Worth

Sandwiched between summer and graduation exists that phenomenon called "Senior Year." More than merely another way of saying 12th grader, the word SENIOR embodies the myriad of feelings and experiences unique to being a senior. Those of us in the class of 1994 who assembled in the Caldor parking lot the morning of the first day of school decorated our cars with blue and white streamers and balloons, but something was still missing. As soon as the long line of cars began to move, the honking of horns and the shouts and cheers of seniors awakened in us a sense that we were all finally a part of the spirit and exhilaration of senior year. We sustained that spirit from the senior parade to the picnic, the pep rally, Homecoming, and the senior prom.

As we walked down the halls of West Orange High School on September 7, 1993, we realized that as seniors, we were now the ones whom underclassmen looked up to, the ones who were expected to be leaders. The rite of passage from underclassmen to seniors, which we had begun by buying class rings as sophomores and '94 shirts as juniors, was complete. Looking back, it seemed that this transformation would never happen, but all 277 members of the class of 1994 would definitely agree that it was well WORTH WAITING FOR.

"Let's Get Fired Up!" Tri-captain Jan-yne DiBiase encourages the crowd.

Senior spirit, and the traditions that were part of it, was what truly made senior year WORTH WAITING FOR. Our energy and enthusiasm didn't allow us to sit back and watch our senior year pass by. Despite last year's cancelled fall sports pep rally, our class brought back the pep rally in a big way in early October. To the surprise of many students and administrators, but not to those of us in the class of 1994, that night the gym was filled to near capacity with enthusiastic Mountaineers, most of them chanting "SENIORS!" "SENIORS!" "SENIORS!"

The class of 1994 walked proudly into the gym and triumphantly took its place in the bleachers beneath the banner that read "SENIORS." We had waited for three years and we were ready to dramatically prove, with confetti, streamers, and balloons, that our class spirit would surpass all others. As the seniors involved in marching band, cheerleading, and fall sports were recognized for their dedication, the entire class roared its approval and support. After it was all over, and only a few torn streamers and crumpled banners lay on the floor, the class of 1994 left the gym feeling like true seniors, energized for the year ahead. That night, and throughout the year, the class of 1994 showed its true colors — blue and white!

Our class was unique in that despite our relatively small size, we made a substantial contribution to our school and to our community that made us worth waiting for. The privileges and activities that were part of our senior year weren't the only things worth waiting for — we gave things back.

In addition to taking on leadership positions within West Orange High School, on teams and clubs, members of the senior class volunteered at several medical and rehabilitation facilities in town and in the surrounding area. In their free time, many students volunteered at St. Barnabas Medical Center, admitting and discharging patients, delivering flowers, and performing other duties that lightened the workload of the hospital staff. Mrs. Marcia Toner, director of volunteers at the hospital, defined our volunteers as "courteous, dedicated, inspired, sharing, compassionate, resourceful, and energetic." Also befitting this description were several other seniors who trained as emergency medical technicians (EMTs) and worked on the all-volunteer West Orange First Aid Squad. As Youth Squad members, they dispatched ambulances, rode on calls, and responded to life-threatening emergencies. Our real worth was in what we gave away, and that made the class of 1994 WORTH WAITING FOR.

"A reminder to all Seniors: Senior Picnic tickets are on sale for twelve dollars — see Ms. Damiano or Mr. Prendergast or any senior officer. And don't forget to pay your senior dues of sixty-seven dollars before December 1st, so you can have your name printed on the yearbook . . ." Does this sound familiar? Every morning as the announcements were read, we listened attentively, wondering how we would juggle all of our after school activities, study for that test, finish our college applications, and still save some time for our friends. Beginning with our freshman year our class got involved and wasted no time in becoming the driving force behind the student life at West Orange High School.

Over the years our diverse talents were highlighted in concerts and publications, debates and academic competitions. Through such activities as the Unity Club and UMOJA (United Minorities of Joint Alliances) we explored different cultures, while JSA (Junior Statesmen of America) involved us in our own government. At the National Honor Society Induction in January many of us were honored for our academic achievement and our dedication to the school, which was reflected by our participation in student council, the marching band, and the Mountaineer, Health Careers, Ecology, and Foreign Language clubs.

Not only did we show our dedication to the school, but to the community as well. The Interact Club provided services for our community, while Lean on Me helped to spread awareness of the evils of drugs to the elementary schools. By participating in S.A.L.E. (Student Alternative Learning Experience) we were given the chance to teach younger students foreign language skills, and through the Cooperative Education Program, we were given the opportunity to hold part-time jobs.

We devoted our time before and after school and on weekends to organize events, hoping to serve as role models for the classes to follow. Our musicians and writers, politicians and actors were finally able to leave their mark, together proving that our senior year was Worth Waiting For.

The Early Bird...

"What time? You've got to be kidding. Have fun!" With comments like these, only the most outgoing and hungriest members of the senior class were willing to brave the bitter cold Thanksgiving morning for the annual Senior Breakfast. Some smiling, some hardly awake, the class of 1994 showed their spirit in support of this senior class activity at 7:30 in the morning . . . so no coffee went to waste.

Surrounded by the constant reminders of the Homecoming Game, just hours away, the seniors donned their senior shirts and school colors. But these energetic classmates were not lost among the streamers and balloons — they were there to have a good time. With the help of some early risers, the class officers and advisors transformed the Holiday Inn into a festive setting for this senior celebration. Along with other teachers and administrators, advisors Ms. Damiano and Mr. Prendergast enjoyed themselves among the lively morning revellers. Senior class treasurer Amanda Bunsavage noted, "It was definitely worth getting up at 5 A.M. to spend a memorable Thanksgiving morning with my friends."

Royal Fanfare

For the first time at West Orange High School, the entire student population was given the chance to truly be a part of the annual Homecoming tradition. All students were presented with the opportunity to attend the Student Council sponsored Homecoming Dance, in honor of those seniors who were elected by their classmates as nominees for both Homecoming Queen and King. After the ballots were cast in all senior English classes and the results were tabulated, the four nominees for the first-ever Homecoming King were announced. On November 20, 1993, Pat Scaglione, Steve Klein, Sean Pettiford and Janas Caruncho arrived at the main gym to dance the night away, anxiously awaiting the announcement and the coronation of the King. Halfway through the evening, the music was stopped and the lights were turned on. All eyes were focused towards the front of the gym as the Student Council announced each of the runners-up, and finally, the winner, Janas Caruncho.

As Janas was crowned King and the cheers filled the room, three senior girls among the crowd were unaware that they too would be honored at the annual Homecoming Game in just one short week. Soon enough, these three seniors, Soraya St. Louis, Cara Weisel, and Kathy Angkustsiri, found out that they were elected by their class to be nominees for Homecoming Queen. On Thanksgiving morning at the victorious Mountaineer football game against West Side, half-time was turned into a royal celebration. As Mr. Tarnoff announced each couple, they walked through the arch of flags towards the jubilant spectators. Escorted by Steve Klein and Sean Pettiford, Cara Weisel and Soraya St. Louis were presented as members of the Homecoming Court. The culmination of the week-long suspense arrived when Kathy Angkustsiri was crowned the 1994 West Orange High School Homecoming Queen.

With her arms full of roses and her eyes filled with tears, Kathy was congratulated by her parents and friends. "I was overwhelmed and really honored that I was chosen. My mother was very proud of me and my dad couldn't stop smiling." Homecoming King Janas Caruncho felt very privileged to have been presented with the honor. "I think what we have here is the start of a wonderful new tradition that I hope will carry on in West Orange's future long after we have graduated."

MOM THANKS DAD

November 6, 1993 was not just the date for another home football game. It was the day set aside to honor senior marching band members, cheerleaders and football players for their years of participation in the fall sports program. It was also a time to recognize their parents for their steadfast encouragement over the years. In a pre-game ceremony, each senior participant, flanked by parents and/or

For the parents, the day was a fitting "thank you" for four years of the car pooling, travelling to home and away games, and for being there when things didn't turn out well. The day presented students with one of the few opportunities to share the spotlight with their parents.

For the seniors it served as a fitting tribute for four years of practice in all kinds of weather, late dinners, and the setbacks competition sometimes brought about. The shared recognition also helped cement friendships which became stronger as each challenge was met. For Pat Scaglione the moment was "sad because it hit me that it was the end of my football career."

Strike up the Band

"Ladies and gentlemen, please welcome the award-winning Marching Mountaineers!" Every Saturday afternoon in the fall, the marching band, directed by Mr. Thomas Maliszewski, entertained crowds at home and away football games. This year's half-time show featured the music of George Gershwin, including "Strike Up the Band," "Rhapsody in Blue," and selections from "Porgy and Bess." The band's work began at the week-long band camp held in August, where, led by drum majors Kathy Angkustsiri and Mike Cohen, along with color guard captain Kara Giorgio and percussion captain Lauren Knutowicz, they marched twelve hours each day and rehearsed music for two hours each night in preparation for the season. Mr. Maliszewski noted that, "This year's senior class was exceptional in its closeness, esprit de corps, and level of leadership." The seniors led the 77 member Group 3 band to a first place finish at their first competition in Westfield, where the band also won awards for best music, best drum major, and best percussion. The band's hard work continued to pay off as it placed first at the Carteret competition, second at the Verona competition, and secured a sixth place finish in Group 3A at the CMBC championships held at Giants Stadium.

In addition to performing on the football field, the marching band participated in several parades. They led the West Orange St. Patrick's Day Parade, and marched in the Fire Department's Centennial Parade. Also, the Marching Mountaineers were selected to represent Essex County in Governor Whitman's inaugural parade, which was unfortunately cancelled due to bad weather. During their spring trip to Boston, Massachusetts, the band also marched in the Festivals of Music parade competition.

This year's band, with its veteran upperclassmen combined with a large and talented freshman class, set a new standard of excellence. Baritone saxophone player Julie Resch summed up the year best, saying, "When it's all over, nothing can take away the pride and the sense of accomplishment that you feel inside."

A "cymbal" of true dedication, Lauren Knutowicz leads the award-winning percussion section.

Perfect Harmony

Although the auditorium renovation had the music program on the move, holding its concerts at Roosevelt and Edison Middle Schools, that didn't stop students at West Orange High from contributing to the sounds of music. Students devoted extra time to rehearsing and to improving their musical skills in preparation for competitions and concerts.

The winter and spring concerts showcased the students' varied talents. Vocalists participated in the Chorus and the Concert Choir, directed by Mrs. Williamson, and sang at the concerts as well as on the choir trip to Annapolis, Md. Twelve students were selected by audition to sing with the Chamber Singers, a group which sang pieces characteristic of the Renaissance Period. Those who wanted something more contemporary auditioned for the Broadway Show Choir, which sang and danced to choreographed routines of hits from Broadway musicals.

