A Home Among the Trees

It is difficult for us to understand just why so many home site seekers give preference to lots devoid of tree decoration when, for precisely the same money, they may choose a lot where trees of thirty, forty and fifty years growth, provide a beautiful setting for the home and offer inviting shade during the summer. The chief beauty of Westfield Avenue, Carleton Place, Prospect Street and parts of Dudley Avenue is the magnificence of the trees which line those thoroughfares. We call the attention of prospective home site buyers to our Grove Street property where the elevation is desirable, grand trees cover the tract and the trolley is at hand. The prices now quoted will be advanced in the near future. Easy terms. Come and talk it over. (Meanwhile, go see those trees.)

The young man who secures a lot now will find he has made a splendid investment.

J. FRANK BURKE SPEAKS IN CHURCHES HERE SUNDAY.

Picks for Cause of Local Option in the Interests of Fair Play.

Rev. J. Frank Burke, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, addressed two meetings in this place on Sunday, in the interests of Local Option. At the morning service in the Methodist Church Mr. Burke made an earnest plea, citing many instances to show the need for local option in this state, and by comparison with other states, showing how New Jersey was behind the times in excise legislation. At the close of the service, $139.00 was raised by the congregation to assist the League in its work.

In the afternoon, Mr. Burke addressed a meeting at the Congregational Church, the pastor, Rev. Dr. S. L. Lewis, presiding. The audience was not large, but strict attention was given to the remarks of the speaker. Mr. Burke said, among other things, that the Anti-Saloon League was not seeking radical legislation on the excise question. Personally he did not believe in pressing the issue too far. But in the interests of good government, the League was urging that the excise question be put directly before the people. There was nothing unreasonable in such a proposition. Local Option was legislation by referendum. It meant that the people in the different municipalities should determine whether a town should go "wet" or "dry." It stood to reason, he argued, that a town would vote on the proposition according to the intelligence, morality, and public-spiritedness of the citizens. In the spirit of fair play, Mr. Burke urged all interested citizens, and particularly church people to work for Local Option. To win the fight, he said, it was only necessary for the churches in the state to take a united stand, and by the co-operation of all, Local Option would be assured. The church interests outnumbered the liquor interests twenty to one, he declared.

Mr. Burke said he was not discouraged by the defeat of Local Option at Trenton, this year. He had expected it. But progress had been made, and victory was assured sooner or later—and sooner, if the people would come quickly to realize the spirit and letter of the Local Option Law.

Test Tube Makes Trouble at Casino.

Last Friday evening, a most disagreeable odor spread itself around the pool and billiard room of the Casino. The management could not imagine what made business so dull, until the smell reached him. After a long hunt the cause of the odor was found to be a test tube of chemicals on the floor near the radiator. The management has offered ($10) ten dollars to the person who can speak with authority in the matter.

ANOTHER FAST TRAIN ADDED TO SCHEDULE FOR WESTFIELD.

Plainfield Express for New York Now Stops Here at 7:55 A. M.

There's joy in the hearts of Westfield commuters, and smiles on their faces. Another fast train has been added to the list stopping at Westfield. Beginning Wednesday morning the express train, No. 108, leaving Plainfield at 7:45, and arriving at Westfield at 7:55, makes a stop here.

The addition of this train is the result of efforts made by the Board of Trade to secure increased accommodations for local commuters. The action of the Central officials shows a disposition on the part of the Railroad company to comply with all reasonable requests made by its patrons. The relations between Westfield patrons and the officials of the Central are most cordial, and through the co-operative plan instituted by the Trade Board, the good feeling bids fair to keep pace with the growth and development of Westfield which is now one of the best commuting towns along the line of the Central Railroad.

The letter, notifying the Board of Trade, is in answer to a request made by President Tuttle, and reads as follows:—

New York, April 5th, 1909.

Mr. W. E. Tuttle, Jr.,
President Board of Trade,
Westfield, N. J.

My Dear Mr. Tuttle:—
Referring to your favor of the 24th ultimo, in regard to improved passenger service between Westfield and New York:—

I have much pleasure in advising you that effective Wednesday, the 7th instant, train No. 108 leaving Plainfield at 7:45 a. m., and passing Westfield at 7:55 a. m., will stop at Westfield.

With very kind regards, I am,
Yours truly,
W. C. HOPE,
General Passenger Agent.

HORSE GETS OBSTREPEROUS.

Dashes H. N. Taylor's Rig Into Tuttle Bros. Coal Wagon.

Harry N. Taylor's plumbing wagon, driven by Edward Nolan, turned over at the corner of North and Westfield avenues last Monday afternoon at five o'clock. Edward Nolan was returning from a job on Westfield avenue when in passing under the railroad bridge, the horse became frightened by a train and ran at break neck speed up Westfield avenue. Nolan was unable to control the horse, which attempted to turn the corner at North avenue. In turning, the rear of the wagon hit one of Tuttle Bros. coal wagons and was turned over throwing Nolan out. Nolan was not hurt other than a few scratches and bruises, and neither wagon was damaged.

Rev. J. A. Owen Dies Suddenly.

Rev. Joseph A. Owen, pastor of the Sumnerfield Methodist Church of Newark, died suddenly at his home in that city last week. Rev. Mr. Owen possessed one of the keenest intellects in the Methodist pulpit. He was an ardent believer in the second coming of Christ, predicting the advent in the year 1920. He was pastor in Westfield for three years, and by his masterly sermons greatly increased the membership of the local church. He is survived by a wife and four children, one son and three daughters.

SHARP TALK AND DATA.

Council Deliberates Four Hours on Ordinances, Etc., and Hears a Very Spicy Debate.

THE MAYOR'S DANDER WAS UP.

He Scores Uncle Ira Lambert, and Uncle Ira Retaliates—Squabble Was Over the Osborne Avenue Storm Sewer.

There were ordinances to right of 'em, petitions to left of 'em, resolutions in front of 'em, when the Common Council met in regular session, Monday night. It took four long hours of deliberation and controversy to dispose of most of 'em, and when the last batch of twenty-six of 'em was finally passed on first reading, everybody was sick of 'em, and went home fearing that his slumbers would be disturbed by dreams of 'em.

It was the longest councilmanic session on record. Things were rather interesting and spirited at the first, but about ten o'clock, when the pile of data on the Clerk's desk showed no signs of diminution, the Council and on-lookers began to grow weary in well doing. A twenty minute recess brought the hands of the clock dangerously near the 11 mark—and still more ordinances. Council hated to do it, but they simply had to, or the town would get no Tarvia on its streets this summer. So Councilman Floyd yawned, and said: "Let's stand by the guns boys," and everybody stood—or sat, until the clock struck twelve.

