Three Speakers Scheduled For Tenth
Annual Communion Breakfast At St. Peter's
Committee Reports That All Plans Have Been Completed
And Demand For Tickets Has Exceeded Expectations

The tenth annual communion breakfast of St. Peter's Holy Name Society, which is to be held next Sunday morning in the School auditorium on William street, bids fair to be an ornate feast as well as a spiritual and physical repast.

Two prominent speakers have already been obtained and a third of equal calibre, whose name has not yet been released, are to be on hand.

Professor Harry F. Keefe, A.B., A.M., and Judge Leo S. Carney LL.B., who are to speak are orators of excellent repute.

Professor Keefe, who will be remembered for his very splendid talk at the Communion Breakfast two years ago, is a graduate of Seton Hall College, Professor of Philosophy at John Marshall College of Law and is principal of School 6, Hoboken, N. J. Despite these demands on his time Professor Keefe is called upon to do much public speaking, being especially active in affairs of the Hoboken American Legion, in which city he resides.

Judge Carney, no less known to many Belleville folks is a resident of East Newark and like Professor Keefe is connected with the John Marshall College of Law, holding the office of Treasurer of that institution and occupying the chair of Professor of Evidence. Judge Carney is also Judge of the Second Judicial District Court of New Jersey.

History Repeats Itself;

Result—2 Percolators

History repeats itself for Mr. and Mrs. George Stalter of Ralph street. Four years ago they took part in a dance contest at Palisades Park and won an electric percolator. Last Friday night they entered a walk contest at the Elmer S. Hyde block dance in Stephens street. After a half hour of steady waltzing they capped the highest award, an electric percolator.

George, as he is known to the friends that patronize his diner at 308 Washington avenue, directly opposite the office of The Belleville News, forgot to mention one thing when narrating this story. Patented by the Calcutta Technical school.

He was urged to reconsider by many civic groups in town and the Progress Club sent a delegation to the meeting last night to ask him to stay in Belleville. The reception director has been trying this year

Finance Director Williams Asks, "Why?"

Sample Ballot

And again—

On December 25, 1933, Commissioner Carragher was not present when recommendation of Finance Director Williams was accepted by all other board members.

And again—

On all bills rendered by state auditor, Commissioner Carragher voted "Yes" to pay every bill.

Now—

As to what Commissioner Carragher thought of Finance Director Williams before Finance Director Williams rejected Commissioner Carragher's request to join in Carragher's political election schemes—let us look at the record:

At board meeting, August 26, 1930, Commissioner Carragher said, "We have the right man, Williams, in the right place. Go to it and clean these matters up."

At board meeting, September 2, 1930, Commissioner Carragher said, "I am going to stand with this man Williams."

At board meeting, December 5, 1932, Commissioner Carragher said, "Commissioner Williams has a hard job downstairs. (The baby bond plan) will help the town and pull us through."

At board meeting, May 24, 1932, Commissioner Carragher said "This cancellation of old personal taxes should have been cleaned up long ago and I want to congratulate Commissioner Williams for doing the job."

At board meeting, December 16, 1931, Commissioner Carragher said, "I want to congratulate Commissioner Williams on the good work he is doing."

At the same meeting Commissioner Carragher said "Commissioner Williams is doing good work. The unemployed (clerks from unemployed state lists) are helping a great deal—in fact, making one of the best clean-ups (of old records) that has ever been made in town."

At board meeting, September 15, 1931, "He (Williams) is the best man in the revenue and finance."

At board meeting June 2, 1931, Commissioner Carragher said, "This man (Williams) does more work than any of us. This man does more than any of us and has a hard job getting the money in. The Mayor does a lot of work too, but he (Williams) is the man of the hour with the people and this man (Williams) has a job downstairs that I would not take as a gift."

At board meeting, April 25, 1932, Commissioner Carragher said, "This man (Williams) has an uphill climb and is doing all he can."

At board meeting, April 21, 1932, Commissioner Carragher said, "The Revenue and Finance Department is better than it ever was. This man in finance and revenue has a big job before him."

