep that they oblige wife and husband to occupy separate rooms, even at times causing divorce. Snoring is, of course, the commonest of the worst of sleep's bad habits. Snoring may be remedied. There are a dozen patented devices that, holding the mouth shut tight, prevent the snore.

Grinding the teeth is a disagreeable habit of sleep. It is impossible to sleep in the same room with any one who emits at irregular intervals this hideous sound. The trick is said to be invariable, but a rubber cap worn on the teeth renders the grinding almost noiseless. Nervous persons sometimes leap in their sleep a foot or more in the air, shaking the bed and the whole room. The man who gives eight or nine of these leaps in the course of the night soon becomes an intolerable bedfellow. Nerve tonics and exercise should be prescribed for him.

Nasal whistling is a habit less easy to cure than snoring. The sleeper keeps his mouth closed, but breathes with a distressing sound through his nose. The sound resembles a low whistle, and heard in the small hours is guaranteed toadden.

Both of Them.

"Ah! my pretty pippin," said the impudent traveler, approaching the inn door, while his companion led their horse to the hitching post, "I suppose you furnish accommodations here for man and beast."

"Certainly," replied the inn keeper's pretty daughter, "come in and tell the man to come in, too."

BLACK BASS IS A SAVAGE.

A Finny Butcher That Kills for the Pleasure of Slaughter.

The bass is like a roaring lion going about seeking whom he may devour. I have seen a good-sized specimen get into a school of minnows and eat and stuff until he could not get any more into his capacious insides, then go off by himself, throw up what he had eaten, and begin over again, after which he would keep on killing the poor innocent minnows, apparently for the mere pleasure of killing. Very young bass will attack minute water life which flourishes on water plants and get away with every one in sight, adopting the same method as their elders. To illustrate the extent of the cannibalism of the black bass here is the experience of a superintendent of one of the fish hatcheries in Pennsylvania:

"The superintendent made an actual count of 20,000 young bass about an inch long and placed them in a fry pond by themselves. He gave them food six times a day, and, according to his statement, each fish ate its own weight of the prepared food every 24 hours. They were placed in a pond of the 1st of July, and on October 1, when they were taken out, there were only 11,000, and the record showed that less than 200 died from sickness. It is reasonable to suppose, therefore, that in addition to the food given them by the superintendent there were about 9,000 bass devoured by their stronger and more fortunate companions."—W. B. Meehan, in Field and Stream.

Mobbed Him.

Mr. Tragedy—Did they call for the author?
Mr. Ayne—Call for him! Why, they came up on the stage after him.—Twitza.

Sea Encroaching on England.

Yorkshire alone has record of no fewer than 12 drowned towns and villages. There was Ravenspur, for instance, which was constituted a free borough by Edward I. at a cost of $1,500, and became a seaport of almost national importance. There it was that Edward Balliol embarked with a force of 2,500 strong, in order to win the crown of Scotland. The town, bigger and more important than Hull, had five churches, a civic square, harbor, and a number of buildings befitting its rank and importance. Where are they now?

Why He Despaired.

Rev. Frederick B. Bridgman, the noted and successful missionary to the Zulus, was talking in Philadelphia about missionary work.

"Much depends upon the character of the people one works among," he said, "and I can sympathize a little with the missionary who returned home from China in a despondent mood. A Chinese convert stole this missionary's watch and then came back to him the next morning to learn how to wind it up."

The Telling of It.

"Gracious!" she explained, after reading the account of a shipwreck, "only one man left to tell the tale. Isn't that awful?"

"I should say it is awful," her husband replied, "what an insufferable bore he'll become."

All She Remembered.

Miss Homebuddy—So you're home again. Of course, you saw Paris?

Miss Gidday—Oh, yes.

Miss Homebuddy—Oh, wasn't it just lovely?

Miss Gidday—It was so. I had two proposals there.

Unusually Attractive Clothing.

It is the discriminating man—the man who appreciates and wants the car marks of good tailoring, who is invariably attracted to the M. & B. Store for his clothing.

The kind we have been making for nearly 70 years have all the good points seen in custom garments. Notice the swing and shape of the collar, the grace and harmony of the lapel, the fit and shape of the shoulders, the hang of the coat front when not buttoned, the comfort and style of the vest and the shapeliness and fit of the trousers.

All manufacturers of clothing get some of these features all the time, all of them some of the time, but we have earned our reputation by getting all of them all the time.

The Right Kind of Clothing for Boys.

It's not possible to incorporate more goodness, more genuine wearability into boys' clothing than our tailors have done. It has been made to stand the wear and tear of the school yard—and that's rough.

Same time it has a stylishness that is an education to the boy in the wearing of good apparel. Most satisfactory feature, however, to parents is the moderate cost.

GUIMARD THE IDOL OF PARIS.

The Great Dancer of the Great Days of the Ballet.

The elder Vestris, who flourished in the middle of the eighteenth century, called himself the "god of dancers," and declared in all sincerity and without rebuke that his country had produced but three supreme men—himself, Frederick the Great and Voltaire. On one occasion, when reproving his son Augustus for refusing to dance before the king of Sweden at the request of the king of France, he said that he would not tolerate any misunderstanding between the houses of Vestris and Bourbon, which had lived hitherto upon the most friendly terms.