Instrumentalists found their niche in orchestra or in band. The Orchestra, conducted by Mrs. Sokolow, included violins, violas, cellos, and string bass. The Freshman Band and the Advanced Band, conducted by Mr. Maliszewski, included students from every level of musical ability in its performance at concerts and at graduation. The Wind Ensemble, conducted by Ms. Kahan, was comprised of musicians chosen by audition, and provided a challenge for advanced players. The ensemble competed on the spring trip to Boston, Mass. along with the Jazz Band, a group composed of trumpets, trombones, saxophones, and a rhythm section. In addition to competing, the Jazz Band played for community events, including the Fire Department's Centennial Dinner. In January, members of the Jazz Band and members of the Advanced Band and the Orchestra came together to play in the Pit Band, which provided the music for "Gypsy."

The auditorium renovation may have left music students without a "home," but the efforts and dedication of the students and their teachers enabled them to take their show on the road in order to create perfect harmony.

Members Only

Across the country, students are honored annually for their scholastic achievements. On January 11, 1994, after a postponement due to an unrelenting winter, West Orange High School invited the families of 53 seniors being inducted into the National Honor Society to share in a very special night. "The evening is a real high for all of us because it is the result of things that most kids have worked hard for all their lives," noted advisor Dr. Esther Bearg. Officers were also elected: Peter Lee as President; Michael Schaper, Vice President; Mary Miner, Secretary; and Frank Lai, Treasurer.

The four students who were elected to speak by the other members all gave personal accounts of their unique experiences. Kathy Angkustsiri tackled the difficult issue of racism. While acknowledging its existence, Kathy emphasized the fact that she would not always feel as welcome as she does at home. Sarah Hymowitz focused on community activism and her personal growth in regard to this issue over the course of her high school years. She pointed out that it is up to our generation to leave an impact instead of idly waiting for someone else to take charge. Toby Herman offered humorous attempts at rationalizing the common experiences of every student in the room. Her anecdotal remarks focused on familiar situations that all could identify with. Janas Caruncho came to the realization that the future was just around the corner. Strongly conveying his point, he advocated giving back to society.

The keynote speaker, Dr. William Hait, a West Orange alumnus and the Director of the Cancer Institute of New Jersey, spoke of his high school years and the similarities between high school then and now. Encouraging a safe and productive future, he wished everyone the best of luck.

The uniqueness of this night was exemplified when Mr. Joseph Tylus, the retired Principal of West Orange High School, was presented with an Honorary Membership into the National Honor Society. Mr. Tylus gratefully shared in what he called the "culmination" of years of dedication on the part of everyone present.

CO-OPING FOR A CHANGE

While many seniors held part-time jobs to earn money during the school year, the fifty seniors in the Cooperative Education Program also held jobs, not simply to earn money, but to train for careers. These seniors combined traditional classroom instruction with on-the-job application. To be eligible for the program, students had to be in their senior year and have demonstrated good citizenship and regular attendance. The students, their parents, coordinators, and employers all signed a training agreement at the beginning of the year. Co-op students attended core curricular classes in the mornings, including one Co-op class taught by their specific coordinator/teacher. Mr. Buzelli taught Cooperative Industrial Education, Mrs. Berman taught Cooperative Business Education, and Mrs. Antonacci, in addition to counseling all of the Co-op students, taught Cooperative Home Economics. Mrs. Antonacci explained that the classes "provided support and training" for the students to apply in their afternoon jobs. Co-op students also had the chance to hear a variety of speakers on different careers and to visit community and private colleges in preparation for life after graduation.

The transition from high school to the business world was made easier by the experience Co-op students acquired on the job. Each student was required to work, after dismissal at 12:04, at least 15 hours each week and some even opted to work as much as 33 hours each week. At the end of the year, the Co-op program hosted an Employer Appreciation Dinner where they thanked the employers and the students for their participation. Mrs. Antonacci commented that through the Co-op program, "Students gain experience in job skills and learn work readiness skills. They have the opportunity to explore careers. Students often become aware that they may need further schooling and many do pursue higher education. At the end of the program, some students are hired in the positions they have been training in." Through the Co-op program, students not only earned a salary and course credit, but they learned valuable lessons about adult responsibilities, money management, and the world of business that they would not have otherwise learned in the classroom.

1994 CO-OP

Extra! Extra!

Two of the electives offered at West Orange High School can boast continual success through awards, positive feedback, and devoted students. Whether these students were enrolled in the Broadcast Journalism class (TV36) or Journalism (The Pioneer), the entire community benefited from their efforts.

Each year, new faces appeared on TV36 covering sporting events and special activities, as well as combing the hallways of WOHS to get the latest news, trends, and opinions that represented our school. Anchors Amy Russoniello and Cara Weisel worked with executive producers Jodie Kutner and Kiran Devaprasad and the entire staff to bring the bi-monthly show into the homes throughout the community. Mr. Martin Kale and Mr. John McCarthy advised the class on technical and presentational skills, aiming for consistent, quality shows. Amy commented, "Broadcasting was a wonderful experience; being an anchor was just an added plus."

The newspaper staff shared the same commitment to excellence as the news show. Whether writing and editing stories on the computers, or choosing new graphics, these ambitious journalists compiled each issue entirely on their own. Once the pages were placed, co-editors-in-chief Lina Libson and Pam Isaacson assembled and delivered The Pioneer to the printer. Advisor Mr. William Ehrlich instructed the staff on the ethics of journalism and aided in revising stories, but "for the most part," Lina noted, "we put in the time after school so it was great to hear people comment on a successful issue."

The Write Stuff

At the beginning of the 1993-94 school year, the new staffs of the Mountaineer yearbook and Cobblestone literary magazine began working with hopes of putting together award-winning publications. Teamwork and patience were the basic ingredients needed to meet the stress-producing deadlines. Completing both publications proved to be an educational and unforgettable experience.

Venturing into unknown territory, the 21 members of the Mountaineer yearbook staff did not know what to expect out of the Journalism IV/Yearbook class. Not only did the staff have to acquire new skills, they also had to learn the importance of sacrifice. In November, Mr. John McCarthy, the yearbook advisor, and his staff volunteered their time by repainting a home for abused teenagers in East Orange. This experience brought the class together and proved to be very useful later in the year when they had to devote extensive after school time to lay out and proofread pages. After much frustration and differences of opinion, the staff created a unique book which reflected the Class of 1994.

Like the yearbook, the Cobblestone strove to present an innovative and prestigious publication. Meeting once a week, the staff evaluated the writings and artwork of many talented students. The literary magazine advisor, Dr. Ruth Legow, sought out imaginative writers and artists who were willing to submit their work. Picking out the right cover design was an essential part of finalizing the magazine. After carefully selecting which submissions would be published for the magazine, the staff and its editors couldn't wait to go to the printer to deliver the final product. Each senior received a copy of the Mountaineer and Cobblestone in June.

"It's hard to believe that we've captured history. It was hard work trying to produce publications that were as great as the years before, but I think that all of the long hours and hard work that were put into the literary magazine and the yearbook have definitely paid off."

You Can Get There From Here Without Jetlag

Each day, West Orange High School students ventured into the great unknown — the fourth floor — and into an entirely new world rich with culture, traditions, and a native tongue. In this way, the world of foreign languages was opened up to them. It was through these foreign language classes that students were able to learn either French, Spanish, or Italian. The learning did not stop at the end of class; all three of these languages offered after school clubs. Through meetings, club sponsored activities, and the annual celebration of World Language Week, these clubs offered fun ways for students to learn about the different countries and their unique characteristics. With the help of advisors Mrs. Bolger, Mrs. Schwartz, and Mrs. Massari, the French, Spanish and Italian Clubs were able to raise money through croissant and candy sales. The proceeds then went towards subsidizing trips such as the Spanish V trip to Medieval Times.

Another option for students who were interested in their foreign language studies was SALE, Student Alternative Learning Experience. This program, which celebrated its 20th anniversary in 1994, gave select students a chance to teach the language they had studied to elementary students in town. As novice teachers, they created fun and innovative ways of teaching their class each week. Through parties, games, and visual lessons the class learned about the foreign culture as well as the language itself. By the end of the year, each class demonstrated knowledge of colors, holidays, and other basic foreign vocabulary, much of which would prove useful later on in their education. French SALE advisor, Ms. Beverley Timins, noted, "Our high school students do a valuable service for us because they expose the elementary school students to the excitement of French, Spanish and Italian. The young students can then make an informed decision when they choose to study a foreign language at an upper level."

Whether students wanted to master a foreign language to broaden their own educational background or to teach it to elementary school children, the trip to the fourth floor was well worth the hike. Imagine being able to travel to a foreign land without the jet lag!

U and I

Walking through the halls of West Orange High School one would inevitably come in contact with people of all races, cultures and religions. Advocating universal awareness in this setting, the Unity Club and UMOJA (United Minorities of Joint Alliances) worked to fight ignorance through educating the students of WOHS.

Through weekly executive committee meetings, the Unity Club advisors Mr. Schwartz and Ms. Shah created a forum for growth and knowledge. Mr. Schwartz noted "1994 marked the fourth year for the Unity Club at West Orange High. Initially, it was formed to celebrate the diversity of the students in our school and to try to help teach tolerance and humanity. Through our various events, we hope to continue this tradition." This year, the club sponsored events like Unity Day and the celebration of various religious holidays, which provided both an enjoyable and educational experience for their many participants.

For UMOJA advisor Ms. Martin and UMOJA members, a year of successful events was highlighted on March 24 by the annual UMOJA Dinner in honor of Black History Month. Including ethnic food, music, and a keynote speaker, this special night provided a festive setting for promoting their heritage. Later on during the year, UMOJA sponsored and organized a fashion show. The club continuously presented its members, as well as everyone else, with the opportunity to interact and learn about their culture.

West Orange High School students worked hard to provide everyone with the opportunity to experience the unique cultures that surround them on a daily basis. Throughout the entire year, the Unity Club and UMOJA truly presented our diverse community with a chance to learn, to empathize, and to appreciate the differences that can help to bring us closer together ... U and I.

A Little Help From My Friends

Approaching the twenty-first century, volunteerism experienced a surge of participation, especially at West Orange High School. Our students exerted tremendous effort into making service activities, whether for the community or for the school, their top priority.

West Orange High School's Interact Club was one of these popular activities. As a subdivision of Rotary International, this club was a service organization not only for the West Orange schools, but for the entire community. Students involved with the club, advised by Ms. Bette Fort and Dr. Ann Marie Rotunda, could be found serving as ushers at school functions, giving holiday gifts to children at the West Orange Community House, and visiting camps for the disabled. Throughout the course of the school year, Interact was host to various speakers and organized meetings aimed at lending a hand to those in need. Teri Sciacchetano noted, "As the President of the Interact Club, I gained a sense of the necessity of volunteering. It's important to be active in a cause and to give whatever you can."