At board meeting discussing taxes and assessments, January 31, 1931, Commissioner Carragher said, "This is the man" (pointing to Commissioner Williams) who is trying to show you. If you didn't have people (pointing to Commissioner Williams) good enough to fight your battles for you, you would lose your own homes pretty soon."

These quotations are surely sufficient to prove to voters that it is not the ability or the integrity of Finance Director Williams that Commissioner Carragher questions.

Not as a candidate for office does Finance Director Williams answer the unfair attempt to injure the character of Tax Collector William C. Knapp and Town Treasurer T. Russell Sergeant by stating money had been received by some one whose tax bill had been received and whose money was missing. Finance Director Williams answers as Chief Finance Officer of this town because his friends have demanded this duty be performed. In the typical member manner—Commissioner Carragher failed to say the tax bill was received in 1928—two years before Finance Director Williams and Tax Collector Knapp went into office. He failed to tell that he—Commissioner Carragher—brought William Jones of Perry street to the Board of Commissioners conference three times in prose to the board that Mr. Jones held a tax receipt—and he failed to tell that Mr. Knapp insisted on not changing any records of books of 1928 two years before he came into office—unless by board resolution—the only way to clear the record. Commissioner Carragher failed to say Mr. Jones and his neighbor were made to give Finance Director Williams signed affidavits that they paid this money two years before Finance Director Williams and Tax Collector Knapp were in office. Commissioner Carragher failed to state that he—Commissioner Carragher—insisted on clearing Mr. Jones' record and he—Commissioner Carragher—failed to say that he voted "NO" on the resolution to cancel this open tax item which he writes "unbusinesslike." Finance Director Williams regrets that the characters of two fine men—William Knapp and Russell Sergeant—should be dragged through the mud by such statements as made by Commissioner Carragher.

BUT—

What does the character of public servants and the happiness of their families matter to Commissioner Carragher on an election eve?

Commissioner Carragher has repeatedly stated in public meetings, "Belleville is in good condition. We are assessed at over thirty million dollars and owe only six or seven million dollars and any company having thirty millions in assets and owing only six millions would be considered in good shape."

What a far step to his recent unpatriotic statements that "Belleville Is Bankrupt." In digging his political grave, why should the interest of every home owner, every factory owner, every merchant, every school and town employee and Belleville's right to decent advertising by a member of the governing body be carried down?

AND AGAIN—

Commissioner Carragher questions the practice of having Town Treasurer Sergeant and Deputy Director Coogan sign checks. Commissioner Carragher forgot to tell that Ordinance No. 502 permits Deputy Director and Town Treasurer to sign checks in the event of illness or absence of the Finance Director. Commissioner Carragher voted "YES" on the first reading of ordinance November 18, 1930—Again Commissioner Carragher forgot to tell he voted "YES" on the second reading of the ordinance on December 2, 1930—And again Commissioner Carragher forgot to tell he voted "YES" on the third reading of the ordinance December 2, 1930.

Finance Director Williams regards it as his duty as a public official to place before every voter the above FACTS—FROM THE RECORDS—which are open to the public.

Finance Director Williams has full and implicit confidence in the personal integrity and business capacity of Deputy Director John F. Coogan Jr., Town Treasurer T. Russell Sergeant, and Tax Collector William C. Knapp. Finance Director Williams at all times assumes full responsibility for their decisions and the results of their decisions, and to them he extends a large share of the credit given to the Department of Revenue and Finance for the achievements developed through their joint efforts and cooperation.

Paid for by William H. Williams, Camp Major.

COMMISSIONER WILLIAM H. WILLIAMS

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

On the eve of election Commissioner Carragher is sure a platform—"We need a new auditor" and "We need a new Finance Director."

Commissioner Carragher stated "Finance Director Williams personally engaged State Auditor Walter R. Darby," let us check over the record:

Finance Director Williams has never engaged the State Auditor—the Board of Commissioners by resolutions engaged the state auditor on the recommendation of Finance Director Williams. All board members present unanimously voted to engage the state auditor in 1931-1932-1933.

