Bamm Hollow seeks OK for 32 units

By RANDY BRAMEIER
THE REGISTER

MIDDLETOWN — Owners of the Bamm Hollow Golf & Country Club, a focal point in an open space-development issue, will seek final approval Wednesday to build 32 condominiums.

But the Planning Board could delay or thwart the development if it determines the plan features "significant changes."

Developers Harry Kantor, Frank DiMisa and Victor Losquadro propose to build up to 215 units on 275.8 acres west of the Garden State Parkway. They bought the land for $16.3 million in January 1986.

Board members granted preliminary approval Sept. 17 to their corporation, Whispering Woods at Bamm Hollow. Three months earlier, the board had denied a version of the request.

Faith S. Hahn, executive director of the Planning Department, said yesterday the board will have to decide if the plan includes major changes — and therefore merits submission of a new preliminary application.

Board members will consider the issue, and other applications, at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday in Township Hall, Kings Highway and Route 35.

Hahn, in a June 11 memo to the board, said, "The final plans submitted appear to have several substantial areas of inconsistency with the plans granted preliminary approval."

Original plans called for a 32-unit development on the section, one of four designated. Developers, however, proposed 33 units. Developers recently reverted to the 32-unit plan.

Hahn said the developers apparently relabeled Section I of plan as Section II in the second version.

"If the applicant intends to alter the Sectionalization and Staging Plan from that granted preliminary approval, a revised plan should be presented and amended preliminary approval required by the applicant," she said in the memo.

Each section of the proposed development would require final approval as well.

Paul D. Drobbin, lawyer, said the plan does not veer from the earlier scheme.

According to plans filed with planners, the 32 units would go on a 20.3-acre section in the northern part of the tract, north of Sunnyside Road.

A 27-hole golf course occupies the area. Drobbin said the first of four phases of construction would leave the course unaltered; developers would reduce the course to 18 holes later. Overall, 80 percent of the area would remain as open space.

N.J.'s rail proposal 'pathetic' — county

FREEHOLD — The Monmouth County Board of Freeholders yesterday condemned as short-sighted and misdirected a state report recommending construction of a Lakewood-Red Bank commuter rail line.

"The kindest adjective which I can use to describe these results is "pathetic,"" said county Freeholder John D'Amico Jr.

D'Amico yesterday delivered copies of the state Department of Transportation report to the Board of Freeholders, all of whom said the recommendation virtually ignores the rapidly developing area of western Monmouth and Middlsex counties.

The recommendation comes in a report designed to address transportation needs in Monmouth, Middlesex and Ocean counties into the middle of the next decade, and was released Wednesday night.

The proposed commuter rail service would use the Southern Branch freight line and add new stations in Lakewood, on I-195 in Howell, and in the Eatontown-Tinton Falls area.

The recommendation renewed calls yesterday for a meeting among Eatontown, county and state officials to discuss what the county feels to be a severe, potential commuter problem in the western portion of the county and the already congested highways in

Monmouth planners delay Navy fuel-tanks decision

FREEHOLD — Monmouth County planners yesterday declined to recommend a location for the proposed Navy fuel tanks at Naval Weapons Station, Earle, deciding instead to await the results of a Navy study.

The decision was accepted yesterday by the county Board of Freeholders, which had solicited a recommendation.

County Planning Director Robert W. Clark said his staff was unable to agree Wednesday on six proposed "likely" sites in the Belford and Leonardo sections of Middletown on the Navy base.

He advised the freeholders to await the results of a Navy environmental impact statement before making a judgment.

"After review of the study in the fall, staff will have a clearer understanding of the alternatives and will review again," Clark said in a report to the freeholders.

Assistant Environmental Planner Richard J. Roedner in a memo to Clark said he reviewed six sites the Navy considers most likely to recieve the fuel tanks, but that he also advised awaiting the study.

"The details for many of the sites are vague at this time," Roedner wrote. "The Navy is at an exploratory stage and weeding out the unfeasible options."

Roedner said that, of the six sites, the ideal site would be a waterfront area just east of the pier. He added, however, that the area may have to be discounted because it is comprised mostly of wetlands.

Other sites include vacant land adjacent to the Belford landfill containing an old airstrip and hangar; a Navy softball field; the Chapel Hill area on Navy property; a site just inland from the Chapel Hill area; and a Navy buoy storage area at the base of the pier.

The Navy last year backed off constructing the tanks near a residential area in Belford when residents vocally opposed the tanks, and since has asked local and county groups to recommend alternatives.

FREEHOLD — The skeletal remains of a body believed to be a young, black female have been recovered near where the skull was found last week, officials said yesterday.

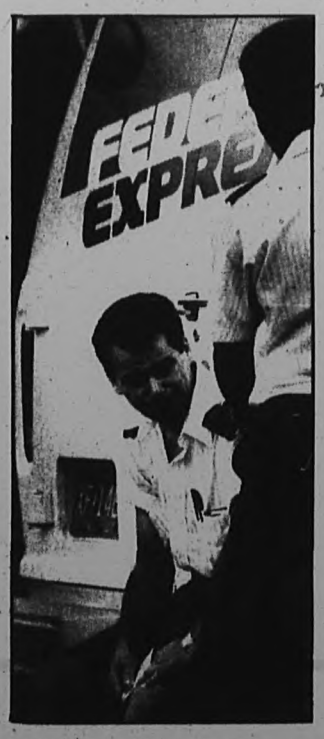

A spokeswoman for the Monmouth County Prosecutor's Office said the remains were found Wednesday, partially wrapped in a blanket, at the Cream Ridge Golf Club in Upper Freehold Township.

The skull was found near a water trap on the golf course on Friday, leading to the search.

County and state investigators are continuing efforts to identify the body through dental records, the spokeswoman, Donna Diglio, said.

DEAL — Two men, one from Long Branch and the other from Aberdeen, were injured critically yesterday when a Federal Express van ran a stop sign and broadsided their vehicle, police said.

The accident occurred at 3:54 p.m. at the intersection of Jerome and Ocean avenues, Patrolman David Phillips said.

Police gave the following account:

Stewart L. Penn of Long Branch was traveling north on Ocean Avenue when the van driven by Joseph R. Puorro, Manalapan, hit Penn's 1986 Subaru station wagon. Puorro was issued a summons on charges of failing to stop at a stop sign.

Penn and his passenger, Gerald Penn, were being treated last night at Monmouth Medical Center, Long Branch. Puorro was treated and released.

What's in their name?

MIDDLETOWN — Township Committee members pledged last night to study the possible name change of the East Keansburg section of the municipality.

A special hearing last night, featuring 150 to 200 residents in High School South, focused on the possible name change of the northwest-bayshore section of the township.

The name debate pits two factions: that of residents seeking to change the image of the area, or improve mail service, and that of old-time residents who pointed to pride in the name East Keansburg.

Renaming East Keansburg has precedent. Residents said the area has carried the name Ideal Beach, Ocean Park, Phillips Mill and Beacon Gardens.

"I don't think they should take our history and tradition away," Edward McGrath, a 40-year resident, said.

But Vince Stripto, a supporter of the change, said: "If the majority (of East Keansburg) residents want to change the name, it seems to me in our society that we ought to be entitled to that."

Residents complained of slow mail delivery, especially when the

TELSTAR was earthly delight

HOLMDEL — Today is the 25th anniversary of the first American satellite television transmission, one of the reasons we live in a small world.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s TELSTAR project was one of the initial steps toward an amazing, although now taken-for-granted, technology that dramatically expanded communications. Thanks in part to TELSTAR, we now can receive clear television signals from Seoul, South Korea or telephone calls from Paris, France.

> I got an invitation to the first television transmission. It sure was a moving experience. People cheered and jumped up and down and hugged each other.
> Al McRae
> AT&T lab director

TELSTAR, launched July 10, 1962, at Cape Canaveral, Fla., was designed to relay television signals across the Atlantic Ocean. It worked until the following February when some of its 1,000 transistors were damaged.

TELSTAR beamed a television signal picturing an American flag from Andover, Maine, to France and Great Britain.

The signal was sent shortly after Vice President Lyndon Johnson received the first satellite telephone call from AT&T Chairman Fred Kappel.

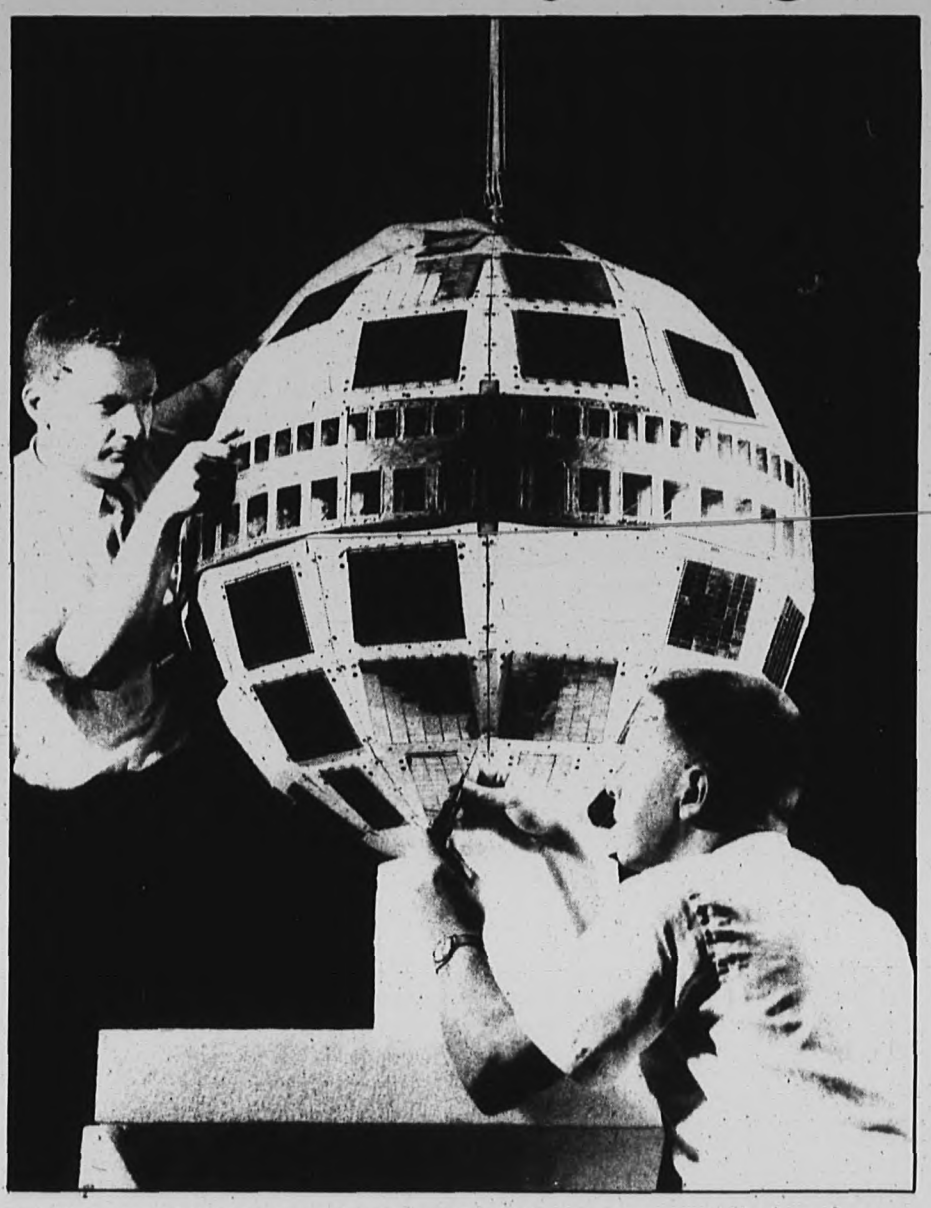

It was the culmination of the efforts by 400 AT&T employees, some of whom were working here on advanced antenae to receive the signals. Without those antennae, neither transmission would have been possible, said Al McRae, who was a young engineer at the time of the transmission.

These antennae were developed here, mostly at the Crawfords Hill site on Holmdel Road.

"Antennae were key to the early satellite work," said McRae, who is now the director of the Satellite Communications Lab at AT&T.

"A lot of things had to fit in place," said McRae.

He said work done in Holmdel, Whippany and Murray Hill contributed to the success of the project.

READY TO MAKE HISTORY — This 1962 AT&T photograph shows engineers working on the original TELSTAR, whose modest beginning helped pave the way for the communications revolution that we virtually take for granted now.

The antenna used in Andover weighed 380 tons and was 177 feet long, said McRae. There were two similar antennae, one in Goon Hilly Downs, Great Britain, the other in Pleumeur-Bodou, France.

"I got an invitation to the first television transmission," McRae said. "It sure was a moving experience. People cheered and jumped up and down and hugged each other."

Today, 50 satellites are used in the Western Hemisphere, three of which are owned by AT&T and are still called TELSTAR, McRae said.

The first satellite was halted within a year, he said, but it served its purpose as "a lab in the sky."

"It showed such communications were possible and viable," said McRae.

The satellite, still in orbit, weighed 170 pounds and was 34 inches in diameter.

"You could put your arms around it," McRae said.

The first TELSTAR was slightly different than today's satellites. The TELSTAR 3 satellites, launched during 1983 to 1985, are 20 feet high and 6 feet in diameter, McRae said.

TELSTAR 2 showed the first satellite "news event," said McRae, a 1963 broadcast of Winston Churchill's funeral.

Research in Holmdel also was instrumental in developing the antennae the public uses for television reception, McRae said.

Antenna research led to a Nobel Prize awarded to Arno Penzias, he said.

Penzias was working on antenna research, when he formulated the "big-bang theory" of the universe's creation, said McRae.

Arsonist put into therapy

ABERDEEN — A township man who recently pleaded guilty to setting more than 50 fires in the area will be sentenced July 17.

Until then, he has been placed in a mental-health program, according to township and county officials.

Aberdeen Detective Sgt. Joseph J. Booket said yesterday that Patrick Barrett, 21, of Carol Lane, pleaded guilty to one count of arson and 57 counts of criminal mischief before state Superior Court Judge Laurence Stamelman.

The arson charge stemmed from a Feb. 15 incident in which the boat of a Matawan resident was set afire and the criminal mischief counts are based on a series of smaller fires, Booket said.

Barrett has been placed in the mental-health program at Riverview Medical Center at least until his sentencing, said Monmouth County Prosecutor John Kaye.

The arson investigation resulting in the county accusations against Barrett was conducted by Booket in Aberdeen and Fred Dispensiere of the prosecutor's office after Barrett had been arrested by township police on an unrelate charge.

Investigators said Barrett was arrested on charges of breaking into N.J. Bell Telephone Co. trucks, which law enforcers had staked out on Feb. 15. A number of dumpsters as well as the boat had been set afire around that time, Aberdeen District II Fire Chief Allen E. Falk, said.

The stakeout was organized by firemen and off-duty policemen after tracks were found in the snow near one of the fires, Falk said.

Barrett was caught breaking into the trucks at the N.J. Bell property on Route 34 near Lloyd Road, by Fire Dept. Lt. George Sisti, Falk said. Sisti detai[illegible] Barrett and called on his em[illegible]ncy radio for assistance.

Firemen organized the stakeout because 50 to 70 fires, mostly in dumpsters or other trash receptacles behind stores and housing complexes, had been reported to police in a four-week period.

All the fires, Aberdeen Det. Kenneth Wicklund had noted at the time, had been set after 9 p.m. within a 1½-mile radius around the Route 34 area.

No injuries or major property damage had resulted from the fires, according to several sources.

Clenaghan resigns from 2 posts

KEANSBURG — The Borough Council is expected to appoint a replacement for Joseph Clenaghan, who is expected next week to resign his positions with the Board of Adjustment and the Hazlet/Middletown/Keansburg Joint Flood Control Commission.

In a letter to the council this week, Clenaghan stated that he is moving to Tennessee and officially will step down from his position on the zoning board July 15, said Michael Carlo, board chairman.

Carlo said Clenaghan, who was appointed to a three-year term on the board in 1985, "worked hard" for the borough and will be missed.

His resignation from the flood-control commission will take effect Aug. 1. He was appointed to a three-year term on the commission earlier this year.

Borough Clerk Luke Shields said the council will meet later this month to decide who will fill Clenaghan's one-year unexpired on the board and three-year unexpired term on the commission.

Investments should be individualized

FREEHOLD — Saving and investing plans should be tailored to the individual investor, according to Dr. Sylvia F. Griffin, Ed.D., a home economist for the Rutgers Cooperative Extension of Monmouth County.

Every type of saving or investment plan carries some risk factor, points out Denise M. Matejic, a Rutgers specialist in family resource management. Choosing the right approach to one's situation will make the difference between financial success and financial failure. For most families, a prudent financial plan calls for establishing security in fixed-dollar savings plans before assuming flexible investments.

Risks that any individual or family can afford to assume depend on age, income bracket, goals, and temperament. For example, a young person who has many years in which to accumulate a retirement fund may choose a flexible investment, with growth potential in the form of common stocks or mutual funds shares. Although safety of capital and return are not guaranteed, these factors are less important because of the long time period before retirement and possibility of future gain.

The nation

Severe thunderstorm watches were posted across the north-central United States on Thursday, while the East Coast wilted in a summer stew of high heat and humidity.

Storms pelted lower Michigan with hail up to half an inch in diameter Thursday afternoon. In Kent County, Mich., three-fourths of an inch of rain fell in five minutes while winds gusted to 50 mph.

Earlier, heavy rains and hail struck the nation's midsection, flooding streets in Clarinda, Iowa, with four feet of water and trees were uprooted by a thunderstorm in Blue Mound, Ill.

Severe thunderstorm watches were posted Thursday in parts of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska. A tornado watch was in effect for parts of the Dakotas.

Portions of northeastern Pennsylvania and Philadelphia were under a flash flood watch as afternoon rains exceeded 2 inches, and flash flood warnings were issued near Houston where bayou water was rising rapidly after up to 5 inches of rain in the morning. Another inch of rain fell at Houston's Hobby Airport in the afternoon.

People living in the sizzling strip from New York to Washington were advised to take it easy to avoid heatstroke as temperatures hovered in the 90s with high humidity.

Tucson, Ariz., had a record low of 68 degrees Thursday morning. It was the fourth record set or tied for a low in five days in Tucson, which also had a 32-day streak of temperatures of 100 or more.

For Friday, the National Weather Service predicted scattered showers and thunderstorms across much of the eastern half of the nation and into the northern Plains.

School-vote inquiry ends; ruling set

By DAVID GUEST
THE REGISTER

MATAWAN — The judge hearing charges of improper voting procedures in the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District elections April 7 said yesterday that his decision will be issued by September.

Administrative Law Judge Joseph Lavery set the deadline after the fourth and last session of the inquiry on behalf of James Smith and Hy Rosenberg, who had run as write-ins for two Aberdeen seats on the regional school board.

Rosenberg and incumbent J. Douglas Scott won the election, while Smith followed with one vote fewer than Scott and one more than incumbent Ardis Kisenwether. Smith then requested the inquiry and a recount.

Three people testified at earlier sessions that they had tried to cast write-in votes, but poll workers refused to help. Workers called to the stand, however, said they had helped all who asked.

Rosenberg joined the inquiry after the state upheld the May 1 recount, which cost the write-ins 165 votes and awarded Rosenberg's board seat to Kisenwether.

Lavery accepted into the record yesterday about 30 affidavits from people whose votes had been voided in the recount. At least 11 voters charged that when they tried to choose Smith and Rosenberg, poll workers told them to write both men's names in one voting-machine slot.

Such votes were disqualified in the recount on the grounds that two slots, one for each name, should have been used. Voters who used only one slot, county School Business Administrator Edward Miklus said after the recount, could select both write-ins and a balloted candidate as well.

Louis N. Rainone, the write-ins' attorney, rested his case on the affidavits. Attorney Andrew DeMaio, representing the school district, called to the stand one poll worker from each of three of the four Aberdeen polling places, the Cliffwood, Strathmore and Lloyd Road schools. No one who voted at Matawan Regional High School said in an affidavit that poll workers had told them to use one write-in slot, said DeMaio.

The three poll workers all testified that they did not issue such instructions and did not hear any other workers do so.

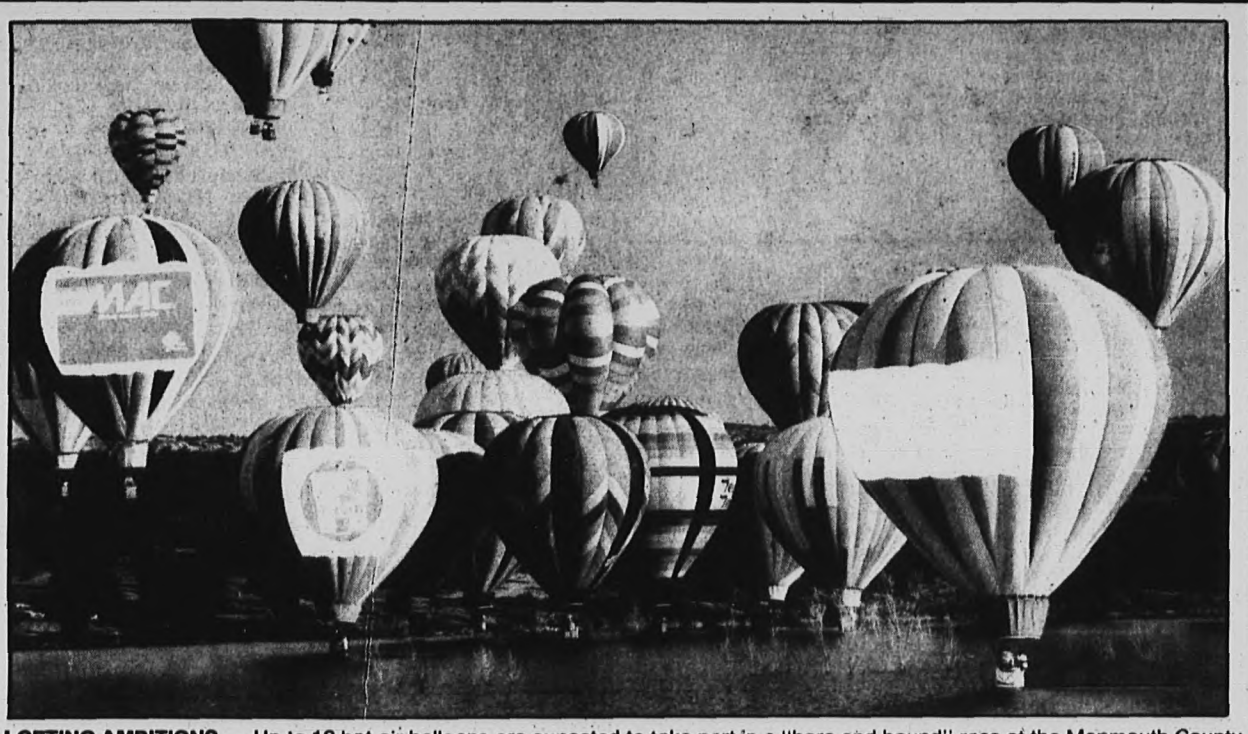

Cliffwood worker Carol McCoy said, "If they had asked me where to put the names I would have said 'In the first two slots.'"