There was some spice to the meeting. Uncle Ira Lambert and the Mayor had a little tilt over the Osborne avenue storm sewer matter. There had been a score of written protests against this improvement, unless the expense be borne by the Town at large and not by abutting property owners. When the Mayor announced that the meeting was open for remarks from citizens wishing to be heard by the Council on any subject, Mr. John T. Cox, rose to add his verbal protest against the storm sewer.

The Mayor explained that the written protests were quite sufficient proof of the unpopularity of the plan, but reluctantly heard Mr. Cox through. Uncle Ira wasn't satisfied. He wanted to say a sharp word on the same subject; but the Mayor's dander was up, and he bade the erstwhile Sage of Mt. Ararat sit down.

"Call me to order; I don't care," snapped Mr. Lambert. "You've got no right to refuse me the right to speak."

"You sit down," retorted the Mayor. "I'll do it, but I'll put my case before the people in the newspapers. I won't stand for a gag rule policy."

"This is a free meeting," said the Mayor. "No gag law prevails here, but I insist that you keep your seat Mr. Lambert unless you can show proper respect for the rules of this body. The Council knows all about the storm sewer controversy."

Uncle Ira was insistent, and he urged a friend sitting near him to take the floor and repeat what he had said. The friend declined, and the meeting continued. The storm sewer question was fully reviewed by Council after the recess. Councilman Davis made a strong plea to change the reading of the ordinance so that the expense should fall upon the town at large. Councilman Wilson thought the matter of enough importance to hold up for consideration for two weeks. He made a motion to that effect. The motion was amended; the amendment was carried; the ordinance was brought up as originally proposed, and unanimously defeated, as was also an ordinance to macadam in the same district. This puts a quietus on the question of storm sewer for Osborne avenue and vicinity for some time, as a new ordinance will have to be introduced, and the question is, if it should be found best to have the whole town foot the bill, where will the money come from, as all money voted by appropriation has already been distributed.

Leonard Collins and John Rosenkrans, who have been acting as specials on the police force, were appointed regulars upon the recommendation of Councilman Floyd, the chairman of the police committee. Thomas Jones was appointed janitor of the Town rooms, and James McCarthy was granted a huckster's and peddler's license. The Audit Company of New York was authorized to upon a new set of books for the collector and treasurer according to the suggestion outlined in the annual

THE NEW SYSTEM OF STREET SPRINKLING WITH TARVIA.

Authorized by New Law, Costs Much Less Than the Old Method.

The proceedings for sprinkling the improved streets of the town with tarvia, inaugurated by the Town Council at the last meeting, was authorized by a recent act of the Legislature, which gives the Council power to do this work and assess the cost upon the abutting lands.

The material used will be the same as that which was applied last year to Dudley avenue between Elm street and Lawrence avenue. This material has been adopted by the Council after consideration of the relative merits of tarvia and oil.

The cost to be assessed upon the abutting lands is estimated at from 3 to 5 cents per front foot for each treatment, depending upon the width and condition of the macadam.

One treatment should be sufficient for the season, except on heavily travelled streets where a second treatment will probably be required later in the year.

The application of tarvia will greatly mitigate the dust nuisance and at the same time preserve the macadam at a cost far below sprinkling with water.

"UNCLE ALFRED" IS HOME.

"Potluck" is the Best Place for a Good Philistine, He Says.

There's joy on the Mountaintop! Spring has come with the balmy sun and sky and breezes—and from the South have returned the song birds, and, best of all, "Uncle Alfred" and Mrs. Pearsall have come home to Potluck.

After a three-months picnic in Melrose, Florida, where they have been dined, wine and honored, Mr. and Mrs. Pearsall arrived in town last Saturday bag and baggage. Both admit that they never had a more thoroughly enjoyable frolic.

"Melrose is a good place to loaf—fine—inspiring—you can't beat it for climate—but, after all Potluck is the best place in the world for a Philistine such as your Uncle Alfred." This from the Chief Engineer of "The Potluck Palace of Rest." Then with a smile he added: "MaAdoo is making great headway with his tunnel scheme. I'm going to run a race with him. By the time the tunnel is open to Central Railroad commuters, Potluck Palace will be built. And I'll invite all you boys up to eat buckwheat cakes and sausage at my expense."

For the first time in many moons there was an indication of activity on Mountaintop this week. The Chief Engineer had bailed 250 buckets of water out of the sub-cellar of Potluck before high-noon.

And croaked the Bull Frog on the Sand-Bank to the Bull Frogs in the pool: "I told you that was no stationary bath tub."

Medical Society Discusses "Surgical Shocks."

SWEEPING CHANGES MADE.

Bishop Neeley's Appointments a Surprise to Newark Conference.

In the most exciting session on record, Bishop Neeley announced the pastoral changes of the Newark Conference of the M. E. Church, Tuesday afternoon. Bishop Neeley's appointments met with marked disapproval of certain congregations, particularly that of the Centenary Church, Newark, from which the popular pastor Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead was transferred to Hoboken, and in his place Dr. McCrea, of Plainfield, was substituted. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, superintendent of the Jersey City District, and a former pastor of the local church, was appointed to the Plainfield church, to succeed Dr. McCrea.

Rev. Dr. Addison W. Hayes was returned to the Westfield church, much to the delight of his local parishioners, among whom he is very popular.

There is a spirit of revolt manifest in Dr. Mead's church. Dr. Mead was sent to Hoboken. He is one of the ablest preachers in the conference. Both he and Dr. McCrea expected to be returned to their former charges.

TONY IS A "BAD LOT."

Nine Year Old Italian Boy Shows Remarkable Aptitude for the Burglary Business.

HE ENTERED CASEY'S STORE.

Made Careful Plans to Avoid Detection—Admitted to Police That He Knew the Local System.

Tony Moratto, an Italian boy, nine years old, is making good progress in the profession of burglary. In this work Tony shows an aptitude which is remarkable in a youth of his age. Not only is he persistent, but unusually skillful. His knowledge of the nuances of the game seems to be inborn.

Tony has confessed to having broken into Casey's store last Friday morning, and stolen whatever articles he could conveniently get away with. It is not so much what Tony did, as the way he did it that has caused the local police to open their eyes in wonder.

Tony has been guilty of petty thievery before, having once stolen a bicycle, and trinkets; consequently when the police received word that Casey's store had been robbed, he was suspected of having turned the trick.

Saturday morning, Sergeant Caulfield started on a still hunt for Tony. He soon learned that the boy was not at school, and later was informed of the boy's place of hiding.

When confronted by the officer, Tony at first denied all knowledge of the crime. Then he was taken to his home on North avenue, and a search was made. There a number of the stolen articles, including a variety of grass seeds, etc., was found. Tony had eaten most of the candy. When Tony was given the third degree, without the least show of shame or fear, the boy confessed, telling the police the story of the burglary, and in a tone which indicated that he was rather angry with himself for not having covered his tracks a little better.

