PRICE TWO CENTS

PLAYGROUND ACTIVITIES ENJOYED BY LARGE THROG OF CHILDREN

The girls this week of the Silver Lake Playground evidently decided not to be one step behind the boys, as far as sports go. The girls' volleyball team on Thursday afternoon traveled to Friendly and defeated the girls representing Friendly. However, the contest was not a one-sided affair—the set going to three games. Lena and Rose Dachino played well for the winners.

Joe Pizzi finally emerged victor in the horseshoe contest at the Lake, and will represent Silver Lake in this sport.

Friday came and with it the longed for special event—a Sand Show Contest. The sand pit was wet down and in the afternoon the little artists and builders began their creations. Any one passing the ground would have noticed swings, slides, etc. apparently deserted—but at the rear, in the pit was a scene of busy confusion. The little artists winning prizes were:

Girls—First, Lena Dachino, boat; second, Rose Dachino, gas station; third, Rose Russell, boat.

Boys—First, Tony Pico and Nick Sylvester, U. S. Capitol; second, Orlando Vitello and Sam Deblasio, swimming pool; third, Phil Cerzio, station and tunnel; fourth, Jim Catalano and Sam Fabaruccio, boat.

The judges were: Ethel Miller, John Pabst and Michael Mazzara.

Cortlandt Street
It seemed that the Bronx Park had been moved for the day to Cortlandt Playground on Friday afternoon. The grounds took the aspect of a menagerie—cats here, dogs there—turtles, rabbits, canaries, snakes and what not! Yes, it was Cortlandt's annual Pet Show.

Every youngster had his or her pet there with the hopes of winning a ticket to the Capitol Theatre as a prize. But, like all pet shows, every exhibit was not a blue ribbon winner much to the sorrow of the judges.

We certainly appreciate the cooperation of the management of the Capitol Theatre in arranging for the tickets.

The winners were: Largest, G. Reyle, and J. Kant; smallest, J. Matt and W. Stout; neatest, H. Kaluzer, and G. Place; most original, K. Layin and G. Hunt; best trick, R. Engle, funniest, E. Arnold and O. Bohrer; hobbies, Buddy Burden, Albert Caruso; freak, C. Mason and J. Woods.

Recreation House
Wow, what a week!—pet show, bathing beauty contest, baseball game and largest attendance so far for the summer.

Last Monday at 2 P. M. the annual pet show was held at the Recreation House Grounds. Animals of all descriptions were entered—dogs, cats, canaries, snakes, turtles, baby frogs, etc. A crowd of one hundred and fifty people gathered about the front lawn to witness the show. Last week excitement reigned at the Recreation House Playground. Why? Why the "Bathing Beauty Contest," of course! Many visitors waited expectantly to see the petite young misses, ranging from two to eleven years, promenaded the pathways. And the costumes! One really didn't have to go to the shore to know the "latest from Deauville."

Prizes were awarded—Florence Miller (Miss Minkler place), cutest costume; Marilyn Cannon, cutest blonde; Dolores Palangio, smallest; Catherine Lukowiak, cutest shape; Theresa Palangio, cutest brunette; and Anna Ross, chubbiest.

A shower was given to the kiddies after the beauty contest.

Friday morning the Cortlandt street baseball team defeated the Local Elks Entertain Kiddies At Olympic Park

More than 400 Belleville children made a perfect "take off" Monday morning at the start of their annual flight to Olympic Park as guests of Belleville Lodge of Elks. Five Public Service buses and a dozen private automobiles appeared overflowing with children and happy laughter anticipating many a loop-the-loop of enjoyment and bounteous good things to eat.

Robert Anderson, Elk and motorcycle patrolman, was general director of the event. Richard Neourse was the motorcycle escort.

The youngsters left the Elks Club in Washington avenue at 10 o'clock and stayed at the park until 4. As a starter, each child was given a strip of ten tickets for the amusements and more were forthcoming as long as they lasted.

None were permitted to suffer the pangs of hunger. At lunch time a box containing sandwiches, cake and fruit was given each child. The milk supply amounted to 200 quarts. The finishing touch was afforded by twenty gallons of ice cream.

The committee of arrangement comprised James Reilly, Joseph Harter, William Liebau, Harry Lander, Clarence Rothery and Dr. William Anderson.

Queen Of "It" Graduates To Sober Acting

Clara Bow Doffs Mantle Of "Dizzy" Portrays In "Dangerous Curves"

Poor Punchinello with an "It" punch comes to the Capitol Theatre Wednesday, August 14, in "Dangerous Curves," the latest Clara Bow-Paramount release.

