Foreword

As this year's West-O-Ranger goes to press, we are well into our third year of war. Although gasoline, rubber, and food are less plentiful on the home front, victories are more plentiful on the war fronts. It is natural that thoughts of war are uppermost in all our minds, and so we have made the theme of our book that most powerful part of our forces, the airplane. As we read the newspapers or listen to the radio, we hear of the attacks that our planes have made on the Fortress Europe and on the Japanese Island bases; and we wish that we could actively join the fight. Though our spirit is behind the man behind the motor and the gun, we must first complete our present job, which is here at home.

In the following pages we shall show the boys and girls of the graduating class of 1944 finishing their passive duties and preparing to step into the active life of a citizen of a nation at war. Many of our boys have left this class to join the armed forces; and many more of us, both boys and girls, will enter the services soon after being graduated. The rest of us must work to supply the fighters with equipment or study to be better able to do the job awaiting us. Our care-free high school days are over. Upon leaving through this book in future years, we may laugh at our young selves; but we shall be glad to have a souvenir of these happy times which soon are gone, but never leave our memories.

MR. FREDERICK WILLIAM REIMHERR

IN MEMORIAM

The class of 1944 dedicates this yearbook to the memory of Frederick Reimherr, who has served this community for twenty-six years as the principal of West Orange High School. A native of Waterford, N. Y., he was graduated from Waterford High School in 1902, taught in a rural one-room schoolhouse for a year, and was graduated from Colgate University in 1907. He was principal of Waterbury High School in Vermont from 1907 until he came to West Orange in 1918. From Columbia, Mr. Reimherr won his M.A. degree, and the "Columbia Lion," a citation given annually to an outstanding citizen of New Jersey who has brought honor to the University. He was a member of the New Jersey School Masters' Club and of the New Jersey Council of Education. Because of his interest in collecting histories and biographies, he became an authority on American Colonial History. A member of the Congregational Church, Mr. Reimherr's favorite passages of Scripture were Paul's Ode to Charity (I Cor. 13), and the Nineteenth Psalm: "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer."

Mr. Reimherr's first six years as principal of West Orange High School were spent in the Gaston Street Building with only two hundred students in grades eight to twelve inclusive. Then the eighth graders had the advantage of becoming accustomed to the tempo and environment of senior high school life before taking on its scholastic responsibilities. The period of growth and industrial expansion in West Orange after World War I was accompanied by a rise in population which necessitated the building of the present high school in 1924. This year, in the Sophomore, Junior, and Senior Classes, there are nearly a thousand students. During his entire educational career, Mr. Reimherr has had to contend with crowded building accommodations and war-time conditions. Although some new subjects have been added and athletics have increased in importance, the curriculum of West Orange High School has changed only slightly since 1918.

For twenty-six years Mr. Reimherr has emphasized these fundamental precepts in regard to the school: that school is a job to be taken seriously; that a school should be conservative and sound both in subjects offered and methods adopted; and that the student is of prime importance. He has striven tirelessly to keep this high school an educational institution—a policy which has borne fruit in the fact that more and more West Orange students have continued their education. Because of the number of college questionnaires in 1922, it became necessary to rate the succeeding senior classes. Under Mr. Reimherr's restraining influence, West Orange High School has not rushed into untried educational experiments. Each student has been given a well-coordinated schedule according to his ability, promise, and need, as well as the best possible guidance in courses and aptitudes. Mr. Reimherr was so highly respected by college officials throughout the country that his recommendation was regarded as final for any prospective student.

Never wanting to be what he termed an "office principal," Mr. Reimherr kept in close contact with the student body. He did not believe in being aloof, and was always easily accessible to any student who wanted to come to him for advice or guidance. He was a stern disciplinarian—always friendly, but never familiar. Every high school boy or girl in the graduating class of 1944 bows his head in reverence before the memory of Frederick Reimherr—a great, altruistic educator.

CONTENTS

School: As we acquire our education,
West Orange High's our inspiration!

