Hurt Poodle Causes Excitement At CWA First Aid Station

Dog Runs Home Happily As Fishhook Is Removed From Mouth

There was excitement at the CWA first aid station at Passaic avenue and Emmett street Tuesday afternoon when Mrs. Frank Restino of 54 Mitchell street ran in with a small, white, yelping poodle in her arms. A long line was dangling from the little dog's mouth, and it was discovered that a large fishhook was imbedded in the animal's jaw. Mrs. Restino excitedly told officials that the "pooch" had been playing in the cellar of her home, and had tried to swallow the hook. After a local anesthetic had been administered, the hook was removed and iodine applied, and the poodle ran home with Mrs. Restino, wagging his tail with joy.

Many Cases Treated

Many minor injuries are treated at the station, which is attached to the field office of the Belleville engineering corps, of which Matthew J. Sheehan is head. With 1,200 men at work on the construction of sanitary and storm sewers of the CWA projects arranged by Commissioner Patrick A. Waters, there are several cases of frost-bitten ears, injured fingers, and minor cuts and bruises daily. The injured men are given first aid at the station, and are then taken by police to Dr. Herbert B. Vail or L. G. L. Yates for treatment.

Valuable Antiseptic Discovered At Local Plant Laboratory

New Compound Investigated By Wallace & Tiernan Research Staff

The discovery of a new antiseptic, azochloramid, in the research laboratories of Wallace & Tiernan Co., Inc., of Belleville, was announced last week by Martin F. Tiernan at the convention of the Society of American Bacteriologists in Philadelphia. Dr. John C. Baker, director of the laboratories, explained the discovery. The compound, the technical name of which is N-N-dichloroazodicarbonamide, was discovered by Dr. Franz C. Schmelkes of Bloomfield, who was aided in the research by Miss Isabelle B. Romans and Henry C. Marks of Belleville, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Horning of North Newark and Albert V. Guiteras of Montclair, while working on new compounds for the purification of drinking water.

Azochloramid may be of great value in the practice of medicine, since it has been found that, while it is extremely effective as a germicide, it has slight effect on amino acids, which constitute a large part of body tissue, and on human body serum.

The new antiseptic has a lasting effect, since it does not break down readily, and has a bright yellow color which persists as long as it is effective. Experiments are now under way to determine its therapeutic value.

Wallace & Tiernan Co., Inc., of which the main office and plant is located in Belleville, has other plants in this country and in Europe, and makes most of the water purification apparatus in use throughout the world. In addition to chlorinators for water, swimming pools and sewage, it controls the Novadel-Agenc process for the bleaching and aging of flour by means of Novadelox and nitrogen trichloride.

Jean Berte water color printing plates, Wallace clocks and gyro-stabilizers for signal buoys are also among products manufactured at the local plant.

Director Williams Explains His Discussion At Meeting Of Taxpayers' Association

Asks This Newspaper To Print "An Accurate Resume Of Comments And Recommendations" As Given By Him

Editor Belleville News, Dear Sir:

Definite inaccuracies and apparent misunderstandings on the part of your representative in article in your last issue relative to comments of Finance Director Williams at meeting with executive committee of Taxpayers' Association last Thursday evening, impels me to believe you will, in interest of properly advising your readers print an accurate resume of comments and recommendations as given by me to the Board of Education and to Taxpayers' Association.

Your article stated "that 1934-5 school budget asks for increase of $200,000.00"—correct amount of increase is $96,000.00. Your article stated that Finance Director "advocated continuance of salary reductions"—analysis of definite recommendation as submitted to Board of Education and Taxpayers' Association as outlined below prove inconsistency of your article.

Your article states that State School allotment of approximately $160,000.00 was wrongly labelled. Neither this amount or any portion thereof appeared in proposed budget as credit item—comment below covers my viewpoint and recommendation on this question.

"In passing over current expense items of proposed school budget, we note increases in many items about equal the amount of decreases in other items. We should not lose sight of the fact that each expense item is wholly independent of each other expense item, and possibly a further detail analysis may submit openings for curtailment. No recommendations on the "current expense" items are offered.