Her testimony contradicted an affidavit in which one voter, Bernadette Ramsey, had said, "The poll worker instructed me to write in the names of the two candidates in the first slot ... I followed the poll worker's instructions."

Both attorneys were given until next Friday to submit their final statements in writing, and until July 22 for each to respond to the other's statement. After that, Lavery must submit his decision within 45 days, or by Sept. 5. The state Administrative Law Commissioner's office then has another 45 days, until Oct. 20, to make any recommendations.

A new election, said Matawan-Aberdeen Board Secretary Bruce Quinn, could cost roughly $700 or more when all costs — 16 poll workers at $32 each, rental of four voting machines at $37 each, and the election's advertising and clerical costs — are added up.

LOFTING AMBITIONS — Up to 10 hot-air balloons are expected to take part in a "hare and hound" race at the Monmouth County Fair, or so race organizers hope. To be run Wednesday, July 22, and Thursday, July 23, the race is sponsored by Central Jersey Bank and Trust Co.

'Hare and Hound' race takes off July 22

FREEHOLD — This year's Monmouth County Fair will feature something new — a "Hare and Hound" hot-air-balloon race.

The race will be held 5-7 p.m., Wednesday, July 22, and Thursday, July 23, at the Freehold Park Show Grounds.

Sponsored by the Central Jersey Bank and Trust Co., the race will be the fair's first balloon run.

"We anticipate flying 10 balloons from the fair-grounds site," Paul Willie, the race coordinator, said. "In a Hare and Hound race, the Hare — or lead balloon —takes off first and lands where the wind takes it. The pilot then lays out a large target."

"The Hounds — or following balloons, will pursue the Hare approximately 10 minutes later," he continued. "The Hounds will attempt to get as close over the target as they can and drop a bean bag on or near the target."

The balloons measure 60 to 70 feet in height and will be flying at altitudes of 2,000 feet or less.

Central Jersey is sponsoring the race to promote its automated teller machines (ATMs) system, linked to the MAC and international Plus System networks. In addition to having 20 Central Jersey bank MAC machines, the bank owns and operates another 50 ATMs at selected 7-11 convenience stores throughout Central Jersey.

Stranded Monmouth Civic Chorus members who were up in the air about flight plans for a concert tour to Europe 24 hours ago, should have their feet on the ground — in England, to be exact — today.

The chorus members, whose plans for an 8:15 p.m. flight out of John F. Kennedy Airport Tuesday night were thwarted because of electrical problems on their plane, Air India Flight 104, reportedly were England-bound yesterday morning. The airline arranged for accommodations for the touring singers at the Penta Hotel, New York, when it was obvious Tuesday night that repairs to the disabled 747 jet would take more than an hour or two.

Marian B. Mearns of Ocean, whose husband Al is tour co-ordinator, said Wednesday that the latest word they had was that they would be air bound at 10 p.m., Wednesday.

Evidentally, that did not happen, and they spent a second night at the hotel.

But not last night.

Vincent Sciabarassi of the Penta Hotel tour and travel department said yesterday that the more than 100 chorus members left the hotel between 7 and 8 a.m. yesterday.

His information corresponded with what Frank Mack of Ocean Grove, whose wife Barbara was among the stranged singers, knew yesterday.

"She called me last (Wednesday) night, about 11 o'clock, and said they were supposed to take off 10:30 this (Thursday) morning," Mack said yesterday. "If they did not take off, she would have phoned me. I have not heard anything today," he added.

"She said had they not gotten off this (Thursday) morning, they would have missed their first performance in Salisbury (England) Cathedral," Mack continued. That performance, an informal concert, was scheduled for noon today, England time. It is the first of a two-week concert tour through England, Scotland and Wales, which ends July 21.

"The story was that the airplane had to be towed two miles, to Pan Am, who had the only people who could repair the electrical work that had to do with that 'Mickey Mouse' light." The "Mickey Mouse" light he referred to was the warning in the cockpit that canceled Tuesday night's takeoff.

"Meanwhile, they were having a ball," he continued.

Mearns said Wednesday that chorus members amused themselves throughout the day by shopping and visiting museums in the city.

Mack assumed yesterday that the Air India jet on which they were scheduled to fly was repaired.

Green Acres bid by Eatontown gets Gagliano nod

WEST LONG BRANCH — State Sen. S. Thomas Gagliano, R-Monmouth, says he supports Eatontown's application for state Green Acres funds to buy two tracts.

One parcel, Gagliano said, lies adjacent to Eighty Acres Park on Parker Road. The second is next to Wampum Lake Preserve, which fronts on Route 35. Both would be used to expand open spaces and recreational facilities

"Eatontown is a densely populated municipality that includes an army base within its boundaries," Gagliano wrote to Jane M. Farrell, an administrator with the state Green Acres Program. "Anything that can properly be done to preserve these open areas would be extremely beneficial to residents of northeastern Monmouth County," the letter stated.

Gagliano said he hopes the state decides for Eatontown. A decision could be made and the funds granted, he added, by the end of the year.

Eatontown officials hope to acquire the parcels to preserve open space and recreation area in the borough.

Efficiency of senior-citizen complex eyed

By KENISTON W. TRAINOR
THE REGISTER

HAZLET — A township committeeman has called for a meeting with the owners of the Middle Road Village senior-citizens complex to discuss ways to improve efficiency at the center.

Committeeman Paul A. Stallone issued a press release this week questioning why CIB International in Little Ferry, owner of the complex, is not adding more names to the waiting list for apartments and why some apartments remain vacant.

Deborah Donofrio, a CIB vice president, said yesterday that the firm stopped accepting names on their waiting list due to regulations from the federal Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, which helped finance the center.

"You can't have more than 150 people on the list," Donofrio said. "I had over 300 names on the list before HUD informed me that I had too many people on the list."

Donofrio said the reason many apartments remain vacant is because it takes an average of 30 to 60 days to contact applicants from the 2½-year waiting list and to process the necessary forms.

"It is not an easy process," Donofrio said. "We send letters and try to contact the people by phone, but often they are difficult to get ahold of. Some are deceased, some are disabled and are in nursing homes."

Mayor Henry Pekarsky said yesterday that he sympathized with CIB's problems in tracking people, but suggested the firm attempt to contact the top 10 people on the list in advance of openings to cut vacancy time.

"I hate to see an empty apartment when there's so many people on the waiting list," Pekarsky said.

Deputy Mayor Martin Marino said Donofrio was "very receptive to suggestions" when he met with her at the complex a few months ago to discuss a proposed rent increase.

Marino said the best way to eliminate the problem would be to "update the waiting list to eliminate those who are not interested."

Herbert Kupfer, who was the Hazlet mayor when the complex was built, said last night that the best way for the township to control the project is to go to bonding and purchase the complex.

"I honestly think the township should make a bid to buy it," Kupfer said. "An outside firm is going to make money and you can't blame them."

Citizens council supports Long Branch club's quest

By ALICE GALLAGHER

LONG BRANCH — The North End Community Council has joined the Long Branch Community Club in efforts to change a legal technicality that prevents the club from obtaining a loan.

What is called a reverter clause stipulates that the property, located on Long Branch Avenue in the northern section of the city, reverts back to the city if the organization is disbanded and or if the land is sold.

That clause is preventing the group from obtaining a loan for renovations.

"We applied for a loan, but the bank refused because the reverter clause is like a lien against the property," Milton Beaver, president of the 39-year-old club, said.

Beaver has appeared before the City Council a few times to request the release, but the council has taken no action.

> We applied for a loan, but the bank refused because the reverter clause is like a lien against the property.
>
> Milton Beaver
> President, Long Branch Community Club.

Eugene A. Somma, president of the North End citizens organization, sent Mayor Philip Huhn a letter Tuesday supporting the club's request.

Beaver said the club purchased the property from the city in 1963 for about $100, but members were unaware of the clause. Since 1962, clubs members have made numerous improvements at the site including filling in swampland to make a ballfield and fencing in the property.

The club would like to construct a new building and raise the soil of one of the ballfields by about 12 inches, which Beaver said would be "quite expensive."

The sidewalk surrounding the field on the southern end of the property, he explained, is higher than the soil, and flooding occurrs during rainstorms.

"Sometimes it's so deep out there, that the ducks dive under and you can't see them," Beaver added.

Two councilmen, including Phillip Hayes, have opposed the request.

"That property is now worth a few million dollars," Hayes said. "If the reverter clause came off, the city would have no financial interest in the property and anyone could buy it and develop it."

But Beaver stressed that club members support the acquisition of open space and would not sell the land.

Condominium report on tap

By ALICE GALLAGHER
THE REGISTER

LONG BRANCH — City Council President Frank Pallone Jr. has asked the Planning Dept. to give a report Tuesday on the proposed condominium development in the city and its impact on municipal services and taxes.

Pallone is seeking an inventory of pending applications and those developments expected to be constructed within the next year. He has asked the department to determine the tax ratables that will be generated, the number of new residents expected, and what effect the influx will have on traffic, schools and other services.

"The most frequent question I am asked is why the condominiums constructed in Long Branch during the last few years have not resulted in a decreased tax rate," Pallone said. "The simple answer is that there are not enough of them to make a difference, but I would like to know whether future construction is likely to alter this situation as some city officials have suggested."

He stressed that the effects of the condominium development is an important factor to be considered when the city revises its Master Plan, which is a guide for planning.

"The character of Long Branch may change significantly if the pace of condominium development continues," Pallone said.

He said he favored rezoning some of the multi-family areas to allow only single-family homes.

Middletown teachers want state mediator

MIDDLETOWN — The teachers' union wants the state to mediate in its contract negotiations with the Board of Education.

Also this week, the board appealed a state Superior Court ruling in favor of a teacher's position on the school calendar.

The Middletown Township Education Assn. had sued the board over a policy that required teachers to work on holidays or to make up the time they had missed at the end of the school year.

"We can stay open, but we can't make teachers go in," said Dr. William Lieberman, board vice president.

Under the ruling, teachers can take those holidays as paid leave, said Lieberman.

The union's three-year contract expired June 30. Following three meetings with the board, the union told the state Public Employment Relations Commission that negotiations were at an impasse and asked for a mediator.

Schools Superintendent Guy Sconzo said Wednesday he was surprised that the union had declared the impasse and asked for a mediator so early, nearly two months before school resumes.

"We went along with it in the interests of a settlement," he said.

The last offer to the teacher's was a raise "in excess of $4,000 over two years," Sconzo said. "I think that's a fair offer.

Negotiations will not be possible in July because of the N.J. Education Assn.'s convention, Sconzo said.

Monmouth excels in student voters

FREEHOLD — For the third consecutive year, Monmouth County has registered more high school students to vote than any other New Jersey county, the county election office has announced.

Secretary of State Jane Burgio said 5,525 high school students have registered to vote in Monmouth County in 1987.

The county commissioner of registration and superintendent of elections is bound by state law to visit all high schools and register 18-year-olds to vote.

Senator urges creation of area planning panels

State Sen. Richard Van Wagner, D-Monmouth/Middlesex, said recently municipalities will lose control over local zoning decisions unless regional or county planning commissions are established quickly.

Van Wagner, chairman of the Senate's County and Municipal Government Committee, said the state is preparing to take over local zoning decisions with the formation of the State Planning Commission.

"The State Planning Commission was formed 1½ years ago with one purpose in mind: to give the state authority to overrule local decisions on land use in areas considered 'growth areas'," said Van Wagner.

He said he is preparing to push for the formation of a Bayshore Redevelopment Planning Commission to increase local power decisions made in the Bayshore region. Public hearings will be held soon on the regional planning concept.

"There is no question the Bayshore must have a well conceived plan that emphasizes the economic and environmental needs of the area," Van Wagner said.

"But we have a choice on how that is accomplished. We can have the state and the Port Authority come in and tell us how it will be done, or we can have a Bayshore Regional Planning Commission.

The Van Wagner bill to form the Bayshore Commission is in the County and Municipal Government Committee. The commission would be composed of a representative from each of the nine municipalities, the county planning board director and representatives from the state departments of the Treasury, Environmental Protection, Attorney General, Community Affairs and Transportation.

Van Wagner said important zoning decisions must be made on a regional basis because large scale developments and improvements inevitably effect more than the town in which the development is located.

"If one town builds a large subdivision on the border of another town it will affect both towns' roads, water supply and traffic problems," he said. "But for the state to dictate what an area's needs are without having local imput or a regional assessment will only cause confusion and chaos. I think the time has come for towns and countries to come together and make a serious look at this proposal."

Highlands ponders mobile-home parks

By KENISTON W. TRAINOR
THE REGISTER

HIGHLANDS — The Borough Council this week authorized its attorney to draft a resolution to make the two mobile-home parks a permitted use under zoning statutes.

However, members of the Highlands Chapter of the Mobile Home Owners Assn. objected to the change, saying that it did not go far enough in protecting them against eviction if a developer purchased either of the trailer parks.

The residents had petitioned the council to have the parks zoned exclusively for mobile homes so that nothing else could be built without obtaining a use variance.

Under the proposed amendment, owners of the trailer parks would still be allowed to convert the mobile homes to a variety of other uses already permitted in the zoning codes.

Viking Ventures Inc. holds an option to purchase Paradise Park and plans to construct 400 residential units on the site and on adjacent property owned by the Atlantic Highlands-Highlands Regional Sewerage Authority.

"What you want is to have it zoned only for mobile home parks," said William Wilson, borough attorney. "But I see a very serious problem with that. We would be taking away the rights from the property owner that have existed for 40 years."

Mayor Robert Wilson said he wanted to have the attorney research the matter further to see if there was a way to comply with the requests of the residents without infringing on the rights of the park owners.

"I want to go as far as I can to help these people," said the mayor.

Council President Paul Case, who served on a Planning Board committee that drafted the resolution, said the mobile-home parks should be designated as affordable housing under the borough's Mount Laurel obligation.

Case said the committee also wants a change that would prohibit construction of multi-family housing in the zone where Paradise Park is located.

"(The ordinance) was originally set up for attached two-family houses," Case said. "It was never meant to be used (to allow) condo development because the word condo didn't even exist at that time."

Case said the wording of the existing ordinance has created "a tremendous loophole" that has allowed high-density housing to be built "anywhere in the town."

Edward Grant, a former principal in Viking Ventures who reportedly maintains a financial interest in the town houses proposed at the Paradise Park site, voiced objections about the amount mobile-home residents contribute.

Funding for ocean study a step closer to reality

A bill sponsored by Assemblymen Anthony M. Villane Jr. and Joseph A. Palaia that would authorize a $1-million study to determine whether ocean pollution poses a health risk to bathers cleared a state Assembly panel this week.

"A number of dotcors have said they have patients who have developed infections and other ailments after swimming in our coastal waters during the summer months," Villane, R-Monmouth, said.

"Many of these physicians belong to an environmental group called Save Our Shores, which has urged the state to ascertain once and for all whether exposure to ocean pollution is a legitimate health risk," he added.

"Although the allegations are unsubstantiated, we owe it to our residents and the thousands of tourists who visit our beaches each year to find out whether a danger exists and, if so, what we can do about it," said Palaia, also R-Monmouth.

Villane said his bill would authorize the state Department of Health to undertake the study.

He noted the proposed state budget for the 1987-88 fiscal year drafted by the Assembly Appropriations Committee contains $1 million to finance the study.

Villane, who is chairman of the committee, sponsored the budget resolution that would make the necessary funding available. The entire budget package was approved by the Assembly earlier this month.

"Legislation similar to mine is pending in the Senate," Villane said.

The bill, A-4249, won release from the Assembly Appropriations Committee by a 16-0 vote. It heads to the full Assembly for consideration.

Historical Society wins grant

TRENTON — The N.J. Historical Society has received a state appropriation of $150,000 to finance the preservation of its extensive archives and document collection.

The money was included in the state budget approved June 30 by Gov. Thomas H. Kean and it was requested by Assemblyman Rodney Frelinghuysen, R-Morris County, a long-term member of the Historical Society's board of governors.

Collections owned by the society include New Jersey newspapers dating back to the 18th century, more than 1 million manuscripts, 100,000 three-dimensional objects, 65,000 books, 2,000 maps, 22,000 prints and more than 100,000 photographs relating to the state's history.

Portions of the collection will be displayed at the society's upcoming exhibition to honor the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution. "Thus United Free: New Jersey in the Age of the Constitution," which opens Sept. 17 at the society's Newark headquarters.

July 24 meeting slated on housing plan

LITTLE SILVER — Representatives for council and Robert Sickles will meet again July 24 to discuss the borough's Mount Laurel housing plan.

Doug Opalski, a mediator for the state Council on Affordable Housing, announced the second meeting. The first mediation session was held Tuesday night at The Register.

Opalski said the first meeting was "constructive." Both sides agreed on the ground rules for future mediation sessions and shared their concerns about the housing plan.

"A good faith effort was made by everybody to share information and to deal with the issues," Opalski said.

Both sides are still looking for common ground and then will look for solutions that will address each side's needs, Opalski said.

The mediation sessions are being held because of an objection Sickles filed to the housing plan after the council asked Council on Affordable Housing to certify the plan.

The plan calls for the borough to acquire the Sickles farm for a park to reduce its Mount Laurel housing obligation from 214 units to 15. The Sickles want to develop part of the land and donate part of it to the borough.

Write-offs to continue

NEWARK — The new federal tax law will allow New Jersey employers to continue to receive a substantial tax write-off on the wages they pay to economically disadvantaged youth (generally 16- and 17-year-olds) working summer jobs, reports the Newark District Office of the Internal Revenue Service.

Under the targeted jobs tax credit, employers can reduce their federal taxes by an amount equal to 85 percent of the first $3,000 they pay to a qualified first-time summer job employee.

Kid's World park to say thanks to those who helped

LONG BRANCH — Gov. Thomas H. Kean and other officials have been invited to Kid's World in Long Branch Thursday, July 16 as the amusement park honors them with a special "Appreciation Day."

Kid's World is holding the event to thank officials and firefighters from many communities for the support and assurances that they gave to the park after a June 8 fire on the Long Branch pier destroyed approximately one quarter of it, park spokesmen say.

Kean visited the scene the day after the fire and declared the site a disaster area, which enabled Kid's World to apply for financial aid that will be targeted toward rebuilding.

According to park officials, Kean also said that state agencies that regulate coastal-building projects would work closely with Kid's World officials to help restore the area's prominance as a major tourist center.

"Within a few days of the fire, a new Romper Room had been constructed, a water play park opened and several new rides and attractions were in operation."

Within a few days of the fire, a new Romper Room had been constructed, a water play park opened and several new rides and attractions were in operation in the large area across from the pier that was untouched by the flames.

Kid's World officials report that attendance is picking up as people realize that the park was not totally destroyed. It is at about 90 percent of what it was before the fire.

Truth about Agent Orange

Dioxin, a reportedly deadly ingredient of Agent Orange, is as much a threat to the citizens of New Jersey as to the Vietnam veterans exposed to the defoliant during wartime. An unanticipated biproduct contained in the defoliant known as Agent Orange, dioxin is suspected of being highly carcinogenic. The substance is also found in the emissions of garbage incinerators.

At a time when the federal government effectively closed the book on Agent Orange research, ending any study of the effects of dioxin, the probe was resurrected in New Jersey by scientists and physicians and politicians. New Jersey now leads the nation in state sanctioned scientific research on Agent Orange and its toxic element, dioxin.

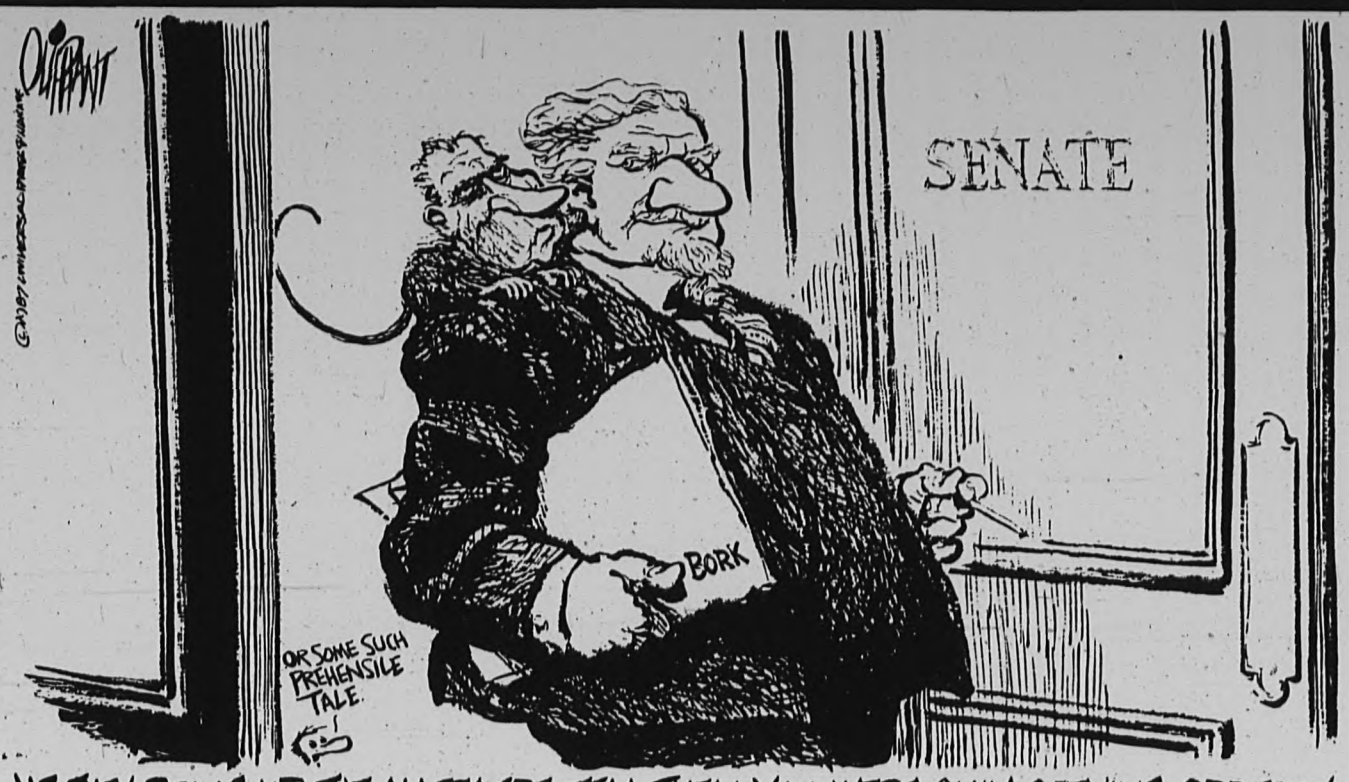

Gov. Kean this week signed a resolution passed by the Legislature to appropriate $675,000 to continue this pioneering research. Sen. Richard Van Wagner, D-Monmouth, is credited with reviving the effort. His bill, passed in both houses, opens Agent Orange research to a second phase.

