"Thou, too, sail on, O Ship of State!

Sail on, O Union; strong and great!

Humanity with all its fears,

With all the hopes of future years,

Is hanging breathless on thy fate!"

Foreword

Hell broke loose in our senior year, thus making our graduation an event not of local interest as those in the past, but one of national importance. We are rising young Americans. We are the young men who will stand behind the guns, the workers who will win the war of production, the statesmen who will create the peace of the future. The theme of this book, therefore, is a patriotic one which the history of our times seems to dictate.

But we, the class of '42, do not look back upon our school life as the patriotic duty into which it has developed; for in training us well for our part in the future, it has given us many good times. We cherish many memories of our school days. We remember our long assignments; we hear again the lengthy debates; we recall our running for buses to reach school on time; but much more vividly do we remember the pleasures and the friendships of those carefree school days, the happiest years of our lives. We shall not easily forget those days, the school, our friends. Too, we shall remember well the beautiful campus in its fall coat of orange, under its winter blanket of white, and in its spring dress of green; but that these and many other memories, so dear to us, may live long into the future, we shall record them, for all, in this, our 1942 "West-O-Ranger."

Margaret E. Eaton

Dedication

It is not often that students in perfect sincerity express their great liking for a teacher, but that is how we feel toward our Spanish instructor. Perhaps the reason we like her so much is that we feel that she in turn likes us. We have never seen her without a cheerful smile. Always willing to help, she takes charge of some of the details of our graduation, presents a Spanish play, her great yearly achievement, and still finds time for travel, reading, and such sports as golfing and bowling. Perhaps these interests are her magic formula for keeping as young as her students. Whatever it is, we know that she will never let us down. Therefore, though we may not know how to say it in Spanish, we dedicate our Yearbook to you, Miss Eaton; and with it, our deepest affection.

ACTIVITIES

*W*E have no words to tell of what our country means to us. And words could never express the feeling we bear for our school. It has given us some happiness, some despair, a great deal of work, and a way to live. A thousand people, working together, each for himself, each for his school, have been instilled with the deepest meaning of democracy.

SCHOOL

We have been happy in our school. We shall be glad to be graduated. Yes, the child longs to grow up; but the man looks back upon childhood as the happiest days of his life.

The world is large; life can sometimes be too great for us to grasp its meaning. But through it all we shall remember one peaceful spot where first we learned to live—our school.

The many happy hours spent upon the lovely campus of our school will form for us in troubled days to come a rich background of peace.