Tony said that he knew the bends of all the policemen in town; at what points they were at certain hours of the night. He had, he declared, been planning to enter Casey's store as soon as a favorable opportunity came.

Mr. Casey left his store shortly after eleven. Tony was near-by, watching him, and keeping an off-eye on the policemen standing on the corner. They went to headquarters for dinner at midnight. This was Tony's chance. He stole to the back of the store through the alley, climbed up a flight of stairs to the door leading into the rear of the apartment in the Abbott building. On the sill of this door, he placed a large stone, so that, in the event of the occupants hearing suspicious noises below, upon opening the door the stone would fall, and apprise him of their coming.

Then he went to the rear of the Casey store, the door of which is secured by a bolt and lock fastened on the inside. With as little noise as possible, he smashed the glass, unfastened the bolt and lock, pried the broken pieces of glass carefully at the side of the stairway, and was soon at the work of looting the place, to do which he allowed himself just fifteen minutes. The police, he figured, would be off their beats about thirty minutes in all, and he wanted a fair margin of time to make sure his escape.

Inside, Tony ransacked the shop, going through all the drawers, Mr. Casey's desk, and helping himself to candy, etc., which he hastily crummed into his pockets. He then departed locking the door after him.

The first the police knew of the theft was early the next morning, when Mr. Casey notified them.

Tony's case seems hopeless. He evidently wants to be an adept crook, and the only curb to his propensity seems to be the Reform School. The authorities have decided to turn him over to the Juvenile Court, and he will probably be given a hearing at Elizabeth tomorrow.

In the meantime, the boy has been paroled in the custody of his parents. His mother, feeling herself powerless to control Tony contemplates sending him back to Italy—a plan which meets with the approval of the local authorities who are anxious to be rid of him for all time.

"This little book was very comprehensively written, and told of the new method of extracting the medicinal elements of the cod's liver from the oil, eliminating the obnoxious oil which is so hard for children to take. "Just the thing," said I, "for my little daughter," and I immediately went for a bottle of Vinol. It helped her wonderfully. She has gained rapidly in flesh and strength, and she does not take cold half so easily. "I am extremely grateful for the good it has done her, and I hope other mothers who have weak, delicate or ailing children will be benefited by my experience and just give Vinol a trial." ## Five Years of Heart Trouble Cured by Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had pains in my left side, and under my shoulder blade, could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath the least exertion would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. When I had taken six bottles I was cured."

MRS. C. C. GORKEY,
Northfield, Va.

If there is fluttering or palpitation it is an indication of a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the heart. It is not necessarily diseased—just weak from over-work. The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. You can make a weak heart strong by taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy. Get a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

Qualities in Men.

A sad nature sheds forth twilight. A merry and nighful nature brings daylight. A suspicious nature insensibly imparts its chill to every generous soul within its reach. A bold and frank nature overcomes meanness in men. Firmness makes them firm. Firmness makes them fine. Taste directs, stimulates and develops taste. —Henry Ward Beecher.

Words and Acts.

Words are good, but they are not the best. The best is not to be explained by words. The spirit in which we act is the highest matter. Action can be understood and again represented by the spirit alone. No one knows what he is doing, while he acts rightly; but of what is wrong we are always conscious. —Goethe.

When Shallowness is Shown Up.

But the fact is, a man may do very well with a very little knowledge, and scarce be found out in a mixed company; everybody is so much more ready to produce his own, than to call for a display of your acquisitions. But in a tete-a-tete there is no shuffling. The truth will out. —Charles Lamb.

WHEN HER BACK ACHES.

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.

Westfield women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Backache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy approach of diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cure all these disorders. Here's a proof of it in a Westfield woman's words:

Mrs. O. E. Simpson, 59 Elmer St., Westfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I had such acute pains in the small of back that I could hardly get around. Dull headaches and dizzy spells also bothered me. Upon arising in the morning I felt just as tired as when I went to bed and my whole system to be run down. A physician whom I consulted told me that my kidneys were disordered but his medicine did not help me in the least. In length learned of Doan's Kidney Pills through a friend who spoke highly of them and I decided to try them. The first box brought me great relief and when I had used several more, there was not the slightest symptom of kidney trouble remaining."

AT M. E. CHURCH APRIL 15.

Accomplished Musicians Who "Delighted" The Former President.

The final entertainment of the Methodist Men's League course will be held Thursday evening, April 15th. The committee has worked hard to make this a fitting climax to the year's fine course, and have engaged the "Leavitt Children," Child Banjoists, who have played for President Roosevelt, and who have been engaged to play before Royalty in their coming tour of Europe. The "Children" were so popular at the Ocean Grove auditorium in 1907 that they were recalled by popular request in 1908 for the Musical Festival where they played to an audience of 10,000 people who repeatedly encored them. President Roosevelt said of the "Children": "You have given the best entertainment ever heard in the White House." Ralph A. Young, tenor; and Mrs. Franklin A. Reed, reader, will also take part in the program.

Plainfield Theatre.

At the Plainfield Theatre, Saturday matinee and night, Messrs. A. G. Delmutter and William Norris will present for the first time a dramatization by Robert M. Baker of George Barr Mc-
Clatchie's widely read romantic novel Beverly of Graustark, a sequel to and quite as charming a story as Graustark.
One of the most talented stars to be seen here this season will appear in the title role. No other than Jessie Busley, who for several years has appeared at the Empire, Lyceum and Daly's theatres,
New York, under the management of Mr. Charles Frohman, and for the past two seasons successfully starred as Nance Olden in the Bishop's Carriage under the management of Liebler and Company.

Miss Busley is supported by a company of well known artists, the majority of whom have appeared in high class productions this season, and Beverly should prove to be the banner attraction of the season at this theatre.

William W. and Joseph Jefferson following in the footsteps of their late father, the dearly beloved Joseph Jefferson, are presenting for their seventh very successful year of starring, Richard Brinsley Sheridan's delicious comedy, "The Rivals." Joseph portrays Sir Lancelot O'Trigger, while valiant "Bob Acres" is acted by the younger brother. They are supported by a cast of unusual excellence and will be the attraction at Plainfield Theatre, April 14.

The most successful play of big city life in the United States yet produced,
"The Man of the Hour," will be again netted for an engagement of one night in the Plainfield Theatre, April 15th, by William A. Brady and Joseph R. Gris-mer's special cast.

"The Man From Home" is the record production of the season. From all sides come reports of its triumphal jour of the country and of the splendid impression it is making. Liebler & Co.
have given it an especially fine cast and stage production, and in every city it has more than sustained the reputation it achieved during its twelve months run in Chicago. It will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre, on April 15th.