Madeleine Guimard made her debut when she was 13 years of age, and for nearly 30 years kept all Paris worshipping at her feet. This was a success of art, and not of beauty, for Guimard was so aggressively thin that she was known as "the Spider." She discovered the great painter David, who helped Fragonard to adorn her house with frescoes. Indeed, Fragonard, for whose paintings she had fabulous sums been paid, lost his commission because he dared to fall in love with his patron. Guimard had a theater in her own house, and her entertainments there were deemed extravagant in an age of luxury. Paris could not spare her to London until she was past her fortieth year. She was a sort of boudoir adviser to Marie Antoinette, and so great was the esteem in which she was held that one of the most distinguished sculptors of the day modeled her foot, and when her arm was broken in a state accident, a mass for her speedy recovery was celebrated at Notre Dame.—Macmillan's Magazine.

As Far Back as 1652 They Seemed to Know Something.

There was no doubt in Queen Elizabeth's reign as to who was responsible for the proper feeding of school children. The school of St. Saviour's Southwark, which, excepting for an entrance fee of two-and-sixpence and a significant payment of "two pence per quarter toward brooms and rods," was a free school for 100 poor boys, framed a very interesting set of rules for its inmates in 1562. The boys' parents were exhorted to provide him with "wholesome and hand-some clothing becoming his estate, and to take care of his body; and, lest it should cause the undoing of the child, the parents are reminded that the care of him at dinner time, supper time, etc., rests with them." Another recommendation to the parents is that "they should manage with great discretion and severity at home; which will make him love his school," and the concluding phrase might be written up in every home of to-day: "For the master may do much, but good and discreet government at home makes all sure, and doth the greatest good."

THE CHILD'S POINT OF VIEW.

Good Reason Why Little One Did Not Want to Be a Fish.

The late Henry N. Pillsbury, the chess player, was fond of children and delighted in incidents that illustrated the originality of the child mind. At the Mercantile library, the haunt of Philadelphia's chess players, Mr. Pillsbury said one day:

"I cultivate children because they teach me new ways of looking at things. They give me new points of view."

"I showed a little girl an aquarium of Japanese goldfish the other day."

"How would you like to be a little fish?" said I.

"Not much," said the little girl.

"Why not?" I asked.

"Because," she said, "if you were a little fish your mamma wouldn't have any lap."

HORSES STAMPEDE AT SEA.

Million-Dollar Herd Raises a Ruction
Coming from Europe.

If any vessel ever arrived at Hoboken with a more remarkable series of adventures than those accredited to the St. Andrew, after that sailor plodder of the Phoenix line had reached her Hoboken pier, residents of Hoboken want to know. And such of the marine reporters as come from Missouri want to be shown.

The St. Andrew brought to port an important shipment of horses, consigned to western stock farms. There is no doubt as to that. The horses were there, many of them, and many, too, heard of the value of the shipment—$1,000,000 in all, was it? Amid the thunder of waves this herd was stampeded, and a reckless, daring cowboy crew roped and tamed the terrified Percherons and brought them back to their stalls. This, runs the account, came about on the night of August 3. It was a terrifying struggle, and when the casualties were counted it was found that one deck-hand had a sprained wrist.

It was just before this fearsome experience that there was enacted on shipboard the most amazing feat that has ever taken place since the days of Munchausen. This is a verbatim account:

"One of the officers of the St. Andrew, on a wager, climbed to the hind truck of the mainmast on July 30 and lowered the iron ball 150 feet to the deck, and then hoisted it again, set it in place and climbed down to the deck."

It would puzzle sailors to tell what a "hind truck of a main mast" is, but there must be something of the kind. And there must also be sea serpents, for it was related on a type-writer that on August 3 Capt. Spick and Third Officer Cummings were on the bridge of the St. Andrew when they sighted one; saw about 15 or 18 feet of its head.

Neither the captain nor his third officer was on board when an investigator called, but a other officer volunteered the information that spar buoys, when they get a drift, do sometimes look queer.

He Had Them All Placed.

A prominent Melrose lady was having the season's coat put in, and a little, bent old man was left behind to level it off in the bins. The lady noticed his worn and heated condition, and, calling him, gave him a nice large cool drink and something to eat with it. When the old man had finished with this, he said to the giver:

"Thank you kindly, ma'am. If I was treated like this at every place, it's another house I would have."

As she was judging from outside appearance, the good woman was a little surprised. "Why," said she, "do you own a house now?"

"I do, ma'am," he answered, "I own four," and, with the characteristic frankness of his race, added: "And I've a daughter in college and a son in jail."—Boston Herald.

A Valuable Witness.

A southern lawyer tells of a case that came to him at the outset of his career, wherein his principal witness was a dandy named Jackson, supposed to have knowledge of certain transactions not at all to the credit of his employer, the defendant.

"Now, Jackson," said the lawyer, "I want you to understand the importance of telling the truth when you are put on the stand. You know what will happen, don't you, if you don't tell the truth?"

"Yassir," was Jackson's reply, "in dat case I expects our side will win de case."—Harper's Magazine.

DEER AND TROUT ON LINE.

Stories of Remarkable Catches Made in North Woods.

To tell a deer and catch a trout at the same time out-Nimrod Nimrod and out-Zeal Walton. A fisherman has just done the trick on the Arrow lakes. The deer weighed 200 pounds and the trout ten. The fisherman was trolling for trout when several deer swam past his boat. One was an old buck and the man managed to catch hold of him as he was going by.

Having no gun, he tried to kill the animal with a clasp knife, says the Toronto Globe. The buck objected so strenuously that he got away, swimming off with the fishing line upon his horns. The fisherman bailed out his boat and started in pursuit. After two hours' rowing he caught up with the deer, and with oars and knife succeeded in slaying it. While the chase was proceeding a big trout got on to the hook and after the deer was safely landed the fish was secured. It is quite a common occurrence to see deer swimming in the lakes of British Columbia, but to capture one and a trout at the same time is infrequent.

