Conference Planned On Enlarging High School Class Rooms

Illness In February Caused
Drop In School
Attendance

A conference will be held Monday night to consider the need for enlarging classroom accommodations at the High School. The Board of Education will meet as a whole with the building and grounds committee, which made the request for the conference last night.

John P. Maher, chairman of the committee, who made the request, did not state what means of enlargement the committee may have in mind. He had said at previous meetings that high school enrollment exceeds the capacity.

Purchase of a delivery truck for school use was authorized, the cost not to exceed $450. The General Athletic Council's offer to improve Clearman Field at an estimated cost of $250 was accepted by the board. James J. Turner, business manager and secretary, was directed to have ventilating units at School 7 inspected and repaired if necessary.

The application of the Civic Forum organization of Belleville Negroes, to use the auditorium of School 1, Friday nights was granted at a fee of $10 a night.

Attendance for February dropped to 92.26 per cent, compared with 95.49 per cent, for January. Supervising Principal Wayne R. Farmer reported. The decrease was laid chiefly to illness. There were 692 absences. Truancies numbered six.

Melodrama, First Night Presented By Guild

Sing Sing Affair Presented
In High School On Saturday

Patrons and Patronesses of the Little Theatre Guild and their friends Saturday night, viewed the most unique play ever presented by a group of local amateur actors. The play, "Sing Sing," was presented by the Guild in the high school auditorium.

The atmosphere of Sing Sing prison pervaded the auditorium of the high school with "convicts" as ushers and "armed" guards patrolling the aisles and stage.

Mr. Frederick Rath, the author, deserves congratulations for writing such a novel melodrama. It is indeed a very clever story. The scenes of the play were laid in the lobby of the Stuyvesant Theatre. The actual showing, was in the recreation room at Sing Sing. It represents the Governor of New York as attending the performance as a guest of the Warden, who is convinced of the innocence of the condemned man and hopes to gain a pardon for him on the grounds of new evidence in the case, which, is revealed through the medium of the performance.

Throughout the entire performance the audience was on edge, not knowing what to expect next. On two occasions, unexpected revolver shots caused several ladies to gasp and clutch their escorts for moral support.

The leading roles taken by Hudson Faussett and Eleanor Gluck were well handled. Mr. Faussett as "Inspector Owens" was perfect. He reminds one of Edward G. Robinson, the fury screen star. "Joan Reid," sister of the accused man, played by Miss Gluck was also a fine bit of acting. I. Gordon Eska, as the condemned man, proved his worth as an actor.

W. R. Farmer as the human warden and William A. Rachel as Governor Smith, were sincere in their roles and left no chance for criticism. As in all dramas, etc., there must be some comedy. Joe Evangelista, as Rizzo, an Italian workman and Russell K. Green, as George, the negro porter, supplied several hearty laughs for the benefit of the appreciative audience.

One of the finest parts, was played by Corbin D. Lewis as "The Duke" a clever English crook. The Duke finally turned out to be "Convict 222," the real murderer, played by William Van Nordwick. Mr. Lewis' imitation of an Englishman was perfect and the audience awarded him with several rounds of applause during the performance.

Other parts were taken by the following: Ian Munro, Robert Sutherland, Martin C. Sauer, William Chapman, Paul H. Brinman, Fred W. Evans, Wilham G. Knowles, Jr., Harvey B. Thompson, Thomas W. Fleming, Eugene MacNaab, E. B. Collard, Samuel Figuredi, Roland Mayer, Donald S. Colard, Edward Fletcher, Mrs. C. D. Lewis and Adeline Kieferdorf.

Girl Scouts Know the Secret Of Comfort in Cold Weather

GIRL SCOUTS WILL OBSERVE TWENTIETH BIRTHDAY NEXT WEEK

Thousands Of Troops Prepare To Observe Founding Of Movement On March 12; National President Grooms Girls

The Girl Scouts will celebrate their twentieth birthday anniversary on March 12, when national and local officers and hundreds of thousands of girls throughout the country will take part in ceremonies commemorating the founding of the American organization in Savannah, Georgia, in 1912. Lawrence, the former Daisy Gordon and niece of the founder, Juliette Gordon Low. National headquarters will hold an open house, and a birthday cake will be cut in the Girl Scout shop. Similar parties will be held in many of the thirty-six hundred communities in which Girl Scouting now exists in the United States.

Wemec Dramatic Club Feels Show Will Be Great Success

At the regular monthly meeting of the Wemec Dramatic Club, held in the Wesley M. E. Church, plans for the coming production "Cock Robin" to be presented April 8, at the high school were further discussed. All of the various committees reported progress and the Wemecs have every reason to believe that their show will be a huge success.

The property committee, under the supervision of Mary Colyer, is working hard getting the stage-setting, which is very unique, under way. Ella Walker, in charge of costumes, also reports much progress has been made along these lines.

On account of the demands of the production the cast is rehearsing with humming zeal under the able direction of Mrs. Tempest Lowry. The play is baffling in the 'nth degree, as well as being colorful and humorous.

Included in the cast are some who are well known because of previous Wemec productions. Among these are John Carrough, H. Vail Ryan, Horace Baldwin, Elmer Hosking, Dorothy Wadsworth, Nancy Campbell, Allen Crisp and Alma Hosking. In addition, new faces appear in the cast; namely: Ernest Barker, Walter Groner, Harry Hosking and Mildred Lorenz.

Nobody Loves a Policeman

That's an old saying but it isn't true any more. At least, it hasn't been true since F. O. Alexander added "Finney of the Force" to the list of famous comic strip characters. For "Finney," with his twinkling humor and his shrewd comment on people and the common everyday events of life, is a lovable character, as thousands of newspaper readers who have followed him through his various adventures will testify. "Finney of the Force" is a regular feature in this newspaper with whom our subscribers are acquainted, and all enjoy him. Then tell your friends about him, for they will enjoy him as much as you do.

Although Girl Scouting was brought from England by Mrs. Low who was a close friend of Lord Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scout movement, the American organization has developed on strictly national lines, being bound to the parent branch only by a community of ideals and identical laws. As in most countries camping forms a large part of the program here, and there are now nearly 500 camps in which thousands of girls spend all or part of their summer vacations.