Garlic is excellent for cows but it gives milk a bad flavor. Fairfield's Blood Tonic for Cattle Only, fed regularly three-quarters of an hour before milking, prevents all garlic taste or odor in milk or cream. Sold under written guarantee by Patrick Traynor.

Proctor's Theatre, Plainfield.

At the Proctor Theatre, Plainfield, the best moving pictures can be seen.
All the latest films are to be seen, many of them coming direct from the other side. Then there is always two entertaining vaudeville acts, together with the latest up to date illustrated songs.
The travelogue lectures are among the many instructive features that go with the entertainment.

Hard to Tell.

"I was unfortunate in not being able to catch the speaker's eye," said the young statesman. "Well," answered Senator Sorghum, "you can't tell how a speech will turn out. Maybe you were unfortunate and then again maybe you were lucky."

Cold and Fish.

Cold seems to have no effect on several varieties of fish. Perch will live in ponds frozen over all winter;
and the white fish of Canada have been frozen so stiff that they have been brittle enough to break, yet showed signs of life when properly thawed out.

About the Limit of Desire.

How glad the old world must be that the beauty cult keeps alive. Sir Philip Sidney's Stella offered him "service and honor, wonder with delight, fear to offend." These ought to suit any man when accompanied with pink cheeks and bright eyes.

What Does It Mean?

Here is a dreadful looking puzzle:
P A C H T I V T H G U
A C T O N E R A S D R I B
D L O
But it is so easy when you know the answer. Just read backward and you will see at once.

Imitate a Phonograph.

Take a large-sized jug and hold it about three inches away from your mouth. Now speak or sing into it, and the sound as it is forced out of the jug will be found to exactly resemble a talking machine.

Deep Breathing and Digestion.

Deep breathing is an inalienable aid to digestion. It should be indulged in especially after a meal.

quence?" "Well, yes—to himself."—

PRESIDENT TAFT AND THE ALIEN QUESTION.

In his inaugural address, President Taft made a timely suggestion as to the proper method of avoiding international disputes which are likely, under present conditions, to arise through the peculiar nature of the law respecting the protection and rights of aliens who come to this country. This law, while national in its scope, is purely local in application. By it aliens are guaranteed protection by the National Government, but the right either to enforce the law, or to prescribe measures for its enforcement, is reserved to the legislatures of the several states. A notable instance of this is furnished in the recent turmoil in San Francisco, where a purely local condition so enraged the people of that state that the legislature barely defeated the passage of a law which might have involved this country in a war with Japan.

The crisis in San Francisco was averted, for a time at least, by the efforts of the National Government which brought a majority of the San Francisco legislature to view the effects of their action as of National rather than local consequence; but a like situation may soon again be presented, and if, in the meantime, the National Government does not take the law into its hands—what then?

Viewing the situation as too critical to admit of "The Law's Delay," President Taft urges that the law respecting the rights and protection of aliens in this country be so altered that it shall be National both in scope and application. If then conditions arise in a state which in the heat of local controversy and conflict threaten to do mischief to the whole country, the national government, which shall view the question in the large, shall determine the modus operandi by which the conditions are to be relieved and the aggrieved parties satisfied.

There is both reason and justice in President Taft's suggestion. He believes that since the National Government is held responsible for the enforcement of the law, it ought to exercise the discretionary power of equally and equitably administering it.

The Board of Trade might take steps to prevent free excursion Sunday land sales in the South avenue section. This business was carried on extensively last summer, to the chagrin and disgust of patriotic citizens. It is understood the business will be resumed at the old stand as soon as the weather will permit.

Affinities are said to be going out of fashion since the man who discovered them was reported to be a fit subject for the mad-house.

E. R. Perkins' Horses in Trouble.

Mr. E. R. Perkins' team of horses were tangled up on Wednesday night in a tree which blew down upon them while they were going through Westfield avenue to meet Mr. and Mrs. Perkins at the church. At nine o'clock Albert Pierce, coachman for Mr. Perkins, started with the team but was stopped in front of Mr. Tremaine's home by a tree which fell on the horses, tangling them up in its branches. Half an hour was spent in freeing the horses from the entanglement.

As Mr. Payne Views It.

71 South Broad St., Westfield, N. J.
April 6, 1909.
To the Editor of the Standard,
Westfield, N. J.

Dear Sir:—Where, in law, parliamentary or otherwise, ethics or common-courtesy among men, did the Mayor of Westfield find authority for the exercise of the climax of executive arrogance as displayed at the Council meeting on Monday evening when he "overruled" representative citizens of Westfield when they arose to protest against an improvement which meant an unjust and good-sized addition to their tax bills; and this in the very face of his own invitation to the citizens present to address the Council, if they cared to do so. The Mayor cannot excuse his arbitrary attitude on the ground that all protests must be in writing, for where does the authority for this restriction come from? Neither can he set forth that verbal protests "take up the time of Council," for are not these officials elected to listen? Have we not been sermonized by a member of Council upon the need of intelligent public interest in town affairs, and been given to understand that the Council welcomes the co-operation of the people in administering these affairs to their (the public's) satisfaction?

Matters of far less importance than assessments upon the taxpayers have had the rapid attention of Council. From two to three hours were recently given at a meeting to hearing verbal protests against the mere changing of the name of one of our streets—a change not entailing any financial outlay on the part of the residents—but when improvements for which the taxpayers will have to pay are under consideration orders are at once given that only written protests will be received. Why this discrimination?

If these things are to continue, if we are to have exhibitions of executive indifference to the rights of the citizens, if we are to suffer taxation without adequate representation, if the people are to be stultified and ignored in matters which most vitally concern them, the most effective answer to "Why Not Westfield?" is found. "Charity begins at home." "A pleased customer (resident) is the best advertisement." These are axioms as old as the hills about us. Better by far should we see to it that for those already here, Westfield is the best place to live in. Such occurrences as those of Monday evening are not conducive to this belief.

Very truly yours,

JONATHAN PAYNE.

Quality Counts

It counts for more in life insurance than it does in a great many other things. It means:

First: A Policy with the least number of conditions.

Second: A Company's management that interprets that Policy in the broadest possible manner.

Third: Ample financial strength behind the Policy guarantee, speaking for permanence.

Fourth: The privilege of Policy loans at a fair rate of interest (5%).

All these marks of quality, as well as substantial dividends, are found by the man who does business with the New York Life Insurance Company.

NOBODY WAS SUSPECTED

"COURAGE, I shouldn't think of suspecting the nurse," said Mrs. Wilbur. "She seemed such a lovely girl, you know. To be sure, she left the next day, and who had every opportunity, and a young woman of that age, probably looking forward to marriage and a home of her own—naturally, it would be a temptation to take anything of the sort. They are beautiful knives, you know, Richard. I paid $25 a dozen in wholesale, and it was a great reduction, too."