Two items are open for study, I believe—the reductions in teachers' salaries—$42,000, and the item of state allotment—approximately $160,000.

In reference to first item—$42,000.00 included in proposed budget, on inquiry of Director Williams, the president of the Board of Education stated no decision had been made to continue reduction or to replace salary reduction. I specifically stated if Board of Education determined to reduce salary, I would offer no objection now or later, but if the Board of Education determines not to replace salary reductions, I recommend that the taxpayers be relieved of this burden, which can only be considered as a misnamed "surplus revenue" or "reserve."

If the Board of Education determines some of above should be in proposed budget so that funds will have been appropriated if replacement of salary schedule is deemed in order after July 1, 1934, I recommend 50 per cent of $42,000.00 be placed in proposed budget. Such action will place in hands of Board of Education sufficient appropriation to cover salary replacement for latter half of 1934. Appropriating funds for indefinite uses to July 1, 1935 appears unwarranted. The Board of Commissioners at the latter date when another budget is under consideration will undoubtedly not turn down a request from the Board of Education if the latter have replaced school salaries.

In reference to second item—State School Allotment—Whereas, $167,000.00 or more has been allotted to the Belleville Board of Education by the State of New Jersey, a conservative estimate of the next allotment could be placed at $160,000.00. The proposed budget of $402,000.00—$96,000.00 increase over last budget—has received no credit for State Allotment, notwithstanding recent State Laws permit a period of five (5) years may be taken to appropriate the sum required to replace the school fiscal year on former basis.

(Incidentally, only 25 communities of New Jersey out of 534, took advantage of a weird law permitting juggling of school budgets—and Belleville was one of the 25. Elected officials acting under such laws would find themselves severely accused of political budgetteering. We still must be guided by the old maxim that "all is not gold that shines" even if it is school law.)

To absolutely eliminate 100 per cent of a positive credit of approximately $160,000.00 is manifestly out of order. This procedure with the $42,000.00 school item (providing salary reductions are not replaced) demands local taxpayers readjust the local school budget in 1 1/2 to 2 years—and five (5) years have been provided by State Law.

I recommend the proposed budget receive a credit of 33 1/3 per cent or $53,333.00 of the estimated State Allotment of $160,000.00—this still permits a reserve of $110,000.00. Within two and three quarters (2 3/4 to three (3) years, the reserve necessary to replace school fiscal schedule will be accomplished—well within the time specified by State Law—will permit honest tax relief to be received by property owners, and repairs well within sound financial action.

Acceptance of above two recommendations will permit reduction of $74,000.00 in the proposed budget, permits making up an honest financial consideration.

In any event, any attempt to set reserve items should be labelled. Citizens must not be allowed to think they are against reductions in salaries when they may be voting on known services—citizens must be allowed the privilege of knowing voting on 100 per cent elimination of a State Allotment. Without any mention of this credit item, property owners vote on setting up reserves far beyond taxpaying capacity.

I urge the Board of Commissioners

Factfully Yours

— LILLIAN THOMAS —

The New Reporter

"I've got to write something about Tahiti," said Anderson. "The editor of The Daily Breeze heard that I spent six years down there and he gave me the assignment."

"I suppose," he continued, indifferently, "That the best way to write an article for newspaper readers is in straight, simple language, isn't it?"

"That's right," I answered. "Just put it down on paper as if you were audibly expressing yourself to a group of people."

"Would you mind writing the opening paragraph for me?" he asked. "I'd like to get it started today, but I'm not in the mood. If you would just jot down a few lines—"

He handed me his note book and I wrote a little—about 200 words.

"That's fine! That's great!" he exclaimed. "Thanks a lot."

I met him again the next day.

"I suppose I told you that I've got to write an article about Tahiti? Well, the editor wants me to include a paragraph about the Chinese plantation owners down there. I was wondering if maybe you knew anything about it?"

"Not much," I replied. "I've read a few books on the subject, but what your editor wants is first hand information."

"Well, you could sort of make it sound like first hand information, couldn't you?"

"I suppose I could, but—"

"Swell!" interrupted Anderson, showing his note book in my hand. "Just scribble off a few paragraphs for me, will you?"

