New Dimensions in TRAVEL

When we were in middle school, we thought of travel as jumping into the family car and heading for the shore. Every summer would entail this familiar voyage. When we got to WOHS, everything was new and unfamiliar. We did not know what the school, let alone the world, had to offer. Very quickly, however, we grew accustomed to the daily routine of high school life and soon began to wonder what life was like beyond West Orange. Fortunately, we didn't have to wait long until we began to explore new places through our class trips.

As sophomores we "braved the rapids" of the Delaware River and communed with nature as we went white-water rafting. A year later, we boarded the school busses to explore the fun-filled world of Dorney Park in Pennsylvania. Also as juniors, a number of us were fortunate enough to regain the spring break that others had lost because of record amounts of snowfall. We used this time to explore a whole new continent as we traveled to Italy and Greece. There, we examined the remains of two great civilizations and experienced two unique cultures with rich traditions. West Orange, which seemed so big only a few years before, now seemed small and familiar. Still, we were happy to come home, and we brought back with us a broader view of the world and its people.

The classmates we traveled with on these trips will always have a special place in our high school memories. The photos we took and the memories we have will become symbolic of a time in our lives when we stretched beyond the physical borders of our town so that we could add NEW DIMENSIONS to our lives.

The no hat rule didn't deter Jenine Anday, Jaime Zins, and Melissa McManus on the Dorney Park trip.

Were we courageous or what? Shooting the rapids of the Delaware River was child's play.

New Dimensions in ATTIRE

Dressing up was not something we looked forward to during our early years in high school. We believed this was something reserved for adults who attended banquets and weddings. Instead, we were quite comfortable in our jeans and flannels, and we could not think of any reason why we had to dress up.

Junior year was a transitional time for the Class of '95. We were no longer "lowly sophomores", but we still had not reached the lofty status of "Seniors." We were at an in-between stage on our journey toward adulthood, and began to think it might actually be fun to dress up for just one night. On March 12, 1994, we got to do just that as we attended our Junior Prom. We donned elegant dresses and tuxedos and stepped out of limos into the banquet hall at Mayfair Farms. The Junior Prom was even more special for us since our class had the largest turnout in the history of our school. A record number of couples paid $80 for a prom ticket which entitled them to a cocktail hour, a full course meal and a evening of nonstop dancing.

Preparations began early in the day since the prom was held on a Saturday night. The morning was spent at the hairdressers, and the afternoon was spent putting together the finishing touches. The early evening was devoted to visiting the homes of family and friends, for the obligatory pictures. Once we arrived at Mayfair Farms, we posed for more pictures and were interviewed by the school TV news. The five hours of the prom flew by. Afterwards, limos brought us into NYC and other places where the fun continued.

Our rite of passage into adulthood was appropriately named "Almost Paradise." We had reached NEW DIMENSIONS in our personal lives, and, after it was all over, we found it hard to go back to our old jeans and flannel shirts.

It's great to be back! Samantha Sabia and Dominica DiRocco are all smiles on the first day of school.

STATUS

"Seniors set the emotional tone for the entire school; I count on them to be enthusiastic, and to strive for academic excellence. More importantly, I expect them to set an example for the underclassmen by demonstrating maturity and social responsibility." This was the message delivered to us by Dr. Thomas Finnegan, our new principal, as he addressed the Class of 1995 at the first-ever "Welcome Back Seniors" breakfast held in the cafeteria on the first day of school, September 1, 1994. In years past we had never been "welcomed back" by anyone, and we certainly had never been challenged to set an example for others to follow.

For safety reasons, we were not permitted to have the traditional first-day motorcade from Caldor's to the high school. While it was disappointing at first, the energy and excitement at the breakfast more than made up for it. The cafeteria was filled with faces painted with blue and white, our colors. The numbers 9 and 5 were everywhere, our numbers. A dynamic transformation took place that morning. We had gained a collective identity. We mattered at that point; it was clear to see that we, the class of '95, had no problem setting the example of enthusiasm and pride for the rest of the school. We enjoyed our new status.

After three years of wandering through the halls anonymously, it was finally our time to be somebody. We had reached a new status and gained a new title - Senior. We knew Mike Daniels, the student council president, and Michele Montuore, the president of the senior class, would lead us. We knew that Ms. Damiano and Mr. Prendergast, our faculty advisors, would direct us through the many social events that would draw us even closer as a class. Although this status would last for only a year, we knew that while it lasted, the title "Senior", had raised us to a wonderful NEW DIMENSION of importance.

MOUNTAINEER

Life for the Class of 1995 evolved into a menagerie of excitement, fun, and most of all change. Sure, we whined over how we had to go back to school so early. We were, nevertheless, ecstatic on September 1 at our first-ever "Welcome Back Seniors Breakfast" with its happy sea of blue faces and shirts, and confetti. At the fall pep rally, we out-cheered and out-spirited everyone. We'll never forget those pie facials and the tug-of-war on that beautiful October 12 afternoon of the senior picnic. No one minded that Homecoming, pushed up to October 22, went on with a multicolored backdrop of trees, instead of frost, as we serenaded the royal court with our hearty cheers. The National Honor Society ceremony, held on December 5, was a night spent recognizing the achievements of the scholars in our class. As the year went on, we participated in a plethora of activities and clubs, culminating our great year with the prom and finally graduation. The members of the Class of 1995 were the ones who did things first, differently and successfully. Our legacy will be the NEW DIMENSIONS we created in student life at WOHS.

Powder Puff

Don't let the title "Powder Puff" fool you. When the Class of '95 squared off against the Class of '94 in the annual all-female touch football game, the highlights were worthy of an ESPN "Bumps, Bites, and Bruises" segment. It was probably the hottest June 16 on record when the combatants met for battle. The mercury soared past the 100 degree mark and turned School Stadium into a steambath. However, the humidity index was cool compared to the white-hot intensity of the competitive spirit of the Class of '95. Led by quarterback Stephanie Rizzolo, these female 'monsters of the gridiron' displayed tenacity and guile more commonly associated with veteran NFL players than debutants. Under the tutelage of Tim Feeley, Nick Frankos, Joe Shin and Ernesto Alcalde, the lady Mountaineers more than held their own against the burly, football-scholarship bound bunch of roughians from the Class of '94. Can you say hormone check? When the dust finally settled, the scoreboard read Class of '94 6 - Class of '95 0. As the victors limped away, they knew they'd met their match; they had the scars to prove it.

Ready for battle, Kate Minnock zeroes in on her opponents.

We've Got SPIRIT

"Seniors! Seniors! Seniors!" This was the chant heard from the main gym on September 30, the long awaited day of the fall pep rally. There had been other pep rallies that the Class of '95 had attended, and other times when we showed our class pride, but this year was special. That particular Friday night, we were the seniors; we were being honored, and we showed the school what spirit really was. Everyone in the Class of '95 had an active role in this spirited production. Senior band members inspired the crowd with their lively rhythms while the senior cheerleaders led the echos of the boisterous crowd when the athletes stepped forward into the shower of confetti.

As the hoarse cheers of the crowd slowly subsided and the last of the confetti gracefully floated onto the gym floor, we left our distinguished place under the sign that proclaimed us "Seniors". We knew that the cheers and excitement were for all of us, and on that night, we certainly proved our worthiness of all the accolades.

Picnic

in the Park

October 12 was a perfect day for a picnic in the park. The sun shone brightly over Degnan Park, and the clear blue sky provided a perfect backdrop for the blend of blue and white senior shirts. There was a general feeling of unity among us as we were being positioned for the formation of a 9 and a 5 for our class photo. The picnic got off to an arousing start with the arrival of the six foot submarine sandwiches, which we devoured. But, we were still hungry, so we made our way to the desserts where Adrienne Berke and Rabia Mohyuddin walked off with baking honors for their delicious sheet cake. After everyone's appetite was satisfied, it was time for serious competition. Twenty pairs lined up ready to win the sack race, but when it was all over, only one pair was left standing. Once, we were tired of "hopping around", it was time for the three legged race. Those of us who did not participate in the races engaged in a carefree game of frisbee and football or posed for pictures as we cheered our classmates on. The excitement reached its peak during the tug of war. The boys were literally left in the dust as the girls showed their superiority with two consecutive victories. Finally, it was time for the pie eating contest. Pierre Alexandre "inhaled" his pie and finished with more pie on his face than in his mouth. As the festivities came to an end against the backdrop of the sunset, incredibly weary seniors trudged to their cars for the ride home and a very long nap.

FRIENDS RULE THE COURT

Being recognized by your peers is special. Being honored along with your close friends by your classmates is something very special. So it was for Lindsay Farris, Melissa McManus and Michele Montuore on a sunfilled October 22 afternoon.