The first phase of the Pointman Project measured levels of d[illegible]n contamination in blood and fatty tissue taken from a s[illegible] group of Vietnam veterans. The testing revealed, among other things, that dioxin can remain in a human body for up to 17 years after an initial exposure. The tests, however, failed to tell how harmful dioxin is to humans.

That's where Phase II comes in.

The research is valuable not only for Vietnam veterans but for civilians exposed to the emissions of garbage and hazardous waste incinerators. Proposals are pending for two such facilities in Monmouth County.

Gov. Kean, Sen. Van Wagner and the physicians and scientists at New Jersey universities involved with the study must be commended for their commitment to learning the truth about Agent Orange.

'IF THEY BRING UP THE MASSACRE, TELL THEM YOU WERE ONLY OBEYING ORDERS.'

Kean right to veto tax break

Gov. Thomas Kean has vetoed a well-intended bill that would have created "an administrative nightmare" for the Division of Taxation while giving volunteer firefighters and first-aid and rescue squad members an inconsequential break on their state income tax. He did the right thing.

The tax code is not the proper vehicle for rewarding or encouraging volunteer emergency companies. The Division of Taxation obviously is unequipped to verify that squad members are eligible for a special tax break, and the $25 to $35 benefit proposed is hardly sufficient incentive to swell the ranks of these volunteer organizations. There may be other things the Legislature could do to encourage people to become volunteer firefighters or emergency squad members — although this doesn't seem to be a problem that can be solved by a law — but the bill the governor vetoed deserved just that.

The Senate should veto another ill-conceived tax-break plan that the Assembly approved this week. It would ask the voters to approve two constitutional changes next November to give senior citizens and veterans an additional $50 property tax break.

Now that Assembly members have passed the resolutions and can take election-year credit with the elderly and veterans for approving this $45 million giveaway, that ought to be the end of it. This is no way to make tax law, and the Senate should know better than to go along with it.

What will be the meaning of glasnost?

The following was read into the Congressional Record by Rep. Chris H. Smith, D-N.J. on June 19.

Mr. Speaker, Secretary General Gorbachev has initiated one of the most noted public image campaigns witnessed by the Soviet people and the world in the last half of a century. Only time and intense scrutiny will determine the true effects of this stated policy.

Mr. Speaker, Members may be somewhat surprised to learn that glasnost is not a new word or idea to be used in the Soviet Political context. As early as 1919, Vladmir Lenin himself used and manipulated this world when he sought to ease some of the Communist bureaucracy at that time. Although he permitted certain free market activities, eased some political restrictions and even allowed a few private publishing houses and art groups to function, these freedoms were snuffed out with the consolidation of power and the beginnings of Stalin's reign of terror.

I would hope Mr. Speaker, that glasnost will translate into the toleration of religious precepts and an end to the methodical discrimination and harassment of the people of faith.

Mr. Speaker, we can hope that the policy of glasnost will reverse the restrictions which have been imposed on Soviet citizens who desire to emigrate, especially those Soviet Jews who have been longing to join their families in Israel or in the West Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, only 16 days following the glasnost initiative an announcement was made on February 12 by the OVIR, the Moscow visa office that eight individuals were prohibited from emigrating because of their past employment in fields which allegedly gave them access to state secrets in actual fact most of these refuseniks had first applied over a decade ago and it was at least that long since they had worked in the government. Yesterday, I was joined by 69 of our colleagues in introducing a resolution regarding not only these 8 and their families but all Soviet Jews who are wishing to exercise their right to emigrate. Clearly Mr. Speaker, if the word, glasnost, and the commitment of the Soviet Jews of their basic human rights.

On another humanitarian plane, Mr. Speaker, we can hope that glasnost will mean the termination of the severe limitations which are placed on the Soviet citizens' right to travel abroad. This is especially important in the case of families wishing to visit with their relatives. With about 5 million Americans who have familial ties in and trace their origins to lands now part of the Soviet Union, there are countless relatives who would give their life's savings to travel and visit one another, if only they were allowed by the Soviet government. Mr. Speaker, a number of our colleagues in both Houses of Congress have joined Senator DeConcini and myself as cosponsors of a resolution which we introduced in both the House and Senate emphasizing the importance of and urging the Soviet Union to respect the right of unrestricted family visits.

We hope, Mr. Speaker, that glasnost means an end to the psychiatric hospitals which are a barbaric means of penalizing political dissidents. Reliable reports show that there are a total of 13 special psychiatric hospitals throughout the country which are used to detain and treat dissidents arbitrarily. My colleagues may remember that in February 1983, prior to the censure threatened by the World Psychiatric Association Congress, the official Soviet All-Union Society of Psychiatrists and Neurologists abruptly withdrew itself from the association. This preemptive move lends additional credence to the indictment that Soviet psychiatric hospitals are being used to suppress their people.

How can Mr. Gorbachev expect to have a "demokratizatsia"-the democraziation-of government officials if constructive political debate is not allowed?

The Russion people are a proud and noble people they deserve better than absolute tyranny and terror. Perhaps — and its a big perhaps — Mr. Gorbachev's glasnost will mean an easing of current repression and an opening of a new society in the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics. We can hope, Mr. Speaker, but we must not forget to assess progress with the litmus test of real freedoms — the freedoms of thought, movements, religious faith, and political debate which must be enjoyed by all Soviet citizens.

Letters to the editor

Supreme Court too powerful

To the editor:

In his column recently, Mr. William Buckley wrote some very true statements. He noted that many Americans are disturbed over the fact that "the Supreme Court has become the supreme legislative chamber, and that although the Constitution gives only to Congress the right to enact all legislation, and only to the people and their legislatures the right to amend the Constitution, the Supreme Court has been busy doing these things with abandon since the days of the Warren court."

New Jerseyans understand this very well. The Imperial New Jersey Supreme Court has been usurping the rights of our Legislature for years.

Just a few days ago the court was at it again. Now the disabled people of New Jersey have lost their right to food and water. If two doctors and the family agree, the disabled must endure a long, painful death by starvation and dehydration.

North gives the Iran-Contra hearings star quality

DONALD KAUL

This week the Iran-Contra hearings finally got the star they deserve. They've been fascinating hearings all along but their worth had been masked by a style that appealed primarily to bibliographers and encyclopedia writers. They've needed a star, someone to light up the screen.

They got it in Lt. Col. Ollie North. He was a boffo smash in the early going, combining the more attractive qualities of Tom Sawyer, John Wayne, Jimmy Swaggart, Richard Nixon and Phil Donahue. Ask him the time, he gives you the Declaration of Independence. Request his name and you get the Gettysburg address.

Is he believable? Well, it depends on who you are, I guess. Some people believe one thing, some another. Personally, I thought he laid it on a bit thick, particularly when he said he used Contra money to buy his 11-year-old daughter leotards to protect her from Abu Nidal, the terrorist. At least I think that's what he said. When North gives an answer, it's hard to remember the question. In any case, in the first few days of the hearings Col. North portrayed himself as being only slightly inferior to the Boy Scout code. He lies a little, but only to save innocent lives.

He says he kept giving retired Gen. Richard Secord money to help the Contras but he didn't keep track of it because he trusted the general. And that the general and his partner, Albert Hakim, were setting aside hundreds of thousands of dollars for North but that he wasn't aware of it.

Sure.

He also says that he thought at the time that President Reagan knew what was going on but that he has since learned that the President didn't.

Right.

North got pretty much of a free ride the first 2½ days of the hearings. Which is one of the problems of the hearings so far — the lawyers. With the exception of Arthur Liman, the Senate committee chief counsel, the lawyers play slow-pitch softball. "Col. North," one of them will say, "it pains me to ask this question, sir, for I know you are a hero and a wonderful family man and a credit to your race, but we have testimony that you say the Lord's Prayer every night before you go to bed. Is that true?" North says that it is. "Would you mind reciting it here for us, sir?" the lawyer asks. "We feel in need of spiritual uplift."

Liman is a different piece of work but I'm afraid he comes on a little strong for television.

I have great hopes that the politicians on the committee will be able to penetrate North's strategic defense system next week. North's secretary, Fawn Hall, made them look like fools when she appeared before them, giving them lessons in foreign policy while arguing that she was just a secretary doing what she was told. (And not only them. I myself defended her against what I thought were sexist charges that she had smuggled documents out of the White House in her bra. As it turned out, she smuggled them out in her underpants. Catch me trying to defend a woman I don't know again.)

They can't really afford to let that happen with North and it'll be interesting to see how they handle him.

The Republicans on the committee are, for the most part, worthless as interrogators. They think their job is to make the President look good, no matter what. Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois is perhaps the worst offender but Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah is not far behind. (Can it be possible that the Reagan administration seriously considered nominating him to the Surpeme Court? What's the matter, was Spiro Agnew busy?) Of all the committee members, easily the most wimpish is Michael DeWine of Ohio, with his ingratiating, funeral director's manner. As columnist Murray Kempton said: "To err is human; to forgive, DeWine."

Republican Sens. Warren Rudman New Hampshire, William Cohen o Maine and Paul Trible of Virginia are n table exceptions to the GOP "I'd rather b with the President than right" philosoph

The Democrats, with no president t defend, have a much stronger crew o board. The two chairmen, Sen. Dani Inouye of Hawaii and Rep. Lee Hamilto of Indiana, are two of the most respecte members of Congress and these hearing make it easy to see why.

There are other sharp questioners o the committee — Sen. George Mitchell Maine, Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, Re Ed Jenkins of Georgia, Rep. Dante Fasce of Florida — but the one who shows m the most is Rep. Tom Foley of Washin ton. He doesn't try to play games, h doesn't try to be cute; every time he open his mouth, he says something. And peopl listen. You hear him and wonder why w don't get a chance to vote for people lik that for president.

It was a dynamite week of hearings.

ers agreed to meet with representatives of Main Course, a church coalition setting up a soup kitchen in the Asbury Park-Neptune area.

The group requested $10,000 to offset the cost of plumbing repairs required by the county health department before the facility can open.

The group also is requesting $3,000 for a dishwasher.

Freeholder DirectorHarry Larrison Jr. referred the request to county Administrator Robert Collins, but indicated the freeholders were inclined initially tofund the repairs.

"We want to do our part if at all possible," Larrison said.

The freeholders also agreed to increase the starting salaries of about 300 blue collars workersretroactive to January.

The 1987-88 contract with Teamsters Local No. 11 sets higher salary ranges for the workers, guaranteeing each of them at least $1,000 more. Those earning more than $14,000 a year will make at least $1,500 more.

Tinton Falls and Eatontown.

The study also recommends improvement of the Route 9 bus corridor, a recommendation ridiculed yesterday by some county officials as an incentive to further snarl traffic on that road with additional buses.

D'Amico yesterday predicted the proposal, while good for Ocean County, would be "a disaster" for Monmouth.

The Red Bank-Lakewood line would divert riders from the southern portion of the North Jersey Coast Line "and kill any hopes for electrification of the line south of Long Branch," D'Amico said.

"While increasing traffic problems in eastern Monmouth County and undermining existing rail service on the North Jersey Coastline, the Monmouth/Ocean/Middlesex study ignores and, in fact, worsens traffic congestion in western Monmouth County," D'Amico said.

Narozanick and D'Amico yesterday agreed that the report appeared based on cost considerations. The Red Bank-Lakewood line would cost an estimated $59 million, while a South Amboy-Lakewood line, which would include Freehold, would cost $123 million.

"I'm disappointed and dismayed that the option of rail service to Freehold was ignored," said Narozanick.

Assistant State Transportation Commissioner James Crawford yesterday defended the report's intention: to elicit comment from the tri-county area.

"I don't think this was unanticipated," he said of the freeholders' criticism. "This has been a major issue of controversy."

He said cost was but one factor of several, including travel time, potential conflicts with existing lines, and the number of riders served. He said the Red Bank-Lakewood line came out ahead when all the factors were weighed.

But the study was released so that those who disagree can be heard, he said.

"I think they got their input today," Freeholder Director HarryLarrison Jr. said.

However, Larrison said he will request a meeting with the state beforethe freeholders form an official position on the report to be sent to the state.

"If this is the best we can do-"D'Amico said, "then the future is grim indeed."

Plans also include provisions for water drains.

Hahn said state law does not require the applicants to notify neighbors of the Wednesday hearing as the usual practice.

Board members postponed the issue June 17 to provide time to find a lawyer to replace Board Attorney William G. Bassler. He defended Board Chairman Judith Stanley in a suit by the developers. A judge ruled she had a conflict of interest because of her ties to conservation groups.

Bassler stepped down to avoid the possibility of having a conflict of interest.

letter carried the East Keansburg name — but the wrong zip code.

Committee members, however, came up divided on their feelings.

Mayor James F. Maher Jr. and Committeeman Charles V. Carroll said the emphasis should go on the term Middletown — rather than factions: Leonardo, Port Monmouth, New Monmouth, East Keansburg, Navesink, Locust, Oak Hill, Lincroft and River Plaza, for example.

Besides the factions, 11 different zip codes throughout the 41-square mile township add to the problem.

"Whether we have eight ot 10 codes," Maher said, "I'd like to see us use 'Middletown.' "

Maher pointed to the scope of the townshipwide problem. He said he lives in Middletown, but has a Red Bank mailing address.

Meanwhile, Committeewoman Olga Boeckel sided with name-change supporters.

"I was for it at the very start," she said, "and I haven't changed."

Utility plans second natural gas pipeline

WALL TOWNSHIP — New Jersey Natural Gas Co. plans to build a 6.1-mile pipeline from eastern Middlesex County to western Monmouth County that is to be completed by next spring.

The utility said yesterday the pipeline will run from Monroe Township in Middlesex County to Freehold Township in Monmouth County. Construction should take about four months, according to Benjamin H. Yeh, vice president of engineering.

A starting date for work has not been announced.

The 30-inch pipeline will parallel an existing 10-inch line, which has carried natural gas to western Monmouth since 1960.

The company already owns most of the easements along the route. It will have to acquire rights for construction in areas of Monroe Township and in Monmouth Battlefield State Park in Manalapan and Freehold Townships.

New York ferries hit; 19 injured

ORIENT, N.Y. (AP) — Two ferryboats collided in heavy fog yesterday about a mile off the tip of Long Island, injuring 19 people and tearing a 30-foot gash in the hull of the smaller boat, officials said.

"Out of nowhere, this boat appears," said Arthur Springer, 32, of Shelter Island, who was standing on the upper deck of the North Star with his 5-year-old son, Sean, when the boats collided.

"I went flying," he said. "The impact was so immense, it took me right off my feet."

The 238-ton North Star, headed for Orient, and the 1,492-ton Cape Henlopen, bound for New London, Conn., collided at 9:23 a.m., said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Harry Foote, senior investigating officer at the Marine Inspection Office in New York.

Both vessels made it back to port.

The ferries are operated by Cross Sound Ferry Service of New London, which operates the ferry service between New London and Orient across Long Island Sound.

All the injured were on the smaller North Star, which sustained a 4-by-30-foot gash about 15 feet above the water line, said Coast Guard Lt. Ken Burgess. The Cape Henlopen had only superficial damage, he said.

The North Star limped into Orient and 19 people, nearly all of those aboard, were taken by ambulance to Eastern Long Island Hospital in Greenport, authorities said.

Three people, including at least one in serious condition, were admitted to University Hospital in Stony Brook, and one person was admitted with a back injury to Eastern Long Island Hospital.