Evening Service, 7:45 P. M. Sermon: "The True Emphasis."

Special services were held Sunday by Grace Baptist Church, marking the dedication of its renovated auditorium. Rev. Dr. Frank L. Anderson, president of the International Baptist Seminary, preached the morning sermon.

Speaking on the topic, "Outreach of the Church," he declared the mission of the local church is to minister to the life of the community, and whatever concerns the general welfare is the legitimate interest of the church.

Stressing the importance of co-operation between workers of all types, he advised that the individual of outstanding talent refrain from a dictatorial attitude toward the less gifted. Community groups, if sympathetically approached, might be induced to cooperate with church projects affecting the general welfare, he suggested.

"Service" was the keynote of a talk for children by the pastor, Rev. Frederic P. Foshay. Mrs. Alta Rice Foshay, wife of the pastor, sang "Open the Gates of the Temple." Two children, Edith Pole and Ruth Becker sang a duet. R. E. Weiss of Nutley was organist.

The Golden Text is: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Hebrews 11:1).

Among the citations which comprises the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." (James 5:15).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The highest prayer is not one of faith merely: it is demonstration. Such prayer heals sickness, and must destroy sin and death. It distinguishes between Truth that is sinless and falsity of sinful sense" (p. 16).

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.

Powell Bill Aids

The Small Borrower

Would Improve Consumer Credit Says Burlington Senator

Trenton, N. J. The immediate improvement of consumer credit and a complete loan service of from $10 to $300, and direct supervision of the business by the Department of Insurance and Banking are the main features of Senate Bill No. 117, stated Senator Clifford R. Powell, of Burlington County, who introduced the bill. The bill also provides for a graduated scale of interest which meets the approval of the Russell Sage Foundation and has, according to its unprejudiced investigations, proved the most successful and scientific plan for both the borrower and the lender in States where similar laws are in effect. The bill is designed to attract back into New Jersey a great portion of the $20,000,000 which was automatically legislated out in 1929 by the law now in effect, and is hailed as one of the finest pieces of remedial legislation under consideration by the present legislature.

Under the provisions of the bill a full disclosure of all activities between the borrower and the lender must be made accessible to the banking department auditors, to protect the borrower and to give him a right to pay off the loan any day without additional expense if he is able to do so or to make better terms with another.

The bill sets up a regulatory system as recommended by the Russell Sage Foundation and many others who are interested in placing the small loan business upon an economic and sound basis, and to protect the community from excessive charges by others who do not conduct their affairs in accordance with the spirit and intention of the statutes of New Jersey.

The graduated scale of interest rates as provided by the bill are 2% on $300, the maximum amount which can be borrowed, 2 1/2% on loans of $101 to $200, and 3% for loans of $10 to $100 on the unpaid balance only, as no interest can be charged on principal payments already made. This interest scale is provided so that the lender will be inclined to accept applications for loans on any size which the prospective borrower's needs may require and to limit the charges consistent with the standard practices of American business. Under this act no lender is allowed to have a borrower indebted to him for more than one contract of loan at the same time, thereby eliminating the possibility for manipulation or evasion of the law.

The Russell Sage Foundation, through many years of impartial investigation, has found that 85% of the people do not have banking connections to which they can turn in times of financial need. Twenty-five states have recognized the social and economical need of the small loan business by passing regulatory legislation, which sets up an active agency for taking care of these people. The report of Wilford Isbell King, professor of Economics of New York University, showed that 100,000 families—one family out of every eight in New Jersey—were availing themselves of the small loan service in 1929. Today those families have no access to a loan agency, other than the "loan sharks" with their extremely high rates of interest.

If the Powell bill becomes a law, it seems fair to presume that sufficient funds will be placed in the hands of people deserving such credit to pay important obligations, which in turn will start the much needed circulation of money which President Hoover and many eminent financial leaders have publicly declared to be needed so urgently at this time. Buying will be encouraged and the wheels of industry started again. It has been ascertained that many of the small loan operators will return to New Jersey, when this bill has been enacted, will re-open their offices and employ a large number of people on their own account, besides adding in the distribution of millions of dollars.

Progress Club Sets Aside Sunday As Team 'Victory Night'

Wilfred Yudin, Chairman Of Athletics, Well Pleased

The Progress Club of Belleville set aside last Sunday night, March 6, as "Victory Night" for its basketball team. Although they did not win the trophy of the Recreation League of Belleville, they came in a close second which is quite an accomplishment, considering the fact that this was the first time the Progress Club has entered a team in such close competition.

According to a statement given to the organization by Wilfred Yudin, chairman of the athletic committee, and incidentally captain and manager of the basketball team, he is very much pleased with the showing of the team and the cooperation of the organization. He expects and hopes to develop a good basketball team and go in for tennis and bowling. He stated that much credit should be given to the basketball team for what they did because all the other teams were well regulated teams and have been playing together for a long time.

On Sunday evening the Progress Club gave a testimonial at the community center for its basketball team to which all the members and their families were cordially invited.

The members of the team consisted of: Wilfred Yudin, captain; Henry Abramson, Edward Salbin, Marvin Famer, Lew Sprechman, Morris Warner and Dr. Al Mandel.

The entertainment committee arranged a wonderful time for this testimonial, getting a wonderful orchestra for dancing, classy entertainment, all kinds of refreshments and they did not spare any effort to show the members of the basketball team that their efforts were appreciated by the organization.

..This Whirl Of Sport..

BY ARTHUR BLOEMER

AS THE CURTAIN FALLS

THREE of the outstanding factors in Belleville's sports life wrote finis to campaigns of undisputed merit and success recently. Bowling was represented by two of them and basketball the third.

First to the finish line was the American Legion Bowling League, which ended its regular season a week ago Monday. This loop, considered by many bowling-wise fans, the fastest in this section, enjoyed its closest race in history. But four games separated the first four teams at the wind-up and the Belleville A. A., in fifth place trailed the fourth position club by two games! The Oldhams, El Club, Moose and Democratic Club, who finished in that order, represented just about the best bowling available in this section. And the closeness of the competition can be best attested to by the fact that the entire quartet, as well as the fifth place Belleville A. A., reigned at the top of the ladder at some time or other over the course of the season.