Conductor McKay, of the Nakusp and Slocan branch of the Canadian Pacific railway, previously held honors in Kootenay for securing a wild animal in unique fashion. He, while on a moving train near Nakusp, shot and killed a big bear, but the fisherman has put him in the shade. Even the captain of the Okanagan lake steamer, who secured an eagle by shooting it from the pilot house, has had his fame eclipsed; while Nell Gettling, who tried to lasso a deer from the deck of the old steamer W. Hunter on Slocan lake, and failed by a horn's breadth, is quite outdistanced.

The only man who can come near to the fisherman's record is W. Hall, of South Vancouver, who a few years ago killed an old bear and three cubs who were eating his strawberries in a big patch just outside the city limits; but he had no fish with which to adorn the tale he told the reporters.

CHOSE DEATH FOR OFFSPRING.

Mother Squirrel Would Not Have Them Live in Captivity.

I was snipe shooting in Northwest Missouri last spring when two boys came along on their way home from town. The shooting was not so good but that there was time to stop and have a talk, and before we parted they told me the following story: They had caught a gray squirrel and her four young ones, in the usual way, by stopping up the hole in a hollow limb.

"We wanted to raise the young ones, and took the mother, so she'd raise them; but when we got them home and put her in the box with the young ones she killed every one of them. She each one once through the heart. First, she took hold of a little girl squirrel and she acted kind as if she didn't like to kill it, being as it was a girl, so she dropped it and went and smelted another one, and it was a 'he,' so she killed it, and then the other 'he's,' and then she killed the girl last."

"What did you do with the mother?" I asked.

"Well, sir, after she treated her children that way we didn't want her, and we turned her loose."—Forest and Stream.

Necessary Hours of Sleep.

The belief that the hours of sleep should be artificially restricted is prevalent. Yet it is contrary to ordinary good sense. If the human body does not need sleep for the upbuilding of its tissues it will not call for it. A rule of health which can not be wrong is to sleep, if possible, as long as any inclination for it exists. The erroneous view on this subject is undoubtedly due to the fact that when the mind and body are thoroughly rested it is often difficult to arouse the mind from its comfortable lethargy. On the other hand, the man who is under a mental strain and sleeps only five or six hours at night is keen and alert soon after awakening. But it is an unhealthy activity. His nerves are at a high tension. He is on edge, so to speak. Such a strain, long continued, results inevitably in a nervous breakdown.

If men and women could get rid of the desire to do as their neighbors do, and substitute for it the determination to do as they feel they ought to do, hosts of people would be relieved of intolerable slavery and from dangerous temptations. — Outlook.

POOR PUNISHMENT.

"It is reported that when Congress assembles again Senator La Follette will find many of his colleagues strongly disposed to make his position uncomfortable. Should this prove to be the case the Senator from Wisconsin has only himself to blame. The unwarranted manner in which he pushed himself forward immediately upon entering the Senate and the promptness with which he proceeded to set aside the traditions of that dignified body by jumping to the front and taking an active part in the debate instead of remaining in the background and undergoing the seasoning process, as new Senators are expected to do, aroused a spirit of resentment among his colleagues. The abuse he heaped upon the heads of many of his fellow Senators who did not see things as he pretended to see them has also served to inspire a determination on the part of the Senate's leaders to punish La Follette for his presumption."

The Elizabeth Journal prints the above, apparently with approval of the plan to humiliate La Follette. Whatever may have been the mistakes of the Wisconsin Senator, one of them was not his effort to represent his own state in the Senate chamber as soon as he was sent there. It is conceivable that a man new to senatorial ways and means may regard it the part of discretion to survey in silence the activities of that august body for a reasonable time before plunging into debate with those more used to the weapons and methods of the dignified assemblage known as the United States Senate. It is not to be supposed, however, that there is any expressed or implied right to compel a new Senator to sit quietly twirling his fingers for two years while history is being made affecting matters of interest to the whole country. A Senator should not necessarily confine himself to the role of a mere spectator and auditor for one-third of the term for which he is elected. He draws ten thousand dollars in salary during that two years of modesty. The senate is the last place in the world in which to put a limit on free speech. One who cannot talk effectively needs no one else to punish him for attempting a speech. He brings trouble on his own head with every sentence he utters. No tongue lashes him so severely as the one to which he holds exclusive title. If the senators believe La Follette's forensic efforts to be empty murmurings they can accomplish their punitive purposes by giving him free rein in debate. If they regard his contributions to the Congressional Record as worthy of serious consideration they have no right to suppress them. In either case let La Follette talk!

Charles J. Fisk will not have to run for Mayor of Plainfield this year. He is on the tickets of both parties, and needs but to sit down and wait for the polls to close.

The Women's Club of Westfield will have occasion shortly to give expression to its views on the subject of woman's suffrage. We predict from this organization a strong vote against admitting the matter in any way. Until men learn to conduct elections better than they do now there will be one good reason why women should remain out of politics. There are other arguments numerous and weighty, in favor of the male monopoly of the ballot for a while longer. The necessity for stating them here is not apparent.

The custom of imparting political speakers to help their friends and associates in their own home districts seems not to be confined to any party or faction of a party. It is an open question, however, whether the man whose record is good needs them, or whether the man whose record is otherwise gets much help from them.

If Westfielders need any greater evidence of the attractiveness of their own town than they find in living here most of the time, they can get it by living temporarily somewhere else.

Bryan is pursuing the masterly policy of inactivity at present. He is quietly waiting for the people of New York to make Hearst a presidential impossibility.

Actions speak louder than words, and Hearst finds it difficult to prevent the Star Company from deadening the sound of his anti-trust speeches.

It is said that all the firemen in the Elizabeth parade last week did not leave the town on the five o'clock train.

