Town May Soon Receive Approval from County for Senior Housing Aid

Presbyterian Church May Provide Added Parking Spaces During Renovation Project Work on Municipal Building

By ROBERT R. FASZCZEWSKI
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

The town is expected to hear from the Union County Community Development Block Grant Committee within the next few weeks whether the committee will approve the allocation of $20,000 in federal funds to Westfield to pay some of the consultants' fees involved in planning the town's second senior citizen housing complex.

It was estimated in October by the committee planning the project preliminary costs would be $110,000 for architectural and other expenses and $80,000 for consultant fees, with the total cost of constructing 130 units estimated at between $110 million and $130 million.

Town Engineer Edward A. Gottko said at Tuesday's conference meeting of the Town Council the town had made application to the county for the block grant money, and he expected to hear from the committee shortly.

On another Community Development matter, Mr. Gottko said although Community Development funds probably would not be available this year for making sidewalks in the area of the First Congregational Church on Elmer Street handicapped accessible, the project would have to be done sometime before 1995 because of federal regulations requiring handicapped access to almost every public facility.

On another town project, Mr. Gottko said asbestos removal in the Municipal Building in preparation for the renovation project is expected to be completed by next Tuesday, although when workers removed a water-damaged ceiling, they contaminated a rug and additional asbestos was found around an emergency generator in the basement, and these two problems caused some delays.

Town Administrator John F. Malloy, Jr. noted the town has approached The Presbyterian Church in Westfield to provide additional parking for the building while renovation continues on it.

The church parking lot would not be available during the summer months, he added, because Children's Specialized Hospital in Mountainside uses the lot during that time for its parking needs.

Mr. Gottko also reported improvements at the town conservation center mandated by state environmental officials have been completed with the digging of a ditch around the site and the removal of leaves from the center to the county compost area in Springfield.

On another conservation center matter, Public Works Committee Chairman, Mrs. Margaret C. Sur, reported this year's brochure for the center had been approved and the fee for resident use of the facility had been kept at $45.

The Councilmen also discussed a memorandum from Police Chief Anthony J. Scullitti announcing residents would no longer be allowed to use tape dialer alarms systems and would have to convert to digital systems by Friday, January 1, of next year because alarms on the dialer systems cannot be efficiently answered without unnecessarily taking police away from other duties.

Mayor Garland C. "Bud" Boothe, Jr. said while at first there were many false alarms with the dialer system, the number has decreased, and many residents are opposed to changing from the system.

He referred the matter to the Public Safety Committee.

Town Crimes Rose

By 48 Last Year

Statistics released this week on Union County crime show overall crimes in Westfield increasing by 48 — from 801 to 849 — from 1990 to last year, up from 698 the year before.

Larcenies in the town saw the greatest increase — from 506 in 1989 to 582 in 1990 and 635 in 1991.

Burglaries, however, saw the greatest drop among categories — from 148 in 1990 to 140 in 1991, although this figure increased by 13 from the 127 in 1989.

There were no homicides in the three years, while rapes went from three in 1989 to one in 1990 to two last year; robberies increased from four in 1989 to five in 1990 to 10 last year; assaults were up from four in 1989 to eight in 1990 and then down to six last year; vehicle thefts dropped from 53 in 1989 to 52 in the following two years and arsons went from one in 1989 to five in 1990 and one last year.

There were 24.2 crimes per thousand residents in 1989, 27.7 in 1990 and 29.4 last year in Westfield.

Dr. Smith Names Search Group For Principal

Replacement to Be Sought For Eugene Voll at Roosevelt

A nine-member advisory committee to search for a new Roosevelt Intermediate School Principal to replace Eugene Voll, who will retire in July, has been formed by Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Mark C. Smith.

"One of the most important tasks undertaken by a school district is the selection and appointment of a school principal to provide leadership for staff, students and parents in a school building," Dr. Smith said. "We will begin an immediate nation-wide search for a replacement for Mr. Voll whose retirement was accepted with regret by the Board of Education at its public meeting last week."

The search advisory committee includes three administrators, three staff members and three parents.

Staff members serving on the committee with Dr. Smith are: David J. Rock, the Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction; Dr. Robert Petix, the Principal of Westfield High School; Thomas Brown, a Western tradition/foreign language teacher at Roosevelt; Mrs. Audrey Zavetz, a sixth-grade English team teacher, and Mrs. Barbara Ball, the English Department head for Edison and Roosevelt Intermediate Schools.

Parent representatives from each of the elementary schools which feed into Roosevelt School include: Mrs. Linda Clark, the President of the Roosevelt Parent-Teacher Organization and a former Wilson School parent; Mrs. Carol Phelan, the Vice President of the Roosevelt Parent-Teacher Organization and a Franklin School parent, and James Szezyler, who has a child at Washington School and Roosevelt School.

Committee members will be

Eight Candidates Decide They'll Seek Three-Year Positions on School Board

State's Legislators Expected to Hold Discussions and to Vote on Proposal This Monday to Delay Election for Education Body Until Tuesday, April 28

With this week's entry of Robert D. Mulvee into the race and the decision late last week of Michael W. Fox to run, the town's voters now will be faced with eight candidates from which to choose three, each for a three-year term, in the Board of Education Election which currently is scheduled for Tuesday, April 7.

The deadline for candidates to file nominating petitions for the April 7 election was last Thursday at 4 p.m.

It is not certain, however, whether that deadline and the election itself will be changed.

According to Assemblyman Richard H. Bagger, both the Assembly and the state Senate Education Committees have released bills which would change the school board elections to Tuesday, April 28, in order to allow the Legislature to act on the revaluation of school staff pensions and changes in school aid proposed by Governor James J. Florio earlier this year.

Any change in the filing deadline for candidates and the deadline for school districts to finally adopt their proposed 1992-1993 budget would be decided by the Commissioner of Education under the legislative proposals, Assemblyman Bagger said.

He added the school election change measure probably will be voted on in the Assembly on Monday, February 24.

The ballot order for the eight candidates was determined by drawing last Thursday.

The candidates, in addition to Mr. Mulvee and Mr. Fox, are: William J. Sweeney, Catherine J. Marchant, Mrs. Eileen Satkin, Mrs. Danielle M. Walsh, Stephen B. Benisch and Lawrence Soffer.

Three School Board members whose terms of office expire this year are not seeking re-election. They are: Dr. Susan Fuhrman, completing six years; Mrs. Carolyn Moran, completing nine years, and Mrs. Bonnie Murch, completing three years.

Dr. Fuhrman, is the Vice President of the board.

The six remaining school board members and the dates their terms of office end are:

President, Mrs. Susan H. Pepper, 1994.
Mrs. Susan Jacobson, 1993.
G. Bruce McFadden, 1993.
Dr. B. Carol Molnar, 1994.
Mrs. Melba S. Nixon, 1993.
Dr. Benjamin Ruff, 1994.

In addition to electing three new Board of Education members, Westfield residents will vote on a proposed school budget for 1992-1993 in the annual school election.

Court Action Requested On Trash Unit's By-laws

Rahway Residents Ask Freeholders to Step In To Prevent Authority from Amending Its Rules

The Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders was requested by residents of Rahway last Thursday night to go into Superior Court to prevent the Union County Utilities Authority, which supervises garbage disposal for most of the county's municipalities, including Westfield, from amending its by-laws in the future without court approval.

Last Wednesday the utilities authority allowed all four of its officers to remain in their posts, and the authority recently amended its bylaws to allow its Chairman to serve successive terms.

Rahway Councilman William Wnuck joined the resident in arguing the authority could not amend its bylaws without authorization from Union County Assignment Judge Edward W. Beglin, Jr., who several years ago drew up the consent agreement between the authority and Rahway, the host city of a resource recovery plant where the county's trash, including that from Westfield, would be incinerated.

Councilman Wnuck said the Rahway City Council on February 10 rejected the proposed host community benefits agreement with the utilities authority because tied to it was a stipulation the city drop a lawsuit asking Judge Beglin to determine whether the utilities authority could amend the bylaws without the approval of the Judge.

The matter was scheduled to be heard the day after the council meeting was not because the council's rejection was overridden by an executive order of Rahway Mayor James Kennedy.

The amended agreement would have given Rahway $800,000 a year until the burner is built, $199,000 a year for the loss of about nine ratables and $5 a ton for garbage exceeding the 85 per cent level of capacity.

Mayor Kennedy said the best interests of Rahway's taxpayers were served not by spending the money for the lawsuit but by receiving the compensation outlined in the agreement.

The authority has extended its amended agreement with Rahway for 30 days while that city studies the additional compensation. It also has included a provision barring the authority from further amending its bylaws.

At last Thursday's Freeholder meeting, Councilman Wnuck said he wanted the Freeholders to get involved in the matter to prevent any possible repeated actions by the utilities authority in the future.

He said he thought the city could have gotten more compensation for hosting the incinerator, amending the bylaws breaks the host agreement and if the authority could change bylaws at will Rahway was offered no protection by the agreement.

Union County Counsel Jeremiah D. O'Dwyer replied the Freeholder Board has no jurisdiction over the changing of the bylaws of the au-

Runnells Employees Keep Lobbying Against Privatizing

Freeholders Also Hear Complaints About County Jail, Settle Staffer Lawsuit, Raise Fees for Using Parks

By JAMES A. BRIDGE, Jr.
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Works of art by Union County artists adorning the Freeholders' Elizabethtown Plaza meeting room in Elizabethtown were mute witnesses to a hail of complaints from a more than 80 people during last Thursday's meeting of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders.

The dedication of the display of Union County art preceded an often-rowdy public portion of the meeting, which lasted more than two hours after the conclusion of agenda-related business.

The large and vocal crowd was equally split between the anti-incineration activists, Concerned Citizens of Union County group, and food service and janitorial employees of John E. Runnells Hospital in Berkeley Heights.