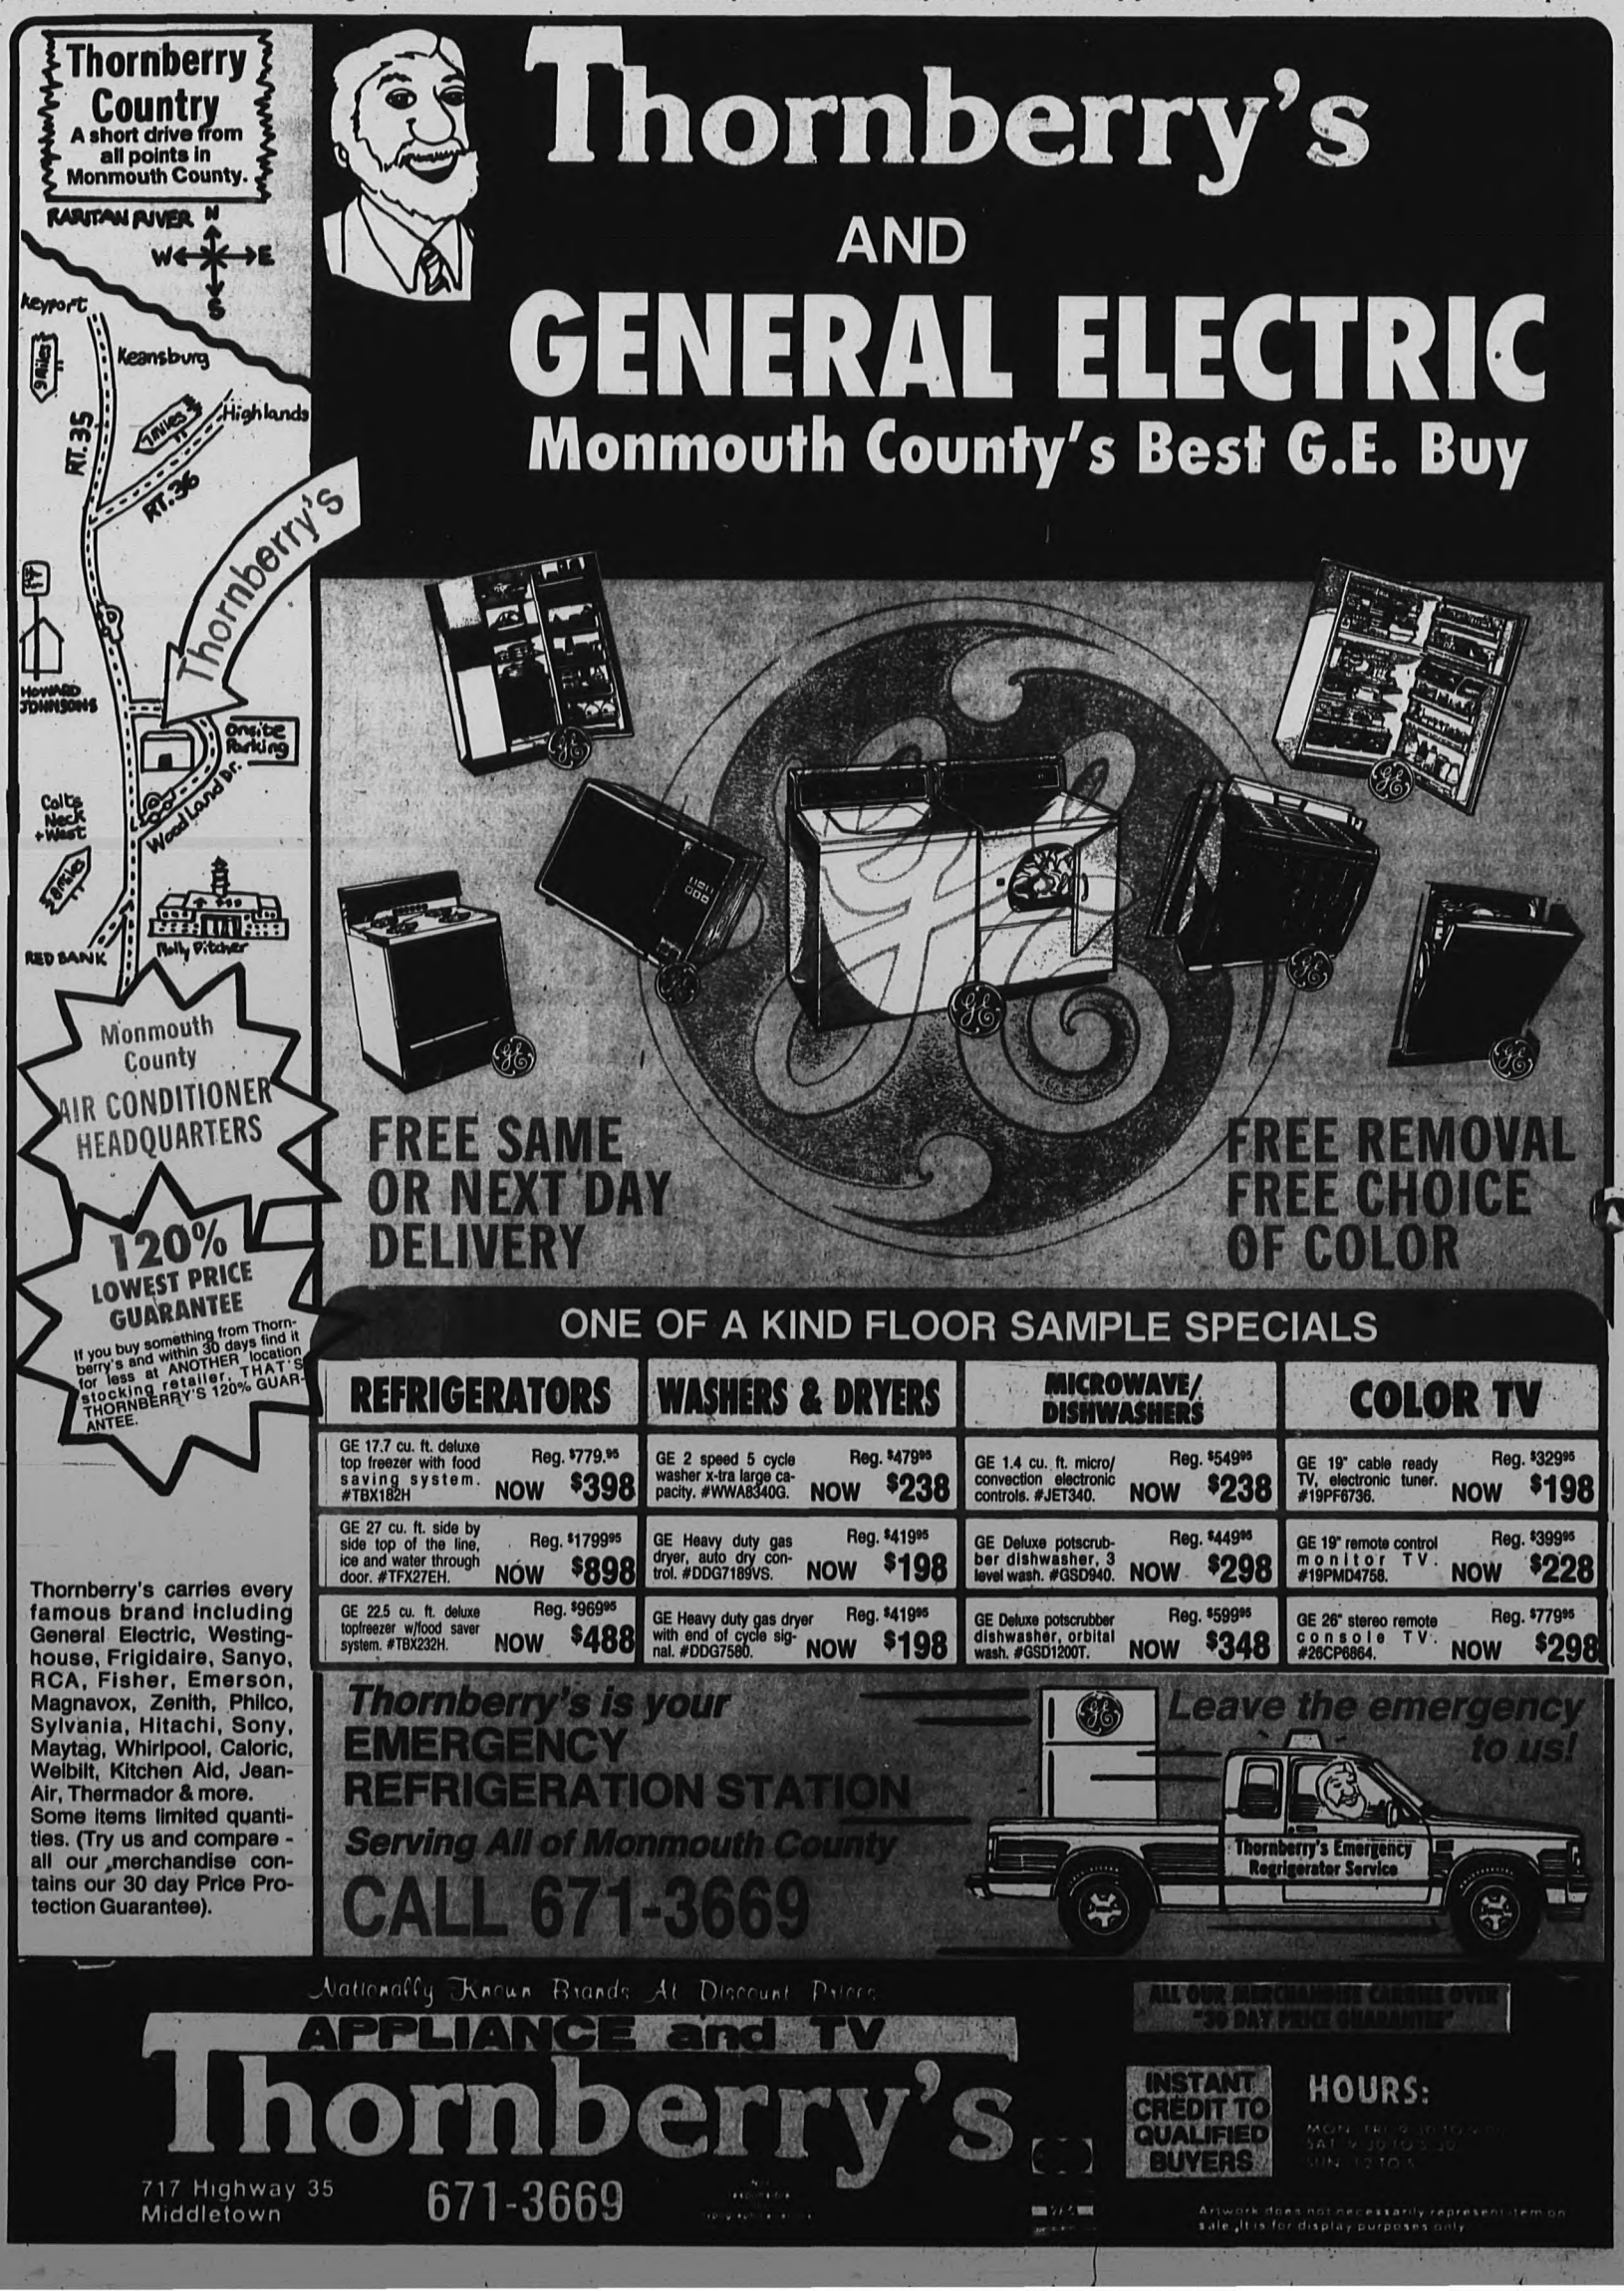

The other injured, including Springer and his son, were released after treatment for injuries ranging from cuts and bruises to broken ribs and a broken shoulder blade.

The accident occurred less than a month after a June 22 collision of ferry boats off Sandy Hook injured more than two dozen passengers en route from Manhattan to New Jersey.

Earlier the same day, two other ferryboats narrowly escaped colliding in fog on Long Island Sound, about 25 miles east of Manhattan.

Foote said the only similarity between the two collisions and one near-miss in the last month is that they all occurred in heavy fog.

Phone messages left with the company were not immediately returned.

Four new races to highlight regatta

By STEVEN FALK
THE REGISTER

RED BANK— Four new invitational races will highlight this weekend's 48th annual National Sweepstakes Regatta at Marine Park.

Racing will begin at 11 a.m. both tomorrow and Sunday mornings and run until approximately 4 p.m. on both days.

New to the racing card this year are the Fort Invitational, which will [illegible] the top eight boats in the 2.5-[illegible] stock hydroplane class; the Oyster Point Invitational for the top eight boats in the 5-liter stock hydroplane class; the E&B Marine-Cellular One-Executive Sound Invitational for the first eight boats in the Speed Skiff class, and the Monmouth County Grand Prix, which will combine the top eight times from the 2.5 and 5-liter hydro groups and 2.5-liter modified hydroplanes and arrange them in a staggered start with the fastest boat starting from back and the slowest boat from the front.

Those four races will conclude the weekend's racing on Sunday afternoon.

"The staggered start is to give all boats an equal chance at winning and provide for close finish," Regatta committee member Bob Morre explained.

Each of the other seven races to be run tomorrow and Sunday will have an elimination heat and then a final to follow with the overall winner for each class to be determined by a point system. A winner of a heat will be awarded 400 points. Second place boats will receive 300 points and third place is worth 225 points.

In the 2.5-liter stock hydroplane class, Ann Fitzgerald and her "Lil Leprechaun boat are favored. Joe Shull Sr. and defending champion James Ruark are considered the main challengers.

Defending champion Steve David heads the field for 2.5-liter modified hydroplanes. Bill Connor of Keansburg, Chuck Miller and Henry Lauterbach figure to provide stiff challenges.

In the 6-7 liter combined class, Tom Heinz, Steve Webster and Grason Jones figure to battle it out for top honors.

Four-time national champion, Rob Garratano of Oceanport is the heavy favorite in the Jersey Speed Skiff class. Garratano, who will drive a boat named Indian Summer, is the defending champion and holds the event's world record. His main challenge figures to come from the team of Doug MacFarland and Mark Petersen of Dolphin Marine, Fair Haven, and their JS-14 boat.

Jim Nader is the only entrant so far in the Super Stocks class.

This year's regatta will offer a record purse of $11,600.

"We have about a 60 to 65 entries, which is quite a good turnout considering today's economy," Morre said. "The way it looks now it will be the most entries we've ever had. The weather looks good so I think we will have a good turnout to go with what should be outstanding racing."

The pit area will be open to the public tonight giving those interested a chance to view the boats and talk to some of the drivers.

Dotson, Chisox down Yanks, 6-3

NEW YORK (AP) — Carlton Fisk hit a go-ahead fourth-inning home run to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 6-3 victory over the New York Yankees last night.

Fisk's two-run homer, his 11th of the season, came after a one-out single by Greg Walker off Yankees starter Bob Tewksbury, 1-4, and gave the White Sox a 2-1 lead. Tewksbury allowed 10 of Chicago's 15 hits and was knocked out in the fifth.

Richard Dotson, 7-5, gave up six hits, struck out three and walked six in 8 2-3 innings before needing last-out relief help from Bob James, who gained his 10th save.

Ozzie Guillen got five hits — four singles and a double — to become the first Chicago player this season to collect five hits in a game. It was the first five-hit game of his career.

Chicago scored three times in the fifth to take a 5-1 lead on a run-scoring single by Harold Baines, a bases-loaded walk to Fisk by reliever Charles Hudson and Donnie Hill's sacrifice fly.

Don Mattingly hit his 11th homer with two outs in the sixth and Dave Winfield and Claudell Washington followed with consecutive doubles to complete the Yankees scoring.

Chicago added a run in the eighth on Guillen's RBI single on the first pitch thrown by reliever Dave Righetti.

Mattingly's first-inning RBI double had given New York a 1-0 lead.

Offshore Grand Prix sponsors expecting 300,000 spectators

ATLANTIC CITY (AP) — Organizers of the 1987 Offshore Grand Prix say they expect at least 300,000 spectators to watch the powerboat race, but whether the event will appeal more to families or gamblers is a matter of opinion.

A sponsor of this year's event says hundreds of families will watch the event, but a past sponsor says the race's move from Point Pleasant Beach to this resort was aimed at the gambling community.

"Powerboat racing is a family sport," said Joe Jeffers, vice president of marketing for Household Finance Corp., which is sponsoring the July 26 race as part of a four-race pro circuit.

Jeffers, speaking at a pre-race news conference yesterday, said HFC is inviting 800 family members from local HFC offices to watch the race.

But indications are that they may be the majority of the "family" element at the race. Whether the crowd does reach the optimistic 300,000 estimate by race officials may ride on whether casino customers are lured outside for awhile.

"I think more people will come this year, but I think that means more gamblers will come," said Rocky Aoki, who sponsored the offshore race as the Benihana Grand Prix for nine years in Point Pleasant Beach.

Spectators who watch boat racing are not just looking to see who crosses the finish line first at speeds of more than 100 mph, Aoki said. Many fans nowadays are familiar with the intricate mechanics of the sport.

"People want to see performance," he said.

But Aoki's assessment of powerboat racing and its fans differed from that of Michael Redpath, executive vice president of the New Jersey Offshore Powerboat Racing Association.

"In the mid '70s to late '70s it was essentially a navigational sport," he said. "It wasn't so much speed as it is now."

Regardless of what fans want to see, race sponsors expect larger crowds to watch from the shoreline and at specially designated areas in the ocean.

Fans who remember previous races in which the boats could not be seen from shore will appreciate the redesign of the race course, Redpath said.

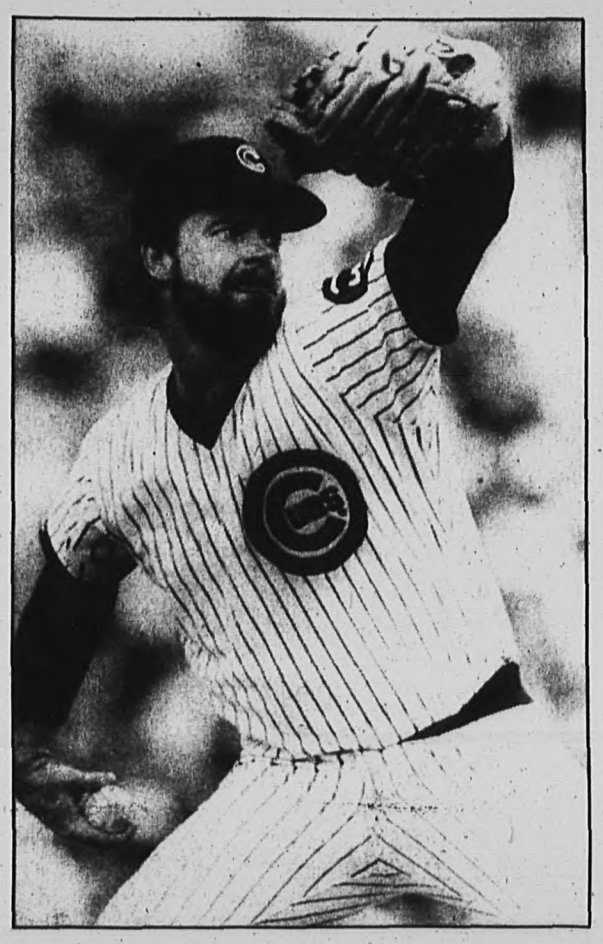

"The boats will be 500 yards off the beach — as close as they can safely get," he said.

Boat drivers are looking forward to testing the new course, said Nicky Cutro Jr., who will be racing his "Boardwalk" pro stock boat.

"Nobody has ever raced here before," he said. "It should be interesting — everybody's been known for getting lost in New Jersey waters. It's like they say — 'What exit?'

"A couple of years ago, everybody missed the checkpoint in Point Pleasant and went to Long Island."

The race was moved to Atlantic

Milne keeps lead in Fidelity Open

Rumson's Brigham tied for third

WEST ORANGE (AP) — First-round leader Dennis Milne of the Trenton Country Club shot a 1-over-par 72 yesterday and held a two-stroke lead over defending champion David Glenz halfway through the New Jersey State Golf Association-First Fidelity Open championship.

The 44-year-old Milne and the 38-year-old Glenz were the only players in the field of 127 to break par after two rounds on the 6,851-yard Essex County Country Club course.

Milne, who had an opening-round 67, had four bogeys and three birdies Thursday for a 36-hole total of 3-under-par 139. It was a round in which he managed to save par six times after missing greens, and one that he capped by chipping in a 35-foot birdie from the fringe of the 18th hole.

"I didn't drive very well today," said the Yardley, Pa., resident. "I was a little tired and when I get weak I tend to drive the ball all over the premises."

Milne faces an even bigger problem today with a 36-hole finale on tap. He will be paired with Glenz, the Morris County pro who has won this event two of the past three years.

Glenz had a 1-under-par 70 in the second round that included five birdies, four bogeys and a red-hot putter. His birdies came from 20, 15, 12, 20 and 20 feet.

"When I'm out there I am not thinking about how many putts I made or missed," said Glenz. "The thing about this course is that if you get the ball on line it stays there."

Glenz is concerned about the 36-hole finale since he is just getting back into action after breaking his collarbone playing softball on June 6.

"I don't know how much of this is between the ears," he said. "There is a twinge sometimes on the back swing, but if I can block it out, I'll be OK. Right now, I'm just happy being competitive."

Glenz was one stroke ahead of Stu Burns of Green Brook and Don Brigham of Rumson. Burns had a second-round 70 and Brigham had the best round of the day, a 3-under-par 68 that featured three birdies and 15 pars.

"I really have been playing excellently the past couple of weeks," said Brigham. "The last two rounds I had before the tournament were under par and I just hope to continue playing the same way tomorrow."

Former champion Jack Kiefer, who won here in 1976, was tied for fifth place with Jamie Howell at 144. Kiefer, of the Newton Driving Range, had a second-round 72, while Howell, a former Newton resident now living in Florida, had a 74.

A total of 41 players made the cut for the final 36 holes.

Car racing can be a family affair

By JEFF GRAVATT

WALL TOWNSHIP — For the Conners of Farmingdale, auto racing is a family sport.

Jerry, the family patriarch at age 43, races in both the street stock division at Wall Stadium and the late-model street stocks that compete regularly at the New Egypt Speedway and occasionally at Wall.

Son Pride, 22, races with the late-models on a regular basis.

Shannon, 15, the youngest son, drives go-karts in the New Jersey Karting Association in preparation of his stock car debut when he reaches the legal racing age of 18.

Even mom, Ruth Conner, gets into the act by videotaping every event that one of her "boys" competes in.

Although Jerry was the first to get behind the wheel in competition, Shannon was the one to spark the family interest in motorsports four years ago.

"Shannon used to go to the races with his friends, and occasionally I'd be the parent that took the gang to the track," remembers Jerry Conner. "Shannon really liked local driver Tom Mauser who was having tough luck in the modifieds.

"Shannon introduced me to Tom and he really impressed me." Conner continues. "After a lot of conversations, I bought and sponsored a motor for his car and soon after became a car owner."

While working with Mauser's modified team, Conner kept a close eye on the street sock division at Wall.

"I watched them week after week that year and thought, 'I can do that,' and by the end of that season I was racing," said Conner.

Jerry's debut came in the the 1984 season-ending "Turkey Derby" street stock race where

Tournaments on tap for area anglers

The annual Bahrs Landing Marina shark fishing tournament with $20,000 in total prizes and $10,000 to the boat catching the largest fish, and the Sandy Hook Bay Anglers sixth annual fluke tournament with $5,000 in prizes are outstanding events in area waters this weekend. Boat traffic promises to be awesome, and finding a place to park the car may be the biggest problem.

On normal weekends the Atlantic Highlands party boats which sail at 8 a.m. are fully loaded and ready to go by 7 a.m., so plan to get down earlier if you don't have your own boat. If you have your own boat but are not entered in a tournament the smart move might be to stay in the sack.

There are about 150 boats entered in the Bahrs tournament and on each day boats with fish to be weighed must reach the point of Sandy Hook by 6 p.m. The sharks are weighed at the marina dock in Highlands, and unless it is snowing expect a huge crowd of spectators, particularly on Sunday.

The weigh-ins for the fluke tournament will be between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. tomorrow and Sunday between piers 4 and 5 at Atlantic Highlands Minicipal Harbor. The prizes will be awarded there at 6 p.m., Sunday.

First prize is $3,000 for the largest fish and the other prizes are $1,000, $500, $300 and $200. A special late registration is available between 5 a.m. and 9 a.m. tomorrow at the weigh-in station for $65 for each boat.

Last year Bob Phillips and Dawn Sciortino of the Tackle Box, Hazlet, won the tournament late on the second day with a 9-pound 6-ounce fluke.

Capt. George Bachert who ran the day trips on the Sea Fox out of Atlantic Highlands last weekend said fluke fishing was just fair and added that at times he was surrounded by about 100 small boats which followed him around and raced wide open on the shallow water of Raritan Bay. "They sure turned the fluke off with that much noise," Bachert said. After each drift Bachert would cruise in a big circle to repeat the drift, but with the clutter of boats that was next to impossible.

Capt. Tom Buban of the Atlantic Star, Atlantic Highlands, said flukee fishing was slow on the whole, "but we're finding some fish wherever we go." He said Chapel Hill Channel produced some good sized fish on Friday. Tommy Olwan of Elizabeth won a pool on the Sea Tiger with an 8-pound fluke.

Instead of magic hours for blues, Capt. Edward J. Bunting Jr. of the Sea Horse, Atlantic Highlands, has been fishing for fluke in the late hours and the trips have been paying off. The late hours are 3:30 to 8:30 p.m. every Saturday, Sunday, Wednesday and Thursday. The boat also sails for fluke at 8 a.m. daily. He fished off the state park in Sandy Hook Channel over the weekend where the catches ranged from three to 10 per man.

According to Joe LaPresti of Stevens bait and tackle shop in West End, there are a lot of "trunkfish" in the surf. They used to be called "bootfish" when the size limit on striped base was 18 inches, but now that it is 31 inches the shorts are stuffed into the car trunk.

Up in Maine we used to have dock cleaner and sink cleaner salmon. The shorts were cleaned in the cabin sink.

Fishing from a car top boat off Sea Bright on Wednesday, Bob Mitchell of Middletown caught 17 weakfish. The largest weighed 11-2 on the scale at Giglio's bait and tackle shop in Sea Bright. He also weighed a 15-3 bluefish. He used bucktails according to Art Giglio.

Fishing from shore, Tim Novak of Somerset caught seven weaks to nine pounds and three blues to eight pounds. Tom Smith of Jersey City caught nine fluke in the surf, and weighed a four pounder at Giglio's

Irene Kelly of Long Branch caught a 9½-pound striper in the surf on Wednesday.

Lt. Todd Eisenhuth of the Division of Fish, Game and Wildlife, reported citations were issued to three trawlers on charges of fishing illegally in Raritan Bay. The boats were spotted by Coast Guard helicopter.

"We're still finding a lot of violations by anglers of the 13-inch minimumm size fluke," he said Violators have to go to court for trial and the fine is $20 for each fish. "They can't send the money in by mail to us," he added.

Jack Urbanski of Jack's Boats, Highlands, said their are a lot of weakfish around in addition to many bluefish and fluke. About 50 percent of the fluke are legal size.

After two nights when jumbo blues as large as 17 pounds were the pool fish, Capt. Ronald Santee Jr. of the Fishermen, Atlantic Highlands, had slower action and for smaller blues on Sunday night.

The two hot areas off the northern coast have been the 17 Fathom Bank which lies in the Mud Hole about eight miles off the lower end of Sandy Hook, and the Shrewsbury Rocks mid[illegible] between Sea Bright and Mo[illegible]outh Beach. The inner end is marked by a bell buoy and the outer end by a can buoy only a mile off the beach.

Lauren Benedict and Kelly Adrianee had assists. Also playing well for the champs were Gina Gavini, Jessie Stockton and Bethany Evans.

Community takes over first

MIDDLETOWN — Community Fire Company has moved into first place in the Middletown Firemen's Modified Softball League.

Community shut out Navesink, 5-0, behind the three-hit pitching of Vickie Phillips while Belford Engine slipped a half game off the pace and into a tie for second with River Plaza.

River Plaza knocked off Belford, 10-6. It was the second time this season that Belford had lost and both times it was to River Plaza.

Community sports a 7-1-1 record while Belford and River Plaza are 6-2.

With manager Chris (Punchy) Diodato languishing in Bayshore Community Hospital, "Moo-Moo" Mulvihill took over the reins and led Community to victory.

Phillips stopped Navesink on singles in the third, sixth and seventh innings while Community scored in the first inning and continued from there.

With two outs in the first, Tom Adubato and Jack Wankel singled for a 1-0 lead and Community upped that to 2-0 after two.

Rich Parsells walked and advanced on Gary Corbet's base hit. Rich Corbet skied to left and the "speedy" Parsells forced the grounds crew to come out and replace the divots after his journey.

Jerry Hickman started a two-run third with a single and Adubato singled with one out. Wankel came through again with a single. This was good for two runs.

Community wrapped up its scoring in the sixth when Phillips helped herself by rapping a double and scored when Jerry Weimer singled.

River Plaza rebounded after Belford had gone ahead to gain the imprtant victory.

Belford came up with a triple play in the fourth inning after taking a 6-3 lead in the third inning.