When the seniors of WOHS were asked to cast their votes for the 1995 Homecoming Queen, no one could have imagined the results. Ironically, the tricaptains of the varsity cheerleading squad were chosen to represent our school. Besides displaying qualities such as leadership, dedication and spirit, the trio had been friends since PAL cheerleading and endured the ups and downs of high school together. There wouldn't have been anyone else with whom they would have preferred to share this moment.

Although it was not held on Thanksgiving, the football game produced the largest turnout of the season. As the Mountaineers were on their way to defeating Lakeland, parents, teachers, friends and alumni witnessed the crowning of the queen. The colorguard formed an archway as Dr. Finnegan announced Lindsay Farris, escorted by Chris Greeley, and Melissa McManus, escorted by Michael Daniels, as members of the 1995 Homecoming Court. With tear-filled eyes, WOHS Homecoming Queen, Michele Montuore, escorted by Chris Todd, walked to the sideline to join her two friends, who were eager to congratulate her.

Overdue Tribute

Our parents helped us take our first steps, learn how to tie our shoelaces and ride a bike. They were always there to make us feel better when we got a bruise or a scratch and wiped the tears away when we were sad. We owe our parents a lot of gratitude, and not often enough do we take time out to say, "Thank you, Mom and Dad." However, on the bright and sunny afternoon of October 22, before the Homecoming game, the members of the football team, the cheerleaders and the marching band had the chance to formally thank their parents at the annual Parents' Day held at Schools Stadium. The ceremony gave seniors an opportunity to show their appreciation for four years of rides to practices, attendance at every game or event and also the sincere support, encouragement and patience that their parents readily supplied.

Each parent or guardian wore a beautiful white corsage or boutonniere, but an onlooker would not have needed any kind of distinguishing feature to pick out these honored parents. Their proud faces and bright smiles gave them away. During the ceremony, each senior and his/her parents or guardians stepped forward after their names were announced for a moment of recognition. The ear to ear smiles, the teary eyes and the warmth felt because of the attention they received lingered on their faces well after the game ended. It was a long overdue tribute to very deserving people.

Nobody Did It Better

Neither rain, nor cold, nor heat of day could stop them. Beginning with the 12 hour days of band camp in late August, the 1994-1995 Marching Mountaineers certainly had their work cut out for them, first learning and then polishing this year's show, which revolved around a James Bond theme.

Change and many unforeseen events slowed the dedicated group, but they quickly adjusted to a new director, and somehow, they survived band camp despite the 90+ degree weather and a stomach virus that disabled over a third of the band and instructors. Not surprisingly, these obstacles did slow down their progress, and by the second football game the band didn't even know the drill for the last song.

However, under the direction of rookie director Lori Kahan, assistant directors Joe Romano and Scott Tomlin, flag instructor Terri Kiselburgh and the leadership of the band's 20 seniors, the 74 member group proved that hard work, and a little fun, does get the job done. At their first competition at Ridge-wood High School, Drum Majors Mike D. Cohen and Stephanie Padakis proudly accepted awards for first place in Group 2, Best Music, Best Marching and Best Overall Band. Guard Captain Kara Giorgio accepted Best Auxiliary and to the delight of the entire band, Drum Captain Mike Daniels claimed the Best Percussion trophy.

The group practiced past sunset to perfect the show. On the night of November 11, the Marching Mountaineers showed everyone that truly, "Nobody Does It Better," as they marched their way to a sixth place trophy, out of 15 bands, in the championships at Giants Stadium. They did equally well on their April trip to Virginia Beach. Miss Kahan summed up her first season: "The Marching Band had an amazing year... remarkable students with remarkable achievements."

Doing the WRITE Thing

The wise prophet Juvenal once said, "The incurable itch of writing possesses many." This aphorism was certainly a paradigm of the dedicated students here at West Orange High School. A significant portion of the Class of 1995, who were bitten by this writer's bug were vigorously involved in the award-winning productions of the school newspaper, The Pioneer, and the literary magazine, Cobblestone.

The 70 people on the staff of the monthly Pioneer, worked diligently, and sometimes frantically, to meet each deadline and provide the school with an informative, yet captivating publication. Expanded to an unprecedented eight pages this year, the newspaper was the final product of a long and laborious process with time spent in and outside of class to brainstorm ideas, write stories, lay out pages, proofread, and perform all the meticulous details vital to a publication of this calibre. Guided by the insights of adviser Bill Ehrlich, and led by the Editor-in-Chief trio of Janet Lee, Aarti Nasta and Mandee Silverman, The Pioneer successfully provided WOHS with in-depth coverage of current events, thoughtful insights into controversial issues and an assortment of entertaining features that helped define WOHS.

The Cobblestone provided a grand opportunity for the literary minds among us to present our talents to the WOHS community. The staff of the magazine worked efficiently and arduously at their after school meetings each week to produce this much anticipated annual publication. The staff spent some grueling and difficult hours selecting from the prodigious amount of submissions from our resident poets, playwrights, essayists and artists. Under the expertise of advisers Dr. Ruth Legow and Mr. Robert Valgenti the leadership of Editors-in-Chief, juniors Jonathan Tamari and Dena Eben, the Cobblestone was a brilliant showcase of the talent here at WOHS.

With the excellence of these publications, it was not hard to understand how they continued a five year tradition of first place rankings.

PICTURE THIS

Whether it was the senior picnic or a boys' soccer game, they were right there to capture it all with a camera and a pen. They were the enthusiastic and competent staff of the 1995 Mountaineer Yearbook who were faced with the arduous challenge of recording all of our very special and memorable moments at West Orange High School.

Under the experienced eyes of adviser Mr. John McCarthy and Editor-in-Chief Lorin Chan, the 1995 staff was an impressive conglomeration of creative, hard-working and extremely dedicated individuals. Though they had to write all the copy and the captions, design and lay out every page and attend to the most minute of details, the most difficult task that each person encountered was working with other people with 20 different ways of doing things. Along with learning what a bleed is and what a difference a pica makes, the staff also learned the value of patience, cooperation, honesty and how to listen to others.

We saw their faces every Wednesday and Sunday night when we tuned into Channel 36. We came to know them as the staff of WOHS TV 36 News and we marvelled at their ability to present two professional quality programs per month. Each of the 23 crew members learned how to report a story, operate a videotape recorder, edit footage and generate computer graphics.

Under the watchful eyes of experienced advisers Mr. Martin Kale and Mr. John McCarthy, the staff presented five features per show ranging from profiles of the many talented personalities of the school to a coverage of co-curricular activities and sporting events. Jamee Leffler and junior Stephanie Walczak anchored the show, while Jay Bhat filled the role as Executive Producer.

Whether we wanted to find out the latest fashion or learn how to beat the stress of schoolwork, the WOHS-TV News was 'the' place to turn. No wonder Leffler concluded each show by saying, "For news that's the best, watch WOHS."

Expect the BEST

Throughout the year, many WOHS students were praised for their accomplishments in a variety of areas. On the night of December 5, 1995, 51 members of the senior class were honored for their academic achievements as they were inducted into the National Honor Society. Selection was based on GPA, leadership and community service. Once accepted, members met and elected Amy Wertheimer president, Lorin Chan, vice-president, Maribel Martinez, secretary and Janet Lee, treasurer.

The induction ceremony appropriately took place in the scholarly atmosphere of the LMC and was attended by parents, teachers and friends. Between an introduction by advisor Dr. Esther Bearg, and a conclusion by principal, Dr. Thomas Finnegan, several speakers reminisced about the past, explained the values of the NHS and reminded the inductees of their responsibilities for the future.

The first speaker, Amy Michael, told of the importance of past memories. However, Amy quickly added that one should not be captured by these memories, but should instead be able to live in the present and look openly towards the future. Next, Israel Klein discussed the importance of the values, stated in the NHS oath, of maintaining high standing, pursuing leadership, showing untarnished character and freely giving service to others. These values, he said, should be possessed by politicians of today and tomorrow. Then, Michael I. Cohen used a metaphor to explain the shaping of one's character. He compared life to a jazz band. The background drums, piano and bass are those who influence a person, namely parents, teachers and friends. The individual is the soloist who uses the background, but is the only one who can create and change what will happen. Finally, Sara Carano talked of the quick changes that will occur in the inductees' lives. She told them to smash the hourglass of time and live every moment to its fullest.