So I wrote another 200 words.

"That's fine, old girl, much obliged to you."

"By the way," he said a few days later. "You know this article I'm writing about Tahiti? Do you think I should include sumpin' about Tahitian customs and things like that?"

"Not a bad idea," I replied. "Why don't you?"

"Well, you see it's this way—"

I looked at his note book.

"You haven't," I said, "added anything to what I have already written for you, have you?"

"No," he answered quietly. "I've been awfully busy thinking about what I should write. Thinking is a harder job than writing, isn't it?"

I sat up all night.... thinking! I spend every waking hour.... thinking! It drives me out. It drives me crazy!"

I knew what Anderson was feeling so I took his note book and wrote steadily until another 600 words were added to the 400.

A few days later I read the article in The Daily Breeze. Anderson hadn't added or changed a single word. The manuscript appeared exactly as I had written it.

I met him that afternoon.

"Say there, Lil," he said, "did you see the paper? A great article, wasn't it?"

I agreed that it was.

"Too bad," he continued sympathetically, "that you don't know how to write. It sure is a profitable and wonderful profession."

Pure Food and Low Cost Trade
Build Up Nation-Wide Organization

JOHN R. THOMPSON, JR.

Under the banner of service to the public—the eternal principle of successful commerce—the famous John R. Thompson corporation is launching its forty-third year.

At the helm of the organization, which serves a million meals a week to American men and women, is John R. Thompson, Jr., of the second generation of restaurateurs.

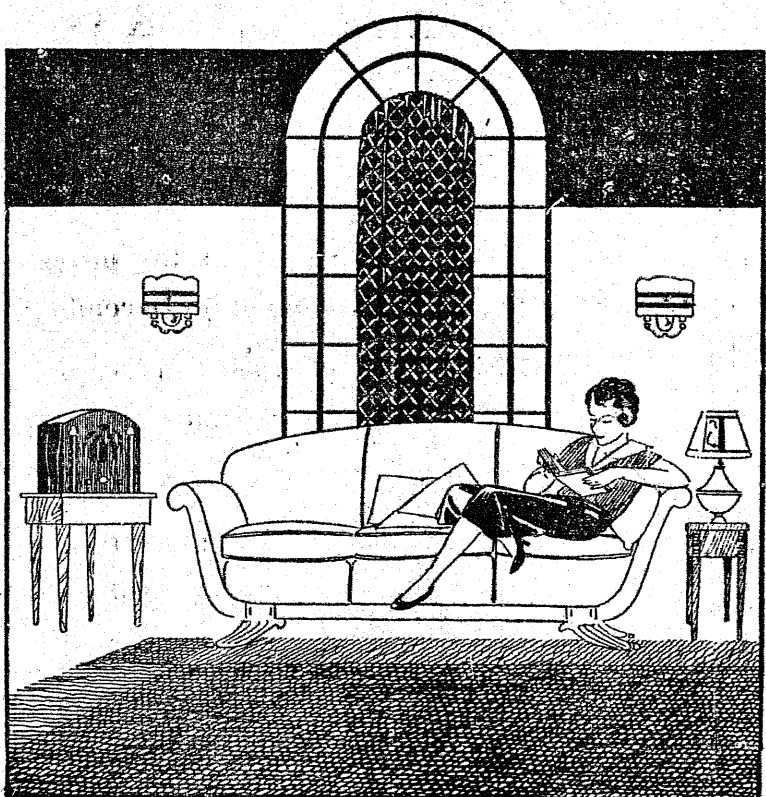

Able executive, alert to modern shifts in tastes and habits, Mr. Thompson observes rigidly the inexorable rules and traditions of his father. These pertained especially to the highest possible pure food standard.

"That, with us, is a basic principle," said Mr. Thompson, who in March of 1933 resumed the presidency of the corporation with its far-flung interests in property, incident to operation of 116 restaurants in thirty-nine cities.

Pure food—fresh juicy beefs, skillfully prepared vegetables, dairy products, and breads, topped by good coffee, four million cups being served a month, have proved the magnet to patrons. And thus are nation-wide organizations built. The son, like the father, believes in completely equipped laboratories for testing all foods for quality; giant storage space for large, low-cost buying, permitting quality food at low prices to the public.