"Suspect her? I should say not!" Wilbur answered as he swung into his overcoat. "I'd as soon accuse our Freddie. Why, she's a lady—and look at the care she's been taking of Katharine the last two weeks."

"I know, and, as I say, I don't suspect her in the least. However, the fact that she seemed so ladylike or that she has taken good care of Katharine has no bearing on the case, in my opinion. There is such a thing as hypocrisy. I suppose you've heard."

But Wilbur was halfway down the steps and escaped being crushed by this sarcasm.

"Kathie, darling," said Mrs. Wilbur to her convalescent daughter, "I want you to look over your jewelry very carefully and see whether you miss anything. I hate to put such an idea into your head about an apparently lovely young woman, but the fact of that pearl-handled, silver-mounted dinner knife having mysteriously disappeared, right when I was doing the work and handling all the dishes myself, is so strange."

"Mother! You don't suspect Miss Darling?" cried her daughter. "The very thought makes me creep about her having been in my room for two weeks."

"Don't be so extreme, child. Of course I don't suspect her. She's probably as honest as you or I, but the knife disappeared when she left, that's all, and I've searched every nook and cranny in the house. I've even looked in the garbage barrel, when I knew all the time I couldn't have thrown it out."

"My high-school class pin's missing, mother," Katharine reported from her bedroom.

"When did you have it last?"

"I'm not sure, but it couldn't have been long before I was taken ill."

Mrs. Wilbur shook her head gravely. "I should be very sorry to believe she took it. And I really don't see what she could want with a high-school pin. It's barely possible you lost it some other way, or it may be found on some waist. Never suspect any one without good reason."

Answering a friend through the telephone next day Mrs. Wilbur said: "Yes—as a nurse—I can recommend her highly. What! You noticed a reservation? Well, I don't like to say any more, especially through the telephone. Somebody might be listening, and I believe in being careful about injuring any one's reputation."

"Oh, it isn't really anything tangible, only I used my best knives for dinner the night before she left, and the maid was away, so that I took them out of the case myself, and I positively know that the whole dozen was there when I set the table. It isn't a case of guessing. If I hadn't seen the entire dozen that night I should think Augusta might have lost one some other time."

"Well, after dinner one was gone. No, I don't suspect Miss Darling, but if I were to do so it wouldn't be so absurd as it seems at first thought. She and two other young women live in a flat together and naturally they would have use for such things. Going from house to house, as a nurse does, you know, one could actually pick up a set."

"My feeling is this: I wouldn't prejudice any one against her for the world, but when you're thinking of having her right in your home it does seem as if I ought to warn you confidentially. Yes, if you can just as well have some one else I should feel easier. If you had her and then missed anything valuable I couldn't help holding myself responsible."

"Augusta, one of my best dinner knives disappeared while you were having your vacation," Mrs. Wilbur informed her maid, who was giving the kitchen floor a thorough scrubbing on the first day of her return. "I don't know where it went, and I don't suspect the nurse we had to take care of Katharine, but—"

"Look at that!" exclaimed Augusta as a clatter followed her moving of the heavy kitchen table.

There on the floor lay the missing knife—unwashed, just as it had come from the dining-room on the night of its disappearance. It had slipped over behind and had been wedged perpendicularly between the leg of the kitchen table and the wall.

"Well!" cried Mrs. Wilbur. "I knew it must be somewhere! And only think what an injustice I might have done Miss Darling if I had allowed myself to suspect her of taking it!"

The Detective-Lover

"Now, I want to know," simpered Miss Clementina Gibson, "what you come courting me for. You're nothing but a boy, and I'm 40."

"You may be a few years older than I am, but you're ten or twelve years this side of 40, and it wouldn't make any difference to me if you were 50. As soon as I saw you I knew you were just the woman for me."

The man was Algernon Sinclair, a youngster of 22. He had known Miss Gibson only a fortnight, but had been very persistent in his attentions during that time. He had appeared one morning at the door of her flat and asked for Miss Gibson.

"I am Miss Gibson." "You're not the Miss Gibson I'm looking for. She's a red-headed, freckle-faced person, while you—well, you're simply beautiful." Miss Gibson snickered and asked the good-natured, cheery young fellow to step in—perhaps she could help him in his search. He did step in and was in no hurry to step out. From that time forward he was devoted to Miss Clementina Gibson.

"Tickets to the theater, to-night," he said one afternoon. "Got a box. We'll be right in among the swells, and you'll have to wear your best clothes. Put on what jewelry you have. Any diamonds? No? Well, I think I see my way clear to get you some before long if a deal I have on hand goes through. Pearls? Oh, a brooch set with pearls! Wear it without fail!"

The young man rattled on in his funny way, quite delighting the elderly lady, who had caught his fancy. When he called for her in the evening he saw her attired in a pearl-silk dress he held up his hands in admiration. The brooch he pronounced "a beauty." "One, two, three, four, five, six, seven—seven pearls, and that big one in the center is a hummer. I'm not going to be ashamed of my girl to-night, you bet. Come on."

Whenever Mr. Sinclair took Miss Gibson out he manifested this same desire that she should be well dressed, and on occasions appropriate for jewelry he begged her to produce some new ornament that she had not worn before. But Miss Gibson was not inclined to wear her best gowns in public.

One day he wrote her a note to say that he would call in the afternoon to take her to ride in an automobile. And wouldn't she wear that dress with the green tulle—"corals and turkeys?" Miss Gibson laughed at his description and put on the dress indicated. Mr. Sinclair called at the hour appointed with a beautiful machine, which he drove himself, and they sailed out into the country. During the ride a man ahead with a camera waved his hat. Sinclair slowed up.

"He wants to take our picture," he said. "Let's have one."

"No, no; we don't want a picture."

"Yes; we do. Fire away, Mr. Photographer."

There was a click, and the picture was taken.

The next day there was a ring at Miss Gibson's door. She opened it and there stood Mr. Sinclair and another man with a warrant for her arrest. She cast an astonished look at Sinclair and turned pale.

"Who and what are you anyway?"

"Robert Williams, detective."

Mr. Williams, recently pretended lover, now only a paid hireling of a wealthy lady who had been robbed by her housekeeper, proceeded to ransack his lady love's premises.

The photograph of the dress with the figure of snakes and turtles had been sent to her employer, who had identified the dress as one of her own.

Mr. Williams found the flat filled with stolen property, all of which belonged to the rich lady in question. The brooch with seven pearls was in a list of jewels he possessed lost by his client, and every one of the half-dozen dresses was on a list of missing gowns.