Miss Bow changes character in this one. She graduates from the dizzy, chuckleheaded flapper class to work for her master's degree in tragedy-comedy. How she does it in "Dangerous Curves" is "nobody's business." For the record, however, let it be said that she injects as much vigor, enthusiasm and charm in the portrayal of a short-skirted and spangled bare-back rider as she formerly did as a scatterbrained, aloof, peppy and strut girl.

In "Dangerous Curves" Miss Bow is in love with Richard Arlen, a tight-rope performer. She decides to learn tight-rope walking herself (between performances as a bare-back artist), so that she can get a place on the circus program near to her beloved. She finally learns the wire-balancing art, but finds that Arlen spurns her for Kay Francis, female menace in the piece. In spite of his repeated irresponsiveness, Clara continues to demonstrate her love for Arlen and finally manages, by a desperate move, to save him from disgrace, bringing his to a realization of love for her.

A splendid background of circus atmosphere has been brought to the picture by Paramount and the direction of Lothar Mendes is excellent. To Miss Bow rightfully go the highest honors for acting that rings true, and to Arlen and Miss Francis go the secondary tributes for their intelligent support. It is a great picture.

Recinds Resolution Asking Board Of Freeholders To Take Over Street

The Board of Commissioners at the weekly meeting held last night, passed a resolution rescinding a resolution passed some time ago asking the Board of Freeholders to take over Union avenue from Belleville avenue to Joramelon street and curb and pave it. Mayor Kenworthy explained that inasmuch as the property owners on the street did not want the improvement at this time and that the present pavement was good for 2 or 3 years the Board felt that the matter could wait.

At the insistence of Commissioner Carragher the Board agreed to have Town Engineer Blank make a survey of the damage done to the drain on Belmont avenue in the Silver Lake section, estimate the cost of repairing at the price when laid originally, and take up the matter with Thomas Edison, Inc., whose chemical works is located on the street. The town alleges that chemicals from the factory flowing through the drain caused the damage and the Edison Co. promised to pay for the damage but never received a bill. Engineer Blank was also instructed to confer with officials from East Orange and Bloomfield on the contemplated Meadowbrook sewer.

The contract for grading Celia Terrace and Berkeley avenue was awarded to P. Naples & Co., at a price of $1777.91 and the contract for sidewalk and curbs on Baldwin place, Garden avenue, Perry street and Emmett street to Jannarone Contracting Co. at a price of $11,306.95.

A resolution to issue an emergency note for $1000 to remove poplar trees throughout the town whose roots have been causing damage to sewer pipes, was laid over for one week at the request of Commissioner Carragher who questioned the legality of the note. He claimed that removing trees whose roots might cause damage in the future, was not an emergency.

Commission Patrick A. Waters said the practise of plumbers using patent hammered joints in water main connections instead of pipe joints should be discontinued, since it had been found the former leaked. Plumbing Inspector Edward O'Connor will be instructed to stop work wherever he finds patent joints used.

Is your Heater in
for the Fall?

There is a true luxury in knowing your heater is ready for the stormiest winter.

Dust should be removed. It insulates the heating surfaces of your furnace so that a large percentage of coal may be wasted and more frequent furnace attention required. One of our experienced men will gladly consult with you concerning the conditioning of your heater.

Uniform Temperature is Maintained when GAS Operates the Refrigerator

GAS working under thermostatic control has made possible many automatic heating processes in the home and in industry and because of its successful performance has reduced substantially working hours and labor in both.

In like manner, gas produces mechanical refrigeration that automatically maintains an even temperature, cold and dry, that keeps foods pure and fresh despite a rising thermometer. Here again, gas regulated by a thermostat, gives such consistent service that the home-maker or food dealer who uses a gas refrigerator is free from work and worry in connection with refrigeration.

The simplicity of the principle that produces gas refrigeration and its noiseless, odorless operation are features that add to its popularity.

The moderate operating cost of the gas refrigerator and the lower gas rate for quantity use recently fixed by Public Service, that of 9½ cents per 100 cubic feet for all gas used in excess of 1400 cubic feet, combine to make gas refrigeration particularly attractive from an economic standpoint.

On With The Show

By ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1929, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"ON WITH THE SHOW," is the first 100% natural color, Vitaphone picture. It is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

The still warmth of a soft May evening spread lazily over the broad, tree-arched streets of Milbank. Yellow splashes of light gleamed mistily through the new green of shrubbery that half concealed from view the Victorian frame house bedecked with cupolas and carvings. The faintly sweet perfume of nascent buds filled the air with aromatic balm. Across the river the lights of New York flung far-reaching rays towards the darkening sky to canopy in pinkish haze the towering gray cubes of buildings below. The throaty whistle of a passing tug boat came only at long intervals to disturb the sleepy silence.