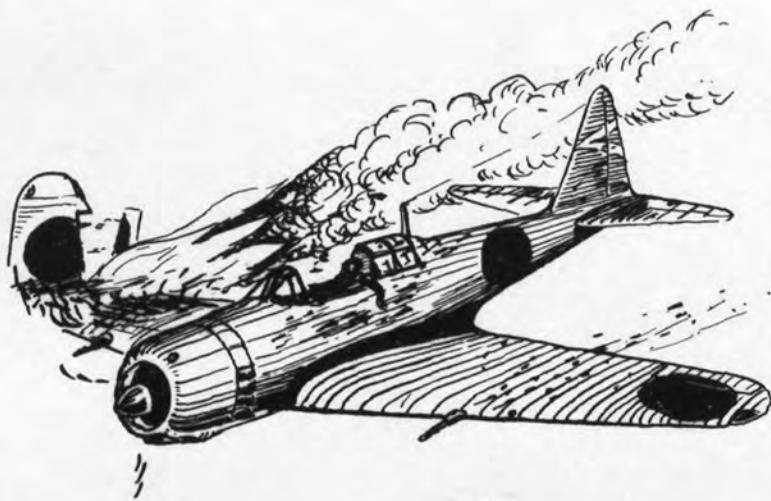

Administration: Our teachers try their best to plant,
The seeds of knowledge; but they can't.

Seniors: As we go from West Orange to fill new positions,
We leave to the Juniors our high school's traditions.

Athletic: In work and play we're on the ball,
But we like sports the best of all!!

School Life: Helter, skelter, to our classes,
Down the halls in scurrying masses.

Advertising: To our subscribers we extend many thanks
The patrons, the boosters, the stores, and the banks.

SCHOOL

*Overlooking church and home
We raise the flag which to our nation
Symbolizes cherished freedom,
Supported by free education.*

West Orange High School, built in 1924 to accommodate the increased population of the town, has since served approximately six thousand students. Through our turbulent high school years, we seniors have learned the hard lessons of life by personal experience. We have formed worthwhile friendships which time alone can eradicate.