The detective had been given the preface to this little story book, which was thus: Miss Gibson, housekeeper for Mrs. Bickford, had quarreled with her employer and had left her service vowing vengeance. Some time after her departure the house was entered when the owner was away and a large quantity of property taken.

Considering Miss Gibson's threat, Mrs. Bickford suspected that she had given the information that led to the robbery. Mr. Williams was put on the case and by his skillful handling of it secured the return of thousands of dollars of property and a handsome fee for himself.

Miss Gibson, now doing a term in the penitentiary, has vowed vengeance on the "little whippersnapper," as she calls him, who "talked soft" to her for a brief season only to trap her.

Building by Machinery.

"A recent Canadian invention, worked by two men and a boy, will lay 200 to 600 bricks an hour. Door and window spaces cause only a slight delay. The machine is suited for all plain work, such as walls, sheds, mills, factories, rows of cottages and piers or bridges. Considerable pressure is put upon the bricks, and it is claimed that the work is more firmly done than by hand. The invention will do the work of six or seven skilled bricklayers, and it is believed that a machine adapted to build a factory covering 60 feet by 40 feet could be put on the market for $500.

Going Up!

"You remember how low all the houses are in that little town where you were born," said she. "None of them over two stories. Well, when I told Aunt Jessie that you had moved up to the seventh floor she cried and cried. She didn't sleep a wink the first night, she said, she was so afraid you would fall out the window."

Family and the Meals.

Meals should be something more than the consumption of food. All work stops at those times and people meet together. Nothing that can be done should be omitted to make it an occasion of agreeable interchange of thought and conversation, and when this is done not only the body, but the mind and nerves are refreshed.

Tragic.

In being a success there is no pleasure if a man does not look the part. Prof. Previns, one of Newark's most celebrated scientists, was out walking recently when a flashy stranger said to him: "How often do the Montclair cars pass here, me boy?" Newark (N. J.) News.

Impatience.

How weak we think others are to show impatience! It is so clear to us that impatience in others is a foolish waste of vital force, since it cannot possibly do any good, but we are impatient ourselves, and learn nothing from the folly of others.—Acheson (Kan.) Globe.

For Convalescents.

Little invalids who are on the high-road to recovery, but not yet out of bed, are sometimes difficult to amuse. Try putting a looking-glass where it will reflect outside objects—so that the little one can see them. It often proves a most fascinating amusement.

A Prospective Shelter.

A well-known senator was asked why some politicians were always making such a howl about the preservation of our forests. "Oh," he replied, "they probably never know just when they may have to take to the woods."—Success Magazine.

A Frog.

A little girl was asked to define a frog. "A frog," said she with childish volubility, "is a great big green bug; with its mouth always open, and it's always standing up in front and sitting down behind."—The New York Times.

Must Dwell in Soft Places.

The thrush catches such worms as rashly show themselves above ground; but an ancient ancestor of the snipe found that, if it followed them into marshy lands, it could probe the soft ground and drag them out of their chambers. For this operation it has now a bill three inches long, straight, thin and sensitive at the tip, a beautiful instrument, but good for no purpose except extracting worms from soft ground. If frost or drought hardens the ground, the snipe must starve or travel.—Strand Magazine.

Name That Will Live Long.

Charles Dickens was christened Charles John Hoffman, or Hoffman, as it is erroneously entered in the parish register. But when he became famous he dropped the last two Christian names, as he desired to be known as plain Charles Dickens, a wish respected on his tombstone in Westminster abbey, by his biographer and friend, John Forster, and by the scrupulously accurate "Dictionary of National Biography."

Wasted Energy.

A woman who looked 19 years for a missing husband displayed a determination worthy a better cause, or, perhaps, a better man.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Old Love Letters.

A woman will trust money and jewels to a closet shelf, but she wants her old love letters to be as secure as in a safe deposit vault.—New York Press.

For Study of Mankind.

Would you learn to know yourself, look at mankind and their deeds. Would you learn to know mankind, look into your own heart.—Schiller.

Pie in Boston.

Grief's Garniture.

Wives are such a provoking class of society, for though they are never right they are never more than half wrong.—Thomas Hardy.

Conscience.

Conscience is the amount of innate knowledge we have in us.—Victor Hugo.

Poor Old Hans

By Don Mark Lemon.

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Poor old Hans! Brave old Hans! Food for fire and smoke! Red fire and thick smoke! The big tears crowded to our eyes and we bared our heads to the solemn occasion.

How the fire engines shook and throbbed, as if their great hearts were bursting to know that the flames were gaining on brave old Hans, rare old Hans. Gaining in spite of all their heroic effort.

So raging was that terrible wall of flames that the thick jets of water seemed to turn to smoke and fire, as they hissed against the burning building.

From every window to the eighth floor, red tongues of flame leaped outward, licking the walls and melting the bricks till they ran and fused.

An explosion to the rear of the building had long before swept away the fire-escape, the stairs and elevator shaft were pillars of fire, while the firemen's wooden ladders were licked off at the second joint like straws in a furnace.

Poor old Hans! Honest old Hans! Oh, for an arrow-gun, to have shot him a line of rope! Yet only a coil of steel would have hung intact against those flaming walls, and that in a minute's time would have been a writhing, white-hot serpent of fire.

We thought all had escaped from the fated building and were curiously watching that great torch of timber and brick, when a face suddenly appeared at a window on the ninth floor and looked down on us.

Poor, honest old Hans! We were struck dumb with horror for a moment, then a hoarse shout arose, a shout of sympathy and encouragement. Hans heard it, and he took his pipe from his mouth and nodded his head solemnly.

His lips seemed to say: "Goot pye, poys!" and we groaned at the thought of it—at the pity of it.

Many a man there was who could do the work of Hans, but what man could take the old Dutchman's place in our hearts?

We shouted for him to wait—we would get a life-net for him to leap into. But there was no net! Not even a cheap mattress to break that terrible leap.

He put his pipe back into his mouth. He was taking his last smoke, like a gentleman, a hero and a Dutchman.

"Goot pye, poys!" his honest face seemed to say: "Be goot to yourselves!" Rare old Hans! Gentle old Hans! He had always thought of the meek window where old Hans stood—light, white smoke that was near to flame—but poor old Hans was too old to jump. Better to die where he stood than to be smothered—

His face was gone from the window! Food for fire and smoke! red fire and thick smoke!

Not there he was on the roof, perched on the eaves, had thought of himself. Just an old Dutchman, but his heart was as big as a barrel of stout kraut!

"Jump!" we shouted in desperation. "We'll catch you, Hans! Sure we will!"

The flames had reached the ninth floor, and smoke was coming from the ing down at us. He had taken his last stand!

Poor old Hans. Who owed him money—and which of us did not?—would never need to pay him now, and we who owed him love—and which of us did not?—were too late to repay him!