Keynote speaker Dr. Mary Hartman, Dean of Douglass College of Rutgers University, spoke last. She stressed the importance of education as she said, "The goal of education is to provide individuals with a larger sense of community by breaking down the walls that divide us." At the conclusion of the evening, after listening to these speeches and taking the oath, the inductees had gained a clearer understanding of the importance of their academic success and their role in shaping the future.

Music Moves Me

"Hallelujah, Hallelujah," echoed through the Roosevelt auditorium during the Winter Concert on December 8, 1994 as the dulcet voices of the blue-robed choir members accompanied the orchestra. This performance was the product of several months of hard work. Before this spectacular finale, the orchestra, chorus, concert choir and chamber singers had the opportunity to showcase their individual talents. The orchestra started their part of the program with Handel's "Allegro from Samson Oratorio." At the conclusion of their final piece, Mozart's "Toy Symphony," the choral groups began their segment of the concert. The combined choirs began with a choreographed performance of "Sing We Alleluia." They were followed by a powerful rendition of "Bridge Over Troubled Water" by the chorus. As harmonious melody rang through the auditorium, the Concert Choir waited to begin their segment of the concert. They began with "O Sinfuni Mungu" and ended with "Down by the Riverside." They were followed by the Chamber Singers. This select group of highly talented singers was led by the strong voices of five seniors, Amy Michael, Kate Minnock, Gina Vantuno, Pierre Alexandre and Eli Heilbrun, and sang "I Will Not Leave You Comfortless" and "When I Fall in Love." In addition to concert performances, these talented vocal groups had the opportunity to compete at Basking Ridge and Roxbury High Schools and also performed at Lincoln Center. The orchestra was also given the chance to perform outside the school during a show at the Livingston Mall over the December Break. In April, the choral groups, as well as the orchestra and bands, went to Virginia Beach for a four day competition and adjudication. This year, our extensive music program was blessed with talented students whose hard work and dedication produced stellar entertainment. "Amen."

Living A Dream Living A Dream

Walking through the crowded halls of West Orange High School, one would certainly come in contact with people of different religions and cultures. Two clubs in particular, the Unity Club and UMOJA, espoused universal acceptance of differences and sought to teach the student population to focus on things which unite rather than divide.

The Unity Club was created to promote the positive attributes of all cultures and break the cycle of ignorance that promotes prejudice and discrimination. The club was under the watchful eyes of faculty advisors Mr. David Schwartz and Ms. Monica Shah and the eight student members of the executive committee, which included seniors Sabrina Smith, Prema Thirumalai and Janet Lee. This organization was proud of its large membership. Bi-monthly meetings included celebrations of different holidays and "thought talks" that employed innovative techniques to introduce such topics as stereotyping and the ramifications of Proposition 187. The culmination of the year's events was Unity Day. On March 30, the all day celebration of unity consisted primarily of signing a unity pledge and sporting blue ribbons. The day was capped off with an International Dinner. The club was honored this year by being picked as one of the three schools in the country to be featured in an Arcadia Pictures documentary for PBS. With the Unity Club captured on film, its purpose and objectives would not only be heard by the WOHS community, but by people across the United States.

UMOJA shared the dream of universal acceptance with the Unity Club. Ms. Martin, the UMOJA advisor, and her officers sponsored several well attended events, highlighted on February 16 by the UMOJA dinner. President Qianna White initiated the night with an introductory speech which stressed the focus of the dinner, "Youth on the Move." Guest speakers Anika Johnson and fellow WOHS graduate Kamara James, the founder of the club, elaborated on "Youth on the Move" in their speeches. The Black History Month Dinner was dedicated to the memory of Lorraine Hansberry, most known for her play "Raisin in the Sun." Members of UMOJA performed a skit taken from the play and gave a synopsis of it. This special night, which also included ethnic foods and music, provided a festive setting for promoting their heritage. Later in the year, UMOJA sponsored a fashion and talent show. The club continually presented students with the opportunity to learn about other cultures.

Hopefully, the large memberships in both of these clubs, coupled with the success of their activities, can be taken as a sign that their dreams will one day be realized.

Sabrina Smith and advisor Ms. Monica Shah read over the Unity Club's objectives at the club fair.

Students For S.A.L.E.

Ciao! Hola! Bonjour! Many of us were greeted by these words spoken by our World Language teachers. However, some students were the ones to offer these greetings to others. These students participated in the Student Alternative Learning Experience (S.A.L.E.) program. For over 20 years, WOHS has been working with the elementary schools to help all students learn to appreciate a world language. Any student taking Italian, Spanish or French III, IV or V had the opportunity to teach an elementary school class the basics of their chosen language. For a half hour, once a week after school, these student-teachers, taught the basic vocabulary and the culture of their respective language. The classes learned about numbers, animals, clothing, greetings and commands, parts of the body and other basic concepts through the use of innovative techniques and games. Gretchen Price, who taught French to fifth graders said, "The kids were really excited and responsive every time we played games like Simon Says and sang songs in French." The SALE program allowed high school students to get a taste of teaching while using their recently acquired knowledge. All participants were required to attend weekly planning meetings and complete 40 hours of work in order to earn one academic credit. However, most participants would say that the credit was not the reason they decided to participate in SALE. Cathie Florio, who taught Italian at Pleasantdale School for three years reflected, "The kids were so excited when we came and were usually so willing and happy to learn that it made every class enjoyable."

Lending A Hand

Throughout the school year, a significant number of students serviced the community as well as their peers. These dedicated students represented West Orange High School's Interact Club and Lean On Me groups. As they had for years in the past, both organizations were continually involved in lending a hand wherever they could.

The Interact Club sponsored several events to raise money for the community. Roughly 40 students, along with their advisor, Dr. Rotunda, President Adam Jacobs and Vice-President Kerrie McGinley, pulled together to make this service club function. They assisted with the Pleasantdale after-school program, and conducted a pre-Halloween Party and a Winter Holiday Party at the West Orange Community House. Although it was primarily a service organization for the community, the Interact Club served as hosts for Back-to-School Night in the beginning of the school year, as well as at the National Honor Society Induction. To keep students who weren't active in the club involved, they also manned a daily candy cart after school, from which students could purchase snacks. The funds raised were used for sponsoring parties for children. This way the entire student body got a chance to lend a hand.

Lean on Me, a self-help support group advised by Ms. Wofsy, was dedicated to promoting "wellness" in the school. Approximately 30 students formed this peer-counseling group which required members to sign an alcohol and drug free contract. The group conducted workshops, primarily for underclassmen, to help them resolve conflicts and to break down stereotypes. They also put together a Dialogue Night that allowed parents and their children to develop mutual understanding. Jaime Zins summarized the group's role in school best saying, "Kids in school need more people to turn to; they need people their own age who can support them. There is never a more rewarding feeling than lending a hand."

Why did so many students volunteer their time in clubs and organizations at West Orange High School? Maybe some thought it would look good on their college transcript or because they enjoyed being involved in their school and community. However, the members of Junior Statesmen of America (JSA), one of these many clubs, joined to express their love of politics and to voice their opinions on current issues. This group helped students understand how our government works and how it deals with major concerns effecting the United States. The leaders of the club were President Israel Klein, Vice-President Kerrie McGinley, Secretary Greg Vadala, Treasurer Noah Gottesman, Director of Funding Dan Teich, Director of Debates Jared Strauss and Director of Publicity Michael I. Cohen. Along with the rest of the members, they sponsored and participated in debates, mock trials, simulations and student-administration forums. According to Mrs. Dodds, their club advisor, "This club is for students who want to do things and are responsible. It is a completely student-run organization." This year, there were three major conventions that were attended by the West Orange chapter, along with 60-90 other schools from different regions of the country. Fall State featured a debate on current political issues. At Winter State, a Model Congress was formed wherein students expressed their goal for changing America to the way they believed it should be. During Spring State, officers were elected to form a state government. JSA labored throughout the school year to create a forum for all students to debate current issues and to inform the entire school population with regard to the politics of the United States government. Club president, Israel Klein explained his experience in JSA and how he felt it helped him. "In JSA, I have been able to find my voice and use it everyday. My three year experiences here have prepared me for college and for life."

Israel Klein delivers his winning speech at Winter State.

Calculus, Humanities, Physics, Philosophy . . . all the courses that we took our senior year certainly kept us busy. As seniors, we had to work extra hard to keep up our grades and fight off that urge to slack off known as "senioritis." For 12 members of the class, these hours spent studying culminated in a special honor — a number one ranking. This all female group consisted of Angel Chen, Cathie Florio, Kara Giorgio, Cheryl Jones, Michiko Kobayashi, Janet Lee, Michele Montuore, Aarti Nasta, Gretchen Price, Mande Silverman, Prema Thirumalai and Amy Wertheimer. All had an A average as of September 1994. However, no matter what their class rank, every member of the senior class certainly knew the meaning of hard work . . .

It's NOT

and No Play

... But as the first, long awaited snowstorm of the year dropped over a foot of snow in late January, members of the Class of '95 dropped their books and headed out to frolic in the snow. Donning hats, mittens and scarves, they left the warmth of the classrooms and ventured out into the cold, winter air. For a while, they forgot about their work and escaped to a world of play. They had snowball fight and made snowmen and snow angels. Though their ears, noses and clothes were frozen, they still had a great time. As the snow gradually disappeared, the members of the senior class picked up their books once again and waited for their next opportunity to refute that time honored cliché about all work and no play!

MOUNTAINEER

Teachers touch the future! While it's hard to predict exactly what the future has in store for the graduates of the Class of 1995, one thing is certain, they'll be ready to meet the challenge. Throughout our four years in high school, the faculty played a major role in our development, academically and personally.

At the same time, the faculty also stepped into NEW DIMENSIONS of their own. Mr. Tarnoff, WOHS principal for many years, was elevated to the position of superintendent and was replaced by Dr. Finnegan. Mr. Peterson, a history teacher, became the Dean of Students. Chris Feeley, Class of '89, was hired to fill the vacated position. Mr. Lubiner, the Foreign Language Supervisor, retired to teach part-time at Caldwell College, and Ms. Rosiello became the new supervisor. Several new teachers, including Marvin Garcia, Theresa Kiselburgh, Lori Kahan and Dr. Robert Kwik were hired to take the place of other retirees.

The Class of '95 came in with some faculty and left with others. Seniors, as you look through this section some time down the road, think back to the time you spent with these dedicated people in a classroom, at an activity, on a trip, or on a team. What you will realize is that they had a profound impact on you; truly they brought NEW DIMENSIONS to your life.

MOUNTAINEER

S-E-N-I-O-R-S! Those seven letters spelled out the most important word in our collective vocabulary in the year 1995. It meant power, spirit, magic, and much more. However, the most important components of our senior year were the relationships that climaxed after more than three years of development. Billy Joel, whose songs were often quoted in the senior section, accurately described the feeling that encompassed many seniors as they approached the end of their senior year in his song "This is the Time to Remember". "This is the time to remember . . . for it will not last forever . . . These are the days to hold onto . . ." As we prepared to say good-bye to our school and to our friends, and as we closed a chapter in our lives and began another one, it was easy to recognize the truth of Joel's verse. Obviously, high school could not last forever, but the memories can. This section in the yearbook will help keep your friends from high school an active part of your life, and the times you spent together at WOHS, an active part of your memory. The NEW DIMENSIONS we experienced at WOHS are so unforgettable that they will help shape our lives in the future. By looking through the senior section, we will always remember the people who made all of those high school experiences so memorable — our friends!

95

"Barney is a dinosaur from our imagination . . ." For most of us, just the thought of these words was enough to make us cringe, but for Kirsten Schulze, "The Barney Song" was an integral part of her job. Since her sophomore year, Kirsten dressed up as Barney, and many other characters, and performed at children's birthday parties.

Entertaining kids ran in Kirsten's family. She got her first job thanks to her uncle, who worked as a clown. As a senior, she worked for his company and his friend's company. Besides dressing up as Mickey and Minnie Mouse, The Little Mermaid, and other popular characters, Kirsten learned how to make balloon animals and paint faces in order to entertain and amuse the children. While this may seem enjoyable, when Kirsten began her job she didn't think so. "At first, I hated it, but I made good money, so I stuck with it, and soon I began to like the kids," she admitted.

Working with children often proved to be unpredictable. "The unexpected always seemed to happen," reflected Kirsten. Most of the time, the kids were so excited to see their favorite characters that they hugged her and didn't want to let go. Sometimes the kids weren't always that polite. "One time a kid really didn't like me. He kept pulling on my costume and eventually the hand came off," she lamented.

Simply dressing up as characters was not as easy as it sounds. Just trying to move in some of the costumes was a feat in itself. One time, Kirsten was The Little Mermaid for a party. However, she could not walk in the costume. "In order to get me into the room, the people who were throwing the party had to carry me in and they almost dropped me into the pool!" she recalled with a laugh.

As Kirsten looked to the future, she considered the possibility of working with children. Until she narrowed her career choice, Kirsten planned to continue to entertain at parties. After all, the money was good and so was the feeling that she got from making a child's birthday a little more special.

BROADWAY BOUND

"I moved here from Irvington at the beginning of my junior year and decided to join chorus. Ms. Williamson first discovered my talent and urged me to get involved," remembered Pierre Alexandre. Ever since then, Pierre's interest and involvement in the performing arts skyrocketed. He went from auditioning for the school play to auditioning for the NYU School of the Arts.

"When I did Gypsy I had no training. However, after that, I knew that singing, dancing and acting were things I really wanted to do," commented Pierre. In the summer of 1994, he auditioned for a music camp in Pennsylvania and was offered a full scholarship. "At the performance there, I sang 'Bui Doi' from Miss Saigon. Afterwards, people came up to me crying and telling me how much the song meant to them. This really touched me, and it was then that I knew I wanted to become a professional performer."

Working towards this goal, Pierre's hours were always occupied with some form of performance enrichment. He spent every day after school with Ms. Williamson in concert choir, show choir, or chamber singers, until 5:00. Then, he went either to dance class from 6:00 to 10:00, or acting class from 7:00 to 10:00. He only had off on Friday nights and Saturdays.

"My mother didn't like this 'dream' at first, but when I auditioned for the New Jersey School of Ballet and was offered a scholarship she began to approve of my career plans. When they told me I had tremendous natural talent, she was really proud," he said. At the School of Ballet, Pierre was placed in the intermediate jazz class, one of the top classes, after only one year.

Ms. Williamson was a big personal influence on Pierre, while Ben Vereen was the professional singer/dancer/actor Pierre had always admired. "I love that guy!" he laughed.

Besides working hard to become a professional, Pierre sang and danced because he truly loved it. "After a hard day at school, singing and dancing was my form of release," he noted. "And after a show, when I hear the applause and see the smiles on people's faces, I know that it's all worth it."

HISTORY REVISITED

"I still get chills thinking about it," reflected Jaime Zins. The others agreed. Jaime, along with six other WOHS seniors: Devora Vernon, Nina Schwartz, Dan Deutsch, Cortney Davis, Adrienne Berke and Avi Furer, got a chance to see and feel the sights and emotions of many of the WWII concentration camps as they went on the two week March of the Living to Poland and Israel in April of 1994. This march, held yearly, brought together over 6000 Jews, mostly teenagers, from all over the world to remember the horrors of the Holocaust.

Each person decided to go on the journey for different reasons. Some, like Cortney Davis, felt a need to go because relatives had survived or died in the Holocaust. She went to "get a better understanding of what they went through." Others, like Devora Vernon, felt they had to "personalize what (they) had heard about it." Whatever the reason, all the participants felt a need to make the visit.

The two weeks proved to be a very emotional experience. One of the hardest camps to visit, according to the seven, was Majdanek, the only camp left as it actually existed during WWII. They remembered breaking down as they saw three buildings still filled with shoes and ashes in the ovens. "When I saw the bunks, I began to understand the stories I had heard from my grandfather, a survivor," commented Dan Deutsch.

The trip was not all filled with tears, however. Some of the best parts were the development of friendships and the chance to pray with people from all over the world. "Although everyone had different backgrounds, we all knew the prayers and that made the group even closer," noted Cortney.

This experience helped each of the seven to mature. They all agreed that they grew up more in those two weeks than they had in a long time. Devora recalled that what she and her friends once thought of as important seemed trivial when she returned home.

The first few weeks back were filled with emotion. Each person remembered crying often. Months later, they were able to look back on the experience calmly, having gained a better understanding of what their relatives had endured. This chilling return to a horrible chapter in history strengthened the resolve of those who took the March of the Living to proclaim, "Never again!"

MAKING A DIFFERENCE

"It's good to interact with people and help someone every day," believed Erica Perez. It was because of this belief, and the desire to make a difference, that she and Jamila Irons volunteered for the Great Commission of Literacy. Through this program they taught English to a class of 15 to 20 adults who spoke Spanish and Creole. These adults, of varying age, were new to the country and realized the need to know enough English to communicate in American society in order to succeed in the job world.

Jamila and Erica learned about this program from a family friend and started participating in it in 1993. They each taught two hour classes, twice a week, at Orange High School. Before they started teaching, they had to go through a few basic training classes. There, they learned things such as how to give one on one help during class and how to teach a class in which the students spoke two different languages. One of the basic rules of the program was that they, as teachers, could not speak any language but English. This was very challenging, but according to the two, "it was definitely worth it."

Through their teaching experience, Erica and Jamila learned, among other things, the value of patience. As a result of their involvement in the program, they grew to realize that teaching is not easy, and they gained a greater appreciation for all of their WOHS teachers. Because English was the only language they could speak, they learned to choose their words carefully in order to "express themselves more clearly."

Jamila and Erica put a great deal of time and effort into helping their students learn English, but the benefits they personally reaped made their work worthwhile. "It was satisfying when the students finally learned," noted Jamila. Sometimes the students were even happier than their teachers at the completion of the class. "They were so grateful that we taught them, that some of them gave us presents," added Erica with a smile.

Both Jamila and Erica planned to continue working in this program after graduation. As for teaching as a future career, it was not what Jamila wanted to do. For Erica, however, her work in this program led her to believe that teaching is "definitely something to look into because it really does allow a person the opportunity to make a difference."

JUMPING INTO THE MIX

When the PBS series "In The Mix" came to WOHS in April of 1994 for Unity Day, most of us were genuinely excited about being on TV. A few of us took part in the taping, and some were even "stars for a day." By the next week, however, this event was long forgotten, forgotten by all except Jay Bhat. The presence of this crew at WOHS sparked a thought in him that perhaps he would like to work with them at PBS. That day, he talked to the senior producer of "In The Mix" about a possible summer internship. "He gave me a phone number and I sent them a resume. They liked it and asked me to come for an interview. After the interview, I was offered the job," Jay remembered. Before he knew it, Jay was on his way to working with a professional TV crew.

He worked every day during the summer, about 40 hours a week, at the PBS studios in New York City. There, he delivered tapes between buildings and did transcribing. More importantly, Jay got to watch the professionals at their jobs and sometimes assisted them. "I went out on some shoots and got to watch them edit," he explained.

There was no training required for his position. "They expected all the interns to have some technical background." However, just by watching the crews and working with them, Jay learned what it was really like to work in TV. "There were so many details that I had never even thought of before this job. For example, if I wanted to use just a bit of music, I had to go through a lengthy process of buying the rights," he noted. As a result of the internship, Jay gained valuable skills and knowledge that he put to good use in his work as the executive producer of WOHS TV 36 News. "By working at PBS, I learned things that I was able to pass on to my crew in Broadcast Journalism. Much of what I did for the show was a result of what I learned over the summer."

This experience gave Jay a taste of what his future might entail. He was considering a possible career in television and film production. If an offer does come his way, it's a sure thing that he will jump right into the mix.

INTERNATIONAL GOALS

Many teenagers are involved in athletics. Of these, a lot have chosen soccer as 'their' sport. However, most just play for their high school team or in a local league. Only a select few get the opportunity to play on an international level. One of these more fortunate athletes was Chris Garry, who, for two summers, traveled abroad with a team of 18 very talented soccer players from New Jersey and New York to compete against their European counterparts.

While playing for a local team, the Union Lancers, Chris's coach told him about this international soccer program. "He gave me the information. I tried out and made the team," Chris recalled. In 1992, he spent two weeks of the summer in Germany, playing against local teams. By the end of the eight games, his team proudly placed third out of ten in their age bracket. In 1994, Chris returned to Europe. This time he spent a week in Holland and a week in Denmark in a truly international competition against teams from all over Europe. On each trip, Chris and his teammates stayed in special "schools for soccer." Games were held in the morning or late afternoon, and the rest of the day was spent practicing, touring or building friendships with the other team members.

Chris had played soccer for several years before his European excursion, and from his experience he was able to note some major differences between American and European soccer. "It was a whole different style over there. They are much more serious about the sport," he noted. "A probable reason for this," he suggested, "was that there is less choice for kids in Europe. In the U.S., we can choose among football, baseball, soccer, lacrosse, wrestling and basketball. Because soccer is 'the' sport over there, they are better at a younger age."

Besides learning about the sport of soccer itself, Chris's trip to Europe helped him appreciate different cultures. By sharing experiences with his fellow soccer players, he was able to build lasting ties through a common interest, which Chris grew to realize, was the primary goal of this international program.

DAREDEVIL ON BOARD

When we were nine years old, most of us had our minds focused on how many Cabbage Patch Kids we had, who owned the complete Voltron, and whether or not Gargamel was going to catch Papa Smurf and his friends. When David Dowd was nine, he could most likely be found at the shore learning how to surf. We eventually outgrew our nine-year-old interests, but not David. His interests grew more intense over the years.

"My uncle started me surfing when I was little. I used to surf just about every day," recalled David. A few years later, he joined the NSSA, a national surfing association. "They sent me a newsletter that, among other things, announced local competitions held throughout the country." He entered a number of their competitions and placed high in most of them. During the summer, David practiced almost every day. When school started in the fall, he spent almost every weekend surfing, until the weather got too cold. "One year, I surfed into December," he remembered. He even went down to Florida during January to find warmer waters.

In eighth grade, David decided to transfer some of his surfing skills to a solid surface and began skateboarding. His talent shone once again when he entered skateboarding contests. David heard about most of the competitions from friends or store owners who sponsored them. "Once I went out to Arizona, but most of the time, I went to competitions in upstate New York," he explained. "One of the sponsors gave money to anyone who landed tricks on a set of steps. I won $100," he recalled proudly. However, perfect landings weren't always possible. David had his share of accidents. "I broke my foot one time and my elbow another time while skateboarding, but I never got hurt surfing," he added.

A concern for his health may be one of the reasons David believed his involvement in surfing would probably outlive that of skateboarding. However, whether it be on land or on water, with feet firmly planted on a board, this daredevil planned to stick with an interest he cultivated at the tender age of nine.

Sports thrive on spontaneous action. An athlete must be able to adjust to constantly changing situations. As seniors, this meant we no longer sat on the sidelines and fetched water for the upperclassmen. Finally, it was our turn to be the captains and leaders of each team.

The 1994-'95 seasons were filled with other notable changes. We saw the departure of a long-time football coach, Mr. Vanderhoof, along with the emergence of two new coaches, Mr. Emering and Mr. Sauter, on the football staff. Football season began on September 17, the earliest start ever, and there was no Thanksgiving game this year. Cindy Greenberg Reuter, the number one single's player on the 1986 WOHS State Champion tennis team, returned to her alma mater to coach the girls' tennis team. The baseball and softball teams opted for new pinstripe uniforms, and the soccer team also received new uniforms. In addition, a batting cage was constructed adjacent to the baseball field. Another notable development was the induction of track coach, Mr. Berry, into the West Orange Hall of Fame.

Our sports seasons will not soon be forgotten. The changes, from new equipment to new coaches, were significant. Each change added NEW DIMENSIONS to our athletic program.

REMARKABLE TURNAROUND — 4-5 Finish After 1-3 Start

Despite their tough start, the football team showed great signs of improvement under the guidance of Coach Mike Pizzi. After three consecutive losses against Wayne Valley, Delbarton and West Milford, the Mountaineers finished with a 4-5 record. However, this record does not reflect the players' hard work and determination. As Coach Emering stated, "This season was a challenging one, filled with many ups and downs." Senior outside linebacker Ernesto Alcalde added, "Although we didn't play up to our full potential, I think we came a long way and learned from our mistakes."

The team was led by tri-captains Charles Anokute, Tim Feeley and Nick Francos. They, along with seniors Joe Shin, Vinnie Matullo, Marc DeCongelio and Rashann Brown, provided the team with leadership. The highlight game of the season came on Homecoming, when all-conference fullback Mike Weiner scored three touchdowns and Andrew Dambreville's stellar defensive performance spurred the Mountaineers to a 28-23 victory over Lakeland.

In their final game, the Mountaineers upset highly-ranked Orange High School 10-6 and prevented them from playing in the state tournament. During this game, Weiner scored his eighth touchdown of the season. With the help of an 87 yard interception return for a touchdown by Alcalde, and Tim Feeley's 27 yard field goal, West Orange finished the season on a winning note. Emering concluded, "Learning to both win and lose with dignity, while at the same time giving a maximum effort is extremely important in life, hopefully, our guys learned this lesson." Coach Pizzi reflected, "The seniors turned the season around when things weren't going well and they turned a setback into a comeback. Every senior led through example, especially the tri-captains."

ONE FOR THE RECORDS

Boys Post 16-1 Season

The boys' cross country team had a tremendous run through the early nineties. Under the leadership of Coach Joseph Suriano, the boys capped their 1994 season by breaking a school record. Not only did they finish with their best record ever, the boys also posted a thrilling victory over their long-time rival, Delbarton, which had not lost a home meet since 1982. Captain Mitch Bodner recalled, "It was by far the most exciting meet."

The boys' team, led by Bodner, "found strength in their depth," noted Coach Suriano. The boys received over nine all-area honors. Those honored included Sam Chelnik, Raheem Townes, Arun Lukes, Darren Hamberlin and Seth Weisel. One notable recipient was junior Ritesh Lakahn, who placed in all of his invitational meets and received 1st team all-conference, all-area and all-county. Other standouts included sophomores Hamberlin and Weisel.

Although the girls' team did not break any records, they too had a successful season, ending with a record of 11-4. Led by co-captains Shannon McCormick and Lauren VanNatten, the girls ran their way to 11 wins and two all-conference honorable mentions. Senior Lauren Leach reflected, "The hard work and spirit of the girls is what I will miss most when I graduate." McCormick felt that the thing she would miss most was all of the friends that she made over the years. Coach Suriano lauded his runners, "We all worked extremely hard to accomplish all of our goals. The seniors were true leaders who led the team by example. They will surely be missed next year."

TURNING THE CORNER-

Girls Exceed Expectations

The 1994 girls' soccer team shattered the records of its predecessors. They finished the season with an 8-9-2 record, the best in the program's history. This young team was led by three seniors, who had each been a part of the soccer program for four years. Gina Vantuno, Cheryl Jones and Hannah Kim not only taught the younger players about the game, they also led by example everyday in practice and games. Vantuno led a solid defense, while Jones played an integral part in the team's offensive scheme. Freshman sensation Kari Slaane, who led the team in scoring, and sophomores Meghan McCormick and Lauren Rowand promised more of the same kind of leadership and winning for the future. Jones reflected, "Through my involvement in the soccer program I have grown in my leadership abilities and in my soccer skills under the coaching of Ms. Welter."

Part of the commitment to soccer required playing the game in the preceding spring and attendance at various summer camps. The girls willingly complied, and the results were gratifying to everyone. In fact, the underclassmen members of the team played on the West Orange travelling team which competed against other Northern Jersey schools and were Spring Division Champs. The program definitely turned the corner. Coach Welter's team not only delivered the best season in the history of West Orange girls' soccer, they also started a new tradition of winning seasons which will hopefully last for many years to come.

A SEASON OF HIGHLIGHTS For Skilled Booters

The 1994 boys' soccer season could be summed up in two words: skill and determination. The team finished the season ranked third in the Northern Hills Conference, and for the third year in a row was ranked in Essex County's Top Ten. The season consisted of highlight after highlight, but none was bigger than the game against Seton Hall. The Mountaineers beat their cross-town rivals in the first round of the county tournament. Senior Captain Mike Antonakas netted two goals in this thriller, one tied the contest with 20 seconds left in regulation, and the other sent the game into a shootout, where West Orange finally prevailed. "The Seton Hall game was the highlight of our season because we beat a rival school in nail biting fashion," remarked Chris Garry, a four-year member of the soccer program.

The 1994 soccer team was comprised of many players who possessed great individual talent. Antonakas led the team with 22 goals and received 1st team all-conference and 1st team all-county coaches' honors. Senior captains Adam Manger, who received 2nd team all-conference and 2nd team all-county coaches' honors, and Chris Greeley anchored a strong West Orange defense. Mike Farrell and Chris Garry split playing time in goal and earned honorable mention all-conference. The midfield was consistently patrolled by seniors Tony DiFabrizio, Jay Bhat, and up and coming sophomore Richard Schapiro. When the season concluded with an 11-7-3 record, it was clear that skill and determination had meshed together to produce a season of highlights.

NORTHERN HILLS CO-CHAMPS- Tennis Team Posts 18-8 Record

The girls' tennis team was accustomed to change. For the past four years, these athletes toiled under the leadership of three different coaches. Despite this instability, the players defied the odds and ended the season with an outstanding 18-8 record. Senior Aarti Nasta attributed the team's success to Coach Cindy Greenberg-Reuter, who, "helped bring the team together and kept us both physically and mentally fit." Reuter, a 1987 graduate of West Orange High School and first singles player on a team that finished ranked number one in the state, decided to coach the varsity tennis team after being the assistant coach at Rutgers University, where she starred at first singles.

The team was led by senior captain Amy Wertheimer, who maintained her second singles position since her sophomore year. She concluded her season with an individual record of 23-2. "It was great having Cindy as a coach. We needed a boost of confidence and a high level of discipline, and Cindy provided us with both." The first doubles team of Sari Lobbe and Jenny Clarke defeated all but two of their opponents. "I believe our success reflects the amount of time and dedication we put towards tennis," Lobbe remarked. Other starters included senior Aarti Nasta and her doubles partner Sayiwe Mulagha. Alyson Berowitz and Ara Tucker's strong singles' performances helped the Mountaineers earn the conference co-championship.

The girls defeated numerous highly-ranked teams such as West Milford and Columbia. The team also won the consolation round of the Essex County Tournament and qualified for states. "With the help of our seniors, we learned the greatest part of playing tennis was working together as a team," Tucker concluded.

HOOPSTERS MIX EXPERIENCE Finishing Strong at 14-9

This year's girls' basketball team registered the second most wins in the program's history. Their 14-9 record was good enough to propel them into the 10th position in Essex County and third place in the conference. The Mountaineers also qualified for the state tournament. The team was led by three senior captains, Cheryl Jones, Qianna White and Stephanie Rizzolo. Jones, a guard, was the Mountaineers' leading scorer, averaging 14 points per game. White and Rizzolo, both forwards, contributed to the team with their aggressive rebounding and defense. The two offensive standouts for the Mountaineers this season were Colette Canfield and Heidi Kindel. Canfield, a junior center, proved to be an offensive force, while Kindel, a sophomore point guard, was the Mountaineers' main playmaker. The disparity in experience, between the seniors and the rest of the team, caused early season problems for Coach Theobold. Jones commended her coach for bringing the team together. "Coach Theobold did a great job of blending the abilities and experience of the veterans with the young players." After the Mountaineers overcame their early season struggles, they came on very strong, and by the end of the season the Mountaineers were playing their best basketball in years.

There were many memorable moments for the Lady Mountaineers. Early in the season, they beat Millburn in a thriller by one point. The team also nearly upset two highly ranked teams, Livingston and Lakeland. "It was a tough season, but we continually showed our determination and we always prevailed," Coach Theobold concluded.

CLEARY CAPS CAREER

Nets 34 pts. in finale

This year's boys' basketball team finished the season with a disappointing 8-13 record. However, the Mountaineers were highly competitive in every game this season, except for one, and qualified for both the county and state tournaments. The highlight of the 1995 season took place at Livingston H.S., when the Mountaineers beat Nutley 65-62 in overtime to capture the Livingston Christmas Tournament Championship for the second straight year. The Most Valuable Player of the tournament was senior guard Dennis Cleary. Cleary, the Mountaineers' leading scorer and the team's lone senior, closed out his career with a 34 point performance against West Milford. It was an especially memorable game for him because he got a chance to introduce his mother to the crowd for a round of applause during a pre-game ceremony on Senior Day. Cleary was complemented by three juniors, Bryan Katz, Haleem Robinson and Jeff Harrington.

Robinson's best game came in a rout over Millburn. He was the primary ballhandler and usually guarded the opponents' quickest player. Katz led the Mountaineers over Bloomfield, when he totalled 20 points. Despite being only 6'1, he proved to be a capable rebounder. Harrington's best effort came against Linden when he scored 24 points. Other players who saw considerable playing time were Brandon Minde, Raheem Townes, Angel Acquino, Nick Rizzolo and Rashad Hobson.

The Mountaineers were at their competitive best at tournament time despite losing to Millburn in the Essex County Tournament and to a powerful Linden team in the state tournament. Against Millburn, Harrington led a 16 point comeback, only to have two Millburn free throws seal a win with eight seconds left. Brandon Minde had a season high 20 points against Linden, the number one seed in North Jersey, Group IV, Section 2.

CHEER DIVISION CHAMPS

Squad has Banner Year

Every Saturday morning during the fall sports season, there were two things that football fans could always count on: a great football game, and lots of spirit, led by the '94-'95 Varsity Cheerleaders.

This year's varsity cheerleading squad consisted of 18 girls, 11 seniors and seven juniors. Led by tri-captains Lindsay Farris, Melissa McManus and Michele Montuore, this spirited squad cheered for football, boys' and girls' soccer, boys' and girls' basketball and wrestling. At the same time they managed to practice regularly for their own competitions. "We practiced everyday until 5:00, and sometimes 6:00 P.M. Although the practices were sometimes long had hard, they were always fun," stated senior Jaime Zins. "These girls worked very hard," stated their Coach Deborah Pratkan. "They put in hours of hard work and it really paid off for them."

Their biggest pay off occurred on November 18, at the 1994 West Milford Cheerleading Competition. The girls competed against other squads from New Jersey in a cheer and then a dance competition. To no one's surprise, the girls became the 1994 Cheer Division Champions. They placed second in the dance competition, prompting Michele Montuore to confess, "It was a feeling that I and the rest of the girls will never forget." McManus added, "At every basketball game, I looked up at the banner in the gym that was made for us and all I could do was smile!"

After the winter sports season was over, the girls continued to practice for still another competition. This one was held at Great Adventure. Coach Pratkan concluded, "I never thought the girls would come this far, but they certainly deserved all of their recognition. This is going to be a very difficult squad to replace and I am going to miss them very much!"

FIRST-EVER COUNTY CHAMP Weiner leads Wrestlers

To be a member of an athletic team, one must practice hard and learn to be disciplined. This year's wrestling team embodied this philosophy. Every afternoon, one could find the wrestling team across the street at Pleasantdale working up a sweat. "Our boys worked extremely hard this year and you can tell by their results," stated Assistant Coach Gene Emering. The results were a 9-10 team record and stellar individual performances.

The team, led by four seniors, Mike Weiner, Ernesto Alcalde, Chris Greeley and Charles Anokute, won the first annual Mayor's Trophy match against Seton Hall and had four wrestlers advance to the Regions. They also entered the record books during the County Tournament when Mike Weiner became the first wrestler ever from West Orange High School to win a County Tournament. Alcalde also had a successful season, placing second at the District Tournament and moving on to the Region Tournament. Due to injury he could not compete, but sophomore Randy Abed and junior Brian Lieberman did advance to the Region Tournament.

"I was very pleased with all of our wrestlers' performances this year. I am especially proud of Mike Weiner. He accomplished his goal and I was proud to see him through his journey to reach it," stated Coach Forte. Weiner advanced to the Super Regions, where he won both of his matches. This moved him on to the State Tournament, which was held in Atlantic City. Weiner finished in the top twelve wrestlers in the 185 lb. weight class. "I never thought I would actually make it, but it was a dream come true! I will never forget the feeling of walking into the Convention Center knowing I was among the best!" stated Weiner.

SWIM TEAM'S PRICELESS GEM Leads Team to 6-9 record

There were many great individual performances turned in by the 1995 swim team, so one shouldn't be fooled by their record. They faced the loss of a number of talented seniors from the preceding year and a tough schedule. "We were faced with so many challenges that even I wasn't sure we would make it through them, but the team pulled together, finished 6-9 and turned in a few surprises," stated Head Coach Ed Jung.

Although their record may not have shown the hard work that was put in by each swimmer, the season certainly had its highlights. First, there were two thrilling victories during the dual meets, one over Madison and the other over Morris Knolls. Then, there were two county champions, co-captain Gretchen Price in the 200 free-style and co-captain Jamee Leffler in the 200 individual medley. Price also became the first female in Essex County to win seven consecutive individual county titles. "It was an honor to receive recognition for my achievements. I was just swimming to do my best. The honors just came along with it," stated Price.

Price made it to the state meet where she placed in both the 200 and 5000 freestyle events. Other swimmers who posted successful seasons were seniors Eric Araujo and Leslie Dorman, juniors Gina Erian and Cheryl Chang, and freshman Chris Drakeford. "I was surprised to see how many people did so well this year. As a team, we worked hard and our individual performances showed it. I am really going to miss everyone next year," expressed Leffler.

Jung concluded, "One thing is certain, we will never be able to fill the void left by Price and Leffler. All of the seniors will be missed." Gems get harder and harder to find these days.

TOUGH SEASON FOR SKATERS

Lone Win Over Ramapo

In 1994, the hockey team caught everybody's attention with a breakthrough season. Unfortunately, that team graduated a significant number of key seniors, and because of that, the 1995 team struggled throughout the season. Although the team was not as competitive as they would have liked to have been, the season was a success in other ways. After the departure of last year's exceptional skaters, players who had played primarily on the junior varsity team were pressed into action on the varsity level. The transition wasn't easy. The team got an early boost when first year walk-ons Adam Manger and Dan Madara, both seniors, showed tremendous effort during preseason tryouts. Madara was strong in goal, and at one point registered 51 saves in a game. Manger, a gritty player, was able to net two goals on the season. Another senior, Jesse Funk, also made important contributions to the team. He was one of the Mountaineers' main offensive weapons, as well as a team leader. Mike Megaro, a senior defenseman, not only contributed to the team with his solid defensive play, but he was also able to record six assists on the season. This year also saw the development of up and coming talent for the Mountaineers. Defensemen Marc Hefter, team captain Greg Gillman, and Matt Kutner, all juniors, provided West Orange hockey fans with something to look forward to in the future.

The 1995 hockey team's 1-22 record does not fully tell the story of their season. In many respects it was frustrating and disappointing, but at the same time the Mountaineers' effort and dedication were appreciated by West Orange fans. "Although we didn't have the best record, I know we still had a great season and I am really going to miss the team next year," remarked Funk.

TEAM CHAMPIONS Win Over 100 Medals

"Indoor track requires strength, stamina, patience and perseverance," stated Head Coach Joseph Suriano. He added, "An athlete is someone who is willing to make sacrifices in the pursuit of goals." The members of the 1995 indoor track team did just this and concluded the season by winning over 100 medals in competition.

"Our team had numerous standout athletes who helped make the season both memorable and unbelievable," Suriano said. The two most talented performers were seniors Andrew Dambreville and Darriea Pigott. Pigott, in the 55 meters, and Dambreville, in the high jump, won several invitational including the Group 3 State Championships and the Eastern States Championships. Other important contributors to the team championship included Mike Weinberg, Marcus Washington, Nick Makriannis, T.J. Legins, Sam Chelnik and Arun Luke. With their help, the boys' team was named Northern Hills Conference Champions. Pat Richardson, Ritesh Lakhan and Daniele Hobson also became individual conference champions.

Coach Suriano, regarded as one of the top track coaches in the area, proudly noted, "It is an honor to have individual champions at the conference, county and state levels, but I believe the highlight of the season came when we won the Conference Team Championships. It was truly a team effort."

UNDEFEATED BOWLERS Earn Alvine Coach Of the Year

Coming into the season, Coach Kevin Alvine had a great feeling about the season ahead of him. "The team appeared very competitive. We knew Vinnie Matullo would be an asset to the team." Coach Alvine's predictions were correct and the team even surpassed his expectations, recording a 13-0 record, the best record in school history.

The team was led by Matullo, whose first year proved to be a success. With his skill and bowling background, he felt at ease leading the team to 13 consecutive victories. "Matullo was an unbelievable part of our team. His brother, Joe Matullo, Joe Kennedy, Heather Malarik and James Castoro all contributed to an outstanding season," noted Alvine.

Being named Coach of the Year was an honor for Alvine, who readily contended, "I would never have been so successful if it weren't for the kids' determination. I will never forget Vinnie's 710 series. In his third game, he bowled nine strikes in a row!"

Other honors went to Matullo and Kennedy, first team all-conference, Joe Matullo, second team, and Malarik, honorable mention. Alvine concluded, "Knowing the conference banner will hang in the gym makes the season really special." Going undefeated and being selected for a prestigious award by your fellow coaches doesn't happen often to a coach. No doubt Alvine will remember this season for a lifetime.

My most memorable moment was when I made varsity as a sophomore and 1st team all Area.

— Qianna White

The reason I decided to play softball was because I love the competition.

— Jackie Carangelo

Demonstrating the proper follow through is standout Catherine Hildebrand.

Stretching for throw is firstbasemen Jenny Clarke. Clarke also saw time on the mound.

Coach Risse demonstrates proper outfield technique to Danielle Norman and others.

The Ace! Cheryl Jones.

Seniors: (standing) Cheryl Jones, Stephanie Rizzolo, Jenny Clarke (Kneeling) Catherine Hildebrand (sitting) Jackie Carangelo and Qianna White.

Catcher Qianna White blocks a low pitch.

Sports Shorts

I enjoy coaching track because an athlete has the opportunity to compete on many levels.

— Coach Suriano

My most memorable moment was competing in the Group Nationals — Over 50,000 watched.

— Andrew Dambreville

The greatest aspect of track is the high level of competition and meeting new people.

— Mike Weinberg

The reason I participated in track was to build my character and sportsmanship.

— Joe Shin

Gliding over the hurdles is Mike Weinberg.

In mid-throw is Joe Shin. Shin also threw the discus.

High Jump Champion Andrew Dambreville easily clears 6'8.

Coach Suriano and Andrew Dambreville

Seniors: Andrew Dambreville, Joe Shin, Coach Suriano, Robert Rountree, Arun Luke and Mitch Bodner.

Arun Lake takes a warmup lap.

Sports Shorts

I enjoy coaching track because it involves working with some of the most talented athletes in the school.

— Coach Minni

The greatest aspect of track is the ability to accomplish something on your own due to dedication and hard work.

— Darriea Piggot

My most memorable moment was making it to the State Sectional Tournament.

— Jamee Leffler

The reason I decided to run track was I enjoy knowing I can complete Suriano's workouts.

— Lauren VanNatten

Concentrating on her hurdling technique is Stephanie Walczak.

Gina Vantuno easily clears the bar. She competed in the high jump for two years.

On her Mark! State Champion Sprinter Darriea Piggot works on her start.

Coach Suriano and Darriea Piggot

Seniors: Darriea Piggot, Jamee Leffler, Gina Vantuno, and Coach Suriano.

Jamee Leffler works on her shot put release.

Sports Shorts

I enjoy coaching tennis because it is a sport of skills, strategy, wit and control.

— Coach Lesnik

The reason I decided to play tennis was that I liked the competitiveness involved in the sport.

— Danny Yi

The greatest aspect of tennis is the competition between members of the team.

— Mike I. Cohen

My most memorable moments were the intense matches against my teammates during practice.

— Dan Kwan

Employing a two-handed backhand is Danny Yi.

Charging the net is first-year performer Tim Devore.

Working on their doubles positioning are Boris Ioshpa and Carlos Perez.

Singles player Mike Cohen.

Seniors: Dan Kwan, Tim Devore, Coach Lesnik, Michael Cohen and Danny Yi.

Perfect forehand form from Dan Kwan.

Sports Shorts

I enjoy coaching golf because it has become my passion and I like teaching my players to enjoy it as much as I do.

— Coach Belcours

The reason I decided to play golf was I like competing with other schools and playing in the tournaments.

— Joey Larice

My most memorable moment was playing my first match at Baltra-saul.

— Garret Nathan

The greatest aspect of golf is always practicing if you are going to participate in this sport.

— Pat Dillon

Full extension on the swing by David Paul.

Completing a full swing on an iron shot is Steve Berrebi.

Coach Belcoure assists Joey Larice with the proper grip as team members look on.

Nick Allegro

Senior: Joseph Larice and Coach Belcoure.

Checking the club shaft is Andrew Walk.

MOUNTAINEER

Advertising is the staple of the business world, a world which is generally in another dimension for most teenagers. However, anyone who wanted to work on the yearbook staff had to go boldly into this new dimension. The staff faced a formidable task, to produce an award-winning yearbook that covered every facet of senior year for its graduates. The cost of performing this task, roughly $30,000, was generally overlooked by most seniors. To make the yearbook affordable, the yearbook staff prevailed on parental and community support. The staff worked tirelessly to sell patrons, advertisements and senior personals. Each member became a salesperson and had to solicit ads, in person, around town, which generally required several trips to each business in order to meet with the owner or manager to secure an ad.

In 1995, the staff raised over $13,000 in patrons and ads. We need to thank the community for supporting our endeavors to fund the yearbook. Our parents supported us throughout high school and also contributed generously to the advertisement section of this yearbook. We can never thank them enough. Finally, we'd like to thank our school secretaries, Mrs. Snyder and Mrs. Dalgauer for their help, along with the many others who were there for us as we wound our way through the NEW DIMENSIONS of our senior year.

Dear Sari,
 Congratulations to you and the Class of '95.

I can't believe that this adorable little girl has now grown into this beautiful young lady. You have worked very hard these last four years and have accomplished all that you set out to do. Soon you will be walking down a new path — college, and we know once again you will make us very proud. Don't ever be afraid to reach for your dreams . . . We wish you health, happiness, and success. Remember we will always be there for you,

Love Mom, Dad, and Jonathan ('05)

Dear Rich,

On this special occasion,
we offer you the key to success and happiness:

Aim high.
Work hard.

Enjoy your accomplishments — you've earned them.
Accept your failures and move ahead — no one is perfect.
Rely on those who love you and support them in return.
Above all, be true to yourself and don't forget to take time to kick back and enjoy life.

Congratulations!!!

"To laugh often and much; to win the respect of intelligent people and the affection of children; to earn the appreciation of honest critics and endure the betrayal of false friends; to appreciate beauty; to find the best in others; to leave the world a bit better, whether by a healthy child, a garden patch or a redeemed social condition; to know even one life has breathed easier because you have lived. This is to have succeeded."

— Emerson

Congratulations, Jen, on a great year!

ALEXIS VICTORIA,

IF YOUR MOTHER AND I COULD TURN BACK TIME,
WE WOULD DO SO, NOT TO REGAIN YOUR YOUTH; BUT TO REPEAT THOSE 17 MOST PRECIOUS YEARS WITH YOU.

WE CANNOT. SO ALWAYS REMEMBER THAT YOU HAVE GIVEN US A WEALTH OF MEMORIES THAT WILL SUSTAIN US AS WE SHRIVEL AND DIE.

JUST IN CASE, YOUR MOTHER IS JOINING A PSYCHIC HOTLINE AND I WILL GET A CHIA PET.

WE LOOK FORWARD TO YOUR GRADUATION WITH PRIDE

Dear Maria,

Never feel guilty about having warm
human feelings toward anyone.
We learn simply by the exposure of living. Much that passes for education is not education at all — but ritual. The fact is that . . . We are being educated when we know it least.

I love you!

Kwan • Madara • Matullo • Shin

In 20 years . . .

Feeley: After modeling tight jeans for a year, Feeley was fired and since then he's been a State Trooper.

Shin: After two years of pro football, Joe quit and found it was more fun making sandwiches at the family deli and hanging out with Artie Miller.

Kwan: After dropping out of medical school, Kwan returned to McDonalds and at 37 years old, became the first Asian Manager.

Devore: After watching a Beavis and Butt-head episode, he got the idea of robbing a bank. He's now facing up to 5 years in prison.

Decongelio: Marc liked driving people around so much that he decided to become a chauffeur and drive a limo.

Matullo: Vin joined the Mafia and he has just bought out the Eagle Rock Bowling Lanes, with his friend William Roberts.

Madara: ZZZZZZZZZZ (still in Hibernation)
MFP: Still at G.P.I. parking lot, deciding on somewhere to go.

Never to be answered . . .

Will Feeley's Audi ever get a new paint job?
Why does Kwan always wear ties?
Who's driving home?
Will we ever see Joe Shin's brother?
Does Vin have any boxing skills?
Is Feeley really a spy for MFP?
Why can't Vin ever sleep over?
Is Madara always sleeping?

Does Joe really have a deli?
Feeley, where's your boy?
Will Kwan ever buy new socks?
Do Madara's parents love Sunny more than him?
Decongelio, where's your cooler?
Does Shin wear the same Michigan T-shirt everyday?
Will we ever be invited inside Vin's house?
What color is Devore?
Does Vin really know William Roberts?

"A friend is someone who changes your life by being a part of it, someone who makes you laugh until you can't stop, someone who makes you believe that there really is good in the world. This friendship is forever . . ."

*TO ALL OUR PARENTS:
We love you all and we couldn't have done it w/o you all.*

Aarti, Adrienne, Lena, Rabia

Being with people for four years is a very strange experience. You go into high school and people you never knew become like sisters after only four years. What happened here? We don't know. ... A Lifetime's Not Too Long To Live As Friends.

"Like a knight in shining armor" you took "my breath away". "You are my sunshine". "Lying there beside you" is the best place to be. It feels so warm and secure. If you "look into my eyes, you will see, what you mean to me". "Do I have to say the words", or do you realize just how very much I love you? I promise! Who would have thought that an arm wrestling contest and a date to see "Point of No Return" would lead to all that it has. We've been through so much; we stumbled, but we never fully lost our footing. Never forget crying to "Homeward Bound", nor all the happy tears which have been shed; those smiles, nor the looks saved especially for each other. Never forget Lucky or Baby Doll; "Stop tickling me!"; "That's my spot!"; "Mine!"; "Say hello"; "Mad About You". Never forget 12:04 am. There are so many more memories...