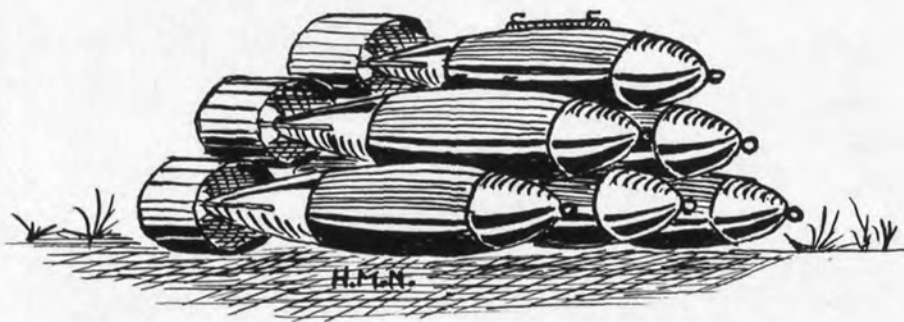

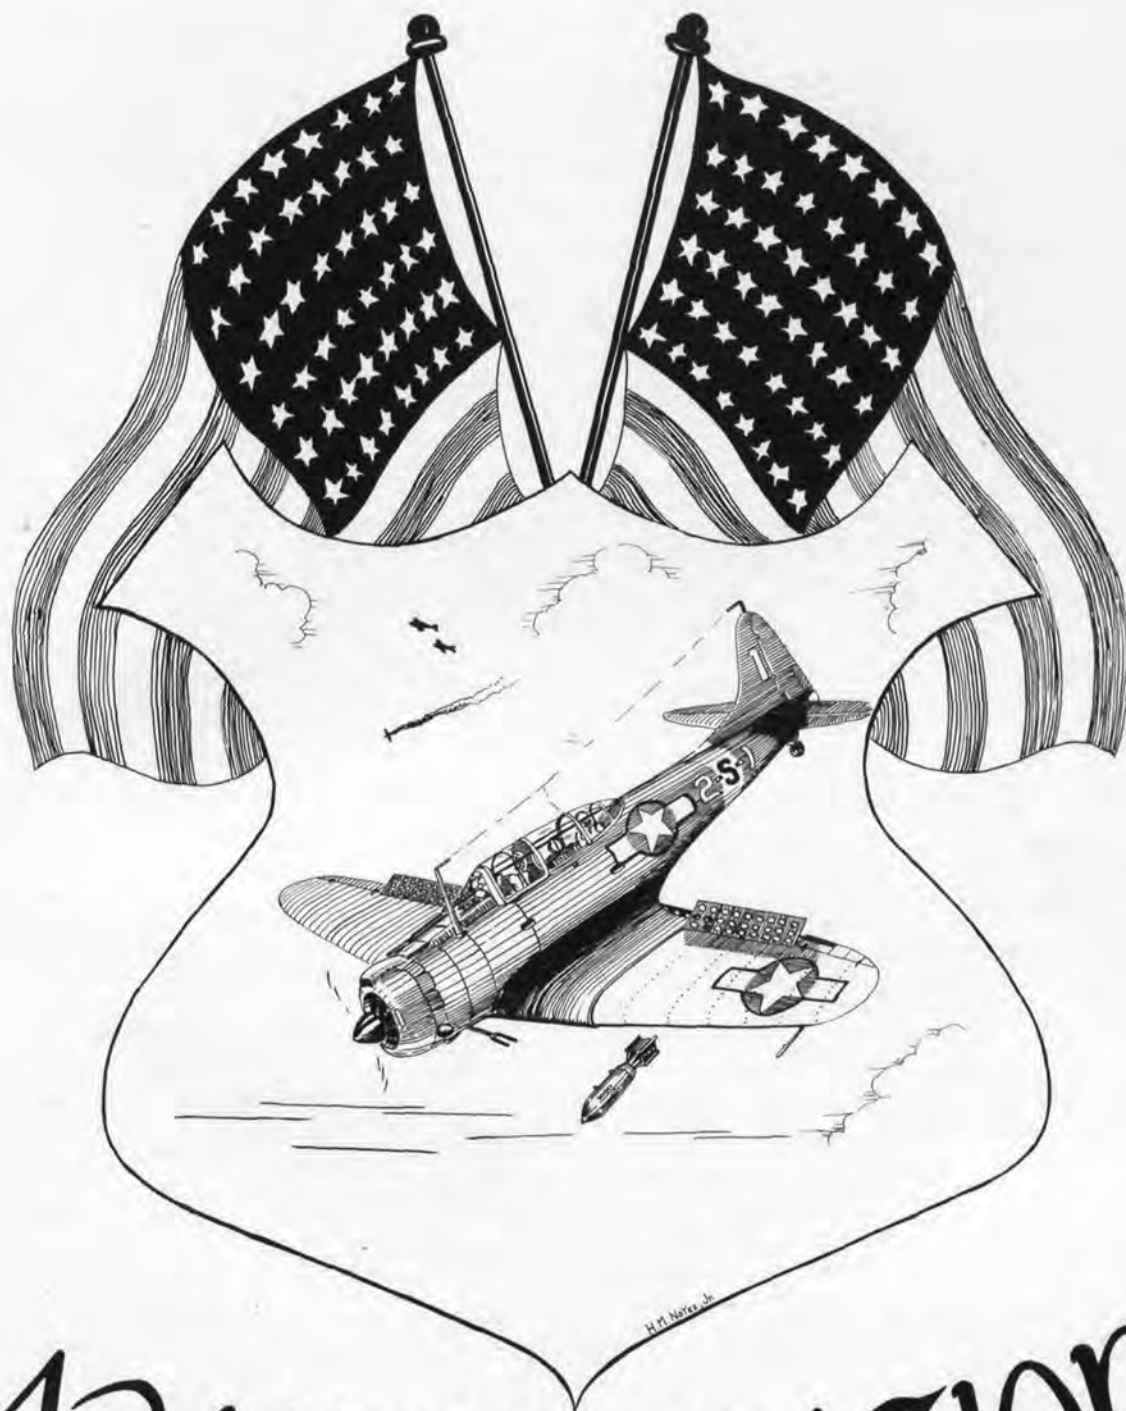

The high square outlines of our school tower above the wide-open gates of learning, symbolizing for us the square deal that is in store for us. West Orange High School stands for democracy and the equality of man.