In River Plaza's fourth, starter Bob Pruskiewicz walked Ken Nixon and Bernie Setaro singled. Drew Rocheford grounded into a fielder's choice to load the bases.

Doug Heidel then bounced to third baseman John Reilly who stepped on third for the force on Setaro and fired home to catcher Mike Brandow who tagged Nixon.

Brandow threw back to short fielder Jim Thornton catching Rocheford who strayed too far off second and Thornton threw Rocheford out as he tried to go to third. Reilly made the first and last outs on the play.

Tom Setaro drove in the first run with a single and Dizzy Gillespie moved the runners up with a sacrifice bunt.

Barry Nixon lined a two-run single to left center and went to second on Scott Misson's boot.

Mike Meeker followed with an RBI hit and Ken Nixon singled him to third.

Bernie Setaro drove in a run with a base hit and Drew Rocheford banged in the last pair with a hit.

he finished an impressive second.

"All of the guys from Mauser's modified crew put the car together and they did a great job," said Conner.

Since that first outing Jerry Conner has put his Kelle Chevrolet/Zeut's Auto Body Shop machines in the winner's circle 11 times, twice in his "rookie season" of 1985. Conner still competes with his original Camaro in the street stock class while racing a Chevrolet Citation in the more powerful late-model street stock ranks.

After catching the racing bug from his dad, Pride got involved last season and has faired quite well. At the wheel of his 1970 Plymouth Barracuda No. 44, Pride, like his father, was victorious in his rookie season. He now has three wins, including his most recent, a 25-lap late-model victory at Wall Stadium Sunday.

"Dad got me involved in the sport," said Pride. "After I worked on dad's cars I wanted to try driving one myself."

Youngest son Shannon, who planted the racing seed next to the family tree, is looking forward to the day when he, Pride and father Jerry can finish one-two-three in a main event.

"I'm working hard now at the go-karts so I can start in the stock cars as soon as my 18th birthday arrives," said Shannon.

With mom videotaping all of the action from the stands, people often ask her who she cheers for.

"When Jerry is up front, I cheer for him. When Pride is up front I cheer for him," she says. "When they race against each other for the lead I don't look."

Blewett suspended

The speedway announced Wednesday that modified driver John Blewett, Jr. of Howell has been suspended indefinitely due to unsportsmanlike conduct displayed after a tangle with Steve Ferrara of Wall last Saturday night during a qualifying heat race.

TOMORROW'S ACTION

Gil Hearne of Jacobstown and Tony Siscone of Hammonton continue their battle for the points lead and go into tomorrow night's 35-lap modified feature tied. Defending modified kingpin Tom Mauser, who registered a win and a second in last Saturday's "Twin 35s" is now just 54 points behind the leaders.

Joining the modified stock cars tomorrow evening at 7 p.m. will be the modified affordable division in a 30-lap feature, the modern stocks in a 25-lap headliner and the street stocks in a 20-lap nightcap. Qualifying heats for all divisions will start the action.

Twilight racing begins today

By JOE HINTELMANN
THE REGISTER

OCEANPORT — The seasonal debut of twilight racing this afternoon at 3 p.m. and a highly-competitive quality field of 11 3-year-old fillies in the Post-Deb Stakes tomorrow should draw large crowds to Monmouth Park this weekend. There will be 10 races today and 11 tomorrow. Post time tomorrow is 1:30 p.m.

The Shore oval experimented with twilight racing for the first time last year. Post time was 3 p.m. every Friday from the Friday after July 4 until the end of the meeting. The same procedure applies this year.

Frances A. Genter Stable's Tappiano and E. G. Alexander's Chic Shirine are the probable favorites in the Post-Deb, a one-mile and 70-yard test over the main track.

Tappiano, trained by Flint S. "Scotty" Schulhofer, has six wins and a second from nine lifetime starts and earnings of $673,320. She won an allowance races on the turf at Belmont Park June 10 and the Canterbury Oaks at Canterbury Downs in Minnesota on the grass June 27.

"She doesn't need the grass," Randy Schulhofer said recently, speaking for his father. "Dad tried her on the grass because Canterbury offered a special bonus for trainers who ran horses in the top three in the Canterbury Oaks and the St. Paul Derby. He didn't get it because Cryptoclearance ran fifth in the Derby."

Chic Shirine, trained by D. Wayne Lukas, has two wins, a second and two thirds from seven starts this year. In her two previous efforts, she ran third to Grecian Flight, Fiesta Gal and Bound in the Acorn Stakes at Belmont Park May 23 and third to Fiesta Gal and Grecian Flight in the Mother Goose Stakes there June 6.

Kiaran McLaughlin, assistant trainer for the Lukas Stable, praised the horse Wednesday. "She's a real nice filly," he said. "She's a Grade I winner (The Ashland Stakes at Keeneland in Kentucky April 18). She's a well-bredfilly by Mr. Prospector.

The Lukas team will also be represented in the race by Without Feathers, who has won her two previous starts (June 16 and June 30) at Monmouth Park.

Oxford Stable's Doubles Partner, trained by William J. Hirsch, Jr., could upset the field. She has four wins in seven career starts, but ran out in the Acorn. "I think I probably brought her back too soon," Hirsch said yesterday. "Besides, she had a lot of trouble in the race."

Hirsch spoke highly of his horse. "I thought a year ago that she would be my best, most promising 2-year-old," he said. "Unfortunately, she bucked her shins after her Oct. 26 race (a sprint at Aqueduct when she broke her maiden). We rested her over the winter at a farm in Aiken, S. C."

He then spoke of the Post-Deb. "This race turned out to be tougher than I expected," he said, "but I think it will be a good test for her. If it rains, that's an added plus, because she loves to run in the mud."

The field for the Post-Deb in post position order (with weights and jockeys) is as follows: Without Feathers, 117, Craig Perret; Lady Gretchen, 119, no rider; Chic Shirine, 121, Perret; Doubles Partner, 119, no rider; Max Banker, 111, no rider; Easter Mary, 117, no rider; Arctic Cloud, 117, Mario Pino; Single Blade, 119, J. M. Pezua; Tappiano, 119, Jean Cruguet; Relaunch Lass, 113, Joe Rocco; Notastar, 113, Paul Nicol.

The 10th race on tomorrow's card will be a simulcast of the Michigan Mile (actually run at a mile and one-eighth). Skip Trial, Waquoit and Purple Mountain head a field of 11.

Skip Trial, based at Monmouth Park, defeated Horse of the Year Spend A Buck in the $300,000 Grade I Amory L. Haskell Handicap here in 1985 and won the Massachusetts Handicap last year.

Waquoit comes off his victory over Broad Brush in this year's Massachusetts Handicap and Purple Mountain comes to Detroit after a second to Groovy in the Budweiser Breeders' Cup race at Finger Lakes in New York.

On Aug. 1, as part of the special Haskell Day festivities, Monmouth Park will sponsor a 40-furlong road race and an eight-furlong road run, proceeds of which will benefit the Monmouth Park Charity fund. Prospective entrants may pick up entry blanks at information booths at the track or call the Monmouth Park publicity office.

Celebrities to race at Meadowlands

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD — It looked like the start of any harness race at the Meadowlands, but it wasn't.

There was no way it could be. The horses left the gate too slow and somewhat in disarray.

And that could be blamed on the drivers. Their names weren't John Campbell, Bill O'Donnell, Ben Webster and Walter Case, or those of other top drivers in the Meadowlands corps.

The people behind the bikes were designer Oleg Cassini, author George Plimpton, basketball star Rick Barry and former NFL quarterback Ken Stabler, among others.

The celebrity drivers have returned to the Meadowlands for the Plimpton Challenge Cup Series and yesterday was a practice day for tonight's race.

"I think I've won four straight races so that should say something about the talent of my fellow competitors," said Cassini, dressed in resplendent red silks and obviously looking to win a best-dressed award.

Winning is something Cassini is serious about.

Last week after the draw for the race was held and Cassini knew he was going to drive Destiny Reef, he called driver John Plutino and the two met for more than two hours in the office of Meadowlands General Manager Sam Anzalone.

"Cassini wanted to know if his horse broke well from the gate," said Anzalone. "Plutino said, 'No.'"

Cassini then asked Plutino whether his horse finished well, Anzalone said.

Plutino said "No" again.

"What does he do well, then," asked Cassini.

Anzalone said Plutino just kind of smiled and told Cassini, who will have the No. 1 post on Friday, to stay on the rail and hope everyone else in the race gets in each other's way.

They all laughed, and that's what the challenge series is about.

"It's a little tough on these guys," said Campbell, perennially a leading harness driver nationwide. "I think the important thing is that they have some fun and stay out of trouble."

That seems to be the attitude most celebrities have adopted. The newer drivers, such as Pat Verbeek of the New Jersey Devils, Barry and ABC sportscaster Al Trautwig, have spent the last month working with the horses and trainers learning how to drive.

Some others, such as Stabler, New York Post handicapper John Piesen, U.S. Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., and NBC football analyst Paul Maguire, have competed in prior Plimpton races.

"I think I have finished last in the last four races so I guess I'm a little overdue," said Plimpton, who will be driving Gene Tudor N on Friday and was made the 2-1 morning line favorite. "I've been the perfect host, but I'm tired of doing that."

Verbeek, who tied a club-record with 35 goals last season, also has had his share of losing in the past few seasons with the Devils.

"There is a challenge to win," said Verbeek, adding that Devils General Manager Max McNab is not too thrilled that he is driving in the charity non-betting race. "I probably want to win more than anyone here. I've been losing for the past couple of seasons and I'm tired of it."

Stabler and Maguire joked they would settle for a dead-heat for first place between their horses.

"I wish there was betting on the race so we could throw it," quipped Maguire, who looked a little oversized in the sulky.

When the odds were announced, handicapper Bob Heyden made Maguire and his horse, Jill By Night, 30-1 choices. Hearing that, Maguire grabbed his horse's ears and pulled them down, hoping his mount wouldn't hear the bad news.

Then came the practice and Barry and his horse looked good getting to the finish line first. Barry insisted on going to the winner's circle.

"I just want to know how it feels," the NBA Hall of Famer said.

Former New York Jets tight end Rich Caster got to the winner's circle here last year, beating among others, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

After that race, Steinbrenner appropriately fired the horse.

Bucks want compensation for Nelson

MILWAUKEE — Milwaukee Bucks owner Herb Kohl says his club will contact the NBA in coming weeks to see about getting compensation from the Golden State Warriors for former coach Don Nelson.

Nelson resigned as coach of the Bucks after last season, citing his increasingly heated differences with Kohl over management of the team.

His contract, which had three years remaining, included a provision preventing him from becoming a coach or director of player personnel with another NBA team for two years if he left the Bucks.

Kohl said Wednesday that compensation was not a major issue for his team, but the Bucks planned to take the matter up with the NBA office in the next few weeks.

"It's there," Kohl said. "There most likely will have to be a clarification from the NBA office."

Nelson, who has spent this week on a fund-raising tractor drive across Wisconsin to help financially-troubled farmers, recently wrote a letter to the Bucks, attempting to describe his duties with the Warriors.

He said his current task was trying to learn the operation of the franchise.

Kohl said he anticipated any compensation the Bucks might eventually receive would be less significant than if Nelson had gone to another NBA team as a coach.

Nelson, meanwhile, continued his fund-raising efforts and said he found a special brand of support during his stop in Watertown, 40 miles west of Milwaukee.

At last count, the city and its immediate surrounding areas had raised more than $10,000 in less than 18 hours for Nellie's Farm Fund, the organization formed by Nelson last year to aid farmers.

Nelson's weeklong tractor trip was due to end in Milwaukee tomorrow.

'Jimmy The Greek' home from hospital

RALEIGH, N.C. — CBS Sports oddsmaker Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder was released from Duke University Hospital yesterday after examinations showed that one of the three arteries to his heart was blocked.

"I was in for nine days. They took a bunch of tests ... some good and some bad," Snyder, a Durham resident since 1980, said in a telephone interview. "The interns were laying 15-1 odds that I would make it. My secretary said you've got to be all right."

Snyder, 70, in good spirits during the interview, said he expected to return to the set of "The NFL Today," in time for the 1987 football season.

"I'll be ready for that," he said.

Americans win first gold medal

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — A second-string United States swimming team won the women's 400-meter medley relay yesterday for the Americans' first gold medal at the 14th World Summer University Games.

The four Americans — Susan O'Brian, Kim Rhodenbaugh, Jofi Eyles and Aimee Berzins — won the only gold medal captured by U.S. swimmers on the opening day of the competition with a time of 4 minutes, 14.38 seconds.

But the star of the day was Noemi Lung of Romania, who won both individual women's races, the 400-meter freestyle and the 200-meter medley.

The U.S. is being represented here by its second-line team because its top stars are resting for the Pan American Games, scheduled for next month in Indianapolis.

The East Germans, considered one of the world's top swimming powers, did not enter this competition, apparently giving priority to the European Swimming Championships, scheduled to take place next month in Strasbourg, France.

U.S. swimmers also won two silver and two bronze medals.

David Berkoff of Harvard finished second to Japan's Daichi Suzuki in the men's 100-meter backstroke, and Mitzi Kremer of Clemson University was second to Lung in the 400-meter freestyle.

Lisa Meyers of Cal-Berkeley won a bronze in the 400-meter freestyle and David Cademartori of the University of Southern California was third in the men's 200-meter butterfly.

Hydroplane driver making progress

INDIANAPOLIS — Hydroplane driver Steve Reynolds, unconscious since Sunday, has improved from critical to serious condition and has started responding to simple commands by doctors, a Methodist Hospital spokesman said yesterday.

Reynolds also has been taken off a ventilator, which had been used to help him breathe, spokesman David Reddick said.

Reynolds suffered a fractured skull and other injuries in a crash during the Madison Regatta on Sunday. He has not regained consciousness since the accident.

However, he has begun to respond to such commands as to raise and lower his arm and move his fingers, Reddick said.

Woosman leading Scottish Open by two

GLENEAGLES, Scotland — Ian Woosnam of Wales shot his second straight 6-under-par 65 yesterday to open up a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the Scottish Open golf championship.

Woosnam was at 12-under-par 130, two shots ahead of Roger Chapman, the former English amateur champion, who shot a 64.

One shot further back was Spain's Severiano Ballesteros, who also had a 65.

Scotland's Sam Torrance, who equalled Chapman's mark, was next at 134.

Devils acquire Sauve

EAST RUTHERFORD (AP) — The New Jersey Devils yesterday signed veteran free agent goalie Bob Sauve and announced that rookie goalie Chris Terreri will join the U.S. Olympic Team for the 1988 Winter Games.

"These announcements set us up just perfectly as an organization for the coming season in goal," said Devils General Manager Max McNab. "We'll have four goaltenders to fill four spots in New Jersey and Utica and two others who obviously will be both available to us in March."

The way the goalie situation would break down is that Sauve would challenge Alain Chevrier, Craig Billington and Kirk McLean for the two spots with the Devils, with the two not making the team going to Utica of the American Hockey League.

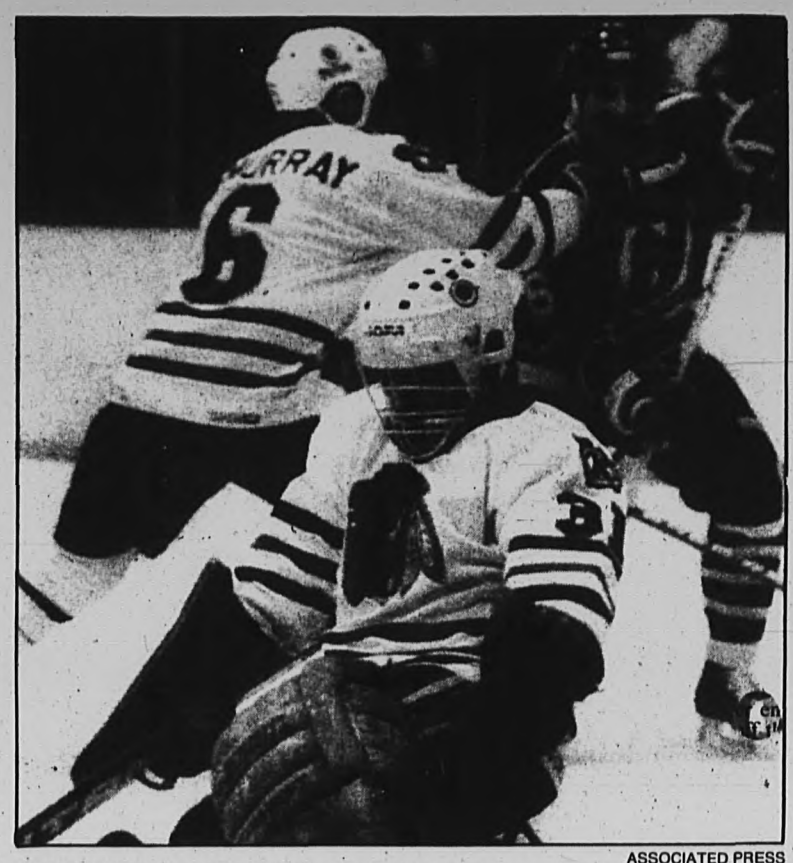

Terreri would vie for the top goalie job on the U.S. Olympic hockey team, while Sean Burke, a former Devils draft pick who has spent the past few seasons in junior hockey, looks like he will be one of the goalies on the Canadian team.

The 32-year-old Sauve has played 10 seasons in the NHL, last year appearing in 46 games with the Chicago Blackhawks. He posted a 19-19-5 mark with a 3.59 goals against average. The Devils did not have to compensate Chicago..

"The addition of a quality, experienced goaltender makes our team a better team," said McNab, who said Sauve was given a one-year contract with a one-year option. "Bob's a stand-up goaltender and a stand-up guy, popular among his teammates and popular throughout the NHL. He is a winner."

Sauve was a first-round draft pick of the Buffalo Sabres in the 1975 draft and played eight seasons with the club.

He was traded to Chicago two seasons ago and had a 38-32-7 mark for the Blackhawks.

City this year "because we outgrew Point Pleasant Beach," Redpath said.

This year, 60 to 70 boats are expected to compete for a total purse of $100,000, compared to 51 entries competing for a share of a $25,000 purse in Point Pleasant Beach last year, Redpath said.

Also this year, the boat crews and other officials can all be accommodated close to the Sen. Frank Farley Marina, where the giant powerboats will be docked. Trump's Castle Hotel & Casino, next to the marina, is sponsoring the race.

The race was once held in Atlantic City, in 1974, but the pre-casino atmosphere did not bode well for attracting spectators and the event was moved back to Point Pleasant Beach the following year.

Through the years, the small Ocean County community concentrated most of its resources on the race, holding everything from beauty pageants to seafood festivals in conjunction with the event.

This year, Atlantic City's suburban neighbor, Brigantine, will sponsor a pre-race parade. Within Atlantic City itself, only the local downtown merchants are holding their sidewalk sale in conjunction with the race.

Baseball briefs

Dawson angry

CHICAGO (AP) — Andre Dawson warned San Diego yesterday not to start pitcher Eric Show when the Chicago Cubs play the Padres later this month.

Dawson was hit in the face by a Show pitch in the third inning Tuesday and needed 24 stitches. The incident resulted in a benches-clearing brawl and the ejection of seven Cubs.

"I feel OK," Dawson said. "I feel sluggish at times but other than that, I'm fine."

Dawson declined to say whether he thought Show hit him intentionally.

"It's over and done with," Dawson said. He made a statement that he would regret it the rest of his life and if I have anything to do with it I'll make sure he does."

Show said in a statement after Tuesday's game that he has never thrown at anybody and apologized to the Cubs, the fans and Dawson.

"I have my ways," said Dawson when asked how he would get even. "I'm the one who had to suffer. When a guy throws up at your head, you have to protect yourself."

The Cubs will be in San Diego for their second road series after the All-Star break and there's a possibility Show will pitch.

"If they're wise they won't start him," said Dawson, who charged after Show moments after he was hit.

"I wanted to get him, I'll be honest with you," the All-Star outfielder said. "If I had gotten him, I don't know what I might have done. I just wanted to get my hands on him. It didn't turn out as bad as it could have been, but I'll see him again.

Three strikes?

OAKLAND, Calif. — Next week's All-Star Game may have three strikes against it — labor strikes, that is.

Unions representing stadium caterers and hotel workers have threatened to set up picket lines at the Oakland Coliseum, site of Tuesday night's game. NBC television cameramen and technicians, already on strike, say they will be there, too.

"We're planning to put up a good old-fashioned picket line," Danny Cassidy, spokesman for Local 28 of the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees Union, said yesterday. "We intend to make our best efforts to shut that game down."

Local 28 represents workers who sell beer, peanuts and hot dogs at the ballpark plus employees at the Holiday Inn and Hilton Hotel, where many visitors for the game will stay.

NBC, which will televise the game, is being struck by the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians.

Labor leaders plan to go before the Central Labor Council today to seek support from other unions at the Coliseum. Assistant council secretary Owen Marron said the executive board has notified the 11 unions operating at the Coliseum that it will vote on the matter.

Getting tough

NEW YORK — National League President Bart Giamatti warned all teams in the league yesterday that he will take severe measures, including suspensions, against players involved in "acts clearly intended to maim or injure another player."

Reacting to the rash of beanball incidents in both leagues, Giamatti sent a message to all National League team presidents, general managers and managers with the warning.

"Any act that in my opinion is intended to cause severe physical harm to an opposing player ... will henceforth result in the most severe penalties, possibly including suspension," he said.

New policy

NEW YORK — Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth pledged yesterday that baseball would surpass the other major sports in hiring blacks and other minority group members for high-level off-the-field jobs.

"Baseball will get its job done," Ueberroth said at a joint news conference at the NAACP convention with Benjamin Hooks, the civil rights group's executive director.

"It's our job to say 'look at us. We're ahead of the law of the land and ahead of everyone else.'"

Hooks said that he has met with the owners of more than 20 of the 26 teams, although he acknowledged that there had been some resistance from three, who he did not name. He said later that they agreed to meet with them.

Cubs win suspended contest

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Paul Noce drove in five runs with a three-run homer and a single and Manny Trillo and Keith Moreland also homered yesterday to give the Chicago Cubs a 12-5 lead over the Los Angeles Dodgers in a game that was suspended because of darkness in the sixth inning.

The game was halted in the bottom of the sixth because a flash rainstorm. It rained so fast and so hard that the ground crew was unable to get the tarp over the first-base line. Once the field was made playable, the umpires suspended play because of darkness.

Play will resume today at 1:05 p.m. CDT, prior the start of the regularly scheduled game at 3:05 p.m.