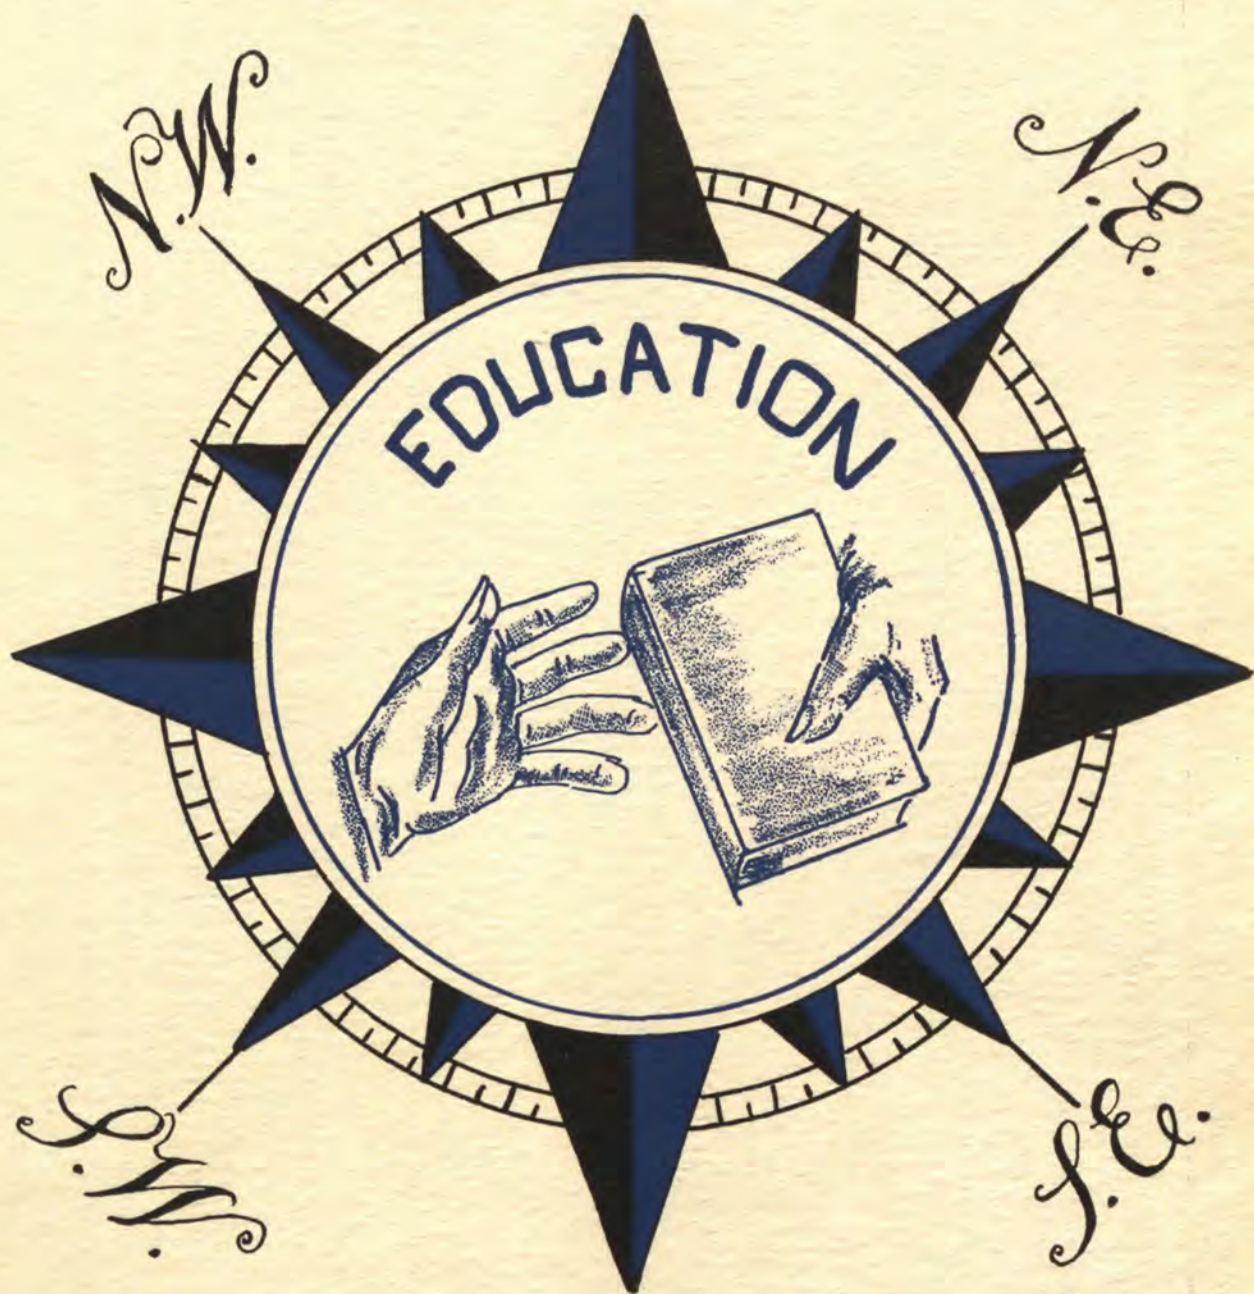

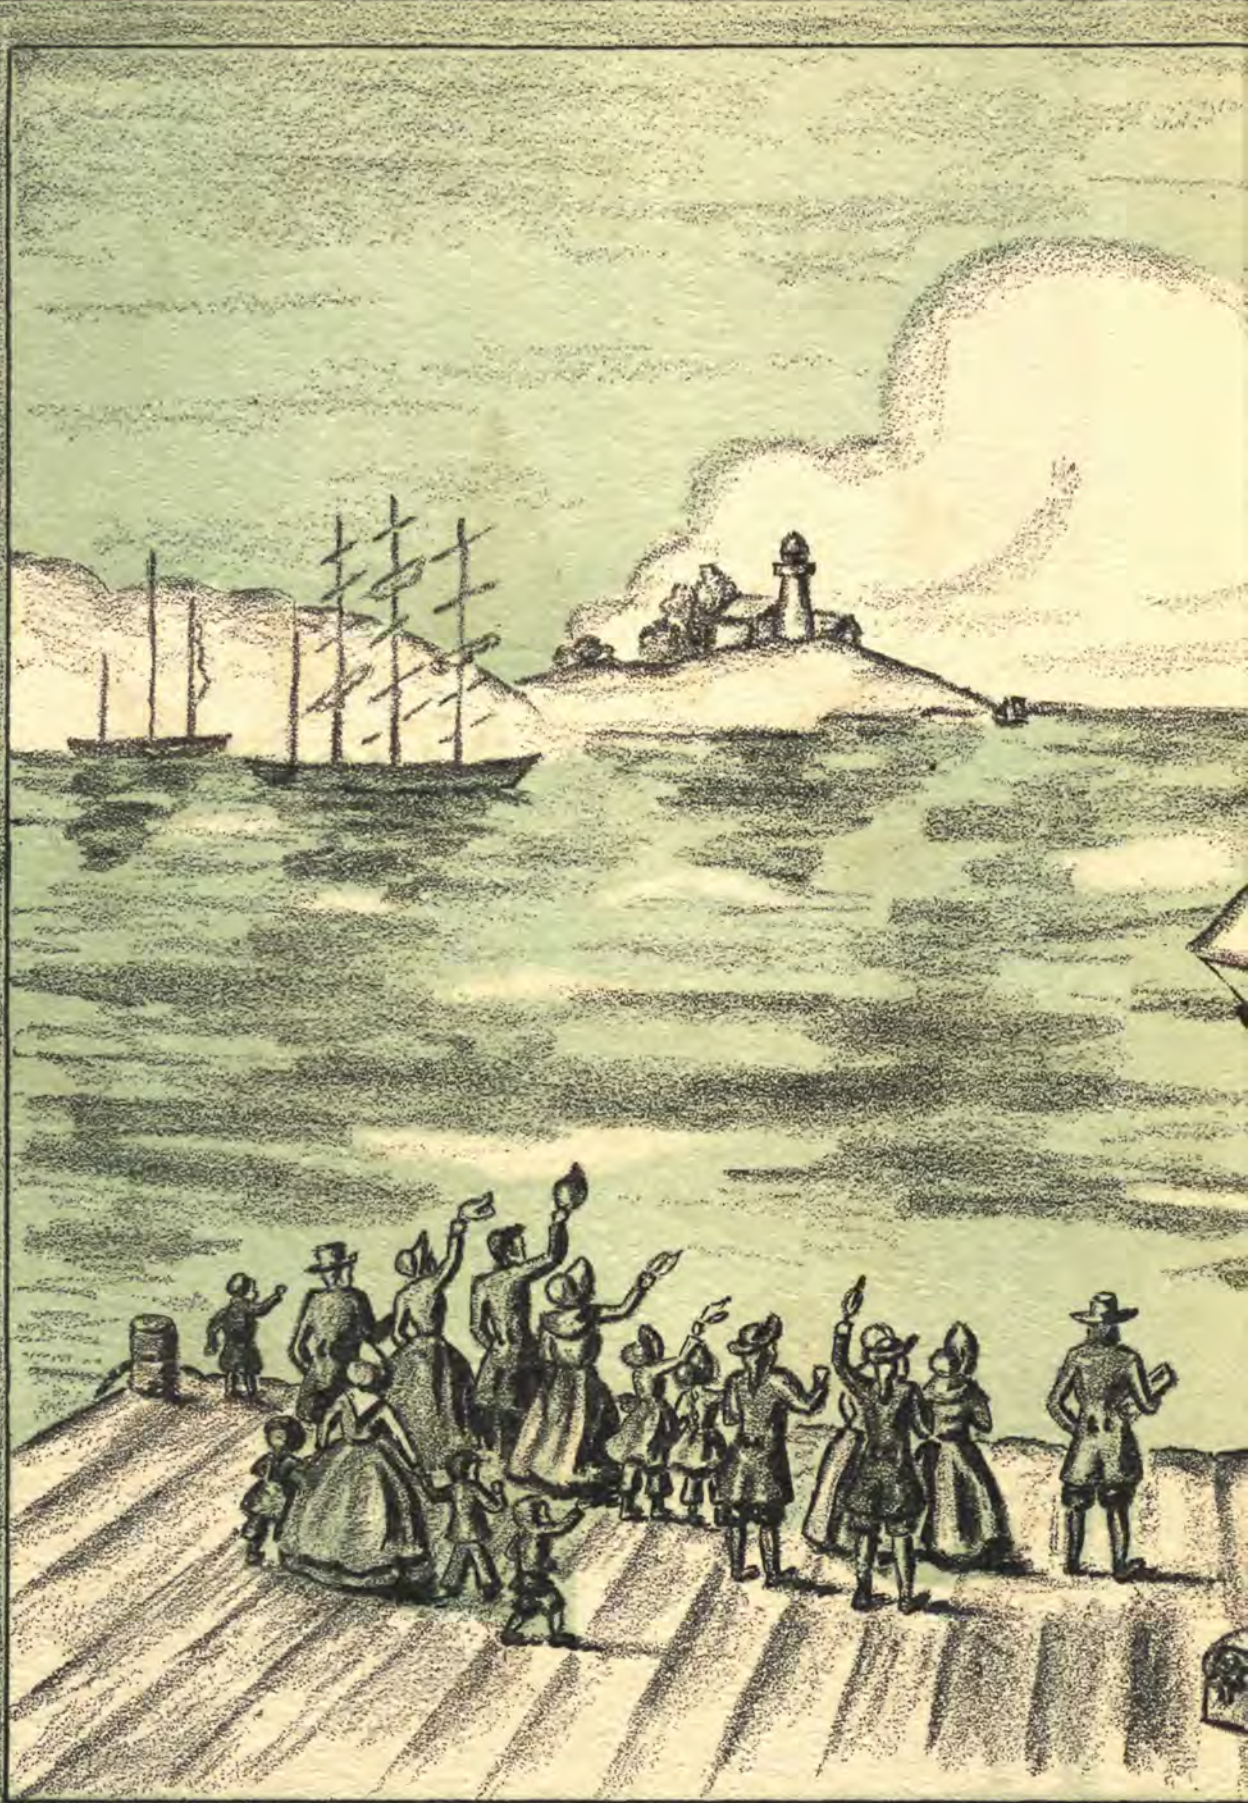

Through these doors enter not only the students, but also such things as Friendship, and Fun, and Hard Work, and the quiet joy of Achievement.

The Ship of State will never wreck upon the reefs so long as there are pilots to steer her aright in the long course that she must run. That her captain, her crew, may never fail her is in part our responsibility; for the future pilots of the nation are the youths of today. The young people of our school, guided in the channels of democracy by our principal, our faculty, our board of education, will some day themselves take part in guiding our country. They are the leaders of Tomorrow—the future of America.

ADMINISTRATION

THE SHIP'S MASTER

Seldom, indeed, are the occasions on which we see our superintendent, Mr. Strong. Aside from his all too rare appearances in assembly, we hear from him only indirectly—an unexpected holiday has been granted to us, a rainy morning has made it impossible to have school, or sugar rationing means a week of half sessions for us. Yet Mr. Strong is an integral part of our West Orange Schools. He it is who attends to the thousand and one details and problems arising not only in our school, but also in the grammar and junior high schools. In spite of the many demands on his time, he is an ardent rooter at all West Orange football games, cheering the touchdowns and sighing at the failures. Interested in the welfare of all of us, both individually and collectively, Mr. Strong receives our wholehearted admiration and respect.

Born in Waterford, New York, November 19, 1884. Attended the public schools of his native community and was graduated from Waterford High School in June, 1902. Taught a rural one-room school during the school year 1902-1903. After four years, he was graduated from Colgate College in June, 1907. From September, 1907, to June, 1918, he was principal of the High School in Waterbury, Vermont. Through extension courses at Teachers' College, Columbia University, he won his M.A. degree.