The hospital employees, representing the dietary and housekeeping services, are awaiting 94 termination notices in the aftermath of a play by the County Manager, Mrs. Ann Baran, to shave $850,000 from the county budget.

Spirits ran so high even a report by Freeholder Chairman Louis A. Santagata of the season's only serious winter storm did not chase one of the 80 citizens away.

Mrs. Marlene Grant, the Vice President of Union Council No. 8 at Runnells urged the board to reconsider a move to privatize Runnells services.

"I'm here also to urge you not to privatize," Mrs. Grant said. "This is not generating any profit by privatizing."

Mrs. Grant said the private firm proposed to replace the 90 employees would not be a good choice because the firm's principal is an absentee owner.

"It's owner is out of the country, in France," she said.

She added the board should begin cost-cutting at the top of the county's wage scale.

"Start cutting from the top. Show us what you are willing to do so we can follow," she said.

Several employees also spoke, citing the health problems of family members and the problems job losses will engender.

Mrs. Irma Farelo, a Runnells housekeeping employee, said if she lost the job she has held for five years she would not be able to support her husband, who is ill and out of work.

One young man, Vincent Quarterman of Plainfield, said he

Sales of Homes in Town Rise Faster Than in State

Realtor Board Figures Up by 17.56 Per Cent; Prices Increase by 4.01 Per Cent Over a Year Ago

By ROBERT R. FASZCZEWSKI
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Home sales in 1991 in the town bounced back considerably stronger than the state-wide increase, according to Mrs. Pinky Luerssen, the President of the Westfield Board of Realtors.

While state-wide sales of single-family homes increased by 3 per cent from 1990 to 1991, as reported by the New Jersey Association of Realtors last week, sales in Westfield increased by 17.56 per cent — from 336 to 395, Mrs. Luerssen said.

Town statistics cited included only homes sold through the Multiple Listing Service, which are tracked through the realtor board, and not those sold privately.

Statewide, home sales in 1991 increased 23.8 per cent from the levels of the fourth quarter of 1990 and continued to gain momentum during the early weeks of 1992 as mortgage rates sank to the lowest point in nearly 20 years.

The New Jersey group also reported last week its housing affordability index surged to 102.8, up from 87.9 in 1990.

That means a family earning the state's median income of $47,700 had 2.9 per cent more than the minimum amount of money required to buy a $146,700 median-priced home with a yearly average mortgage interest rate of 9.25 per cent.

Home prices in the town, meanwhile increased slightly, 4.01 per cent, on average from $253,204 in 1990 to $263,359 last year, while the average 1991 mortgage rate in the town, 8.5 per cent, was "down slightly" from the year before, Mrs. Luerssen said.

State home sales reflected increases throughout the nation, according to the National Association of Realtors, which said sales increased in all four regions and home prices rose in all

Muhlenberg Procedure Helps Alleviate Pain of Ulcers

Miss Dina Esposito of South Plainfield is pain-free for the first time in two years. The 25-year-old department manager had been plagued by a peptic ulcer that refused to respond even to the most powerful medication, according to Dr. Richard Tiedemann, her surgeon and a member of the medical-dental staff at Muhlenberg Regional Medical Center in Plainfield.

Thanks to a laparoscopic procedure performed by Dr. Tiedemann, a first in the state of New Jersey, Miss Esposito is well on her way to a full recovery.

The operation is called super-selective vagotomy, referring to the selective cutting of the vagus nerves. Without laparoscopy, Dr. Tiedemann explained, the operation would require a large incision from the breast bone to the navel. The patient would be hospitalized for a week and would be out of work for at least eight weeks.

This procedure could benefit up to a half-million people, nationwide, who have peptic ulcers, the doctor said.

Miss Esposito was discharged from Muhlenberg three days after her operation and is expected to return to work soon.

"I've been feeling a lot better since the January 22 operation," she said. "I'm starting to exercise more and my strength is returning."

Miss Esposito, who works with mentally-retarded adults at the Keystone

Community Residence in South Plainfield, has been under the care of Dr. Joseph Edwards, of North Plainfield, her family's physician, and Dr. David A. Goldenberg, the chief of the Gastroenterology Department at Muhlenberg.

"She was hospitalized here briefly in December for constant pain and weight loss," Dr. Tiedemann said. "She was found to have a duodenal ulcer, a break in the lining of the very beginning of the small intestine."

"The ulcer may be partially related to the presence of bacteria in the lining of Miss Esposito's stomach which may have reduced her ability to respond to the medication we gave her," Dr. Goldenberg, of Warren, who has his office in Plainfield.

Dr. Tiedemann said the three-hour operation in January involved making five small incisions, each less than a half-inch long, in her abdomen. A tube was inserted in one of the incisions, just above the navel. A laparoscopic camera was threaded through the tube and into the abdomen, "giving us a closeup view of what we were doing."

About 10 percent of the approximately 5,000 cases of surgery done annually at Muhlenberg involve laparoscopic surgery.

Dr. Tiedemann's use of this procedure is the latest use of laparoscopy. The others are for gall bladder surgery, lung biopsy, colo/rectal and gynecological procedures.

McKinley Introduces New Computer Program

The McKinley School Parent-Teacher Organization recently introduced a six-week, after-school computer program for fourth and fifth graders. The classes are held on Tuesdays at the school from 3:20 to 4:20 p.m.

The program allows the school to maximize the use of its 12 computers. McKinley School is the first school in the entire district to have a computer in each classroom, a Parent-Teacher spokesman said. This accomplishment was made possible through some very successful fundraising efforts which enabled the Parent-Teacher group to purchase three computers this school year.

McKinley will be offering a four-week program to first, second and third graders in the spring.

The course is being conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spieker, who are certified computer teachers. Mr. Spieker works for the Westfield Board of Education as a computer resource teacher, while his wife, Mrs. Carol Spieker, is a computer teacher for the intermediate school in Clark.

The computer workshop has received an enthusiastic response from both students and parents, the spokesman added.

Community Grants Told By Westfield Foundation

A grant of $25,000 to be paid over a period of three years was made by the Westfield Foundation to the Westfield Young Men's Christian Association at a recent meeting of the foundation's Board of Trustees.

Including the $25,000 given the Westfield "Y," the Westfield Foundation committed a total of $37,790 for projects presented by six local agencies.

The Westfield "Y" is seeking to raise $1.2 million over the next three years as part of its long range plan to make capital improvements. The goals to be accomplished in the next three years include converting the men's residence on the third floor to program space for aerobic cross-training and cardiovascular rehabilitation; improvements to the Wallace and Rooke swimming pools; the beginning of the Children's Center, and the replacement of plant equipment. The Westfield Symphony Orchestra again this year received $5,000 to continue its musical outreach programs for Westfield students and to expand these programs to kindergartners through second graders in both the public and parochial schools.

The symphony's programs for elementary and intermediate school children will include "What Can You Do with a Tune?", the new classes for kindergartners through second grade, as well as "Upbeat Live!" and "Introduction to the Family of Instruments." At the high school level, master classes and opportunities to assist the conductor and guest artists will be offered.

The interfaith Council for the Homeless of Union County received a grant of $4,800, a $1,200 increase over last year. The purpose of the grant is to provide funds for four families who are at risk of losing their homes.

Six Westfield religious organizations provide support for the council's programs, and several other Westfield agencies also lend their time and resources.

The Fanwood-Scotch Plains "Y," which served more than 400 Westfield residents last year, received a grant of $1,500 to assist in raising $1 million for a capital improvements campaign. The "Y" plans to build a new gymnasium, adult locker room, wellness center, meeting and office space and rebuild roadways and parking lot.

Spaulding for Children, an adoption agency with offices in Westfield, received $900 to underwrite ticket costs for senior citizens and others wishing to attend the agency's annual fundraiser "Big Band Night," scheduled for April 10 at Cranford High School.

Spaulding for Children specializes in finding adopting families in New Jersey for hard-to-place children. Of the 22 children placed in 1991, all had special needs, most were 10 years or older, and nine have multiple handicaps.

The Choral Arts Society of New Jersey, Inc., which is headquartered in Westfield, received $500 to defray the cost of tickets to the society's next two concerts. The tickets will be distributed to senior citizens as part of an outreach program.

The foundation, begun in 1975, is a nonprofit community group with more than $2.25 million in assets contributed by donors interested in the welfare of Westfield. The foundation's mission is to award grants for programs and projects which enhance the quality of life in Westfield.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the foundation or to learn more about its activities should contact the Executive Director, P.O. Box 2295, Westfield, 07091.

Agency Sues to Overturn Group Home Restrictions

Challenged Ordinance Seen Shifting Elizabeth Share Of Housing for the Handicapped to the Suburbs

A social service agency that assists handicapped individuals to live independently throughout Union County filed suit last week in Federal District Court in Newark seeking to overturn an Elizabeth ordinance which imposes severe restrictions on group homes for the handicapped.

According to Sidney Blanchard, Executive Director of Union County-based Association for Advancement of the Mentally Handicapped, which filed the suit, the ordinance must be overturned to prevent Elizabeth from shifting its share of housing the handicapped to the suburbs.

The measure contains a provision allowing the city department of construction to determine how many licensed medical, nursing and supervisory staff are required for a group home — one of the restrictions the association regards as intolerable, Mr. Blanchard said.

The suit charges that William Rapp, city construction director, relied on the ordinance in denying a certificate of occupancy to an association-administered organization for a condominium unit intended for occupancy by handicapped individuals.

The complaint, filed by Totowa attorney Robert Griffin of the firm of Glerum and Griffin, alleges the ordinance violates the Federal Fair Housing Act, the New Jersey Law against Discrimination and the constitutional protections of due process and equal protection. It seeks to have the Elizabeth ordinance invalidated, injunctive relief from further discrimination against the handicapped, compensatory damages and the imposition of civil penalties under federal law.