The Bishops' Law.

Any candidate who attempts to make political capital by stirring up sentiment against the Bishops' bill should be repudiated at the polls. The measure, one of the best that has been enacted by the Legislature in years, is a moral one. It was so framed and is so intended. At a conference in Trenton the other day, the bishops and clergy of the state passed resolutions urging the people to keep the issue out of politics. There is only one way to do it. Defeat the man or party who dares to advocate its repeal.

While there was never any need of this measure so far as Plainfield is concerned, its provisions in the main having been rigidly enforced here long before such a law was suggested, one does not have to go very far, however, to see the change wrought by it. Scotch Plains, for instance, furnishes a good illustration. Before the enactment of the law, a drunken man was a common sight there on Sundays. That liquor was sold on the prohibited day was a matter of general knowledge. Many times in the Plainfield police court on a Monday morning a man has pleaded guilty to getting drunk at a Scotch Plains resort the day before. In other suburbs of Plainfield a similar condition existed. Now all this is wiped out, and it behooves every law-abiding citizen to use his efforts in seeing that such a law is kept on the statute books. — Plainfield Press

HIS INFLUENCE WAS BAD.

Congressman's Demoralizing Effect on Native Town.

The old man on the postoffice steps was chewing his straw and frowning in high dudgeon.
"You seem in a bad humor, uncle?" ventured the starch drummer.
"Yas, and, by heck, I ought to be," growled the old man. "This here town is going to the bowwows."
"What is the cause of that?"
"Why, Bill Blinks, our congressman. We sent him to congress to make the town better, and it was better while he was away. But as soon as he came home with all the things he learned in Washington the sewing socials turned to bridge whist parties, the checker clubs turned to poker clubs and, be gosh, the spruce beer drinkers turned to cocktail drinkers. He's put the town to the bad, and the next time he goes away we are going to pay him extra to spend his loafing months away from Bacon Ridge."

Some Marks of a Great Novel.

DEAR READERS—

The first quality in the writer of a great novel is the ability to tell a story well. The novel is fundamentally only a longer story; but the story should be a good one and well told. In the ability to tell a story Dickens ranks very high; so do Dumas and Balzac. It is here that the author of John Hughes comes nearest to failure, because the story is over-weighted with philosophical discussions. Fred Harte, the he wrote only short stories, accepted Dickens as his master and model; and in his chosen field the pupil surpassed the master, for it is not possible to find in Dickens's short stories anything so powerful as Miss and the Dancers of Pader Plot. Another good example of an artistic writer of short stories is Elizabeth Street Phelps, a star of the first magnitude. Not a line is wasted. Her every sentence, almost every word, bears upon the denouement.

In the second place, a great novel should grip the reader, mind and heart, and be to him a means of self-revelation. This is perhaps the main consideration. The reader says in substance: "I did not know what powers, what passions, what frailties dwelt in me until I read that book." It is this self-revelation that makes the great tragedies, from Aeschylus to Shakespeare, so powerful. Thackeray is a master hand at revealing human frailties; George Eliot and Tolstoy reveal unexpected and horrible possibilities; Victor Hugo reveals the amazing ability to achieve goodness. The reader feels that the author could read his inmost soul, if he chose to do so. At this point Dickens fails. A thousand people gleefully insist: "I know Micawber and Swiveller and Mrs. Weller and the rest;" but I have yet to hear the first person say: "I am Micawber," or "I find myself in the pages of Dickens." Dickens caricatures your neighbor, he does not so hold up the mirror that you may see your own soul. He lacks the one touch of nature that makes all the world alive.

A third quality of greatness in a novel is unmissiveness, momentum, sublimity. The cascade is pretty, Niagara is great. The pool of clear water with thousands of ripples sparkling in the sunshine is beautiful; the mighty ocean, whose billows toss equally the tiny feather and the enormous liner is great. George Eliot's shorter stories—Scenes from Clerical Life, Silas Marner, The Mill on the Floss—are more beautiful than Romola and Middlemarch, but they lack the mighty swing of the latter. The Pansy looks very "dear to the heart" of many; Lorna Doone is charming, and so are the stories of a Window in Thrums and Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush. That does not make them great.

Few novels can be graded in the first rank in each of these three of several other lines of greatness. Some are so excellent in certain points that they may be classed as great despite deficiencies in other points. The reasonable adjustment of the qualities of success and failure in any one book is, as it should be, a matter of personal taste in the reader. It is our privilege to admire this taste in our neighbor, or to laugh at it, according to our own taste. An enthusiastic lady once said to me with charming earnestness: "My favorite author is George Eliot, and the second is E. P. Roe." — HENRY KETCHAM.

Dr. Seymour's List.

The Rev. C. R. Seymour, D. D., late Associate Pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle in New York, suggests the following as eight of the greatest novels in the world: Les Misérables, John Inglesant, Daniel Deronda, Black House, Anna Doone, Ivanhoe, Kentucky Cardinal, Vanity Fair.

Children's Home Annual Meeting.

The fifteenth annual meeting of the Children's Home Association of the Children's Home Association was held Monday evening in the First Baptist Church. Mrs. V. O. Burris, the president of the association, presided over the meeting, which was opened by invocation by the Rev. J. C. Greenwood. The report of Mrs. J. B. Taylor, the recording secretary, was read by Mrs. Harry Evans. Miss Emma L. Bridges, the corresponding secretary, gave a glowing report of the season's work. The report, which is printed on page 8, tells of the beneficence of Dr. Conales, and how the association was unable to get response from the public in the effort made to raise a fund of $10,000 as a guarantee for the support of the institution.