He is a member of the Congregational Church, a charter member of the School Masters' Club of New Jersey, and a member of the New Jersey Council of Education.

Regarded not only as our principal but also as our friend, Mr. Reimherr, patient, sincere, and understanding, is a haven for worried students.

JESSE I. TAYLOR

Born in Galena, Maryland, December 5, 1900. Attended the public schools of Kent County, Maryland, and the Wesley Collegiate Institute, Dover, Delaware, from which he was graduated in June, 1919. In June, 1923, he was graduated from Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut. From September, 1923, to June, 1926, he was teacher of mathematics and coach of athletics at the high school, Islip, New York. From September, 1926, to June, 1938, he served as teacher of chemistry in the West Orange High School and since September, 1938, as vice-principal. He studied courses in School Administration at Teachers' College, Columbia University, from which he holds the M.A. degree. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi, a national fraternity.

His sympathetic and wise counsel is a constant bulwark for all those who seek it.

The school system is like a ship with the Board of Education at its head as ship's masters. Through our twelve years of training we have always felt the skillful, reliable hand of the Board at the helm.

It is this board of five that must keep our ship, the school system, always prepared to meet the challenge of time, which tends always to make obsolete anything which does not advance with it.

Mr. J. Collinson
Col. H. Barry
Com. Irwin

It is the Board of Education that selects our faculty, provides for the erection and maintenance of our schools, and sets the standards of our education. As the years of our voyage have slipped past, their task has become more difficult; new demands have been made upon them and new problems presented, all requiring not only training, but also an unerring judgment and complete understanding of the situations as they have arisen.

We believe that the Board of Education has all these qualities; and, therefore, we leave our ship in their hands to be berthed safely at the end of her trip.

MISS GOULD

THE BRIDGE FORCE

Of all the rooms in the high school building, none is so familiar as the office, that little room to the left of the main entrance. To some, it is a place to secure excuses for absences, tardiness, and dismissal; for others it is a place to be avoided, if possible, for it is here that we are sent for such trivial crimes as being late to class, cutting a class, or taking a one day's vacation when the other students apparently know nothing of the holiday. We also go to this famous room for all kinds of questions to which Miss Heslin and Miss Daniels patiently give us the answers. They take messages from Ma who wants us to wear our rubbers, they type our application blanks, they probe our alibies and determine whether or not we shall be sent to Mr. Reimherr or Mr. Taylor. To these two patient, hard-working individuals we owe many thanks.

Upper right: Miss Heslin.

Far right: Mr. Wenner and Mr. Wear.
Circle: Mr. Terwilliger.

Mr. Meyer

Mr. Finch

Teachers must play and often do. Mr. Terwilliger probably does so "when there is a day off on account of too much sun" to quote the honorable punster. The freckles on Miss Eaton's face are as numerous as those of her caddy—she is a golf addict, you know. Sliding a slide rule to and fro just can't be enough exercise for Mr. Meyer; so we recommend that he join Mr. Wenner and Mr. Wear in a rousing game of football. Miss Manley's vacations are renowned; she is a wonderful sport! She would probably be very glad to "ump" that little game for the boys. After a hectic day in the shop, Mr. Finch, we prescribe an easy chair for you; and to the rest of our teachers we grant shore leave. We know you like half-days, too.

MR. WALLING

Active Duty

"Battle Stations!" rang the cry aboard the good ship Democracy; and the men of her crew left their work to man her guns and repel the foe. Two of them left their desks at W.O.H.S. Mr. Rankin and Mr. Walling contributed much to our school lives; now they offer all they have to our national life. Forgotten, temporarily, are all the details that made up their lives as teachers—the involved explanations of intricate geometric theories, the driving excitement of training a crack baseball team, the laws and treaties of by-gone days. Today, their time is taken up with learning instead of teaching, discovering the complications of rifles and machine guns instead of revealing the secrets of the Pythagorean Theory, with doing push-ups and deep knee bends instead of counting for them, with receiving orders instead of giving them. Good natured Mr. Walling, "Prof" to his "pets," and quick-witted Mr. Rankin, "Mayor Curlytop" to the Y.M.C.A., have left gaps that can never be completely filled. We miss them; we salute them. God be with them.

MR. RANKIN

THE Seniors have traveled a long road. It has been, till now a narrow winding road, branching out into tiny paths, and full of secret, hidden spots where fun and friendship beckoned. Now we have reached the turnpost where the road swells into the broad highway of Life. But before we go on, we pause to cast a wistful backward glance at the way we have traveled; and we think for a moment of the happiness we have had, and of the many friends who have followed other paths and other roads.

SENIORS

The Officers present

Standing: Edwin Snyder,
Martin Bross, Edward Sterns,
Brendon Byrne. Sitting: Alice
Hare, Helen Clasen, Kay
Landers.

Undoubtedly the most important group in the high school are the seniors—important mainly in our own eyes, perhaps; but also (or so we fondly believe) in the eyes of others. This is that we are superior in many ways to the underclassmen who have not yet grown up. Ask any senior. That we ourselves were once underclassmen is best forgotten, or at least remembered with tolerant amusement. Still, we did accomplish things then that we are still proud of. There was our sophomore debate, for instance, in which Danny Kram, then a mere youngster, first made the grade as best speaker. Then came our junior debate, when Brendon Byrne, our future senator, made such a hit . . . and we did have fun at our Junior Prom. . . . Oh, and we did manage to pass English III after all. And now we are in our senior year, a year flowing over with more fun than we've ever had before, more hard work, more real achievement. There was the Senior Play . . . the senior debate . . . the Junior Prom (we hate to admit it, but it was as good as ours) . . . the scramble of publishing a yearbook . . . finally, graduation . . . the Senior Farewell. It has been a busy year, but one we shall always remember; for it has been a year shining with a swift happiness that never again will come to us in quite the same way.

But in between our many activities we found time to elect our officers, whom we consider the most superior of all the superior seniors.

We could not help electing for president Brendon Byrne. With his ability to make thundering speeches of which even a congressman could be proud, it seems only fitting that Brendon should take some part in our class government. He is one of the best-known boys in the school since, besides being president of his class, he is president of the Assembly Council, has taken part in all of our debates, was in the Spanish Club play, and played an important role in the Senior Play. We have heard rumors that he intends to go into politics. If that is so, his duties as senior president should be fine practice for him.

Our vice-president is another celebrity—Dick ("Lamp") Wagner. He is that rarity, a person who not only is in the topmost part of his class scholastically, but is also one of our best-liked athletic stars. And, to top it off, he was voted one of the most good-looking of the senior boys. All this, and chosen vice-president too! But no wonder.

Our popular secretary is Martin Bross. Well-liked among his fellow-students, he was chosen for his friendly smile and his willingness to help wherever he is needed. He has gone in for both football and basketball, as well as kept up a good scholastic record. Most important, he has steadily made himself a host of friends throughout all his years in high school, as he has proved by becoming secretary of the senior class.

And behold! We have another woman as treasurer—Alice Hart—which proves this is not entirely a man's world. We have done well in electing Alice, if we do say so ourselves; for she is one of the sweetest and friendliness girls in the school. She is always ready to lend a helping hand, one of the reasons why we like her so—and why we chose her for our treasurer.

And there are our officers. Don't you agree that they are superior?

7 THE Juniors are like the race of man; they are set a little lower than the Angels and a little higher than the Sophomores. They are the privileged, the Chosen People; for they have none of the disadvantages of newcomers like the Sophomores, none of the responsibilities that weigh upon the Seniors. They are the great, happy middle-class of our school. Almost enviously we stop to watch them as they blithely go their carefree way.

First row: Genevieve D'Amato, Margaret Bernard, Rose Adelizio, Bernard, Joan Coen, Marian Jaqui, Shirley Riker, Marguerite Marullo, Joanne Weil, Annette Wadlum, Marcelline Fenning, Alice Bell, Jane Reinhart, Dorothy Brady, Muriel Hadum, Helen Hull, Frances DiGore, Audrey Martucci, May McCrink, Betty V. Eighth row: Elizabeth Carr, Doris Anderson, Ruth Kall, Nancy Quist, Evelyn Feldman.