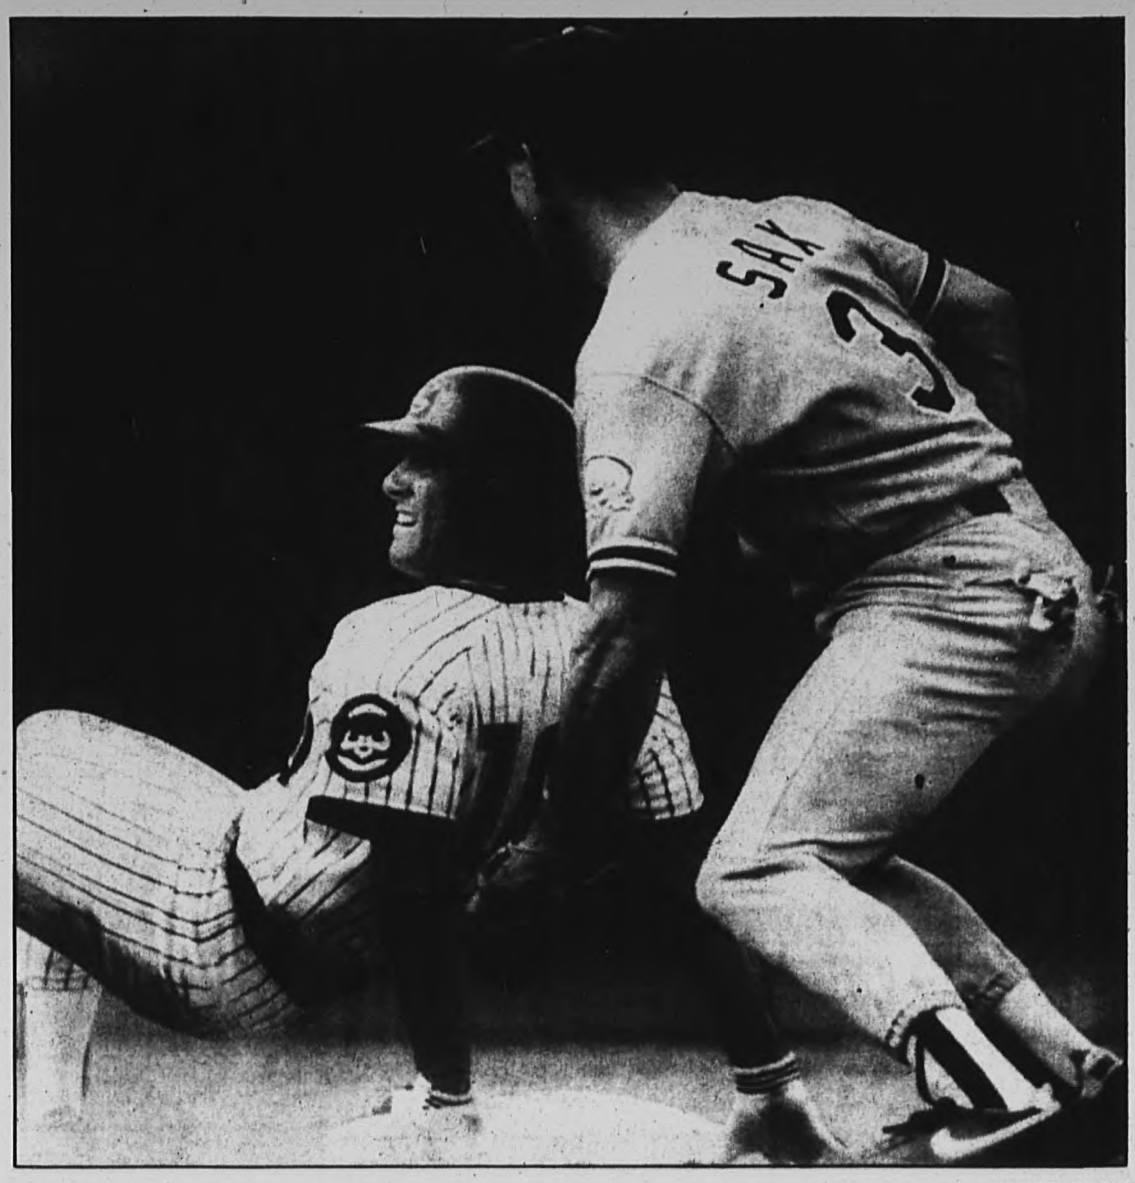

Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe, selected to the National League All-Star team, left after five innings because of a bruised third finger on his pitching hand suffered when he deflected Steve Sax's ground ball.

With two outs in the fifth, Dave Anderson reached on an error before John Shelby hit his ninth homer and Pedro Guerrero his 18th on successive pitches.

The Cubs knocked out Rick Honeycutt in the third when they scored six runs on two-run singles by Gary Matthews, Noce and Mike Brumely. Noce hit his third homer in the fourth after Trillo and Moreland singled.

Franklin Stubbs hit his 12th homer off reliever Scott Sanderson in the Dodger sixth but the Cubs came back with three more.

Trillo, who had four hits, hit his fifth homer to lead off the sixth. Rafael Palmeiro then singled and Moreland hit his 15th before the rains came.

Tax Report

■ NEWARK — The new tax law now allows religious ministers who previously exempted themselves from social security to renew their coverage in the program, said the Newark District Office of the Internal Revenue Service.

Ministers, members of religious orders and Christian Science practitioners may make an irrevocable election back into the program. They generally have until April 15, 1988 to do so. Those who do will be subject to a Self Employment Contribution Act tax, and post election earnings are credited for social security purposes.

The new law also requires ministers who seek exemption from social security coverage to include a statement that the ordaining, commissioning, or licensing body of the church or order has been advised that he or she is opposed to a[illegible]ance of public insurance b[illegible]ts based on ministerial service. Such application must be made within two years of beginning the ministry.

R & D Report

■ Five Rutgers University projects that are cutting new paths in research in the health sciences and health-related fields have been selected as the winners of the first Johnson & Johnson Discovery Research Awards.

The grants, amounting to $20,000 for two years for each project, will assist faculty members who are redirecting or expanding their research into new areas in emerging science and technology, and whose work promises new discoveries in the health sciences fields.

New awards expected to be announced annually for the next several years, according to the Johnson & Johnson Discovery Research Awards Program.

The grants are part of $375,000 made available over five years to the State University of New Jersey by the internationally known health products firm to enable Rutgers to develop new research concepts in order to remain in the forefront of science and technology investigation.

The funding is also part of a larger $2 million gift Johnson & Johnson will be giving Rutgers over five years through the Rutgers University Foundation, and part of a $7.5 million New Jersey Major Gifts program for medical research and public interest projects that the company announced last year in honor in its 100th birthday.

Johnson & Johnson's sponsorship of the discovery research funds has been termed "very important and foresighted" by Dr. Paul L. Leath, who on July 1 will become provost of Rutgers' New Brunswick-area campuses.

Leath, who is now associate provost, pointed out the difficulty researchers often have in attracting "outside funding when they are changing directions or broadening their research into new areas." The gift by Johnson & Johnson, he noted, provides "a rare opportunity" for the scientists to pursue new work.

Dr. Jonathan Rosen, corporate director of the company's scientific affairs, said that "Johnson & Johnson is pleased with such a positive response to its New Jersey Major Gifts program.

"We are delighted to see that Rutgers has responded in such an innovative way toward supporting emerging technology efforts," he declared.

The five research projects, selected from 74 proposals that were submitted to a university advisory committee headed by Leath, target a variety of basic scientific areas for expanding knowledge in the health sciences.

The projects — three in the chemestry department at the Wright-Rieman Laboratories on the Busch campus in Piscataway and one each in the biological sciences department and the Institute of Animal Behavior on the Newark campus —include the following:

— Research that is being done by Dr. Kenneth J. Breslauer, a chemist, to help develop so-called "magic bullets" that are expected to have important biomedical applications in the treatment of cancer, ranging from the diagnostic to the therapeutic. Specifically, Breslauer is working to define the molecular recognition patterns that control interactions between drugs and DNA, the genetic material found in almost all cells.

— Studies that are being conducted by Drs. G. Miller Jonakait and Ronald P. Hart, a neurobiologist and molecular biologist, respectively, that deal with the genetic regulation of neuron-specific molecules during brain development.

Retailers say sales favorable

NEW YORK (AP) — Warm weather and the Father's Day holiday contributed to strong sales of apparel and generally favorable overall results, the nation's largest general retailers reported yesterday.

Monroe Greenstein, a retail industry analyst with Bear Stearns & Co., said retailers had their strongest results in clothing lines, as consumers bought warm weather apparel. Sales of hard lines, including appliances and televisions, were soft.

The nation's largest retailer, Sears Roebuck & Co., reported its June sales rose 4.5 percent when compared with June 1986 figures, and sales for the 22 weeks ended July 4 were up 3.9 percent from the same period a year earlier.

K mart Corp. said its sales rose 6.5 percent in June and 8.4 percent in the 22-week period. Same-store sales, representing sales for stores open at least a year, rose 2.8 percent in June and 4 percent in the 22 weeks.

J.C. Penney Co. Inc. said its June sales rose 2.4 percent and its year-to-date sales were up 4.6 percent.

F.W. Woolworth Co. said its June sales rose 6 percent, while its sales for the cumulative 22 weeks were up 6.2 percent.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. said its sales for June were up 34 percent and for the first five months of the year, 36 percent. The rapidly-growing chain said same-store sales rose 12 percent in June and during the five-month period.

Montgomery Ward & Co. said its sales rose 7.5 percent in June and in the first 22 weeks of the year.

Plant closing plan wins Senate vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Union-backed provisions requiring 60-day notice of plant closings and layoffs survived a hard-fought effort to delete them from the Senate's sweeping trade bill yesterday.

"The American worker has waited 15 years for this day," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., declared as the Senate rejected, 60-40, an effort to drop the plant-closing provisions. Critics said it made a presidential veto likely and thus threatened to torpedo the whole trade bill.

After the plant-closing vote, the Senate, in a sharp switch, eased provisions aimed at narrowing the president's leeway to turn down import curbs designed to shield U.S. industries from foreign competition.

That action, approved on a voice vote, marked a reversal from Tuesday when trade bill sponsors fought off an effort by Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., to broaden the president's latitude to reject import curbs recommended by the U.S. International Trade Commission.

The Senate approved first an amendment sponsored by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., that would allow the president to reject such tariffs and quotas if the burden of import relief would fall "disproportionately" on the poor. It then accepted a proposal by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, to empower the president to turn down such retraints if they would unduly hurt farmers.

"Almost all import relief disproportionately burdens the poor," Packwood said.

The two proposals were accepted with few senators on the floor after only a few minutes of discussion. The action came two days after the Senate defeated Packwood's proposal, climaxing a four-hour debate.

Packwood said the Bradley amendment allayed 90 percent of his concerns and the Gramm proposal "the other 10 percent."

"I don't know, I just can't account for it," Packwood said after the Senate did its about-face. He scoffed at any notion that the amendments were eased through at dinner time without many lawmakers knowing what was coming. "The Senate knew all about it," he said.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, the chief sponsor of the plant-closing provisions, told reporters that "the workers of this country, if we bring it to full passage, will have received a very significant right that is humane, decent and fair."

The bill would require 60 days' notice to employees of impending plant closings or large layoffs at companies with at least 100 workers.

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., its leading critic, said the only remaining hope for winning presidential approval of the bill would be if the plant-closing provisions were removed in a House-Senate conference committee. House trade legislation passed April 30 contains no similar features.

The 10 Republicans and 50 Democrats who combined to fend off a move to drop the provisions would fall short of the two-thirds majority vote needed to override a presidential veto.

Labor Secretary William Brock had told senators Wednesday night he could not recommend presidential approval of the bill if it contained the plant-closing features.

Former whiz kid's business collapes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barry Minkow lived a Horatio Alger dream, amassing more than $100 million by age 21, telling his story to Oprah Winfrey, crusading against drug use.

Today, his world is a shambles amid allegations that he consorted with mobsters, allowed his carpet-cleaning business to be used as a front to launder drug money and plundered the company's treasury.

Last week, with mounting disclosures of problems at ZZZZ Best Co. — the operation he founded in his parents' garage at age 15 — Minkow resigned from the company, citing health reasons.

Within days, ZZZZ Best filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection and sued Minkow and four associates for $23 million over alleged misappropriation of company funds.

On Wednesday, police raided Minkow's office and home and 14 other sites looking for evidence that Minkow's companies were used to launder proceeds from organized-crime drug deals.

In addition to three companies founded by Minkow, Police Chief Daryl Gates said other firms involved in the network were connnected to mobsters and ex-convicts.

A Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of ZZZZ Best and Minkow is zeroing in on many of the same allegations.

"Barry is not a coke dealer and knows nothing about organized crime," Barens said.

Minkow was 18 when he earned his first million in 1984. In 1986 he took the company public, and it became a darling of Wall Street. A public stock offering in December quickly sold out at $4 per share, and based on strong earnings reports and optimistic projections the price soared to over $18 per share in April and May.

Then the decline began.

At first, the slide was slow amid reports that the company had run up $72,000 in false bills on customer credit cards in 1984 and 1985. Minkow said the phony bills were charged by unscrupulous subcontractors who were fired and that the money had been repaid.

Later, the disclosures increased in frequency and severity, and the slide became a plunge.

Early this week, ZZZZ Best stock dropped to as low as 75 cents a share, then recovered slightly.

That virtually wiped out Minkow's fortune, most of which was based on his 53 percent of ZZZZ Best's 11 million shares.

"A lot of us wish we hadn't said a lot of things," said Robert Grossman, a securities analyst with Landerburg, Thalmann & Co., who had been quoted recently in print as defending Minkow as "a great manager."

Minkow, who described himself as "obsessed," is generally characterized as a hard-driving, fast-talking boss with no tolerance for disagreement.

"My way or the highway," Minkow frequently said at the office, where he insisted on being called Mr. Minkow, associates say.

He said he wanted to build ZZZZ Best into "the General Motors of carpet cleaning" and expected he might some day become president of the United States. He developed bleeding ulcers by age 18.

Minkow was praised by Mayor Tom Bradley, the Association of Collegiate Entrepreneurs and and the Young Entrepreneurs Organization. Magazines and newspapers chronicled his rise.

Minkow wrote a book called "Making It in America" and appeared on the "Oprah Winfrey Show" to tell his story.

He routinely warned against drug use in speeches and even in ZZZZ Best ads and gave generously to charities.

ZZZZ Best's operations appear to have changed significantly after mid-1985 when Minkow borrowed $400,000 from reputed organized crime leader Jack Catain at rates of between 2 percent and 5 percent a week.

Catain, who was convicted of counterfeiting and has been investigated by federal authorities for possible extortion, trading in stolen goods and laundering organized crime money, helped Minkow organize ZZZZ Best, said Catain's former attorney, James Twitty.

Thereafter ZZZZ Best reported explosive growth. For the year ended April 30, earnings were $50 million on revenue of $500 million, compared with profits of $900,000 on revenue of $4.8 million a year earlier.

ZZZZ Best attributed the change to its new involvement in "restoration work" at fire- and water-damaged buildings.

According to documents the company filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, such work accounted for 89 percent of its revenues.

Police contend that restoration work was actually a sham operation used to launder drug money.

Catain died in February before he could be sentenced on the counterfeiting conviction.

ASSOCIATED PRESS RISE AND FALL — Barry Minkow has gone from entrepreneurial hero to goat amid allegations that he has consorted with mobsters and allowed his carpet-cleaning business to be used as afront to launder drug money.

Trump buys 4.9% stake in Nugget

NEW YORK (AP) — Developer Donald Trump, who already has a strong foothold in New Jersey's casino industry, has purchased a 4.9 percent stake in Golden Nugget Inc. in an effort to expand into Las Vegas, Nev., according to a report published yesterday.

Trump told The Wall Street Journal in an interview from Monte Carlo that he purchased the Golden Nugget stock two weeks ago and "I may and may not go for a substantially bigger stake."

The developer added that he always wanted Stephen Wynn, Golden Nugget's chairman, to work for him.

Industry analysts said they doubted Trump wanted to extend his casino empire into Las Vegas, attributing his comments to competitive sparring.

"If he really meant (to take over the company), do you think he would say that?" said Lee Isgur, an analyst with Paine Webber. "Wynn is the only one he has as a rival."

Marvin Roffman, an analyst with Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia, agreed, "It looks like Trump was trying to needle Wynn. It will open a volley of exchanges."

"I think he is in this to make money, not to take over the company," added Roffman, who predicted Wynn would vigorously oppose a buyout.

A spokesman at Trump's Manhattan headquarters said the developer has an unspecified stake in Golden Nugget.

Museum honors founding father

By HILDY WILS FONTAINE
THE REGISTER

MIDDLETOWN — Above a patrician profile the question is asked, "Do You Recognize this Man?"

Below the illustration lies the answer: "Signer of the Constitution, Senator of the United States, Governor of New Jersey, Supreme Court Justice."

The man is William Paterson, after whom the city of Paterson and a college in Wayne are named.

The man is also the subject of Monmouth Museum's new exhibition dedicated to a celebration of the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

"William Paterson, New Jersey's Founding Father" opens Tuesday and continues through September, the month when the 200th anniversary of the signing is officially celebrated.

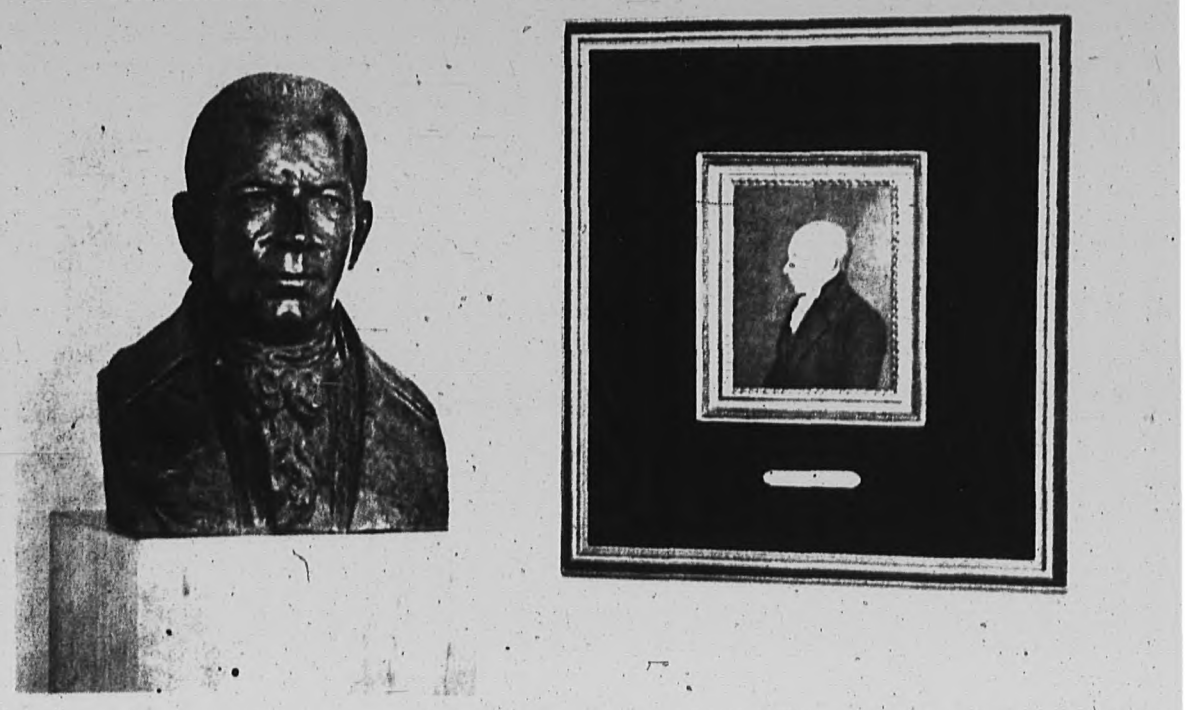

The exhibition about Paterson is the museum's way of observing the bicentennial of the Constitution while bringing recognition to New Jersey's unsung hero, sometimes a nearly obscure name in history.

Paterson's name is not among those immediately identified with the Constitution. Dorothy V. Morehouse, museum executive director, guessed that perhaps he was not a publicity- or public relations-oriented man.

For example, unlike the plethora of pictures of other founding fathers of the United States, whose names and images are instantly recognizable, there is only one original drawing of Paterson that has survived nearly two centuries.

The work, a 1782 pastel sketch by artist James Sharples, from the collection of New Jersey Bank and on permanent loan to William Paterson College in Wayne, is part of the exhibition. It is considered to be the only portrait of Paterson. "We assume it was taken from life," Morehouse said.

And from that sketch a bronze bust of Paterson, also part of the exhibition, was created by sculptor Julio Lugo Burgos. The bust was presented to the college by its alumni association in 1976. Because the sculptor had only the profile from which to work, the left side of his face, half of the bust is imagined, she said.

WILLIAM PERLMAN/THE REGISTER

AN AMERICAN FATHER — This bust and portrait of William Paterson can be seen at the exhibit at Monmouth Museum, Lincroft, during the museum's exhibit celebrating the bicentennial of the United States Constitution. The exhibit, located in the museum's lower gallery, runs through Sept. 27.

Paterson is not mentioned in history books to any great degree. Very little of his life was researched or documented until John E. O'Connor, a professor at New Jersey Institute of Technology, wrote a book, "William Paterson — Lawyer and Statesman, 1745-1806."

In it, O'Connor wrote that Paterson "rose to positions of power and respect from origins which were really rather ordinary."

"Many of the founding fathers were people born to wealth and influence, but Paterson was not among them," he states in the book.

The Monmouth Museum exhibition features settings and documents that highlight his importance as a statesman. It notes his birth in 1745 in Antrim, Ireland, now Northern Ireland, and his early years, when his family immigrated to America two years after his birth and settled in Princeton three years after that.

A Princeton University education steeped him in the lessons of history, political theory and moral philosophy, the traditional training of colonial leaders. He studied law as an apprentice to Richard Stockton, became an attorney, was New Jersey's second governor, and raised his social station above that of his storekeeper father.

Those milestones in his life are depicted in three major vignettes that make up the exhibition. The museum has a representation of the store the elder Paterson operated, as it would have appeared in 1762, when Paterson was 17.

"From historians we talked to, the store had fairly nice merchandise, textiles and farming tools," Morehouse said. From what they can glean, she said, Paterson worked in the store and studied there as well. The cameo "store" in this exhibition features farming tools borrowed from the Farm Museum at Rutgers University, the County Historial Association and Allaire Village, Wall.

A facsimile of a courtroom Paterson might have presided in while riding the circuit from Georgia to Vermont as a Supreme Court justice is the second vignette, and serves as testimony to his achievements in law.