Right now many of the bowlers of the loop are rolling in the three-man team tourney, a handicap affair which will last five weeks, sponsored by the Legion. This will bring to a close Legion bowling activities for the year.

Joe Williams, the returning head of Legion athletics, is to be commended for the splendid manner in which he conducted the highly absorbing league race. He will also take charge of the baseball league of the American Legion, which enters its fourth season this spring. Plans are already under way for this big summer sports program.

SHOW THE WAY

THE pinners of the local Lodge of Elks, bowling in the Bergen County Elks' League, were No. 2 to breast the tape.

League champions for the third time in six years of competition in this representative, ten-team circuit, is the proud record of this quintet. By virtue of this feat they gain permanent possession of the coveted Harry Florence cup.

The Elks' pin-knights, recognized leaders always, were never better than in the performance of this extraordinary effort.

THIRTY VICTORIES IN TWO YEARS

FINALLY comes to attention the ending of the Belleville High basketball season. Fourteen wins in nineteen tries was the final record of McBride's Blue and Gold crew. Thirty victories in the past two years!

The one sad note is the fact that the entire varsity squad will graduate. But, even that is consolable by the memories of that remarkably efficient second team, which met defeat but twice in eighteen games, one of them coming after an extra period of play.

We, most certainly, doff our sombreros to Belleville High's latest edition of fine basketball teams, for the many splendid performances they have turned in.

Their coach, A. K. McBride, too, deserves commendation for the highly efficient court machines he has turned out. You would have to hunt long and far to find a better basketball mentor than "Mac."

Elks' Bergen County Bowlers Win Cup

Third Championship In A Strong Circuit For Locals

The Belleville Elks' bowlers, in coping the championship of the Bergen County Elks' League, last week, by a three-game margin, gained permanent possession of the Harry Florence cup, as they have now headed this strong circuit three times. In the six years that the Elks have competed they have accounted for, in addition to their three championships, a tie for first place, subsequently losing the roll-off, and a third and fourth position.

Bob Whitten was the ace of the local quintet, finishing up with a 187.24 average, which assures him of not less than second place in the individual rankings. He also is the holder of the high score record, 264. Charley Walde, another star of the Hells Bells' pin outfit, had the high three game total, with a 683 mark in a single match. The team average award also came Belleville's way, as the highly effective local quintet displayed its superiority.

The annual banquet of this loop will be held at the Belleville Elks' Club, Tuesday night, March 29, and will consist of a beef-steak supper. Harry Harper, well-known left-hand pitcher ace with the New York Yankees and Washington, ex-heriff of Bergen County, and also Past Exalted Ruler of Hackensack Lodge, will act as toastmaster. The popular Bayonne Elks' Quartette will also be present to aid in the festivities.

Red Circles Defeat Belleville V. C. Squad

Large Crowd Witnessed The Game At Friendly Court

Before the largest crowd of fans ever to witness a basketball game in Silver Lake, Monday night, at the Friendly court, the Red Circle A. C. defeated the Belleville Varsity Club 32 to 20 in a thrilling hard fought game.

The Circles assumed the lead in the first few minutes of play on two spectacular heaves from mid-court by Pietro, elusive forward, and were never headed. The Belleville club fought gamely bringing the score to 16-12 at half time, but the sensation at shooting of Pietro and the smart defensive play of the entire Circle squad in the second period was too much for the Belleville boys who could not get started. Pietro with 11 points and Carbat with 9 points led the scoring for the Red Circles. For the Varsity Club Bohner with 8 points coupled with N. Bonavia's fine floor game were the features.

Hillcrest Tennis Club To Elect Officers

The annual election of officers for the Hillcrest Tennis Club will be held at the Recreation House Tuesday evening, March 15, at 8 o'clock. Plans are already under way to preparing the courts which will be ready for play the last week in April. The club has been invited to join the United States Lawn Tennis Association which will allow them to be represented in the eastern section of this great body of amateur clubs. Many of the younger players should come to the fore this year and it is quite possible a new champion is in the making.

The club enjoyed a very successful season in 1931 which should be duplicated this year. All members or those wishing to join the club are urged to be at the election of officers.

This Week

by ARTHUR BRISBANE

Britain Enjoys Her Tariff.
More Cattle for Russia.
Some Worried Patriots.
Deeds Would Be Welcome.

When Great Britain had "free trade" and this country was living inside of tariff walls, tariff seemed wicked to the British.

Now they have tried protection, and it seems to agree with them. They will repay tomorrow one hundred and fifty millions of the two hundred million dollars borrowed from this country last August, to bolster the falling pound. Evidently confident that the pound is all right, Britain has lifted the ban on exchange purchases and gives her stock exchange full swing again.

Theoretically, it seems barbarous for the world's different nations to live inside a tariff wall, each shutting out his neighbor. But practically, if you have money to spend, it is a good thing to spend it with members of your own family, first; your own nation, second.

The new cry in England, "Buy British," is yielding results.

If Lord Beaverbrook can carry through his plan of free trade inside of the Empire, all of its units trading with each other without restrictions, as our forty-eight States trade with each other, no custom houses between, there will be a new British boom.

Robert P. Lamont, Jr., son of our Secretary of Commerce, has been invited to go to Russia and show the Soviet Government how to reorganize and improve production of cattle. Young Mr. Lamont will visit Moscow to look the job over, much interested, not in the $50,000 salary said to be offered, but in the problem.

Russia, with 160,000,000 population, has 35,000,000 beef cattle, 17,000,000 sheep. This country has 65,000,000 beef cattle, 60,000,000 sheep.

Russia wisely wants her people to eat 100 pounds of meat each a year, which is the American ration.

Young Mr. Lamont raises white-faced Herefords on a 15,000 acre cattle ranch in Colorado and thinks the Russian job could be done in about twenty years.

Russia's government may be all that our "best minds" say it is, but it shows an amount of intelligence in tackling its problems not conspicuous in some other countries. When it hasn't GOT a thing, it tries to get it, and when it doesn't KNOW a thing, it tries to learn it.