On May 27, 1930, Commissioner Carragher voted "YES" to engage the state auditor.

And again—

On November 24, 1931, Commissioner Carragher voted "YES" to engage the state auditor.

And again—

On December 27, 1932, Commissioner Carragher voted "YES" to engage the state auditor.

A mass meeting was held at the headquarters of the "Figureli on Figurelli" for Commissioner Club on Monday evening. Nicholas J. Colannino introduced the speakers, among whom were Samuel Figurelli, candidate for commissioner, and David Bernheim, candidate for surrogate.

Mr. Figurelli stated that the credit of a municipality is judged by its assets and liabilities and not by front page false praise. "The sooner the truth is known the sooner we will rehabilitate ourselves," he said. "Capable men pledged to such action must be elected as commissioners."

"The taxpayers are entitled to the facts so that they may be intelligently guided. Only a person without vision or too lazy to act will say that conditions cannot be improved. Waste and extravagance must cease, rightful government must take its place."

Mr. Figurelli cited many instances where the auditor of municipal accounts had repeatedly warned the present board of commissioners not to do certain things but yet they paid no heed to same, even though some of the acts were illegal, according to the speaker.

Mr. Figurelli said that he was appealing directly to the people, with whom he sympathized, for support, as he is well aware that certain political interests are opposed to his election.

Mr. Figurelli gave a warning not to heed zero-hour attacks. He recalled that four years ago he was the victim of an attack made upon him on the afternoon prior to the election, which attack was in the form of a scurrilous and outrageous letter, not substantiated in fact, which was mailed to voters in certain sections of the town, giving him no opportunity to make a public reply. Mr. Figurelli warned that such tactics are violations of the criminal law and subject the offenders to serious punishment.

Candidate for Commissioner

Suggestions for Selecting Commissioners

If you were a stockholder in a big business and were selecting executives to conduct your affairs, how would you decide on them?

Use the same tactics when picking your Commissioners.

You would want to know their experience, ability and the success achieved in other enterprises.

You would want to know if they were still ambitious and energetic.

You would want to know a lot about the man's character, his habits, and the caliber of his associates.

You would want to know how he conducts his home life and the respect he has for his home and family.

You would want to know if he is a good citizen, and if looked upon by his associates as a leader.

Compare these inquisitive suggestions with Elmer S. Hyde and you will find he meets all the requirements demanded.

He is an efficient financial and business administrator, conducting his own business. Succeeded in coming through the recent depression while numerous other houses met with failure.

His character and integrity are impregnable.

He is devoted to his home and family, which has won him the respect of all his neighbors.

He has always been ready to support progressive movements as a citizen and is a leader.

Commissioner Patrick A. Waters attended a mass meeting at the Recreation House last night and also a card party at his headquarters, 111 Washington avenue. Both gatherings were well attended and received the commissioner with enthusiasm. His explanation of the savings in the public works department was of great interest to his audience.

The commissioner further explained in detail the functions of his department and of his efforts to keep expenses down. He cut his appropriation from a total of $75,980 to $32,200, netting a saving of $43,780, while in office for the past four years. His operation of the water department shows a profit that amounts to $142,000.

Waters said, "Within twenty-four hours after the inauguration of the CWA by President Roosevelt last November, I submitted the first project for approval to the governmental authorities and it was accepted. This project put 350 men to work without one cent of cost for either labor or material to the town of Belleville. In addition, the amount granted by the government brought $42,000 cash into the business houses of Belleville."

"The second project, immediately started by myself, gave immediate employment to an additional 550 men. Belleville received an outright grant of $110,000 in cash from the government. Belleville's only cost was $17,500 in accordance with the requirements of the governmental grant. Up to the present time, about $280,000 in cash in wages had been paid to needy workers. Not only was the money well spent in Belleville but those sewers will relieve the north section of a health menace that has prevailed for a number of years. This work could not be started and paid for by the town of Belleville itself, for many years because of the cost."