West Orange High School was also home to another club which emphasized helping others as well as oneself. Lean On Me focused on well-being through positive example. Supervised by Ms. Barbara Wofsy, students worked with one another to reinforce the dangers of alcohol and drugs to their elementary school audiences around West Orange. Health, both physical and mental, was the primary theme for Lean On Me's various workshops for their peers as well as for the grammar school students. Advocating "natural highs" and wellness in general, the club's members also participated in their annual trip to TIGS, where Lean On Me members were trained to help their peers who were in need. Lean On Me member Lorie Stock commented, "What I liked most about Lean On Me was interacting with the different kids. Seeing their reactions to our skits and discussions proved that we helped them understand."

As volunteers, the students in Lean On Me and the Interact Club had the opportunity to give back to their community. They learned to appreciate and be thankful for all that they have while at the same time, recognizing the profound impact their continuous, positive support could have on their peers. Through participation in these organizations, students gained a sense of self-respect and self-worth as well as a great feeling of accomplishment.

Interact officers Lorie Stock, Teri Sciacchetano, Shannon McGinley, advisor Ms. Fort, and Julie Resch organize their next meeting.

Following the club's tradition, Lean On Me members sign their wellness pledges.

Officers Dennis Buoye and Terry Rippon, Interact President Teri Sciacchetano and co-advisor Dr. Rotunda conduct a meeting about community activism.

Lorie Stock, advisor Barbara Wofsy, and Janyne DiBiase review the agenda for a Lean On Me workshop.

Politically Correct

Students at West Orange High redefined the term "politically correct" through their dedicated work in class council, student council, and the Junior Statesmen of America.

These organizations made sure that everyone was included by providing interesting, fun, and memorable experiences for us throughout the year.

When we look back on what made our senior year worth waiting for, we will remember, most of all, our senior activities. The people responsible for making our year so memorable were the officers of our senior class council. Along with their advisors, Ms. Damiano and Mr. Prendergast, President Kathy Angkustsiri, Vice-President Janas Caruncho, Secretary Shannon McGinley, and Treasurer Amanda Bunsavage worked tirelessly to make all the senior activities, from the car parade to Project Graduation, spirited and unforgettable.

The class council was not the only group that worked hard for us. The student council, headed by President Steve Klein, Vice-President Sean Pettiford, Secretary Cara Weisel, and Treasurer Mande Silverman, provided an important link between students and faculty and sponsored many exciting student activities. Advisors Mrs. Ward, Ms. Risse, and Mr. Smeraldo headed a group of hard working student council members who continued traditions such as Homecoming, Spirit Week, the students vs. faculty volleyball game, student exchanges, and the Thanksgiving Food Drive. The student council also established new traditions by reviving the pep rally, sponsoring a Homecoming Dance, crowning the first Homecoming King, holding a club fair, and sponsoring a trip to the Nets vs. 76ers game.

The Junior Statesmen of America was another student-run organization which provided us with interesting experiences. Under the guidance of advisor Mrs. Dodds and the leadership of President Robert Pearlman, Vice-President Israel Klein, Treasurer Kerrie McGinley, and Secretary Beth Bojsza, JSA promoted political awareness through debates on current issues, "thought talks," and simulations such as mock trials and model congresses. President Robert Pearlman noted that "JSA stressed political awareness, but we were really here to let people express their minds and share opinions."

Over the course of the school year, all these student leaders and their advisors were "politically correct" in the best sense of the word; working hard to ensure that our year was the best that it could be. We owe them a tremendous debt of gratitude.

SENIORS

WAITING F • O • U • R

"The library media center will close at 2:15 today." "There will be a JSA bagel sale before school in the lobby on Wednesday." "Anyone who needs a sports physical must see the nurse."

Each morning Robert Pearlman plowed through the general information of the bulletin over the P.A. which pertained to everyone in school. Then he got to the "good stuff."

"Attention seniors: Don't forget to wear your senior shirt for the class photo which will be taken after school on October 14 behind the football stadium." "Attention seniors: Senior quote sheets are now available in the main office. They are due October 22nd." "Seniors: See Ms. D. or Prendo to purchase a ticket to the Senior Breakfast on November 25th." "Seniors: Get ready for the Prom! Bids can be purchased before or after school."

After three years of snoozing or talking through the announcements, wasn't it great to sit in homeroom and hear messages just for us? Did you ever think you would listen so intently to the bulletin? The announcements were just the beginning, though; the actual events and the feeling of belonging will sustain our memories long after other classes replaced us as the graduating seniors. Who will ever forget Melissa Mendez and I in 10th and 11th grade as after they won the pie eating contest? The sound of Phil Dax is rapping as he walked through the hallways? The smiles on Cam Weisel's and Amy Rosomello's faces while they anchored the TV news every Wednesday and Sunday night? The sight of our friends being taken away during the senior assembly at the track "accident"? The full stomachs at the Senior Breakfast on Thanksgiving morning? The feeling on New Year's Eve as 1993 faded into memory and it became our graduating year? The fun we had at the Senior Prom? Remember that smiling face covered with confetti in the parking lot at Caldor's? The spirited voice at the pep rally? Of course you remember, it was yours!

As you slowly leaf through the pages of the senior section, remember that every senior, in his or her own way, made a contribution to the personality of our class. Try to gain some insight into each person as you read the quotes under each photo and in the sidebars. Appreciate what the people featured in the profiles have given to our school and our society. We waited a long time for this experience called "senior year." It only happens once in a lifetime, and we've put so much into making it memorable. It was certainly WORTH WAITING FOR.

A Clearly Designed Future

"I think that it is important for people to form their own identity through the clothes they choose to wear," Raheam Mann believed. With that in mind, he designed clothing throughout his four years in high school and created a thirty piece collection. Raheam had been sketching designs for many years; he taught himself how to select, cut, and sew the fabrics after a basic sewing course that he took as a freshman. After Mr. Bruce Berry, a physical education teacher, introduced him to designer Thomas Woods, Raheam got his first show at Kings College. Organizers of fashion shows contact fashion designers, like Raheam, and rent their garments for their shows. Raheam's pieces have appeared in many shows, including those at the Robert Treat Hotel, the Clinton Manor, and Kings College. At the shows, people purchased Raheam's pieces right off the runway, or they commissioned him to sew a garment to their specifications.

The purpose of the shows was to get Raheam's name out as a designer and to showcase his skills. Raheam tried to stay creative and interesting. "I watch television and read magazines to find out what other designers are doing; then I basically do the total opposite." He believed that people are not as tied to trends as they once were, and that this eclectic way of dressing was mirrored by his collection. "I tried to design clothes that people didn't have in their closet," Raheam explained.

Every day, Raheam worked on a new design, sketching, cutting, or sewing. He bought and sewed his own fabric, using the knowledge he had acquired on his own and through his sewing and art classes. He observed that, "There's a lot of negative things in the world of fashion design, but that doesn't hinder me from doing what I love to do." He hoped to attend FIT and earn a bachelors' degree in fine arts. Raheam's greatest dream was to work under Karl Lagerfeld or a major fashion house and eventually come out with his own label.

Raheam maintained that his designs cannot make everyone happy, but that the best he can do is to please himself by following his tastes and beliefs as a designer. "I have learned that I don't have to prove anything to anyone but myself." What he proves to himself could mean that in a few years, Raheam's designs might be appearing in stores near you!

The Voice of Truth

Many students have heard Phil Davis singing in school, in the hallways, on the bus, and pretty much everywhere else. Phil's singing began when he was 14, when someone first told him that he had a beautiful voice. He hasn't stopped singing since. Phil's aunt, Rhonda Davis, later encouraged him to sing in his church choir. "She told me that I had a voice and that God gave me a voice — so I had to use it," Phil remembered. During his high school years, he took voice classes with choral teacher Mrs. Williamson, who taught him controlled breathing, dynamics, and voice strengthening techniques. Mrs. Williamson recalled that, "Phil is an innately musical person. Through his talent and determination, he has come a long way." In Mrs. Williamson's classes, Phil also learned to play the piano and to read and write music. "I have fun singing," he commented, "but it is also hard work."

"I sing because I enjoy it. I can express myself through songs," Phil explained. This desire for self-expression led Phil, his cousin Ethan Davis, Mark Beaumont, and Eugene Thornley to form the singing group Black Truth. Phil described Black Truth's music as gospel/R&B/rap/jazz. The group rehearsed for three hours, two times a week. Black Truth won several talent competitions, including ones held at St. Benedicts' Prep and Arts High School in Newark. When Black Truth won the UMOJA talent show at our high school, they were awarded a chance to record a demo tape at Mr. Bruce Berry's Greentree Recordings studio. Black Truth was still negotiating contracts to record with Greentree Recordings as of Phil's senior year. Through this experience, Phil learned that nothing comes easily, "you have to work for everything."

Phil admired the music of Luther Vandross, the Winans, Commissioned, and Gerald LeVert. "If I hear a song that touches my heart, I have to go and learn the words and music." He had a good ear, and he wrote all the lyrics for Black Truth's songs while singing the melody to his cousin, who wrote the music. Phil hoped to one day be able "to go into Sam Goody and see my record for sale." He planned to major in music in college. Phil firmly believed that "if you have a talent, you must use it, or it will be taken away." Whether Phil becomes a recording star or not, we can be sure that he will still be singing his heart out.

Take Note

Traditionally, classical music has never been popular with teenagers, most of whom would rather watch MTV than listen to a symphony concert. Mike Schaper not only listened to symphony concerts, he played in them. Mike's senior year marked his first year playing trumpet in the Symphony of Winds and Percussion, based at Jersey City State College. The Symphony was conducted by Jersey City State music director Nick Cerrato, who also conducted "Starlight Express" on Broadway and was the percussionist for the Broadway musical "Cats." Professional musicians, music majors at Jersey City State, and three exceptionally talented high school musicians made up the Symphony of Winds and Percussion. According to Mike, "It was rewarding to play in an ensemble that possessed such a high level of musicianship." The ensemble practiced two hours every Tuesday night in Jersey City in order to put on two, one and a half-hour concerts each year. Mike was recommended to the conductor of the symphony by its principal flutist, Miss Kahan, a teacher in the West Orange School District.

Mike began playing the trumpet in the fourth grade, and later studied privately. He practiced for an hour each day, in addition to rehearsing with the concert band, the marching band, the jazz band, and the pit band. Mike was also the principal trumpet in the Essex County Chamber Orchestra for three years. He auditioned for, and was accepted to, North Jersey Region I Band in 1993, and All-Area Symphonic Band in 1993 and 1994.

Mike credited Mr. Thomas Maliszewski, his high school band director, and Mr. Joseph Romano, an assistant marching band director, with encouraging, teaching, and supporting him. "Playing with professional musicians inspired me to perform at a higher level," Mike explained. He performed at several area churches with Mr. Maliszewski on trumpet and with Mr. Charles Jordan accompanying on organ.