Unless Senators that are good friends of stock gamblers prevent it, interesting facts will come out about "short sales" and those that injure values and prosperity by conspiring against them.

Senator Capper of Kansas and others who believe that the people have a right to know what is going on, even in Wall Street, propose to summon a few notorious bears, and find who has been selling short, and why.

The insiders of Wall Street expect amusing revelations, if nothing is done to protect short sellers from cross-questioning. It is expected that some that have been talking optimistically, advising purchase of securities, have been selling those very securities short. Also, it is predicted that some high-minded persons have even been short of the securities of their own corporations.

A number of important Wall Street personalities, including one or two that have been conspicuous as "unselfish patriots," are said to be much worried. That being the case, a way will probably be found to squelch the investigation, or to pull its teeth.

An innocent Chinese, General Wang Keng, thinking to visit his old American friend Captain William Mayer, in Shanghai, wandered by mistake into the Japanese Consulate and was arrested.

That doesn't interest you much, but the fact that General Wang Keng was graduated from West Point in 1913 does interest you.

Hospitality is beautiful, but you wonder why Chinese, or any EXCEPT AMERICANS, should be educated and graduated at West Point. For what purpose is the military school maintained?

Is it to teach the science of war to those that will defend the United States, or to mankind generally? Some Congressman might ask about that.

England, Germany, Japan, China and every country are talking about Secretary Stimson's threat to fortify our possessions in the Pacific, the Philippines, and Guam, under the very nose of Japan, since Japan's attack on China violates and puts an end to the agreement that followed the silly Washington Conference.

If the United States did fortify Guam and the Philippines, and establish in both places air bases of first-class magnitude, fully equipped to punish any foolish attack on us, that would practically do away with any danger from Asia.

If, now, words should be followed by deeds, as Theodore Roosevelt would say, and if we should fortify Guam and the Philippines in addition to talking about it, many Americans would be well pleased.

As affairs are liquidated the scrip will be taken in and a new scrip for another 25 per cent issued.

War Hero Is Now a Window Washer

David E. Hayden was found the other day in Los Angeles washing windows at 20 cents an hour. Nearly fourteen years ago, at Thiancourt, in France, he crawled across No Man's Land, a wounded officer on his back, disregarding machine gun fire to save his comrade's life. For this deed the United States gave him the Congressional Medal of Honor; France, a Croix de Guerre with two palms and a star and her Medal of Commemoration; Italy, her War Cross; Portugal, her rare War Cross. "To David E. Hayden, nineteen, youngest war hero," read the citations. "I'm not kidding!" emphatically declared Hayden, now thirty-three years old. "It's work, isn't it? Maybe not the kind I should prefer, but I want to work."

The Greatest Ever

By FANNIE HURST

(By McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service)

FOR twenty years the woman known as "Aunt Em" had sold newspapers in the doorway of a haberdasher's shop in the theater section of New York's Broadway.

A broker who bought papers from her on the fly had nicknamed her that because she reminded him of an "Aunt Em" who had reared him.

Like most happy misnomers, it stuck. Aunt Em's real name was—well, no matter. There was something short and stout and matronly about the appellation "Aunt Em." Something kind and wholesome. The name fitted the little woman in the decent black and the straw poke bonnet which she wore both winter and summer as she sold newspapers to the flying world that hurried past her doorway.

Every evening at five, rain, snow, shine, storm, Aunt Em stood shouting her wares in her doorway. When the last theater light blinked out, she wrapped up her loose change in a red handkerchief, tucked under her folding camp chair for that purpose and with her daughter, Wenda, who called for her, marched her way home.

In a way, Aunt Em was quite a character about that busy neighborhood. In the quick tick of its ebb and flow she had known great people by sight (some as customers), and hundreds of clerks and petty folk on their way to subway and tram nodded Aunt Em their good morning as they tossed their pennies, snatched their dailies, and ran.

That little tucked-in corner in the doorway had yielded Aunt Em twenty years of livelihood. Enough, mind you, to rear into successful maturity six offspring with whom she had struggled, a widow, through years so lean, some of them, that the gutters in her face still showed the ravages of pain, deprivation, even hunger.

All that was changed now. Five of the six children had left the nest, three sons and two daughters, married, and were on their own. A fairly prosperous little flock of petty trades people, set up here and there about the great city in such small enterprises as stationer's shop, fruit stand or notion store. All of them given their start, too, by willing, if lean contributions from the old lady's change handkerchief.

When she was sixty Aunt Em might well have felt entitled to sit back and let those for whom she had toiled through the years do some of the toiling for her.

That was what lay heavily on the heart of Wenda, the only unmarried one of the flock. Of course the others all offered to contribute to the upkeep of the old woman, but somehow, to Wenda, who felt passionately about it, there was something half-hearted about the profferings of the sons and daughters and the in-laws.

In her heart, Wenda felt bitter toward these brothers and sisters. It did not seem to twist their hearts the way it did hers to see the old woman standing humped in her doorway, shouting.

Not that the old woman could be easily dissuaded from her labors. On the contrary, Wenda had occasion to know that all too emphatically. After all, on her own earnings as a stenographer at twenty-eight dollars a week, Wenda was well able to take the burden of the labor of long hours, outdoor exposure, to say nothing of the mental aspect of the work, off her mother's shoulders.

Night after night, calling for her mother after theater hours, Wenda argued with her along these lines. It was rather an incongruous spectacle to see the girl and the woman huddled there together in the doorway, Wenda, who had a pretty, eager sort of face, as if she were smelling at a star, and who was attired in all the mock splendor of the New York office girl, wrapping the old news woman carefully across the shoulders in the knitted jacket she had worn for years and stacking the unsold newspapers in their corner of the doorway where, by arrangement, a small boy called for them before sun up.

Sometimes Wenda had to admit to herself that it was the sting of the social stigma that went with her mother's occupation, almost as much as the desire to spare her effort, that prodded her on to remonstrance.