The final vignette is a replica of the room at Independence Hall in Philadelphia in which the delegates met to write the Constitution and where Paterson proposed the New Jersey Plan, which would maintain equal representation in the Congress to all states, regardless of population. It was an alternative to the Virginia plan, Morehouse said, and represented the thinking of small states. The larger states, under the Virginia Plan, wanted proportional representation.

"Paterson wanted equal representation. He wanted the same constituency the Articles of Confederation provided," she said.

Paterson was one of 55 delegates, and one of five representing New Jersey, to the Continental Congress in Philadelphia where names such as Franklin, Adams and Jefferson gained the most attention. Paterson was among those charged with revising the Articles of Confederation and creating a federal constitution adequate to government and preserve the union.

"A lot of the colorful characters chose not to show up at the Constitutional Convention," Morehouse said. Patrick Henry was one who chose not to. John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, as ambassadors to England and France respectively, were out of the country tending to diplomatic duties, she said. But Paterson, loyal to his responsibilities, remained, had his say, and returned to sign the Constitution in September 1787.

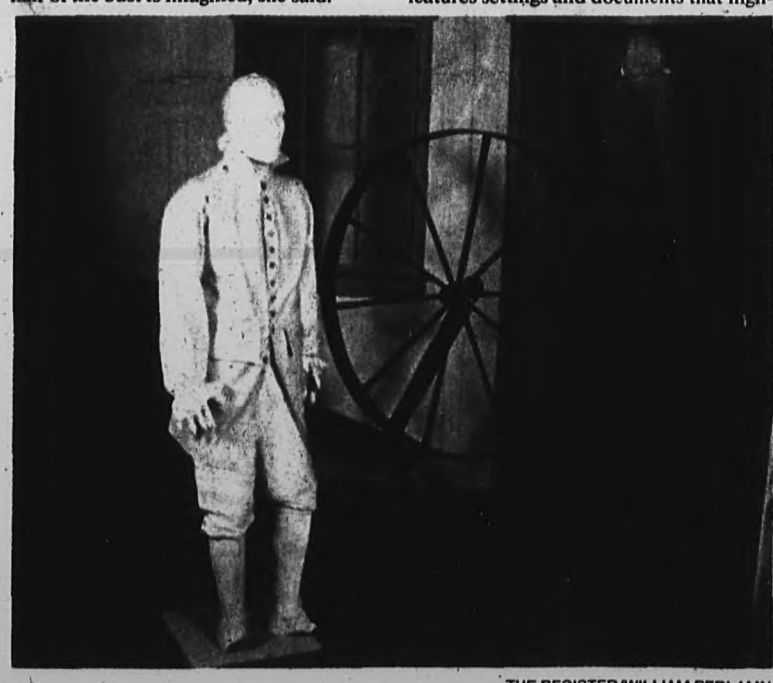

Following his involvement in the framing of the Constitution, Paterson went on to important positions in the state and national government, As governor of New Jersey, senator, and Supreme Court Justice, he devoted his life to the constitutional principles he helped formulate.

Morehouse noted that although he wrote the final document that was the state constitution, he voted — in the minority — to delay its adoption in 1776. The story goes that while the document was being written in Trenton, reports were circulated that the British had landed at Sandy Hook and were marching to Trenton.

Although the consititution was adopted, Paterson contended that action came too quickly because of the British march threat, she said. It was his interest in the New Jersey Constitution that peaked his interest in a federal document, she noted.

Excerpts from Paterson's writings displayed in the exhibition are on loan from Princeton University Archives, the National Archives in Washington and William Paterson College.

The exhibition may be viewed 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, and 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays in the museum's lower gallery through Sept. 27. Admission is free to museum members. The fee for non-members is $1.50 for adults, and 75 cents for children and senior citizens. For more information, call 747-2266.

Festival of foreign films comes to Monmouth County

By HILDY WILS FONTAINE
THE REGISTER

MANALAPAN — If you can't go to Europe this summer, how about pretending you're going?

Travel is not by plane, but on foot, bicycle or car, depending on how far from the Monmouth County Library Headquarters, 125 Symms Drive, you live.

The escape is free and via the library system's summer series of foreign films.

The series of five films in the International Film Festival begins at 7:30 p.m. Monday with "When Father Was Away on Business," named the best film in the 1985 Cannes International Film Festival.

The festival is unique to Monmouth County and this is the first time the county library has undertaken such a series.

The headquarters is one of five libraries throughout the state — and the only one in Monmouth County — that is showing new foreign films that perhaps film-goers have only read about in New York Times reviews. The four remaining libraries participating in the festival are in Middlesex County.

The series is being inaugurated here in the library meeting room area.

John Smothers, film librarian, is coordinating the festival. With officials from the Middlesex libraries, he participated in selecting the titles.

"We were trying to find films that received good critical response, but were not shown in local theaters," he said. Furthermore, thought was to given to films "people might have read about, but never got a chance to see."

At meetings with officials from the other participating libraries, consideration was also given to the films' timeliness and whether they had been shown on television.

The oldest film is the 1974 French film, "The Mad Adventures of Rabbi Jacob," which closes the series of Monday night screenings Aug. 10. The opening film, "When Father Was Away on Business," a 1985 Yugoslavian film, is the newest. Films sandwiched in between, and their dates, are: "Mephisto," winner of the Academy Award in 1982 for the best foreign film, July 20; "Time Stands Still," a 1982 Hungarian film, July 27; and "A Slave of Love," a 1978 film from Russia, Aug. 3.

Smothers noted that all are Eastern European films except for "The Mad Adventures of Rabbi Jacob." All are in color, and all have English subtitles, he said.

Smothers anticipates success. Friday Nite Flicks, screenings of Hollywood films from the 1930s and 1940s, have had successful runs over the years at the library's Eastern Branch in Shrewsbury and have drawn regular movie-goers weekly.

Following are brief synopses of the films.

●"When Father Was Away on Business" is a wry mix of politics and personal relationships detailing a family's struggle to cope with politics in an unsettled Yugoslavia in the 1950s. It is told from the point of view of the young son, 6-year-old Malik, whose father is sent to a labor camp for making a political remark.

●"Mephisto" is the story of a small-town actor's gradual betrayal of political and moral principle in return for professional power and advancement in Nazi Germany. It was adapted from a novel by Klaus Mann, Thomas Mann's son. It was written while he was in exile, and could not be published in Nazi Germany.

●"Time Stands Still," called by critics a breakthrough film for the Hungarian cinema in the West, tells the story of boys whose rebel father leaves for America when the Russians march into Hungary. It focuses on them as they grow up in the bureaucratic atmosphere of Budapest, surreptiously copying American styles, playing and singing American songs, and rebelling against the drab life in Eastern Europe.

●"The Mad Adventures of Rabbi Jacob" echoes silent screen humor. It is a slapstick comedy about a hot headed, bigoted businessman who, for complicated reasons, disguises himself as a rabbi.

Planning for the International Film Festival began last fall, Smothers said, when he was contacted by library audio-visual officials from East Brunswick asking about his interest in staging such a festival. The proposal appealed to him, meetings took place and titles were chosen from catalogues.

Take the kids to the big city

By HILDY WILS FONTAINE
THE REGISTER

FAIR HAVEN — When Bubbles Fisher appears at Tales of the Purple Mouse at the Fair Haven Commons tomorrow, it will be a local happening with a New York City theme.

Fisher, author of "The Candy Apple: New York for Kids," is the guest from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Purple Mouse, the children's educational store, and part of the establishment's regular programs featuring authors.

What makes her appearance special is that she is a local author, who has a home in Deal and is sharing her talents on a somewhat neighborly basis.

"We want to take advantage of local talent," Patty Campo, a co-owner said. "We are most excited that people in the area know her."

Campo called Fisher's book "a tremendous resource for anybody."

It is the first and only guide to New York City focusing on the entertainment and well-being of children in the city. Fisher has had first-hand experience and has put down on paper the wisdom she gained through her own children and grandchildren.

"Grandma" Fisher's book is based on a basic principle.

"Plan! Plan, plan, plan," Fisher admonished. "Dragging kids from area to area is just that — a drag," she continued. "Children over 7 should provide their input when you plan. Children under 7 should be given choices, as many as two," she said.

Bubbles Fisher:

In the book, which she will autograph at the store, are more than 1,000 suggestions of places to go and things to do with young people of all ages. And the activities are no more costly than a subway token.

She is also an avid theater-goer who advises in her book that the theater's only good seats for young people are in the first six rows. "Wait until you can get them," is her subtle advice.

She will be offering more advice verbally in a workshop session at tomorrow's program, which is free and open to children and adults.

IN CONCERT — Jim Bailey will appear in concert with Appalachian Jubilee at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Great Auditorium in Ocean Grove. Presenting soloists and groups, the show celebrates America's traditional country music. Tickets to the show can be purchased at the auditorium box office.

Folksinger Vega happily surprised by new success

By GARY GRAFF
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Suzanne Vega's publicist is gushing. "She can't register (in a hotel) under her own name. That's soooo good! It's the first level of success."

Vega chuckles about her sudden need for anonymity. But she doesn't deny that the Top 40 success of her latest single, "Luka," and the rave reviews for her new "Solitude Standing" album are putting her privacy at a premium.

"It happens over in England, especially," she said. "People call up at strange hours, saying they saw me the other night and it's because of me that they're tired and have a headache today.

"I'm usually very polite. I say, 'I'm glad you liked the show.' Then I call my manager and say it's time to use a different name when we register."

Vega may be amused about her raised commercial standing, but others are downright surprised. She doesn't exactly write commercial music; it's what she calls "point-of-view character songs," and those perspectives come from an odd menagerie sources, such as a "Small Blue Thing," a picture hanging on the wall ("Marlene on the Wall") and a battered child ("Luka").

Her music, though melodious, is generally quieter and sparser than standard Top 40 fair; "Tom's Diner" on "Solitude Standing" is an almost-spoken a capella poem. And because of her 5-foot-6, 105-pound build, she has been described as "waiflike," not exactly the casting call for an MTV video star.

The reality, however, is that Vega is tough-minded, outspoken, humorous and direct. "People complain that I always write from the victim's point of view," she said. "The situations come from the way I perceive the world. Anyone who looks at me knows I'm small ... and I was 2½ pounds when I was born.

"So I experience the world from the point of view of a small, not very physically aggressive person. But that doesn't mean I just shrivel up and hide, either."

Nothing, she said, proves this as much as her refusal to alter her music for the purpose of having hits. "I never started out in order to be a success," she said. "If I deliberately thought of a way to be successful when I was 14, I'd never have thought it would be folk singing."

That was the music of choice in Vega's home, where her mother, a computer analyst, and her stepfather, a Puerto Rican novelist (her father left when she was 6) sang for Vega and her three siblings and played folk albums. She eventually joined them, and by age 14 she was writing songs.

Vega studied dance at the High School of Performing Arts but kept writing songs and performing at such Manhattan folk spots as the Speakeasy and Folk City. Then, as now, it wasn't traditional folk. "It had an edge," she explained.

Southside Johnny:

Southside Johnny, Jukes at Great Adventure

JACKSON — Southside Johnny and The Jukes, an original Jersey Shore band, will perform two shows July 17 at Six Flags Great Adventure. Shortly after their Great Adventure performances, the group will head to Scandinavia for a week of festival-playing.

The band will perform at 7 and 10 p.m. at the park's Great Arena. Guests may purchase concert tickets for $3 at the Great Adventure box office on the day of the performances. Holders of a Great Adventure "Power Pass" may pick up their tickets beginning Monday.

The Jukes, who have recently finished recording two songs ("Expressway to Your Heart" and "Future in Your Eyes") for the film Adventures in Babysitting, will begin recording a new album after their European trip.

The band originated at the famed Stone Pony in Asbury Park in 1974, and has since remained highly visible on the Jersey music scene.

Other scheduled Friday night performances at the theme park are Air Supply, July 24; Menudo, July 31; and Survivor, Aug. 7. Other concerts include "Classic Superfest," featuring the Grass Roots, The Turtles, The Byrds and Herman's Hermits Aug. 2; Eddie Money, Aug. 6; and the Monkees Labor Day, Sept. 7.

Great Adventure is in Jackson Township, exit 7A off the New Jersey Turnpike or exit 98 off the Garden State Parkway.

Surf's up

The beach film: myth or reality?

By CARRIE RICKEY
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Gidget is the first surf feminist. ... This diminutive dynamo refuses to be just another beach bunny and insists on riding the waves along with the guys.

Take it from a Californian: A beach bum never gets a day off. And the hours! During summer, you gotta work from dawn to sunset — which could amount to 16 hours a day with no benefits save bronzed skin. Compensation is lousy, too. For free, you can ogle sunbathers in eye-catching gear apparently fashioned from sausage casings and dental floss, but just how much can you make scavenging cola bottles and beer cans?

Now, when we talk beach movies, we're not talking Frankie and Annette (though their contribution to the genre is, in a word, awesome). You're probably thinking "Beach Party," "Muscle Beach Party" ...

Musclehead! That kind of air-brained reaction is to deny that the beach movie is among the weightiest of movie genres. But before any serious study of surf-and-sand cinema can commence, some myths about beach movies must be dispelled.

— Myth or reality: The beach movie is entertaining fluff with absolutely no redeeming value. Answer: Myth, perpetrated by those brain-blocked, sun-blocked ignoramuses who confuse "beach movies" with "beach reading."

If you're the kind of person who thinks the beach movie means "Beach Party," think about "From Here to Eternity" (1953), "South Pacific" (1958) and "The Harder They Come" (1973), movies that struck a deep social nerve.

Against its story of class conflict in the military on the eve of Pearl Harbor, is there a more seductive image of glands-on-the-sand lust than Burt Lancaster and Deborah Kerr's surf-soaked embrace in "Eternity"?

Has any American movie exposed learned racism more eloquently than "You've Got to Be Carefully Taught" in "South Pacific"?

Name one movie that better shows the similarities between a most-admired pop star and a most-wanted killer than "The Harder They Come," which shows its aspiring singer-turned-outlaw on the beaches of Jamaica. (It's also the movie that introduced reggae to U.S. audiences.)

— Myth or reality: The "Beach Party" genre was established by the frivolous, endless-summer 1963 California musical starring Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello. Answer: Myth, perpetrated by California brain-bleached baby boomers whose memories are shorter than Annette when she was a Mouseketeer.

A chronology: The first (and arguably greatest) movie of the "beach party" cycle is "Gidget" (1959), starring the pride of Bayonne, N.J., the divine Sandra Dee; the second (and arguably greatest) is "Where the Boys Are" (1960), starring Dolores Hart, Paula Prentiss, Yvette Mimieux, George Hamilton and Connie Francis.

A geography: Yes, "Gidget" takes place on the Santa Monica, Calif., sands later so hospitable to Frankie and Annette. "Where the Boys Are" is set in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

A typology: Unlike Frankie and Annette pictures, these are not frivolous movies. Gidget is the first surf feminist. Before her, surfing was something boys did and girls watched. This diminutive dynamo refuses to be just another beach bunny and insists on riding the waves along with the guys. She earns the love of a couple of them along the way, namely Cliff Robertson and James Darren, a.k.a. Moondoggie. For my money, the definitive beach movie.

"Where the Boys Are" (unlike its frivolous 1984 remake) is quite a serious movie about college women forced to decide whether they are "nice girls" or "good girls" — namely, will they play house before marrying or marry before playing house? Set in the raging-hormones surf of Fort Lauderdale during spring break, it's an unusually candid film about sex and the single coed.

— Myth or reality: The Frankie and Annette movies are indistinguishable except for their titles. Answer: Myth and reality, perpetrated by movie critics with sunstroke.

You already know how to tell Frankie and Annette apart; here's how to tell their movies apart.

The original "Beach Party" (1963) stars Frankie, Annette and love-that-Bob Cummings as an anthropologist stalking the wild beach bunny and finding that the untamed youth at the beach are housebroken after all.

In "Muscle Beach Party" (1964), "Little Stevie" Wonder makes his movie debut in a sequel in which Frankie and Annette find that Don Rickles and his bevy of bodybuilders have usurped their favorite stretch of sand.

Now that we have muscles, it's time to flex them in "Bikini Beach" (1964), in which Frankie has a dual role as his American self and a Mod English singer serenading Annette.

"Pajama Party" (1964) introduces Tommy Kirk as a Martian puzzled by the dating rites of the alien Californian.

Everyone's favorite, "Beach Blanket Bingo" (1965), stars Frankie, Annette, Buster ... and wait, there's more! Linda Evans as a singing star, Marta Kristen as a mermaid and Don Rickles as a loudmouth.

Ann Landers

Adopted children are part of the family

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from "Mom," whose relatives would not accept the adopted child, made me weep. Maybe this letter will make a lot of folks feel better.

Back in the 1950s when it was unusual for unmarried women to have babies, my sister adopted a handicapped child. No youngster ever received more love or attention. She was the family pet. In her special walker she was the flower girl at my wedding.

Recently my daughter and her husband, who had one daughter of their own, adopted three little sisters, two of them pre-schoolers. When the adoption agency called the conversation went like this:

"Are you the couple who is interested in adopting an older child?"

"Yes."

"Would you consider taking two?"

"Yes."

"How about three?"

"Three?"

"They are sisters, and we would like to keep them together."

"That's fine."

"But you haven't talked to your husband."

"It will be all right with him. Take my word for it."

When her husband heard the news, he said, "Can we go after them tonight, or do we have to wait until tomorrow?"

These children are adored by aunts, uncles, cousins, neighbors and friends. My daughter didn't have any more children of her own. How lucky they were to have adopted those three. Sign this — Grand Rapids Granny

Dear Granny: It is true that God takes with one hand and gives with the other. Thank you for a heartwarming letter.

Senile mother drives family crazy

Dear Ann Landers: A girlfriend of mine and her family moved into her mother's home two years ago. Since then "Mother" has become senile. She wanders around the house wearing several layers of clothes and hides kitchen utensils. It seems that my friend and her family are tired of Mother because she has to be "baby-sat." She also must be given antibiotics daily. Without the drugs her lungs would fill up with fluid and she would get pneumonia.

The dear lady is in good health other than that — I mean, she's not bedridden and she walks without a walker. By the way, she's 81 years old.

Anyway, this is where my story gets serious. My friend and her family are considering taking Mother off the antibiotics. When she catches pneumonia they will just let her die. Isn't that murder?

What can I do to save this poor woman? If her family goes through with this plan and kills her I will be forced by conscience to turn them in to the authorities, but I want to save her before that happens. The dear lady isn't that bad off really. She just repeats herself and forgets a lot. Please, Ann, tell me what to do. No signature, just sign me — Sick in Sunny California

Dear Sunny Calif: Since you seem to be well wired into what goes on in that family, it shouldn't be too difficult to find out the name of the woman's physician. Call him or her and ask for guidance. Time is of the essence, so get moving.

Family schedule helps plan dinner

Dear Heloise: We have a very large family and when scheduling dinner time and other activities became a very tedious procedure, I knew I had to figure out some way before I went crazy!

What I did was to make a master schedule and pass it around to each member of the family for them to write in school activities, sport events, church meetings or work hours. This way I knew when certain members would be late for dinner or that they wouldn't be home at all.

Besides helping me, this also gives the children plenty of time to rearrange their schedule for a special family dinner or other engagement.

Now I know when to serve dinner and I also know where each child is. — Lisa Chavez, Arlington, Texas

How clever you are! Scheduling is very important in all busy families.

Thank you for writing and sharing your tip. — Heloise

Care for pearls

Dear Heloise: I was given some pearls for my birthday. They are absolutely beautiful! I want to take the best care of them as possible. How should they be cleaned and how should they be stored? — Pinkie Cade, San Antonio, Texas

You should keep your pearls free of dirt, perfume, cosmetics and perspiration. These can cause the finest of pearls to lose their luster. Wipe your pearls frequently with just a damp cloth. Experts suggest restringing them at least once a year, depending on how much you wear them.

Pearls should not be worn on hands or wrists while doing cleaning and never let them come in contact with detergents or soaps.

When not being worn, the pearls should be stored in a separate compartment of your jewelry box so they won't get scratched. — Heloise

Fill ice cube tray with watering can

Dear Heloise: I used to hate filling ice cube trays as I would always spill the water on the floor, counter, etc. I just knew there had to be a better way.

The other day I was watering my plants and thought I could use my water can (with the spout) to fill the ice cube trays in the freezer. Now, when I take out the tray and empty the cubes, I place the empty tray back in the freezer and use my watering can to fill it. It works wonderfully! No more spills! — Rita S. Elko, Nev.

Use wax paper to store envelopes

Dear Heloise: Recently I saw an article in your column where a woman asked how she could keep her envelopes from sticking. You had mentioned a method using an iron.

Well, I wanted to write in and share a method that I have used. I use wax paper and put it under the flap of each envelope.

I measure one envelope and cut wax paper to the size of the envelope and slide the wax paper under the flap to each one.

As I use the envelopes I save the wax paper in another envelope to be used again when I buy more envelopes.

This is a good idea for Christmas cards that are left over, or when you buy a new box of cards on sale, put in the wax paper and store them away for next Christmas. — Anna S. Conroy, Largo, Fla.

BRIDGE

Reading the Double

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The story of today's hand is long and sour. South took the ace of clubs and led the king of spades to drive out the ace. East returned a club, and South won and led the queen of spades.

West's diamond discard was bad news: South struggled on, but the defense was accurate: South lost a second trump, a heart and a diamond.

SWEETER STORY

South should have made the story short and sweet by simple card reading. When East showed up with the ace of spades, South knew that West had doubled one spade with at most the Q-J of hearts, the Q-J of clubs and the K-Q of diamonds. (If West held the K-Q-J of diamonds, he would have led the king of diamonds instead of the queen of clubs.)

Why would West double for a takeout with just 11 high-card points? Only a singleton spade could justify so weak a double.

South should win the club return, enter dummy with a heart and return a spade to finesse with the nine. When this finesse succeeds, South draws trumps and claims his contract.

DAILY QUESTION

You hold: ♠73 ♡A862 ◇764 ♣7653. Partner opens with one heart, and the next player bids one spade. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts. You count four points for the ace, one point for the doubleton and one additional point for the high card in partner's suit. The total count of six points is just barely enough for your raise, but it would be foolish to pass when you have the values needed for a bid.

FRIDAY, JULY 10

Born today, you are a highly determined, strict and disciplined individual. You always insist that those around you -- especially in the work place -- adhere to your codes of ethics and behavior, and that they agree to live up to your rigid standards of excellence. You always pay keen attention to the clock; time is something you consider an ally -- and you respect it just as one would respect a business partner. You can easily be worked into a frenzy when you are unable to stick to a schedule.

Despite your unrivaled business sense, there is a deeply spiritual side to your nature, and you may at some point in your life decide to devote considerable time to religious pursuits. You cherish family relationships, and will likely have a long and happy marriage.