Our rambling castle of a school opens its windows to sunshine and air. We shall always remember it as the place where we were taught to open the windows of our minds to beauty and knowledge.

ADMINISTRATION

MR. STRONG

Although Solomon C. Strong, the Superintendent of West Orange Schools, is rarely seen walking thru the halls of our high school, or speaking to the student body from our platform, his work is evident and warmly welcomed. It is he who decrees holidays and half-sessions when rationing takes the time of our teachers from the classroom—or when blessed Nature covers Orange Mountain with a storm forbidding sleet that even the De Camp Bus Company dares not violate. Not only does Mr. Strong attend to the thousand and one problems arising in the high school, in the junior high schools, and the grammar schools; but he has also given of himself unstintingly to aid the war effort. At our football games he becomes as red and excited as any bombastic senior in cheering the West Orange Cowboys on to victory. We Seniors of 1944 express to him our heartfelt gratitude. Through the maturity which senior responsibilities bring, we have learned to appreciate and respect all that Mr. Strong has done for us—individually and collectively—from our first day in kindergarten until graduation.

Mr. Jesse I. Taylor

For the last six years Vice-Principal of West Orange High School, Jesse Taylor has ably assisted Mr. Reimherr in the administration of school policies. He attended Wesley Collegiate Institute, a prep school in Dover, Delaware, from 1915 to 1919. Having been graduated from Wesleyan in 1923, Mr. Taylor then earned his M.A. degree in school administration at Columbia. For the next three years he taught mathematics and coached athletics in Islip, Long Island; he came to West Orange in 1926 as a chemistry teacher; in 1938 he was promoted to his present position of Vice-Principal. We students rarely pause to consider the added clerical work which the war has brought to our reduced office staff; consequently, we often fail to remember and appreciate the countless hours spent by Mr. Taylor in the various work of the school. His genuine interest, his sincerity, and his sympathetic and wise counsel have won him the admiration and respect of the whole student body.

Mr. Reimherr

Ever since Mr. Reimherr came to West Orange in 1918, he has been principal of West Orange High. He has come to be considered an integral part of our school. In the hall he sits reading his morning paper. In the auditorium he reads I Corinthians 13, his favorite chapter; in the office he gives friendly counsel to teacher and student alike; in the classroom he assists in the absence of the teacher. Mr. Reimherr has devoted all his time and energy to our school—the school is his life and he is the school.

SENIORS

THE SENIORS

ROBERT MILONE
President

During the three years we have been students in West Orange High, our school life has been disrupted and overshadowed by the war. The bombing of Pearl Harbor, which came in our Sophomore Year, brought with it many changes: the auxiliary courses of the "V-Program"; the Red Cross Sewing and Knitting Classes; the toughening Commando Tactics in gym; the conservation program, making us glad for our shorter tests and exams; the many new teachers and substitutes in place of those who entered the service; and most of all the loss of many of our boys who joined the armed forces.

However, despite these many disruptions, we have tried to carry on our school's best traditions. Under the able leadership of our class officers, we seniors of 1944 have endeavored to maintain the high standards set by preceding classes.

Bob Milone, our president, is very dependable, intelligent, and well liked. He has been outstanding in scholarship as well as on the football field.

The vice-president, Norman Carlson, has ably assisted Bob and has made a name for himself on the basketball court.

For secretary, we needed an orderly, painstaking person. Nyla Day just naturally filled this position.

Dick Simon, who is a conscientious and all-around good fellow, is our treasurer.

With the season's first snow on the ground, the students hurry home to get their skis; they're just hoping that the thaw hasn't spoiled their sport. Mr. Smock explains the intricacies of mechanical drawing to a rather foggy draftsman while Alan Grobert, Alan Kishpaugh, Bill Grimm, and Walt Deck work industriously in the foreground. In the meanwhile, Peter Rand, Herby Noyes, Birdella Wightman, Betty Sturzebecker, Gordon Tallaksen, Jeep Kearney, Al Albrecht, Bob Ciricillo, and Howard Baillie are drawing war bond posters.

Let's hurry out of the school; then let's hurry out to the bus and get on home. No studying this afternoon; we must get our skiing and sledding done before the snow melts. That snow is far too good to waste, and no one likes the slush and mud that come later. Keep snow on the ground and joy in our hearts, for school days soon are over.