"Mamma, how do you think a girl feels having a newsboy for a mother?" "Go along! A newsboy for a mother was what kept enough warm milk in your baby bottle to make you what you are."

"You're entitled to rest now." "Yes? My boys and girls got enough struggle to raise their own families." "I'll never marry. What fellow, the kind I'd like, if I like any, would marry into a newsboy's family? On my salary I could come home evenings to a home with a supper on the table instead of having to know my mother is out newsboying!"

"You're a good girl, but I'm a good newsboy."

"Don't you think—a girl in an office, meeting the kind people I do all day—kinda—feels it—having a newsboy for a mother? It's not like with the others. They never got out in the world. A newsboy mother don't help a girl's social position."

"Not if she's an honest newsboy?" "Mamma, let me take care of you." "Go 'long. I won't be made a granny of. When I haven't got any more chicks to take care of, at least, I can take care of myself. You've got your own life. Live it."

"I tell you I'll never marry." But of course one day Wenda, who was stenographer in a lawyer's office, did meet a young clerk named Laddie Evans, to whom her little, young moon of a face was beauty and delight.

He was a straw-colored young man with a lithe, athletic body, great, square, white, healthy young teeth and a hand grip that was youth and vitality in one.

In the office they met, these two, and life suddenly became something to tingle and flush over. New impulses to cry, to laugh, to dance, to shiver ecstatically, raced over Wenda all of a morning. When Laddie Evans passed her type-writing machine goose flesh popped out over him like little bells ringing.

Yet Wenda had a head on her. The daughter who had a mother-who-was-a-newsboy looked back into the eyes of Laddie with her heart crying, but her lips firm.

It was hard, because, almost from the first day that they had begun to be conscious of one another, Laddie was for plunging into the heart of the affair. He hung over her desk at noon time and importuned her to go to an automat for lunch. He slid little paper bags of cherries which he had purchased off a push cart into her lap. He waited for her at closing, and she evaded him by sneaking out of a side door.

One day—he was a bold youth—he wrote her a note in long hand, sending it in to her by an office boy.

"Why won't you go out to dinner with me tonight and give me the chance to tell you that I love you? You might as well give in and get it over with. I'll get you yet. I love you—Laddie."

With her lips quite firm, Wenda wrote him back:

"Yes, I'll have dinner with you." They met down in the gulch of Forty-fifth street, after office hours. There was something really lovely about Wenda. The dewiness of tears shining behind her beauty. And Laddie was like a god. Heady with the wine of new love.

"Wenda," he said, "why have you been so cruel? Nothing can stop the thing between us."

She looked at him with her eyes dry and her heart crying.

"You must work," she said, "and not indulge in nonsense. Some day you will be a big lawyer."

"I know I will if you help me. Come, Wenda, let's go to dinner—we've all of life to plan."

"No—yes—but first—I must stop by and see—my mother—have you a mother? Where is your mother?" "Sure I've a mother. The greatest ever."

"Where—is—she—?" "Oh, she's home. We've a little house up near Spring lake."

"A mother in a little house up near Spring Lake? Well, we must see your mother—first—"

There she was in the doorway, ending her little old voice, duty with the years, out into the jam of the traffic: "Polper—Evening Woild—Telegram—Sun and Post—"

"Mamma—this is my friend—Mr. Evans—we're on our way out for a bite of supper—"

"Well, if it isn't young Evans. You managed it, did you?" "He—what—?"

"Here's a young fellow's been pestering me to fix it for him to meet you every time he seen you calling for me evenings on his way home from the law library and I told him to shuffle for himself."

"You mean—?" "I got myself a job in the office where she works. That's what I call shuffling for myself, Aunt Em."

"Why—you—why, you darling," said Wenda and looked at him with her young moon of a face.

"You're a darling yourself," said Laddie.

"You're both darlings," said Aunt Em. "And now rustle yourselves along; you interfere with my business."

Chickens Supply Millinery
No one can reasonably make objection to the present fashion of wearing feathers on the feminine head covering, for no matter how brilliant they may be, they originate in the barnyard. In former days many of the feathers worn by women represented ruthless slaughter of useful and beautiful birds, but such a sentiment was worked up in opposition to this that feathers went entirely out of fashion. Now, however, these millinery decorations originate with the barnyard fowls which have also decorated the dining table. Many ingenious processes have been devised for securing the brilliant effect called for, and no birds have been sacrificed merely to supply the feathers for millady's hat.

Truth About Octopus
The octopus is found in tropical seas near coral reefs. Some forms spread their limbs 12 or 14 feet like great spiders and might, under favorable circumstances, hold under water persons whom they had seized until they had drowned, at the same time biting them with their horny parrotlike jaws; no doubt such accidents have occasionally happened to pearl divers and the like. Ordinarily, however, the octopus does not attain one-half these dimensions and many species have bodies no longer than an ordinary pear.

Be Persistent and Consistent

UNBELIEVABLE as it may seem, there are many women who at this day and age still expect magic and miracles. Intelligent women too. A well-written letter from one, a personal visit from another, a telephone call from a third. All in the same vein. The first has used a tissue-tightening astringent "for two weeks," with no noticeable improvement in her contour. "It was claimed for the astringent that it would, if used faithfully, gradually lift the sagging muscles and drooping contour. Nothing was said about the time limit. To be sure if you go on using a preparation month after month, year in, year out, without a noticeable improvement there is something wrong some place, either with the preparation itself or with your reaction to it.

But "two full weeks," it would be utopian indeed if a double chin and drooping contour (which probably took years to reach the sagging state) were to be magically lifted in so short a time by the use of an astringent. Plastic surgery could do it in that length of time, but plastic surgery is for the very brave and very rich. And the subject of our discussion is an astringent.

Another instance: "Really, I have exercised faithfully every single night, followed every one of your bending exercises for the waist, but that 'spare tire' has not left me yet."

Perhaps with patience and persistence that "spare" will disappear as gradually as it accumulated—and perhaps, too, you will as suddenly notice that it is no more. Day after day and very likely month after month the fat cells were forming. And I'm willing to wager (something I never do) that your own case may be the stubborn type that hangs on—but exercise is sure to win out if it is patience you have.