On down along the main road the sudden noise of speeding traffic attested volubly to the awakening life of a Saturday night in a little Jersey town. Electric signs splattered and spluttered overhead. Women with overflowing market baskets lingered in front of show windows. Groups of adolescent boys propped gangling bodies against the red front of a tabacconist's, shrilling bursts of giggles at their own witticisms. Cars drew up along the curb; doors slammed; couples hurried arm in arm toward the broad marble archway that proclaimed in dazzling colors: NITA FRENCH IN WELCOME HOME with Joe Beaton and Eva Brown.

"Two in the third row center. Yes, sir—Best in the house." George Mack, the white-haired, pink-checked treasurer in the box office reached up to the rack, took down a pair of tickets and handed them across the window. He deftly counted out the change from a ten dollar bill, nodding affably.

"Yes, sir—Tenth row, right on the aisle. Best seats in the house. Yours, please," he hurried the queue along. The foyer grew more and more crowded. The man on the door tore off check stubs and handed the oncoming audience into the theatre. Now and again he turned to speak to the florid-faced individual from City Hall who leaned against the door jamb, a half-smoked cigar rolling about in his heavy lips, a derby hat perched on the back of his head.

"Looks like a good night, Joe," the doorman commented.

"Yeah," drawled the person addressed, as Joe, shifting his cigar to the other side of his mouth. But it ain't gonna help none," he added morosely, reflecting back over his many years on the police force during which he had seen more than one show fold up as silently as any troupe of Arabs and fade away into the oblivion of failure.

Within the theatre the empty seats were gradually filling, one by one, two by two. The ushers rattled their programs, hurrying up and down the aisles. Voices murmured and grew louder, shriller.

"Check your coat; Coats checked here!" Jimmy Burton, head usher, directed the newcomers with a flourish and a bow. "Yes, sir, second aisle to your left, sir... center aisle, madam... last aisle to your right, if you please, sir."

"Say, ain't these in th' centre," an indignant voice interrupted Jimmy's smooth patter.

"No, sir, they're not." Jimmy returned the stubs and looked up at the hulking figure of the man who towered head and shoulders above him.

"Well, what's th' big idea, sticking us over on th' side. Lissen buddy, I ain't accustomed—"

"Quit squawking, Larry." The flashily brilliant woman laid a restraining hand on her escort's arm. "I promote a couple of ducats, take you for a free ride and you beef. You'll take 'em and like 'em." And before the gentleman could protest further he was borne away surely and swiftly.

Jimmy turned to stare for a moment, smiling, and then went back to his work. "Second aisle to your left... centre aisle, if you please... first aisle to your right."

"Are these on the aisle?" The querulous voice of a gray-haired woman interrupted.

"Yes, madam."

"Is this a good show?" "Oh, yes, indeed, madam." Jimmy's eyes lighted up and he nodded vigorously. "Gee, it's a swell show. Just wait 'til you see that second act. It's a humdinger! It's got one of the greatest numbers you ever—"

"Look here, would you mind telling me where these seats are," a gruff voice interrupted Jimmy's eulogy.

"Beg pardon, sir, first aisle to the right."

A slight lull, and Jimmy turned to look towards the check room. Beside the counter stood the object of the boy's attention and the cause of the foolish, uplifted smile that graced his youthful face. All of which proved nothing detrimental to Jimmy, for any number of older, and more experienced faces had worn that same smile when they turned to Kitty Malone. Trim and neat in the gray uniform that set off the rounded figure, Kitty's charm had caused more than one heart to flutter.

At the first sign of encouragement from the girl Jimmy stepped quickly back to the cloak room and waited impatiently as she dexterously manipulated overcoats and umbrellas.

"Here's your check, sir," Kitty smiled at the patron as she handed him the numbered pasteboard. Kitty always smiled at everybody. She couldn't help smiling. Even her deep blue eyes looked as though they were ready to twinkle on the slightest provocation, and her closely cropped blue-black hair that lay in the softest of undulating waves seemed to shine with life and laughter.

"Nice evening, kid." The patron returned the smile. "Nice evening for a ride." He edged a little closer to the girl.

"Thanks," Kitty retorted. "I've got a car of my own and a chauffeur to drive it. I never walk back." She half turned her head and winked at Jimmy whose forehead was wrinkling up in an antagonistic scowl.