Mike's love of music and of the trumpet led naturally to his dedication and commitment to practicing and playing outside of school. "It is such a challenge to play a musical instrument," commented Mike, "because there is always room for improvement." He planned to continue the study of the trumpet in college and beyond. As he pursues his quest for excellence, Mike Schaper will be one to take note of in years to come.

It wasn't uncommon for many of our classmates to work at camps over the summer, but the summer before her senior year, Mary Miner worked for seven weeks at a camp outside of Tokyo, Japan. She was eligible to go the Japanese camp through her weekly Bible club, Hi-B.A. (High School Born-Againers). The camp was run by the Japanese branch of Hi-B.A., and the children who attended the camp were all Christian, or intending to convert to Christianity. Mary explained that, "When many people think of missionaries, they think, 'What right do they have to intrude on another culture with what they believe?' I see it differently. If I know that Christianity is the solution for humanity to a matter of life and death, would I not be selfish to keep it to myself and my kind and not share it with anyone else?"

Mary was more than a camper at the Hi-B.A. camp. Before she left for Japan, Mary and her fellow missionaries attended orientations on the culture, manners, food, and language of the Japanese. However, nothing prepared her for the actual experience. The first week that she and the six American high school seniors arrived, they helped clean up the camp and prepare for the campers' arrival. Her camp days began with prayers before breakfast and included the usual activities that are a part of any camp, but in the Hi-B.A. camp, the daily activities also included prayer and Bible discussion groups, as well as nightly speakers on biblical texts. Mary and the other Americans held a USA fellowship and culture hour every day. The campers were always encouraged to speak English and ask questions about life in America.

Mary noted that many things in Japan were westernized, but some Japanese customs, such as sleeping on mats on the floor and eating foods like sushi, did take some getting used to. By the end of her seven weeks, Mary could speak some Japanese, and by speaking slowly and pointing, she and the campers could communicate fairly well. She observed that, "The Japanese children were very respectful and very polite . . . Of course, I couldn't always understand exactly what they were saying!"

When Mary boarded the plane for the flight home, she took back to America an acceptance and understanding of a completely different culture, as well as fond memories of a summer spent learning and making new friends.

Tools of Self-Discovery

When the Asian Arts Center opened in West Orange, Jason Docheff realized that he finally had a chance to explore two of his interests: swordsmanship and Asian culture. He found that the ancient Japanese martial art iai-do, the art of cutting and drawing the katana, or samurai sword, combined both his interests. The nature of iai-do is expressed in its name: "iai" represents an individual who possesses the inspiration, moral courage and ethical timbre to unite and be one with the universe, and "do" represents the way of self-cultivation in life. The katana is not simply a tool used for killing, but also a tool used for higher character development and self-realization. "In our society," Jason explained, "we're not used to a structured way of life, where your weaknesses and strengths are completely revealed. In iai-do, you welcome this self-discovery, both as a swordsman and as a person."

As a sophomore, Jason began taking classes twice-weekly in iai-do. He learned the technique and precision of cutting with the sword through kata, a series of ritualized techniques "fought" against an imaginary enemy. These kata teach instinctive reactions and become almost a moving meditation, where all thoughts stop. Jason practiced kata for one and a half hours daily; he also attended seminars on the East Coast taught by the highest sensei (teachers). He managed to do all this while medaling in cross-country and spring track, and maintaining his number one academic ranking in the class.

"Through my readings and experiences, I grew to strongly appreciate the mutual respect and honor given to your fellow person which stands out in the Asian way of life," Jason commented. Through iai-do, Jason believed that he had learned to become a better person as the discipline and the respect inherent in the Asian art became second nature to him.

As of his senior year, Jason held a white belt in iai-do and was working to earn a first degree black belt. He planned to pursue iai-do in college and throughout his life, because the art allowed him to journey on his own in a quest for learning and spiritual perfection.

According to Jason, "Iai-do parallels life in that there is not one single goal to be achieved. Rather, it is a lifelong pursuit of the cultivation of yourself as a swordsman and as a person."

Visions of a Better World

Many people's idea of a perfect summer is one spent by a gorgeous beach on a quiet Caribbean island, but Jared Brick's month spent near a gorgeous beach on the island of Tortola, in the British Virgin Islands, was very different from the ideal vacation. The summer before his senior year, Jared left the U.S. late in June to work with 25 other high school students from all across America in the Visions International program. As a participant in Visions, he and his team stayed at the community center of Brewers' Bay on Tortola. There they constructed a 24x28 home, cleared land at a fruit farm, repaired a Red Cross shelter and the Tortolian Culture Museum, counseled at a British/Tortolian day camp, and served as teacher's aides in a Tortolian elementary summer school. "Visions was a great learning experience," Jared recalled.

Jared lived among the island people and learned a little bit of their native tongue in the four weeks he was there. "You have to really want to be there, and you must be able to live basically," Jared warned. He and the rest of his group slept on the floor of the community center, ate plain food, and survived the bugs. Jared remembered that the only water they had was rainwater, and "if it didn't rain, you didn't shower."

In addition to learning how to live without some of the material things that people take for granted, Jared learned how to meet and become friends with people from different parts of the world. The island people co-operated fully with the Visions team, and Jared reflected that, "It felt good to do something for hard-working people and to be appreciated."

When he returned to the U.S. at the end of July, Jared experienced culture shock. He recalled that he went to a mall when he got back, and he realized how much waste and materialism there is in our culture. "It's kind of scary to go into a mall, which is full of hype and waste, after living basically for a month among people who worked and sold goods just to live, not to accumulate possessions," Jared explained.

Jared would like to do something of a community service nature again, and his desire to work for others may take him all over the world. Wherever he ends up, Jared will always remember the summer when his vision broadened to see that there is more to a vacation than fun in the sun.

Working for Equality NOW

"I've always felt that I needed to do something — not just sit back and accept injustices," explained Sarah Hymowitz. Sarah founded the West Orange student chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) in her junior year. She decided to form the chapter after meeting two teenage members of the Women's Action Coalition (WAC) at the 1992 Bennington July program. She admired their involvement and commitment to women's rights. "If I hadn't met them I never would have gotten involved because I thought I was too young. I guess I never really thought that I could have any influence because I couldn't vote." Upon returning from the program, Sarah enlisted the aid of Essex County NOW chapter coordinators Christine McGoe and Carol Vasile in forming a student chapter at West Orange. Sarah learned topics and tactics for meetings, as well as the legal limits for a political group meeting in a public school.

Sarah founded the chapter in an effort to raise awareness among the students concerning women's rights, ignorance, and feminist stereotypes. At meetings, Sarah addressed women's issues including parental notification, sexual harassment, welfare reform, rape shield laws, and the Glen Ridge rape trial. Through the West Orange chapter, West Orange High School students had the opportunity to participate in marches before and after the verdicts in Glen Ridge, attend a self defense workshop, campaign for independent State Senate candidate Valorie Caffee, and meet National NOW president Patricia Ireland and NOW-NJ president Myra Terry.

As the student NOW coordinator, Sarah attended the monthly meetings of Essex County NOW and the monthly meetings of NOW-NJ, and participated in marches and rallies. Through her involvement with NOW, Sarah developed greater self-confidence, and learned that a few people can truly make a difference. "NOW is all about empowerment — on a personal level and for all women," Sarah explained.

She hoped that the West Orange student chapter of NOW would continue after her graduation and continue to get more people involved with NOW and with their own rights. Sarah planned to continue her activism in NOW throughout her life. "I'm not scared to call myself a feminist," Sarah declared. Wherever she is, you can be sure that Sarah will still be working for equality NOW and forever.

A Work in Progress

"Drawing something, whether a person or an object, gives me a greater understanding of it," explained Ernie de Zavala. Ernie has been drawing for as long as he can remember, from doodling on book covers to painting in acrylics in his high school art classes. He considered himself a developing artist. "I am always working to improve," Ernie stated. He drew in pencil, pastels, oils and watercolors, and drew everything from still lifes to portraiture. "Drawing relaxes me; it puts me in almost a state of hypnosis." Although Ernie admired the Impressionist painters and the sculptor Rodin, he believed that "before a person goes on to some other form of art, he or she should become acquainted with Realism." To that end, he studied anatomy so that his sketches would truly look real.

Ernie began to realize his drawing talent in the seventh and eighth grades under the instruction of Mr. Ramsey, an art teacher at Roosevelt Middle School. "I admired Mr. Ramsey for his creative talents. He taught me skills and showed me how to be creative," Ernie remembered. Mr. Ramsey recalled that, "Ernie was among the finest draftsmen I have taught in my 26 years at West Orange. He had abilities which were innate, coupled with creativity. That's a one in a thousand combination. Ernie could make it as a professional artist."

In the high school, Ernie continued to draw as a hobby, and he took art classes with Mr. Lindsay. "Mr. Lindsay stressed discipline and taught me to understand where an artist's work is coming from, and what it's all about," Ernie noted that Mr. Lindsay was always there to encourage him and to help him refine his skills. Mr. Lindsay commented that, "Ernie's greatest strength was drawing and his greatest gift was for line drawing. His work had an immediate energy, and a genuine sense of the artist's presence."

Ernie hoped to major in art at college, and if he does not become a professional artist, he would like to become an art teacher like Mr. Ramsey or Mr. Lindsay, and inspire his students as they had inspired him. He would like to expand his basic art skills and learn sculpture while in college. "I will always draw for fun, because drawing gives me a feeling of joy and peace that I love," Ernie noted. As he works to refine and improve his skills, Ernie's art will always be a work in progress.

"Freshmen, fill the water bottles, get the ice . . . and hurry up! If we have to run extra laps for you, you're in trouble . . . Quick, shove them into the shower before the coach comes . . ."

"No! I don't think so Soph . . . You guys are just JV, sit in the back of the bus . . . Get serious, don't be so immature . . ."

"Juniors have to sit on the bench . . . Seniors get preference . . . You think that you'll be captain as a Junior? I don't think so! Listen when I give you orders!"

SENIORS . . . FINALLY! And it was about time. In our first three seasons as freshmen, sophomores, and juniors, we worked hard. We tried. We were eager to play, but something was missing. It felt incomplete. Our senior year was our time to win, our turn to instill our names in others' minds. It was a time to rejoice in our reign over the underclassmen. We were finally the leaders, and if we did not take charge, then no one else would. We were more mature, more knowledgeable; this was our chance to employ everything that we had learned and to help the underclassmen deal with the pressure of competing before screaming spectators. We had finally advanced to the top of the athletic hierarchy and we basked in the spotlight.

When our names appeared in the newspaper headlines we fully realized that our time had come. We had gained the recognition that we had been striving for in the past three years. As seniors, we had younger athletes listening to us, looking up to us. Their respect for us grew when we received post-season honors, hoping that one day they might receive these honors as well. It was amazing to see our teams unite after the many intense years of competition.