Then there's the weak-willed one; "I know I must not eat so and so, the doctor warned me against it, yes, but just this once" (and this once happens ever so often), and the next day there's a case of billiousness and distress. Then the cry "but I do love that dish, and what is a body to do." Be persistent and consistent in your beauty treatments and health habits; and meticulous in your cleansing methods.

Surround Yourself With Beauty

AN INTERIOR decorator and a beauty specialist were having luncheon together. Said the interior decorator: "Beauty editors, lecturers, and specialists are to be congratulated, for their preachings are largely responsible for the raised standards in feminine loveliness. But—if you don't mind my saying so—speaking from a selfish point of view, I don't think that feminine beauty has been linked sufficiently with interior decoration. You emphasize a hat as part of the picture and fashion is made a co-partner to beauty. But a woman chooses a sofa and hangings for her home with a very impersonal attitude. If her clothes are an important part of the picture she presents, isn't she just as important a part of her home?"

She confided that several smart women had sent their sisters or maids to select fabrics for the former's dressing rooms, that personal coloring and temperament was not considered and their own individuality neither expressed nor flattered.

All of which is a rather sad but true state of affairs. "Surround yourself with beauty—and let your surroundings express YOU, enhance your charm and reflect your individuality."

Haven't you heard a rebellious young one threatening, "Wait until I have my own place, it will be something different, more expressive." And, lo, when opportunity did knock—well, if it wasn't the same, stereotyped, set order of affairs. The same sort of furniture, a bit newer, of course; the same color scheme, arrangements, accessories.

Study your coloring and know what colors and shades are most becoming to you. It is impossible to give a list of definite suggestions because of the infinite variety of shades and intensity. But a general color knowledge is inherent, I think. Breathes there a red head who didn't know when she was a year old that green is the most enchanting color for her. And aren't our blue-eyed babies told long before they can say da-da, that they should wear blue to bring out all the depth of their eyes.

In the matter of colors, let fashion guide you. Now, just one word of warning with respect to lines. Avoid extremes. Modern, harsh lines may have a definite dash, but only the dashing, exotic type seems to "belong" and be at home with them. Make your home a setting for your beauty and surround yourself with flattering and enhancing accessories expressive of all that is YOU in you.

INTESTINAL ALIMENTS BREAK DOWN PHYSICAL ENDURANCE

NEW COMBINATION CORRECTS INTESTINAL DISORDERS PROMPTLY

Draggy, headachy days; lost vigor; lost vitality mean a condition of broken down physical endurance. If you are listless, nervous and too tired at night to join in simple healthy fun you may be one of the thousands of victims of intestinal ailments. Doctors declare that ninety per cent of all cases of loss of energy come from that almost universal physical evil—constipation.

The human system must throw off its accumulated waste matter every day. Ordinary pills, powders, salts and cathartic waters often do more harm than good, but the new combination Alagar which is an emulsion of pure mineral oil, agar agar and phenolphthalein—corrects intestinal disorders promptly and completely.

It works, not only on the colon, or lower bowel, alone, but it loosens stagnating material in the entire intestinal tract and "tones up" the intestinal muscles, thus helping them to remove waste matter regularly and completely every day. Alagar helps you sleep more soundly at night and those dull, draggy headaches become things of the past. For prompt relief from lost vigor and vitality be sure to get the new pleasant-tasting Alagar.

SYNOPSIS

Exhausted, ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Bat comes after him, but his new friends conceal him.

CHAPTER I—Continued

Without a word Bat strode off into the darkness. He went not in the direction of High falls but back on the trail toward Dead Creek flow. He was like a wounded panther growling with rage—a veritable child of the darkness in which he walked.

"He won't be comin' back here," Scott declared. "There's a lumber camp down by Grass pond. He'll head for that. He ain't goin' to give up lookin' for the boy. Bat needs him. The boy could earn many a bottle o' whiskey for him this summer."

Bat had not recognized his son. Shad went to bed that night with a deep pity in his heart for the man who was his father, remembering as he did the good days past—of which there were some like starlight in his dark memories. Soon he slept, as only a weary boy can sleep. He awoke refreshed in the morning.

"I'm glad it ain't yesterday no more," he said to Mr. Converse as he was dressing. "I feel better—more like a man."

"You look like a gentleman, and I want you to learn to eat as gentlemen do. Eat slowly and keep your knife away from your face. Use it only to cut your food, and eat with your fork."

"I won't forget your advice," said the boy. "I'd like to be a gentleman."

They went to breakfast. After the meal Mr. Converse turned to the lad saying: "I'll send Uncle Phide down the trail with you to my camp. He'll keep you happy till you're beyond the danger point. Uncle Phide, you take a gun with you and see that he gets there."

When Scott and the boy were ready to set out, the latter in his new clothes and mustache. Mr. Converse said to him: "Have you got your money?"

"I Hope He's as Fond of Ladies as He is of Flapjacks."

"Yes, sir, I've got it pinned in my pocket all safe."

"When you get out of the woods, make for St. Lawrence county. It's near Canada. You could jump across the border if necessary and be safe. Take this letter to my friend Colonel Blake. He lives in Canton."

Then Shad and the famous guide began their journey through that winding green aisle to the deep woods from Big Deer Pond to Mud lake. They had gone about a mile when, at a point where the trail stopped down a hillside, the guide stopped suddenly.

"Some one jest crossed the trail away down yonder in the valley," he whispered. The guide stood still, looking intently at the point where a moving figure had attracted his attention. Again he whispered: "It's a man. He's settin' on a log by the side o' the trail. He doesn't see us. Come on. If it's yer father I may stop a minute, but you walk right on as if y'd never seen him before."

Within five minutes they came upon Bat Morryson sitting at the trail-side. The boy, walking ahead, had assumed a slight limp to disguise his gait. Bat greeted him saying: "Hello, stranger."

Shad made no reply. "He's deaf and dumb, an' ye might as well talk to that log yer sittin' on," said Phide Scott as he stopped by the huge Cyclopean Bat.

The boy passed on around a turn in the trail and in a moment was beyond the reach of their vision. In a short time the guide overtook him.