The man pocketed his check, and walked rapidly away.

"Say, how many of these birds try to pull that stuff on you? the boy demanded.

"Depends on how full the house is," Kitty retorted. "And business isn't half bad tonight."

"It certainly isn't," Jimmy's face brightened as his mind turned to another channel of thought.

"Well, I've been praying for it," the girl became serious. "Tonight tells the tale. If this show doesn't make Broadway, well,—her voice trailed off and a misty blur came into her eyes, turning them almost violet.

"Gee, honey, I know this show'd have a lot better chance if you were up there on the stage." Jimmy slid closer and touched Kitty's hand. "That Nita French—well, maybe she was all right in her day, but that day must a been back in the dark ages."

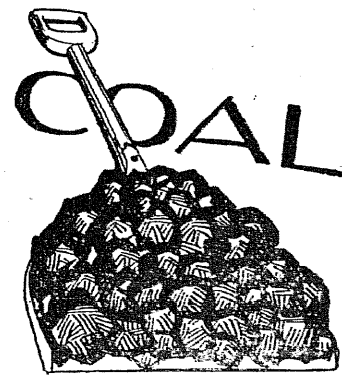

Kitty sighed. "I wonder if I ever will get a break."

"Sure you will," Jimmy averred staunchly, "You got all the makings and then some, and if this play's a hit—"

"I know! If it only is. Gee, that would be wonderful. Dad wouldn't have to be a stage doorman any longer and—well, honestly, Jimmy, he's worried, though."

"You can't blame him. Sinking all our money in this new show, even if it is good."

THE MENACE OF TAXATION

No person can escape being affected by the cost of government. It is reflected in employment conditions, the purchasing power of wages, industrial activity, and, perhaps most important, the cost of the necessities and luxuries of life.

When the individual is over-taxed the whole community suffers. And when a business is over-taxed, the cost must be passed on to the ultimate consumer, who pays all overhead.

There are localities in the United States where vast acreage of land has been returned to the state or county, seized for non-payment of taxes. Industries are driven away. The unemployment problem appears. The inevitable result is stagnation.

At the present time the small town is offered an unrivalled opportunity to progress and prosper, because of the trend of manufacturers away from the great centers of population. And the industrial cities of the future will be those which, along with the natural rural advantages, have a reasonable tax rate and economical government.

NOW IT'S THE ROBOT USHER

Unless these inventors are curbed they will take away all our jobs. A Cincinnati theatre has installed mechanical ushers now. The location of all vacant seats is shown automatically on a huge score board in the lobby by means of electrically lighted numbers. A person looking at the board can pick out the vacant seats by the lighted figures. As soon as a person sits in the seat the light goes out.

An additional series of lighted numbers is fixed on the floor at the end of each row. These lights also go out as the seats are occupied.

BOOK BORROWING

The book borrowing habit is now being indicted. The August number of Plain Talk starts a campaign to cure Americans of a habit which, the editors maintain, is a serious handicap to authors, publishers and book dealers.

Something might be said for the fact that book borrowing may stimulate as well as retard book buying. But the propaganda seems to fall into the class which might be termed unnecessary. Even if the habit were inimical, very little good can be done by telling people that they must stop borrowing books. They will go on doing it, and all the words of advice directed at them will be simply wasted.

THE "ALL RADIO" SCHOOL

Will the school teachers be the next body of workers to feel the effects of the merger trend in business and industry? The Cleveland school committee, after two months of experimenting with the idea of connecting all schools of the same grade by radio and having the lessons sent out from a central bureau by a teacher-announcer, reports excellent results.

The radio instruction idea will be extended during the coming year in the Cleveland schools. An all radio school is already within the bounds of possibility in Cleveland.

SEEMS SIMPLE

Some of the apparently easy things to accomplish frequently offer the toughest problems to engineers and mechanics. A leading engineer in the oil industry declares that a great fortune is waiting the inventor who will produce a drill that will drive a straight hole into the bowels of the earth. The best engineering brains in the oil industry have been baffled by the problem. There are plenty of effective drills but not one which will produce a perfectly straight bore for the required distance.

FLORIDA'S PLIGHT

The epidemic of bank failures in Florida, 23 institutions in various parts of the State having closed their doors recently, is due to a situation about which little has been heard in the North.

The appearance of the Mediterranean fruit fly, introduced into Florida by rum running ships, has dealt a terrific blow to the Florida fruit industry and has shaken the confidence of the people of Southern Florida who could not be daunted by the collapse of the land boom or the devastating hurricanes.