What's this? An October picnic? Everybody looks very happy and very hungry. This is the kind of extracurricular activity we all enjoy—it satisfies the soul and the stomach. "You mean I have to revise it again?" "Where's the negative for this picture?" "Who's supposed to write the article on Mr. Taylor?" "Is the deadline twelve or twelve-thirty?"—that's what we hear from 202 as members of the annual staff rush in and out. Look out! Here comes Harold Englund with his camera. "Where are the people for the 'Who's Who'? I'm supposed to take their pictures." Swoosh! We hope he gets down the stairs without taking off. Let's peek in the door. There's Julia Ferraiuolo pounding away on her typewriter as she tries to decipher Betty Hines' famous scrawl. Over in the corner, Mary Williamson and Pat Lynes sit pouring over a dictionary and a book of quotations. Stand back! Here comes Herby Noyes with an armful of posters. "Let's see them, Herby. Boy, what beautiful airplanes!" Looks as if he's preparing the "Noyes Exclusive Airplane Identification Handbook." Down the hall come our business manager, Milton Malkin, with his hands full of money, and Jimmy Ospenson and Don Moulton back from Orange, where they've been collecting ads. "How's it coming, boys?" "Well, very well; everywhere we go, they tell us to go to their New York office—as if we haven't already worn out enough Number 18 stamps." And here's Jack Millelot; he looks rather worried. "Have you paid for your yearbooks yet?" "Of course." "Well, I have to get twelve dollars more from somewhere." As he goes into the room, out come Nyla Day and Bob Milone, the sports editors; and behind them, Alan Davenport, the editor-in-chief himself. "Do you know where the personality committee's meeting? And were Tommy Laing and Ella Nielsen in school today? They're at the head of it, and they have all the ballots for the Who's Who." He certainly is busy lately. How does he ever have the energy left to get the marks he gets? Well, well, here comes Miss Hilson herself. "You people look as if you have time to spare. Would you like to come in and help us identify some pictures?" "Well, Miss Hilson . . ." "Fine! We certainly need your help."

Now you readers can see that practically every one of the seniors has participated in getting the "West-O-Ranger" ready for publication. We know all of you are grateful to those who have spent time and effort to give you the yearbook, especially Miss Hilson, and that as you peruse it in later years, you'll remember the work that went into its preparation.

FOOTBALL

The Cowboys of West Orange's 1943 football squad have added another successful chapter to this school's record. Though skittish concerning the attitude of the student body toward the team and faced with a squad small in number, the team pulled itself together after a first game defeat to win the support of the entire school and compile an enviable record for future teams to maintain. There have been better teams and more outstanding players in this school, but few have given the spectators the last minute thrills that the '43 squad gave them in the East Orange, Westfield, and Columbia games this year.

Several of the boys who supplied these thrills donned a West Orange uniform for the last time on Thanksgiving day. These seniors have helped set a mark for the 1944 eleven to shoot at.

Boyd Moreland, who held down an end position, gave a steady and dependable performance on both offense and defense all season in spite of a serious shoulder injury. Boyd's good football sense helped the entire squad in many tough situations.

Another standout in the Cowboys' forward wall was Fred Kluge, 180 pound tackle. Fred's fine blocking made possible many of the West Orange offensive drives, and his hard defensive charge raised havoc with Cowboy opponents in every game this year. Art Fiveland, though injured through most of the season, gave such a convincing performance while in action that he was placed on several All-County teams. His hard charging defensive play gave the Cowboys their first score of the year, and his all around guard play contributed heavily to West Orange's offense. Dick Bossert was the smallest man in the Cowboy line in size, but not in ability. Though faced by a much larger opponent every Saturday, Dick did not allow this handicap to prevent him from turning in a creditable performance time and time again. A key man in every play is the center, and West Orange was fortunate in having a stand-out player like John Scott to fill this position. His faultless passing helped give the Cowboys a smooth offensive punch, and his brilliant defensive play earned him the praise of the newspaper scribes all through the season. Dick Simon, who was seriously hampered by a wrenched knee, also helped the Cowboys' cause during the 1943 campaign. Because of his injury, Dick was unable to play much offensive ball; but his sound defensive game was important to West Orange in several close contests. Howard Mathesius, the team's high scorer and the fastest man on the squad, did a brilliant job at the half-back position. His long sprint in the Kearny game and his thrilling run against Westfield will remain in the minds of West Orange rooters for a long time to come. His blocking and defensive work showed all around capability which will be hard to equal. The quarterback of the 1943 eleven was Bob Milone, who did the kicking and passing in addition to his signal calling chores. Bob's dependable blocking aided his back field mates on offense, and his defense work as safety man broke up many opposing threats. Two other boys, who left the squad because of injuries received in the course of the season, were Gerald Salinard and Ronnie "Rockrammer" Roberts. Jerry turned in a good performance against Irvington and Scott but wrenched his knee so badly in the latter game that he was forced to leave the squad. The "Rock" suffered torn ribs in a rough and tumble practice session and, as a result, was unable to participate in the remainder of the games.