Also born on this date are John Calvin, reformer; Marcel Proust and Saul Bellow, authors.

To see what is in store for you tomorrow, find your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

TV TALK

Q. Can you please tell me what happened to the characters of Lorna and Zach on "Loving"? I thought they were one of the classiest couples on television. — B.M., Novelty, Ohio

A. In the storyline, Zach and Lorna married and moved to San Francisco. Zach's daughter Kelly recently joined them. As for the actors, John Gabriel who played Zach is busy with commercials — he is national spokesperson for several products — and he has his nightclub act and makes episodic appearances.

Susan Walters, who created the role of Lorna, was a top fashion model before joining "Loving." Just before leaving the show, Susan married Linden Ashby, the actor who previously played her cousin Curtis.

Q. Has the actress who plays Monica on "General Hospital" ever appeared on another soap? — K.J., North Tonawanda, N.Y.

A. Prior to joining "General Hospital," Leslie Charleson created the role of Iris Donnelly on "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing." Before joining "General Hospital," Leslie was seen in dozens of primetime shows.

The character of Monica was originally played by Patsy Rahn. As played by Rahn, Monica was a self-centered medico married to Jeff Webber but in love with his brother Rick, who was thought to have died while on a foreign rescue mission.

Trump says Soviets interested in skyscraper

American real estate developer Donald Trump says his luxurious New York skyscraper, Trump Tower, so impressed Soviet officials that they want him to build one in the Soviet Union.

"They really wanted the feeling of Trump Tower in New York," Trump said.

The New York building on Fifth Avenue contains shops and apartments. But Trump said a Trump Tower in the Soviet Union would be a hotel.

"The reason I was contacted over others is the fact that numerous officials of the government loved Trump Tower in New York," he said.

"That's the kind of feeling they want here, they need an extreme luxury hotel. They'd like to have the kind of quality we're able to give."

Trump said Soviet officials, led by the director of the Soviet foreign travel agency Intourist, showed him possible sites in Moscow for the hotel and that he was looking for "a very prime location."

He said a hotel would be run as a joint venture with the Soviets. He said no timetable or pricetag for the project had been set.

Trump said he also will inspect possible sites for building a hotel in Leningrad..

Several luxury hotels have been built in the last few years in Moscow and Leningrad, primarily by foreign companies.

'LA Law' star Eikenberry juggled motherhood, job

Jill Eikenberry, star of "L.A. Law," says she had long preached that "equality is the essential ingredient of a relationship," but when she was pregnant she became "the little woman."

But not for long.

When her son Max was born five years ago, "I didn't work for seven months, and I began to worry. I was supposed to enjoy this time with my baby, but while I loved him, I didn't feel fulfilled," she told Parade magazine.

"I realized I wanted to get back to work, so we hired a baby-sitter and juggled our schedules so we could share taking care of Max. Sure, I worried about not spending enough time with Max, although I know it's better for a baby to have a happy mother."

Eikenberry's co-star on the NBC-TV show is Michael Tucker — her husband of 13 years in real life. In the interview to be published in this Sunday's issue of the magazine, Tucker said the television roles have reinvigorated their relationship.

Even in death, Lennon can't live down remark

A leading churchman in John Lennon's home town of Liverpool, England, demanded that a painting of the former Beatle be removed from a local exhibition. The work, by West German artist J.L. Stengel, depicts Lennon wearing a crown of thorns. "The Beatles did a great deal for this city and the world," said Anglican Bishop Michael Henshall. "But there is no way you can represent one of them as the Son of God." Twenty years ago, Lennon created a stir when he said that the Beatles were more popular than Jesus Christ.

Fred Grandy, who used to play Gopher Smith on TV's "The Love Boat," has completed six months in Congress as a representative from Iowa and says he finds little difference between Los Angeles and Washington. "In both towns, image and symbols are as important as substance," Grandy said. "It's a little like coming from Camelot to Oz, one mythical kingdom to another."

Does it have a back door?

Foxy lady

British sex symbol and rock singer Samantha Fox arrived in Israel and was mobbed at the airport by scores of teen-age boys who broke through security barriers to greet her.

Fox, Britain's answer to Madonna, will give two concerts in Tel Aviv before she leaves today.

Police rushed the star out a back airport gate and into a waiting car, but screaming teen-agers reached the car and temporarily prevented it from moving by pounding on the roof and doors.

Cash discovers life in Midwest

Miss America, Kellye Cash, says her title has given her a chance to visit places "you never thought people actually lived in — like North and South Dakota and Nebraska."

Cash, a native of Tennessee, announced her discovery of life in the Midwest in Hot Springs, Ark., where she will participate in the Miss Arkansas pageant this weekend.

For those demanding a second opinion, the Chamber of Commerce of Lincoln, Neb., is about to bring out a videotape about life in that university town.

Dick Cavett, who not only lived in Nebraska but was born there, is the narrator.

"We want to announce to the world that Lincoln is a great place," said Duane Vicary, executive vice president of the chamber.

Abbie to protest Point Pleasant, Pennsylvania, pumping project

Activist Abbie Hoffman says he will lead a "Summer for Democracy" campaign to help opponents of a controversial water diversion project enlist support.

Hoffman said yesterday he hopes to draw national attention to the campaign against the Point Pleasant, Pa., pump project, which would deliver 95 million gallons of Delaware River water daily to Montgomery County to supplement local supplies and cool Philadelphia Electric Co.'s nuclear power plant at Limerick.

Hoffman issued a call "to all people opposed to environmental destruction, nuclear energy and the unregulated power of utility companies."

Hoffman was arrested last week after he chained himself to a fence around the construction site of a reservoir in Bucks County.

Will this be the last all-male dance for famed Bohemia Club?

When the powerful men who call themselves Bohemians gather for their annual retreat in the Northern California redwoods today, it may be the last dance without the ladies.

The club has been all-male for 115 years, and includes among its members such distinguished males as President Reagan, Vice President George Bush, Secretary of State George Shultz, former presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford and intellectual gadfly William F. Buckley Jr.

The club will not disclose which members will attend this weekend's retreat.

"This is the all-male retreat, for better or worse," said one of the club's 11 directors, who spoke on condition that he not be identified. "I think most men feel that men should have the right to be away from women some of the time if they choose to be."

A coalition of groups representing women, minorities and a host of liberal causes disagrees, and they are poised to declare victory.

The San Francisco club is under court order to hire women at its 2,700-acre Bohemian Grove, 75 miles north of here.

If the U.S. Supreme Court dismisses the club's appeal in September, it will be required to start an affirmative action program in hiring.

What's more, the state Franchise Tax Board and Alcoholic Beverage Control board are both prepared to take action against the club if it refuses to accept women members.

Patricia Shiu, president of California Women Lawyers, said Bohemia won't be a boys' club for much longer. "It's a last bastion of more or less accepted race and sex discrimination in the United States," Shiu said.

Who would North play in movies?

Picture Oliver North in pictures: what role would he play?

When the Daily News' Inquiring Photographer asked New Yorkers that question he got answers ranging from Clint Eastwood to Pee-wee Herman to John Wayne.

"I'd cast him as Pee-wee Herman in "Pee-Wee's Big Adventure," said Lydia Augustin, an accounts clerk. "Why? I think the hearings are a joke. North is covering for the president and he's willing to take all the blame."

Ray Tarrats, a credit analyst, said, "North isn't suave enough to be James Bond, but he'd make a perfect Duke Wayne in "The Green Berets." Looking at him, you can tell he's a combat man, a guy you'd want to follow in wartime."

A vote for "Robin Hood" came from Annette Vecchio who reasoned: "Robin took from the rich and gave to the poor. Didn't North take money from wealthy nations and Americans and give it to the poor Contras to help their cause?"

"It would be 'Rambo,' who did what had to be done by taking matters into his own hands," said Lisa Jaccarino, a tax recorder. "That's the way Oliver North operated, on his own, in what he saw as the country's best interest."

Janet Coleman, a conference vice chairman, saw North as Clint Eastwood in a "Dirty Harry."

The Nation

■ HOLLYWOOD — Movie and television directors staged informational picketing at a studio yesterday, drawing Academy Award-winning directors and actors Jamie Farr and Ricardo Montalban the day before a strike deadline.

About 1,000 members of the Directors Guild of America and their supporters marched for an hour outside The Burbank Studios, many carrying signs that read: "Coming soon? On Strike. Directors Guild."

Also yesterday, negotiators for the Directors Guild of America and the Motion Picture and Television Producers Alliance met briefly and announced the producers had withdrawn one disputed contract proposal.

The demonstration, which included Oscar-winning directors Franklin Schaffner and James Brooks and actor-directors Farr and Montalban, was called to bolster the directors' position in stalled contract talks with the Motion Picture and Television Producers Alliance.

"When you've done battle with the likes of L.B. Mayer and Harry Cohn and survived, Coca-Cola is just another soft drink company," directors union President Gilbert Cates told the crowd.

■ DETROIT — The body of Pvt. Eddie Slovik, who 42 years ago became the only American soldier executed for desertion during World War II, was on its way home yesterday for burial in Detroit, thanks to the efforts of a Sterling Heights, Mich., man.

Barney Calka, 60, paid about $4,000 to have Slovik's body brought back from France so it can be buried in a plot next to that of Slovik's widow, Antoinette, in Woodmere Cemetery in Detroit.

"I look at it this way," said Calka, a Macomb County commissioner and retired assistant Sterling Heights fire chief. "Eddie Slovik is an American; I'm an American. Eddie Slovik is a Catholic; I'm a Catholic. Eddie Slovik was Polish; I'm Polish."

"I felt he deserved a Catholic burial and that's what he's going to get."

■ WASHINGTON — An unapologetic Attorney General Edwin Meese III refused to accept blame yesterday for his failure to meet financial disclosure requirements of the federal ethics laws, telling Congress that his ties to a businessman involved in the Wedtech Corp. scandal were proper "in all respects."

"If legitimate questions existed, the proper and more responsible course of action, and the one required by federal law and regulations, would have been to ask me directly," Meese told the Senate Subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management.

Meese said he is still waiting for the Office of Government Ethics to tell him precisely what steps he must take in order to comply with the 1978 Ethics in Government Act.

■ WASHINGTON — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was back at work on Capitol Hill yesterday after a falling tree hit the car in which he was a passenger.

Kennedy, 54, suffered minor cuts to his leg and the bridge of his nose in the Wednesday night accident, aides said. No stitches were required, according to Kennedy spokesman Jeff Smith.

The senator was a passenger in his 1985 Ford LTD driven by aide Michael Gavigan, 23, when part of a 35-foot oak tree fell into the northbound lanes of the George Washington Memorial Parkway in nearby Arlington, Va., shortly before 9 p.m.

North says he was to be scapegoat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North returned fire at the Iran-Contra hearings yesterday, boasting he was the "fix-it Ollie" who got sensitive jobs done and saying there was a long-standing plan for him to "take the hit" to shield President Reagan if the Iran-Contra dealings were revealed.

"For whom were you going to be the scapegoat?" asked committee counsel Arthur Liman.

"For whomever necessary," North replied. "For the administration, for the president." He said it had been decided as early as 1984 that "there had to be somebody to take the rap for this" and he was it.

But, he said, "there was probably not another person on the planet Earth that was as shocked as I was" to learn that the activities were to undergo criminal investigation.

While North was testifying, there were these other developments:

— At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the possibility of a pardon for North has "never been addressed." He said he had discussed North's testimony with President Reagan but "what he says is private."

— Two men stood up at the rear of the hearing room in the morning session, unfurled a white banner and began shouting anti-Contra comments. North, sitting with his back to the two, initially ducked, then turned to watch while uniformed police hustled the demonstrators from the room.

ASSOCIATED STUDENTS

OUT YOU GO — Capitol Hill police carry one man and escort another from the Senate Caucus Room yesterday after the two disrupted the testimony of Lt. Col. Oliver North before the joint Iran-Contra committee.

The 43-year-old Marine said then-CIA Director William Casey knew all along of the diversion of Iranian arms sales proceeds to the Contras. But North said he concealed that fact when Attorney General Edwin Meese III questioned him last Nov. 23. Meese was conducting an inquiry at the time — at Reagan's request — but North said the deception was "part of the plan" to keep the affair hidden.

North also said he assured Poindexter — wrongly as it turned out — that he had destroyed all memos in his files relating to the diversion.

North's third day as a witness at the joint House-Senate hearings began with his assertion that the Congress, not he, should be under investigation. He was allowed in the morning session to deliver a long statement, then undergo gentle questioning from a Republican committee counsel.

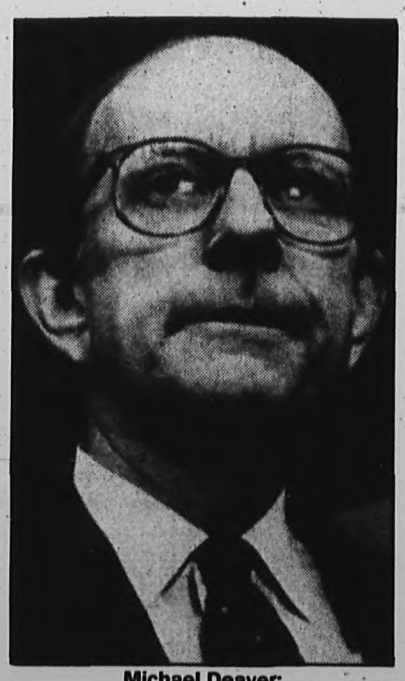

But the tone changed quickly in the afternoon as North's lawyer, Brendan Sullivan, dueled with Democratic committee attorney Liman over whether the North could consult a notebook while he was testifying. Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, the Senate committee chairman, finally settled the matter by ruling North could use the book.

North said Casey "was very enthusiastic" about the program of using profits from Iranian arms sales for providing weapons support for the rebels fighting Nicaragua's government.

Asked by Liman if he asked Poindexter about the sudden reversal, North replied he wasn't un the habit of questioning superiors and if told to he would have "saluted smartly and marched up the hill. That's what colonels are supposed to do."

Reagan fired North on Nov. 25, and Poindexter resigned. Liman, using North's words that the Iran-Contra scheme was a "neat idea," asked if the officer wondered why the president dismissed him because of it.

"This lieutenant colonel is not going to challenge a decision of the commander in chief for whom I still work," North said.

Prosecutor claims Deaver lied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael K. Deaver lied about his lobbying to protect his ability to make "millions of dollars of income for relatively little work," the prosecutor in the former presidential aide's perjury case charged yesterday.

Deaver, former deputy White House chief of staff, is charged with two counts of lying to the House Energy and Commerce oversight subcommittee and three counts of lying to a grand jury.

Both panels were investigating Deaver for possible violations of the Ethics in Government Act in connection with his lobbying business, Michael K. Deaver & Associates.

Deaver "knew that truthful testimony would end all chances for the sale of his business . . . for millions of dollars, most of which would have gone to him personally — and would directly jeopardize his lucrative client contracts which generated income ranging from $100,000 to $475,000 per year," independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr., said in court papers.

The prosecutor's brief was filed in advance of Monday's scheduled start of the perjury trial in U.S. District Court.

"One of Deaver's motives for perjury was to protect himself against embarrassment that would result from public exposure of his ability to earn large sums of money by getting access to well-placed friends and former colleages from making a few telephone calls," Seymour said.

Deaver has not been charged with violating the statute, which prohibits former officials from lobbying their old colleagues in government within a year of leaving office.

But Seymour said "the proof at trial will show that all the surrounding facts suggested Deaver engaged in numerous potential violations of the statute," Seymour said.

Deaver "knew that truthful testimony would reveal not only potential violations of the Ethics in Government Act . . . but also violations of White House policy on post-employment contacts," Seymour said.

The prosecutor said the investigations were beginning last year as several lucrative one-year contracts with such clients as Philip Morris, Canada and TWA were about to expire.

After he left the White House in 1985, TWA and Philip Morris had retained Deaver's firm for $250,000 a year and Canada for $100,000.

"These were lucrative contracts whic had, together with others (most of the terminable on 30 days' notice), yielde millions for dollars of income for very littl work," Seymour said.

"We intend to argue to the jury that th only way Deaver could achieve exoneratio in the eyes of his clients was to commi perjury," Seymour said.

Deaver's May 16, 1986 testimony befor the House subcommittee chaired by Rep John D. Dingell, D-Mich. also came "at th tail end of negotiations" with Saatchi Saatchi "to sell his 12-month-old 'consult ing' business for a sum which could reac $18 million," Seymour said.

The Deaver firm's sale to the London based public relations firm would have per sonally yielded $15 million to Deaver based on his 86 per cent ownership in th business, Seymour said.

"This bonanza was placed in jeopardy b the Dingell subcommittee hearings and th impending grand jury investigation."

Seymour noted that three days befor testifying before Dingell's panel, Deave told a Saatchi & Saatchi representative tha "intended to state publicly that the sale ne gotiations had been discontinued."

Marcos reveals plan to invade homeland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Americans with a hidden tape recorder and phony credentials as arms procurers tricked former Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos into revealing a plan to invade his homeland, and then gave the information to the Philippine government, the Americans testified yesterday.

Their statements — and tapes of their conversations with Marcos at his Honolulu home earlier this year — also indicated that Marcos claimed to have up to 1,000 tons of gold hidden in a secret cache and $500 million in Swiss bank accounts.

The bizarre revelations were made by two Virginia Beach, Va., men, Robert Chastain, a business consultant, and Richard Hirschfeld, an attorney, at a hearing of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs.

It was, according to committee member Chester Atkins, D-Mass, "a shabby, sordid tale of gold bullion being offered for weapons to overthrow an ally of the United States."

According to the testimony and the tapes, Hirschfeld and Chastain worked their way into Marcos' confidence, beginning in September 1986, on the strength of their business association with Mohamed al-Fassi, a businessman with contacts with the Saudi Arabian royal family.

They convinced Marcos they and al-Fassi were willing to help get arms and money for an invasion of the Philippines that was originally set for late June and eventually was planned to take place today, Hirschfeld testified.

Speaking to Chastain, who had hidden a voice-activated recorder in his briefcase, Marcos said during a meeting on May 21 he wanted anti-tank weapons, anti-aircraft missiles, rifles, mortars and enough ammunition for a three-month fight, the committee was told.

Marcos was to land by boat in his home province Ilocos Norte, where he would be greeted by supporters and swept back to control of the Philippines.

"I am going to land there, I don't care who opposes me," Marcos said, according to the transcript. "And if they oppose the landing, that is when we start the battle."

He claimed to have as an ally the commander of Clark Air Base, a U.S. installation in the Philippines that has both U.S. and Philippine forces.

What was to happen to the current president of the Philippines, Corazon Aquino, who took office after Marcos was swept aside by a popular revolt in February 1986?

"What I would like to see happen is we take her hostage," Marcos told Chastain.

Ferdinand Marcos: coup was to be today

1 million Koreans mourn dead student

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Up to a million people filled the streets yesterday in a mass tribute to a student slain by police. Riot squads stayed away, but used tear gas later to stop a march on the presidential palace.

The aborted march set off street battles between rock-throwing protesters and police, who took prisoners and beat some of them.

President Chun Doo-hwan's government announced that the political rights of 2,335 opposition activists were restored as part of Chun's agreement July 1 to begin direct presidential elections and other democratic reforms. Opposition leader Kim Dae-jung was included.

Crowds chanted "Down with the military dictatorship!" and "We want democracy!" as they surged into the City Hall square behind the coffin of Lee Han-yul, 20. He died Sunday of injuries suffered during a protest a month ago.

People leaned out of office windows and stood on rooftops to cheer those walking behind the coffin, which was draped with yellow and white flowers. Huge crowds on sidewalks cheered and echoed the chants.

"Our whole nation aspires for democracy," said one person on the sidelines. "We are all democrats except President Chun."

Leading Korean newspapers estimated the crowd at up to 1 million. Political observers said it was the biggest protest ever seen in South Korea.

Police officials initially estimated the crowd at 100,000 and later refused to give a figure.

Riot police remained out of sight during the funeral demonstration, but blocked tens of thousands of people who tried to march toward Chun's palace behind students yelling "To the Blue House!"

Hundreds of riot police in green uniforms and black visored helmets, supported by 10 armored cars, joined their shields into a wall to block the way.

Angry marchers tried to breach the line and the armored cars opened fire with multiple tear gas launchers. Hundreds of exploding canisters spewed stinging, choking gas among the protesters.

Police attack squads charged into the running crowd and seized dozens of people. Officers were seen beating and kicking prisoners.

Rumson cop pact to be arbitrated

By JUDY HOLMES
THE REGISTER

RUMSON — For the first time, police officers want a contract that outlines their salary, benefits and working conditions.

The police and the borough are scheduled to meet with an arbitrator on July 30, said Patrolman F. Scott Bradley, the Rumson delegate to PBA Local 184.

"We are going to arbitration because we didn't accept what the borough offered," Bradley said.

This is the first time police have been represented in salary negotiations by the Rumson-Fair Haven Police Benevolent Association Local 184. Police salaries had been set during budget-making.

Last November, the entire 16-member department agreed to PBA representation during 1987 salary negotiations. At that time, the police said they were not seeking a contract but borough recognition of the union as their bargaining agent.

Yesterday, Bradley said the police want their salaries and benefits written in contract form and signed by both sides. He said other personnel matters would be included, but that there were no disagreements in those areas.

"A contract is needed because we are falling behind in salaries and benefits in relation to other municipalities," Bradley said. He declined to discuss details of wage requests and what the borough was offering.

Borough officials say they have always had a good relationship with the Police Department and that they expect no change because of negotiations.

"Things are going along just the way they always have," said Borough Councilman Charles S. Callman, who is police commissioner. "The relationship has always been good. We don't hold grudges or do things like that around here. We just try to get the job done," he said.

Police are being paid 1986 wages pending the outcome of the negotiations, said J. Gary Sammon, borough administrator.

News in Brief

■ RUMSON — The Borough Council last night accepted the bids of United Oil Co., Hillside, and Shore Gas and Oil, Oakhurst, to provide the borough with diesel fuel and fuel oil.

The council also approved $6,200 to recalk and scrape windows at Borough Hall and buy walkie talkies for the first aid squad.

And the council approved $15,000 to buy a recycling trailer.

■ KEANSBURG — A 9-year-old boy remained in critical condition last night at Monmouth Medical Center, Long Branch, after he stopped breathing during a Tuesday night baseball game, said Stephen Breslow, a hospital spokesman.

Daniel Buchert, Commodore Avenue, reportedly stopped breathing after he was struck in the chest with a baseball while pitching at a little league baseball game at Collins Field, Church Street.

Keansburg police declined to release any information on the incident yesterday. The boy's parents could not be reached for comment.