Waters stated, "My slogan is lower taxes and it means that. Four years ago I stated that I would help reduce taxes and my department record certainly shows that I have kept my promise to the voters of Belleville."

The creation of a competitive centralized purchasing department, D'Avella said, "will not only serve the interests of economy, but will enable the town to standardize its supplies and thus make sure that the town will get all it pays for." The currency would be formulated from persons or officials already in the employ of the town. D'Avella said, "The News has for the past several weeks been deluged with letters from local merchants who will be given preferences whenever and whenever possible."

Constant Supervision

To the matter of governing, D'Avella said, "I intend to exercise constant supervision, direction and control over all activities through personal inspection, periodic departmental reports, frequent conferences with department heads and issuance of financial reports."

D'Avella also advocated disbursement, save in extreme emergencies, public improvement programs that must be financed by bond issue when the burden of debt is large, when the tax deficiency is on the increase and when the bond market is unfavorable.

To help bolster Belleville's credit D'Avella said, "I would provide for a general tax levy to cover anticipated delinquency in special assessment collections to meet obligations that mature when special assessment improvement bonds are general town obligations and also provide for refunding arrangements well in advance of requirement when funds are not available to meet obligations. I would also take advantage of cash discounts by mailing checks promptly to all payees and encourage tax collecting to avoid interest on short-term borrowing. I would also endeavor to make Belleville 'live' within the cash income."

Regarding the schools, D'Avella declared:

Regards Schools

"Politics have no place in the management of public schools. There is an efficient way of managing schools and an inefficient way, but no Republican, Democratic or any other political way."

D'Avella has received the endorsement of many social and fraternal organizations as well as support of many outstanding citizens of the community. He has been a lifelong resident of Belleville, residing at 45 Fairway Avenue in Belwood Park. He is married. Besides being a lawyer he is an executive officer of a manufacturing concern bearing his name.

THE FORUM

The Belleville News is always glad to print letters of general interest in "The Forum." These must, however, be signed by citizens of general interest or officials already in the employ of the town. D'Avella said, "It is impossible to prevent individuals signing against candidates. That is the reason we have decided to print none starting this week."

The events divided we have decided to print none starting this week. The Belleville News is definitely committed to a sincere effort to have this election decided on its merits and in a manner that will not injure the town.

Manufacturers' Group Will Not Endorse Candidates In Commission ElectionAssociation Urges Large, Intelligent Vote; Will Guard Against Fraud At Polls By Check Of Voting Lists, Voting And Count

Editor News:

The Belleville Manufacturers' Association is not interested in the election of any particular candidate for the office of commissioner for this year in Belleville. It is, however, very much interested in seeing that an honest election is held that only those voters who are entitled to vote and that their vote is properly and honestly counted.

The Manufacturers' Association is also interested in doing everything that it can to stimulate and awaken interest in the citizens of Belleville in town affairs, so that not only a large vote, but an intelligent vote will be cast, and that they will take an active part in the coming election. No citizen who has neglected to keep himself informed as to town government affairs has any right to complain about what has been done unless he stated or registered objections at the time that legislation was being considered.

Pros Lose To Port
Jervis In Opener
Elks Win By One Run In Ninth Inning With Score Tied

The Belleville Pros opened their season last Sunday afternoon by losing a hard fought game to the Port Jervis Elks of New York.

In the Pros first inning at bat Clark grounded out then Joe Costa came through with a scorching single to center. Marty Mallack then struck out and Al Schwartz grounded out ending the inning. The Elks however started off their first inning a little more successfully with Chase getting a hit on an error, Drake struck out, McCarthy walked, Kuenzel then collected a bingle scoring Chase. Knight flied out and Standt grounded out ending their first inning.

From then on the game settled down to a pitchers' duel with neither side collecting any hits. But, in the fifth inning the Pros collected three runs to lead the Elks three to one.

In the Elks half of the sixth inning due to a tough break for the Pros, they tied the score. There was a man on third with one run in already, when the Pros catcher tried to pick the man off third, the ball hit him on the head and he came home with the tying run.