The fight against the Mediterranean fruit fly has necessitated the most drastic quarantine methods. Thousands of tons of fine fruit has been destroyed. Many square miles of orchards, very profitable in past years, have turned into a total loss. Fruit and vegetable growers in many districts are facing absolute ruin. And the fruit fly scourge is spreading.

The authorities in Florida have shown fine courage in battling with this momentous menace. Their backs are to the wall, since, if this most deadly insect cannot be conquered, the fruit industry of Florida will perish.

But this terrific fight for the life of Florida's great industry has evidently taken its toll of the confidence of the people. Temporarily they are frightened at the outlook, or some of them are. The result is a run on the banks. In normal times nothing of the sort would occur in so wholesale a fashion.

Florida will pull out of her difficulties as she has done before. But meanwhile California seems willing to take advantage of the situation. Most of the publicity concerning the fruit fly in Florida has come by way of California. Recently the newspapers of the East received a large batch of photographs showing tons of Florida fruit being buried and other graphic features of the fight against the fruit fly.

These pictures came not from Miami, Orlando or Tampa in the Florida fruit district but from Los Angeles, California.

The career of Al Rockett, general manager of production of the First National Pictures, Inc., of Burbank, California, should be an inspiration to all American boys whose parents are too poor to give them all of the modern advantages in the way of education, etc.

This fine, young man is now earning and receiving a salary of one hundred thousand dollars a year—real money, not stage money, and he is worth it to his company.

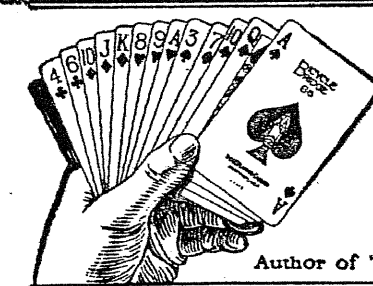

Attending high school in Cripple Creek, Colorado, Al was ambitious to pursue a musical career; upon the death of his father he helped his mother to support his younger brothers, earning money by playing the piano in a Cripple Creek dance hall.

Moving to New York, he worked for various moving picture companies learning all angles of the business.

He conceived the idea of filming the life of Abraham Lincoln; in partnership with his brother Ray, he organized his company, investing every dollar he had saved, and made desperate efforts to raise the necessary additional capital where ever he could. After surmounting heart-breaking obstacles, the film was produced and secured the medal for the best picture of the year.

Appointed Assistant to Richard Rowland, then vice president and general manager of the First National in New York, Rockett soon demonstrated unusual talent as a business executive.

In 1927, Rockett was sent to Hollywood as a supervisor in charge of one of the several First National Companies and was designated to film the war story, "The Patent Leather Kid." The picture, with Dick Barthelmess in the title role and with Al Santell directing, was made at Camp Lewis, Washington, and cost over a million dollars. It was a great success and contributed materially to Rockett's reputation in the industry.

How to Play BRIDGE

ARTICLE No. 32

The proper leads against a suit bid by the opponents, when partner has not bid, are always difficult. One of the best ways to get an idea of the proper leads in such a case is to study a few type hands that illustrate the important points. Suppose in the following hands, for example, that the dealer has bid one spade and all pass:

Example No. 1. A holds spades, 9, 7, 4; hearts, A, K, 6, 2; diamonds, 6, 5, 3; clubs, Q, 5, 4. He should lead the king of hearts, thereby showing to his partner that he holds the ace. He should then carefully observe the cards held by Dummy and the card which his partner, B, plays. If Dummy holds J, 10, 5, 4 and B plays the eight, it is practically certain that B is playing "high-low" in order to show two only of the suit; in which case A should continue with the ace and give his partner a ruff on the third round.

Example No. 2. A holds spades, 9, 7, 4; hearts, Q, 6, 4, 2; diamonds, J, 10, 7, 6, 3; clubs, 6. Here he should lead his singleton club in the hope of trumping the second round of clubs before the trumps are drawn. But if A holds spades, Q, J, 7, 4; hearts, Q, 6, 4, 2; diamonds, J, 10, 7, 6, 3; clubs, 6, he should not lead his singleton club, for it can be of no value to him to win a trick with a ruff. He is holding strength in trumps, and he should lead his jack of diamonds.