"He mistrusts that you're back at my camp," said Scott. "He's heard at Grass Pond that Converse is over with me. He's made up his mind that the millionaire will try to slip you across to his place at Bog lake."

A mile or so farther on the two came to that big black pond known as Mud lake. They got into the only boat at the landing and rowed across. It was now a two-mile stretch to Bog lake walled in by giant pines and spruces.

Meanwhile the slow intellect of Bat Morryson, sitting on a log by the trail-side, had begun to find its way. He had been thinking about the small stranger who had come down the trail with Phide Scott. There was something familiar in the look of that chap.

Suddenly he arose. "By G—d! They've fooled me," he said to himself. "They've dressed the boy up an' put a place o' fur on his lip an' slipped him right under my nose."

He hurried down the trail in pursuit of Scott and Shad, not half a mile behind them. He was losing a slave, and the slave was of considerable value. When he got to Mud lake and found no boat and saw the others landing a mile away on the far shore, he started to skirt the lake, with his mouth full of curses.

CHAPTER II

The Fugitive Resorts to Strategy.

Soon after Shad arrived at the big log camp of Mr. Converse, he and his guide crossed Bog lake and set out for the railroad. A freight and accommodation train was waiting at a flag station. Shad got aboard and went on to Fulton Chain. He was advised to change there to the express train bound for Utica. This he did.

It was the Fourth of July. There had been a celebration of the day in the forest village. Shad stood in the midst of a merry throng when the express train arrived. After the engine had passed he saw the head of his father protruding from a window of the smoking car. The man was looking intently at the crowded platform. The boy ducked downward as if looking for something he had dropped. He climbed aboard a car near him wondering whether he had better take that train or wait for another. Perhaps his father would get off there.

A happy lot of boys and girls sat around him, blowing tin horns, laughing, throwing jests and missiles at one another. He had never known that boys and girls could be so happy. A little after the train started Bat Morryson came through the car looking for his son. He went to the end of the train and back, his big red eye searching in vain for the boy slave.

Shad got out with a large band of merry-makers at Remsen. Suddenly he discovered that his father was walking just ahead of him with a stranger. "If I don't find the young devil here, I'll buy a bottle o' whiskey an' put her home," he was saying. "I've had enough o' this."

Shad left them at the next corner and went straight out into the country. After some hours of travel he came to a new-mown meadow by the roadside where dried hay was cocked or in windrows. He crossed the fence, tore open a cock of hay and made for himself a comfortable bed of the sweet-scented grasses and lay down upon it and fell asleep.

He was up at daylight. About midday he came to a little village where there were a railroad station and a small hotel. At the latter he got his dinner. Late that afternoon he got a train going north and arrived at Canton about six in the morning. A bus driver told him how to reach the house of Colonel Blake two miles from town.

He set out in the direction indicated and was soon beyond the village up toward the hills. He came to a little red house with flowers in the dooryard and potted plants in the windows. A small, mounted brass cannon stood on one side of the lawn. In the road a man and his dog were driving some cattle.

"I'm lookin' for Colonel Blake's house," said the boy.

"I wouldn't wonder if you were also lookin' for some breakfast," the man answered.

"I am kind o' hungry."

"Well, hunger is like every other good thing. It can be carried too far. You can let go of it as soon as I have put out these cattle. I'm hungry my self."

"I'm awful hungry," said the boy. "I've got money to pay for what I eat."

"Look here, did you see that cannon in my yard?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I shoot it at every man that offers me money for victuals after he's warned. If you've got more money than you want, you can throw some of it into my well."

The cattle began streaming through an open barway into the pasture. When all were entered and the bars put up the man turned to the boy and said:

"Now follow me. We'll tend to Colonel Blake later."

The sun was up. A clear, beautiful summer day had begun. They washed with soap and cold water dipped from a rain barrel at a stand outside the door, and went into the house and sat down at the breakfast table.

They ate in silence, the hired girl bringing their food from a stove.

"Look here, pard," said the man. "I'll tell you my name if you'll tell me yours. Names are not important, but in high society they're a help."

"My name is Shad Morryson," said the boy.

"It's quite a mouthful. My name is Alison Blake."

"Be you Colonel Blake?"

"Yes. That's what they call me."

"Here's a letter for you."

Shad drew the letter from his pocket and put it in the colonel's hands. The latter opened and read it.

"Converse! He knows a good thing when he sees it, and I guess he'd know a good boy."

Blake's wife and daughter entered the room with a cheery greeting, and sat down at the table.

"Here's a boy come up the road this mornin'," the colonel said to his wife. "I hope he's as fond of ladies as he is of flapjacks."

Mrs. Blake was a kindly comely woman about forty years of age. The blond, blue-eyed girl was dressed for school.

"This girl Ruth is our Professor of Fun," said the man.

Shad was blushing. He and the girl had taken a quick survey of each other and come to conclusions. The young have a special gift for that. Shad thought that next to a spotted fawn she was the most beautiful creature he had ever seen. When he looked at her it was to discover that she was looking at him. The same was true of the girl. Colonel Blake saw it all and smiled.

In a moment he said to the boy: "We'll go down to the office. I'll give you a letter to a friend of mine over at Amity Dam who told me that he wanted a boy to work in his store."

The colonel and the lad went out-of-doors. It was the tender-hearted, impressionable Mrs. Blake who made all this a part of our history. She called to her husband. He returned to the house.

"Who is that beautiful boy and where did he come from?" the woman asked.

"He's a runaway—a kind of a fugitive slave."

"What a shame! His smiling handsome face has won my heart. Let's keep him here a day or two and give him a chance to rest."

"We'll ask him. I rather guess he'd like it."

So it came about that the boy tarried a day and a night at the red farmhouse. A new experience had come to Shad. Women had been mostly hateful to him. They had been hard to get along with. He had had a poor opinion of them. He felt something immeasurably grateful and wonderful in the motherly, gentle manner of Mrs. Blake and in the beauty and grace of her daughter.

Ruth did not go to school that day. She entertained the boy with the photograph album and with croquet and throwing and catching a ball. They were pleased with all this, but their joy came from a different source; perhaps from looking into each other's eyes and from a singular emotion quite new to them.