They grow taller than the tallest senior and shorter than the shortest "soph." They are profoundly wise, and yet unspeakably scatterbrained. As a group their combined spirits would rival those of the Dodger fans. But put one alone on a deserted stage, and Mr. R. will soon be demanding "louder." This is the Junior Class.

Tom McHugh is head man this year. A versatile lad, he lists among his achievements football, track, baseball, and scholastics. Especially noteworthy was his participation in this year's football squad.

Second in the heart of his fellow classmen is Vice-President Peter Robinson. Like Tom, he too saw action this year on the football squad.

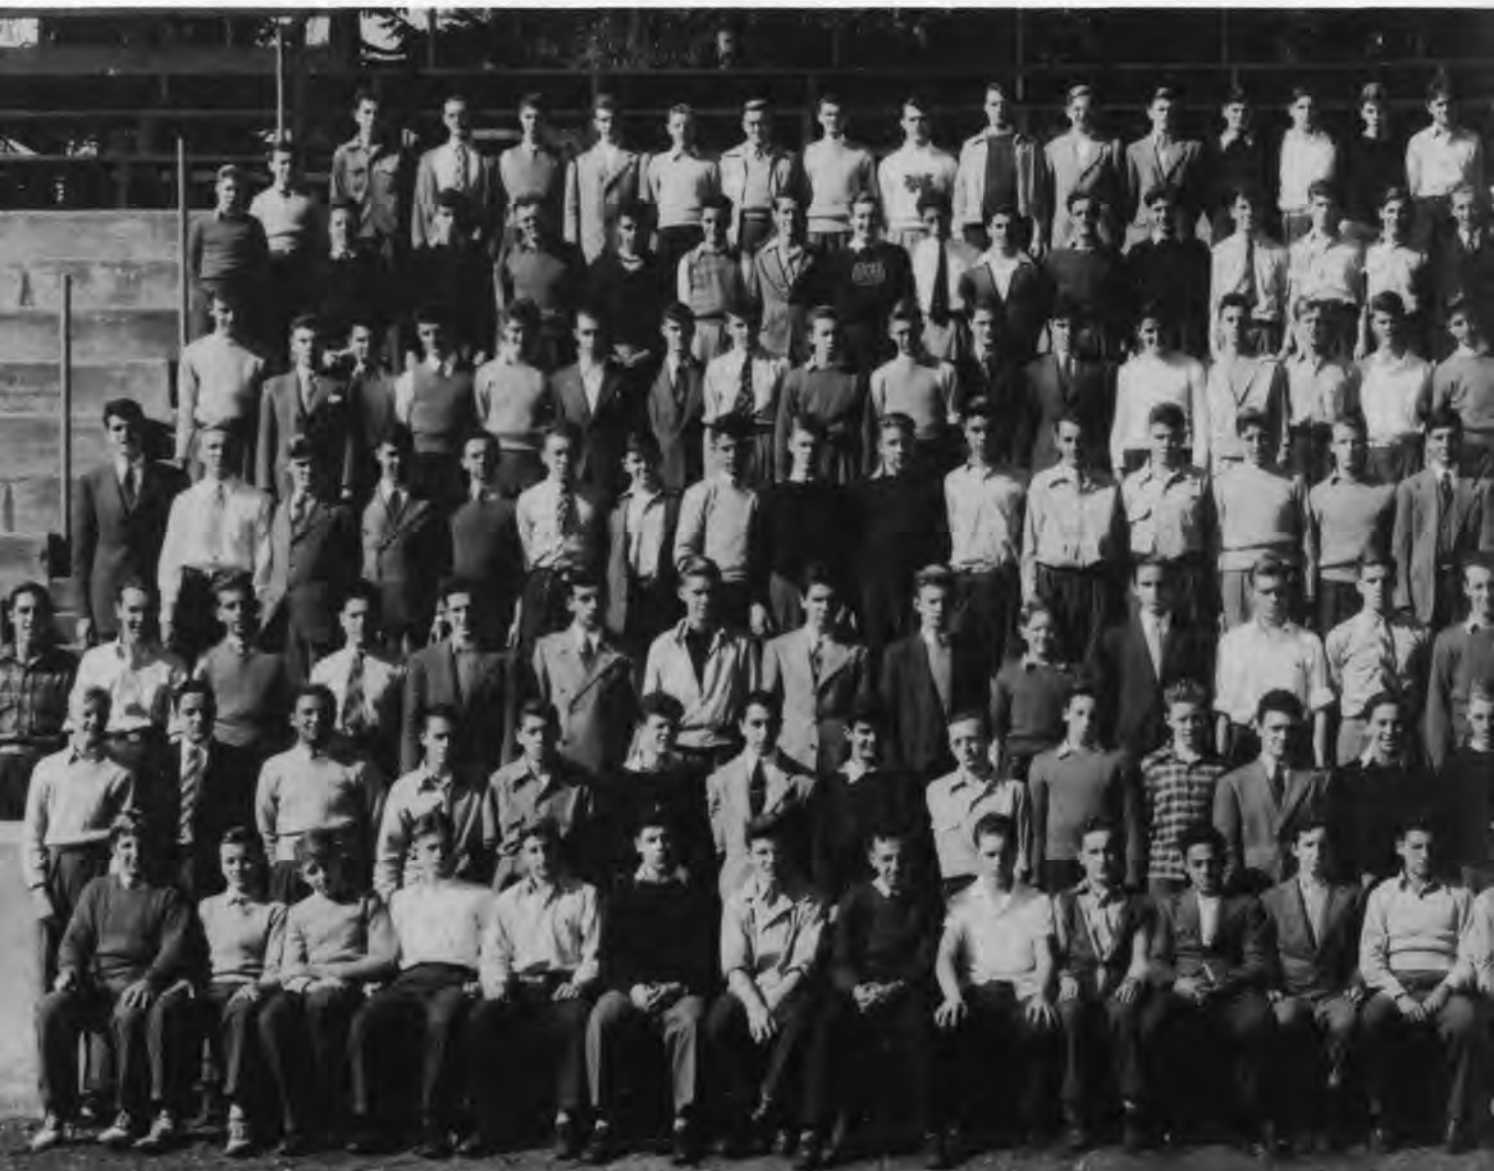

Two pretty Misses occupy the positions of secretary and treasurer, Joan Blake and Mary Alford respectively. (Wise children, those Juniors—there is a method in their madness; they will keep their eyes on the treasury, so the treasurer might just as well be pretty).

One of the school's finest debaters claims a place in the Junior Class. Irene Norton has won recognition for her debating since her sophomore year. A fellow debater, Stanley Jacke, also, is an active junior. He can be seen rushing around the halls at any time of day on "business."

The Junior Class has its share of talent as witnessed throughout this year. Eleanor Griffiths danced and coached the dances for the Spanish Club program. Marguerite Maguire's and Wilma Wilbur's vocal abilities have not gone unsung. (Pun-Pun!)

A high spot in the Junior year was the "Prom." A conscientious Prom committee brought Spring into the boys' gym, and the dance was enjoyed by all.

Insignificant as they be, next year they will be important seniors. Then it is their turn to rule the roost. Now all they can do is to frighten timid sophomores and wait!

*A*H, Youth! How like a crown thou wearest thy happy dreams! And so the merry little Sophomores trot gaily on their merry little way, while the elderly Juniors and the tottering Seniors look down and sigh for their past youth. The petted babies of the school, with eager faces shining behind their bibs and tuckers, pause a moment to take our wrinkled hand and show us the delights and cares of a youth that we, too, once knew.

As you wander through the busy corridors of our school, perhaps you have noticed the pint-sized students wandering around with an anxious look in their eyes. These are the babies of the school—the sophomores. Fresh from the several junior high schools where they were the most respected members of the student body, they are quite bewildered by being plunged back into obscurity by their older classmates.

The first day of school was for them a trying one, indeed. Unaccustomed to the school building, they scurried around peering at the number on each door and glancing shyly at the nonchalant upper classmen. After a few days they were more confident; and by the middle of the year they had made themselves a part of the school, some of them having even distinguished themselves by their participation in school affairs.