Example No. 3. A holds spades, K, 6, 4; hearts, K, Q, 7, 3; diamonds, A, 4, 2; clubs, Q, 6, 3. A should lead the king of hearts. If he were playing against a bid of "One no-trump" he would lead the three of hearts; but against a "One spade" lead he must play the king of hearts in order to make certain, except against a freak distribution, that he has a sure heart trick. His king of spades and ace of diamonds also appear to be trick-winners, and his queen of clubs may be useful, if undisclosed.

Example No. 4. Don't lead from A, x (i. e., holding two cards only in a suit) under any circumstances unless your hand is so peculiar that you can take the risk. The lead of the Ace from A, x gives more games to the Declarer than this world dreams of. Z bids "One spade," and A, holding spades, 9, 7, 4; hearts, K, 9, 6, 3; diamonds, A, 6; clubs, J, 10, 7, 5, should not lead the ace of diamonds and then the six, for he may thereby make the only lead by which Z can make game. The position of the ace of diamonds may be the one difficult point in Z's play of the hand. Why clear it up for him forthwith? It is impossible for me to give in fuller detail the reasons for not leading from A, x, but, unless there are exceptional circumstances, "Don't."

Here is a hand that caused considerable discussion in a recent duplicate game. Think it over and compare results with an analysis that will be given in the next article:

Problem No. 34

Hearts—Q, 10, 8, 5
Clubs—7
Diamonds—A, K, Q, J, 5
Spades—Q, 6, 2

Z

Hearts—K, J, 9, 4
Clubs—A, 9, 8, 5
Diamonds—7
Spades—A, K, J, 4

No score, rubber game. If Z bids one spade and A passes, should Y bid two diamonds or pass? If Y bid two diamonds and B passes, should Z bid two no trump or two hearts? If Z does bid two no trump and A passes, should Y bid three spades or pass? This hand brings out some very pretty problems of bidding, so think it over carefully.

Problem No. 35

Hearts—Q, 10, 8, 3
Clubs—6, 2
Diamonds—Q, 8, 5, 3
Spades—9, 5, 4

Z

Hearts—A, 7, 4
Clubs—A, K, 8, 5, 3
Diamonds—none
Spades—A, J, 10, 6, 2

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one spade. A bid two diamonds, Y passed and B bid two no trump. Z bid three clubs. A bid three diamonds and Y and B passed. Z now bid four clubs. A passed, Y bid four spades and B doubled. All passed and A opened the king of diamonds. How should Z play the combined hands so that he will stand the best chance to make his bid? Solution in the next article.

AMERICAN HISTORICAL PAGEANT TO BE PRESENTED AT JAMBOREE BY SCOUTS FROM UNITED STATES

Real Indians To Take Part In Spectacular Display Of Pioneer Life—"How Scouting Came To America" To Be Title.

A pageant depicting Scouting in America from the earliest Indian days to the present and a general demonstration of Scouting in the United States will be the program of the Boy Scouts of America at the World Scout Jamboree. It will be a spectacular event because Scouts from every section of the United States will participate and bring from their home locality costumes and materials which will in a graphic manner portray the part that their section of the nation played in the development of the Boy Scout Movement. Indian garments and trinkets, pioneer outfits from the days of Crockett and Boone, and a thousand and one other things unique to America will go into the making of the pageant. Scouts from each section of the United States will bring to their brother Scouts from more than 70 different lands a stirring picture of the discovery of America and a portrayal of the explorations, wars and historical events from which finally emerged the Boy Scout of the present.

The pageant is entitled "Scouting Comes to America" and in the opening scene an Indian Scout appears clothed only in breach cloth and bonnet. As he reaches the center of the field, he sends up a smoke signal to those behind. A group of real Indians representing the Creek, Choctaw, Osage and Winnebago Tribes, all Boy Scouts from the Indian Troop of Muskogee, Oklahoma, will take part in the pageantry. In rapid succession then will follow a scene depicting an Indian hunting party stalking game and a council ring. The medicine man will pay a tribute to the four winds in a picturesque manner and this ceremony will be followed by a group of Indian dances. The Indians will leave the pageant depicting a migrating Indian family with Travois, ponies and dogs.

The founding of America and scenes in which the Scouts will depict the early explorers and adventurers from Lief Ericson, to Captain John Smith will be followed by scenes showing the early pioneers and their customs from the time of Daniel Boone until the Mormons founded Utah. Then will come episodes of trading with the Indians, Indian encounters with a dramatization of the American redskin, Indian warfare and Indian Scouting skill. This will be followed by two minute dramatizations of characters depicting American prospectors, the '49er, fur settlers, trappers, rangers, pilgrims, settlers, Quakers, lumberjacks, and as these groups retire one after the other they will form the background for a scene in which the pioneers sit in a council to make Daniel Carter Beard, National Scout Commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America and grand old man of American Scouting, the custodian of all the pioneer traditions of our country. "Uncle Dan" as he is affectionately known to every American youth, has been a leader of boys for more than half a century and his participation in the World Scout Jamboree is his first visit to Europe.