Once again the game settled down to a pitchers' duel until the Elks in their half of the ninth collected the winning run. Due to four errors by the Pros the game might have been a little different. Red Hart went the full nine innings for the Pros and also collected two hits.

Former Assemblyman Homer Zink, who was one of the principal speakers to pay tribute to Mr. Abramson, spoke highly of Mr. Abramson. He was honored for the fine work he had done for one of the most accomplished while president of the Elks' Home.

In order to bring industry to town, Belleville I have advocated for the described Mr. Abramson as "a man last several months the creation of a non-salaried board of public spirited citizens which would act as a Chamber of Commerce," Mr. Abramson said.

Working along modern business lines this board would carry out a program of clean publicity and salesmanship to "sell Belleville" to the white industries. Last week I pointed to Roseland to show how one large corporation meant a reduction of $3 on the annual tax rate.

"To further prove that my plan is not a pre-election prescription concocted only to garner votes I can refer to Belleville taxpayers to Union. Only three days ago I read in the Newark press that that municipality has formed a board which will attempt to bring industries to the town."

"Roseland has already gotten much good from new industry. Now Union is endeavoring to reap the same benefits. Belleville must not and cannot go to sleep at the switch. We must also go after big business if we expect to wipe out our $8 million debt and lower the taxes," Mr. Abramson.

Last Admonition of ARTHUR E. MAYER

Non-Partisan Candidate for Commissioner

Again, as so many times before, the kaleidoscopic panorama of pre-election events is thrust before your discerning eye. Astute showmanship, speakers expounding diametrically opposite theses, blaring loudspeakers, blazing headlines, full-page pictorial advertisements, biographies of records, and a dozen other demonstrations. Some superfluous, others necessary, some meritorious, and not too few ludicrous!

John Citizen, if government—local or otherwise—is reflective of the character of its people in general, then it is high time you reflect the metal you're made of. You've only succumbed temporarily to that human weakness of "laxity." Are you to be beguiled any longer? John Citizen, the challenge is yours! The initial responsibility rests heavily upon your shoulders. May 8th, at the ballot, is the time to assert yourselves.

Government

A paper read before the Cycloids Club at Newark recently. Published by permission of S. C. Summerfield of Belleville, a member, in the interests of better government.

The first social unit in man's existence was the family. There is wide difference of opinion as to the nature of its origin for there are many contradictions in the meager history we have of its formation. Did it begin with the patriarchal form wherein descent is traced to a common male ancestor and wherein all authority is vested in the eldest living male, or did the patriarchal family develop after wallowing about in a promiscuity of sexual relations? We know that in primitive man there have existed such customs as brothers marrying sisters, groups of men marrying or living with groups of women, the practice of polygamy—the condition of having more than one wife, and the practice of polyandry—the plurality of husbands. Under such conditions as these it can readily be understood that the tracing of kinship through male line would be difficult. It is a fact that many primitive races trace kinship through mothers only, very likely due to their doubts regarding paternity. It is interesting to note that polyandry has flourished only where there was an excess of women over men, and has always come to an end as soon as the balance between the sexes was restored. The existence of polygamy in a group of people has been limited invariably to a few of the very wealthy and powerful men.

There is a natural preference among higher types of animals and also among men for monogamous marriage and it seems most logical to believe that it forms the basis for the original family life among animals, the others discussed belonging to later periods of development.

We find at any rate that the patriarchal family system was in common usage by the Aryans who came to Europe from Asia at a very early period. The oldest living male of the family (whether he had one or many wives) was the unquestioned ruler. He was both sovereign and priest. His sons attained no independence from him during life. The sons could marry and have families but their families as well as themselves continued to live under the authority of the father. It can be seen that there would be a strong tendency towards expanding the family to a broader relationship. Hence, a "house" was established, still ruled by the oldest living male relative or one selected for unusual ability. Continued development of this direction led to larger units composed of a number of "houses." These were the tribes which roamed from place to place with the seasons, hunting for their necessities. These nomads did not permanently inhabit a particular section, and consequently held no ownership in land. Their leader was selected by the rulers of the individual houses, composing the tribe. Then finally, the nomadic habit of life gave way to a settled existence and they united to form a State. It is not to be supposed that the steps toward the formation of the State were taken suddenly in a clear cut fashion. Rather the State came into being through evolutionary processes extending over centuries.