On the football field several potential stars made their debut. Among them were Boyd Moreland, Ed Cross, Jerry Salinard, and Jimmy Ferrara. They also took part in other sports, such, as basketball and tumbling.

Like their predecessors, the sophomores have a number of distinguished students. Bill Fleming, Patricia Lynes, Kay McFarland, James Oспенson, and Eugene Shine have been continuously on the high honor roll.

To the office of president, the greatest honor the sophomores can bestow on one of their members, was elected Robert Milone. His mental ability coupled with his charming personality makes him an excellent leader of whom his class may well be proud.

Boyd Moreland brought honor upon himself on the football field by playing with the varsity and helping out in a pinch. His classmates honored him still further by electing him to the office of vice-president.

Norman Carlson, noted for his beautiful blonde hair, must be trustworthy, indeed, since his classmates had enough faith in him to trust him with their money bags as treasurer of the sophomore class.

Bill Fleming, the secretary of the class, is well known for his scholastic abilities; for he led his class for several marking periods. His shy smile and willingness to help whenever he is needed prompted his classmates to elect him one of their officers.

THE triumph of democracy lies not in the ringing speeches, the glorious deeds, but in the quiet everyday life of a democratic people. It is the shoulder-to-shoulder work of a million men and women. It is the spirit that walks the halls of a million schools, where students live their daily life in a spirit of fellowship, side by side, armed with the same hopes, with the same dreams.

All of which proves that it's a vicious circle. While our eleven scores, Ralph notifies that peeping Tom, our score board boy. When the team sees the score he has posted, they are inspired (we hope) to score again. Then it is Ralph's turn once more, and so, far into the night.

No, the boys are not half of the old barbershop quartet. They are simply delighted at the outcome of that snappy play. Our coaches seem to have their doubtful moments, though. Oh, gosh, and they did so want to keep those fingernails nice and long.

Not all of us are alike. Some are impressed by the mysteries of science, as expounded by Mr. Terwilliger; a great many prefer chatter of a lighter sort, during leisure moments; but practically all of us are fascinated by the thought of food. Notice that "lean and hungry look?"

This quest for knowledge is growing very noticeably. Shirley doesn't seem worried; she knows all the answers. But Wallace and Barbara, to judge by their rapt expressions, are intent upon the search; and they are joined by our budding nurses, spurred on by Miss Lumley. Lily, Gladys, and Carol, however, believe in letting such problems iron themselves out.

Can this be school where we all wait for Saturdays to come? Everyone is smiling—even in the Royal Chamber, the office. Perhaps the students are going on a vacation like that of Bob Titchen; or perhaps they are anticipating a few more of those happy half days, which Mr. Terwilliger calls days of "long bells and short periods." Bob seems to be on every page, doesn't he? That comes of being friendly with Miss Manley, who heartily endorses the "Go places and see things" motto.

Fiesta in forty minutes. Will Senor Holmes sell that sarape to the veddy, veddy English Mr. Byrne? Will Melanie get her tan on Roy's white shirt front? If the musicians will play "South of the Border," will Hoxey dance for us again? Oh, horrible thought — what if one of the vendedores should forget and suddenly speak English? If you should see grey-haired Spanish students, they got that way answering these questions.

CLEAN competition and good sportsmanship have always been the very heart of the American tradition. This is why athletics play such an important part in the lives of American youth. The fair play, the striving for one's team, the swift give-and-take of our sports are intricately bound up with the fullest spirit of democracy.

Great Guns!

This year the football warriors of West Orange encountered the cream of the North Jersey football crop. Four of their opponents placed among the first ten in the state rankings. Considering this fact, the West Orange students can well be proud of their light, under-manned football team, that started the season dismally and came through with a Frank Merriwell finish.

The opening game saw a powerful Irvington squad come out on the long end of a 2 to 0 score. Time and again, the heavier Irvington eleven was thrown back by spirited, bone crushing tackles. The final gun was sounded with the cowboys threatening to score.

The next week, the mountaineers traveled to play speedy Paterson East Side. With lightning thrusts by their halfback, the East Side aggregation rolled over the cowboys 25 to 0. In the last quarter Coach Wear used his subs to give them some experience, thus bringing Tom McHugh, small speedy halfback, into the limelight.

The following week, fate and an excellent East Orange team put another thorn into the sides of the West Orange Cowboys. Aided by Mosso and the bull-like rushes of Saylor, East Orange defeated West Orange, 33 to 0.

The following week, the Kearny Cardinals invaded the Cowboys' home field. In the second quarter their tricky T-formation clicked for a touchdown and gave Kearny the game, 6 to 0.

The fourteen years of victory over Orange was increased to fifteen by a thrill-packed game in which the outcome was in doubt until the final gun. The cowboys won 14 to 13.

Because of a postponement, the Plainfield game was played Election Day morning. The Cowboys scored early in the first quarter, again in the third quarter, and also by an interception in the end zone. The final score was 19-6.

The following Saturday the Cowboys journeyed to Montclair to play the New Jersey State Champions. Without a doubt, this was the toughest team encountered by the Cowboys all year. The final score was 37 to 7 in favor of Montclair.

Next, the light Millburn team invaded the home stadium, only to be sent back wondering where Coach Wear ever found so many able substitutes to put in the fray. Over 40 players saw action in this run away. All in all, a very good time was had by everyone, except Millburn. The final score was 33-7.

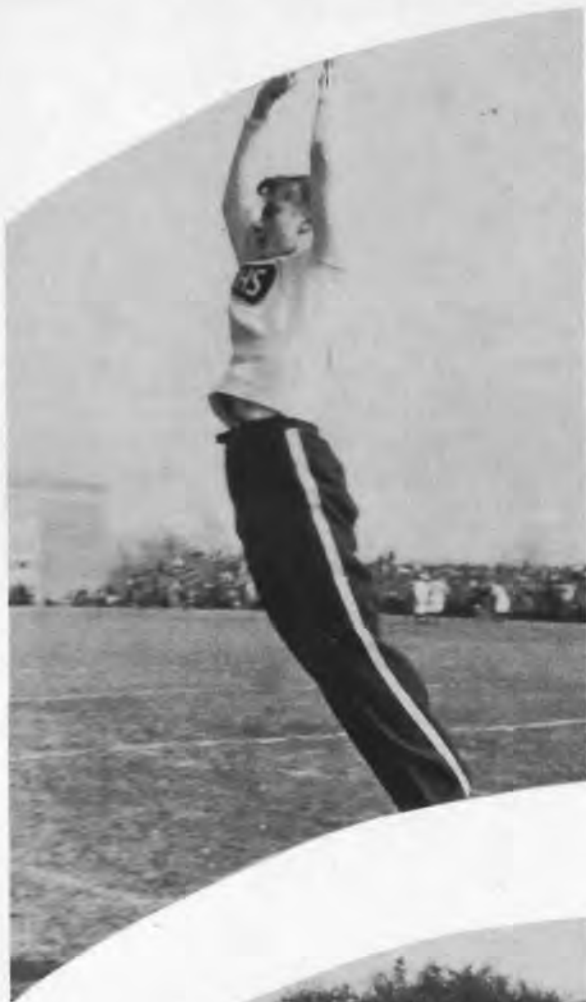

The turkey day game was attended by an overflowing crowd coming to see West Orange avenge their 7 to 0 defeat of the previous year by Columbia

High. West Orange started their offensive right away and lassoed the Cougars, 19 to 6.

On every football squad there are a few boys who consistently do good work but are never heralded by the press or the spectators. One of these boys is Jimmy Sheeran, a blocking back, who never carries the ball. He has cleared the way for many long runs and many a touchdown, but very seldom in his football career has he been recognized by anyone except the coaches and the players. Two more of these unsung heroes are the bobbing Bobs, Hammarberg and Haggerty. On every pile up into the line, the one on the bottom is usually Haggerty, who gets his man. On end sweeps and off tackle plays, Hammarberg usually breaks in and spills the interference or nails the ball carrier. We pay a tribute to these unsung heroes of the West Orange football team.

We also wish to pay a tribute to the fine work of Coaches Wear, Wenner, Rankin, and Lawrence, who always had a kind word for the boys after a tough game and praise for good plays. Never do they give up the ship early in the season, as can be evidenced by the comeback staged by the team this year.