The report of Mrs. J. S. Ferris, the treasurer, showed that the receipts for the year amounted to $1,708.61, and the expenditures $1,406.19, leaving balance on hand amounting to $302.42. In the absence of the speaker announced for the evening, Dr. Twinech, of the Newark Cripple Hospital, made a short address, in which he told of the good work of the home and thanked the ladies for helping the children, referring especially to the arrangements made for fresh-air treatment.

In answer to a question as to the reason for sending children from Newark to Westfield when there was already a home for crippled children in Newark, Dr. Twinech stated that the institution in Newark was started as a "home" in only two rooms, but necessity has changed the home into a hospital and the children sent there for treatment or operations cannot be kept long enough for their best good and the city and the city-home is not the proper place for their recovery. So that the work of the Children's Home in Westfield in caring and helping the crippled and deformed after hospital treatment is of the greatest possible benefit and greatly appreciated.

Managers were elected as follows: Mrs. E. F. Low, Miss E. L. Bridges, Miss Anna M. Clark, Mrs. J. B. Harrison, Mrs. H. E. Knight, Mrs. J. B. Taylor, Mrs. Martin Snyder and Miss Emma Hulsted. The following advisory board was elected: John Platt, James O. Clark, H. E. Knight, Randolph Perkins, W. G. Delamater, H. J. White and Dr. J. J. Savitz.

OBITUARY.

Harold (Gilderdecker), the thirteen-year-old son of Mrs. M. J. Gilderdecker, formerly of Westfield, died Wednesday morning, after a brief illness of pneumonia, at 134 Berkeley Place, Brooklyn. The funeral services were held today and were private. Interment followed at Fairview Cemetery. Dr. W. L. Stearns officiating.

Burglars Again Working.

The home of H. L. Adams on Prospect street was broken into by a burglar during the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Adams for a few days last week. Silverware and jewelry of the value of about $100 were stolen. Nothing else was taken. Some of the jewelry were family pieces, valued more for their personal association than for their intrinsic worth. The intruders used a chisel to snap the lock of a parlor window and entered in that way. Mr. and Mrs. Adams returned Friday afternoon and discovered immediately that their house had been robbed.

On Saturday night the burglars got into Eugene Sanford's house on Dudley avenue and got about fifteen dollars in cash. One of the fellows took Mr. Sanford's derby hat with him when he left. The family of J. J. Russell, who live next door, heard suspicious noises about their place the same night, and got up and investigated. Probably the same culprits undertook to enter the Russell home also. The police are at work on the cases, but have so far obtained no clue.

Servant Girl the Burglar.

Chief of Police Thomas O'Neill succeeded in rounding up one, at least, of the culprits who have been making away with the valuables of residents here for some time. Early this morning Mrs. Cunningham, who lives at 116 Westfield Avenue, came down stairs and found piled up by the dining room window all the good silverware, some clocks, and other possessions in the house. The window was open and a chair was on the lawn near the window. Mrs. Cunningham reported the matter to the police at once, and Chief O'Neill immediately instituted an investigation. The servant girl, a Pole, claimed to have been robbed of two dollars from her own bureau. The chief started a search for missing articles, gold watches and other jewelry. The girl was questioned closely, and acted suspiciously under examination by the police. Search was made in her room and all the missing articles were found there. Her name is Eva Kolashi. Property belonging to the several occupants of the house was found in her possession. The girl was held for the grand jury.

Taxes and Valuations Here.

The Tax rate in Westfield this year is $1.78, as against $2.30 last year. The valuations, however, have been raised from $2,930,000 last year to $4,456,400 this year, the increase being due largely to the requirements of the Equal Taxation Boards to make full valuations. Last year the town raised $67,000 by assessment of taxes. This year the sum of $13,000 additional will be necessary, making the amount to be raised $80,000. All of these figures compare favorably with those of other towns.

The Designer for December.

Beginning with an attractive, snappy and "Christmasy" cover, the December DESIGNER offers an interesting list of seasonable articles. The patterns for midwinter garments will prove of unusual value to those planning costumes, as some new and particularly fashionable effects are shown. Following these comes an expert lesson under "Pointon Dressmaking," which will prove of great help to those about to attempt to make one of the popular Empire garments. Some unusually pretty suggestions for "Midwinter Millinery" are clearly illustrated, while "Fashionable Frivolities" and "Fashions and Fabrics" bring to light the latest notions in the little touches that make the woman well dressed. "A Bonnet for an Elderly Woman," by Catherine Campbell, gives ideas for the solution of what is often a difficult question. Some new hair ornaments to be worn with evening attire are illustrated. Christmas stories and poems follow, including an enlightening article on "The Christmas Presents of the Rich," by William M. Van der Weide, and a bright Christmas play for children, "Smith and the Runaways," in which the funny folks can sing and act and thereby provide a jolly time for themselves and an entertaining one for their audience.

Christmas is the season of all seasons to make the heart warm, and Christmas is the triumph day of the home. The DESIGNER is the home magazine, too, and this Christmas it is offering an especially "homey" and bright number.

CRYING SHELLS OF CEYLON.

Sounds They Make Like the Notes of an Aeolian Harp.

Sir J. Emerson Tennent, having heard a story about musical sounds issuing from the lake at Batticaloa, in Ceylon, paid a visit to the place, says Chambers' Journal. The fishermen told him that the sounds, which resembled the faint sweet notes of an aeolian harp, were heard only at night and during the dry season, were most distinct when the moon was nearest the full, and proceeded, they believed, not from a fish, but from a shell called the "crying shell."