The suit alleges that the Elizabeth City Council, in adopting the ordinance, acted "with purpose to discriminate against the handicapped" and was "willful, wanton and malicious." It further charges the city council with discriminating against persons on the basis of color, race, familial status and/or national origin in violation of state and federal statutes and constitutions.

Mr. Blanchard said the ordinance was "calculated to halt the opening and operation of any facility housing more than six handicapped persons. Additionally, it seeks to shift the burden from the city to the suburbs of Union County, which already are housing handicapped individuals in group homes.

There are facilities of this type in Berkeley Heights, Clark, Fanwood, Hillside, Kenilworth, Linden, Mountainside, New Providence, Plainfield, Roselle, Roselle Park, Scotch Plains, Summit, Union and Westfield, in addition to Elizabeth.

"The ordinance contains a number of unduly restrictive provisions that would make it impossible to open and operate group homes in Elizabeth," Mr. Blanchard continued. "The provisions are so broad and so vague that the ordinance gives the city unwarranted powers over housing for one class of individuals, in clear violation of state and federal laws."

"Elizabeth's ordinance is blatantly unfair," he went on. "If carried to a logical — and absurd — conclusion, it could be interpreted as applying to large families, upon whom the city could impose its burdens. If this is allowed to stand unchallenged, what would stop Elizabeth from trying to ban homes occupied by groups of people who happen to fall into a category regarded by some as 'undesirable' for a variety of reasons?"

Noting there are an estimated 250,000 New Jerseyans who are retarded, developmentally disabled, neurologically impaired or otherwise classified as handicapped, Mr. Blanchard said that "at any given moment, any so-called 'normal' individual could become handicapped by a stroke or disabling accident. The city of Elizabeth cannot be allowed to treat so unfairly those now classified as handicapped — or anyone else whom a quirk of fate could thrust into that category. American was founded on the basis of equal opportunity and fair play for all."

"In recent years we have come a long way toward helping the handicapped — whose ranks, but for the grace of God, could include anyone — to enjoy the full benefits of citizenship and freedom. This ordinance represents a step backwards toward the asylum mentality that led to the cruel and unfair treatment of anyone regarded as 'different.' Since the courts offer the only hope of redressing the imbalance and inequity generated by this ordinance, we will seek justice there — no matter how long it takes or how high we must go in the judiciary system."

Oak Knoll School Building New Gymnasium on Campus

Ground has been broken and construction is well-underway for the new gymnasium on the Oak Knoll School of the Holy Child campus at 44 Blackburn Road, Summit.

Construction of the gymnasium was made possible through the success of Oak Knoll's Spirit of Excellence Campaign, Phase No. 2, launched in the fall of 1990.

The Phase No. 2 Campaign has raised over $1,641,000 toward the eventual long-term goal of $4 million. Phase No. 2 is the second step in Oak Knoll's long-range plan for program and physical expansion. Robert A. Pollock, formerly of Summit, is campaign Chairman. The Vice Chairman is Robert A. Crocco of Harding Township.

In addition to the new gymnasium, plans call for the conversion of the old gym into a performing arts and liturgical center and the renovation and expansion of the upper school media center for those in grades seven to 12.

Headmistress, Sister Cynthia Vives, recently discussed Oak Knoll's pressing need for space, Sister Cynthia said. "Our current gymnasium, built in 1956, serves as shared space for gym and creative arts classes, for concert and theatrical presentations, for assemblies and parent events. Frankly, the school has had just too many activities being handled in one 'multi-purpose' room, and it created scheduling and spatial conflicts. Our new gymnasium should provide our students with the finest of athletic facilities."

The gymnasium, covering 18,500 square feet, is being built in the parking lot facing Ashland Road on the lower portion of the Oak Knoll campus. Constructed of modular face brick, the building has been designed by the firm of Butler Rogers Baskett Architects of New York City. Oak Knoll used this firm in 1987 when Phase No. 1 of the long-range plan was accomplished.

Phase No. 1 included the renovation of Grace Hall, a Creative Arts Complex, six classrooms, conference rooms, professional offices, an expanded kindergarten and new science laboratories. The architects' work was cited when Grace Hall, constructed in 1887, was awarded the County of Union Historic Preservation Commendation for the adaptive use of the building.

The new gymnasium will include: Bleacher seating for 200, athletic offices, lockers, showers, a dance studio, a health classroom, an exercise and weight room, a first aid room and a visiting team room. The athletic flooring, recessed lighting and a dividing curtain for simultaneous gym classes is envisioned. Humphreys & Harding, Inc. of New York City serve as construction manager and general contractor.

The 500-seat auditorium will have sloped seats, an extended stage, greater backstage space, enhanced lighting and storage. Oak Knoll students have won state awards in the Teen Arts Festival, in playwriting and in the fine arts. This new facility dedicated to performance will showcase the talent of students.

Eye Openers

SEEING SIDWAYS

There are two parts to vision: central vision, with which you look directly at objects and peripheral vision, which enables you to be aware of what exists on either side.

People are more aware of central vision; we use it consciously to read a book, say, or watch TV. But peripheral vision is important to locate us in our surroundings. Without it, it would be difficult to walk down stairs, hazardous to drive a car.

In a professional eye examination, your optometrist will check both your central and peripheral vision. Loss of either type of vision that is uncorrectable is generally an indication of disease. Peripheral vision is damaged by uncontrolled glaucoma, which is yet another reason for regular glaucoma testing after age 55, to spot the disease while it can be contained. Central vision is affected by degeneration of the macula, the central part of the retina. Other diseases affect the eyes, too.

IN OUTER LIMITS... Third-grade students of Mrs. Rosemary Griffith at Holy Trinity Interparochial School of Westfield recently donned their imaginations and experienced a "Day in Space." The student astronauts read a script for "takeoff" and viewed the constellations they made from cans and flashlights. Their space suits were made of water and bleach containers and a cardboard box served as their oxygen pack and they "walked on the moon," which was made of a foam pad. After the astronauts returned to their launch pad, dessert was served, "space ice cream." Astronauts, shown, left to right, are: Allison Comer, Carolyn Matthews and Daniel Egan.

Council-Board Committee To Meet on February 25

This Is the First Public Meeting of Unit

The Westfield Town Council/School Board Liaison Committee will hold an open-to-the-public committee meeting at 6:45 p.m. on Tuesday, February 25, in the Board Meeting Room in the former Elm Street School, at 302 Elm Street.

First Ward Councilman David A. Mebane, Chairman of Town Council's Liaison Committee, and Dr. B. Carol Molnar, Chairman of the Board of Education's Committee, announced the "sunshine" meeting today.

The agenda includes discussion about town and school budgets, a report from the School Board on the Quality Education Act and the Intermediate School Study, the town's Youth Services Coordinator and the town's summer playground program.

"We look forward to a large turnout of interested citizens at this first public meeting of the town Council/School Board Liaison Committee," said Councilman Mebane. "This is a step in the right direction to helping inform and involve our citizens."

"It is a superb idea to hold these meetings in public — to open them up to the public and to School Board members and Town Council members who are not members of the liaison committee," said Dr. Molnar. "I expect a lively, informative discussion of the agenda topics."

In addition to Councilman Mebane, Town Council's Liaison Committee includes First Ward Councilman Norman N. Greco and Fourth Ward Councilman James Hely.

School Board members who serve on the Board Liaison Committee with Dr. Molnar are Dr. Susan Fuhrman, Mrs. Melba S. Nixon and Dr. Benjamin Rulf. School Board President, Mrs. Susan B. Pepper, is the committee's alternate member. She attends meetings with a regular committee member is unable to attend.

Deep Support for Local Schools A Town Tradition: Mr. Sweeney

After the appearance of Professor Frank Smith before the School Board on February 11, William J. Sweeney, a candidate for the Board, made these comments:

"Our town is a small one. Yet it has deep historical roots and strong local traditions. One of those traditions is the neighborhood school. Most of our children can and do walk to their schools. They can walk home for lunch if they choose. They pass the homes of friends and neighbors along the way, and they know the school crossing guard by his or her first name. They can linger after school with a sense of security. All of this has gone on for decades. And it has produced a school system where children can attend school in peace and security," he said.

"In contrast, the society beyond our borders has grown impersonal, and the security of school children to attend school and to learn has been threatened. Children ride buses to school, parents don't know each other and the schools become large and impersonal," he said.

"Some surrounding communities have embraced the regional school concept. Others in Trenton also advocate this approach in the name of 'reform' Westfield, however, continues to value its tradition of the neighborhood school," he stressed.

"It was because the possible closing of Roosevelt School represented such an affront to our traditions that it created such an overwhelming reaction in our community. That reaction was strong and swift. Particularly vexing was the engagement of consultants from New York City to advise us on the possible consolidation of our intermediate neighborhood schools," Mr. Sweeney said.

"I firmly support our neighborhood school system. It reflects some of our deepest traditions as a community. Moreover, it has been successful for decades in educating our children. We should not create a megaschool at Edison. More children would be transported by bus, and the educational environment would double in size," Mr. Sweeney noted.

"To my mind that compromises the essential character of our neighborhood school system. I don't believe we require consultants to advise us on what our traditions are and why we continue to value them," he said.

"At the Board of Education's February 11 meeting Professor Smith, in delivering his verbal interreport, stated that participants in the public input sessions had erroneously viewed the Roosevelt School issue as 'a question of real estate' or 'how far it is from home to school.' Professor Smith still does not understand the depth of support for neighborhood schools in our community," Mr. Sweeney said.

"I believe the clear consensus in our town is to keep Edison at its present size and keep Roosevelt open to serve their neighborhoods as they have for generations."

"If you agree, vote for me on April 7," Mr. Sweeney said.

New Jerseyans Continue To Feel Recession's Bite

New Jerseyans' pessimism about economic conditions remains at the same low levels as one year ago, with more than four-in-five saying that New Jersey is in "bad times" economically, and nine-in-10 saying that the United States is in an economic recession.

The latest Star-Ledger/Eagleton Poll, conducted by telephone between January 20 and 27, with 800 New Jersey adults, also finds that many residents are personally feeling the pinch of recession, with six-in-10 saying they have been having a hard time trying to make ends meet over the past year. At the same time, however, seven-in-10 report being satisfied with their current standard of living.

Despite the rather bleak assessments of the current economic climate, two-in-five residents are optimistic that conditions in New Jersey will get better over the next year compared to only 14 percent who say things will get worse. However, fully four-in-five believe that the national recession will last at least another six months.

The survey also finds that two-in-five residents feel the federal government is most responsible for economic problems, whereas only 17 percent assign most responsibility to state government and 13 percent to private business and industry.

Stuck in Recession
New Jerseyans' assessments of economic conditions nationally and statewide are as low today as they were at the start of 1991. Eighty-four percent describe New Jersey's economy as in "bad times," the same percentage who offered that description one year ago. Ninety-two percent of state residents now say the United States is in an economic recession — up five points from the 87 percent who felt the nation was in recession a year ago.

Personal Economic Conditions
Nearly three-in-five New Jerseyans "strongly" (36 percent) or "mildly" (21 percent) agree that they have been having a hard time trying to make ends meet over the past year. Certain groups are more likely to report difficulty. For example, 73 percent of those with family incomes between $20,000 and $30,000 and 65 percent of those with family incomes under $20,000 say they have had a hard time making ends meet. Also, two-thirds of those between 18 and 29 years old, and two-thirds of non-whites report having had trouble making ends meet over the last year.

Kenneth Dautrich, Associate Director of the Poll, noted, "It's pretty clear that the negative effects of recession are being felt by a large number of New Jerseyans. The high level of pessimism in the economy is, for many, the result of personal fiscal problems rather than simply a lack of consumer confidence."

The poll also shows that while a majority (54 percent) of residents report that their own family's financial situation has stayed about the same over the past year, one-third say that their situation has gotten worse and only 13 percent say it got better. Those with annual family incomes of $50,000 or less are more likely than those with higher incomes to say that their family's financial situation has deteriorated by a margin of 37 percent to 27 percent. Also, 40 percent of those 30 to 64 years of age say their situation got worse over the past year, compared to 30 percent of those 65 or older, and 21 percent of those under 30.

Despite rather pessimistic evaluations of economic conditions, a clear majority of New Jerseyans report being satisfied with their present living standard. Seven-in-10 are either "very" (21 percent) or "somewhat" (50 percent) satisfied with their current standard of living, compared to 28 percent who are "very" (9 percent) or "somewhat" (19 percent) dissatisfied. Seventy-nine percent of those with family incomes over $50,000 are satisfied with their current standard of living, compared to 69 percent of those earning between $30,000 and $50,000, 63 percent of those earning between $20,000 and $30,000, and 61 percent of those earning less than $20,000 annually.

Will Conditions Improve?
Most New Jerseyans do not expect the recession to end soon. Fully four-in-five (82 percent) residents think the economic recession will last either six more months to a year (35 percent) or more than one year (47 percent). Only 13 percent think the recession will end within the next six months, and only 1 percent think it will be over within three months.

In thinking about future economic conditions in New Jersey, however, residents are slightly more optimistic today than they were last year. Currently, 41 percent project that economic conditions statewide will "stay about the same," 40 percent say things will get "better," and 14 percent say the state's economy will get "worse." In a survey conducted one year ago only 31 percent thought conditions would get better over the next year.

New Jerseyans' optimism about their own personal financial situation, however, is the same as last year. In the current survey one-third of residents feel their family's financial situation will get "better," 11 percent think it will get "worse," and 52 percent say it will "stay about the same." These figures are virtually unchanged from the survey conducted one year ago.

Who Is Responsible?
More residents (39 percent) feel the federal government is responsible for economic problems than blame state government (17 percent) or private business and industry (13 percent). Those with annual family incomes of more than $50,000 (53 percent) are most likely to feel the federal government is primarily responsible for economic problems, compared to fewer than two-in-five in the lower income categories.

LIFE-SAVING TECHNIQUES... Redeemer Lutheran School of Westfield students are taken on a tour of the St. Barnabas Burn Foundation fire safety house trailer.

Fire Safety House Trailer Visits Redeemer Lutheran

The Redeemer Lutheran School of Westfield on February 11 was host to the fire safety house trailer, which is operated by the St. Barnabas Burn Foundation.

The two-story, 28-foot mobile trailer features the rooms of a house that represent the greatest hazards for fires, a kitchen, a bathroom and a living room with a fireplace.

The Mobile Fire Safety House Trailer was purchased by the foundation to help reduce fire, burn and scald injuries in the home by giving children hands-on experience in fire and burn prevention.

Some of the features of the trailer are a machine that fills the house with a non-toxic smoke to simulate fire conditions and a heating element in the bedroom door that allows children to feel the door before opening it, so they can learn a warm door is a sign of fire on the other side.

The $20,000 trailer was purchased with funds raised through Aluminum Cans for Burned Children, a recycling project that involves more than 30 New Jersey Fire Departments, including that of Westfield, and the Alcoa Recycling Company of Edison.

Composting of Municipal Solid Waste Not a Viable Alternative to Incineration

Many of the comments made in a letter to the editor by Angelo J. Bonanno, the Chairman of the Union County Utilities Authority, on solid waste composting deserve serious consideration and support from Westfield residents.

Although opponents of resource-recovery facilities often point to composting as an alternative, even a panacea, the dismal success rate of these facilities, when employed on a large scale, demonstrates anew the technology involved in composting all waste generated by municipalities has not sufficiently proven itself.

The intense odor problems which caused the closing of the two facilities cited by Mr. Bonanno combined with the dangers of carrying composted material containing heavy metals to landfills through which groundwater may flow are two more reasons why large-scale composting of municipal solid waste is not a viable alternative at this time.

The county already is composting leaves and brush, wood and other vegetative matter are being or will shortly be composted at county-owned or private facilities receiving materials from communities such as Westfield.

Union County has spent countless taxpayer dollars to research the safest and most cost-effective method of trash disposal during development of its resource-recovery plant proposal, and we believe the facility is the best use of currently-available technology to dispose of solid waste and should be supported by all of the town's residents — R.R.F. and K.C.B.

Letters to the Editor

Town Council Should Begin Reducing Cost of Government

Recently, I attended a meeting of the Town Council, in which they discussed the capital budget for the upcoming year.

Though it is very clear the town give special consideration to needs such as the Mindowaskin Park project, funding new playground equipment, repairing tennis courts and improvements to Westfield's infrastructure, nothing was said about cutting cost, eliminating duplication and saving tax dollars to fund new projects.

The heads of various town departments appeared before the Council with their "wish lists" for 1992.

Not one question was asked of these representatives about streamlining their operations, finding tax savings in their budgets or determining true needs versus wants.

In the business world we are always under the pressure of the market place, to do more with less and become somewhat imaginative in resource allocation.

Oftentimes it is said government should act more like business.

I say it is high time the Mayor and Town Council get down to business and start thinking of economies of spending instead of promising us everything and giving us another tax increase.

Mayor Boothe Defends Law Requiring Bicycle Helmets

A 16-year-old Westfield resident recently wrote the Mayor expressing concern about the age cutoff in the Westfield bicycle helmet ordinance.

He commented, "I am more familiar with cases of older students sustaining head injuries while riding their bicycles than younger children less than 15 years old."

He also commented, "After this law was instituted the price of bicycle helmets in Westfield skyrocketed. If this law is to remain I feel the Town of Westfield should issue helmets."

I thought your readers might be interested in my reply to this young man:

Thank you for your recent letter...the Legislature has since enacted and the Governor signed a state-wide bicycle helmet statute which also applies only to children 14 years of age and under. Hence we will repeal as surplus Westfield's ordinance in the near future.

The helmet ordinance, more than anything else I can remember in the dozen years I have served on the Council, made me reflect on what government's role is all about...when I went on the dias I really did not know how I would vote. Indeed, I had prepared two separate analyses leading to opposite votes.

About two dozen people spoke that night, with those opposed slightly in the majority. Their arguments focused on "we don't want or need the government telling us something else to do or not to do."

I have a lot of sympathy for this argument, particularly since as a private and corporate lawyer for 30 years a great deal of my time is spent dealing with government regulation or misregulation. I do not want to do what I criticize others for doing.

Two things made the difference for me: First, the uncontradicted statements of doctors and others about the number and severity of head injuries that can be avoided with helmets. Second, my own experience as a parent with "peer pressure," as reinforced by statements in the newspapers or on television by Westfield youngsters — "helmets are dumb" and so on. With age 14 we believed we would cover all those in middle school and younger.

I don't think it is fair for you to be "appalled" we on the Town Council "do not care about the well being of people 16 years old and older."

The nine people on the dias are feeling people with families, and we care about all our residents. We felt 14 was the age people are old enough to make up their own mind, and look out for their own safety...

There comes a point on many issues where government may have to "do something." Good government is identifying that point and then doing the something right. The council unanimously thought it reached that point. Apparently the state Legislature and Governor agreed.

I am not in a position to comment on whether bicycle stores raised helmet prices. I do know, again from experience, efforts at price controls usually are a disaster. The free-market economy almost invariably works best, and abuses work their way out.

I have enjoyed re-thinking this issue in responding to your letter. I hope you will get involved in local government when you reach adulthood, and work out your own solutions to the challenges holding public office presents.

Your letter raised many good points and for that reason, I am sharing this response, with your name omitted, with our local papers.

Report from Washington

Peace Dividend Should Help Military Find Jobs

Public demands that Congress reduce the nation's military budget are beginning to show results, but unfortunately there is a serious downside for millions of workers in defense plants who are losing their jobs in the midst of a recession.

The transition from building tanks, planes and sophisticated military equipment to producing consumer goods will take years to achieve, and no one can estimate the true impact on the millions of families who are forced to relocate or transfer to other, lower-paying jobs.

The men and women in the military services also are feeling the pain of a 25 percent reduction in military manpower. Over the next five years, about 1.5 million military personnel must leave active duty; one-third of them through voluntary or involuntary separation programs by 1995.

It is a unique situation. In the past, we have reduced the size of the military services by demobilizing large numbers of draftees, most of whom were delighted to see their terms end or cut short. This time, however, all military members on active duty are volunteers, many of whom joined to make a career out of the service.

They form the best-educated and best-trained military force in our history, and helped us to win the Cold War and the Persian Gulf War. They deserve all the help we can possibly give them.

The National Defense Authorization Act includes many provisions to ease their transition to civilian life.

However, at the same time the military plans to undertake this reduction it has also asked for $2 billion for recruitment programs. I have urged Defense Secretary Richard Cheney to sharply cut this request, because it is simply not needed. Over $6,000 is being spent this year on each recruit who joins the armed forces, compared to $4,300 three years ago.

The average cost of a 30-second recruitment advertisement on television during a National Football League play-off game was $310,000. Four military recruiting advertisements were run during the game.

In addition to televised commercials, the Defense Department is paying for numerous magazine and newspaper advertisements, mass mailings, free T-shirts, posters, coffee cups and other advertising incentives to attract recruits.

The recruiting force of 23,000 employees at over 6,000 offices are finding it relatively easy to attract young recruits because of high unemployment and the patriotic boost the military services received during the Persian Gulf War. The services need a constant infusion of young people, but we can do it for much less than we're paying now.

Instead of spending nearly $2 billion for the recruiting program, I am urging the Defense Department to transfer most of the funds into domestic programs as part of the "peace dividend."

During the next several years, military personnel who choose early separation will be entitled to a cash settlement that may be taken all at once or spread out over several years. The amount depends on their rank and the amount of time they spent in the service.

They also are entitled to up to 120 days of free military health insurance coverage and are eligible to purchase a one-year health conversion policy. Those leaving the service may continue to reside in military housing for up to 180 days at a reasonable rent. Military dependents also can complete the school year, and families have up to one year after separation to store household effects and baggage.

But the most important step is to provide them with a civilian occupation. Congress has authorized a coordinated program of employment assistance, job training, counseling, relocation assis-

Shining Through Gives Reflections of Intrigue

2 & 3/4 popcorn
Seat-edged suspense is purveyed with stunning alacrity in Shining Through, a too-slick-for-its-own-good spy thriller that often prevails despite its tendency to over-pepper the pot.

The gambit begins circa 1992, with Linda Voss being interviewed by the British Broadcasting Corporation, asked to recount her scintillating spy career during World War II; the rest is a bit of fantastic, however, Melanie Griffith and Michael Douglas team to make the rather incredible both moderately believable and highly entertaining.

Linda (Miss Griffith) comes to work for Ed Leland (Michael Douglas) at a somewhat shady, non-descript corporation in New York City that's really a front for a major covert operations network — gathering information on Germany, Nazis and all that they entail...just in case the United States joins in the fray.

Linda wants to be more than a secretary. Truth be told, she's seen too many spy movies set in Germany; funny thing, she's consistently impressing Ed with the deductions she surfaces, always courteously crediting the movie from which she borrowed the idea — this before she's even supposed to know what type of agency she's working for. It's not supposed to get in the way of things but, p.s., Ed and Linda catch the pre-war fervor and fall in love.

Composting Seen Having Mechanical, Contamination Woes; Viability Doubted

In recent months, it has been suggested by some of the people interested in the subject of solid waste disposal that composting — the process of grinding and mulching part of the waste stream for agricultural use — is a viable and desirable alternative to disposal in a resource-recovery plant.

In this context, we thought it would be useful to advise the citizens of Union County of events relating to composting projects in other parts of the country.

As the Union County Utilities Authority continues construction of the 1,440-ton-per-day Resource Recovery Facility in Rahway, companies involved in composting household garbage have been forced to close their facilities because of severe complications with that technology.

On January 22 Riedel Environmental Technologies Inc. suspended operations at its $26.7 million municipal solid waste composting facility in Portland, Oregon. The 600-ton-per-day facility was being hailed as the "model" municipal solid-waste composting plant. It had been one of the largest commercial composting facilities worldwide but was shut down after tests revealed a number of operational difficulties, including serious odor problems.

This project's failure follows that of the $20.3 million Agripost facility in Dade County, Florida. At one point, that facility was also being viewed as the "model" municipal solid waste composting plant. Although it was designed to process 800-tons-per-day of municipal solid waste, its production rate never exceeded 300-tons-per-day before closing during the early part of 1991. Odor problems also led to the closing of the Agripost facility.

Municipal solid waste composting is one of the technologies that resource-recovery opponents point to as a viable alternative to the authority's waste-to-energy facility. The expensive failure of these two major facilities demonstrates the uncertainty surrounding the current composting technology.

While intense odor problems have caused municipal solid waste composting facilities to close, these facilities are plagued by other problems as well.

Over the years, municipal solid waste composting projects have failed as a result of unpredictable operating and construction costs and the contamination of the compost materials.

It has been determined that municipal solid waste composting materials frequently have been contaminated with dioxins and heavy metals. Under these circumstances, the composted material is of questionable value, if not completely useless. As a result, the contaminated compost is often carted away to landfills.

Three relatively rural counties in New Jersey — Burlington, Cape May and Ocean — are currently looking at composting as their method of processing municipal household garbage. All three counties are in the early planning stages and are still some time away from attaining all of the necessary permits.

In the meantime, the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection and Energy is developing standards for composted materials which may further cause concerns for the three New Jersey counties looking toward this technology.

Space constraints also add to the likelihood that Union County will construct a municipal solid waste composting facility. Union County is unquestionably an intensely developed and densely populated urban area that does not have large plots of undeveloped land available for a composting facility.

Union County does, however, compost certain materials. Presently, most of the leaves generated in Union County are processed at the county's composting site in Springfield. In addition, the remainder of the leaves, a portion of the grass clippings and a large amount of brush and wood are processed at commercial compost and mulching facilities throughout the state. By 1994, as outlined in the county's Solid Waste Management Program, all vegetation generated in Union County will be composted.

While we can hope continued research may improve the composting technology, it is clearly not a proven, reliable solution for our current needs. The closing of these two plants reconfirms the authority's position that this technology will not be able to play a significant role in solving the immediate solid waste disposal problems that face Union County.

The Westfield Symphony And a Change of Venue

By HENRY WYATT
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

I suspect that the Westfield Symphony Orchestra, if they could, would choose the Westfield High School's auditorium as their permanent venue. Like most modern school auditoriums, it was designed to serve as a venue for various functions for which good sound is important. Most communities have no dedicated concert halls, and for musical performance the local auditoriums have to do. But with fairly dry sound and good dispersion characteristics, they do well enough. Most musicians play in countless auditoriums throughout their careers, and they find them quite satisfactory for the most part, a standard feature of American musical life.

The Westfield Symphony's concert of February 1, which included works of Copland, Saint-Saëns and Beethoven, showed the strengths of the orchestra and the hall working together.

People concerned with sound — acousticians, engineers, serious audiophiles — talk about imaging. This is the ability of a concert hall or an audio system to present a sonic image so well defined that the listener can place the performers by ear without actually seeing them. The image is manipulated by the seating of the performers, the positioning of reflective surfaces or microphones, and tape mixing in the recording process. In the home listening room one pays particular attention to the placement of speakers and the position of sound-absorbing objects such as furniture, carpets and curtains.

All of this is about imaging. It is why knowledgeable people are choosy about audio equipment and its installation, or where they sit at a live concert. The most fundamental choice is the listening room itself, or the actual concert hall. In the case of the latter, the vagaries of scheduling and budgets often force musicians to perform in a hall whose inherent bad acoustics mask or inhibit artistic strengths.

The strengths of the Westfield Symphony Orchestra and the auditorium were made for each other. The hall's dry sound has just enough life to it. The acoustical image is close, with every musical detail highlighted in relief. Winds and timpani tend to be very forward in the image, which, in the case of Beethoven's Second Symphony, was the balance the composer would have expected and written for.

Every measure of this symphony pushes the edge of the envelope, a striving for a new force of expression and a delight in novel instrumental colors. The attuned ear will delight in the ingenious instrumental accents and complex voicings which must have shocked Beethoven's contemporaries, as no doubt they were calculated to do.

For the Westfield Symphony and their musical director, Brad Keimach, this is tailor-made. In past concerts they showed an affinity for music needing mannered, well-defined gestures and phrasings. In this instance the orchestra showed what they do so well, all the better in an acoustical environment conducive to their virtues.

Everything was precisely done, with tight attacks and balances. Mr. Keimach kept a firm hand, driving and shaping always. Not for him the genial, the witty, the sunny counterpoint to Beethoven's tragic circumstances. Mr. Keimach emphasized rather the opposite: Tempestuous, seething textures brusqueness and forcefulness to the extreme, and — in the first movement — a decidedly martial and even bellicose spirit, given the march-like themes and rhythms and the heavy loading of brass and timpani.

In this notion of the Second Symphony we have a picture of Beethoven triumphant, contemptuous of his own deafness. The performance was for the most part electric and driven. In the slow movement some ironic contrast emerged as Mr. Keimach let the music's natural lyricism unfold. Here, too, was gracious instrumental filigree, graciously played. But one wished for a little stretching of the phrase here and there, a little more sentiment.

The same attention to detail worked as well for the G-minor Piano Concerto of Camille Saint-Saëns. Again the orchestra served up well-shaped phrases and nicely pointed gestures. The balance between the orchestra and the piano soloist, Brian Zeger, was consistently good.

As a soloist Mr. Zeger was less than convincing. Saint-Saëns' pianism hardly requires a steady technique. Mr. Zeger's passagework was often muddled and inconsistent, and his stylistic advocacy lacked weight.

The concert opened with Aaron Copland's evocative essay Quiet City. Mr. Keimach drew forth firm-toned, clean playing from the strings. The two soloists, principal oboist Richard Foley playing English horn and principal trumpeter Donald Batchelder, were both distinguished. Mr. Batchelder's sound was always beautifully controlled, sweet and full. Mr. Foley played with a wonderful subtlety of phrase and nuance.

It helps when the right acoustics enable the musicians to hear one another. It helps when good imaging lets an audience hear the results of clear direction from the podium and polished musicianship from the orchestral players.

During the intermission a friend of mine, hearing the Westfield Symphony for the first time free of the sonic goo of other venues, said with some amazement, "I didn't know these guys are this good." Well, they are.

Sales Tax Rollback Is Assemblyman's Goal

Assemblyman Robert D. Franks, a Republican representing the 22nd Legislative District, which includes Westfield, has joined with the rest of the General Assembly's Republican Caucus in sponsoring Assembly Bill No. 1, which will roll back the state sales tax from its current 7 percent to 6 percent. In June of 1990, Governor James J. Florio and the Democratic-controlled Legislature, raised the levy to its current level as part of their $2.8 billion tax package.

"This legislation affirms the pledge made by New Jersey Republicans in last year's statewide election to reduce the state sales tax to the same level it had been under Republican Governor Thomas H. Kean," Assemblyman Franks said. "This 1 percent rollback will put $590 million back into the pockets of New Jersey's citizens."

"Republicans believe a rollback of the sales tax will help jump-start New Jersey's economy by sending a clear and unmistakable message to consumers and business the state is once again committed to maintaining the lowest tax base possible to support needed services," he said.

"A lower sales tax will enhance New Jersey's competitive advantage with our neighbors, particularly relative to shopping in New York and Pennsylvania," said Assemblyman Franks.

Does Your 'Hood' Attract Any Authentic Hoods?

Hood — 1. a wild, lawless person or a member of a gang of criminals; 2. a shortened black version of neighborhood, as in Boyz n the Hood, a 1991 summer-time movie release, which portrays life among Los Angeles neighborhood gangs.

The introduction of a new black slang version of neighborhood, hood, makes this movie etymologically, if not cinematically, important.

Hood is the suffix ending of neighborhood, another German construction that combines neigh, meaning near, gebur, meaning dweller, and hood, meaning vicinity or environs.

Hood is also a slang version of hoodlum which is derived from the German words huldrum and huldelump, and literally means a ragged beggar, rogue or scoundrel. Both words are elliptical (shortened) constructions of longer words. Although Boyz n the Hood was critically acclaimed, it received very bad press notices because of the violence it engendered at the theaters where it was playing.

Apparently it attracted a lot of hoods from the country's hoods.

My advice to you is this: Wait for the movie!

NATIONAL POISON PREVENTION WEEK - MARCH 15-21

New Jersey State Safety Council

Safety Council Offers Tips On Prevention of Poisoning

During National Poison Week, March 15-21, the New Jersey State Safety Council urges parents to take the necessary precautions to ensure the safety of young children at home, the place where most accidental poisonings occur.

Nationwide, in 1990 over one million children under the age of five were poisoned. Last year, half of all accidental poisonings reported in New Jersey involved children ages four and under. To help prevent home poisonings, the council offers parents and caregivers the following tips:

- Recognize the hazards of common household products and keep them locked up and out of the reach and sight of children.

- Store household chemicals and medicines in their original containers and never in cups, glasses or soft drink bottles which children associate with food and drink.

- Never leave your child alone with a poisonous product for even an instant. It only takes a moment for a child to get into danger.

- Keep the phone numbers of the Poison Control Center, local emergency medical services and physician next to each telephone.

- Do not wait for a reaction if a child swallows a household chemical, medicine or gets poison on the skin or in the eyes. Call the Poison Control Center at 1-800-

962-1253 which is open 24 hours a day or a physician immediately. If the child is unconscious or in severe distress, call your local emergency service.

Keep children out of danger by keeping poison out of reach. For more information, please call the council at 272-7712.

In Brave New World Will Justice Be Bought?

By LOUIS H. CLARK
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

I hear from my spies in the law business, (Don't tell me!) it's a profession and not a profit-and-loss situation. I watch L.A. Law too.) The hot topic nowadays is to get rid of juries and have the verdict rendered by paid experts with Ph.D.'s after their names.

In order to see how this would work out, I have devised a little courtroom drama. The court is suitably painted a dull buff. The judge is in her usual place. The prosecution is questioning the defendant who needs no counsel because four experts will deliver the verdict.

Prosecutor, "So, Mr. Charles J. Simmons, you were standing at the top of Mostyn's Hill after having just purchased an ice cream cone when your motorcycle broke loose, rolled down the hill and smashed into the plate glass window of Windrow's Delicatessen causing it to shatter into smithereens and causing Mr. Windrow the agony of having to destroy all his delicious cold cuts, potato salads and crisp rolls lest he endanger the throats of his many customers. Correct?"

"Sure," Charlie Simmons is a wide-eyed youth of 22 who is visibly scared by the Prosecutor and the four experts who are staring at him.

"Sure," he repeats, "I didn't want to do it. I was just licking my cone and leaning against the bike when I saw a lady I know drive up."

"On a motorcycle?"

"No, she was in a little green sports car."

"Her name?"

"Well, I wouldn't want a lady involved in this." He looks at the judge who nods.

"Anyway I turned to wave at her forgetting I didn't have my bike on safety. It just started going down the hill before I knew it. I started running after it but it just kept rolling faster. I'm very sorry, but I'm sure my insurance..."

"Don't mention insurance in court Mr. Simmons," the judge says.

"Anything else?" she asks the Prosecutor.

"Nothing else," the Prosecutor replies. "Do you experts wish to retire and find a verdict?"

"No need, your honor," the first expert replies after looking at his colleagues who nod at him. "The guilty party or parties should be made to pay the damages out of their own pockets. Why? Mr. Simmons was given bad toilet training which was the root cause of his leaving the bike unattended in order to wave at a girl. Second, the guilty parties implanted in Mr. Simmons a hatred of windows or delicatessens which caused him unconsciously to aim the bike so it would smash into Mr. Windrow's windows — I mean Mr. Windrow's windows. Third, they allowed him to be victimized by the school bully which accounts for his hostility to insurance companies."

"But who is, or are, the guilty party or parties?"

"His parents, your honor and his grandparents too. That will be, let's see, we've spent a full hour in court. At $300 an hour that will be $1,200 your honor and thank you."

Devils' Powerhouse Steams to the Crown

By JEREMY BARDIN
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Throughout the year, the Westfield Wrestling Team has proven itself to be a county powerhouse.

Their landslide victory in the county tournament on Saturday only reinstated this.

The Devils won the team title 172-144 over second-place New Providence.

On route to this team title the Devils lined up two individual county champions and a runner-up, as well as a third-place finisher.

In the heavyweight division, junior Seth Coren has been outstanding all year. Although he faced a difficult loss against Sam Johnson of Cranford, whom he tied in the regular season, Seth came back to capture a third-place title.

Chris Posey, who has been a stronghold at 130 pounds after coming back from his early-season injury and on Saturday he proved this as he won second place in the tournament, losing only to Norm Spagnola of New Providence.

Fittingly, Westfield's two county champions also were the two captains.

At 119 pounds, Paco Gonzalez continued the wrestling that has only failed him once the entire year.

Paco trampled through his draw, defeating any opponent who stood in his way. The final opponent he beat was Jose Hucrvana of New Providence. This win by Paco helped clinch the Devils' team title.

No wrestler at the county tournament was more dominant than the Devils' Paul Jordan, who has wrestled masterfully this year, boasting an undefeated record at 160 pounds.

His lone loss came while he was wrestling up at 171 pounds.

Jordan, like he did at the Voorhees and Westfield tournaments, tore up the county tournament. He faced Scot Rosander in the finals — an opponent he had already faced this year.

Rosander, from Scotch Plains, suffered a technical fall the first time the two met with Jordan nearly pinning him several times.

This match would be different, however.

Different because Jordan would get his pin. Not only did Jordan receive first place in his weight class, he also won the trophy for most pins in the tournament, as well as the most valuable wrestler trophy.

Other Westfield wrestlers who helped the Devils win the team title were Brian Buldo at 112 pounds, who won fourth place; Chris Edling, at 145 pounds, fourth place; Kurt Duchek, at 152 pounds, fifth place; Tim Martin, at 171 pounds, fifth place; Dan Rinaldo, at 189 pounds, sixth place; George Lasky, at 103 pounds, seventh place, and Matt Robinson, at 135 pounds, eighth place.

About the Devils triumph in the counties Jordan said, "It was a wide-open tournament going in, and a lot of teams could've won. However, with our poise and determination added to the numerous amount of pin points we received, we were able to prevail."

Westfield will next strut their stuff in the state sectionals. They began yesterday as Westfield, the No. 3 seed took on Bloomfield the second seed.

The Westfield High School swim team traveled to Rahway last Friday and increased its undefeated record to 11-0.

Surprisingly, the Rahway team captured first place in the first event, the 200-yard medley relay.

This proved to be insignificant, though, as the Westfield squad bounced back to a first and second place in the 200-yard freestyle with Ted Pollack taking first in one minute and 55.62 seconds, and Andrew Hughes taking second in two minutes and 3.96 seconds.

The 200-yard individual medley turned out to be a sweep for Westfield as Scott Aldrich, Ken Eberts and Dave Schaller took first, second, and third, respectively.

Walter Kapuzinski of Westfield took first in the 50-yard freestyle with a best time of 24.22 seconds, and a Rahway swimmer broke up another possible Westfield sweep, while Kevin Aldrich cruised to a third place in the 50 with a time of 26.89 seconds.

In the diving, Westfield's Chris Delmonico took third.

The 100-yard butterfly was another sweep of the places for Westfield, with Mike Schwebel, Kapuzinski, and Scott Aldrich at the helm.

The mermen then took gold and silver in the next event, the 100-yard freestyle. Senior Owen Kendler's 59.71 second time and Kevin Aldrich's one minute and 1.89 second time proved to be quick enough for the top two times.

With a fine swim in the 500-yard freestyle, Westfield's Andy Larson showed his strength in the longer events by finishing a 1-2 by Rahway by stroking to a first place with a time of five minutes and 45.45 seconds.

Westfield was touched out by the Rahway team in the 200-yard freestyle relay, which was followed with a 1-2 by Rahway in the 100-yard backstroke.

Fortunately, this late surge was just a bit too late as the mermen had already sealed the meet.

Westfield then took the first two places in the 100-yard breaststroke with Rusty Schundler leading the way in one minute and eight seconds and Mike Schwebel following in one minute and 8.14 seconds.

The final event was the 400-yard freestyle relay. Westfield again took gold with the team of Scott Kaslusky, Schaller, Larson and Andrew Hughes sprinting to a time of four minutes and 17 seconds.

The final score was 113-70.

The squad is looking forward to the end of the regular meet season and the beginning of the state tournament on Monday, March 2, with the state sectional semi-finals.

The Spurs extended their winning streak in three as they defeated the Pistons 61-31 in Saturday's Westfield Basketball Association fifth-grade play.

Three players on the Spurs achieved their season high: Peter Anzalone topped the scoring with 21, followed by Peter Desfilalme's 18 and Tim McNally's 16.

Matt Starnoff finished with four points and Tom Schloboski capped the scoring with two.

Jeremy Chinnick sparked the defensive effort once again with his aggressive style. Each man on the Spurs played his best defensive game of the season, including Joe Schaffer and Phillip Jan.

In this game the offensive punch of the Spurs was pitted against the swarming defensive play of the Pistons.

The Pistons are led each week defensively by Jay Polack, Yair Giliza and George Chaung.

Brandon Deuer scored a team high of 19 points while Jon Parker netted eight and Mike Wilhelm's four rounded out the scoring.

Starnoff led the Spurs in both offensive and defensive rebounding, while Polack grabbed the most Pylon rebounds.

Harriers End Season Close to Taking Medals

By MICHAEL BASTA
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

The Westfield Boys' and Girls' Winter Track Teams wrapped up their respective seasons this week as they competed in the Group No. 4 State Championships on Sunday at Jadwin Gymnasium in Princeton.

Jamal Hester brought the Blue Devils closest to a medal by placing 10th overall in the 400-meter race with a time of 53.6 seconds.

Rishon Williams, ending a season plagued by leg injuries, came across the line in 55.5 seconds.

Westfield seemed to be nearing a medal in the 55-meter hurdles as senior Kevin Toth qualified for the semi-finals in the event. Toth ran a time of 8.1 seconds yet failed to move on to the final round.

Coach John Martin saw the rest of his squad post a host of personal and seasonal bests.

Sophomore Andy Riggiero saw his time drop more than 20 seconds in the 3,200-meter race as he finished in 10 minutes and 25 seconds.

Matt Gorbaty, also recovering from injury, posted a time of 10 minutes and 30.1 seconds.

In the 1,600-meter race, Josh Alberson put forth his best effort of the year to break the elusive four minute and 30-second barrier for a total time of 10 minutes and 49.1 seconds.

Fellow senior Rich Andreski crossed the line in five minutes and 3.5 seconds.

Mike Chung led the way for Westfield in the 800-meter race with a time of two minutes and 10.5 seconds, while Roy Bodayla followed close behind in the race, finished in two minutes and 11.5 seconds.

Wrapping up the sprint corps for the boys' team, Rodney Hayes ran the 55-meter dash in 6.9 seconds.

The girls' squad for Westfield was reduced to three for the state championships as numerous team members were not able to make the meet.

Kate Cooke made the most of her opportunity in the 1,600-meter race, however, finishing with a personal best in five minutes and 49.5 seconds.

Both Laura Silverman and Tiffany Hester finished with identical times in the 400-meter race, covering the distance in 68.9 seconds.

Bulls Gore Red Team In Seventh Grade

The Bulls had their offensive machine operating on all cylinders in the first half of the final regular-season contest opening a 19-2 advantage midway through the second quarter in Westfield Basketball Association Seventh-Grade action on Saturday.

It seemed like a safe bet this lead would turn into another win for the league-leading Bulls, the Red team just couldn't get its offense going back to a two-point deficit in the third quarter, 34-23.

Only a strong effort by a Bull team that regulated their composure in the fourth quarter enabled the Bulls to end the regular season with a win and improve their leading record to 4-1.

Kevin Dowling's fourth-quarter play was key to the Bull victory. Kevin hit a critical three-point shot late in the third period to put the game out of reach. Kevin had another fine offensive game scoring 16 points.

Johnny Englewood used his passing and bounding to contribute in the Bull win. John scored 16 points in the final game of the season.

Bobby Meyer had an off day offensively with six points but contributed with his tough defense and strong leadership, while Bobby Jones had his second consecutive strong offensive game, netting five points.

Ryan Christie, Barbara Moore and Fergie Tye rounded out another strong Bull effort with an aggressive defense and error-free offense.

The Red team's season-long success was led by Tyler Hays with 16 points and Greg Fy, who posted 11 points. Drew Motile and Dan Iampert rounded out the offense with two points each.

PUBLIC NOTICE

(Editor's Note: Public Notice advertising plays a unique role both in American history and in the process by which this country's democracy is preserved. It is a promise to the people that they must be informed if they are to govern themselves competently. Public Notice advertising first came into being with the Congress of 1792. That body, recognizing its responsibility to the people, required the Postmaster General to advertise for bids for the construction of new post offices. From that auspicious beginning to the complex publication requirements in federal, state and local laws today, government officials have come more and more to understand their obligations to inform the public through Public Notice advertising. Newspapers over the years have been the vehicle by which these obligations have been fulfilled. They will continue to be as long as the public demands that it be informed frequently and by the best means possible.)

Certificate of Deposit Alternatives Meet Topic

Recently the Federal Reserve lowered the discount rate to 3.5 percent. This has resulted in lower yields on money markets funds and certificates of deposit, and many investors are unhappy with the low interest rates, a representative for Legg Mason Wood Walker said.

In a continuing effort, Legg Mason will be holding a seminar open to the public discussing investment alternatives to certificates of deposit. The seminar will focus on tax-free investing, utilities and equities. Particular attention will be paid to individuals looking to invest Individual Retirement Accounts money or rollovers. The seminar will be held at The Westwood, 438 North Avenue, Garwood, near the Westfield border, on Saturday, February 29, at 11 a.m.

Those individuals wishing to attend should call 232-2686. Reservations are necessary to attend.

Court Action Requested On By-laws

thority and Freeholder Chairman Louis Santagata, a former authority Chairman, added the authority's attorney had determined the bylaws could be amended without a judicial change in the consent agreement.

After Freeholder Alan M. Augustine said he wanted the issue researched by an attorney other than the one for the utilities authority Freeholder Santagata said he would set up a joint public meeting of the two bodies within two weeks of last Thursday's Freeholder session.

A citizens' group opposed to the incinerator, the Concerned Citizens of Union County, at last Thursday's meeting demanded the resignation of all nine authority commissioners, saying the agency is isolation from the voters.

The Commissioners are appointed by the Freeholder Board.

In another action concerning the utilities authority, its Executive Director Joseph Kazar announced he will resign on Monday, June 1.

Mr. Kazar's five-year term expired on January 25 and some Commissioners had considered not reappointing him. It was reported they were considering replacing Mr. Kazar with former Freeholder Chairman James Connelly Welsh, but Mr. Welsh has said he is not interested in the post.

Mr. Kazar would not directly comment on whether the controversy over his reappointment prompted his resignation.

Runnells Employees Keep Lobbying Against Privatizing

wondered what kind of future he would face in a world where the young lose their jobs and the hospitalized face reduced care.

"Is this what I have to look forward to as a young man? To lose the job I worked so hard to hold, and in my old age be shoved into an institution that is less than the best?" he asked.

On another matter Salaam Ismail, the President of the United Youth Council Inc. of Elizabeth, again presented a list of complaints about conditions and treatment of inmates in and visitors to the Union County Jail in Elizabeth.

Joseph Billiams, representing the corrections officers union, corroborated some of Mr. Ismail's concerns. Mr. Ismail wrote in a prepared statement, "Some county officers, detention guards and staff are disrespectful, neglectful and abusive," and he called for an open public hearing on jail policies and operations.

Mr. Ismail's report included 14 recent "incidents" at the jail, including a complaint female corrections officers had experienced sexual harassment at the hands of fellow male corrections officers. Food service complaints ranged from cold and undercooked food to the alleged discovery of waste materials in the food.

A corrections officer was arrested for stealing thousands of dollars from an inmate's account, the report said, and a former inmate has sued the county, claiming a corrections officer raped him, Mr. Ismail wrote.

He added there had been two other incidents of assault at the jail: One in which an 18-year-old claimed to have been beaten by a corrections officer for spending too much time on the telephone, and another in which eight officers were accused of sending five young detainees to the hospital after an alleged beating which followed an electrical fire in the youth detention facility.

Other complaints were mail service was unreliable, the jail was unsanitary and rodent-infested, a federal prisoner was found hanged in his cell, a handgun had been discovered inside the jail and cocaine had been smuggled into the jail.

Also, the report said the jail's main boiler had failed during a recent cold snap, leaving hundreds of inmates without heat for 12 hours.

Mr. Billiams complained a jail conditions investigation committee had met only once in the last four years and added the committee could have prevented some of the incidents in Mr. Ismail's report.

"It seems the county would rather spend money on litigation," he said.

Mr. Billiams agreed that the failure of the boiler was unconscionable, and added, "I cannot believe a $50 million jail was built without a boiler. I mean some of this stuff is incredible."

The Union County Jail's main boiler was not new but was installed from the county's equipment surplus, he said.

Mr. Ismail also said there were not enough visitor passes available. Visitors were not always permitted access to inmates during designated hours. Bathroom doors often were locked and lavatory conditions were unsanitary. In addition, he added, inmates were receiving clothing and books in poor condition.

Money, he alleged, also was being handed over to prisoners from visitors in a less-than-professional manner.

In another action, a lawsuit pending since 1989 was settled last Thursday after a 5-to-2 vote by the Freeholders.

The suit, brought by Public Works Director, Patrick White of Berkeley Heights, named former Freeholders Jeffrey Maccarelli and Joseph Suliga as having improperly used their influence to have him fired.

Mr. White will receive $25,000 for dropping the litigation.

The county has spent $160,000 in legal fees since the action was filed.

Democrats Elmer M. Ertl and Walter McLeod voted against the settlement. Democrat Casimir Kowalczyk was not in attendance.

In other business, the board voted

Utilities Authority Seeks Recycling Site Purchaser

The Union County Utilities Authority has agreed to entertain bids from private contractors interested in purchasing and developing the authority's Bedle Place property.

HOME BUYING GUIDE...James M. Weichert, the President of Weichert Realtors, presents Weichert's new Buying a Home guide, available at all Weichert office locations.

Weichert Offers Free Package For Home Buyers

With low interest rates giving a lift to home sales, Weichert Realtors has come out with a "how-to" kit for homebuyers.

Called Buying a Home, the new Weichert guide takes the prospective buyer step-by-step through the entire homebuying process.

The kit includes tear-out certificates, pull-out charts, "fax machine" sheets and a host of other useful material that will enable even "first-timers" to approach their home purchase knowledgeably.

"Buying a Home" takes the buyer from home financing and finding, through the offer and final closing. A pull-out chart gives an overview of what the buyer can expect as the homebuying process unfolds in logical sequence.

The kit also contains a complimentary mortgage pre-qualification certificate homebuyers can fill out.

Weichert's affiliated mortgage company, Mortgage Access Corp., will pre-qualify the prospective buyers for a specific mortgage amount based upon the information they supply. Those who own a home can mail in a certificate for a free price analysis of their home's current market value.

The new Weichert kit also includes worksheets to help buyers narrow down their home search, "fax alert" sheets for instant information on specific homes, a glossary of real estate terms and homebuyer notebooks. The many services offered by Weichert Realtors to smooth the homebuying process are described as well.

The free kits are available through the Weichert office in Westfield.

authority Chairman Angelo J. Bonanno has announced.

The authority currently owns a 112,000-square-foot building on 6.7 acres of property on Bedle Place, Linden. It was expected that the Authority's recycling center would be housed on that property.

Mr. Bonanno explained the authority's decision to actively search for a new owner of the property was a result of an authority committee recommendation.

The three-member Recycling Center Site Study Committee, headed by Commissioner Dominick Venditto of Linden, met recently to discuss the fate of the Bedle Place property.

"After a thorough review of the authority's options, the committee has recommended to the full board of the authority a contractor be sought to purchase the land," Mr. Venditto said.

Mr. Bonanno noted the committee took the position of the Linden City Council into consideration when making their decision.

"The governing body of the City of Linden did not want a recycling center situated in that part of the city," Mr. Bonanno said. "Taking their position into consideration, the committee recommended finding a developer to purchase the Bedle Place property from the authority."

Mr. Bonanno noted the successful implementation of the committee's recommendation to find an alternative site is contingent upon finding a developer who will purchase the Bedle Place site at a specified amount so the authority will not realize any losses from the transaction.

Mrs. Kelly said the ultimate beneficiaries of the international conference will be local homebuyers and sellers.

Remodeling Show Slated For Three Days in March

Exhibitors are reserving display booths for the Great Annual Union County Home Remodeling and Better Living Show, which will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, March 27, 28 and 29, at the National Guard Armory in Westfield.

The show is produced by All Seasons Promotions, Inc. in cooperation with the Westfield Area Chamber of Commerce.

Among the 100-plus exhibitors expected, the following members of the Westfield Chamber have already reserved display space: the Decorating Den, Image Maker, McDowell's Plumbing and Heating, Portasoft, Steuernagel's Nursery and Westfield Upholstery. These firms are included in the pre-show mass marketing campaign of television, newspaper and radio.

According to promoters, thousands of people who own or rent homes, condominiums, apartments and offices and need to remodel, add-on, build or improve these spaces will attend the show. Exhibitors have the opportunity to meet new customers and be able to talk person-to-person with more people during the show than might enter their business locations during an entire year.

We encourage local businesses to participate in this blockbuster event," says Chamber Executive Director, Mrs. Cynthia Kowalczyk. "Those who participated last year found the show to be an excellent marketing opportunity, well worth the exhibitor's fee."

Display space is still available. For information, please call All Seasons Promotions at 1-800-237-6024 or the Chamber at 233-3021.

Sale of Homes in Town Rise Faster Than in State

but seven of the 117 metropolitan areas.

There were no double-digit price increases in the Northeast. The biggest gains occurred in inland cities, where housing often is cheaper than in coastal cities.

The affordability index increased at the national level to 115.8, up from 108.5 in 1990.

Lower interest rates and housing prices joined to drive New Jersey's single-family home sales to 118,700 units in 1991, up from 114,800 in 1990 but down from 125,200 in 1989.

"It is partially a function of the market itself, and it also is a sign the state's economy is beginning to move forward," according to Joel Naroff, the Chief Economist at First Fidelity Bancorporation, the state's largest banking company.

"Low mortgage rates are extremely helpful," Mr. Naroff said, "and we also have seen low prices. The combination of the two has made prices very affordable in the state."

He added this year should be a good one for both housing sales and new construction in the state and, since excess supply is not particularly great anymore as the economy picks up sales figures should remain firm.

The average rate for a 30-year fixed-rate conventional mortgage in the state dropped to 8.32 per cent on January 10, the lowest rate since 1974, according to Keith Gumbinger, a spokesman for HSH Associates, the mortgage publisher.

Rates for a 30-year mortgage were 9.73 per cent in January 1991.

Rates increased about half a percentage point since January 10, hitting 8.75 per cent two weeks ago, according to Mr. Gumbinger. The average for a one-year adjustable rate mortgage was 5.84 per cent.

The state realtor association said all but two of the industry boards in New Jersey reported an increase in the number of homes sold during the fourth quarter of 1991, compared with levels of the same period a year earlier.

Housing costs also declined as a percentage of income with costs at 24.3 per cent of income in the state in 1991, down from a high of 33 per cent in 1989.

Rock N' Readathon Debuts At Town's Franklin School

Sounds of Da Doo Run Run — Let's All Sing and Do Our Thing — Rock 'n' Readathon echoed through Franklin School recently as musician, Stanley Schwartz, and his son, Jacob Schwartz, led the students in singing an original jingle he composed as a kickoff for this year's Franklin School Readathon.

A writer, composer and arranger, Mr. Schwartz demonstrated for the children how he was inspired to write some of his familiar jingles.

His company, Stanley Schwartz Music, has clients which include Budweiser, Whirlpool Chevrolet, Slim Fast, Pillsbury and Macy's.

Mr. Schwartz's career in the music industry has spanned many years and has given him an opportunity to direct performers such as Melissa Manchester, Billy Crystal, Robert Klein and Carol Bayer Sager and produce an array of artists including B. B. King, The Neville Brothers, Roberta Flack, Herbie Hancock, The Temptations, Leon Redbone, Joe Jackson and Judy Collins.

An accomplished saxophonist and pianist, he also has performed on the albums of artists such as Diana Ross, Ringo Starr and Barry Manilow.

During the school assembly Mr. Schwartz donned the flue to play an arrangement of jazz and classical music with his son, Jacob Schwartz.

Jacob, a Westfield High School student, plays keyboard and guitar.

Advanced Learning Program Back-to-School Nights Set

Back-to-School Night for parents of McKinley, Tamaques and Washington School fourth-grade students in the Advanced Learning Program will be held on Wednesday, February 26, from 7:45 to 9 p.m. at Edison Intermediate School.

Back-to-School Night for parents of fifth grade advanced students in McKinley, Tamaques and Washington Schools will be held on Thursday, March 5, also from 7:45 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Edison.

Back-to-School Nights for parents of fourth- and fifth-grade advanced students in Franklin, Jefferson and Wilson Schools were held in the fall.

Belt tightening in the current 1992-1993 school budget reduced the Advanced Learning Program from a full-year program to a half-year program for fourth- and fifth-grade students. Advanced students attend regular classes four days per week and on one day per week attend advanced classes at Edison Intermediate School for half a year.