The 1942 edition of the West Orange basketball squad was one of the "Durndest, fightinest" bunch of boys ever seen in this school. Despite the fact that they lost their coach, Marcus Rankin, to the army in the middle of the season, they compiled a good record under their new coach, Wendell Wear. The fact that their record was good was proved when they were asked to compete in the state championship tourney of the past season.

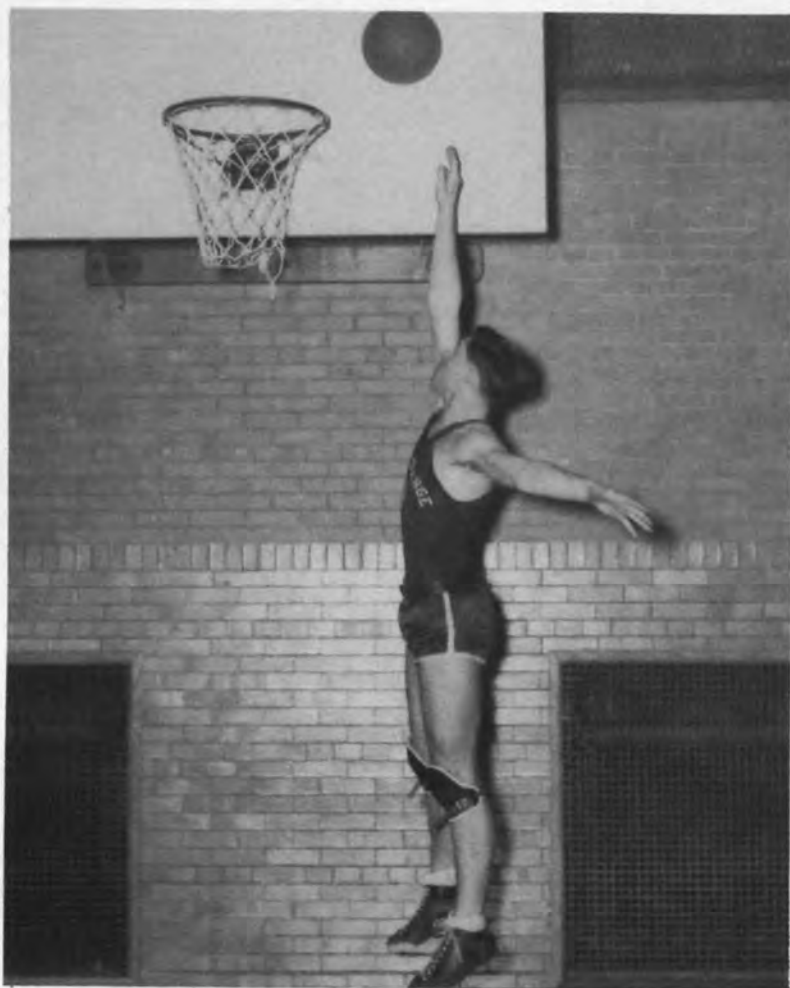

Paced by Captain Dick Wagner, the Cowboys piled up a record that cannot be judged alone by wins and losses. Contests similar to those against Columbia and Weequahic demonstrated a superior, even if not victorious West Orange quintet.

"Lamp" Wagner "spark-plugged" the team throughout the season, and looked exceptionally good when the pressure was on.

Jack Sexton, the man about whom the team centered, proved himself an outstanding basketball player by his constant good work and accurate scoring.

Sensational plays were contributed when color was needed, by Andy Salerno, veteran of several basketball campaigns.

Under-estimated by the fans this year was "Jill" Close. Close had no flare for the sensational, but his fine defensive plays, together with his thorough knowledge of the game, made "Jill" one of the mainstays of the quintet.

Leo Faas and Ken McGuckin, the other seniors on this year's team, both saw a great deal of action this season. Leo makes up in ability what he lacks in height, and Ken's accuracy makes him a threat on any ball club.

Lower classmen, Norman Carlson and "Sonny" Miele, are already well established varsity members. These boys promise to be among the most outstanding in the state next year.

Where's that ball!

Rollers

At the close of the basketball season, grunts and groans could be heard issuing from the boy's gym. Looking in, we saw an amazing sight. There were boys, our own students, flipping themselves around like their distant relatives, the monkeys. Inquiring further about this matter, we found this to be the Tumbling Club, a group of boys with tumbling, turbulent torsos, threshing about the floor. And wonderment on wonderment, they do it all for fun. To appreciate their tricks, one must try them one's self and see if he has the faculty for falling too.

Also coming from the gym. were sounds of the staccato dribbling of a basketball. This was the interclass basketball championships being played. And guess what! The lowly sophomore B gym class, composed mostly of seniors, came to the fore and rubbed out the lordly seniors and juniors to "cop" the inter-class championship.

Bobby Jones can well be wary! Have you seen the West Orange High School Golf Team in action? Under the supervision of Mr. Evans, the boys, Ebb Synder, Mac McKone, Jack Holmes, Frank McCrink, Julius Kosser, and Walt Bayowski, easily won the first match at Rock Spring Country Club over Boonton. They have a very full schedule this year including Verona, Paterson, Montclair, and Caldwell. A final test for their skill will be the State Tournament at Asbury Park.

Although the boys do not enter interschool competition in a number of other sports, still they get much enjoyment from playing such games as tennis and baseball.

Ah, for the life of a cheerleader, those Saturday's children, who are a cross between a Bing Crosby and a hog caller! West Orange has six of them. Every game night they are speechless as a result of their vocal efforts in that day's football foray—their golden tenor voices have become mere rasps of tone. Their white trousers, no longer white, are spotted with the grime of the field. On a muddy day, they are figuratively knee deep in their work. Still through it all they are the fighting backbone of the team. Their mighty cheers start Friday's pep meeting and reverberate until the game has been won.

Their enthusiasm is great throughout the game; but they become especially animated during the half (can it be from that trip across the grid-iron to pay their respects to the visiting team's lovely cheerleaders?).

Their work does not end with football season; but they continue their "rooting" at the basketball games. Even after they have dropped out of the limelight, they are not forgotten. Every young sophomore (feminine, of course) points to them with awe and declares, "They were cheerleaders!"

Ladies, ladies, remember you are ladies! What useless words—it's gym day and no need for demure voiced conversation. Lusty shouts—and but for an occasional soprano squeak—we might well be in the boys' gym class.

Miss Case, who has the difficult task of filling the well-loved shoes of Mrs. Muller, has initiated a new system this year. Calisthenics before each class "limber those limbs" for more energetic games. The tune is something like this—hands up—squeak—howl! Squeak — touch the floor — groan! — and then again!

Weather permitting, the classes are outdoors playing soccer, baseball, or archery. If old Sol declines to shine, they play basketball or volley ball indoors.

After several weeks of eliminating contests, Joanne Wiel came out the "winnah" in the ping pong singles. The doubles champions were, appropriately enough, the Byrne twins, Jean and Joan. Other contests, especially those between classes, have been very popular.

Participation in after-school sports has won for many girls their numerals or letters.

Another important war-time activity is the Red Cross First Aid Classes—also under the instruction of Miss Case. Sixty girls have gained their certificates in these extracurricular classes.

Another newcomer this year is Miss Menning, who takes the place of Miss Moses. She has prepared a fitting end to this year's gym activities, a "play-day" to be held in May. It will include girls from West Orange schools as will also the archery contest which is scheduled for early June.

"Ham Ration"

It would be nothing but the truth were the senior class to sing loud praises of their hit play. And, not believing in false modesty, we do not mind doing so. "Nothing But the Truth," written by James Montgomery, was a hilarious success. Much of the credit for this fine performance must go to Miss Hannes, who, by able and patient direction and the sweat of her brow, drew out every drop of the hidden actor in each member of the cast. She was aided by Ray Tower, our capable stage manager, and Blanche Borkstrom, our prompter.

But, of course, the wreaths of triumph rest mainly upon the heads of our cast, who positively amazed us with their unexpected genius. For instance, Jack Wiegel, our truthful young hero, rolled us in the aisles, while we split our aching sides at the witty chirpings of Danny Kram and the despairing roars of Brendon Byrne. Gwen, as played by Josephine Giorgio, was all that a heroine should be and more; and the show girls, May Procurat and Doris Berlow, contributed some of the most hilarious moments of the play. The other members of the cast, David King, Bob Hayward, Miriam Turteltaub, and Dorothea Riker, all were astonishingly good actors; and altogether "Nothing But the Truth" left us gasping for breath.