"In the evening," says Tennent, "when the moon rose I took a boat and accompanied the fishermen to the spot. We rowed about 200 yards northeast of the jetty by the fort gate; there was not a breath of wind or a ripple except those caused by the dip of our oars. On coming to the point mentioned I distinctly heard the sounds in question. They came up from the water like the gentle thrills of a musical chord, or the faint vibrations of a wineglass, when its rim is rubbed by a moistened finger. It was not one sustained note, but a multitude of tiny sounds, each clear and distinct in itself; the sweetest treble mingling with the lowest bass.

"On applying the ear to the wood-work of the boat the vibration was greatly increased in volume. The sounds varied considerably at different points as we moved across the lake, as if the number of the animals from which they proceeded was greatest in particular spots, and occasionally we rowed out of hearing of them altogether, until on returning to the original locality the sounds were at once renewed. This fact seems to indicate that the causes of the sounds, whatever they may be, are stationary at several points, and this agrees with the statement of the natives that they are produced by mollusca and not by fish.

"They came evidently and sensibly from the depth of the lake, and there was nothing in the surrounding circumstances to support the conjecture that they could be the reverberation of noises made by insects on the shore conveyed along the surface of the water, for they were loudest and most distinct at points where the nature of the land and the intervention of the fort and its building forbade the possibility of this kind of conduction."

Against Hard Proposition.

Herbert Knox Smith, the brilliant deputy of the bureau of corporations, said in Washington apropos of certain illegal acts: "These acts are illegal, but the question is: Can the law get at the perpetrators? I am afraid it can't. For these men are poor, and monetary punishment is the only one the law can take. The law, I am afraid, is in the position of a certain housewife I heard of the other day.

"This housewife, a strict woman, said to a new maid: 'I forgot to tell you, Maude, that if you break anything, I'll have to take it out of your wages.'

"But Maude, whom two days had heartily sickened of her berth, replied with a merry laugh: 'Do it, ma'am, do it. I've just broke the hundred-dollar vase in the parlor, and if you can take that out of four dollars—for I'm leavin' at the end of the week—why, you'll be mighty clever.'

Farming of Future.

It is impossible to look forward 20 years and say what the progress of agriculture will be, for it will certainly surpass in its rate of progress any two decades that have gone before.

ONE MOMENT OF DELIGHT.

When American Women Got Even with Nagging Britishers.

"Everybody who has lived in London," said the woman who has traveled a little, will agree with Bishop Potter that there is very little good will exhibited toward Americans there, particularly Americans who are not incumbered with wealth, but I got even with them once for eight months of nagging at our nation and customs. It was on a Fourth of July. We were on our balcony, in Russell square, watching some Americans start off in a coach with great cracking of whips and fire of crackers and flourish of flags.

"Aw—er, don't you know?" asked an Englishman who stood by me. "What—er—do they making all that noise for? What is it—er—that they are celebrating. It should like to awsky?"

"They are celebrating the day we kicked you," said I.

No More Sevres Graft in France.

The budget commission has decided to abolish the famous "bons de Sevres." M. Caillaux, president of the commission, states that this decision has been arrived at owing to the frequent abuse of these tickets. The famous china has, in fact, come to be regarded as a convenient form of currency in transactions to which it would not always be convenient to give a name. An artist to be complimented, a politician to be placated for services in the past or for possibilities in the future, received orders on the great national porcelain factory. In late years the practice has reached the dimensions of a scandal, so marked that the management of the factory has at last taken heart of grace to stop it. Henceforward the establishment will not in any circumstances part with goods except against cash.—Paris Edition of London Mail.

Polonius' Advice a Hoax.

A certain Chicago manufacturer has issued a terrible warning to the gay and festive clerks who pass the majority of their spare time in devising ways and means whereby they may the more gorgeously adorn their manly figures.

This manufacturer entered his office the other day just as one of his clerks was coming out. In the clerk's hand was a small cane and on his finger glittered a diamond ring, and his raiment was such as to make Solomon turn in his grave with envy. The employer noted the dazzling creature and then made his way to the cashier's office and inquired what salary the young man was getting.

"Twelve dollars a week," replied the cashier.

"Cut it down to $10, the fellow dresses better than I do," was the terse response.

Cold Storage for Hay Fever.

Here is a cure for hay fever that may not come too late for the susceptible victim of that fell malady. The Hospital relates that "a gentleman who was suffering from hay fever happened one summer to spend two hours in the refrigerating hole of a steamer." This cured him and he had no further attack that summer. As a remedy, "cold storage" has objections, but there are victims who would even be cured at the expense of a frozen foot or fingers, and at any rate the idea is refreshing. Those of us who enjoy novelty, and always the "last thing," might rush for the refrigerator the instant we begin to feel that hay sneezing coming on.

Back to the Edge

By S. E. KISER

For seven days he had struggled to keep hope alive. Over rugged steep and through desolate, barren valleys he had dragged his bleeding feet, trying to make himself believe that he would triumph if he could only keep on for another day. But each day that dawned found him still wandering alone over pathless wastes where there was no sign to indicate that a white man had ever been there before. His eyes had sunk deep into his head, his lips were drawn and cracked and his knees knocked together at every step he took.

On the third day he had thrown away his coat and vest, on the fourth he had parted with his trousers, and now he stumbled and struggled on with nothing but a pair of boots and a shirt to hide his nakedness. He was indeed a pitiable sight, and with the last shreds of reason that remained to him he called down curses upon the heads of the people who had made Arizona so vast.

A hundred times he had cried aloud for joy as he beheld in the distance fair cities, limpid streams or fruitful valleys, and a hundred times they had disappeared, leaving red mesas where they had been. Now he was again beholding what he told himself was nothing but another mirage. Far away there was a gently sloping hill, dotted with trees. He found it hard to convince himself that it was not a shady orchard, such as one may see on almost every farm in the east. Still he knew that if it did not disappear he would find on reaching it that it was nothing but a dry heap of sand and rock, sprinkled with sapless bushes.