The second act of the great pageant will depict the coming of Scouting to America. In this part of the pageant Scouts from different parts of the United States will demonstrate Scouting as carried on in their own sections of the country. Dramatization of the Scout Oath and Law will be a part of this series of scenes. The great pageant, which will take nearly a week to stage, will come to a close with a dramatization of America as the melting pot and the closing words of the great pageant will be "Our nation is a huge mixture of racial strains, each strain contributing some of its fine things to the betterment of all. Scouting takes boys of widely divergent races, of diverse political and religious customs and faith, and fuses them into a citizenship—clean, alert, loyal, trustworthy and tolerant." In the closing scene Scouts from America, descendants from nearly every race in the world, will participate and the pageant will close with the gathering of all about a huge Scout Emblem repeating the Boy Scout Oath and Laws.

FIRST AID
When 14-year-old Carl Lindberry of Everett, Wash., was overcome by the heat while picking strawberries on a farm, and his heart stopped beating, his older brother, Roy, 16-year-old Star Scout, administered artificial respiration which he had learned in Scouting and brought him back to life. According to physicians who were called to the scene, the boy had eaten too many strawberries which had been sprayed and his heart had been affected. The doctor stated that the prompt action of his older brother had undoubtedly saved the younger boy's life.

As a result of the accident, Carl Lindberry, who is the only one of four brothers who is not a member of the Boy Scouts of America, has stated that he will certainly join the Movement. In addition to his brother who revived him after the accident, Carl has an older brother, Boyd, 17 years of age, who is an Eagle Scout and another brother, George, 19, who is now a radio operator on a steamship on the South American line and is also a member of the Boy Scouts.

AEROPLANE RIDE
Six Boy Scouts, who earned the Aviation Merit Badge of the Boy Scouts of America and who are residents of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, recently received the thrill of their lives when they were taken for a long flight by Clarence D. Chamberlain, famed trans-Atlantic flyer. The flyer gave the boys some real air thrills and they showed much interest in the manipulation of the plane.

The Scouts who participated in the flight are Carl Wischan, Morgan Bennett, Ervin Kehl, William Dummert, Fred Schroeder and Harvey Blohm.

PLANT HOLLY
The planting of holly trees near Bellingham, Washington, by the Boy Scouts of that vicinity on Selome Hill and the Lake Whatcom hills and other burned over forest areas has already been started according to the statement of S. H. Vine, Scout Executive of Bellingham. The first plantings were started on May 4th by fifty Scouts and that day has been designated as Holly Berry Planting Day by the Washington State Society for the Conservation of Wild Flowers and Tree Planting.

NATIVE WORK
Name plates designating the species of each tree in the park have been mounted on the trunks of the trees of Ottawa Park, Toledo, Ohio, by the Boy Scouts of that city. Practically every species of tree native to Ohio is included in the collection of trees, and the Scouts have marked them to aid the children of the city in learning about their native trees.

HUPP SCORES NEW EUROPEAN SPEED TRIUMPHS

Establishes Best Time For A "Flying Kilometer" Run

Detroit, Mich., August 3.—News of winning of several additional and important European speed contests by Hupmobile has just been received by the Hup Motor Car Corporation from its European representatives. Late last month at the Ostend Rally an eight cylinder Hupmobile Cabriolet established the best time for a "flying kilometer"—run both before and against the wind. With a short start, the car turned in an average speed of 110.9 kilometers per hour, or approximately 68.72 miles per hour, despite a strong wind. For this performance the car was awarded the Marquet Challenge cup.

Although placed below many other cars of smaller cubic content because of larger piston displacement and its elapsed time therefore rated accordingly, a Hupmobile Eight Cabriolet finished 12 hours ahead of its pre-determined schedule in the road tour during the Ostend International Rally, June 21 to 23. In this event the cars were driven circuitously from Ostend through Brussels, Namur, Luxembourg, Metz, Strasbourg, Belfort, Lyon, Auxeres, Paris, Lille and back to Ostend. The elapsed time for the Hupmobile was 33 1-2 hours.

In still another speed contest, in which competing cars were specially prepared and equipped, the Hupmobile Cabriolet finished in sixth place carrying the same equipment with which it had been shipped from Detroit. In addition, the same car won the Patricius Cup for a flying kilometer in competition with two other cars above the three litre class.