Mention of the Senior Play could not be made without including the work done behind the scenes by some of the more generous of our classmates. Credit for the scenery and the stage setting must be given to Mr. Williams and the stage crew; and for the props, to Miss Manley and her efficient committee. A fine job was also done by the large group of ticket-salesmen. Make-up crew, publicity men—all of the business connected with the play was handled by seniors who contributed both time and effort to make our play a success.

"Barnes" acles

Christmas ushers in Santa Claus and our A Cappella Choir. Like the gorgeous butterfly, the choir emerges in robes of maroon and gold and charms the school with their golden tones at the Christmas concert. Their eyes are all fixed on the manual gyrations of their leader, Mr. Barnes. The faint notes of a pitchpipe are heard, and suddenly mouths open simultaneously and notes galore pour out. Instead of retiring to their diurnal routine of practice, the choir this year became the chorus for the operetta "The Bells of Beaujolais." They also sang at a celebration in honor of Lowell Mason.

The Reveillers

Singing is one of the most beautiful ways of expressing one's self. Young ladies, it is said, are fond of expressing themselves. Therefore, such an organization as the Girls' Glee Club is welcome, indeed, in our High School. Sixty sweet voices (excluding that one alto—there's always one alto!) can be heard practicing every Wednesday under the direction of their able conductor, Mr. Barnes. They are presented to the school at the Christmas Concert. This year, you remember, they sang from the angel loft—the balcony (so their pretty faces could not help their singing). They also took part in the High School's first attempt at producing an operetta. Although their activities have been limited, the Girls' Glee Club has added a great many songs to their musical repertoire this year.

Dean's Men

"The band will rehearse Saturday morning at nine o'clock" (a notice to be found in any Friday's Bulletin in the fall).

And so while everyone catches up on sleep, (no doubt, too much homework) the band members roll out of the wrong sides of their respective beds and report to the school for several hours of marching and playing. Thus, the band unobtrusively prepares to show its talents throughout the football season, to help us celebrate victory, and to spur us on in defeat.

But this is only a part of the band's activities. After the Columbia game has been played, out come some bassoons, bass violins, and tympany from the orchestra; and presto change, a concert band is formed. In this capacity the Junior Band prepares for the annual instrumental concert in the spring when everyone can again thrill to the tempo of the band.

First a blast, then a blare, and a flute's snappy air—and all together we have our High School Orchestra. Any Wednesday during fifth period we can hear these promising young musicians "tuning up" in the Gym. Although they consider music seriously, there is always much fun in the group. Often "Dean" (Mr. Butterfield to you) has to reprimand those who insist on playing "Semper Fidelis" in Boogie Woogie rhythm. Fear of his baton, of course, makes these willful lads behave (we're only joking, Dean!). A pleased smile from him is

The orchestra has been very active this year. Their appearances at the Senior Play and P.T.A. were noteworthy. Enthusiastic applause greeted all their performances before the High School assembly, a really critical audience. They supplied the music for many of the Junior High School operettas. Then after a year of rehearsals and performances, a selected group traveled to Atlantic City to play in the All-State orchestra. This was their reward for a year of diligent work.

If we were to peek behind the walls of our library any Wednesday morning, we should find, being conducted with due parliamentary procedure, the meeting of the two literary societies. After business is completed, Clio or Philo entertains her companion club. The program may be a spirited debate on "Why We Should Have Homework," or perhaps book reviews of current novels. The program, no matter what it may be, is usually instructive as well as entertaining. The one program conducted by Clio and looked forward to with the most enthusiasm is the program given to entertain the entire student body; for each year the ancient rivals, Clio and Philo, vie with each other to see which can present the better assembly program. The students profit from this rivalry in enjoying an unusually novel assembly program.

Clio and Philo's friendly rivalry does not end with the assembly program but is prevalent throughout the year in each club's desire to surpass the other in its scholastic standing. This competition is climaxed at the annual banquet where Mr. Reimherr, with due solemnity and ceremony, carefully opens the envelope containing the averages of the two clubs. With bated breath the members await the word which will send them into the ecstasies of a seventh heaven or to the depths of despair. The winner in this battle of wits takes into its possession the coveted silver cup which it retains until it has been wrested from its grip by its triumphant rival.

Clio, with its friendly competition, its meetings, and programs, is a club of which we of West Orange High School can be justly proud.

Wise Salts

President, Robert Titchen; Treasurer, Robert Stephens; Vice-President, Ray Tower; Program Chairman, Alice Hart; Secretary, Shirley Baldwin; Critic, Miriam Turteltaub; Adviser, Mrs. Nock.

Proudly waves the blue and white banner of the Philologean Literary Society, which has kept on high the traditions and standards set for her by her illustrious founders. Although our companion club, Clio, now holds in her possession the silver loving cup for highest scholarship, we of Philo have resolved to win the battle of the intellects and emerge this year "The Win-nah!"

As a climax to our Club's year, Philo meets with Clio to partake of a banquet fit for the "gods." While we, the fortunate members, gorge ourselves with the delicacies provided, the sacred initiates sit uncomfortably and self-consciously on hard backed chairs, their anxious eyes on our every movement. Our fun and their discomfort begin after the feast when they carry out the nonsense devised by our Initiation Committee. After they have amused us with impromptu skits, impersonations of Garbo, and such stunts, they are pledged to the club of their choice. Then Mr. Terwilliger, our honorary member, is called upon to give one of his famous talks. Mr. Terwilliger is also present at our Christmas party, where, dressed as old St. Nick, he hands out small gifts, accompanied by his original poetry.

Every second Wednesday we meet with Clio for our business meeting and program of quizzes, book-reviews, and unusual talks. The student body can look back with pleasure to Philo's St. Patrick Day assembly program this year; for while enjoying this Irish program, they learned much about the customs and traditions of St. Patrick's Day.

With deep regret we leave the shelter of Philo's fold this year; but Philo shall live always in our memories.

Perhaps the renderings of German folk songs as sung by the German Club members are not always too harmonious. Perhaps they do distract Prof. Terwilliger when he tries to balance that equation. Perhaps the rest of the student body is curious about all the singing up in 306. But what could better represent the lively spirit of the German Club than the robust songs of Heidelberg students?

In between their monthly meetings, the Heinies manage to slip in their traditional fall picnic, to go on bicycle trips, to promote a Christmas dance, to attend a German movie, to have ice-skating parties, and to empty the treasury on a bang-up trip to New York. At their regular meetings, after stressing the fact that dues must be paid, the business procedures are put aside for more pleasurable topics.

The club takes to the highway.

They bear the brunt of scorn for the boring assembly programs and seldom share the laurels for the good ones. They plot and plan to give assemblies with variety—their dreams are shattered much too often. But they refuse to be disillusioned and, renewing their efforts, have planned programs which are different. This Assembly Council has given us an increasing number of musical programs, the most popular of which is the "Community Sing." When they are given the opportunity, they have given us speakers to whom we are delighted to listen (or should we say, to whom we are polite enough to listen?) Through days of confusion—what with "exams," bomb-scares, and days off because of too much sun—these thoughtful ten have always been prepared with a fitting program.

Although, contrary to popular belief, Latin America is not a place of diurnal siesta, fiesta, and bull-fights, a meeting of the Spanish Club is. Informal talks, motion pictures, games, and food galore have been the fiesta; and forty minute winks in the dull spots were always permissible—they were the siesta. As for bull-fights, little Ferdinand slept peacefully this year; but the club did entertain the assembly with its April program "A Glimpse into the Life and Customs of Mexico." No other program has surpassed it for the vivid color and true feeling of Mexican life. Every actor seemed to have caught some of Miss Eaton's ebullient love of Mexico—it's most difficult not to, for the senorita just glows when one mentions things Spanish. As is customary, the climax of the group's activities was its annual visit to New York and the Club Havana-Madrid where everyone ordered torrid "arroz con pollo"—well, anyway, two people ordered it; the others had roast beef cut from a South American cow, of course!