Said a famous Parisian chef: "The restaurant business is not learned by one man. It is custom and tradition, weighed to a delicacy, and passed down to the next generation."

Gleanings From State News

Items Of Interest Taken From Here And There Outside Of Town

Business is improving, The Merchantville Community News finds: "A score of business people in the community, whose sales increase on account of Christmas buying, were asked if Christmas sales this year showed an improvement over those of last year.

The majority reported in the affirmative. Two or three were enthusiastic. One store offered a striking illustration of good business. Its windows had been stocked with Christmas goods. Sunday morning it was open and was invaded by a few late buyers. But the window displays were "ruined." It made a disorderly but pleasing sight, the nearly emptied windows.

"What happens at home happens generally, and there is no doubt that there has been a great improvement in business. We hear stories from other places and read statistics of bureaus, but when we see it with our own eyes we can no longer doubt that the corner, where 'prosperity' lurked so long, has been reached.

"Prosperity is not what many of us have looked for. It is a differently-modelled animal of less proportions. Still it is what the optimists kept telling us was just around the corner.

"We will be better off and happier if we resign ourselves to the acceptance of a prosperity of a smaller edition than that with which we played before the blow fell. If we find our approach to what we desire is gradual, and perhaps more laborious, we will reap more pleasure than we would had we been able to hop over the chasm of depression into a garden of roses.

"What has been happening in the rehabilitation of the unemployed has not meant as much to many of us as it should; we have been watching a new and strange picture. But when we know that all kinds of people went out and spent more money for Christmas, we realize that there must be more money to spend, generally.

"Many eyes were watching the Christmas business and the pleasing reports should supply the psychology that will give the nation the feeling that the natural momentum has started, after the shoves business has been getting from federal crowbars."

The Bloomfield Independent Press sees the value of organizations to the community:

"Some one commented recently upon the large number of organizations in Bloomfield. It is true that societies and civic organizations, charities, lodges, clubs, etc., do reach a striking total here. However, it is not likely that they are much more numerous here than in other towns of size throughout the country."

the country during the great depression of 1933. Suppose there had been no family aid societies, no community chest drives, no free shelters, no health clinics, or free hospital wards, no public recreation, no Red Cross, no one of these scores of societies in Bloomfield alone, ready to extend a helping hand to those most in need, in the period before the government got its gigantic relief and employment projects under way. Surely there would have been serious disorders throughout the country.

"In a lighter and recent vein, Christmas was brightened for 283 Bloomfield families and a total of exactly 922 children received toys and clothing because the League for Friendly Service was organized to mobilize all individuals and organizations who could contribute toys, clothing, food or money and also organized to distribute them to those most in need and most deserving."

The Monmouth American discusses the possible State sales tax:

"A Retail Sales Tax is endorsed by the Republican legislative leaders. 'Such a tax might be very obnoxious, or comparatively unobjectionable. All depends upon how it is framed.

"With New York on one side of this state and Pennsylvania on the other having this tax, Jersey men are no strangers to paying it.

"If we profit by the experience of our sister states and use the new tax not as an additional burden but as a substitute for some present levies and employ some of it for relief of municipalities, the public would probably be willing to bear the nuisance entailed. Which other states have found is not as bad as they feared, and in fact express satisfaction with.

"Of course a sales tax paid at the source is preferable, though it may not be practicable for states. Of course also there should be numerous exemptions, particularly with reference to food and fuel necessities."

We're apt to think that those who think as we do are very intelligent.

Be sure you know exactly what you're going after or you may run past it.

Youth spreads its wings—and the world clips them.

We can cross America in a few hours. Are we better men and women than those who crossed it in a covered wagon?

Public Service Gas Output Breaks Records Of Past

All records for output of gas in plants of Public Service Electric and Gas Company in a single day were broken Friday, December 29, when a total of 100,001,000 cubic feet were supplied to consumers served by the company. The large demand for gas on the company's system was brought about by the intensely cold weather which continued throughout the day. The high record send-out of gas by the company's system was 98,000,000 cubic feet on February 18,