The development of early states culminated in the Greek city states and in the Roman Republic. Statesmen and their problems with later governments have for centuries studied the early Greek and Roman systems of government. The city state of Athens was of democratic form in which the views of the citizenry were heard directly through the medium of public assemblies. Although the majority of the citizens was strong in the establishing of public policies their voice was really that of a minority for while the population of Athens at its zenith was about 500,000 people the voting citizens totalled only 90,000. Of the rest, 150,000 were slaves and 45,000 were settlers or people unqualified to vote. So that the much talked of equality in the Greek democracies was indeed very limited. It raises the question as to where democracy ends and aristocracy begins.

After the passing of the Roman system, sections of Europe were engulfed at varying degrees in the social system of feudalism. Its essential feature rested in the common allegiance of the individuals in a group to their leader. He became the lord and his followers or companions were his vassals. They were ever at his command, for defense or conquest. To his followers he gave land at first as fiefdom grants which were similar in title to fee simple but later they received feudal grants which were made on condition of future service.

Common to the feudal system was the paying ransom by the vassals whenever necessary to restore the lord from captivity. And when the lord's eldest daughter married the vassals presented a gift of dowry money. Orphan children left by vassals became wards of the lord who could in the case of female wards promise them in marriage at the age of 14. If she refused his selection of a husband the lord had the right to her services and property until she was 21. He could then dispose of her property as he saw fit and deny her the right to marry. By the partitioning out of property to followers who in turn granted it to those under them many social levels developed. Each man swore allegiance to the one above him and this one in turn to his superior and thus finally the king was reached who was himself a powerful feudal lord. The decay of feudalism began in the 17th century and has continued to the present time. But many of its laws and customs are seen in common law even today.

We could discuss these early Greek, Roman and feudal governments very profitably for a long time but there are other ideas we will wish to examine this evening.

According to Aristotle (whose view is interesting and worthy of consideration even today) there are essentially three forms of government that are sound and reasonable. They are monarchy (the rule of one), aristocracy (the rule of a few), and democracy (the rule of many). There can, of course, be many varieties and different shades of each, the extremes merging into the form next adjoining. He continues that his observations had led him to the conclusion that there was an almost irresistible tendency for each to degenerate into another form. Monarchy, he said, eventually becomes tyranny, aristocracy degenerates into oligarchy, and democracy into anarchy (or mob rule). The completion of these cycles brings a government back to its starting point—monarchy. At the beginning the monarch might indeed be a strong and just man but his power in time would be passed on to his children so that in the course of one or many generations rulership would rest finally in one whose moral weaknesses or lack of ability would result in tyranny. After the revolution, which must surely follow an oppressive tyranny, the new leaders would build an aristocracy which though it might be public spirited in the early period of its existence would be led by selfishness and avarice to oligarchy. And now, instead of the tyranny of a single monarch the people would be enslaved by a class whose ambition was to benefit primarily their own interests. The inevitable revolution comes and upon the wreck is built democracy. But democracy too acquires the infirmities of old age and through losing respect for law finally breaks down and is strangled in the terrifying grip of anarchy, "and now," says Woodrow Wilson, "but a Caesar can bring it back to reason and order." And so the cycle ends, ready to start again with monarchy enthroned. The modern trend in governments seems to introduce many variations in the cycle as suggested by Aristotle, but we can see in the constant changes, evidence of a moving cycle. We in our time have seen governments rise and fall. So that the conclusion is reached that there is a limit to the duration of life in government just as the span of a human life is limited. And we would be wise to acknowledge this fact and direct our efforts towards maintaining it in a healthy condition during life and try to continue its life to a reasonable length rather than attempt to nurse it through to an eternal existence.