At last they sat down very tired in the swing under the big maple tree. "Where is Colonel Blake?" the boy asked.

"Oh, he's gone to town. He's a lawyer. He's the district attorney," the girl answered proudly. "He goes away every morning. Are you going with him tomorrow?"

"Yes, I must get to work."

"Men are so hateful. They're always going to work."

Only Tradition as to Maker of First Flag

It is hard to distinguish between legend and truth about the first American flag, and what Betsy Ross had to do with it. The tradition is that in May, 1777, Washington, accompanied by two of his officers, called upon Mrs. Ross, who operated an upholstery establishment, continuing a business left at the death of her husband, to make a flag of their design, and that this was the first American flag of the official pattern, adopted June 14, 1777. The matter is in dispute, through claims that a flag of the same, or nearly the same, design, had been used before. There is some rivalry for honor associated with the origin of the flag; and confusion wrought by painters and Colonial story writers, who drew upon their imaginations to add interest to the legend, has invited the pressing of some rather nebulous claims. There is no historical account meeting with such approval as to warrant the assertion that it is the truth.

Bird Victim of Fashion

The kittiwake, a member of the gull family that inhabits the Arctic regions of Europe and North America, takes its name from its queer, plaintive cry. These birds grow to a length of from 16 to 18 inches, and are generally white with bluish gray back and wings, yellow beaks and legs of brownish black. They have been ruthlessly slaughtered on the British Islands for the millinery trade.

Waist-Length Jackets in Fashion

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A JACKET, and a jacket and a jacket with a few extra jackets just to have a variety is fashion's decree for spring and summer. One really must have a whole wardrobe of cunning little jackets if one lives up to the code of smart dress prescribed for the coming months.

And what a decorative role these versatile jackets are playing. They are everything that is fascinating both as to color and the materials of which they are made. Brief affairs are they, the newest models favoring waist-length.

Printed eton jackets for daytime wear appear in quantities. They stop above the waistline and smartly contrast the skirt. Other of these little jackets have quite a military bearing, as they are broad at the shoulders and frequently have a double-breast fastening with brass or nickel buttons. Stunning costumes for sports and town wear developed in intriguing novelty lightweight woollens in gay colors (red, white and blue being in high favor, the world of fashion having gone colonial this season) flaunt these youthful waist-length jackets.

Whether for daytime, afternoon or evening a jacket of some sort is now considered an indispensable part of the costume. At afternoon bridge, for dinner, for the theater and other formal occasions jackets take on a versatile and decorative mood which imparts an enlivening touch to the style picture.

There is nothing stereotyped about the clever jackets which are topping the new spring afternoon and evening frocks. Some of them are of simplest construction, with flowing or bell sleeves and open front similar to the style portrayed in the little center panel above. Whatever this simpler type jacket may lack in intricate detail is, offset by its fetching color.

PARIS CATERS TO LOVE OF UNIFORM

Women like uniforms, proverbially, and now they may have military touches in their own clothes, as evidenced by Worth's spring styles.

Chevrons, braids and frogs have been added to the already popular epaulet mode. Metal buttons and chain trims carry the effect still further.

Lines of the spring clothes match the new trappings, for broader shoulders are correctly military, and the slimmer skirts give the proper fitted-in appearance to the lower part of the figure.

Evening skirts are narrow, as with the daytime frocks, and some are designed with slashed sides. Worth uses some trains, and continues to show the ruffled skirts.

Short evening coats have very wide sleeves, embroidered in angora wool. For day wear, there are many bolero short jacket suits, some with contrasting jackets.

Light-Weight Wool Is Favored for Blouses

Light-weight wool, such as wool shantung, is much in favor with the Paris house of Worth for blouses. White is usually the color with buttons that harmonize or contrast with the suit color.

For example, one of Worth's white wool blouses has green buttons to go with a green suit; another has black or dark blue buttons to accompany dark suits; a third has red buttons designed to be worn with a black or brown suit.

Two-in-One Coats

Some coat manufacturers are making spring coats with heavy interlinings. They are being shown for immediate wear, and when the weather moderates the linings may be taken out and the coats worn for spring—two coats for the price of one.

Made of sheerest ice-green transparent velvet as it is, and posed over a formal dance pajama costume of pale yellow chiffon, the color scheme is perfect. As a little summer wrap to slip over lingerie frocks, a jacket of this type will prove a delight the season through.

The black velvet jacketette to the left declares a greater formality. Its fitted-at-the-waistline silhouette is very new and chic. At the front it ties in a soft knot and two ends. It is worn over a white crepe dress which has a bow tied at the neck, left hanging outside the wrap, which lends to the back a graceful note. White fox fur on the loose sleeves completes this symphony in black and white.

All sorts of intriguing details enter into the designing of the myriads of petite velvet jackets which are so outstanding in the mode, such as for instance, voluminous puff sleeves, ornamental buttons, an abundance of shirring with a plentiful use of decorative bows.

Notwithstanding the allurements of the little waist-length velvet jackets, there is a rival in the field—the bolero or eton made of allover lace. These little lace fantasies are in loveliest tones and tints, which adds greatly to their charm. The model pictured is the pale blue venise lace. It is significant that the crepe yoke of the black crepe gown is in the same shade of blue. This color alliance of bodice-top or yoke and the little jacket which tops it is a new move which is accentuated throughout the costume design.

It is expected that the lace jacketette will be a leading item for summer as well as during the spring months, not only in contrasting colors which will lend a gay note to frocks of monotone crepes, but to all types of sheer and dainty dresses.

NOVEL WRAPS By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A pleasing venture in fashion's activities is the creating of novel little capes and scarfs of colorful sheer velvet. These cunning fantasies are all that fancy dare picture both as to color and unique design. The winsome cape sketched at the top is made of transparent velvet with self-fabric tiny roses completely bordering it. Another new and voguish type of wrap done in high-key colors of turquoise, coral and green or in any of the delectable pastels is the circular scarf with long pointed ends which are thrown gracefully around the shoulder. They are very lovely worn with prints, or triple sheer or satin gowns.