"My you speak French like a native—a native of West Orange." With many such a quip does Danny Kram informally call to order the meetings of the French Club. Everyone, armed with a smattering of French (wee-wee, especially), takes part in singing, telling stories, and eating with the true epicurean spirit of the French. This year the Cercle Francais visited New York City, enjoying among other things a French movie and a French dinner. Remember that one brave soul who ordered "escargot"—only to find it was glorified snails? Climaxing the year of meetings was a talk on home life and experience in modern France. The speaker made it evident that foremost in every free-French heart is "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity."

With the rest of this war-mad world totally disregarding the right of free speech, when people of Europe and Asia no longer dare to express openly their beliefs or criticize what they think is wrong, we Americans become more conscious of the true value of our liberty and freedom of speech. More and more, we come to realize just what a privilege it is to say, "I am an American," and to know that, even though our country is at war, we are granted freedoms unheard of in dictatorships. Americans can still gather on street corners and share with others their views and even criticize their government which is waging their war. We read and hear news reports and discuss freely and fearlessly these reports which, in the hands of our enemy and our allies, would be kept from the public. Since we still enjoy this freedom in our country, we are able to use it wisely in our schools.

In our own school we use this liberty to present to the students in the form of debates important topics of today and tomorrow. The Senior debate presented just such a problem of tomorrow when they chose to debate on the topic "Resolved: that Britain and the United States Should Form a Federal Union." Mr. Thomas coached the affirmative team of May Procurat, Brendan Byrne, Bob Stephens, and Jack Wiegel to victory over Mr. Smith's negative team of Blanche Borkstrom, Danny Kram, Bob Titchen, and Karl Marx. The Junior Debate along the same line elected to speak on the question of an All-American Union. This was won by the affirmative team of Edger Weaver, Stan Jacke, Marilyn Broder, and Peggy Keenan with Miss Peckham as coach, while Mrs. Wolfle's negative losers were Herman Nitzsche, Harry Shaich, Evelyn Feldman, and Irene Norton.

Whether the decisions in the debates were correct, only time will prove; for the topics were plans which will definitely be suggested as a means to win the peace to come; and the students of West Orange High School, through these debates, have been well informed as to the principles of these plans.

Mr. Smith may have acquired more than he bargained for when he agreed to be Faculty Adviser of the Debate Club; for it is, without a doubt, the loudest club in the school building. There is a junior riot at every meeting which takes the combined efforts of the president, sergeant-at-arms, and Mr. Smith to quell. Despite this lack of harmony, this one year old club has developed into one of the more important inter-scholastic, non-athletic organizations of our school.

Bureau of Facts and Figures

We have all noticed, during our study periods in the library, a boy or a girl helping Miss Stockman. It has probably never occurred to many of us that this girl or boy is a member of the Library Council, the organization that really works but is seldom heard of.

The Library Council is made up of nine members under Miss Stockham's guidance. During each period of the school day, one of the members is in the library either checking and filing magazines, repairing books, charging and discharging books, making out fine slips for overdue books, shelving books, or arranging magazine clippings and newspapers.

Besides their duties they also have social activities, one of the most important of which is the annual Tea, given in December for the faculty members.

In looking over the list of members of this group, we find that Barbara Holl has served two years on the Council. This means that she has had to give up one of her study periods each day for the past two years in order to help others. And Miss Stockman, our librarian, has not only aided us in finding material for our research work and books for book reports, but she has also made the library a quiet, cheerful place in which to work.

The members of the committee are: Jean de Girolamo, Betty Mellinger, Louise Infante, Beatrice Crelin, Eleanor Griffiths, Barbara Holzman, Barbara Holl, Arthur Bird, and Steve Krozser.

The weekly meeting place of the fairer sex is the Girl Reserves' Room at the Y. The purpose of this organization is to promote the social activities and further the ideals of American girlhood.

This club is not singular, for it is affiliated with many clubs all over the country. Benefit teas, dances, community sports, and guest speakers are some of the means of entertainment at our meetings. This year the girls have patriotically contributed to the defense of our country in many ways. At Christmas time, many of the girls outfitted dolls for unfortunates.

However, the girls are not serious-minded at all times, for they often hold informal meetings where "their well-groomed hair is let down."

The Setuit Club, an organization of which every girl in West Orange High School is a member, plays an important part in our school life. From September until June, each month the Council of Home-room Representatives follows through a worthwhile program.

The first event of the year on the Setuit Calendar is the assembly program at which assembly officers for the coming year are introduced. In this way the girls become acquainted, not only with the organization's leaders, but also with the purposes and objectives of the club.

Soon after this meeting, the football season begins; and the girls sell candy to hungry spectators during the games.

When the football season has closed, the girls look ahead and plan to make Christmas a happy time for unfortunate children throughout the Oranges. This year, with the wholehearted cooperation of the boys, as well as of the girls, the club conducted an unusually successful campaign for funds. As a result, gifts in the form of sleds, magazines subscriptions, and articles of clothing were purchased and presented to the Orange Day Nursery and the Orthopedic Hospital.

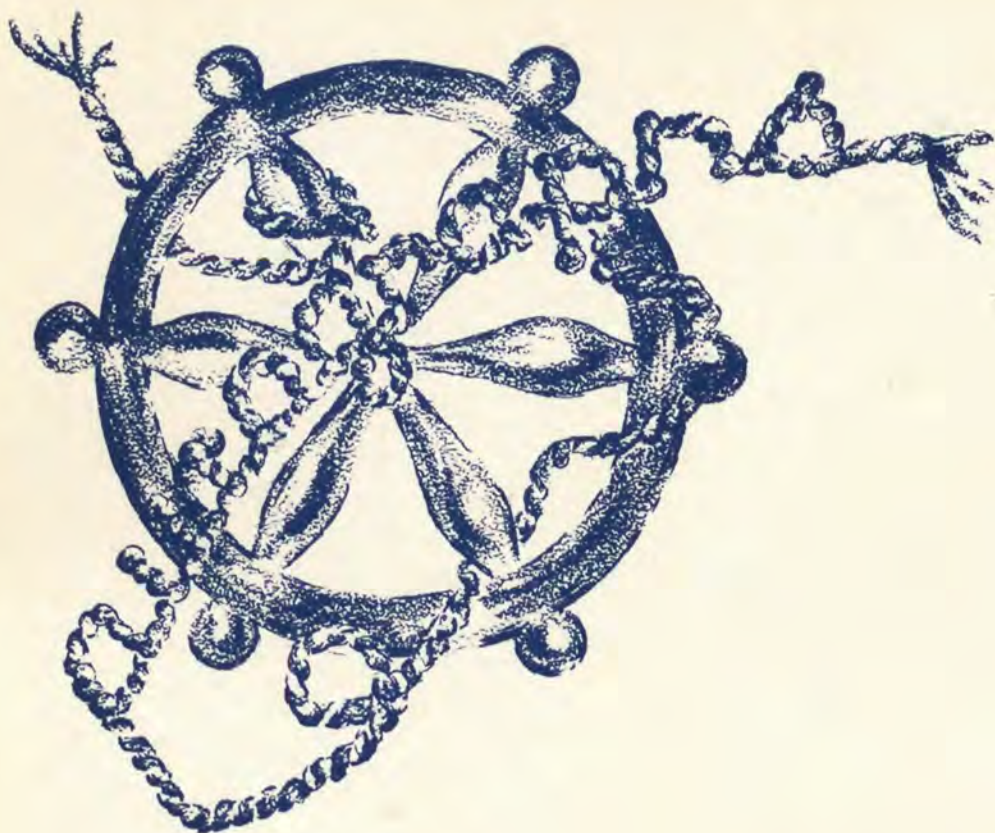

In cooperation with the local chapter of the Red Cross, the Council added to its regular program, a campaign for the collection of various articles needed by the Defense Program.

In the spring of each year comes the highspot of the Setuit's Calendar of activities—the Mother-Daughter Banquet. This evening the girls forget studies and treat their mothers and teachers to an evening of pleasure and fellowship.

With the coming of June, the Setuit girls relax and enjoy a well-earned rest. They may well look back upon their school year and be happy in the thought that they have contributed to the betterment of their school.
