Robert L. Rooke, Financier and Philanthropist, Becomes 100 Tomorrow; He Helped to Make Merrill Lynch the Nation's Largest Brokerage Firm

Donated Swimming Pool to Westfield Young Men's Christian Association Over 60 Years Ago, Served as a Trustee of Bucknell University for 43 Years, a Record, and Gave Chapel to School

Robert L. Rooke, a legend in the world of finance and philanthropy, will mark his 100th birthday tomorrow at a party given by his family in Morristown.

Born In Small Town

Mr. Rooke, a 65-year resident of Westfield, was born in a small town in Pennsylvania, Winfield, on the banks of the Susquehanna River. His father and his grandfather operated limestone quarries in the town, the product of which was used early on to smelt iron ore.

A 1913 Bucknell Graduate

Mr. Rooke attended Lewisburg High School and went on to graduate in 1913 from Bucknell University which was located in the town.

He worked shortly for General Electric Company in Schenectady, New York, served briefly with the United States Navy and, after his discharge, took a job with Public Service Electric and Gas Company in Elizabeth.

His Career Began With an Ad

In 1919 he answered a newspaper advertisement for a statistician's job with the original Merrill Lynch firm in New York City, starting a long career with the firm.

Became a Partner in 1928

Mr. Rooke became a partner of the firm in 1928 when he purchased a seat on the New York Stock Exchange.

In 1930 he opened an office for Merrill Lynch in Newark and continually had been associated with that office until January of this year.

A History of Giving

His son, Robert C. Rooke, says his father took a joy in making gifts to charitable institutions, starting with the donation of the Rooke Pool at the Westfield Young Men's Christian Association about the time of the Great Stock Market Crash.

Named Bucknell Trustee in 1934

Mr. Rooke became a trustee of Bucknell in 1934 and has been a major benefactor of the school ever since. The university recently named the elementary building in his honor.

Mr. Rooke went on to donate a chapel on the Bucknell campus in honor of his mother and father.

He served as a trustee of Bucknell for 43 years which is believed to be the longest tenure of any trustee in the school's history.

He Married in 1921

Seventy years ago, Mr. Rooke married the former Miss Alice Withington in Sunbury, Pennsylvania, and they are still together. Mrs. Rooke celebrated her 101st birthday on April 8 of this year.

Came to Town in the Twenties

Mr. and Mrs. Rooke came to town in 1925 and maintained a home on Hillside Avenue for many years. The couple recently became residents of Florida, but still maintain an apartment in town.

The couple have three children, Mrs. Dorothy Anne McCulloch, Robert C. Rooke and William W. Rooke.

Mr. Rooke has been a member of the Echo Lake Country Club since the late twenties.

A 70-Year Perspective

In his seven decades at Merrill Lynch, he has seen the company evolve into one of the country's largest financial services firms, with $7 billion in revenues and 44,000 employees. It's brokerage subsidiary, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, is the biggest brokerage firm in the world.

But when it hired Robert Rooke in 1919, Merrill, Lynch — it still had the comma between Merrill and Lynch — had just five partners, including Charles E. Merrill and Edmund C. Lynch.

"I had gotten out of the Navy and didn't know anything about finance or stocks, but friends said I might like Wall Street. So I would go to the library at 9 and stay there until 9 in the night reading books about it," Mr. Rooke said.

Was a Terrible Salesman

"They hired me as a salesman. I would go uptown to somewhere like the Flatiron Building and run through the names I'd see on the doors, asking if so-and-so were in as if I knew him, even though I had never heard of him," Mr. Rooke said.

"I was too conscientious. It was awful. I was terrible at selling, and no one had heard of Merrill Lynch. I wasn't even earning the $50 a month they were paying me."

Luckily, Merrill, Lynch's research department — which ac-

Area Authors Pen Story of List Murders

By R. R. FASZCZEWSKI
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Last summer's trial of John List in the Union County Courthouse in Elizabeth brought back memories many Westfielders have been trying to forget since the accountant murdered his wife, mother and three children in their Hillside Avenue home in November of 1971.

The story's details began to unravel on that fateful night 18 years ago and which reached its zenith when the former Sunday School teacher who had escaped undetected from the area, established a new identity as Robert Clark, remarried and was living in Denver when the tale of his brutal crime was broadcast on one of List's favorite television shows, "America's Most Wanted," and his Denver neighbors recognized him and turned him in to police.

Now historian, Dr. James P. Johnson of Westfield, and Mountainside author, Timothy B. Benford, have written the definitive story of the List murders in a new volume, Righteous Carnage, which will be released soon by Charles Scribner's Sons of New York City.

Dr. Johnson, a professor at the City University of New York and the author of Westfield: From Settlement to Suburb, also has written histories of Lee Harvey Oswald, Richard M. Nixon and Herbert Hoover.

Mr. Benford is the author of six books, including the novel, Hitler's Daughter, which recently was made into a television movie.

The authors interviewed 130 people, including law enforcement officials and neighbors who had not spoken to any other chroniclers of the case.

They reveal the murderous workings of a criminal mind, reaching back into List's past to detail the religious training that together with the stifling love of an overprotective mother warped his sense of right and wrong.

The book reveals that Mrs. Helen List was a promiscuous woman who ridiculed her mate for his weaknesses as a husband and provider.

It notes that their three children resisted the strict discipline John List thought essential, points out that financial ruin threatened this father's fragile emotional stability and recreates the circumstances that led an unbalanced father to seek his family's eternal salvation in an act of righteous carnage.

One facet of the List drama, which could have prevented the slaughter, is revealed in the epilogue of the book by Westfield Leader publisher, Kurt C. Bauer.

Mr. Bauer purchased the List property after it was destroyed in a fire a year after the murders and has been an art collector for many years and owns an antiques business housed in the same building as the newspaper.

On a visit to the List mansion at a much earlier time, Mr. Bauer discovered that the stained glass ceiling in the ballroom was a signed Louis Comfort Tiffany, whose sale back in 1971 could have netted John List $100,000, enough to pay off his mortgages and still allowed him to keep the house and a modest bank account.

It also could have eliminated the raison d'etre for the murders — List's financial ruin.

DAY TO REMEMBER...Mr. Rooke is shown before his 1934 Packard Victoria 12 which he drove back to Westfield that year from Detroit. The car is considered one of the great classics of American car design.

Teacher Pact May Receive Okay Soon

Two-Year Contract Covering 380 Staffers Expires June 30; Negotiations Are Continuing

By R. R. FASZCZEWSKI
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Although a settlement in talks between the Westfield Board of Education and the Westfield Education Association on a new contract for the 380 teachers, librarians, nurses, psychologists and guidance counselors who are represented by the association is expected shortly, health benefits are proving to be a slight sticking point, according to Michael Seiler, the President of the association.

Health Benefits a Major Focus

Health benefits and salary increases are the major topics of discussion in negotiations sessions, two of which are scheduled before the end of June, according to Mr. Seiler.

He noted, however, that there has been "some movement" on the part of the board lately on the health benefits issue and a settlement is expected soon.

"Progress is being made in the negotiations," Dr. Mark C. Smith, the Superintendent of Schools said, "All parties recognize the difficulties Westfield and other communities face in the light of changes brought about in state aid under the Quality Education Act. We anticipate that the percentage increase in salaries will be below the increases agreed to two years ago when the current contract was signed to reflect the changes in the economy and the effect of the Quality Education Act."

Dr. Smith added that a "powerful message has been received by the board from the electorate on health benefits expenditures and we are looking for a significant adjustment in this area."

Current Salary Levels Outlined

Under the current contract, which expires on Sunday, June 30, for the 1989-1990 school year association members received a 9.5 per cent salary increase and for the 1990-1991 year a 9.3 per cent increase.

The Union County average for the 1989-1990 school year was a 9.29 per cent increase, according to the board's Public Information Office.

Teacher salaries for 1989-1990 ranged from $24,658 to $52,549 and for 1990-1991 from $26,463 to $56,397 advancing from the bottom to the top of the scale based on degrees, qualifications and years of service in 13 steps.

As a result of the last contract, according to the Public Information Office, an extra school day was added to give the town 181 days versus the 180 required by state law and 10 minutes of instruction time were added to the beginning of the school day.

Comparison Made To Other Staff Members

Comparing salaries of teachers and those of other staff members who belong to the association to those of administrators in the town schools, one will find that department head salaries for 1990-1991 range from $58,332 to $63,697, according to Dr. Smith, and the number of department head positions will be reduced from 15 to 12 for the 1991-1992 school year.

He noted the salaries of the elementary school principals range from $70,728 to $78,862, the Edison Intermediate School Principal receives $83,340 per year, the Roosevelt Intermediate School Principal $89,157 and the Westfield High

New Census Figures Won't Save House Seat

New estimates of New Jersey's population which could lead to an adjustment of last year's national census by the Commerce Department will not add enough residents to the roles to allow the state to continue to retain its 14 seats in the United States House of Representatives.

However, the change could help the state's largest cities, which face a loss of aid because of residents missed by census takers.

The figures represent new estimates released by the Census Bureau.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher has until Monday, July 15, to decide whether to adjust last year's census using the new numbers.

The adjustment would give New Jersey 105,812 more residents, according to the report, which drew a mixed response from state officials.

Despite the boost, the state still would be 61,624 people short of the mark needed to retain its 14th seat in the House of Representatives, according to an analysis by Election Data Services, Inc., a political consulting firm.