Unwilling to have his illusion destroyed, he sank down upon the hot ground and feasted his weary eyes on the picture, wondering as he did so whether he had strength enough to reach it, even if he could have assurance that it was what it seemed to be. At length he struggled to his feet again and started on. He expected every time he looked up to find that the hill and the trees had vanished, but always he was gratefully disappointed. The sun began at last to slip down the western slope of the copper sky, and still the hill and the trees were there. He feared that his reason had deserted him, that he had become a maniac filled with vain imagining, and he pinched himself to make sure that he still had the sense of feeling. Then he realized that the distance between him and the hill with its trees was lessening.

With the strength that is imparted by hope he raised his head and went on. His feet seemed to grow lighter than they had been, and his knees almost ceased to tremble. The red disc of the sun was beginning to cut itself against the sharp edge of the farthest mesa, and a breath of wind that was gratefully cool stirred the bedraggled hair which hung over his brow. He half tumbled down the bank of an arroyo that wound along the foot of the hill toward which he had been eagerly making his way, and then, having clambered up on the other side, he saw but a little way ahead the first of the trees upon which his gaze had all day been fixed. He realized now that he was not about to enter a fruitful orchard. The tree toward which he hurried with all his remaining strength was nothing but a stunted cedar.

Still, not knowing why, he felt a sudden elation. Perhaps it was because the tree was alive. That was something, even if it could give him no succor. He clambered on, finding when he reached the poor little bush to lie down beside it and so to sleep. He knew that if he did this it was not likely that he would ever wake again, but he felt that he would rather die there than out on the barren sand where there would be nothing to shield his bones from the hot rays of the sun.

He was within a few rods of the tree, when he stopped and uttered a wild cry of joy. Gazing intently at something which lay a little distance beyond him, he fell upon his hands and knees and crept toward it, murmuring: "At last! At last!"

He reached it and fell upon it, crying like a child. He knew that he had succeeded in getting back to the edge of civilization.

He had found a tin can.—Chicago Record-Herald.

"What I want," said the discontented summer boarder, "is to enjoy the comforts of home."

"If that's the case," answered Farmer Cornatossal, "I don't quite see what you left home for in the first place."

PLAINFIELD THEATRE.

Way Down East will be given at the New Plainfield Theatre Thursday, next, and on Friday, Oct. 20. The natural declamation worked out in the "Way Down East," together with the human interest of the play, appeals to all classes—high and low—young and old, city folk and country folk. It is a plain story of plain people set before them. The blue city man is taken back to the time when with stone-bruised feet he chased the butterfly through the meadow. With all the story of the play points to a moral that is applicable to all mankind.

Viola Allen, who, by way of variety, last season turned from William Shakespeare to Clyde Fitch, has returned to the board of Avon and will be seen at the New Plainfield Theatre on Saturday, Oct. 20, in an elaborate production of "Cymbeline."

HONORING A MODEST EDIBLE.

Banquet at Which Only Fragrant
Onion Was Served.

It is unquestionably true that the admirable vegetable known as the onion is under the law, so to speak. Its pungent odor, regarded by many people as offensive, frequently drives its admirers to purloin it in secret and then to muzzle as far as possible its telltale aroma. The onion has served, too, as the basis for many quips and links at the hands of the humorous paragraphers. And yet it is an extremely wholesome plant and one of high rank with the ancients, particularly the curvy Egyptians. For these reasons it is pleasant to note that the famous edible met with deserved recognition at what was termed an onion reception and banquet in an interior New York town called Union, which in this case might plausibly seem a corruption of onion. It was arranged in honor of the sixteenth anniversary of the special guests of the evening, and the onion was the center, and center, of attraction. The house was decorated with onion blossoms, an onion centerpiece graced the table, and the bill of fare included onions and onions only—top onions, sliced onions, steamed onions, onion salad, and friend onions. Needless to say the guests, who departed at a late hour, went away breathing many encomiums of the fragrant bulb of honor. It certainly was a great night for the onion.

NAPOLEON'S CODE FOR WOMEN.

Some Criticism of Ideas Held by the Great Frenchman.

Napoleon said at St. Helena that his glory consisted not in having won forty battles, but in the civil code and in the deliberations of the council of state.

Savigny and Charles Austin condemned the civil code as "a mechanical mixture of the results of the revolution and the old regime of Roman law and the customs," three-fourths of its contents having been extracted by draftsmen from a printed treatise. The code, in a word, was not a substantive mass of law, but "an index to an immense body of jurisprudence existing outside of itself."

One of the dictator's objectionable hobbies was his desire for the degradation of the civil status of woman, who is treated by the code as a "fickle, defenseless, mindless being." When asked in committee if wifely obedience was prescribed by old French law, the first consul sharply replied: "Do you not know that the angel told Eve to obey her husband? Morality has written this article in all languages."—London Spectator.

Deacon Andrews' Joke.

Old Deacon Andrews, who died some years ago in Centre Lovell, Me., was a noted wit in that vicinity. One evening he had occasion to go to a neighboring town to get some provisions and other things. It was late at night when he returned, and a cold, penetrating wind was blowing. He stopped his horse in front of a neighbor's house, and, getting out of his carriage, knocked loudly at the door. After Mr. Andrews had knocked for some while the neighbor came down, partially dressed and shivering from the cold.

"Good evening, Seth," said the deacon. "Have you lost a little pearl-handled penknife?"

"No," was the reply. "Have you found one?"