BASKETBALL

As the Cowboy basketball season opened up, they suffered three straight losses, losing close games to Bloomfield and Orange, and then being decisively beaten by Belleville. Then West Orange, under the excellent coaching of Edward F. Sylvester, hit the win column by defeating Clifford Scott and Columbia. In the process of beating Clifford Scott, Captain Norman (Whitey) Carlson, the Cowboys' scoring ace, broke the individual scoring record by swishing the hoop for twenty-two points, thus breaking the old record of nineteen points.

N. Carlson

The Cowboys then met the powerful Weequahic team and were beaten, 56-48. West Orange, again in their winning stride, tumbled Clifford Scott and Columbia in return games, thus evening up the record at 500 per cent.

Belleville was again met and again beat the Cowboys decisively by a 57 to 37 score. West Orange again on the rebound beat Irvington in a closely contested ball game with the great offensive playing of Captain Norman (Whitey) Carlson by a 44-42 score.

East Orange was the next foe of West Orange; and the Panthers, after taking an early 15-0 lead,

GIRLS'

Here it is the end of another school year, and the girls of West Orange High School have had a truly eventful one. Last fall, the gym classes welcomed back a former faculty member, Mrs. Terry, as their instructor. She had a problem on her hands in the form of some of the largest classes in the history of the school, but she handled that problem most successfully. While the weather was warm, and there was grass to be trampled under their feet, the girls enjoyed slugging away at baseball, playing an exciting game of soccer, hitting the hockey disc around the field (and often into the bruised knees of their teammates), and shooting the arrow directly (?) at the target for a competitive game of archery.

When Old Man Winter sneaked in, they stayed in the air-cooled gymnasium and engaged in many different kinds of activities, namely, basketball, volleyball, ping pong, deck tennis, broad jumping, stunts and pyramids, and many other games that would develop their skill and physical well-being. One thing that cannot be omitted because of the important part it played in every girl's gym period is calisthenics. When these exercises started, there were more grunts heard from the weaker sex than when the Senior English Exam was given. After a few introductory lessons, the girls performed some of the most difficult feats with ease and grace, and also with a few giggles. After every gym period when calisthenics was executed, however, there were always sore muscles and stiff joints of which the girls complained. When they behaved themselves extra well and were exceptionally cooperative, they were allowed fifteen minutes of social dancing; and this was a very popular practice with them. This year also marked a large turnout of girls for the swimming team at the Y.W.C.A. after school on Wednesdays, for which they were given points toward their numerals or blocks.

Thus, with these many and varied activities, the girls of West Orange High School have become better equipped physically and mentally to be worthy citizens of West Orange, and of the United States.

School is not preparation, but life itself—life at its most crucial stage. Your good student usually becomes the successful business or professional man. The "Johnny" who gets the Zero, who designs and constructs the Mustangs, as a student got a couple of zeros with a 1 in front of them.

The Curtis boy who fools with "bird contraptions" at Hammondsport, builds eagles with which to conquer time and space.

Today's flight of imagination is tomorrow's basic industry. And so we are soliciting your banking business. We solicit your account—not when you grow up, but NOW, early in life.

To you the banking connection thus formed, should prove invaluable as you advance in business or your chosen profession.