New Jersey will likely lose a seat because other states grew faster during the 1980s.

The proposed adjustment would be applied nationwide and larger increases counted in other states would leave New Jersey with a smaller share of the nation's overall population than it has in the existing census.

The Census Bureau originally counted 7,730,188 people in New Jersey, or 3.1 per cent of all Americans.

But adjusted upwards to 7,836,000, New Jersey's population would make up less than 3.09 per cent of the national population.

The percentage decline would reduce the state's share of federal program dollars distributed by population.

The state is a plaintiff in a lawsuit in federal court in New York City demanding that Mr. Mosbacher adjust the census upward.

State officials have contended that census takers missed even more urban dwellers than the Census Bureau has accounted for with various alternative population estimates.

In addition, more than 200 of the state's 567 municipalities are challenging their local tallies.

But Republicans in New Jersey's Legislature oppose a statistical adjustment and want Mr. Mosbacher to stick with the initial counts.

The last figures show that the percentage of people missed in the initial census was smaller in New Jersey than the national average.

Although the national census missed an average of 2.1 per cent of the population, it passed over 1.4 per cent of New Jersey's residents, the Census Bureau reported.

However, in the state's four cities with populations above 100,000, which make up 10 per cent of the entire population, the undercount rates were higher than average:

•In Paterson, the census missed 4.2 per cent of the residents. An adjustment would increase the count from 140,891 to 147,000.

•In Newark, the state's largest city, the Census Bureau estimates that it missed 3.8 per cent of the population.

An adjustment would boost the count from 275,221 to 286,000.

Correcting a 3 per cent undercount for surrounding Essex County would bring the county population count up from 778,206 to 802,000, the report said.

•In Jersey City, an adjustment of 3.6 per cent would increase the population count from 228,537 to 237,000.

Correcting for a 2.6 per cent undercount in surrounding Hudson County would boost the county population from 553,099 to 568,000.

•In Elizabeth, a 1.8 per cent adjustment would mean the population count increases from 110,002 to 112,000.

Town Boy Charged In Somerset Beating

A 16-year-old boy from Westfield was arrested last Tuesday on charges of attempted murder, burglary, robbery and aggravated assault in connection with the baseball bat beating of a couple in their Montgomery home.

Police said the Westfield boy and a Montgomery teenager who also was arrested in the incident knew each other from attending the Carrier Foundation's Day School for emotionally troubled youth in Montgomery together.

The incident began early Monday evening when the Montgomery boy said he "wanted to kill someone," Somerset County Prosecutor Nicholas L. Bissell said.

The boys set out, armed with a baseball bat, for the Sleepy Hollow Lane neighborhood of the Belle Meade section of Montgomery.

They reportedly hid the bat in a wooded area and walked around to find out what house they wanted to break into.

After trying to break into two other homes on the street, the boys entered the window of the home belonging to Mr. and Mrs. William Germann through an open kitchen window, police said.

They then went upstairs, saw the couple sleeping and went back out to retrieve the bat from its hiding place a half mile away and came back.

The Germanns had retired for the night when they were awakened by whispers and saw two masked people standing in the doorway of their bedroom, police said.

Mrs. Germann screamed and was hit in the head with the bat, and then her husband was hit.

After a brief struggle with Mr. Germann, the intruders ran away.

The couple was taken to the Medical Center at Princeton, where Mrs. Germann was treated for a fractured skull, and Mr. Germann underwent surgery for a broken elbow.

Mr. Germann is 45 years old and his wife, Mrs. Tamara Germann, is 33.

Mr. Bissell said he will file a motion to have the boys tried as adults.

Eye Openers

VISION CHANGES AS WE AGE

Most people find it more difficult to focus on reading matter as they get older. Presbyopia - the formal name for the loss of the ability of the eye to refocus completely for clear vision at near distances - is the most common change as the eyes age, and most people can expect to wear reading glasses sooner or later.

Most surprise to most people is that distance vision changes, too. A nearsighted person, approaching the age of 50, may need a weaker prescription for distance. His or she may even find that distance vision seems clearer when the glasses are removed. It is most unusual, however, for older eyes to improve to the point where glasses are no longer needed for distance.

People who have been farsighted all their lives will probably begin to need glasses at this age for distance as well as for near vision. Excessive farsightedness causes blurring and eye strain at both distance and near. Incidentally, this kind of farsightedness is quite different from presbyopia.

Regular optometric examination is recommended so that your eyeglass prescriptions can keep pace with normal changes in the way you see. The optometrist will also test older eyes for such vision-related problems as glaucoma.

Greek Orthodox Church Gets Addition Approval

By MICHAEL J. PETRIANO, 3RD
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Monday's meeting of the Board of Adjustment, Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church, at 250 Gallows Hill Road, was given permission to erect an addition without adding the required three additional parking spaces.

Representing the church was attorney William Butler, who cited several New Jersey state laws in defense of the building application.

Richard Solon, of 1025 Harding Street, which is adjacent to the church, objected to the proposed addition because of a possible increase in noise due to the air conditioning system, which Mr. Solon thought would be increased in size.

Mr. Butler responded there would be no increase, keeping the noise level the same.

The board questioned Mr. Butler about the lack of parking spaces, since the town requires one parking space for every 90 square feet of floor area.

After further debate, the board granted the church permission to build the addition.

James Nolte, of 328 Temple Place was represented by attorney Joseph J. Triarsi, in his application to erect an addition to a two-family house.

Because of a violation, with over 30 percent coverage of the lot by the building proposed, the application was denied.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Satty of 748 Crescent Parkway, were given permission to erect a deck in violation of the requirements of the land use ordinance, provided that decks not cover more than 22 percent of a lot.

Donald W. Rinaldo of 609 West Broad Street was given permission to erect a deck, also in violation of the land use ordinance.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ryan of 535 Parkview Avenue were granted permission to erect an addition.

Michael Panagos of 6 Bell Drive proposed an addition to replace an existing deck.

A neighbor asked Mr. Panagos if large power equipment would be used in building the addition because of the proximity of the Panagos home to his.

Mr. Panagos said where there were space limitations for large equipment hand tools would be used. The application was accepted.

Mr. and Mrs. Steven Alch of 110 Golf Edge were given permission to erect an addition.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Haas of 1710 Boulevard received permission to erect a second floor addition, which plans showed would not go beyond the footprint of the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Infantino of 316 Connecticut Street were given permission to erect an addition, including a two-door garage that would house four automobiles.

Mr. and Mrs. David Newingham of 716 Standish Avenue were granted permission to erect an addition.

Mr. and Mrs. James Giaimo of 592 Terrace Place, who applied for an addition in 1988, appeared again before the board and were given permission to erect an addition to their home.

The Board of Adjustment will reconvene on Monday, July 15.

School Board To Discuss Foundation

Discussion of the formation of an independent, non-profit, community-based organization dedicated to raising private donations to maintain and enhance the quality of education for students in the Westfield Public Schools heads the list of agenda items for the Westfield Board of Education's special meeting on Tuesday, June 25.

Board President, Mrs. Susan H. Pepper, noted the school board has been interested in the formation of a foundation to raise private funds for education since last August when the board developed strategies to deal with the effects of Governor James J. Florio's new school funding law, the Quality Education Act.

In addition to Mrs. Pepper, the special board ad hoc committee looking into the formation of a foundation includes G. Bruce McFadden and Dr. B. Carol Molnar.

"Board members have met with the trustees from the Westfield Foundation," Mrs. Pepper noted, "the foundation has agreed to manage funds raised by the Education Fund of Westfield once it gets established."

The education fund will operate separately from the Westfield Foundation.

After trustees are appointed, bylaws will be developed and the necessary legal work will be done to form the non-profit education fund.

The Board of Education plans to appoint a broad-based townwide initial Board of Trustees for the Education Fund, the Board President said, adding that the committee is interested in obtaining names of citizens who would like to serve on the initial board and/or participate in the education fund's efforts.

Those interested in either serving as a Trustee or participating in the education fund are urged to submit their names, in writing, to Mrs. Pepper at 302 Elm Street by Tuesday, July 30.

Council Adopts Budget Which Will Drop Taxes By 42.5 Per Cent in 1991

Relief for Homeowners May Only Be Temporary As Town Is Forced to Spend Entire Surplus

By R.R. FASZCZEWSKI
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

The Town Council had good news and bad news for Westfield's taxpayers on Tuesday night.

The good news is property tax bills for municipal services, which are about 20 per cent of the overall tax bill, will drop about 42.5 per cent this year.

The bad news is state-mandated changes in the way the town handles its surplus will lead to substantial tax increases in four years.

Council voted Tuesday on a 1991 municipal budget which includes an extra $3,959,269 appropriated from surplus this year to offset property taxes and $918,932 in increased state aid resulting from the reformulation of the Quality Education Act.

The budget includes $5,350,193 to be raised in taxes in support of the municipal budget, down $4,878,188 or 47.69 per cent from the amount anticipated when the budget was introduced in March, $3,956,762 or 42.514 per cent less than the amount of property taxes required in 1990.

State review of the budgets of New Jersey's municipalities resulted in mandates to drastically reduce surplus to offset property tax increases this year, council Finance Chairman William Jubb Corbet, Jr. said Tuesday.

Mandates from the state to virtually eliminate all the town's surplus in the next four years, however, Councilman Corbet said, could result in a "destitute situation" and a dramatic increase in taxes needed to support the budget at that time.

Spending down the surplus, the Councilman said, will result in the loss of approximately $1.2 million in investment revenue the town receives each year from this money.

The town must forward 100 per cent of taxes due them to the Board of Education and the County when requested, Second ward Councilman Garland C. "Bud" Boothe, Jr. said.

Therefore, when its surplus is drawn down, and if tax collection rates fall below the 97 to 98 per cent level they currently are at, the town will have to reduce services it provides.

The surplus mandate, Third Ward Councilman Kenneth L. MacRitchie said, was "folly," because it would force the town to "live hand to mouth" and allow no money to meet emergencies.

Fourth Ward Councilman James Hely, the council's only Democrat, said his colleagues did not appreciate the fact that property taxes finally were dropping after increases which have averaged 10 per cent per year over the last several years.

"We are changing the way taxes are collected in the state," he added, "and while the system is not perfect it is resulting in lower county and municipal taxes probably for the first time since many Westfielders bought their homes."

He also noted that in order to trim the state budget Governor James J. Florio possibly will have to reduce the state workforce by 9,000 people.

Although he was glad to see no increase in property taxes this year, First Ward Councilman David A. Mebane said without the surplus the town would have to develop a new strategy to service its debt and control expenditures.

Without the surplus, Third Ward Councilman Gary Jenkins said, the town would face tough choices and it might not be able to maintain its infrastructure.

It was not fiscally responsible, Councilman Boothe added, to force the town to spend its liquid assets just to gain a tax reduction of $40 to $80 per home in Westfield.

Main Street Program May Provide Impetus for Renewed Downtown

Even though Westfield's central business district is one of the most attractive and well-maintained in the area, it has seen a bit of a decline in recent years with retail sales dropping, buildings deteriorating and overall vitality decreasing.

Many surrounding communities, such as Summit, Cranford and Madison, have undertaken ambitious central business district revitalization programs.

The Westfield Area Chamber of Commerce is considering the promotion of such a program for the town under the National Trust for Historic Preservation's Main Street program.

This non-profit process is designed to improve all aspects of a downtown through government and business cooperation and organization, promotion, design and economic restructuring.

On Wednesday, June 26, at 8 p.m. the Chamber of Commerce will hold an informational meeting on the Main Street Program in the Municipal Building.

We think the Main Street program is worth exploring, and we urge all business owners and town officials to give it a fair hearing to determine if it suits the needs of Westfield.—R.R.F.

Nation's Movies, Videos Being Pirated Abroad

Report from Washington

By Representative Matthew J. Rinaldo

One of the nation's most sought-after products throughout the world is becoming a victim of its own success. American-made movies and video programs that earned $6.7 billion in international trade last year are being illegally copied at an alarming rate.

With production costs skyrocketing and profit margins sinking, the American film industry is being sold off to the highest bidders. Recently, a the Sony Corporation became the new owner of Columbia Pictures and Matushita Electric Company purchased MCA Inc., the giant entertainment conglomerate, for $6.1 billion. American companies, including smaller, independent film producers, are being robbed of millions by those who illegally copy and pirate their films and videos.

Electronic black box copy devices that are sold commercially in this country give movie pirates easy pickings. Movie industry officials estimate that the loss to their industry form domestic piracy is over $600 million a year. No one can accurately put a figure on the overseas losses, but it is believed to be twice as high, at $1.2 billion or more annually.

The worst offenders of movie copyrights are India, China, Thailand and Indonesia. Copies of United States films and videos are cheaply reproduced in those countries with dubbed language and sold around the globe. In the last few years, United States trade representatives have been successful in demanding that Korea and Taiwan honor our nation's copyright laws, and they are making some efforts to crack down on video pirates.

The loss of huge amounts of income hurts America's balance of payments, and it contributes to higher prices for theater tickets and video cassettes. The Video Software Dealers Association claims that piracy is responsible for an average loss of $36,000 for every law-abiding video dealer.

Aided by new electronic copying equipment, the practice of illegally copying and selling videos and films is spreading in this country. The American motion picture industry has sought to protect its property by using new technologies that prevent unauthorized copying of pre-recorded video cassettes and pay-per-view programming with electronic security coding.

But for every new protective technology, the video pirates develop a way to counter it. A thriving industry has developed in manufacturing electronic black boxes that unscramble the picture. Tracking down these counterfeiters is extremely difficult, costly and time consuming. The current criminal penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine is not enough to discourage video pirates.

The way to stop the piracy is to make it unlawful to manufacture and market the boxes whose only purpose is to steal someone else's product. For these reasons, I am a sponsor of The Motion Picture Anti-Piracy Act, which would amend the copyright act to prohibit the importation, manufacture, distribution and sale of deactivating equipment, devices or circuitry whose sole purpose is to defeat anti-copy protection.

This measure is by no means for the sole benefit of Hollywood movie producers. Consumers also pay for piracy in the form of higher prices for video and film entertainment.

Putting the film and video pirates out of business would help make certain that the writers, actors, directors and technicians who create videos and films are not deprived of the just compensation for their work. It also will help ensure that consumers pay only reasonable fees for videos and films set fairly in a marketplace that is no longer dominated by thieves and unscrupulous operators.

Westfield Foundation Prospers Because of Town's Generosity

I believe that your editorial in The Leader in the issue of Thursday, May 23, was very appropriate as a thank you to the Trustees who are operating The Westfield Foundation.

As one of the founders of the foundation and its President for the first 10 years, I believe that the citizens of Westfield should be thanked for their supporting of the foundation's activities and building it up to the point where it is a real force and benefit for so many organizations in Westfield.

The foundation started in a small way but in five years developed itself to being a stable growing foundation and as a result the Wallace Family gave it a tremendous boost with a large participation.

Then in the subsequent years, Westfielders have increased its assets to about $2 million.

I would hope that every Westfield family would make a contribution large or small to build it even larger so that its influence and good can be increased in the years to come.

I again thank you for your editorial and also congratulate the continuing Trustees on the fine job they are doing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sell Elm Street, Lincoln Buildings; Keep Roosevelt School Open

Last week I placed a letter in your newspaper requesting that residents communicate to me their priorities.

I am surprised at the response that occurred concerning the potential closing of Roosevelt Intermediate School.

There can be no doubt, this is a priority in the minds of many Westfielders.

I already have initiated the research process by attending the special Board of Education meeting on June 11 and will attend all meetings associated with this subject.

I encourage all those concerned also to attend.

Dr. Smith stated at the June 11 meeting, "Closing an intermediate school is a way to save taxpayers of Westfield some of the growth in taxes that we all have experienced over the past few years. One way to look at tax savings is to look at the efficiency of our buildings. It's my belief, and has been my belief from the beginning, that the closing of an intermediate school ought not to be considered unless there are significant educational or financial benefits that can be demonstrated."

He also stated this will be a long process that ultimately will be determined by the community at large.

I believe the community already is opposed to any proposal associated with closing this school and that continuing with this goal in mind is subjecting many to unnecessary distress and wasting precious time.

I personally believe this committee instead should concentrate on how to move their Board of Education offices into Roosevelt School to provide additional justification for retaining this school as a viable facility.

The original claim of saving one million dollars by this closing could in part or whole be made up by selling the most under-utilized facilities in the system, Lincoln School and the Elm Street facility.

There is substantial savings by doing this.

First, these buildings, if sold for development, would add a significant amount of money to the tax roles on an annual basis.

The fact that custodial and maintenance costs would be eliminated while utility and insurance costs zoom to zero also is an annual saving.

The influx of "one time" capital from the sale of these facilities could be used to upgrade Roosevelt and/or other schools, thereby eliminating the potential for a future bond issue and tax increased for his purpose.

Alternate thinking, such as combining schools, increase for this purpose.

Alternate thinking, such as combining schools, definitely would require a long term bond issue to place eight to 10 additional classrooms at Edison School.

It also would require additional busing, traffic safety officers and many other expenses to accomplish this goal.

If the board were to consider taking over Roosevelt School for their offices only, this would be even less efficient.

While there may be significant savings by closing Roosevelt, I believe there is a very significant expense connected with this idea.

In the end, the savings by selling Lincoln and Elm Street versus any savings through combining will closely balance each other out.

This Board of Education committee should be placing its focus on the objective of selling both the Elm Street and Lincoln facilities.

This will allow the impact of saving money to arrive a few years earlier and will not subject hundreds, if not thousands of people to unnecessary distress.

An interesting subnote to the meeting on June 11 revolves around the distress displayed by Dr. Smith that I openly recorded this public meeting.

At the end of the meeting he confronted me and stated that it is "board policy" that they be notified in advance of a meeting if they are to be recorded.

While the municipal government makes a taped recording of every meeting, the Westfield Board of Education does not and apparently gets very disturbed when a member of the public does. Interesting!

This type of thinking by public servants does not serve the constituents well and I propose that all Board of Education meetings and Town Council meeting be videotaped.

They should then be shown on our underutilized public access channel 36 so that all members of the public can observe our government at work at the convenience of their schedule.

I will continue to carefully monitor the potential closing of Roosevelt School and intend to keep all Westfielders fully informed.

To What Issues Should Our Nation Concentrate Its Full Attention?

During the same week that the House of Representatives debated and passed the 1991 Civil Rights Act, the nation's capital and New York City spent over $12 million to hold parades to honor February's Victory in the Persian Gulf. These two events seem to be in some ways related and say much about America in 1991.

* * * * *

Civil rights emerged after World War II as the result of a movement to dislodge "Jim Crow" laws, to end segregation and to guarantee equal opportunity in employment and housing for blacks. The many activists and supporters of civil rights measures argued that changes in the law could affect and favorably impact societal attitudes and beliefs that had tolerated unfair treatment of racial minorities for years.

Contrast those measures and aims with the 1991 Civil Rights Act. The 1991 legislation is far narrower. It is an attempt to enact legislation that would reverse four United States Supreme Court rulings of 1988. These rulings affected the litigation of cases where violations of civil rights are alleged. Viewed this way, this measure hardly shares the aims and goals of the pioneering legislation of the 1960's.

It's not that the Civil Rights Act of 1991 is not necessary, but rather, that so much more is. Blacks do not live as long as whites, minority babies die in infancy far more often than white babies, medical care among the minorities is substantially inferior to the rest of society, almost 50 per cent of minority high school youth do not graduate from high school and almost half of black males are in prison.

Granted, these failings have little to do with civil rights in a strict definitional sense, but it is important to remember the civil rights advocates of the 1960's were not about establishing abstract legal precedents, but they saw in the enactment of legislation an opportunity to alter and raise the status of the least in the society at large.

Sadly, this vision is absent from the recent civil rights debate, from the legislative agenda of the two parties and from the legislative program of the President. No one speaks to these problems of the poor and their children. It is as though by silence these dilemmas will disappear. Yet, we have not tried to overcome the impact of poverty and restore the promise of America to all its children in over a generation and that is a national shame and disgrace.

* * * * *

Contrasting the reluctance to act domestically are the enthusiastic plans of the nation's military and some of its elected officials in Washington and New York City to hold huge, massive and costly ceremonies to honor the troops that participated in Operation Desert Storm, the victory in the Gulf.

Why, the Saturday festivities in the nation's capital cost in excess of $12 million, with the taxpayers picking up a substantial part of the total cost. While the New York celebration is said to be entirely supported by private funds, the juxtaposition of the ostentatious celebration in a city marked by layoffs of thousands, budget deficits as far as the eye can see and deep reductions in municipal services which, in the long run, may cost the city more, is most striking.

It is not that the troops should not be honored, they should; it is not that the attainment of national goals is not worth celebrating, it is, and it is not that parades are not fun, they are.

The two events drew over four million people watching the tanks roll, the planes fly and the troops march. Countless others followed the events on their televisions at home. Observers will no doubt comment that the attendance of so many show just how popular the President and his policies are. Perhaps so.

But it may be that the turnout for these events stand for something else. Is it possible that the response to these national celebrations, and the broad support the President had for his policies against Iraq, signifies that America is ready to respond positively to a call by its elected representatives to a set of goals and a dedication to a national purpose?

Is it not possible that the American public is ready to be called to an agenda devoted to improving the quality of life and improving substantially the living conditions of Americans who have been left out of America for over a decade?

Why not use the success of this foreign policy venture as a model for a national call to attend to substantial problems on the home front? After all, the lesson of the Gulf War may be that America is capable of unified action in response to national policy. It very well may be that all that is lacking to restore idealism, goals and national purpose in the body politic is the leadership and courage of our national leaders.

Civil rights and parades in the same week in June, one was discussed far too narrowly and the other demonstrated that a nation is capable of responding positively to a call to act. It seems a shame that over four million people were only asked to attend a parade.

'Thelma & Louise' Strikes Blow for Feminism — Almost

3 popcorns

POPCORN RATINGS
EXCELLENT

In a market for the most part dominated by mass appeal products, the excitingly artistic and philosophical Thelma & Louise scores instantly for its novel, bold approach.

Director Ridley Scott, interpreting Callie Khouri's screenplay, makes no apologies as he spins the offbeat yarn.

Although the premise is familiar, the substance is fresh — groundbreaking, some may say.

For want of an easily definable genre tag, it will suffice to note that Thelma & Louise is a buddy-buddy flick, women's style.

A classic mechanism, America's great outdoors, specifically, the Southwest serves as the active arena for the on-the-road adventure which two dauntless gals undertake with outrageous relish.

It all starts quite innocently, thought the foreboding is really there from the outset.

Best friends, the title characters have planned a much-needed weekend hiatus from their drab, unfulfilled lives.

Thelma, a frustrated hausfrau bullied by her ridiculously self-important husband, easily is persuaded to make the great escape.

The orchestrator of the event, Louise, is tired of her waitress job and an Elvis-looking boyfriend unready to tie the knot. So off they go, tooling toward the horizon in Louise's '66 Thunderbird convertible.

While fun is the surface raison d'etre, there is a fated aura to the trek.

By the time they land on square one, a violent episode turns them into fugitives.

The snowball then builds and forms the curious plot as the fun-seekers become self-styled desperadoes.

In one vein, the film is a blatant, overkill exercise in feminist revenge; and then, in a very inspired thread of fairness, Thelma & Louise is as telling about the nature of men as it is about women.

Alternately funny and tragic in this strangely seductive comedy of runaway circumstances, the two ladies make it all real, surreal, and provocatively important.

Ostensibly, they are symbols, examples of what's right and wrong with the various perceptions of women's changing roles.

The characters represent a hair-brained, extreme metaphor for things Women's Lib and, wonderfully, don't really know it. Their evolutionary experiences, albeit played to the hilt of incredulity, reveal some rather valid truths.

At first blush the movie seems naughtily nihilistic, even anarchical, but somewhere into the doings, it becomes apparent that it's merely sincerity served up in eccentric terms.

Sometimes it's a bit much. But despite a running time of two hours, 20 minutes, it's never boring.

Although the motion picture is most certainly feminist in nature, it behooves one to bear in mind that it's Callie Khouri and Ridley Scott's "feminist movie" — their poetic, off-the-wall contribution to the cause, for whatever it's worth.

To confuse this comedy with any responsible proffering of academic sociology is to misconstrue the entertaining purpose of Thelma & Louise and Ms. the point.

Men of Medicine Should Heal Accounting Maladies

Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Joe Gordon, nursing a swollen jaw, looks down at a cup of Old Man Meister's rotten coffee waiting for it to cool.

"I hate dentists. I hate doctors. I hate hospitals," he says morosely.

"We know," Charlie Hassell says. "You've been saying that for years but you've got to have them."

"I know that," Joe says. "I know you've got to have root canals, appendectomies and proctologists. But that doesn't mean I have to love them. He didn't extract this one. He exfoliated it. Just a nice way of saying torture."

"Hospitals can really extend the torture, financially speaking," Zack Harris says. "You think you're finished paying them. Look, two and a half years ago Bernice was in the hospital. When she came out we got the bill, paid our part and sent the rest to the insurance companies and I figured we're finished.

"The next year, a full 13 months later, we get a bill for $199.75. No reason given; just the $199.75. So I call the hospital and ask 'What gives?' A girl tells me the auditors had made a sweep and found we'd been undercharged. She said it so nicely I paid, but then I began to get suspicious. Maybe she said that so often it came out like a tape recorder. And I was right. This month a full two and a half years later we got another bill. This one for $210.25!"

"Did you pay it?"

"Baloney. I called the head accountant. He actually said someone had pushed the wrong button on the computer, and turns on the tape recorder, 'The auditors have just caught it.' "

"How many auditors do you have?" I asked. "Your girl told me that last year."

He begins to give me a line but I cut him short. "Look," I said, "I'm an accountant myself. I know what computers can and cannot do and one thing I know is that they don't hold something back for two and a half years and then spring at you like it was Halloween or something."

So he says something like he can't get the kind of help — I said "That was last year's complaint. Now it's blame everything on the computers." I told him I want the whole bill right from scratch before I pay a dime. It's a month and I'm still waiting."

"Well," Carol says. "They are a non-profit organization."

"And I can see why," Zack says. "The doctors aren't through thank heaven. Otherwise Bernice might have gone into the maternity ward and given birth to a little error."

Have you ever noticed that when your photographic processor gives you back your prints not every part of the negative was used?

This is because automated processors clamp down on the negative and print only a portion of the total image.

Full frame is considered the equivalent of an eight-by-12-inch print, but you still lose approximately 5 per cent of the image captured on the negative.

Most camera manufacturers build their camera's viewfinders showing only the area that is printable as a full-frame image.

A three-and-a-half by five-inch print is proportionally smaller than that of a four-by-six-inch print, which is also considered full frame.

Remember, full frame does not mean full negative.

When taking your picture remember not to use every centimeter of what you see through the view finder, crop according to the type of enlargement you intend to print.

Keep in mind that these same processors only can shift your negative from side to side and not up and down.

If you need a reprint of a person who happened to be cut off in the original print because he or she was too close to the side of the negative, just ask the photography laboratory to shift the negative over enough to include this person in the picture.

Remember, this means you will lose an equal portion of the opposite side of your print and may even get the edge of the negative in photograph.

What might help in getting a group picture in which the entire viewfinder is needed, is to imagine a line around the viewfinder that is smaller than the actual image and back up far enough, allowing space over and on both sides of what you see.

This procedure is called macking and is used by many professional photographers.

If you're not sure that the image on the negative is printable in the size you want, most photography laboratories have transparent paper or plastic masks, and by placing them over the negative they will be able to tell you what position and size is possible.

If you need more information on how your camera works, or what you can do to improve your photographic skills. Family Foto is accepting applications for its introductory course in color photography.

You Have Celtics to Thank For Disturbing Your Sleep

Very few Celtic words have been absorbed into the English language, and most of those that have endured are place names.

The word clock is one of a few exceptions, having been derived form the Gaelic word calg and the Cornish and

THE Word™ SLEUTHS
BY JO & JOHN JACOBSON

Welch word cloch.

These early words for clock obviously are echoic, words that imitate sound, since their original meaning was "bell."

Bells or clocks, which were rung to sound alarms and to tell the hour, were housed in watch or guard towers by European residents of the middle ages.

When the first time pieces were invented, they were called clocks because of their association with the clocks (bells) that for centuries had kept track of time.

Our least favorite clock is the one that wakes us up in the morning.

Prosecutor Nominee Okayed by Senate Panel

The nomination of Westfield resident, Andrew K. Ruotolo, Jr., to be the next Union County Prosecutor was given unanimous approval on Monday by the State Senate Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Ruotolo's nomination reportedly is scheduled for consideration by the full Senate today.

The attorney, who is a partner in the Mountainside firm of Mella and Ruotolo, spoke before the committee in Trenton on Monday.

Mr. Ruotolo was nominated by governor James J. Florio last month to run the office, which has been without an official head since the death of Prosecutor John H. Stamler on March 25, 1990.

First Assistant Prosecutor Edmund J. Tucker has been running the office since that time.

At the questioning of Democratic Senator Edward O'Connor of Hudson County, the committee Chairman, Mr. Ruotolo said he is ready for the Prosecutor's position at this time in his career for personal and professional reasons.

He cited his experience as an Assistant United States Attorney and a defense lawyer.

Mr. Ruotolo served as Assistant United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey, Criminal Division, from 1981 to 1984.

He returned to private practice in 1985 and formed the law firm of DiRienzo and Ruotolo.

He has been with Mella and Ruotolo, formerly Weiseman, Mella and Ruotolo, since 1986.

On a personal level, he said, he believes he has a responsibility to perform public service.

When Senator O'Connor asked him if he had any priorities for the office, Mr. Ruotolo said he has "zero tolerance for narcotics crime," but also noted that he recognizes the criminal justice system has budgetary constraints and that "doing more with less is the challenge."

Mr. Ruotolo considers one of his assets his experience as a defense attorney.

He said that both prosecutors and defense attorneys consider themselves on the side of the angels.

"Having been on both sides of the courtroom, I realize I haven't met an angel yet," Mr. Ruotolo told the committee.

Asked about his views on pre-trial intervention and plea bargaining, Mr. Ruotolo said those legal tools are "clearly what has allowed the system to work."

The town resident also was asked about his position on wiretapping, to which he replied he believes the safeguards prevent abuse.

He said the Prosecutor alone does not make decisions on whether to authorize a wiretap and that a specially-appointed judge determines whether there is probable cause to grant a wiretap.

Questioned by Democratic Senator Richard Codey of Essex County about how he would handle a staff member who leaked information to the press, Mr. Ruotolo said he would fire the person.

He noted the sanctity of the grand jury system and said the process must remain secret.

State Senator Donald T. DiFrancesco, who will represent Westfield in the new 22nd District if he wins reelection in November, praised Mr. Ruotolo's background.

In 1985, Mr. Ruotolo was an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for Assembly in the 21st District, losing to Assemblyman Charles L. "Chuck" Hardwick, who represents Westfield.

Mr. Ruotolo was graduated cum laude from Amherst College in Amherst, Massachusetts, in 1974 when he received his bachelor's degree in American studies.

He earned a law degree from Fordham University School of Law in New York City in 1978 and was admitted to the New Jersey bar the same year.

Andrew K. Ruotolo, Jr.

Mr. Ruotolo and his wife, Mrs. Mary Ruotolo, have three children.

David G. Miller Earns Degree

David G. Miller, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Miller of Westfield, graduated on Monday, May 27, from Elmhurst College in Elmhurst, Illinois.

David, a 1982 graduate of Westfield High School, received Elmhurst's bachelor of science in business administration degree with a minor in psychology.

Michael Trento On Dean's List

Michael Trento of Westfield has been named to Plymouth, New Hampshire's State College Dean's List for maintaining a grade point average of between 3.5 and 3.69 during the spring semester of the 1990-1991 academic year.

The Award is designed to help a mature woman who is continuing her education.

Miss Daniel also received a $1,000 scholarship.

Along with attending William Paterson College, she holds a full-time job and is the mother of two daughters.

She is expected to graduate in January, 1994 with a nursing degree.

The "Women Helping Women Award" was presented to Mrs. Donna Galada, who is the Domestic Violence Coordinator for the Superior Court, Family Division of Union County.

Mrs. Galada was cited for this award due to her advocacy for women, her sensitivity toward the needs of the battered woman, and for her work above the requirements of her job.

She was instrumental in providing a private waiting room for women coming to court so that they would not have to face their abusers.

Mrs. Doreen DiGiacomo of Westfield was presented the Woman of Distinction Award.

Mrs. DiGiacomo, the New Jersey State Coordinator for the Ending Hunger Now Campaign, works with organizations in New Jersey to help raise funds for the more than 600,000 hungry people in New Jersey.

Awards Programs To Be Held Tonight

Special programs for eighth grade students completing their studies at the town's two intermediate schools will be held tonight at 7 o'clock at Roosevelt and at 8 o'clock at Edison.

Outstanding achievement by students will be recognized at these annual awards programs.

Borough Chapel Offers Vacation Bible School

A free Daily Vacation Bible School at Mountainside Gospel Chapel will be held Monday through Friday, August 5 through August 9, from 9 a.m. to noon. The theme is "Jesus and You, at Camp Can Do."

The daily activities will include Bible stories, music, recreation, skills and refreshments as well as elaborate skits using puppets and live characters.

The staff consists of more than 60 Christian adults, professionals, collegians and high school students. There will be classes for all ages beginning with four-year-olds through those entering eighth grade. A special Ladies Class will be taught during the same hours as the children's program by Mrs. Ruthann Dein of Springfield and Mrs. Margaret Voss of Union.

There will also be a craft workshop for the ladies attending this class. A nursery for newborns to four-year-olds is provided only for those attending this Ladies Class.

Each year the children and staff also voluntarily participate in a missions project. Last year, attender and staff donated $1,626 and a local businessman matched the gift, so $3,252 was sent to be used toward a much-needed copier machine and other supplies for his mission in Newark. This year's project is yet to be designated.

A special Junior High Program is planned for those entering grades six through eight. This will be conducted at night at the chapel. One all-day trip is planned for the junior highers — in the past this group has gone to Forest Lodge, Great Adventure and Action Park. A permission slip, which must be returned prior to Wednesday's day trip, will be sent to anyone who calls to register for this part of the program.

Because of the large enrollment expected based on past experience and in order to more accurately plan for materials, the staff requests that you register as early as possible by calling the chapel at 232-3456 or the registrar at 654-5818.

Further information can be obtained by calling the chapel office at 232-3456

Giants Take Title By Trouncing Reds

The Giants dominated the Reds 15-9 to win the overall Westfield Girls' Softball title in the National League championship game.

Marcy Carroll led off the game for the Giants with a single and advanced to second on Amelia Hanley's base hit, then consecutive walks to Ashley Szeyller, Becky Hamilton and Suzanne Heinkel delivered home Carroll and Hanley.

Lauren Harris added a run batted in with a single and scored with Heinkel ahead of Natalie Warren's triple to deep right field.

In the bottom of the first Meghan O'Donnell led off with a walk and advanced to second on Emily Lieberman's grounder to first.

Back-to-back singles by Liz McKeon, Nicole Clement and Laura Krasner put the Reds on the board. A walk to Jamie Zimak and a base hit by Sarah Sharpe added two more runs.

Run-scoring singles by Megan Hely and Rosy O'Donnell left the score at 7-6 in favor of the Giants after one inning.

The Reds picked up three more runs in the bottom of the second on singles by Lieberman, Krasner and Suzanne Schrader and a triple by McKeon.

Giants' Harris, Nicole Seib and Warren walked to the load the bases in the top of the third. Karen Veltri drew another pass to brink home Harris.

Cavanaugh's grounder to third drove in Seib, then Carroll walked to load the bases again.

Consecutive run-scoring singles by Szeyller, Heinkel and Harris plated teammates Carroll, Hanley and Hamilton.

The highlight of the game came in the bottom of the third when Giants' shortstop Harris corralled a line drive with Reds on first and second then promptly picked-off both base runners for a triple play.

This defensive play effectively stalled the Reds' scoring drive as they could not produce another run throughout the rest of the game.

In the top of the sixth the Giants added one more run on base hits by Harris, Warren and Veltri's run-scoring sacrifice fly.

Bluejays End History With Double Crown

The Westfield Bluejays ended their soccer team history by walking away from the the Leake and Nelson tournament in Fairfield, Connecticut with the first place trophies and then crushing the Summit Stompers 7-0 to capture the Mid-New Jersey Division No. 5 championship.

The team's final contest proved not to be much of a match at all with the Bluejays easily handling the Stompers on Saturday morning in Summit.

Amanda Kelly registered the Bluejays' first goal with three minutes and 40 seconds gone in the game, tapping it in from in front of the net. Two minutes later, Jesse Lutkenhouse scored after Mary Kate Talbott executed a spectacular header to set up the goal.

The third point belonged to Bridget Murphy, who took advantage of the Summit goalie's momentary lack of concentration that caused her to drop the ball. The final score of the first half came six minutes later as Maeve Turner at right wing passed to Shutts who utilized her thigh to put the ball into the net.

Megan Shutts got the second half's first goal at two minutes and 54 seconds with assists from Dianna Kressner and Lisa Yannuzzi. Suzanne Heinkel's penalty shot came at 20 minutes and 30 seconds, and Meghann McMahon concluded the game's scoring at the 24-minute mark.

The previous weekend, the Bluejays bested three teams in Fairfield, Connecticut to gain a berth in the championship game where they put on a soccer clinic by defeating the hometeam Strikers 5-0.

En route to the championship, the Bluejays defeated the team from Guilford, Connecticut 1-0; destroyed the team from Ridgefield, Connecticut 6-0 and held the Wilton, Connecticut team, which had won the tournament in 1990, to a 0-0 tie.

But in the final game there was no contest.

Westfield had 14 shots on goal to none for Fairfield. Lutkenhouse scored three of the goals while Murphy registered two goals.

The Bluejays tournament record stands at 11-1-0

Bowlers Win Two To Stay in First

The Bowlers won two games last week to break away and hold first place in the Westfield Men's Softball League.

The Bowlers beat Greco Steam Cleaning 10-5 and then followed with a 15-8 battle victory over Infantino's in eight innings.

The Bowlers erupted for seven runs in the extra inning to boost their record to 8-2.

Finnagel's, which had shared first with the Bowlers the previous week, dropped both its games to slip to 6-4.

Finnagel's was beaten by Gibbons Contractors 9-7 and then fell to Greco 4-3.

Gibbons was the hottest team for the week, winning all three games in impressive fashion.

Besides its decision over Finnagel's, Gibbons exploded for 14 runs in the fourth inning and rallied to beat Greco 15-7, and then capped the week with a 10-3 victory over Jerseyland.

In other action, Infantino's defeated the Jolly Trolley 6-5 and Jerseyland beat Garfield's 6-3.

Advanced Learning Classes Debated at Board Meeting

By RONALD STROTHERS
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Thirty-four items pertaining to personnel and a significant number of items relating to curriculum and instruction were approved at Tuesday night's Board of Education meeting, but it was the Advanced Learning Program that garnered the lion's share of discussion.

The board has undertaken to pare down participation in the program by those entering third grade in 1991-1992 to eight to nine per cent.

Nineteen per cent of current students in third-grade in the district now participate in the program.

Inclusion in the program, Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Mark C. Smith said, is based on an 11 part selection criteria. The selection process constitutes a matrix which incorporates achievement test data, cognitive ability test data and teacher recommendations.

The top matrix score is 46. Students in the program currently had to meet a matrix score of 23.

Beginning with the 1991-1992 school year students must attain a score of at least 30, which is expected to yield the desired participation percentage of eight to nine per cent.

The board voted 7 to 1 in favor of the increased minimum matrix score.

Students currently in the program and who will enter the fourth or fifth grades in 1991-1992 may remain in the program.

The downsizing of the program met with stiff opposition on the part of one parent, John Toriello, who said it should be the delivery of the service and not the percentage of students enrolled in the program that should be the board's focal point.

"The purpose of this matrix is to serve the seven to nine per cent," Mr. Toriello said. "I think we all know that this district has a much higher percentage of gifted students than eight to nine per cent. This program is not dealing with that.

"My understanding is that the law says this board ought to be specifically identifying gifted and talented students and not establishing arbitrary numbers.

"The purpose of the program should be to get those children who can benefit from the program. This system doesn't do that."

Mr. Toriello indicated that the matrix was faulty in that test scores do not accurately depict a child's capability to participate and succeed in programs like the Advanced Learners Program.

Dr. Smith responded that the 11-point selection criteria is thorough and regardless of what process one would use, the present problems would surface.

Mr. Toriello argued that teacher recommendations of students are not given the consideration they should. Jefferson School Principal and program coordinator, Mrs. Kelley Kissiah, explained her thinking on that issue.

"Teachers tend to recommend high performing rather than high achieving students. Teacher recommendations tend not to be as reliable as other methods," Mrs. Kissiah said.

She explained "high performance" as superior test taking as opposed to "high achievement," which is a child's demonstrated academic performance in class.

Board member, Dr. Benjamin Rulf, felt "the whole concept misses the mark. Only kids with specific talents in certain areas should be taken out of class. Kids who are just bright kids should be left in class to enrich the class.

Mrs. Bonnie Murch, a board member, wondered if the emphasis on tests favor children who read early.

Assistant Superintendent of Schools, Dr. David Rock, gave a report on the High School Proficiency Test for the 11th-grade.

A continued high performance in English and writing was shown by the district's high school juniors, he said.

Teachers Near Accord On Terms of Contract

Both salaries are based entirely on a performance review and comparisons with superintendents in other districts, Dr. Smith said.

Retirement Stipends Outlined

This past year, the board Public Information Office said, staff members and administrators were offered stipends to be added on to their salaries at retirement.

Those who retired prior to May 15 had the normal $150 per day stipend for unused sick days increased to $150 per day up to a maximum of $5,000.

Only six staff members took advantage of the offer, but Mr. Seiler said that is the normal annual retirement date for the district.

A major reason for this, he added, may be that teachers are waiting for the passage of a bill currently in the New Jersey Senate which would offer early retirement benefits to teachers with 25 years of service who are 50 years old.

Currently teachers must have 25 years service and be at least 55 years old to receive benefits which are not reduced to reflect the fact they are retiring early, Mr. Seiler noted.

School Principal receives $94,129.

In addition, Dr. David Rock, the Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction, receives $88,569 per year.

All of the above administrators are members of the Westfield Association of Administrators and Supervisors, Dr. Smith said, and, although their salary levels are established by contract, their salaries also are based on a performance evaluation by their superiors, and they also depend on years of experience and education level.

"We have reached a tentative agreement on a contract with the administrators," Dr. Smith said. "Their contract last was signed two years ago and is expiring this year. We expect the new contract to result in salary increases of less than the 6 percent per year cost of living increase and we should have formal board action on that contract on Tuesday, July 2."

Superintendent Salaries Told

Dr. Smith's current salary is $108,000 and that of Board Secretary and Assistant Superintendent for Business, Dr. William J. Foley is $87,000.

Mrs. Annette Covatta Speaker at Workshop

An intensive journal workshop based on the work of noted psychologist, Dr. Ira Progoff, will be held June 28 and 29 at St. Helen's Roman Catholic Church, 1600 Rahway Avenue, Westfield.

The workshop will take place from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. on Friday, June 28, and on Saturday, June 29, from 9 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. In this session entitled the "Life Context Workshop," participants learn how to use the intensive journal process, as they reconstruct their lives in a non-judgmental, non-analytical way. Creative and spiritual awareness is often enhanced during this workshop.

The techniques of the intensive journal method have been used by more than 250,000 people as a practical way of clarifying personal relationships, career questions, transition and the varied aspect of one's physical life.

Intensive journal work has served as a means of evoking creativity, overcoming blockages and as a modern approach to spirituality. Its method draws forth personal potential and energies and enables one to answer the question: What is my life trying to become?

Dr. Progoff, formerly director of the Institute for Research in Depth Psychology at Drew University and a pupil of psychiatrist Carl Jung, developed his journal method more than 20 years ago based on a firm conviction that "everyone has within a life force which moves toward growth unless blocks are thrown in its way....The workshop concentrates on dreams, inspiration, images and stepping stones to help people recognize the thread of continuity that is moving in their lives."

For registration, please call 233-8757.

Every Home and Car Should Have First Aid Kit

Every home and car should have a first aid kit, according to the Westfield-Mountainside chapter of the American Red Cross.

Such kits can be purchased or assembled at home in a shoe box.

Each kit should contain individually wrapped dressings to treat a single injury.

To make up a basic first aid kit, include:

*Two packages of one-inch adhesive compress.

*Two packages of one-inch bandage compress.

*One package of three-inch bandage compress.

*One package of four-inch bandage compress.

*One package of three-inch by three-inch plain gauze pads.

*One package of two-inch gauze roller bandage.

*Three packages of triangular bandages.

You can add items suited to your needs and based on your doctor's advice.

Gulf War Donations By Burgdorff Hailed

"Business as usual" was put on hold as the Gulf War came home to Burgdorff Realtors' corporate offices.

Kevin Scotti, an Apache helicopter pilot and warrant officer, recently visited the company's headquarters at 560 Central Avenue, Murray Hill, to say a personal thank-you to the corporate staff.

It was his unit, Bravo Company, 1/227 Aviation Regiment, First Calvary Division out of Fort Hood, Texas, that, while in Saudi Arabia, had received 12 cartons from Burgdorff of video and board games, sporting equipment, recreational items — and 500 pairs of sunglasses, "the biggest hit," according to Mr. Scotti.

"It meant so much to receive all those things," he recalled.

After a successful Desert Shield used-book collection in September, Burgdorff company staff agreed in October to put Christmas grab-bag gift monies towards purchases for the troops. Rick's Toys and Thompson's Sporting Goods in Summit helped with discounts. Burgdorff adopted Scotti's unit because an employee had a friend who knew Mr. Scotti, a career officer and the only New Jersey soldier in his unit.

Few at Burgdorff personally knew any Gulf War soldier, so they appreciated a first-hand account. They found Mr. Scotti articulate, warm and personable.

Currently enjoying leave with his family in Parsippany, Mr. Scotti told of months without a shower — just baby wipes for clean-ups. Boredom was the hardest challenge. "We would get pumped up for action and then learn it was called off."

Action came later, though. It was his unit that rescued soldiers stranded when an Apache was shot down. "They grabbed on to the hand-holds on the wings and we flew them out that way."

Now on display in Burgdorff's reception area is a framed picture of an Apache helicopter, a gift from Mr. Scotti, who was last seen leaving the realtor's headquarters with an assemblage of Burgdorff items, this time personally presented by Mrs. Jean Burgdorff, the firm's President.

HOME AT LAST...Marine Lance Corporal Michael F. Dodd, prepares to take down the yellow ribbon outside the home of long-time friend Charles LaRosa in Westfield. Corporal Dodd had just returned from the Persian Gulf where he served with the Second Assault Amphibian Battalion in Saudi Arabia and in Kuwait. Mr. LaRosa had hung the ribbon in anticipation of Corporal Dodd's homecoming. "We prayed that 'Dawg' would come back safe and sound. So this is a great day," he said. Lance Corporal Dodd is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Dodd of Westfield.

tually consisted of one researcher, Luigi Criscola — needed an assistant, and Mr. Rooke was transferred.

"I had to do all the dirty work," he said of those early days.

Kresge Deals Launches Him

Mr. Rooke remembers Mr. Merrill telling him one day that the firm would make a market in S.S. Kresge stock and had options to buy the stock at $200 to $300 a share.

"Merrill calls me in and says 'I want you to write the greatest report on this company ever,' " Mr. Rooke said. "I knew my future with the company was at stake. Charlie said he wanted me to come up with a conclusion that after reading the circular, they'd line up to buy the stock."

Kresge had performed marvelously, so it took Mr. Rooke only a day to write the report, but it took him days to come up with an ending. "Finally, I got it," he said.

At the time, Kresge's rival, Woolworth, was selling at twice the price-to-earnings ratio that Kresge was. So Mr. Rooke plotted a chart showing where Kresge would sell at the same P&E ratio — "we put it in red, so they'd be sure to see" he said.

"When Charlie saw that chart, he said, 'By God, Rookie, I knew you could do it!"

Mr. Rooke strolled by the Exchange one lunch hour with a partner, Herbert Melcher, whom everybody called Pop. "I told Pop I wanted to become a member. He said, 'Who'd want to work in that crazy place?' But I said, 'Pop, that's what makes the world go round.' "

A Lazy Relative, His Opening

Mr. Melcher and Mr. Merrill were both alumni of Amherst College and, driving to a reunion a few weeks later, Mr. Merrill confided that he was going to fire his brother-in-law as floor partner.

"He doesn't work, he's lazy, and he's arrogant," Mr. Merrill was said to have told Mr. Melcher. "But I don't know who to replace him with."

Mr. Melcher suggested Mr. Rooke. "Charlie looked at him and said, "Well, he's the last fells I would have thought of," Mr. Rooke said. Nevertheless the firm bought Mr. Rooke a seat on the Exchange, and the same day, December 28, he was named a partner in Merrill, Lynch & Co. His salary immediately leaped from $150 a month to $8,000 a year.

He Said 'Sell' Before Crash

Shortly before the 1929 stock market crash, Merrill Lynch was one of the few firms advising clients to liquidate their holdings. At midnight several days before the market hit bottom in November 1929, Mr. Merrill told Mr. Rooke the names of 10 stocks he wanted Mr. Rooke to take from customers and sell when he could.

"At the time, it looked like we would take a loss of $450,000, and that was a big amount of money in those days for a small firm," Mr. Rooke said.

Luckily, however, the next day John D. Rockefeller announced he would buy one million shares of Jersey Standard at $50 a share — one of the 10 losing stocks Merrill, Lynch was holding, and there was a short-lived rally.

Oil Stock Deal Swells His Name

At the opening the following day, Mr. Rooke said all the stock, including Jersey Standard which had risen to $72 on Rockefeller's statement. The sale netted Merrill, Lynch a profit of $500,000. "From that day on, Charlie thought I was a genius," Mr. Rooke said.

In 1940, Mr. Rooke was asked to open the company's Newark office, and for three years, he and a secretary worked to expand Merrill Lynch's business in New Jersey.

Today, the Newark branch has 40 financial consultants, says Patrick M. Kenny, manager.

"We used to call them stockbrokers, then securities brokers. Now they're financial consultants. When Bob Rooke joined the firm there were two products we sold. Now there are 130, everything including Ginnie Maes and real estate partnerships."

Mr. Kenny says of Mr. Rooke, "He is one of the most amazing men in the industry. Five years from now I hope I am as smart and have the memory he has."

ONE OF HIS GIFTS...Robert L. Rooke donated $25,000 to the Westfield "Y" in 1928 when it was built and the money was used to construct a swimming pool, now known as the Rooke Pool. The 20 by 60 foot, four-lane pool is used to teach youth and the handicapped to swim and for other classes. Mr. Rooke still is a member of the Board of Trustees of the "Y."

Misleading Fund-raising Prohibited by Cohen Bill

Fund-raising schemes, similar to those used earlier this year by the National Republican Senatorial Committee no longer would be legal, under terms of legislation being drafted by Assemblyman Neil M. Cohen, who represents Westfield.

The bill, known as the Deceptive Campaign Fund-Raising Reform Act of 1991, would prohibit the use of deceptive practices and tactics in political fund-raising campaigns.

"All of us who are committed to honesty and integrity in government were appalled when the senatorial committee resorted to such shocking, deceptive fund-raising techniques," Assemblyman Cohen said. "And it was even more alarming to learn that New Jersey cannot use its existing Consumer Fraud Act to stop this shameful practice."

The Assemblyman noted that the committee sent fund-raising letters to about one million Republicans nationwide, including 68,000 New Jerseyans.

Enclosed with each letter was a $25 check which, when cashed, authorized the Republican Party to withdraw $12.50 from the recipient's bank account every month until he or she cancels the automatic deductions.

"The details of this bogus fund-raising scheme were buried in fine print on the back of the check," the lawmaker noted. "If a private agency or corporation had used such questionable techniques to extract money from the public, they probably would be facing stiff penalties. There is no reason why groups such as this Republican fund-raising organization should be given a license to defraud and rip off the public."

Although New Jersey Attorney General Robert Del Tufo sued the senatorial committee over the scheme, the New Jersey Superior Court rejected the suit on the grounds that the state's Consumer Fraud Act was not intended to cover politics.

Assemblyman Cohen said his bill, which will be introduced when the Assembly reconvenes next month, would close that loophole by supplementing the New Jersey Consumer Fraud Act to include deceptive political fund-raising practices.

Under the legislation, it would be illegal for a political committee to employ misleading or deceptive tactics, use false pretenses or promises, or knowingly conceal, suppress or omit any significant information when soliciting funds.

Violators would be subject to fines of up to $25,000 for each offense. The legislation also gives the State Attorney General the authority to bring an action in Superior Court for treble damages against those who violate the law.

PATRIOTIC PROJECT...On behalf of the Westfield Service League, Mrs. Jill Sitcer, center, presents a check for the Westfield Area Chamber of Commerce, Flag Project to Mrs. Cynthia Kowalczyk, chamber Executive Director, and the chamber's President, John Morgan.

Service League Aids Flying of Old Glory

Many faded and torn American flags that have flown for almost six months in the central business district have been replaced, thanks to a contribution from the Westfield Service League. Mrs. Gary Sitcer, a member of the Westfield Service League Donations Committee, presented the check to Westfield Area Chamber of Commerce representatives this week.

According to Mrs. Sitcer, the league has donated $96,000 to more than 40 local organizations this year. The money comes from profits generated at the League's Consignment and Thrift Shops at 114 Elmer Street. These shops are staffed by the 60 active members of the league and aided by an equal number of associate and sustainer members. The shops are now closed for the summer; the volunteers will reopen for back-to-school business in September.

The flag project is an on-going activity administered by the Westfield Area Chamber of Commerce. Boy Scouts of Troop No. 72 have already replaced lost and damaged flags with new flags and poles bought by the chamber. The flags will continue to fly through July 4 after which they will be taken down and stored.

Normally, the flag project displays flags throughout the central business district on single days of national significance.

Downtown Revitalization Plan To Be Discussed at Public Meeting

Civic, municipal and business leaders and the public-at-large are invited to learn about "Main Street," a revitalization program being considered for Westfield.

An informational presentation will be given by the New Jersey Coordinator of Main Street on Wednesday, June 26, at 8 p.m. in Council Chambers of the Municipal Building.

Many feel that a concerted effort is needed to revitalize the downtown core of the community visually and economically. A revitalization program can address current needs: To increase customer traffic, to attract new business to available commercial properties, to renovate older buildings and to improve facilities for the convenience of customers and clients.

Ambitious revitalization programs are already underway in many nearby towns, including Cranford, Summit and Englewood.

The benefits and mechanisms of the Main Street program will be explained as well as its appropriateness for Westfield. Main Street is a non-profit program established by the National Trust for Historic Preservation to stimulate economic development within the context of historic preservation in communities that desire revitalization. It is a comprehensive process designed to improve all aspects of a downtown through the cooperation of municipal and business organizations.

The Westfield Area Chamber of Commerce is spearheading a drive to get this concept going. Many members of town government and municipal boards are already interested in the idea. Following the informational program, a focus group will deliberate about embarking on a Main Street program for Westfield.

Once established, Main Street operates as a separate entity, generating on-going improvement in the central business district. The Main Street organization always represents all facets of the community.

Moody's Gives County Top Rating

Moody's Investors Service again has given Union County its highest possible rating of AAA, which will enable the county to market a new issue of general improvement bonds at the most favorable interest rates currently available in the market.

The county has maintained this highest rating since 1976, and, according to Union County Freeholder Finance Chairman Gerald B. Green, the rating resulted in a net interest cost savings for county taxpayers of $47,093 in the first year alone and over 20 years the total savings will be $463,923.

Community Band Begins Concerts on June 27

The Westfield Community Band is preparing for its 79th summer concert series as it anticipates the completion of the new band gazebo in Westfield's Mindowaskin Park.

The new gazebo, designed and constructed as a modern replica of the original 1918 structure, will enable the band to extend its long-running tradition of free summer concerts for area residents.

This summer's concert series is scheduled for Thursday, June 27; Wednesday, July 3; Thursday, July 11; and Thursday, July 18, all beginning at 8 p.m.

The band's conductor, Elias Zareva, who has been leading the band for 13 years, has added many new pieces to the band's repertoire, including a number of solo works featuring selected bandmembers.

Highlighting the concert series will be the band's inaugural concert, scheduled for June 27, pending the new gazebo's completion as well as a special Independence Day celebration on July 3, featuring the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution, various guest speakers and what Mr. Zareva describes as "an abundance of patriotic music."

The band just has completed a busy concert season that included performances at the In-Town festivals, Halloween Parade, a town-wide holiday concert at Roosevelt Intermediate School, the Christmas tree lighting and the Memorial Day Parade.

In addition to the full concert band, with close to 60 musicians, the band also has two smaller groups, the Westfield Community Band Dixieland All-Stars and a holiday wind ensemble.

The Dixieland All-Stars performs throughout central New Jersey at a variety of community festivals.

All of those attending the concerts should bring their own blankets and chairs.

In the event of rain, all concerts will be held at Roosevelt School auditorium on Clark Street.

For information, please call the Westfield Recreation Commission at 789-4080.

Mary F. Hoblitzell Is Duke University Cum Laude Graduate

Miss Mary Frances Hoblitzell, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Hoblitzell of Westfield, was graduated cum laude from Duke University on May 12.

Miss Hoblitzell earned a bachelor of science degree with a major in psychology. While Duke University does not offer multiple degrees, Miss Hoblitzell also completed the requirements for a bachelor of arts degree in history.

While at the university, she was a member of Kappa Delta Sorority and held the positions of President and Treasurer on her dormatory house council. During her junior and senior years, Miss Hoblitzell volunteered as a student tutor at the Halsted Juvenile Psychiatric Ward of the Duke University Medical Center.

This past year, she served as a member of the 1991 Commencement Advisory Committee, a board of students and administrators who planned and advised on commencement activities.

Last summer, she studied art history abroad on the Duke in Flanders program in Amsterdam and Belgium.

This September Miss Hoblitzell will begin her career at Chase Manhattan Bank in New York as an associate in the Chase Manhattan Bank Consumer Banking Management Development Program.

Miss Hoblitzell is a 1987 graduate of Westfield High School.

Foreign Language Group Offers New Curriculum

The Foreign Language Awareness Group of Westfield will offer a new curriculum for the 1991-1992 session to accommodate first-year and returning students.

The French, Spanish and Japanese classes will be structured on the theme of a visit to a foreign country.

Incorporating the children's request to learn more about the cultures of different countries and to use full sentences when speaking, the new curriculum is designed around play acting, games and songs.

The following are some units planned to provide a content-based means of learning the language:

1 — Preparing for a trip to France, Spain and South America or Japan, including information on geography and transportation, packing the suitcase, obtaining a passport.

2 — Shopping local markets and handling foreign currency.

3 — Sightseeing — public transportation, buying ice cream and visits to castles and other historic locations.

4 — Ordering and eating in a restaurant.

The group is conducting a fund-raising campaign to allow a continuation of the policy of offering scholarships to needy children, keeping classes small and providing necessary funds to purchase classroom materials to benefit all the children.

All elementary school children in first to fifth grades will be able to "travel" to France, Spain, South America or Japan.

Registration forms were distributed to the schools last week and should be returned by Tuesday, June 25, to secure a place for the fall program.

Please telephone 789-1658 for further information.

Summer Is Coming; Watch Out for Children

Now is also the time to take extra care to watch out for the children.

"When school's out, more children are out and about all day instead of just before or after school. Watching out for children requires us to readjust our attention," Paul Kielblock, safety manager for the New Jersey Automobile Club in Florham Park said. "In January when we commute home in the dark, most of us can safely assume that most children are inside. But now that the sun is out in the early evening, so are the children.

"We have to be extra careful at all times, not just during our commute. A child's summertime plans usually involve all day fun. And, that means his attention is far from basic traffic safety rules," he added.

Mr. Kielblock offers the following advice to help motorists "watch out for the children:"

—Be extra alert near parked cars. You never know when a child will dart into the street.

—Drive at or under the posted speed limit in residential areas, 25 miles per hour unless posted otherwise.

—Use extra caution near playgrounds, school yards and ball fields.

—Never speed through parking lots. Small children can't be seen around cars.

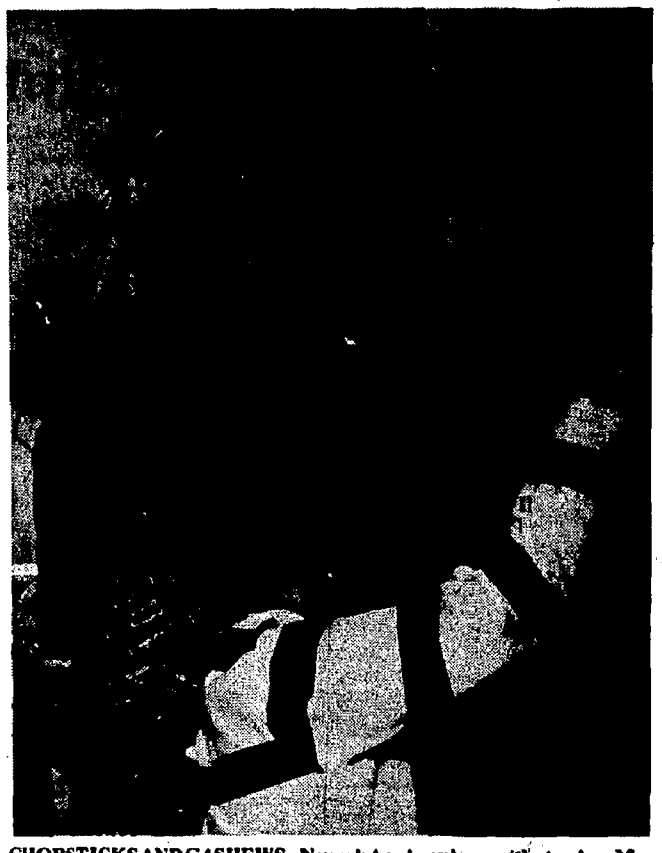
—Watch for children near recreation areas, parks and pools. Safety isn't a child's top priority when he's intent on cooling off in the pool or playing in the park.

—Be alert for children on bicycles. They can appear out of nowhere and dart in front of your car.

—Conduct a safety check before backing your car or truck out of a driveway or parking space. Walk completely around your vehicle to be sure there isn't a small child playing behind or near it.

To help promote the "School's Out — Watch Out for the Kids" safety message, the New Jersey Automobile Club Foundation for Safety is making 17-by-22-inch posters available free of charge to post near homes or businesses.

Posters may be picked up at the automobile club offices located at 1 Hanover Road, Florham Park or 191 Mountain avenue, Springfield.



CHOPSTICKS AND CASHEWS...Newark Academy humanities teacher, Mrs. Stephanie Acquadro of Westfield, demonstrates how to hold a chopstick properly to her sixth graders at Newark Academy as they learn about cultural differences while they complete a study of Japanese history and culture.

Town Teacher Brings Japan to the Classroom

As part of their study of Japanese history and culture, middle school sixth-graders at Newark Academy in Livingston have been learning how to eat with chopsticks.

Led by Blackwood Parlin, who is the Dean of the Faculty and a teacher in the humanities department, the lesson was a break from the more rigorous study of the ancient history, religions, geography and modern history of Japan.

Students learn about the three major religions, Shintoism, Buddhism and Christianity, and the four main areas or "prefectures" which make up the country.

They also study the early Japanese belief in the emperor as God, a divine being citizens were not allowed to view or to hear, and the radio broadcast in which the late Emperor Hirohito announced the defeat of Japan in World War II.

The same emperor eventually disavowed his godhead status.

As part of an international curriculum, students learn about three major countries: Russia, Japan, and Egypt.

Every year Mrs. Stephanie Acquadro of Westfield, who directs the sixth-grade humanities curriculum, discusses the issue of racism against the Japanese when she and her students read about Japanese interment in Farewell to Manzanar.

These same sixth graders will continue to study Japan in their eighth grade world cultures course and in their 12th grade 20th century course. The goal is to promote understanding and foster cultural appreciation.