Whether we were winning or losing, we did it with heart, pride, and honor. Sure, there were upsets and stunning victories, but the fact that we possessed spirit, worked as hard as we possibly could, and were the most incredible SENIORS ever, made the Fall, Winter, and Spring athletic seasons WORTH WAITING FOR.

Keeping An Eye On The Big Picture

To many fans, the way to judge a team's success is by its won-loss record. Players and coaches see the larger picture. They judge success by how competitive they are, and by the strength of their relationships with one another. That is why captains John Barbaro and Brian Osterman, as well as head coach Michael Pizzi, were proud of their 1993 football season.

After a tough loss at Passaic Valley, the Mountaineers put together three impressive victories over West Milford, Montville, and Millburn. With the blocking of Barbaro, Alan Bauerle, and John Kwon, the Mountaineers crushed West Milford for a stunning 28-8 victory. Bill Hamilton led the way against Montville by rushing for two touchdowns. The Mountaineers recorded their highest point total in a 46-0 rout of Millburn. Brian Schladitz hauled in two touchdown passes in the first quarter and the defense, led by Anthony Alcalde, Pat Scaglione, Joe Cicarone, and Miguel Aguino preserved the shutout. Scaglione ended his career as the all-time interception leader in school history.

At 3-1, the Mountaineers began thinking about the state playoffs. Their hopes came crashing down with tough losses to competitors Lakeland and Wayne Valley. The next games against playoff-bound Orange and Clifford Scott resulted in losses as well. A resounding 42-22 victory over West Side in the Homecoming game helped the Mountaineers finish the year on a positive note despite a final record of 4-5.

For captains Barbaro and Osterman, working with Pizzi on the field was very special. Both had had the coach as an English teacher when they attended Edison Middle School. Because of this bond, a unique closeness formed between the coach and his captains. Coach Pizzi enjoyed "the comradeship of the group as a whole."

Clarke "Laced Up" for Championship Run

After the 1993 season, Northern Hills Conference Coach of the Year, Joseph Suriano remarked, "Nothing perpetuates a winning attitude like winning." The 1993 cross-country team must have had that attitude when, led by captains Jason Docheff and Gerren Clarke, the boys won the title of conference champions with a record of 15-2. The seniors, according to Suriano, became known for their "experience, love of running, and intrinsic motivation." Senior Anthony Alfonso, junior Mitchell Bodner, and freshman Darren Hamberlin played key roles in boosting team performance and morale.

Coach Suriano believed that co-captain Gerren Clarke's season was successful because he "managed to keep his shoes on for all of the races." At the conference championship in 1991, Clarke lost one of his shoes and attempted to run the three mile race despite his handicap. In 1993, however, Clarke was able to run with both shoes securely fastened.

The girls also had a season of which to be proud. Younger runners such as Lauren Van Natten, Shannon McCormick, Bryna O'Neill, and Lauren Leach added strength to an already solid core of upperclassmen. According to Coach Suriano, captain Nicole Spahle, "called upon her experience in practice and in meets to encourage the younger runners." This encouragement paid off. In 1992 they had placed third, but in 1993 the girls improved their record to 11-4, placing second in the conference.

Co-captain Jason Docheff often referred to the team's victory over opponents as "taking scalps." After winning the conference meet, Docheff remarked to Suriano, "This time, coach, we took an entire tribe." That remark captured the spirit of the 1993 cross-country season.

Honored Seniors Prove 'Net' Worth

Head coach Doreen Lesnik believed that she coached "a group of girls whose personality was to do their very best and achieve their greatest potential." Throughout the 1993 season the girls' tennis team proved to her that she was correct with her assumption.

Captain Amanda Bunsavage led the team to a victorious 12-8 record, placing third in the Northern Hills Conference. The doubles pair of Jodie Kutner and Cara Weisel defeated West Milford, the second place team, as well as Wayne Valley, the Passaic County Champions. Kutner and Weisel were awarded second team all-conference and first team all-area for their stunning performances.

Freshman Ara Tucker and junior Jenny Clarke were both awarded honorable-mention. Lesnik felt that Clarke would develop into a strong leader and an even stronger player in the years to follow.

"It was easier to work with Mrs. Lesnik this year because she already knew our strengths and weaknesses and was able to help us use them for the benefit of the team," remarked singles and doubles player, senior Danielle Lambert. Lesnik, a gym teacher at Pleasantdale Elementary School, agreed that the team was much better organized than in 1992, when Lesnik made her debut as the WOHS tennis coach.

An even greater reward than the girls' performance on the court was the enthusiasm that existed for the entire group. "We had a very tough beginning. Because of injuries we were all changing positions, but everyone was very supportive and encouraging towards one another," reflected Kutner.

Tri-Captains Credo: "More than A Game"

Coach Fred Sisbarro had a completely satisfying soccer season. In fact, Sisbarro believed that this was a season he will always remember. It was not only that the 1993 soccer team finished with a winning record, 12-9, but his players finished the season the same way that they started, with determination and unity.

Sisbarro's three captains, Jorge Chagas, Michael Nevarez, and Marc Reimer, viewed soccer as "more than a game," noted the head coach. The captains proved Sisbarro's theory to be correct when, during the season, they ran their own practices, boosted team morale, and strived to constantly improve their record.

Chagas, at right wing, completed the season netting 13 goals and eight assists. He was selected first team all-conference, first team Worrall Publications, and second team all-county. Nevarez's performance was also rewarded with second team all-league and second team all-county. The three captains were supported by seniors Jose Salazar and Jared Brick, and juniors Fabiano Moreira, Adam Manger, and Michael Antonakos.

One game for which the team especially prepared was against East Orange in the Essex County Tournament. According to Chagas, that special game, ending in a Mountaineer 1-0 victory, was truly the highlight of the season. East Orange went on to win the Group IV title.

Sisbarro believed that the team managed to balance both work and play. Reimer reminisced, "We kept a positive outlook throughout the season by having fun. Although we worked very hard, the team enjoyed all of it."

Seniors Respected — Bromberg Recognized

By merely looking at their 2-14 record, the 1993 girls' varsity soccer team seemed to have had a very rough season, but their success was measured in many other ways.

"Even though they may not have won, they played good games against high caliber teams," remarked coach Cathy Welter. They lost a very tough game against DePaul by only one goal. When the girls opposed Wayne Valley, Welter noted that they "were very strong in the second half." Of course, the girls also had bright spots this season: their wins over Pequannock and Verona, and Stefanie Bromberg's post-season honors.

Captains Lina Libson and Jessica Spring proved their leadership through example. The work ethic, skill, and determination of both Libson and Spring instilled a very solid sense of accomplishment in all of the girls. "They were very enthusiastic, trying to motivate the rest of the team," observed their coach.

According to Welter, seniors Bromberg and Denise Buerrosse and juniors Cheryl Jones and Gina Vantuno, along with their captains, were instrumental in encouraging the younger players. "We had a young team," remarked Welter, "and from the older girls' experience, the freshmen and sophomores gained valuable knowledge."

"Even though our record didn't show that we had much success," commented Bromberg, "we improved individually and as a team." Bromberg's personal season was both satisfying and statistically rewarding. She was named all-conference, second team all-county, third team all-Essex, and received all-state recognition.

"The seniors helped to bring our team together as a family," Bromberg added. For all of the girls, the 1993 soccer season was one that they will always remember. In that respect, they were truly successful.

Swimmers Willing to Pay the Price

To be a member of an athletic team, one must display the correct amount of discipline, perseverance, and maturity. According to Coach Ed Jung, the 1994 swim team had exactly the right proportions. "By the end of the season, they came together very nicely," added Jung. He believed that this was achieved with both the flexibility and versatility of the seniors and the dedication and stamina of the younger swimmers.

Co-captain Gary Errichetti observed that "Each athlete on the swim team worked together. We supported one another in our quest for victory." That observation proved to be accurate when the team ended the season with a winning record, 9-6.

The swimming season did not start off with a big splash. The Mountaineers lost four of their first five meets, only defeating East Side. "They accepted the challenges set before them and tried to accomplish their goals," noted Jung.

Senior Joni Noble remarked, "I feel that each year the team seemed to become closer and closer. During the 1994 season, we worked especially hard together, which I feel helped to contribute to our success." Noble's beliefs were put to the test when the Mountaineers faced West Essex. Although West Orange was the decided underdog, with a great deal of determination they managed to overcome the odds and win the meet.

The big winner of the season was junior sensation Gretchen Price. She received first team all-state and first team all-county recognition as well as becoming the county champion in both the 100 yard and 500 yard free-style for the third year in a row. "I had a lot of fun swimming on the team this year. I was pleased with my performances, and I hope to do as well in the future," remarked Price.

A Season of Surprises for New Coach

The new girls' basketball coach, Marge Theobald knew that she would have her work cut out for her. "I knew that it would be a tough year with only one returning varsity player (Cheryl Jones)," noted Theobald. What she failed to realize upon entering the season was that she would have a group of players willing to dedicate all of their time and energy to the 1994 team.

According to Theobald, co-captains junior Jones and senior Takiyah Paige "took initiative and were the true leaders of the court." These qualities proved beneficial for the team as a whole when they "really started to play together," believed the head coach. "I enjoy competing and challenging myself to perform my best and to see if I can improve each time I play," remarked Jones.

With a 7-15 record, the 1994 season held a number of highlights for the team. "We were not too concerned with our won/loss record," revealed Theobald, "but we won the games we should have won and never gave up."

The team will never forget the victory over Belleville when they won 55-43 in the first round of the Essex County Tournament. "By winning this game," believed Jones, "we advanced to play Bloomfield. This was the furthest that a West Orange girls' basketball team ever went in this tournament."

Paige summarized her season reflecting, "Being a member and captain of the basketball team gave me a great opportunity to work with the new coach. Also, serving as co-captain gave me a leadership role and responsibility. I feel everyone should work on becoming a leader because this world is full of competition, and you just can't sit back and be a follower. I hope for great luck in the future for the young basketball team and the new coach."

Late Season Run Makes Coach Fess A Winner

The West Orange basketball team faced a great deal of change at the beginning of the 1994 season. The Mountaineers had to re-adjust after losing six 1993 graduates; they also had to contend with weather conditions that continually interrupted their practice and game schedule. The most significant adjustment they had to make was to their third new coach in four years.

"As any new coach, I was nervous and excited. I felt like it was my first year coaching. I knew that I just had to 'live and learn,'" explained the new head basketball coach, Michael Fess. Although the 1994 season was the first for Fess at West Orange, he was no stranger to the basketball court, having coached at Immaculate Conception for eight years. By the end of the season, Fess knew where he wanted to stay. "I felt like I was growing up with these guys."

Although getting off to a 3-6 start, the Mountaineers managed to triumph over their adversity and, according to Fess, "really improved as individuals and as a team." By getting along with everyone on the team, tri-captains Miguel Aquino, Dan Gibson, and ZeGale Kelliehan managed to rally their teammates to a final record of 11-10.