"No, I haven't," drawled Mr. Andrews. "But I didn't know but what I might."

Maid Coach's Mistress.

Owing to the sudden illness of one of her servants the mistress of a country house in a New England village had to impress into service as a waitress the daughter of one of the neighboring farmers. That there was any social inequality between servant and mistress never struck the new waitress, as was made plain the first evening at dinner.

There was a dish of olives in front of the mistress which she allowed to remain as they were until the hastily coached waitress should have had time to serve them. "This didn't fit in with the girl's idea of hospitality at all, and as she reached her employer she leaned over chair, pointed at the olives, and remarked in a perfectly audible whisper:

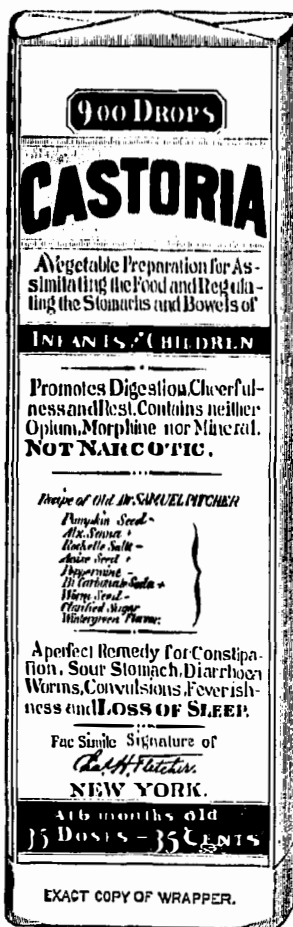

"Here, get on to your job!"

Beer Corks by the Bushel.

For some time the big sewer leading along Main street in Arkansas City, in the prohibition state of Kansas, has been clogged up so that it failed to let the water through. The street commissioner set a force of workmen to digging and took up a number of sections of the big pipe, which is 12 inches in diameter. It was discovered that the obstruction was nothing more nor less than a great lot of beer bottle corks, there being fully a bushel of them wedged in and filling the pipe so completely as to stop the flow of water.—Exchange.

The Life of Bells.

Comparatively few people know that ringing a bell ruins it. That is, a bell has a definite length of life, and after so many blows will break. A 900 pound bell, struck blows of 175 foot pounds of force, broke after 11,000 blows. A 4,000 pound bell broke after 18,000 blows of 350 foot pounds force. A steel composition bell weighing 1,000 pounds broke after 24 blows of 150 foot pounds, but its maker said it was calculated for a lighter blow.

Circulation.

"I notice your esteemed contemporary claims your edition never exceeds 500 copies," remarked the neutral observer.

"Yes," replied the editor of the Weekly Bazaar, "and his remarks have stirred up a good deal of bad blood in our office."

"Bad blood? Ah! then your circulation really is poor, eh?"

Letter to Archibald & Scudder, Westfield, N. J.

Dear Sir: A pound of good meat and no bone is worth more than a half-pound of meat and a half-pound of bone; but there are, as you say, a great many people who won't pay more than a certain price for the pound. Give 'em bone; that's right; give 'em plenty of bone!

There are people who won't pay more than $1.50 a gallon for paint; give 'em bone! There's no better school than experience; cost is high; but the lesson is never forgotten.

Let a man paint two houses alike, same size; one Devco, the other that $1.50 paint. He buys 10 gallons of each, and pays $14 a day for labor—$3 a day is $3 a gallon, easier reckoning.

He has to buy two gallons more of the $1.50 paint and has two gallons left of Devco; 13 gallons $1.50, $19; 8 gallons $1.75; $14; $4 more for "cheap" paint.

He pays $3 a gallon for painting; 8 gallons $24; 12 gallons $36; $12 more for painting "cheap" paint.

He'll buy the less gallons paint after that. If people are slow to learn, it's because they keep on buying bone-meat. Give 'em plenty of bone.

Yours truly, F. W. Devco & Co. New York.

P. S.—Charles Crickenberger sells our paint.

Westfield Camp W. O. W. Bowlers were defeated two out of three games on their own alleys on Wednesday night. The games were well bowled despite the fact that Westfield has been handicapped ever since the season opened by the sickness of some of her best bowlers.

BRANCH MILLS.

The wedding of Miss Mary G. Haines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Haines, of Union, N. J., and Charles E. French took place in the Congregational Church, Westfield, N. J., Wednesday afternoon. The ceremony was witnessed by relatives and friends and performed by the Rev. Mr. Karnell, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. W. I. Stearns, pastor of the H. on one tower and the other on the other. At the sound of the wedding march the party entered. They were the ushers, William A. Parkhurst and George W. Pierson, followed by the bride and groom, then the bride's parents. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents. The bride and groom later left for a wedding trip. On their return they will reside in their new home in this place.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the People of Westfield, To Whom It May Concern:

Of late there has been a good deal of discussion in Westfield in regard to the various medicines and their value. The papers are full of them.

We want to say to every man, woman and child in Westfield that we believe the most valuable preparation of liver oil—the best tonic recognized by health reformers and strength-givers—we have ever sold in our store is Vinol.

Vinol is not a patent medicine, it contains no injurious drugs, but it actually contains all of the medicinal, active elements taken from fresh cod livers, without a drop of the disgusting oil, and it is a tonic and health-giver.

Vinol is recognized throughout the world as the greatest strength-giver for old people, weak, sickly women, children, nursing mothers, and after severe sickness.

Vinol cures hacking coughs, colds, bronchitis, and all throat troubles. We ask the people of Westfield to try Vinol on our offer to return the money if it fails. Frutcher & Hathaway, Druggists.