Food for fire and smoke! He who deserved to have died in bed peacefully, with his friends, his pipe and his favorite stein near him.

He leaned far out from the building. He was going to jump?—ten stories to the rock-paved street below!

We shouted for him to wait—wait one instant until we could bring a net—a mattress—anything to break that terrible fall. But the roar of the hungry flames and not our despairing shout must have reached him, for suddenly his feet left the edge of the roof.

Poor old Dutchman! We would never drink beer with him again, never borrow another dollar of him, never again fill our pipes with his best tobacco! Never!

Why, what in heaven's name!—Another instant we were a mob of yelling, gesticulating madmen, falling on one another's necks and pointing upward and laughing through our tears.

Dashed to death on the rock-paved street! Food for fire and smoke! Not Hans! He came sailing gently down over our heads, smoking his pipe, with his favorite stein in his hand.

"It's yooost as easy—when you're a Dutchman, poys!" he smiled. We unstrapped him from the big parachute that he had always kept stowed away under his bed, and then we nearly mobbed that prelate-eating Dutchman.

Medicine.

Medicine: Art of correctly curing. If a man were cured of a cruel malady by remedies of old women, or charlatans, all the vials of the faculty's indignation should fall on his head.—Charles Narrey.

A LITTLE GOLD HISTORY

Rogers awoke unusually early. He felt wretched. His head ached, his ears rang, the hot and cold shivers took turns running up and down his back, and his feet were like ice.

Many a man in a big city knows what it is to be ill in a fourth-story hall room of a boarding house, and that is just where Rogers was. He had occupied this same hall room long enough to become acquainted with all the boarders. While he had been intimate with none, he always had been willing to lend a helping hand to all, his board had been paid promptly, and he never had forgotten to tip the servants.

Well, to go back to the pancakes, he tossed about from 6 to 7, bemoaning his dismal state, and then fell into a troubled sleep that brought dreams of home, comfort and mother. His sleep was interrupted by the inward consciousness that some one was looking at him, and he opened his eyes to find three of the men boarders staring at him.

"What's the matter?" they asked in chorus.

"Sick. Cold," was Rogers' reply.

"Feel shivery?" they inquired.

He nodded his head.

"We'll fix you," and they disappeared to presently return and dose him with whisky and quinine, wrap his "little Mary" in red flannel and put hot water bags to his feet. "Lie there," they said, and then left, leaving the door on a crack, so Rogers could call in case of need.

Rogers' feet began to send up a genial warmth, which rapidly ascended until it reached the waist line, and there, mingling with the heat produced by the whisky, the two, hand in hand, traveled up his back until he was all aglow and became drowsy.

Bang, went the door and in came the chambermaid.

"What, are ye not up yet?" was her greeting.

"No, get out. I am sick," was Rogers' wall.

Peace reigned for an hour and his glow became a burning heat and his thirst was at a premium, but he was not to suffer, as just then old Maria came in. Poor soul, she sold tracts for a living and he had lent a week's board to her.

She had hot mustard water for his feet and hot lemonade for his thirst.

As he was dallying with these two cures his breakfast arrived. Some little bird must have spread the news of his illness throughout the house.

Whisky and hot lemonade are not a very sure foundation for liver, bacon, eggs and the things that go with them, but Rogers had to make some pretense eating, as the waiter's solicitude as to Rogers' welfare was as large as the breakfast he had brought.

Then Rogers thought he would follow directions and "lie there" and try to sleep. While he lay there he heard a heavy footstep approaching, which he recognized as that of the landlady. She had a hot onion poultice for his chest and some milk toast, as he had eaten no breakfast.

The landlady stayed and consoled while Rogers ate the milk toast, and then left with the promise that the servants should be at his beck and call, which was unnecessary, as one of them appeared every 15 minutes to attend to his wants.

Did you ever lie ill abed in a small room with your "little Mary" in open revolt at the treatment she had received and your olfactory nerves assailed by the fumes of hot onions? What to do with the onions he did not know, but when one of the servants brought in a bunch of violets, he was in despair, when the trained nurse entered the room to offer her assistance.

She took the onions and violets out in the hall, where they had more space to quarrel over their individual scents, and then quickly washed his face and hands, brushed his hair, rolled him back and forth in the bed until she had remade it with clean sheets and fresh pillow cases. Then the room was aired and tidied up.

"Now, take this medicine," she said; "and you will go to sleep," and he did.

He awoke at 5 in the afternoon feeling like a different man, and as he sat up in bed and looked around the room he quickly perceived how soundly he had slept, as his bureau was decorated with a large dish of oranges, guarded by two bottles of whisky, Scotch and Irish. On the window sill stood a red flowering plant, the washstand was covered with grapes, lemons and a jar of beef tea; and as he sat there with a glad smile, thinking about these kindly gifts and who had sent them, he heard voices outside the door.

It was the Frenchwoman whom he had taught the difference between a sitting man and a setting hen. She wanted to give him "one little pill, the grand cure for la grippe," and the chambermaid was telling her that he was not to be disturbed.

"Give it here," he yelled, and he went to sleep a little later, holding the pill in his hand.

He awoke at night. The landlady brought a bit of broiled chicken, which he ate with a relish, and then some of the men boarders came in, each with his little gift or sympathetic word; and at ten o'clock Rogers said "good night" and went to sleep and slept like an unrolled log until morning, when he awoke feeling like a lark.

Every story points to a moral and this one is that if you cast your bread around a boarding house sea you must not object if it is returned to you in one huge wave.

Status of Korean Miner.

The Korean miner possesses all the good qualities of a miner with very few of his defects, being physically strong and very easy to handle. As regards the amount of work done, it is estimated that two Korean miners are more than equal to one white miner.

The Veggman.

A "vegg" or "veggman" might be defined as a cross between a tramp and a burglar. "Veggmen" travel about the country always by stealing or begging rides on freight trains, and their operations are generally confined to banks or postoffices in the smaller towns.

Daily Thought.

"Neatness in moderation is a virtue, but when it is carried to excess it shows littleness of mind. Good taste rejects nicety; it treats little things as little things, and is not hurt by them."—Fenelon.

Frugal Wife.

A sick peasant motions feebly to his wife to approach his bedside, and whispers, painfully: "I think, my dear, I could fancy a little broth." "My dear, what do you want of broth? Hasn't the doctor just given you up?"

Courage at the Counter.

Success never yet came to the man who lost courage at the first rebuff; but many men have courted failure by allowing the inevitable disappointments of an imperfect world to check their efforts.—From the Grocer.

Heaven.

The desire to get to heaven would be more general than it is if a good many people were not of the opinion that the gold with which the streets there are paved must be nailed down.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Mr. F. G. Fritts, Oneonta, N. Y., writes: "My little girl was greatly benefited by taking Foley's Orino Laxative, and I think it is the best remedy for constipation and liver trouble."

Foley's Orino Laxative is best for women and children, as it is mild, pleasant and effective, and is a splendid spring medicine as it cleanses the system and clears the complexion. Sold by all druggists.

Arctic Cold.

Water thrown upon ice in the arctic regions will crack it, just as boiling water breaks glass. This happens because the ice is so much colder than the water.

Certainly Not Overlooked.

"In short, sir, we go in far too little for what Matthew Arnold calls sweetness and light." "I don't see that—sugar and oil are the two biggest trusts we support."—Life.

Passive Virtue Discredited.

I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, unexercised and unbreathed, that never sallies out and seeks her adversary.—Milton.

Rubber.

Rubber is a queer product. It thrives best in the hottest countries in the tropics; yet it cannot stand heat. In 1908 we imported $37,000,000 worth.

Charity and Love.

Without dew and light flowers fade. Charity and love are the dew and light of the human heart.—Mme. de Gentils.

Money and Knowledge.

Money and knowledge are wholly unlike in that the less knowledge one has the easier it is to pick up more.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Ravages of Field Vermin.

The department of agriculture estimates that the ravages of field mice and rats entail a direct loss of $20,000,000 annually.

report of the Company on the Audit of the Town's books. The price to be paid for this work is $100.

The Town Clerk was authorized to notify the Newark Bill Poster Co. that the Council did not think the license fee of $100 for bill posters was prohibitive. This was in answer to a letter from that Company protesting against the heavy fee.

James R. Dary was granted a back license by Council.

It would be impossible to give a list of the ordinances taken up and discussed. There were enough of them to fill an entire edition.

What Am I Going To Wear, This Spring?

Seriously, do you know a more important question that you could ask yourself?

Of course, Food is the first necessity of man's existence; but Raiment is the second; and if food is most vital to life, Apparel is usually more important to modern LIVING.

The whole social structure, today, acknowledges its obligation to, and dependence upon, CLOTHES. And we place the crown of our allegiance upon that particular quality of clothes which we call "FASHIONS."

Today, in every walk of life, it is IMPERATIVE that people wear THE RIGHT CLOTHES. That is why THE STUDY OF CLOTHES is now engrossing such serious attention, from men and women.

The Wanamaker Store Is Today The Store Of Correct Fashions

Here, on public view, is the best apparel, for men, women and children, that our experts have assembled from the foremost sources of supply on both sides of the ocean.

At WANAMAKER'S the student of style sees what is correct and authoritative, elaborately and exhaustively displayed, including much that is shown exclusively here.

To intelligently answer the question, "What Am I Going to Wear This Spring?" it is absolutely necessary to see and examine the Clothes and Accessories of Dress now on view at WANAMAKER'S.

THE MAN'S STORE.

Main floor, New Building.

The NEW PAQUIN SPOT FOULARDS have been made famous by several of Paquin's exquisite silk dresses. We saw the gowns abroad and imported the fouldards immediately. They are being called square spots, because of the different arrangement of the square effect produced by the printing. They are shown in two sizes, in black-and-white, navy-blue-and-white, French blue, and old rose and white. 23 inches wide, $1 a yard.

Beautiful new printings are here in Faconne Fouldards, in our own special designs, printed for us in Lyons, France, in small, all-over designs, such as are demanded by the foreign dressmakers this Spring. Shown in twelve new colorings, 42 inches wide, $2 a yard.

A beautiful collection of French hand-embroidered Shantung Silk Robes has just been received. These dresses are shaped, largely, made up and every helpful suggestion provided for the easy finishing of the gown. Some are in one-piece Empire style, others have waist and skirt. They can be laundered like muslin. $25 and $35.

Also an attractive group of new heavy-weight Shantung Silk Imported Coats, demi-made, at $35. Silk Store, first floor, Old Building.

KHAKI IS THE COMING SEASON'S DOMINANT COLOR. We have watched the quiet trend towards the khaki tones—the famous cloth of the British army—in dress fabrics for months. Now it is about to reach its climax, and we are ready for it. You have already seen it in the great demand for Shantungs—the natural color of the raw Chinese silk. In the present superb exhibition of Paris gowns, several of the most wonderful costumes are in the pleasant, effective khaki shades.

Now just to emphasize, as an established fact, something that you have long suspected, and make you say "why, of course," we are showing you today

KHAKI SHADES IN PERHAPS FIFTY OF THE FASHIONABLE MATERIALS AND QUALITIES OF WOOL AND COTTON DRESS GOODS FOR SPRING AND SUMMER.

It is a wonderful, stimulating exhibition, suggesting in broadest manner the possibilities of this attractive and practical color for Summer gowns.

CRUCIFIXION SUPERBLY SUNG.

Hans Kronold's Cello Solos Entrance Artistic Performance.

Stainer's "Crucifixion" was splendidly sung by the boys' choir of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, assisted by six men of the choir of All Angels Episcopal church, Wednesday night. An artistic performance was greatly enhanced by the beautiful cello solos and accompaniment of Hans Kronold. The church was crowded.

The soloists were John Bland, tenor, and Albert Walsli, bass, of New York. Robert W. Harden, of Westfield, also sang some of the minor parts and Master William Bachman sang the offertory solo, "Cavalry" in good voice. Hunter Delatour, the organist of the church, accompanied Mr. Kronold in his solos, introductory to the cantata: Handel's "Largo," and "The Romance" from Tannhauser. Rev. Sydney Cross, rector of the church, played the organ during the singing of the cantata.

There were thrilling moments during the evening. Mr. Kronold's solos placed the audience in a finely receptive mood, and the work of the soloists was expressive of the power and dramatic power of the work. The singing of the chorus, "The Processional to Cavalry," the tenor solo, "King Ever Glorious," the recitative by tenor, bass and chorus, "When Jesus Saw His Mother," and the quartette "God So Loved the World" are deserving of special mention. The quartette consisted of Master William Bachman, soprano; Mrs. Robert W. Harden, alto; Harry King, tenor; and Robert W. Harden, bass.

Dorcas Society Elects Officers.

The annual meeting of the Dorcas Society was held in the Presbyterian parish house last Wednesday afternoon. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. W. O. Reed, president; Mrs. J. T. Wilcox, vice president; Miss Emma Johnson, treasurer; Mrs. G. Ludlow, secretary; Mrs. G. B. Dickerson, chairman of directresses. After business a short entertainment was given by members. Mrs. Harry Taylor, piano solo; Mrs. J. O. Ketcham, vocal solo; readings by Mrs. W. W. Striker, Mrs. G. Ludlow and Mrs. H. E. D. Jackson. Tea was served.