The Christmas Tournament was one of the highlights of the season. Sparked by the stellar play of Kelliehan, the Mountaineers defeated Bloomfield 45-38 in the championship. The Christmas Tournament also held special memories for Kelliehan as he was voted the Most Valuable Player of the Tournament.

Coach Fess was very satisfied with his rookie year at West Orange High School. He believed that the most important part of the season was that he "had a good bunch of kids willing to put in the time and pay the price."

Senior Injuries Tough to Wrestle With

"Focus, Sacrifice and Discipline" was the motto for the 1993-94 wrestling team. This year, Mountaineer wrestlers got an entirely new outlook on wrestling. Head Coach Steve Forte, with his assistants Gene Emering and Anthony Janish, brought a tremendous amount of experience to the team. According to Forte, the trio set a program up "that will hopefully raise wrestling to a higher level at West Orange High School."

"The leadership capabilities of seniors Anthony Alcalde, Walter Kilcullen, Steve Klein, and John Selpe set the tone for the wrestlers, both mentally and physically," continued Coach Forte. However, several injuries sidelined the team's standouts. Senior captain Kilcullen's promising season was cut short due to a recurring rib injury. Junior Ernesto Alcalde, a former 1992 District 13 champion, was also sidelined due to a back injury. The team lost another one of its senior captains, Selpe, due to a minor operation. With an 8-0 record before his injury, Selpe was a regional competitor in both his freshman and junior years and was selected as Outstanding Wrestler in the Mountaineer Holiday Wrestling Tournament.

"The individual performances of the underclassmen were the most positive aspects for the Mountaineers," reflected Coach Emering. "Fortunately, captains Anthony Alcalde, 140 and 145 weight class, Steve Klein, 160 weight class, and junior Mike Weiner at 189, helped with the motivation along with keeping the tempo up in practice," added Forte. Alcalde, a regional competitor in both his junior and senior years, and Klein, noted for his loyalty and commitment, ended their wrestling careers by achieving each of their own individual goals.

Record Setting Skaters 'Stick' Together

The 1993 hockey season proved disappointing for the Mountaineers, who won only five games. According to head coach Bill Hausler, the disillusionment of the previous year gave the 1994 team the "determination and incentive" to strive for excellence in the next season. Hausler believed that his 1994 team simply "wanted to win this year. They started off winning right away and that gave them confidence."

The Mountaineers began their season with a 9-0 win over Clark. The team went on to achieve four more shutouts over East Side, Livingston, and two over Millburn later in the season.

Tri-captains Gregg Cuvin, Peter Perkowski, and Doug Wannemacher led the team to a successful 16-5 record, a second place finish in their conference, with only Cranford on top by one point. Hausler noted that "it was the best record that West Orange had attained in 10 years." The Mountaineers scored over 100 goals, and goalies Perkowski and Jason Babula combined for over 400 saves.

The team members were disappointed that they did not win the state tournament. They lost to Chatham by a score of 4-3, but the Mountaineers were the true winners in spirit. "We played some great hockey in that game and it was fun up until the end," believed Hausler.

The season proved especially exciting for the division's Most Valuable Player, Wannemacher. Besides being one of the leading scorers in the state and getting selected for the first team all-stars for the second year in a row, Wannemacher was recognized by the New Jersey Devils as Player of the Month for the American Conference. "My most memorable experience," reminisced Wannemacher, "was finally having a winning season after waiting for three long years."

WEST ORANGE 94 CHEERLEADER

Competitive Bond Fuels Spirited 'Sisters'

It was another Saturday morning and the cheerleaders were at it again. They could always be counted on to rally the players and stir the crowds, but they cheered for themselves as well.

Led by Coach Deborah Pratko, practices began in August and seemingly never stopped. Through work and dedication, the varsity squad prepared for the hectic seasons ahead.

During the fall, the squad performed for both girls' and boys' soccer and for football. They also planned and participated in a successful night pep rally held in the gym. For the winter season, the girls cheered for wrestling and both boys' and girls' basketball.

According to tri-captain Melissa Horton, "We concentrated a lot on competitions this year. Practices got very hectic and intense, but we always pulled together and gave it our best." The dance performed was choreographed by tri-captains Janyne DiBiase, Horton, and junior Melissa McManus.

Competing was not all work and no play for the cheerleaders. According to McManus, "One of the greatest times we had this year was right before our competition at West Milford. That week we worked together and we were unified the night of the competition. I really learned a lot about each of my 'sisters.'" DiBiase expressed similar feelings, "At the football game after our first conference competition, Ms. Pratko gave every member of our squad a rose. Getting that rose felt like a reward for all of our hard work throughout the season."

Pratko reminisced, "Through the laughs and tears we all completed a year filled with warmth and friendship that made it successful and very rewarding."

Pridgeon and Cicarone Bowl 'Em Over

"I wanted to help the team learn to appreciate and enjoy a sport that is also a leisure activity that can last a lifetime," explained Mr. Alvine, the new head coach for the 1994 bowling team. Alvine took over a well-established program formerly run by retired coach and gym teacher Laura Sherman. The bowling team was led by seniors Hakim Pridgeon and Joe Cicarone. Both Pridgeon and Cicarone had been three year starters and with this experience, they were easily able to lead the team using their skill and determination.

Coach Alvine's first win over West Side, 16-5, was a foreshadowing. The Mountaineers went on a six game winning streak and won the Handicap Tournament to start out their season. "This year's team was extremely team-oriented and set high goals for themselves as individuals and as a team," stated Alvine. The team ended the season with a 9-3-1 overall record. Their most memorable experience was beating first place DelBarton. Although the Mountaineers were victorious in this important game, they had to settle for a second place finish in the conference.

Individual bowling performances certainly did not go unnoticed during the 1994 season. Senior David Paul was a first year bowler who earned first team all-conference honors. Freshman sensation Frank Cicarone was awarded honorable mention in the conference. The team would depend on Frank Cicarone, freshman Greg Biniukow, and sophomore Jon Donker as leaders in the future. Pridgeon earned his third consecutive first team all-conference award. "The highlights of my season were making it to the state qualifiers along with seeing my teammates succeed," reflected Pridgeon.

Hakim Pridgeon demonstrates his release. He averaged 183 per game.

1994 INDOOR TRACK

Experience and Talent The "Inside Track"

"Indoor track demands patience and discipline," noted head coach Joseph Suriano. The 1994 indoor track members knew that, and they personified both of those traits.

Tri-captains Stefanie Bromberg, Jessica Goldstein, and Susan Nguyen led the team to successful performances in their championship medal meets. According to Suriano, each captain led the team by example and worked with the younger athletes. "I was unable to be with everybody at all times," revealed Suriano, "and I depended upon the veterans to carry out practices in the manner to which I was accustomed."

Nguyen reminisced, "For me, running indoor track all four years of high school was a good experience. I was able to learn from the older team members in previous years, and this year I tried to share my experiences with the newcomers."

The 1994 team had a number of highlights. "The most successful part of the season," according to Suriano, "was that junior Andrew Dambreville finished the season with the best high jump record in the state — six feet, eight inches. Many coaches have excellent athletes, but having an all-group champion is unique. He became the champion jumper of the conference, county, Group IV, and the state." Junior Daria Pigott ran the fastest 200 meters in the state and the second fastest 55 meter dash. Sophomores Pat Richardson and Ritesh Lakhani both received medals at the Northern Hills Conference Championship Meet.

"High school would have been a completely different experience for me without winter track," believed Goldstein. "I saw it as not only a time to train and keep in shape for spring track, but as a place to grow within a smaller, more intimate group."

A Lifetime Sport That Has No Par

There were definite benefits to being a member of the golf team at WOHS. First, there was the chance to develop skills in a game which could provide enjoyment for a lifetime. Also, unlike other spring sports which began in early March in unfavorable weather, golf practices began in earnest in early April when the temperature was more moderate. Perhaps the best benefit derived from being on the team was the opportunity to play on some of the finest golf courses in the state, most notably Balustrol in Springfield, sight of the 1993 U.S. Open Championship.

"We tried to play at a lot of good courses this season," noted head coach Bob Belcuore. These included Brooklake in Florham Park, Mountain Ridge in West Caldwell, Cedar Hill in Livingston, and Upper Knolls in Parsippany. The golf team also received the opportunity to freely access the Crestmont Country Club three days a week. "The team was really indebted to the people at Crestmont. We could not have succeeded without them," Belcuore remembered.

Besides gaining experience competing on reputable courses, playing golf for WOHS was good exercise, enjoyable, and proved beneficial for all of the boys on the team. No wonder golf was popular enough to get seniors Doug Wannemacher, Ty Tyler, and Pete Perkowski to shed their hockey equipment after an extraordinary season for a leisurely stroll along the links.

Belcuore, in his 18th year of coaching the team for WOHS, believed that the "success, leadership, work ethic, and skills of Wannemacher, Tyler, and Perkowski on the hockey team carried over into the golf season."

Ya Gotta Love This Grand Game

The warmth of the sun gently settling on the back of the neck, the sweet smell of newly grown grass, the crack of the bat against the ball, ah spring! Ah, baseball!

The bitter wind against already frozen ears, the stale smell of the gym after a full day of classes, the thud of the ball against the chest after a bad bounce off of the pavement, ah spring? Baseball in New Jersey!!

There was no way the ground could possibly have recovered from the record winter snowfall when Coach William Urbanski met 34 hopefuls on March 8 for baseball tryouts. In fact, there would be two more storms before the Mountaineers were to open the season in early April. But, despite the icy mud puddles, the blustery winds, and the threat of yet another snowstorm, Coach Urbanski knew that practice needed to get underway.

"We had a very good mixture of seniors, juniors, and sophomores," noted Urbanski, "including two guys (pitcher and shortstop Chris O'Connell and outfielder Mike Nevarez) who had received all-conference honors last year."

The baseball team, unlike others in spring sports, did not nominate any official captains. "Instead I just looked towards the seniors for a good deal of the leadership," remembered the head coach. Seniors O'Connell, Nevarez, Peter Lambusta, and Daniel Marateo each took charge leading warm-up exercises and agility drills. According to Urbanski, "They were truly role models for the younger players."

Urbanski was one coach who refused to give in to Mother Nature's conditions. "We practiced in the parking lot, in the gym, basically anywhere we could find that had a dry, flat surface."

Finding a flat area was the easy part, but dry? That was a contest in itself.

Around the Horn and Thru the Puddles

When your practice season is three weeks old and you still have not been able to take the field for your yearbook photos, you know that your team is not ready to open the season. However, if you are a veteran softball coach, you have learned not to panic. In 27 years at the helm, Coach Judy Risse had grown accustomed to not expecting much cooperation from Mother Nature during the pre-season. Teaching her players how to avoid snow mounds, or icy mud puddles, while turning a double play became one of the rites of spring in the 1994 season.

"We did everything we could to prepare for our first game against Millburn," noted Risse. The loss of the Lincoln Gym due to repairs came at a very difficult time. Girls' softball and boys' baseball were forced to share the main gym, on a rotating schedule. With one gymnasium off limits and the other in use, the girls took to the hallways, the deserted auditorium, and any empty classrooms.

Although it seemed that all hope had vanished, there was one bright spot of the practice sessions. It arose in the form of metal covered with netting. Purchased solely for the softball team, the batting cage served its purpose in making it much easier for the team to practice batting without worrying about other players receiving injuries due to uncontrollable swings and flying softballs.

Risse found relief from the constant practice in seniors Stef Bromberg, Jamie Cicerone, and Erica Minde. "It was the best year so far for senior leadership," noted Risse. All three seniors set examples for the younger players by working hard before, during, and after practice and by assisting their coach through a very difficult practice season.

Weather Turns Track Inside Out

What's the difference between indoor track and outdoor track at WOHS? Nothing, at least not in the early part of the season. Coach Joseph Suriano, the dean of coaches in the Northern Hills Conference, welcomed 75 hopefuls to tryouts the second Tuesday in March, including the recently named state champion high jumper Andrew Dambreville. For those athletes who had participated in the indoor season there was not much of a transition to make since training sessions consisted of running the stairs and flexibility exercising in the hallways.

"The weather was truly our toughest opponent," believed Suriano. "Basically," he continued, "any dry, open spot was ours to use for practice." These "spots" often included various school hallways, parking lots, and stairwells. As of March 29, with only one week before their first meet against Orange, the frustrated athletes had not yet experienced running on the track. Seniors Anthony Alfonso, Gerren Clarke, Jason Docheff, Dan Gibson, and Paul Ryu were already accustomed to the trials and tribulations of beginning an outdoor sport in early March, just as winter was ready to bid it's final farewell with at least one more blustery day.

Although the practice sessions were bitter cold, the seniors refused to let themselves be deterred. "Unlike larger schools, we needed the help of the seniors in running practices," noted Suriano. "For the field events, they assisted coaches Minni and Berry in the demonstration of drills and techniques. In the running events, they were always willing to lead various groups."

For Suriano, and for the seniors, the weather conditions did not dampen their spirit or their success. Despite a rough, icy start, the Mountaineers managed to end yet another track season about which they could be proud.

Mother Nature Spawns Senior Sacrifices

The 1994 girls' outdoor track team found themselves repeating the same word day after day: "Why?" Why did it keep snowing? Why was the ice persistent in remaining on the ground? Why wouldn't the wind stop howling? Why couldn't practice ever include places other than the hallways and stairwells? Why, with less than one week before the first meet, couldn't the girls step foot onto the track?

Mother Nature had the answers. Coach Joseph Suriano and his girls' track team didn't want to hear them. They all knew it involved sacrifice.

"It really wasn't that bad," believed co-captain Jessica Goldstein. "We were able to run a little bit in the parking lots and the administrators at Caldwell High School let us use their track every once in a while."

According to Suriano, 1994 was an excellent year for senior leadership. Co-captains Goldstein and Susan Nguyen "proved invaluable to the program," noted Suriano. They were often called upon to lead the stretching exercises and to assist in teaching techniques for the hurdlers. Senior Mary Miner led the distance girls in their workouts, as well as attending to the needs of herself, her coach, and the other members on the team. Suriano believed that all three of his seniors "sacrificed themselves and their own time for the benefit of the team."

"I really loved competing on the outdoor track team this season," commented Goldstein. "It was wonderful being in a leadership position as a senior — a position that I looked up to as a freshman." Nguyen agreed.

Despite the icy weather conditions and mud-filled home track, the girls' outdoor track team overcame their obstacles in order to fulfill their expectations for the 1994 season.

Limited Practice for 'Seasoned' Vets

The only problem with the extra tennis court, which had been added during the re-surfacing process by the town recreation department, was that like the other four courts, it was under a snow cover until March 22, a full two weeks after the tennis tryouts began on March 8. Until the 22nd, Coach Doreen Lesnik and her 15 member team had to go indoors to the West Orange Tennis Club twice a week. The other days were spent at the Pleasantdale Elementary School gym, devoted to running, playing basketball, and other cross-training activities.

"It was hard getting court time and we had to pay 34 dollars per hour, but the owner at the West Orange Tennis Club, Bob Stafutti, donated a few of his courts for free," remembered Lesnik. "That was really nice."

But the lack of court time had a major effect on the members of the tennis team. "There were cuts to make and only limited time to play, so a lot of pressure was on them to do well during a short period of time," noted Lesnik.

According to Lesnik, "communication is the key in tennis". During practices, both indoor and out, the team often worked on this and tried to improve with every match.

With eight seniors on the team, there was strong leadership that developed in the early part of the season and lasted until the end. Co-captains Ajay Narula and Michael Shaper, as well as seniors Miro Bruan, Kiran Devaprasad, Paul Lappas, Art Mann, Emanuel Naim, and Tapan Maniar proved this leadership by organizing drills and matches and trying to clear the outdoor courts.

"I had a very experienced group of young men who had good athletic ability," believed Lesnik. "They made sure that they were physically ready and had good placement of their shots."

ACADEMICS

"You have to take a math this year and I'm sorry, but you only have room in your schedule for one elective. You're going to have to pick a different one because that's a senior elective. No, that's a senior elective, too, and you're not a senior yet." Sound familiar?

Until our senior year, our classes were basically chosen for us. We had to take the required math, history, science, foreign language, and English. When we finally became seniors, the doors of academia swung open, allowing us to make our own choices. Throughout our high school years, our teachers taught us, guided us, and inspired in us a desire for learning. The freedom of our senior year schedules allowed us to pursue the academic and artistic interests awakened in us by our teachers. A myriad of senior classes that we had only heard about before were finally available to us.

As seniors we still had to take an English course, but we were given options: AP Literature, AP Composition, Humanities, Effective Communication, or Writing Techniques and Greek Mythology. We also had the chance to double up and take two English courses at once. Shaping of Western Thought was available for those of us who wanted to continue with a history. AP Physics was strictly a senior course, and our math options included Pre-Calculus for seniors and senior AP Calculus.

After fulfilling most of our graduation requirements, some of our schedules had room for an array of electives. Some of us chose Senior Cuisine or Journalism IV/Yearbook, while others opted to fill our schedules with electives we had never had time to take before such as Creative Writing, Journalism, Lapidary, Law, Public Speaking, Sociology, and Wood Shop. Senior year also gave us the opportunity to take a well-deserved study hall. Within the academic section we included quotes from students regarding their feelings about the elective program.

All of the choices we made, classes we took, and teachers we had, made our senior year definitely WORTH WAITING FOR.

Raisin and pumpernickel bagels, chocolate and butter croissants, hooded and crew sweatshirts, T-shirts, shorts, lollipops, candy bars, wrapping paper, citrus fruits, tickets (to every school event imaginable), computer dates, jewelry, car washes, pizza coupons, and popcorn. If someone had told a member of the Class of 1994 that he/she would sell one or more, with emphasis on more, of the items listed above when he/she was an eighth grader, the future Mountaineer would have probably doubled over in laughter. However, since that time, each member of the class learned that when they entered West Orange High School they inherited a new title — salesman. There was hardly a day that went by without some club setting up their wares in the Conforti Lobby. The signs of the daily ritual were the tired faces of devoted students plodding into the school at seven in the morning, setting up the table as aesthetically as possible, and waiting for the morning rush to start.

Those who worked on the yearbook took their sales pitches on the road. Finding patrons to support the book and the businesses to purchase ads took the time and dedication of 21 staff members. Staffers learned how to encourage owners to buy space in the book in order to promote their product or service.

Even though the work was hard and often tedious, the fundraisers and sales resulted in club parties, trips, charity donations, and a general strengthening of the individual clubs. Students learned that while the sales took time, the money would add up, and they could actually do worthwhile activities. For the yearbook, the number of ads and patrons meant adding special features, which would hopefully add to the overall quality of the book.

To all those who supported the many fundraising efforts of our class, we are eternally grateful. Your support allowed us to have experiences that became the foundation upon which we built our strongest memories of our senior year. These experiences were the result of many sacrifices that made them even more WORTH WAITING FOR.

Hold fast to dreams...

Hold fast to dreams
For if dreams die
Life is a broken-winged bird
That can not fly.

Hold fast to dreams
For when dreams go
Life is a barren field
Frozen with snow.

Always hold onto your dreams. They are waiting for you just around the corner, and only you can make them come true. We are so proud of you.

With all our love,

To the Wonderful Class of '94 and to our own Precious Jessica:

May the Good Lord be with you down every road you roam
And may sunshine and happiness surround you when you're far from home.
May you grow to be proud, dignified and true
And do unto others as you'd have done to you.
Be courageous and be brave
And in our hearts you'll always stay FOREVER YOUNG!
May the good fortune be with you, may your guiding light be strong
Build a stairway to heaven with a prince or a vagabond.
And may you never love in vain;
in our hearts you will remain- FOREVER YOUNG!
And when you finally fly away, we'll be hoping that we served you well
For all the wisdom of a lifetime, no one can ever tell.
But whatever road you choose, we're right behind you, win or lose - FOREVER YOUNG!

Although you see the world
Different from me
Sometimes I can touch upon
The wonders that you see
All the new colors
In the pictures you've designed
Oh, yes, sweet darlin'
So glad you are a child of mine...
Nobody's gonna kill your dreams
Or tell you how to live your life
There'll always be people
To make it hard for awhile
But you'll change their heads
When they see you smile...
Oh, yes, sweet darlin'
So glad you are a child of mine.

*Good Morning.... West Orange High School
Today is... Senior Year, 1994... and these are today's announcements*

JSA Bagel Sale before school today, remember to hide all the ginsu knives and the green butter.

Science League meeting after school today. All teams invited to come compete (but everyone knows Physics II is the best)

Bible Study Club meeting today. THIS CLUB IS NOT SPONSORED BY WEST ORANGE HIGH SCHOOL.

The Evolution Club will have a meeting after school today. THIS CLUB IS SPONSORED BY WEST ORANGE HIGH SCHOOL.

Attention all JSA members attending Winter State: Winter State has been postponed once again to August 2, 1994. Luckily we will still be in school at that point so there will be no problem attending this convention.

Cobblestone meeting is canceled. NO! It's just postponed. NO! It's just for staff. NO! It's just for editors.

The planned Spectra VR competition has been canceled due to the constant crashing of the computer. An attempt to transfer the program over to the IBM was successful, but interest was immediately lost because everyone knows IBMs are inferior to Macintoshes.

Attention all students: the school's theme song has been announced. "Mrs Robinson" from the movie, The Graduate, was chosen unanimously by all of Mr. Feula's classes.

A miscount was discovered in the 1993-1994 Student Council elections. Steven Klein was actually elected publicity director and Robert Pearlman was elected president. (Steve, just kidding)

ATTENTION SENIORS: I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of you for your help and support through my father's passing and my illness. I never really had a chance to express that without your help, I don't know where I would have been today.

Thank you and have a nice day.

And the final word... Hawking is smarter than Feynman! Creationism should not be taught in schools. IBMs are always inferior to Macs... No secret air bases exist... and Microsoft receives more business from Macintosh users no matter what the numbers show.

light, All the things I detest, I will almost like.

I don't want to be tied to anybody's string, And I'll carefully try to stay clear of those things...

The humorous, tear-jerking, and poignant coming of age story of five young women spiritually awakening in the fast moving '90s era of grunge, AIDS awareness, and feminism. Based on the true insecurities and rebelliousness of teenage life, and the search for self-identity. The cast includes: Macaluso, a groovy chick with an obsession for blackberry lipstick, gives life to her zany, off-beat character, Olivia, who bravely overcomes her battle with scoliosis. Vibrant newcomer McGinley gives a riveting performance as the feisty, independent Shannon who is proud of her Irish heritage and must face her secret passion for country line dancing. Sensational, Lee, is hysterical as the neurotic, yet lovable Julianna who has a cheese phobia and broiling fetish. Two time Academy Award winner, Marlowe, is wonderfully witty as Melissa, the artistic girl who dances to a different beat (or perhaps every song on the radio). Gifted Lambert presents a refreshing portrayal of her character, Danielle, the culturally sophisticated girl who gives new meaning to culinary talent and ponders the philosophical question, "Where are the singing cats?" Winner for Best Motion Picture at the 1994 Sundance Film Festival.

"We laughed. We cried. We felt warm and tingly all over. A good time was had by all. Two thumbs up!" -Siskel & Ebert

LAST THOUGHTS

Samantha: first grade was just the beginning but I feel like we've been friends forever. I know there are so many things we forgot to say!

Carah: Everything is changing around us but we'll always have a special link. Through better or worse? I couldn't begin to put it all in words.

Samantha: Michigan! No kids the elusive perfect man who will eventually turn into your husband, no mistakes, circle, truth!

Carah: "Mañana, Mañana" How about FREEDOM, A brand new adventure some real men. What will it lead to - love, marriage, kids; I'll be at the Bar Mitzvah.

To my brothers, whom I have known for a long time. I leave these items to you:

To my oldest buddy Conrad for whom I have had the pleasure of knowing since 4th grade. I will leave my Sim City program so you can use it to design your future cities of the world. From Railroads, to ships, to R & R cars, try the potatoes! I shall remember you for your basketball skills and the expressions of your face after stuff, after stuff, and after stuff. Hope you will be at my funeral to shoot a rifle into the air and place a flag over my coffin.

To J.C., Master of Orion, I leave my basketball which is worth billions for the autograph of J.C. I hope when you see this basketball, memories of our victories and defeats come to mind. From our defeat to victory we shall always be victors. I have been a fellow: (J.C. and the boyz) follower. No, JC and boyz doesn't mean Jesus Christ and his Disciples.

Farewell my fellow brothers. "KLue -BLAL, " and "It shall be glorious." P.S. keep bouncing that round ball on the court.

Knights of the Round Table! I will address you one last time...

Sir Conrad Hardy: We always had our differences, but your wit and humor always inspired me to achieve perfection. Your honor and eloquence never ceased to amaze me. To you, I wish only the best.

Sir Janas Caruncho: Your smooth style and personal warmth made you my envy. You are an artist, a rapper, a scholar, and most of all, a good friend. Your future is dear: It is one of glorious destiny and personal wealth.

Sir Daehee Hwang: My trusty friend, your ambitions and our friendly competitions tell me your goals are high. Your show of courage and intelligence during the course of our friendship has proved that you will be a major force in the future. Your kindness and charm have encouraged me to believe that we will always stay close, like brothers. Remember Knights, of Sir Alberto Diaz, MIA. May fate be kind to him. With Love and Respect, Commander Mody, Knight of Wishes

Things I will always remember:

Janas: "Terrace Lake God is Great," Youth Group, Prom limo, Waldorf Astoria, Javitz Center Auto Show '93, mystery floor at A and S plaza, "Go Gel," RR, "...Yo mutha' she wuz a soja'...", Drivin' to Great Adventure, "What is this..." Hi BA, Summer Celebration kids in the van, "can I have a piece of gum", bowling samuri showdown, "I really don't know how to play, I just randomly hit the buttons" Working at WOPL.

DaeHee: "...can I come over..." Civ, SC, L's, powerlines, playing Mortal, cruising in the Buick, Bowling, sport's n games, playin' CDs Ram "...What! Ram's got a bowling ball! Run for you're Life!!" ...playing mortal combat, too bad you're a Republican.

Hey chicos, the judge JC residing. Conrad Hardy you are charged with too many hurricanes in Samuri Showdown; Rooming in Boston, oh, is it my bag, is it? Wrong. What is this? Waldorf, singing

Limo stopped in the name of love, and traveled with prayer. You are going Kou-Kou. "That Sunday." The car show at the Javitz, the mysterious food court at A & S Plaza? Classic Material, the "RR". The sky blue El Dorado to the Grand Marquis. Strike, you win. Strike up the big band. SENTENCE: jail in a railroad station. Ram Mody, you are charged with conspiring to assassinate B.C., not divulging secrets of CIV trainer to me; assisting Rush Limbaugh and eventually replacing him; for not knowing the death moves in Mortal Kombat, for being a Star Trek fan, for being jingoistic. SENTENCE: in prison that doesn't cost tax payers money. Daehee Hwang you are charged for setting fire on the B-ball court, "My boys on fire", "My man is money." JESSICA AND CARA

THAT'S WHAT FRIENDS ARE FOR...

Whether we're hanging out or on the run,
It's guaranteed that we're gonna have fun.
It could be cold or it may be hot,
No need to worry, the joint is the spot.

We've come prepared with this here Shnakeskin jacket,
Jess's soccer ball and Cara's tennis racket.
Gosh I hope that Bob is there,
That day over vacation gave us quite a scare.

For her first year of track, Cara got her cool freshman letter,
In the pool that night things could not have been better.
We'll never forget the Hippie fest of '93,
And had we had our licenses, we would have gotten tea.

Jess loves sunshine and Cara loves snow,
But whenever there's a secret, you're the first one to know.
Our most often asked question is, "Do I look fat?"
But the answer is, "No, why are you asking me that?"

Cara's bangs were accidental and Jess's hair doesn't grow.
Why we dyed our hair red, we'll never know.
We thought the Sophomore drought would never end.
Then along came Gregg, suddenly more than a friend.

Cara's still waiting for a guy that's hot,
Maybe she'll meet him at Palladium - NOT!!!
I love you...shutup, aren't you glad we use dial?
Chris Elliot did, he gave us a smile.

At hockey games we're part of the crowd.
We're definitely not cheerleaders, but we sure are loud.
Since we're outspoken, we have trouble with a secret.
And when it comes to Gregg, Jess will surely leak it.

Jess, Cara, and Carah get along so well.
You know what Carah Falkin, we think you're swell.
"Oh god-that's so funny," says Cara to me,
Both lifetime members of the famous LOC posse.

Getting A's while struggling in class,
Got us into Rutgers and Cornell extra fast.
Jessica will never be far from me,
Permanent neighbors we always will be.

Drinking hot chocolate, we sit and chat.
Talking is something we've always been good at.
Whether face-to-face or on the phone,
We'll find some business to talk about that's not our own.

"Cara, will you come with me? I hate feeding him in rain.
The horse is hungry. Please carry the grain."
We've boogied together at a Bar Mitzvah or two.
No matter who we danced with, to Billy and Rob we were true.

First it was Lady, and now Sally Sue, Cara's always had Clifford - shiny and new.
The cars are left home and off to Europe we go.
Finally in April, we've escaped the snow.

Then comes May and at the senior prom we danced,
To Lady in Red and In Your Eyes, when given the chance.
Throughout the year, good times we've had,
But there's more to come, so we're not sad.

You are my best friend, who could ask for more,
Keep smiling Cara, Keep shining Jess,
That's What Friends Are For!

forever yours... faithfully..."*

December 3, 1992...

Denise, Erica, Lina, Sarah, Toby

When we pick up Denise, she'll dress on the way there While tying her shoes and putting a barrette in her hair
A random act of violence towards
Denise's pink sock
And her common groundings are nothing to mock
She seems to be innocent, but it's not quite true
Best of luck next year at BKU!

Who's here- me and my sister? -
No wonder she says "we"
And her face on the stairs was quite the sight to see
It would have been funny if it were corn - or so Erica did say
When she thought the theater had service, we were laughing all day
Her decision making may tend to take a while
But her flashing limbs are sure to produce a smile!

Lina came straight off the boat, but she's hardly a stranger
Quite possibly, she's the biggest fan of the Rangers
When we slept at Denise's her pants got really soaked
And she often thinks she "got that off" with a joke
At her house the biscuit was buttered and we spoke of the beach
Need to see something? Her glasses better be within reach!

The Hymowitz has her share of one-armed volleyball tricks
En route to the carnival, she fell in a pile of Rocky's _____
As the founder of NOW, she's not sponsored by our school
Anyone to challenge here opinions must be a fool
We never thought she'd do it, though the warning signs were there
But the next thing we knew, she had purple hair!

Two points for effort are Toby's claim to fame
She tries hard with her jokes, though few entertain
The first ten or twelve times her camp stories were fine
And at the drop of a hat, she can quote any movie line
But someday soon she'll quote her own flicks
So tilt the head, flip the hair- okay, camera - click!

Thank you for being a friend
Traveled down the road and back again
Your heart is true, you're a pal and a confident
I'm not ashamed to say
I hope it always will this way--
THANK YOU FOR BEING A FRIEND!!!!

Dear Class of 1994,

Throughout the year, our yearbook staff was hard at work making a book that we are all proud of. We had the invaluable help of certain individuals who deserve our heartfelt gratitude. Thank you: Mr. Lawshe, Ms. Barb Merson, and everybody who assisted us at Herff Jones; Isabel, Barbara, and all the cooperative people at Lorstan Studios; all of the West Orange High School faculty, especially Mrs. Dalgauer, Mrs. Blind, Mr. Scharfstein, Ms. Pratkanis, Ms. Pomar, Mrs. Antonacci, Mrs. Kulik, Mr. Buzzelli, Mrs. Snyder, Mr. Romeo, Mr. Ehrlich, Dr. Bearg, and all the coaches, especially Mr. Suriano. A special thank you goes out to Mr. McCarthy, our yearbook advisor, who has made working on this yearbook an experience to remember. Not only will we remember this experience, we will also cherish it.

Sincerely, Janas & Lorie