Another road run was recently won by a Hupmobile Six Roadster from Liege to Madrid and return. In this event the Hupmobile won every leg of the run and for its performance was awarded the Spanish Automobile Club cup.

Garden Hose And Leaky Faucets Cause Of Great Waste Of Water Supply

Unconscious waste of water is one of the most difficult problems which water companies have to face, comments the New Jersey Public Utility Information Committee. Water company officials have learned that people seldom waste water deliberately, but they have also found that much of the water consumed is thoughtlessly wasted.

One of the greatest wasters of the community water supply is the home owner who permits faucets to leak in his home. Although a faulty faucet may seem to leak only a drop at a time, it actually wastes considerable water.

A small leak in a sink of bathroom faucet, which the home owner does not deem sufficiently great to warrant repair, will often waste hundreds of gallons of water a week. It is for this reason that water company officials advise home owners to inspect all water outlets and to repair all that are found faulty. Prompt repair of such fixtures not only conserves the public water supply, but also saves on the owner's water bill.

A lawn or garden sprinkler left for several hours in one position will waste gallon after gallon of water. The same holds true when the hose is used for washing automobiles or other similar purposes, as the water is generally left running unnecessarily during the entire process, causing a great waste of water.

Suggests Cheese Dishes For Hot Weather Meals

At least some of the time a housewife spends in cooking over a hot stove during the sweltering summer months may be lessened if a more liberal use is made of the nourishing cheese dishes.

This is the belief of Miss Marie Dermann, New Jersey extension specialist in foods, who says the slight amount of cooking required by cheese may be done at a low temperature. She adds that cheese dishes usually combine milk and eggs, making them an excellent substitute for meat in hot weather.

"For those who are fortunate enough to have an automatic refrigerator, chilled cheese salad may be served in place of meat during hot weather," the specialist advises. "Take 2 1-2 cream cheeses and mash with a fork. Cut in very small pieces one green pepper and one red pepper or one pimiento, and add these to the cheese together with 1-4 cup of mayonnaise, 1-4 teaspoon of paprika and 3-4 teaspoon of salt. Blend the mixture in a tray and chill 3 hours. Serve on crisp lettuce with or without dressing.

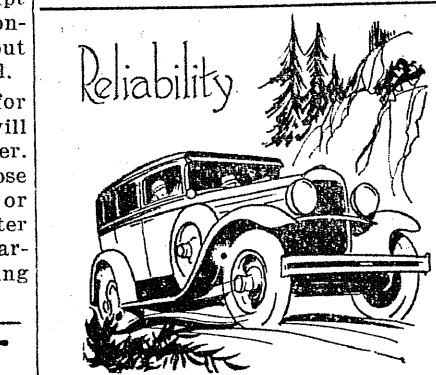

"The flavor of cheese depends largely upon the curing process, which may last from a few days to a year or longer. The stronger flavored cheeses are the most expensive and to some extent considered luxuries. The milder varieties have the same food value, however, and they cost less money.

"Cheese is a concentrated food and a small amount contains a great deal of nourishment. One pound of cheese is equal in food value to a dozen eggs. In many European countries cheese is substituted for the more expensive meat. Most of the food elements of milk, namely, protein, fat, vitamins, and minerals, are found in cheese.

"Serve cheese with bulky foods such as vegetables, or with rice, macaroni, and similar starchy foods. Welsh rarebit, cheese soufflé, and escalloped vegetables with cheese are all favorite ways of serving this valuable food."

Good-bye Stained Teeth New Safe Treatment Bleaches Dark Teeth in Three Minutes

Dentists have discovered a new safe treatment which bleaches stains from teeth, giving yellow discolored teeth a beautiful looking whiteness. It is called Bleachodent Combination, and consists of a remarkable liquid which cures or softens the stains, and a new kind of paste, which instantly removes the softened stains, and prevents new stains from forming. Simply brush the teeth with a few drops of the liquid—then use the paste—and even the dulled teeth are quickly whitened. Tobacco stains disappear after first few applications. Bleachodent Combination was first made for children's teeth to avoid the use of harsh gritty pastes which are so harmful to children's soft sensitive teeth. While Bleachodent Combination will instantly remove surface stains, do not expect it to remove stains caused by silver fillings, as these are below the enamel, and Bleachodent Combination is not intended to act on the enamel in any way. Fine for the gums. Bleachodent Combination is widely used and recommended. Costs just a few cents, and money back if not delighted. Get it today at all good dealers, such as:
