In RECOGNITION

Few of us ever climb the steep stairs to the art room, but not one of us fails to appreciate the quiet strength of Miss Hergt's character. Year after year, she has contributed her time and talent towards making our yearbook a success. Her only reward has been our unspoken but sincere thanks. In years to come we shall remember her, not so much as an art teacher, but rather as a woman whose unfailing generosity and quiet kindness have won our admiration. Therefore, it is to Miss Hergt that we dedicate our annual this year, hoping that, in this way, we can show our deep appreciation of the debt of gratitude we owe her.

FOREWORD

Halfway up Orange Mountain stands OUR SCHOOL. Somewhat withdrawn from the road, it seems to the passerby neither unusual nor imposing. True, it has a certain beauty as it rises from the mountain-side, the green of the shrubbery softening its stern walls as they stand in sharp contrast against the deep blue of the sky. It is a beauty, however, whose counterpart can be found anywhere else in our country; for ours is a typical American high school. The green of its surrounding grounds is marred by numerous brown tracks, silent evidence of the hundreds of feet that pass that way each day, in winter's snows and summer's heat. The worn surface of the stone steps, too, bears the mark of the continual tread of countless students throughout the years.

With each passing season the aspect of OUR SCHOOL varies, presenting to the outside world an everchanging panorama of school life. In the dim light of many an autumn afternoon, midst the smell of burning leaves, the slopes of the campus are covered with slowly moving crowds. The flash of a maroon and white uniform, the dying sound of a school cheer, the blare of a trumpet, the pungent smell of peanuts—all are part of our football season. Later in the year, under the gray skies of winter, the students, clutching books with frozen fingers, come and go more quietly. Only the occasional roar of an antiquated automobile disturbs them as they trudge homeward over the crisp snow. Then, as the icy winds of winter give way to warm spring days, the campus becomes once again the favorite haunt of the students. Some sit in groups under the trees, talking and studying; others wander aimlessly back and forth, enjoying the momentary respite from class.

If we are to discover the heart of OUR SCHOOL, however, we cannot afford to linger here. Let us join the groups of students moving slowly towards the school in response to the warning summons of the 8:25 bell. As a member of the class of '41, I invite you to visit OUR SCHOOL, to meet the faculty and students, and to watch our everyday life.

For three years this has been Our School—a school we have loved and are proud of. Now we are leaving the shelter of its walls. Others will take our places, and soon our names will be but a memory. West Orange High will always be more than a memory to us, however. It is a symbol of Youth; it is the emblem of our own happy schooldays. In years to come we shall think of Our School and remember with gratitude the many happy hours we spent within its walls, the ideals it taught us, and the opportunities it opened up for us.

Countless numbers of times we have mounted the steps to Our School and passed through its doors into an atmosphere of life and friendliness. These doors are more than a mere entrance, however; they are the gateway to knowledge, the portals of democracy. A never-ending stream of students pass through them, forming a cavalcade which stretches back through the past and reaches out into the future, linking us to the generations of yesteryear and to the generations as yet unborn. It is the march of Youth, holding aloft the torch of education, the hope of democracy.

*A*n unwonted peace reigns over Our School, deserted by the students who are its life and soul. Gazing once more at the familiar scene, however, we can almost hear their carefree voices filling the air. As we stand lost in a thousand memories, we can feel the soft breeze which ruffles the trees over our heads. No, Our School does not change; only the students change. Though the years may pass, we shall always find this same scene, the driveway sloping gently up from the road, the tall trees shading the grass, and Our School rising from the side of the mountain in solitary dignity.

PERSONNEL

Having entered Our School, we find ourselves at once caught in the midst of its daily life. The crowded halls are filled with a medley of sound. The metallic clang of closing lockers mingles with chattering voices, shouts of laughter, and occasional groans of distress. Since Our School depends for its being upon those who work and play within its walls, let me introduce you to the throng of humanity about us—to our faculty, our principal, our board of education, and most of all, to the students of our various classes.

Super

MR. Strong's untiring work for our interests and his expert management assuring us of every school necessity and comfort too often pass unnoticed in the hurly-burly and rush of class life. We are able to hear him only a few times a year; these days are eagerly looked forward to, and his advice is cherished and followed.

Yet when we find him again each fall in his accustomed place among the football players, cheering as wholeheartedly and as excitedly as any undergraduate; and we see him downcast at our failures or rejoicing with us at our victories, we recognize him not only as our trusted guide and adviser, but also as our friend.

intendent's Message

*"New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient things uncouth.
They upward still and onward,
Who would keep abreast of truth."*

You, as members of the Class of 1941, are about to face new duties and new occasions to assume your responsibilities as citizens. This is your country. It is to be guided and defended. It is my hope that you have received a conception of the American way of life and what it means to be an American.

I give you my best wishes for success and happiness.

JESSE I. TAYLOR

Mr. Taylor, the assistant principal is ever ready to help us out of our troubles through his sage counsel and understanding encouragement.

Knights of the Round Table

Now let us slip unseen into the superintendent's office, where every second Monday of the month Colonel Herbert Barry, president of the Board of Education, presides at board meetings. It is this board of five members that selects our faculty, provides for the erection and maintenance of our schools, and in June hands us our hard-earned diplomas.

Despite their influence on our lives, however, few of us know very much about these five people. Colonel Barry, eminent lawyer and soldier, is perhaps best known to us. Often we have seen him at our football games watching anxiously when the opposing team came dangerously close to making a touchdown.

The vice-president of this all powerful body, Mr. Frederick Wolff, is at the head of the committee in charge of the physical upkeep of the school buildings. Mr. Henry Mecke, newly elected this year, is the board member in charge of finance, contracts, and supplies. Another new member is Mr. William Murray, Chairman of the Committee on Health, Physical Education, and Athletics. Mrs. Chester Guinn completes the list of members. Her job is to see that the highest standards are maintained in the personnel of our faculty.

It is with sincere gratitude that we extend our thanks to these five people who serve us faithfully throughout the year.

Crossroads of the School

Miss Heslin

Miss Daniels

In our school, as in every school, the hub of all activities is the office. Throughout the day students troop in and out with absence excuses or tardy slips. The scene is always much the same as we see it now. Miss Heslin and Miss Daniels are hard at work behind their desks, while several students stand restlessly waiting to hand over some type of information to the proper authorities. Some leave with looks of relief; others go out richer by a few detentions. A half-forgotten senior sits in a corner nervously clutching a college catalog, obviously awaiting Mr. Reimherr's return. Thus, day in and day out, the work of the office continues with unvarying efficiency.

SENIORS

THE AD

We are not an unusual class, the class of '41. Our lives, our successes and failures, are no magic, unfolding tale. We are merely, like our school, representative of thousands of seniors throughout America, whether in small mid-west towns or in crowded cities. What talents lie within our midst we do not know; what success and what fame will come to our members we cannot foresee now as we leave behind the shelter of our schooldays. Still it is backward, now, that we look rather than forward, backward over our three years of high school.

It hardly seems three years since we entered these hallowed halls for the first time, just a little awestruck at our sudden introduction into high school. It was awe mixed with pride, nevertheless; for our sudden promotion made us feel strangely grown up and sophisticated. The kindly upperclassmen, however, lost no time in informing us that, no matter what our private opinions might be, in the light of their superiority we were still children.

During our first days there were many things about high school life which troubled our unlearned brains—study halls, for instance. Why on earth we were expected to devote whole periods to homework was a complete mystery to us. Soon, however, we arrived at the inevitable conclusion that this institution was only an idealistic dream of the faculty. Study periods, we discovered, could be put to far better use, such as, bombarding the pretty blonde a few seats away with paper pellets or writing long involved notes to our friends (placed on the other side of the room by some inconsiderate teacher).

As the year progressed, we began to feel at home—even to the extent of daring to investigate the more remote regions of the school without fear of being lost for days in some out-of-the-way corner. However, the future still held a few surprises in store for us. We were overcome by awe as we listened to the junior and senior debates. A few of us, however, became fired with a desire to follow in the footsteps of these modern Ciceros. Our enthusiasm, however, cooled somewhat in the face of long weeks of preparation and sank out of sight when we stood with quaking hearts before the school to make our first speech.

Another task we found before us in the course of the year was the election of class officers. It was one of the first signs that we, as a class, were beginning to exercise our powers of discretion. There was, it is true, a singular lack of feminine representation since all four officers were boys. However, I doubt whether the girls were really disappointed since Jim Hill as president, Jim Jones as vice-president, Bob Maas as secretary, and Joe Ospenson as treasurer all did splendid jobs.

It was not long before our sophomore year receded into the past, and we found ourselves suddenly elevated to the position of juniors. We returned that September filled with a sense of our growing importance. The humiliating initiations of the Clio-Philo Banquet forgotten, we were now full fledged members of these proud literary societies. The language clubs had admitted us to their mysterious proceedings. The junior boys were in great demand to fill out the various athletic teams. In fact, some of our classmates were showing definite signs of becoming football heroes, although whether because of athletic prowess or personal charm I was never able to decide.

VANCE GUARD

In our junior year the girls asserted their rights more strongly in class elections and elected Virginia Williams as vice-president. George Furey became president, and Bob Maas retained his job as secretary. Warren Morgan completed the staff of officers, filling the all important job of treasurer.

Encouraged by their rising importance in school affairs, the juniors became imbued with a feeling of self commendation. The junior debate did nothing to destroy this contented frame of mind. We noted with pride that our speakers had gained in confidence and knowledge (undoubtedly due to the fact that they had conquered their fear of the library and a hatred for reference books).

Owing to our growing self satisfaction, it is well that the sobering influence of finals descended upon us at this point. However, before this calamity occurred, we had our greatest triumph of the year, namely the Junior Prom. A tremendous amount of work and many headaches went into its making, but even now as worldly wise seniors we still remember it with pleasure.

All our former activities paled in importance, however, as our senior year came over the horizon. It began auspiciously with the advent of the football season with its wonderful record, and the pride we felt when our team was invited to play in Florida (even if they didn't go). No wonder our football players were so popular this year with the girls of our school.

The only thing potent enough to disentangle our thoughts from football and football heroes was the Senior Play. I wonder if we shall ever recover from the shock of finding such a perfect Henry Aldrich in our midst; or whether we can ever look at Mervin Binder without thinking of the caustic, harassed detective he played so well. Most of all, though I am still marveling at the grand job Joan Manda did with the part of the erratic Miss Wheeler. Altogether we were proud of our young actors and actresses and their production of "What a Life." In fact, in life's darker moments I often wished that the staff of Central High School might be substituted for some of our esteemed faculty. The ensuing chaos would have done much to relieve the monotony of school life.

Following our dramatic efforts, the months rolled serenely on, with only an occasional break in the daily grind. Class elections, debates, plays given by the language clubs, and the basketball season—each disturbed the even tenor of our school life momentarily. Nothing, however, could stay the hand of time which brought the end of our schooldays closer and closer.

While our high school career did not precisely end in a blaze of glory, it did end in a hectic blaze of excitement. The Clio-Philo Banquet, finals, and Class Day trod close on each other's heels. Then came our last brief social success—the Senior Farewell; and finally the night of nights—graduation. With unusual seriousness and a little pardonable pride, we grasped our hard-earned diplomas, sang the Alma Mater for the last time, and, slowly turning away, bade farewell to our school days.

The BOSSSES

Just as a country is judged by its leaders, so is a class judged by its officers. We, the class of '41, are proud of the four seniors whom we have chosen to represent us. We are confident that they will not let us down, now or in the future.

All the seniors may not be zealous scholars, but they showed an unsuspected respect for the value of brains when they elected Jim Jones as Class President. Jim is one of those remarkable people who manage to remain near the top of the honor roll and at the same time engage in twice as many activities as the rest of us sleepy people. Jim's main relaxation from his load of responsibilities is his band which, of course, he runs on an alarmingly business-like basis.

The quiet charm of our vice-president, Joyce

Rinehart, is the envy of many a girl in Our School. In all of the numerous offices she holds, Joyce manages to carry out her duties with a minimum of disturbance and a maximum of efficiency. She stands high on the honor roll every marking period; but what is even more important, she also stands high in the regard of everyone who knows her.

Our treasurer, Gene McNerney, is known throughout Our School for his ability and dependability upon the football field. Although his job of extracting dues from high school seniors is somewhat equivalent to getting blood out of a stone, Gene does not appear to be weighed down by the responsibilities of his office. He still retains his happy smile and friendly manner, qualities which have insured the permanence of his popularity. Obviously it will take far more than the trials of high school to disturb our cheerful treasurer.

If anyone is inclined to believe that this is a man's world, he has only to glance over the school record of our secretary, Virginia Williams, to find his mistake. In a school which shows a marked preference for masculine class officers, Virginia has twice been elected to such an office. Such unusual popularity is, however, by no means Virginia's only claim to fame. At the head of her class scholastically she, nevertheless, finds time to take part in a bewildering array of school activities.

Life brings many changes in its train; nothing remains unaltered by the hands of Time. As we walk the ways of life, we realize the truth of this. Even our three short years in high school have taught us this lesson. With the passing of the years the membership of the class of '41 has changed; some of our schoolmates have left us, while others have joined us.

Those who are no longer numbered among our class are not forgotten, however. They have left behind something of themselves in our hearts and memories. Death itself cannot erase those memories. Hope Betts and Dorothy Stadtman were two of our classmates whom death has taken from our midst. Yet their memory is alive today in the hearts of those who knew them. We do not easily forget those who have walked the path of life with us, sharing our work and our play. Thus, on our minds the names of these two are forever inscribed as members of the class of '41.

OUR STARS

These are the students who have earned the right to be called the leaders of our class. Through three and a half years of hard work and ceaseless effort they have striven, and now the class of '41 salutes them with pride and admiration.

OUR LAST GIFT

Inevitably there comes for every Senior that last day of school which brings mixed feelings of pride and sadness. Since this is such an important milestone in our career, let us describe that day to you.

On that memorable day in June the confusion was unbearable. The noise of crashing locker doors, snatches of excited chatter, and whoops of joy echoed through the school until the old gray halls fairly shuddered with sound. Countless poor souls, hardened to the uproar, staggered about under a load of papers, forlorn gym suits, and other treasures that manage to hide in a locker undetected until the very last day. Shouldered by this harassed crowd, a few unfortunates just dazedly clutched offending report cards and blinked dolefully. Teachers, ignored in the midst of the clamor, stood with fixed smiles, thankful that soon the din would be stilled for two whole blessed months.

We seniors, however, thought less of the future than of the past, that day. There was the old familiar sound and fury beating around us for the last time. Brooding, I watched the "younger children" almost jealously. Near me, caught in the uproar, a tiny sophomore battled furiously, emitting vain but lusty yells for a lost comrade. "If she were as tall as Stanley Lenox," I mused, "she could stop that awful wailing and locate her chum easily." Then came the idea. If we could leave some of our outstanding qualities, like Stanley's inches, to our long suffering Alma Mater, we might feel happier about leaving. Eureka! With the help of some classmates hastily plucked from the crowd, I listed the assets—and liabilities—that we would cheerfully share. For instance, we bequeathed:

1. First, to the Junior Class in general, our ability to create an imposing Honor Roll.
2. To the Junior boys, the Valderrama twins' charm and good manners.
3. Dot Suyker's car to the Junior girls—so they won't have to hook rides anymore.
4. To the school, Bud Johnson's musical skill to store for future necessity.
5. All our ability for noisiness to Mrs. Nock's timid Latin students. They just won't speak up!
6. Joan Adlam's exciting study periods to someone who gets bored easily.
7. To Jane Thatcher, Jane Kantner's reputation as a "prima donna."
8. Jack O'Rourke's histrionic ability to the budding Barrymore of next year's drama.
9. To Connie Kiepe, Martha Beattie's way with the men—not that Connie needs it, of course!
10. To Mr. Wear, Pushnox's special recipe for becoming a "gweat big man."
11. Lee Walton's imposing list of 90's to some deserving grand.
12. To Dick Shaw, Tom Hill's "savoir faire" as a cheerleader.

13. Maureen McEvoy's perfect accent to the "Circle Francais." Won't Miss Allen be happy!
14. The dependability that Walt Mahoney displayed in the Columbia game to Bob Hammarburg, next year's mainstay.
15. To some romantic Junior—from A. Albert—careful instruction on "How to Dazzle a Math Teacher."
16. To Wilma Wilber, "Cookie" Clark's infectious grins to add to her already large store.
17. For all "Blue Monday" sufferers, A. Williamson's wit. It's a sure cure.
18. Joan Manda's popularity—relinquished on leaving school to Kay Landers.
19. Mickey Danerhirsh's artistically decorated locker to some Junior who wants to brighten the drab school life. Don't all speak at once, please!
20. From Warren Morgan, "all around Senior," to George Pitcher, "all around Junior," all those qualities that make Warren such a swell fellow.
21. V. Williams' or A. Albert's marks to D. Pepoon. Take your choice, Dorothy.
22. To all the slouching Junior girls who so annoy Mrs. Muller, Joyce Rinehart's dignified posture.
23. To the Junior Prom Committee, Jim Jones' and Bill Comer's superior knowledge of good swing.
24. Grace Carlson's voluminous history notes to Miss Bliss. They'd make a wonderful text.
25. To next year's "subscription extractors," Ed Wells' genius for salesmanship.
26. From Bill Hayes to Miss Weissenborn, a nonchalant attitude toward literature in general.
27. Our Class President's pretty waves to those girls who are forced to coax their curls and swirls.
28. All our thanks to Smitty for that Lincoln's Day speech. He'll make us good Americans yet!
29. To anyone who thrives on trouble, Jerry Wolf's—er—"drag" with Mr. Thomas.
30. From Stan Lenox to Brendon Byrne, the gift of loud, long, and vociferous arguments.
31. Encouragement to Clio and Philo in their "cup races."

32. Herb Mecke's penchant for handling umpty-ump activities (and handling them well) to an ambitious Junior, Danny Kram.

33. To Mr. Reimherr, and faculty, sincere apologies for all the trouble we've caused. Well, there it is, just as we scribbled it down, jostled by rushing, whooping figures. And that's how we came to write it, just as I've told you. It's no masterpiece, but it helped. We were happy and cocky again almost immediately. Of course, we've been that way ever since. Being generous with our assets must have done it.

Generosity's wonderful.

THE IN-BETWEENS

Helen Clasen

PROBABLY the happiest group of students in Our School is the Junior Class; for the juniors have recovered from their sophomore timidity and as yet have not taken over Senior responsibilities. This year they returned from a summer of carefree pastimes full of ambition for and confidence in the following year, confidence because they had a whole year of experience behind them upon which to fall back. They felt far removed from those bewildered youngsters of the Sophomore Class whom they first met losing their ways in the halls; in fact, they seemed to have completely forgotten that they had ever belonged to that class whose members they now considered so young and insignificant.

I said before that they were full of ambition. Indeed, they are; but already many must have attained the ends of their ambitions, for they excel in many fields. Since our purpose in attending school is primarily to further the pursuit of knowledge (or at least let us hope that that is the purpose), let us first make our bow to the scholars. Many there are who have worked diligently all through the year and have been justly rewarded for their exemplary efforts by "making" the honor roll. Among those who appear consistently high on the honor roll are: Gladys Dawson, Ruth Norton, and Dorothy Pepoon.

There are other phases in the juniors' school life besides that of the classroom, however. The athletic side cannot be overlooked, for the juniors have many excellent athletes in their midst. Outstanding representatives in sports from their class are: Bob Hammarberg, Pat Brennen, Alfred Sansone, and Dick Wagner. There is always a great cheering crowd of juniors at the football and basketball games, for they are brim full of school spirit. It is a question whether the spectators, shouting themselves hoarse with cheering, or the players in the thick of the game enjoy themselves the more.

Now as the school year draws to a close, the juniors look back over it and decide it has been the best but busiest year yet. It has been packed full of study and fun. Added to their other interests, many have taken active part in the various organizations and clubs throughout the school. Some were elected officers of these clubs and found that there was a good deal of work attached to the honor of holding such a position. In fact, the juniors have delved into just about everything that is going on about the school. Now they look forward to another year of school crowded with new enterprises—to a year when they will be seniors.

Your acquaintance with the juniors would not be complete without an introduction to their leaders, the four class officers.

SOME FAVORITES

TO pilot their ship of state this year, the juniors have very wisely selected quiet Martin Bross. Martin is decidedly active in athletics. In fact, he is, I have heard, a noteworthy prospect for football teams of future years. Pigskin laurels, however, are not enough to satisfy this ambitious youth; for he is also an ardent participant in track activities. Having heard much of his versatility I was not surprised to find that Martin spends his free evening hours developing his reputation as an unusually talented dancer.

As all captains must rest, Dick Wagner is ever-ready to take up the watch as vice-president. "Lamp," as he is called, carries on the Wagner tradition by excelling on the basketball court. In addition, he does not lack for scholastic ability, another family trait. However, don't get the idea that it's all work and no play; for Dick is noted for his sense of humor. Perhaps Dick wouldn't mind if I mentioned that he is very "boyish" in that he loves to eat and is very fond of his dog.

Shorthand may not be one of her subjects but we seniors feel that the juniors made no mistake in selecting Alice Hart to take notes at their meetings, or, in other words, to act as class secretary. Among her feminine virtues can be included sewing and piano playing. She has found time, too, to earn herself a reputation as a good scholar. However, so that no one will begin to think that she is a "cream puff," allow me to inform you that this pretty young miss goes in quite strenuously for that hitherto masculine pastime, bowling.

The juniors made a wise choice when they elected Helen Clasen class treasurer. Her pretty face, I am sure, could draw money from the flattest pocketbook. Should her charming appearance fail to sway some cold heart, a sweet voice is ready to add convincing arguments to the plea of her smile. Incidentally, this last asset stands Helen in good stead in her participation in the activities of our choir. Popular with both boys and girls, Helen is also outstanding as one of the better girl athletes.

There is one person whom the juniors can count on for ever ready sympathy and never failing patience. That person is Mrs. Nock, junior class adviser. It is to her that the juniors owe thanks for much of their success in Our School.

SOPHOMORES

Peter Robison, Mary Alford, Joan Blake, Thomas McHugh

PERHAPS you have noted in our midst a band of students more loaded with books, more confused about bells and room numbers, more hesitating in manner, and smaller in stature than the superior upperclassmen. This is the Sophomore Class, still bewildered by its sudden transition from being cock-o-the-walk in junior high school to being the least of the unimportant in this institution of (somewhat) higher learning. Nevertheless, this class has painstakingly fulfilled tradition by losing itself completely the first days of school, by electing its officers only in time to enter them in the yearbook, and by outdoing the shades of Webster and Clay in the annual sophomore debate.

Some of these not-too-innocent youths have just discovered that home work must be in on the day assigned and that (courtesy of the grim study hall teachers) tardiness, gum chewing, and other unpardonable crimes ring upon the offenders' heads several afternoons C. D. H. (confined to detention hall). Others, however, with their excellent scholastic records have won the teachers' hopes for a repeal of the red ink issue and Mr. Reimherr's most Buddah-like smiles. Those whose averages for the first half year rate "magna cum laude" are: Irene Norton, Joan Blake, Irene Rowe, Betty Virtue, and Robert Young.

As well as being notable from a scholastic standpoint, the sophomores boast several future athletic heroes. Among these "muscle men," Peter Robinson, the president of the class, and Thomas McHugh, who holds the treasurer's post, have already won the recognition of their classmates for their merit on the football field and the basketball court. Wenner and Wear, Inc., have promising charges in John Christiano, a nimble-footed, quick-dodging halfback, and Allan Haase, a J.V. man whose height, weight, and outstanding record in the Roosevelt Varsity explain his classmates' and (even more important) the coaches' hopes for next year's team.

The sophomores also show an unprecedented interest in public speaking. Of course, it is traditional for them to survey with awe the "wonderful" speakers of the upper classes. It is even, as I mentioned before, expected that they will produce good debates themselves. However, it is by no means conventional for them to have so many members who are stricken with a desire to sway the world with the fire of oratory. In the Debate Club they show an alarming tendency to take laurels away from the older members. At least, we hope that this trait will help them in the future in talking their way out of tight corners. However, judging from experience, I am afraid they will need very strong persuasive powers to evade the avenging arm of justice in this school.

When we think of the sophomores it is natural that five people should stand out particularly in our minds. They are the four class officers and the class adviser, and it is to them that I should like to introduce you now.

A FEW NOTABLES

President

That air of ease and dignity with which Peter Robison fills his office of sophomore president is his by right of experience, he having pounded the gavel in a similar post at Roosevelt Junior High School. There, too, he first showed not only his executive skill but also his athletic ability as a member of the blue and white varsity. This fall, after putting last year's laurels in moth balls, he was out for football. And, if we may interpret that gleam of satisfaction in Mr. Wear's eye aright, we have a demon half-miler in the offing.

Vice-President

The sophomores are after all rather a discerning class if one may judge by their choice of vice-president. Mary Alford is a very attractive substitute to have on hand in case of any temporary absence of the class president. Personality, that indefinable sparkle which fashions a student into an individual among the book-laden masses, is the quality of which Mary is the casual possessor. Its ingredients are a generous smile, great blue eyes, shining black hair, and an unflinching determination to serve.

Treasurer

So clever is Tom McHugh, class treasurer at concealing his many talents, one almost has to employ a modern Sherlock Holmes to ferret out his secrets. I once found him (in an apparently typical pose) industriously scribbling (mirabile dictu!) homework. A quiet boy, he would tell me nothing of himself but fled muttering, "Sophomore yearbook picture must be paid for, y' know." However, from his teachers I heard only praise for this hardworking, methodical young youth. His classmates too have shown their belief in his trustworthiness by intrusting him with the exacting office he fulfills so well.

illustrious sister, Joan has climbed to the highest rungs of the scholastic ladder. To everyone's unbounded amazement, she consistently makes the high honor roll without ever being seen in close company with a textbook. Another family trait that Joan has apparently inherited is a love of singing. Not that she goes around bursting into song like so many of our swing enthusiasts; however, all types and varieties of choral groups have an irresistible fascination for her.

Secretary

We seniors have been trying to decide whether the sophomores were overawed by Joan Blake's talents or captivated by her comradely grin when they elected her class secretary. Following in the footsteps of her

Class Adviser

Although the sophomores may find the attitude of upper classmen condescending, and that of the teachers questioning, they are always sure of obtaining help from that extremely busy woman, Miss Goodyear. Almost any day you will find them clustered about her desk receiving with meekness her reprimands for poor grades and pouncing upon her suggestions for schedules with a certain naive eagerness.

Jean Hermann, Margaret McGuirk, Janice Knoell

Jean Byrne, Joan Byrne

Life may have seemed strange this year to the sophomores, the babies of Our School; but soon they will cast off the cloak of inferiority and become full-fledged juniors. No longer will they be subject to the crushing condescension of the upperclassmen; instead they will become important personages in Our School, individuals instead of nonentities.

Such a rosy picture as this the sophomores may well realize at this, the end of their year of subjugation. Alas, however, this is only half the story. I'll wager that there'll come a time when they'll wish themselves back in their sophomore days. When they achieve the ends of their ambition (and we sincerely hope they will eventually) and become snooty juniors or proud seniors, then will they mourn for their lost youth. Smothered under a wealth of impossible homework, with irregular verb conjugations and chemical formulas chasing about in their heads, these erstwhile sophomores will sigh for the days when life was comparatively simple, and nobody expected them to do the work of four normal students. They'll look with envy upon the new crop of sophomores that wander merrily about the school, gazing in amazement at the worried frowns of their elders. However, lest our sophomores become discouraged by this gloomy picture and resolve to remain sophomores forever, we bid them be of good cheer; for even the hard-worked juniors and seniors find compensations in their dreary life.

POST GRADS

PROVERBIAL BAD PENNIES

To us seniors, the postgraduates will always remain a mystery. Even our fertile imaginations (developed by the necessity of finding new and unusual excuses for the faculty) cannot discover the potent force which draws them back to their Alma Mater. After struggling valiantly for three years and at last finding our long coveted diplomas within our grasp, we shudder with horror at the thought of returning for another year of labor. However, far be it from us to discourage their apparent thirst for knowledge.

At times, though, when the burdens of school life weigh us down, these same postgraduates become sore trials to our already harassed minds. Why, oh why, must they always appear so calm and unruffled, while we poor seniors are distracted by a hundred and one things? They have such an amazing faculty for avoiding the worries that plague the lives of undergraduates. Classes hold no fears for them; they come and go with strange disregard for all rules and regulations. Is it any wonder we envy them their unbelievable freedom?

We must admit though that we do owe them a debt of gratitude. With kindly condescension they have taken quite an interest in our juvenile activities. Often we have escaped some fearful burden by placing it in the more experienced hands of some kind-hearted postgraduate. For instance, where would the photography committee of the yearbook have been without Dave Kingdon, and what would the office have done without one or another of the postgraduates to run errands?

We would miss the enlivening presence of the postgrads in our classes, too. Certainly Miss Eaton would find a distinct lull in her Spanish III Class without Scott Gallagher. All in all, whatever their unfathomable reason for returning may be, the postgraduates are a very necessary part of Our School.

Now that we have met everyone in Our School we are free to watch the daily life of the same people. A strange quiet is beginning to settle down over the school; the halls are gradually becoming deserted. Only an occasional harassed-looking student rushes madly past us in a vain attempt to beat the late bell. Throughout the school, heads are bent studiously over numberless textbooks, as teachers and pupils alike begin the work of the day. Let us, too, leave these deserted halls and follow the students into their classrooms—there to see the heart of Our School.

"When the cat is away the mice will play," and so the girls of Our School make the most of their few leisure moments. Jean is evidently enjoying herself midst the wide open spaces, while Margie and Barb manage to look very coy, chatting over the garden gate.

The three sophomores seated on the front lawn seem to have had good intentions, but, alas, even they don't seem to be able to keep their minds on their books. As for Doris, she apparently has to be towed back to school, an unwilling victim.

Chatter, chatter,
 Light and airy,
 How do the rumors grow?
 With whispers here
 And gossip there,
 But we girls love it so.

Repairing's done down in the shop;
 Painting's done in the room on top;
 But what if she's perfect
 From her head to her toes,
 A girl can't be seen
 With a shiny nose.

A diller, a dollar,
 An 8:30 scholar,
 Is how he tries to do it;
 But try as he will
 After climbing that hill,
 The late bell beats him to it.

Let's give the boys

 And that's no lie;
 'Tis the best we've had in years.

This is the way we manage to have fun even in the midst of the educational grind. Winter and summer, we throw off the yoke of labor, whenever possible, and relax in a torrent of grins, jokes, and giggles. There are a few exceptions, naturally. The earnest pencil-pushers here pictured apparently consider the absorption of knowledge a very serious business and have no time for frivolity. Dignified Joyce Rinehart prefers to brave the world with impudence. Fondling man's best friend, Paul Brandorff muses over one of life's great problems. But the rest of us show a decided lack of originality. No matter the season, these stolen moments are spent in glorious rounds of giggling gossip.

ATHLETICS

As we are passing through the first floor hall once more, let us pause for an instant to look at our display of athletic trophies. In the mad scramble of our schooldays, few of us pause to notice the cups awarded to our various teams in past years. Yet these awards are emblematic of one of the most popular phases of our school life. High school would not be the same without its football and basketball heroes, nor half so much fun without the rest of its sports. So for a while let us review the athletic history of Our School during the past year.

PIGSKIN TOTERS

BEFORE you is the West Orange High School Stadium. Last year it was the scene of many a gridiron victory when the Mountaineers set out to prove that a small but plucky team can come through on top.

For the first time in many years, Millburn was not the first team to be met. In its place was the Irvington squad—a large team, with championship aspirations. However, a heavily unfavored West Orange team swooped down from the mountain and walked off with its first victory 12-7. This upset victory was followed by a decisive victory over Paterson East Side to the tune of 19-0.

The Mountaineers were still labelled as lucky by many out-of-towners; but around town, everyone began to feel that Coach Wear really had dynamite, although most of it was in small packages. The meeting with the '39 champs, East Orange, did nothkeep the Mountaineers' unbeaten record intact with a 6-0 victory.

Orange, one of our foremost traditional rivals, was next on the schedule. They invaded the West Orange stadium with a fast, tough team but were turned back almost single handed by Hawrylak to the tune of 9-0.

Since the Plainfield game was postponed, the Cowboys had a two weeks' rest before meeting Montclair, one of the best Group Four teams of the year. The game was too ing to alter this opinion, because the Cowboys displayed the beautiful defense that was especially noticeable all year and scored in the bargain to win 6-0.

The next team on the schedule was Kearny. After a hard see-saw battle, Martin showed the Cardinals his heels and scored to close for comfort, but West Orange won 8-7 by virtue of an automatic safety.

By this time West Orange had climbed all the way to second place in the Group Four ratings, so an easy victory for us over Millburn was predicted. It was a victory, to be sure, but by no means an easy one; for the Cowboys were forced to come from behind in the last quarter to win 13-7.

West Orange now paused, looked back at its string of victories, looked due south, and said, "Here we come, Columbia!" Columbia, in the meanwhile, had had a good season; and the teams were rated about on a par. Such proved to be the case; 15,000 rabid rooters turned out on that cold Thanksgiving Day and witnessed one of the best high school games of the year. Both teams pushed back and forth, without either being able to score. Finally, late in the last quarter, a Columbia pass found its mark; and thus the game ended, 7-0.

The Plainfield game came as an anticlimax to this great contest, but the Cowboys did not look at it as such. They forgot what had happened less than a week before and scored an easy 13-0 decision over the small Plainfield squad, thus bringing to a close one of the most successful seasons in the history of Our School.

THE 1941 edition of the West Orange basketball team was one of the most successful in recent years. Following the example of the football team, the Cowboys started off with a bang, defeating a heavily favored Bloomfield team, and, with the exception of a few snags, went rolling merrily along and ended the year's work with an easy victory over Clifford Scott. Nine games were won in a fifteen game schedule.

Prospects in the beginning of the year were very bright with Captain Fred Martin, Don Wagner, and Sal Salerno returning from last year's varsity five. Added to these were Jack Sexton and Dick Wagner, two very sparkling ball players. Lou Ippolito succeeded in making the first five games with no previous varsity experience and proved himself a fine courtster. Rounding out the first ten were Ted D'Amato, Walt Mahoney, Jim McLeish, George Furey, and Gil Close. Out of these players only Dick Wagner, who proved himself a star hoopster, and Jack Sexton, towering center, return for more action next year. The following is a resume of the year's games.

West Orange 25 — Bloomfield 24

With everyone standing on his chair yelling himself hoarse, Lou Ippolito sank a field goal 45 seconds before the end of the game to give West Orange a hard fought opening victory over a heavily favored Bloomfield team. Smaller by four inches to a man, the Cowboys completely outplayed the giants and started off the 1941 season on the right foot.

West Orange 19 — Orange 27

Showing a complete reversal of form, the cowboys suffered an inglorious defeat at the hands of Orange, their arch rival. Paced by

M. Rankin, W. Wear

Cal Irvin and Sherbie Hart, who scored 23 points between them, the Tornadoes bowled over the conquerors of Bloomfield.

In a return game later in the season, the Orange and Black once again took the measure of the Cowboys 46-19.

West Orange 29 — Belleville 22

The Cowboys resumed their winning streak at the expense of a hapless Belleville quintet.

In the second game, which West Orange also won 39-28, Fred Martin scored the highest point total for a West Orange player in one game, when he hit the net for 19 points.

West Orange 19 — Columbia 24

With the score tied 19 all in the last period, the Cougars scored five consecutive points to take a fighting Cowboy quintet into camp.

In a return game at West Orange's court, Columbia defeated the Cowboys, 40-33, thus making it a dry year as far as a victory over Columbia in an athletic event was concerned.

West Orange 24 — Irvington 22

This was another close game for the Cowboys. With the score tied 19-19 in the final period, Irvington obtained a short lived lead by caging two points. Don Wagner then tied the game with a lay-up shot. A foul shot by Fred Martin, and a field goal by Andy Salerno won the game for West Orange.

At Irvington the Camptowners evened the score by taking a thriller from the Cowboys.

Teddy D'Amato, George Furey

West Orange 35 — Clifford Scott 17

A new member of the Inter-Oranges League appeared on the schedule this year but proved that it was not in the class of the Cowboys when it lost two games to West Orange by lopsided scores.

West Orange 26 — East Orange 35

East Orange, hoping to gain first place in the Inter-Oranges' League, was not to be denied this game and won quite handily.

At the Cowboys' court in the return game, West Orange eked out a 24-23 victory and, thereby, ruined East Orange's hopes for a tie in the Inter-Oranges' Championship. This was West Orange's first Inter-Oranges' League victory.

West Orange 49 — Paterson Central 18

Hitting a new high for scoring, the West Orange team crushed Paterson by a top-heavy score. Paced by Don and Dick Wagner and Fred Martin, who scored in double figures, the Cowboys were never headed. Don Wagner was high with eleven points with brother Dick and Captain Martin close behind with ten apiece.

West Orange 29 — Kearny 23

The Wagner brothers, Don and Dick, directed a West Orange High rally in the second period that launched the Cowboys to a 29-23 victory. Dick was high man with nine points.

After such a successful season, the Cowboys were invited to participate in the State Tournament. The luck of the draw was against them, however; and they had to play Weequahic, undefeated in high school competition, in the first round. Added to this hard luck was the fact that Fred Martin was declared ineligible since he had reached the age limit of twenty-years. Coach Rankin had to bank on six players to carry the fight to the Newarkers. These included Don Wagner, Dick Wagner, Sal Salerno, Jack Sexton, Lou Ippolito, and Walt Mahoney. Weequahic had two complete teams; and on the huge Elizabeth Armory Court, they wore down the Cowboys. In a grueling "dog-eat-dog" contest, the Newarkers emerged victorious 33-26; but only after a supposedly out-classed West Orange team had thrown a scare into them by holding them on even terms throughout most of the game. So ended the year in a memorable game for the hoopsters of West Orange High.

UNSUNG HEROES

There are many other athletic stars in Our School besides those players who take part in the regular "letter" sports. The most famous of these unsung heroes are our three swimming stars, Warren Morgan, Frank Kinney, and Jack Kerr. Although we do not boast a swimming team of our own, these three boys have carried the name of West Orange High into numerous state and national contests. It would be impossible to tell all the achievements of these boys. Both Frank and Warren made the mythical all-state team this year, while Warren numbers among his many titles those of state champion in at least five different contests.

TAPE BREAKERS

A successful track season in 1940 under the tutelage of Coach Ashley resulted in a team undefeated in dual meets and the discovery of a state champion. The boys mainly responsible for this undefeated team were: Smith, Richardson, Trietman, Todd, G. Furey, C. Furey (State 440 Champion), Evitts, Williams, and Martin.

For the 1941 track season newly appointed Coach Wear must rebuild the team around one returning letterman. The first meet of the season was against our traditional track rivals, Bloomfield. They took this meet 48 to 40, taking the lead in the series two to one. Among the outstanding performers for West Orange were Blake, Kremer, McGuckin, Schaefer, Bury, Hutchinson, Furey, Kerr, Green, Dagnall, Proft, Feula, Lord, and Crum.

Coach Wear expects the team to be much stronger later in the season after the newness of the sport wears off, and the team is looking forward to a successful season.

SUMMER PASTIMES

Joe Ospenson

Along with the more popular sports of football, basketball, and track, West Orange High School also has teams for the followers of tennis, golf, and softball. For the past few years the tennis and golf teams have been playing the neighboring high schools and have made a good showing for themselves. The softball team, thus far, has been restricted to intramural play between the gym teams.

Last year, in a schedule of sixteen games, the golf team lost only three, two to Montclair and one to Bloomfield. This year, under the tutelage of Mr. Evans, they are hoping for another successful season.

Of the fourteen matches scheduled by the tennis team last year only seven were played, since the season floated in on top of about ten inches of rain. The team worked well together, however, winning four of the seven matches played and losing only to East Orange and Montclair, State Champions. This year the team consisting of J. Hill, J. Jones, J. Ospenson, H. Meche, B. Johnson and F. Lindeman, hopes for even more success.

GIRL'S SPORTS

SLAP-HAPPY

As we pass through the left wing of the building, our ears are bound to catch such shouts as Shoot! Let it go! Bat 'er up! No, you haven't been ushered into a circus or free-for-all. These are only the audible evidences that the West Orange High Girls are not members of the "weaker" sex, spurning exertion and appearing beautiful but dumb.

Regardless of the season, girls scamper gleefully about to capture all the enjoyment of compulsory training. When September rolls around, the fair sex clamors to play outdoors; almost all attention is focused on soccer or its half-sister, speedball. Perhaps soccer seems "weak-kneed" or "sissified" to the masculinity of our school, but numerous are the banged knees and scraped shins. At present the seniors are "whizzes" at speedball, a combination of the strenuous activity of soccer and the acceleration of basketball. As, in all activities, you can't suit "all the people all the time," so a number of "belles in blue," particularly the seniors, are often seen cantering up the archery field, practicing manoeuvres, with hockey pucks. However, soccer continues to "reign" as the most popular fall sport.

Only when the "North Wind doth blow" and the temperature takes a dive below freezing, do the last hardy lassies relinquish the playfield for the winter. Indoors, we put concentrated effort on basketball, volleyball, dancing and rhythms. A severe lack of space prevents us from playing class basketball games, but such games as "21" and "Progressive" help to perfect our techniques. Perhaps the sport received most enthusiastically in winter is volleyball; for then Mrs. Muller often fills in; and whoopee—the team she assists (?) always wins! On gym days of free activity the general cry is "dancing." "One, two, three-kick" vibrates through the air; and "prancers" cause the floor to vibrate in time to the thud-like rhythm of "La Conga." Joan Manda and Kay Kenny can flip a loose ankle doing the "Lindy," Janet Camp and Marie Byrne sway a gentle hip to a rumba, or Mildred Jones and Patty Winson flow gently along to the dreamy tune of a waltz. Accompanying dancing are the rhythms by which militaristic style is encouraged in marching drills and by which rounded tummies and sunken chests are made to hide when the "Vic" rolls out its tunes. On certain days the gym is dotted with ping pong tables, badminton nets, the bowling set, shuffle boards, and darts. This variety affords ample opportunity to demonstrate skill. Ruth Jean Fowler, that senior "ace," plowed through contestant upon contestant to capture the ping pong crown from Jean Babson, the junior champion, and Joanne Weil, the sophomore runner-up. The only time textbooks appear is the day teams scan them for ideas on pyramid building, which produces ingenious creations and numerous bumped noses.

"In Spring a young maid's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love"; but red robins, green grasses, and blue skies are enough to lure W.O. lassies to the out-of-doors. Early, teams organize for baseball and archery. Before they realize it, they're sliding to first base or chasing arrows over the fence. Besides improving its batting and pitching, the "weaker" sex learns how to umpire. But Mrs. Mueller's "pet" seems to lie across the fence in the field. Many are the pulled hairs and weary nods of her head when she observes the lack of skill in shooting. However, certain prodigies, such as Janet Allen and Alice Williamson, appease her sadness by shooting between 36 and 40 and getting "goldies" frequently. Other than these two main vernal interests, tennis, outdoor volleyball and badminton make our spring program quite complete.

In addition to class work, several athletically minded girls come out for sports after school. The competition between classes is "tough" but interesting. In the fall the winner of soccer was Gladys Rensing's team; in winter, of basketball, Ruth Fowler's team; and of volleyball, Jean McGuirk's. As yet, no winner for baseball has been determined; but it is certain that the sophomores and juniors will give the seniors a "run for their money."

The rewards for after school sports are class numerals and school letters. With perfect attendance, each sport a season counts 100 points, a class grade over 80 also gives points, and referees receive 10 points per game. Other points are attained by keeping score or by participating in the ping-pong tournament. When 400 points have mounted to one girl's credit, she receives her numerals; for 800 points, her "W.O." The following seniors are proud recipients of their letters: A. Albert, M. Behringer, F. Bolognini, S. Chiarella, C. De Marsico, R. Fowler, L. Heintz, N. Hogan, L. Kaye, R. Leone, C. McHugh, M. Michel, E. Rahn, G. Rensing, E. Sullivan, and E. Treitman.

Guess Who?

ACTIVITIES

You have looked in on us in our classrooms; you have applauded our feats on the athletic field; and you have visited us in our leisure moments; there remains, however, one other phase of Our School to be explored. Our Schooldays would not be complete without their clubs, their debating teams, their dramatic and musical organizations. It is there that we find an opportunity to exercise our talents, to extend our circle of acquaintances, and also, incidentally, to enjoy ourselves. Before you leave Our School, then, let us pay a visit to each of these organizations.

LITERARY LIONS

Somehow there is always an atmosphere of work connected with Room 202, center of year book activity. Almost any time we might choose to visit Miss Hilson, the hard-worked faculty adviser, we should find the same scene as greets us now. A few students hang around the desk holding art work up for inspection; a group of girls in the back of the room are identifying snapshots; while a few distressed looking individuals, obviously from the literary department, scribble furiously away trying to complete articles before the deadline.

The creative work of these departments, however, would be of no avail without financial backing. There is where the work of those important money raising committees, advertising and subscriptions comes in. With relentless zeal the members of these committees track down subscriptions and advertisements in order to raise money. Even this does not complete the list of those working for the yearbook. I have yet to mention the large group of students who spend their time typing, proof reading, and performing countless other nameless but essential tasks.

The center of all this activity, the motivating power behind these committees, is Miss Hilson; and it is to her that we owe our deepest debt of gratitude, for without her the production of our yearbook would not be possible.

After watching the endless labor of the yearbook staff for a while, perhaps you can understand the strange appearance of some of the students you have seen—those ink bespattered seniors, with a certain here-in-the-body-but-not-in-spirit look about them. They were merely members of the annual staff who, in the stress of putting out a yearbook, seem to have forgotten all else.

WHAT A LIFE!

One of the most difficult tasks which the Class of 1941 undertook was the production of the Senior Play. The play this year was "What a Life!" written by Clifford Goldsmith. As in previous years the production of the play was supervised by Miss Moses, who has never failed to produce a hit show. Miss Hannes, who is usually to be found buried in a French book, acted as assistant director, and very ably too. Nearly every senior class can boast a few outstanding actors in its ranks; and if you saw our play, I'm sure you will agree that our class is no exception.

Playing the leading role of Henry Aldrich was John O'Rourke, who, although he had no previous acting experience, came through and proved himself a star. Patsy Bull played the part of Henry's girl friend, Barbara Pearson, while the characters of Mr. Bradley (school principal), Mr. Nelson (assistant principal), and Miss Shea (school secretary) were played with remarkable finesse by Warren Morgan, Russell Kurtze, and Adele Collins respectively.

All the scenery for our play was made by members of our class. The props and make-up for the cast were taken care of by senior girls. Since the success of a production is judged by the size of its audience, I could not speak of the Senior Play without mentioning that large corps of ticket salesmen who, for weeks before the play's presentation, canvassed the entire school every morning selling tickets. You can clearly see that it was not the efforts of a few, but the work of the entire Senior Class which made the Senior Play the success which its audiences acclaimed it.

KATZ'N JAMMERS

THE stirring music of "American Rhapsody," pouring forth from the gym, betrays the presence of the West Orange band. As we draw nearer, they switch to the lilting strains of "The Merry Widow Waltz." Obviously they are rehearsing for the annual spring concert, where the martial notes of their concert marches will thrill us once more.

Football season, however, is the time when our band really gets an opportunity to shine. A cheer goes up from the vast throng in the stadium at the sight of the maroon and white uniforms, and hundreds of people rise proudly to their feet as the band plays the familiar and beloved Alma Mater. Many are the times when they have revived our spirits in moments of seeming defeat. Even more frequent are the times when, at the end of a touchdown play, their "Boola Boola" has set us dancing and singing in triumph.

Let us slip quietly into the auditorium where the orchestra is rehearsing "The Barber of Seville." Is it possible that high school students enjoy playing serious music when to all appearances youth seems to be interested only in swing? Yes, when our orchestra assembles to play, the music of the three B's, Barrelhouse, Boogie-Woogie, and Blues, is forsaken for the time-honored strains of the original three B's, and other composers of famous music.

This group of musically minded students, under the direction of Mr. Jennings Butterfield, better known as "Dean," prepares selections for presentation in assemblies, at the Senior Play, and at the Annual Spring Concert. This year we are particularly proud of the seven members who had the honor of playing with the All-State Orchestra. They are: Jean Babson, Carol Collins, Bernard Johnson, Catherine McHugh, Ruth Norton, Jeanne Tompkins, and Alice Williamson.

HARMONY MAKERS

Just as noted college choirs captivate their listeners by song, so our A Cappella Choir thrills and charms us by its melodies. We, in West Orange High School, owe much to this harmony group which has gained distinction throughout the Oranges.

In spite of the fact that it has been in existence for only a few years, the Choir's achievements have been many. An annual winter and spring concert is always an enjoyable event eagerly awaited by us students at Our School. The Choir does not restrict its music to those in West Orange, for it contributes much at programs given by various local organizations. This group of skilled vocalists attended the State Choral Festival at Trenton, and plans to travel south to Atlantic City in order to enter the national contest for high school choirs. If these spirited activities enjoyed by Our Choir continue, West Orange High School will have due reason to boast of this truly fine musical organization.

The person to whom the credit for the Choir's success must be given, however, is Mr. Barnes whose perseverance and patience seem unending.

THE MEL-O-DEARS

The melodious strains drifting through the halls represent the efforts of a group of girls making up the Girls' Glee Club. Let us step inside the gym and get a close-up view of this organization.

The girls, under the expert direction of Mr. Earle Barnes, meet every Wednesday morning during activity period in the girls' gym. The glee group is made up of about fifty girls selected from the sophomore, junior, and senior classes.

Occasionally the glee club comes out from its apparent retirement to entertain us in assembly or take part in a school concert. Whatever the occasion, however, it is a joy to listen to their perfect harmony. We, of the West Orange High School, are extremely proud of their accomplishments and have high hopes for their future.

THE QUIBBLERS

Dave Wilkinson, Ruth Feldman

The sound of strenuous argument emanates from the room where the Debate Club is in session. A sudden violent burst of noise greets us as we open the door. Three or four members are on their feet all speaking at once. This incredible clamor continues until finally stopped by the combined efforts of president and sergeant-at-arms. Despite a seeming lack of dignity, however, the members do display an amazing knowledge of Parliamentary Procedure; and certainly everyone does get an opportunity to improve his public speaking—that is, if he can make himself heard.

When "the shouting and the tumult dies," we discover that the Debate Club, despite the fact that it is a new organization this year, has an ambitious program ahead of it. At its biweekly meetings the members study all aspects of debating, present various kinds of debates, and hold open forum discussions. It is also part of their plan to present an assembly program and to arrange interscholastic debates.

RAH-RAH BOYS

Throughout the football and basketball seasons, a small group of seven boys are to be seen hopping around our school promoting the one thing that is most likely to be suppressed in any school—noise. This group is, of course, the cheerleader squad, comprised this year of seniors and juniors. These boys lead and cheer, inspire our teams, bring out the Joe E. Brown in us, and, in general, do their best to raise the roof.

I wish you could see them at our pep meetings. Supported by the band and led by their captain, Jim Hill, they rouse the student body to a frenzy as they lead the stirring songs and cheers. At the games, too, their outbursts of enthusiasm keep our spirits up and show the team just how solidly we are behind them. As the opposing team, firmly entrenched on the one-yard line, threatens to plunge over for a touchdown, the cheerleaders' hoarse cries of "Hold 'em, Cowboy" brings a wholehearted response from the anxious crowd.

If then, on some crisp autumn afternoon, you hear the Orange Mountain reverberating with shouts of "Hold that line" or that amazing gibberish, known as the "Allamen," you will realize that once again these seven boys are cheering the West Orange teams on to victory.

Hola! Qué tienes? Ah! I see now! You are perplexed by the strange, rapid articulations bursting forth from room 203. Tobacco auctioneer? No, my friend, that staccato and somewhat confusing conversation to which we are listening is being carried on in that lyrical, expressive, romantic tongue—Spanish.

This friendly and lively group into which we have stumbled is "El Club Espanol." Each year these eager devotees of the Spanish language, under the skillful and friendly guidance of "La Senorita Eaton," present various entertainments and plan novel campaigns to increase the funds of the club's treasury.

One of the most talked-about events of the past winter was the gay Valentine's Dance given on February 14 to raise money for "Los Espanolitas." During the intermission, a special floor show was presented by talented members of the faculty, much to the delight of all who attended.

Because of present world conditions and our close-binding relations with the Spanish-speaking nations in South America, the Spanish language is fast gaining in popularity and importance in high school courses. Undoubtedly, many more students will include Spanish among their studies; therefore, we may expect even greater activity in our Spanish Club in the future.

French, of course, with only occasional lapses into English. This is followed by a discussion of "la vie intime" of France, led by the French twins, Alfred and Jean Jacques Valderrama. The meeting ends with the serving of typical French refreshments, hot chocolate and crackers.

The activities of the French Club during its regular meetings are widely varied. In their effort to learn more about France, the members play French games, listen to lectures, and take part in quizzes on French life, history, or literature. The highlights of the year for the French Club are an assembly program and a trip to New York. The assembly program this year was a clever dramatization of Daudet's "La Derniere Classe." The annual trip to New York usually consists of seeing a French movie, visiting some outstanding place of interest such as an art gallery, and dining at a French restaurant, where incidentally the majority stick to conservative American dishes.

Thus, the French Club keeps alive the spirit of France in a day when her ideals and traditions may be temporarily forgotten.

If we walk down the third floor hall past 306, we are sure to hear considerable noise intermixed with the sound of lusty singing; for that is the headquarters of the German Club, one of the liveliest organizations in Our School. As we open the door and join them, we are greeted by strains of "Wie Gehts." The business part of their meeting is over, and the entertainment is about to begin. Several students are to speak on various German composers and musicians. Then refreshments will be served, and the meeting will end as usual with the singing of German folksongs.

Throughout the year the program of the German Club is filled with activities. Their Christmas dance and assembly program are events looked forward to by the entire school. A picnic in the fall is another annual treat for all members, and there are a number of trips made during the year to New York and to various German movies. It is small wonder that with a program such as this the German Club has earned the reputation of being one of the most popular and active clubs in the school.

SANDMEN

Maybe you noticed those two seniors we just passed arguing vociferously about the relative merits of debates, outside speakers, and musical programs. They were, as you may have guessed, members of the Assembly Council. Each week it falls to their lot to plan assembly programs which will add something to our small store of knowledge and at the same time be lively enough to prevent any tired souls in the audience from falling asleep.

In their effort to plan original assembly programs, members of the Assembly Council pursue hapless faculty members for special discussions in assembly. They also draft unfortunate students in an effort to give them experience in public speaking. One of their most difficult jobs, however, is to handle the people and organizations who want to give assembly programs. Debates, orchestra selections, choir presentations, and club programs, all have to be spread evenly over the years so that their dates don't conflict. All in all, the work of the Assembly Council is one of the most difficult and most important activities in OUR SCHOOL.

Upon returning to the library, we find Clio's rival, Philo, in charge of the meeting. At the moment a discussion is in progress concerning the "Lincoln-Douglas" debates to be given in assembly. The members of Philo are hopeful that this program will surpass the one to be given by Clio late in the year.

From the serious manner in which this business is being conducted you would hardly believe that only last week Philo held a competition in the old-fashioned "foiled again" dramatics. The talent discovered almost led Philo to give up its role as a literary society in favor of becoming a dramatic club. However, while I have been reminiscing, Philo has taken up a new topic, the banquet; and the program chairman is explaining it to the novices of the club. There is among the club an unspoken determination to try to wrest the scholastic cup from Clio, last year's winner.

However, win or lose, out of this friendly competition between the two societies comes a keener desire to learn and to excel and, even more important, a feeling of comradeship and a sense of good sportsmanship.

BOOK WORMS

Twice a month the library is the scene of the joint meeting of Clio and Philo, the two literary societies of Our School. Clio is in charge of the meeting as we enter. We see before us what is fondly believed to be the intellectual section of the school. However, at the moment, the members of Clio seem quite unaware of any such distinction being attached to the fair name of Clio.

At present they are engaged in a free-for-all discussion of chivalry in modern life. Despite the uproar, we gather that the debate is all part of an effort to encourage public speaking among the members. The gala event of the year is the annual Clio-Philo banquet where the unhappy initiates are submitted to all the horrors thought up by the Initiation Committee. Speeches and compliments are the order of the day, but the big moment comes when Mr. Reimherr awards the cup to the society having the higher scholastic average.

It is upon this vote of triumph or momentary defeat that the senior members of Clio say farewell to their club, taking with them memories of many happy hours.

MAYBE YESERS!

It has been the tradition of our high school for each class to present before the school assembly one debate each year. These debates, which deal with topics of current interest, are eagerly anticipated and are received with widespread interest and enjoyment by the student body.

The debates are presented by two teams of four members each (three speakers and a rebuttal speaker). The eight students who participate in a debate are chosen by competitive tryouts, any member of the class giving the debate being eligible.

This year the sophomores, coached by Mrs. Seaman and Miss Wilson, presented a timely and highly commendable debate which had as its subject, Resolved: that the United States should adopt a system of radio control and regulation similar to that of Great Britain.

The debate, given by the juniors, was coached by Mrs. Woelfle and Miss Peckham. Their topic, much discussed at the time because of the trend of world affairs, was, Resolved: that the declaration of war, except in case in internal rebellion or invasion, should be referred to a popular referendum. The debate was highlighted by the dynamic speaking of Brendan Byrne, rebuttal speaker for the negative, who, together with Daniel Kram, affirmative rebuttalist, and Beatrice Sideris, third speaker of the affirmative, received an award as one of the best speakers of the debate.

We, the Seniors, chose for our topic a subject of national importance, and yet one which would affect every high school senior. Resolved: that the United States adopt a policy of compulsory military training for all boys at the age of eighteen years or at the age of nineteen years if they are still in high school. Eleanor DePalma and Renee Goldin, both of the negative team, were given votes as best speakers by the judges. This debate, which received widespread attention and comment, was coached by Mr. Blumer and Mr. Patterson.

Silent WORKERS

As we pass along the second floor, let us stop in 204 to visit the Library Council. Of all the organizations of the school, we hear the least about our Library Council. This council, selected by our librarian, Miss Stockman, to assist her in her routine duties, consists of seven faithful workers.

Each period we see one of our members

Even the Library Council has its social activities, however. In our talk with Miss Stockman, she tells us that in December the Library Council gave a Faculty Tea which was attended by almost every member of the faculty.

These duties include: distributing library permits, checking newspapers and magazines, charging and shelving books, and helping to prepare books for circulation.

we often see helping the pupils to select their books, we give our thanks for making our library a pleasant and orderly place in which to read and work. The seven girls who perform this service for us are: Grace Carlson, Edna Opsal, Barbara Hall, Muriel Irish, Miriam Turteltaub, Blanche Borkstrom, and Ruth Kram.

There is one club in our school which the boys term a haven of rest—rest from the pursuit of the chattering female. This is, of course, the Hi-Y Club. However, if we were to drop in on a Hi-Y meeting some Monday after school, I am sure we should receive a distinct surprise.

The Hi-Y is usually looked upon as a social or athletic club by uninformed outsiders. Actually, however, it is neither although certainly some of its activities do fall into one category or the other. Its primary aim is, on the contrary, to further the ideals of sportsmanship and clean living. The activities of the year culminated in the state-wide convention which was attended this year by Bill Clark and Jim Hutchinson.

For our own West Orange High School girls there is a haven where they may retreat to find respite from the flock of their usual masculine admirers, the Girl Reserves' Room at the Y.

Our club is one of the many affiliated Girl Reserves' Clubs all over the country which makes girls junior members of the Y.W.C.A. We meet every Friday afternoon, teas, dances, parties, and suppers being a few of our regular functions. At some of the meetings guest speakers lecture on subjects that are of interest to all the girls.

This year, on April 26, 1941, we celebrated our sixtieth anniversary. A Mardi Gras was held, with all the clubs of the Oranges taking part. The money raised will be used to send a member from each club to camp for one week during the summer.

Many of our meetings are more or less social ones where girls are girls and every one has a good time.

IN HOMAGE AND GRATITUDE

Perhaps last year, during the week of November eleventh, you noticed wreaths on the trees and monument in front of the town hall. If you had been present at the ceremony during which these wreaths were hung, I am sure you would agree with me that it was a very beautiful tribute. The members of Our School were proud and happy to take part in that ceremony then, as in other years.

At eleven o'clock on Armistice Day morning a group of Girl and Boy Scouts, under the direction of Doris Silver, stood at attention while Bob VanZee played taps. As far as the eye could see, cars were at a standstill, and pedestrians bowed their heads in silent homage to those brave boys who gave their lives on the battlefields of France. In reverent silence each tree was decorated, and a wreath was laid upon the World War monument.

In order to bring home the significance of Armistice Day to the students, Miss Grace Moses presented the annual Armistice Day program in assembly. Accompanied by the low rumble of a drum, Doris Silver read the roll of honor in memory of those West Orange boys who died in the service of their country. For each name read, a girl, dressed in white, bore a spray of evergreen up to the stage. These girls were preceded by a group of Senior Girl Scouts carrying flags. However, the silent students saw, not the white clad figures walking by, but rather the valiant soldiers of the past marching slowly onward.

It would be difficult to track down the Setuit Council and attend one of their meetings. This group of girls, always active, is never to be found in the same place long. The various committees are scattered throughout Our School busily engaged in carrying out their work.

However, even if we cannot locate these elusive individuals, at least let me describe their activities to you. Every girl in the school belongs to the Setuit Club. However, it is naturally their chosen representatives who do most of the work—and work they do. Their main object is to improve the school and its surroundings, and they fulfill their self-appointed task admirably.

Our concerts and plays would not be so successful if the Setuit Club did not provide us with such charming ushers; nor would we enjoy ourselves so much at our football games if it were not for the other Setuit girls who flit around the field selling candy and programs.

Every year at Christmas the Setuit Club conducts a drive for toys to send to the Day Nursery and the Orthopedic Hospital. This year they have also adopted the task of knitting squares to be made into blankets for the British.

In the midst of such unselfish activities, the girls, nevertheless, find time for numerous social events. The most eagerly awaited are the college tea early in spring and the Mother-Daughter Bnaquet in May.

Now, at last, your visit to Our School has come to an end. As you leave the campus, we hope that you will take with you happy memories of a typical American high school where life is informal, democratic, and free. We hope, too, that as you go out into the surrounding community of which Our School is an integral part, you will remember not only us but also our friends, the businessmen of this vicinity who advertised within the pages of this book.

FINE
. . . A TRADITION . . .

Webster says — "Tradition is the delivery of opinions, doctrines, practices and customs from ancestors to posterity . . ."

The ability to produce outstanding Annuals has been a tradition in the "Progress Family" for the past thirty years. Our growth has not been a mushroom one, but a steady, conservative building process, designed to give you better and finer books. All of the Progress personnel are at your service, with layouts and designs, personal contacts, cover ideas, and helpful editing hints.