Governments have reached their present forms through the slow process of changing customs. Where customs have become rigid as a result of a superstition, worship of ancestors, and a fear of ancestral wrath the old established habits destroyed, society has failed to progress. This attitude has blocked progress, and because of it, most peoples of the world have not moved materially beyond the point where their customs originally crystallized. But the strength of habit or custom has served as a brake upon the actions of

1. The keeping of order and providing for the protection of persons and property from violence and robbery.

2. The fixing of the legal relations between man and wife and between parents and children.

3. The regulation of the holding, transmission and interchange of property, and the determination of its liabilities for debt or for crime.

4. The determination of contract rights between individuals.

5. The definition and punishment of crime.

6. The administration of justice in civil causes.

7. The determination of the political duties, privileges, and relations of citizens.

In addition to these functions are others which most states have attempted to a greater or lesser degree. They are the source of much controversy mainly as to the extent to which the government should go in performing them. Among them are:

1. The regulation of trade and industry. Under this head I would include the coining of money and the establishment of standard weights and measures, laws against forestalling and engrossing, the licensing of trades, etc., as well as the great matters of tariffs, navigation laws, and the like.

2. The regulation of labor.

3. The maintenance of thoroughfares — including state management of railways and that great group of undertakings which we embrace with in the comprehensive term "Internal Improvements."

4. The maintenance of postal and telegraph systems, which is very similar in principal to 3.

5. The manufacture and distribution of gas, the maintenance of water-works, etc.

6. Sanitation, including the regulation of trades for sanitary purposes.

those who bent on reform would in the laboratories of experiment concoct potions which are deadly to the true welfare of the state. Woe to those innovators in government who fail to consult the people before destroying the institutions designed and built by the sum-total of human wisdom and experience merely to replace them with others more pleasing to their own whims and fancies.

I do not intend to imply that ideas and ideals should be suppressed. By all means any plan which appears to have the merit of offering advantages to society should be presented to the people for analysis and study. But its rejection or adoption must be left to the decision of the people if the risk of serious consequences is to be avoided.

And so the Utopias which are offered from time to time have their place in giving objective to social changes. In general, it must be said of them that they portray an impossible state peopled with perfect human beings. Some may be impracticable at the time presented but can be adopted later when the people have developed sufficiently in morals and intelligence.

Of particular interest is Rousseau's "Social Contract" because of the deep political effect it had not only in France but in other countries as well. Rousseau wrote his "Social Contract" in 1762 and it had a profound effect in shaping the views of the French people prior to their revolution which came about thirty years later. Its particular appeal was in the possibility of its universal application. He did not invent a far off country in which to try his plan but declared it fitted the world as it existed. Consequently, the man who read it applied it to the state that was oppressing him. The central idea of the "Social Contract" is the common agreement of the people to form a state and their absolute authority in it. Rousseau contends that man was originally born free and was governed only by natural laws. He argues that the proper foundation for a state requires it to be a social compact of the individuals comprising it who, on a basis of equality, yield themselves to the common will. In it the people retain absolute authority which cannot be delegated to representatives. The form of the government must be determined by the vote of the people who can change it at any time they desire. These views presented at a time of great stress in France brought the people to the idea that the rulership enjoyed by the king rightfully belonged to themselves and that it was their right to seize control. But his theory of government errs in the fundamental view that the original society was entered into by the people as a contractual agreement. If we refer to the patriarchal family we find that it was brought into being without any thought of contract. The youth less complete physically and mentally submitted to his father's will and was held in that relationship by early customs. The movement from this point continued as a rule by force receiving its power from the customs which became established. The father was bound by custom to rule as the son was bound to obey. And so governments today rule by force derived from the customs of the people—or the will of the majority. Even a monarch, to sustain himself, must bow to the customs of his subjects.

There are certain functions of government which are necessary to the maintenance of the state. Woodrow Wilson has listed them as follows:

1. The keeping of order and providing for the protection of persons and property from violence and robbery.
2. The fixing of the legal relations between man and wife and between parents and children.
3. The regulation of the holding, transmission and interchange of property, and the determination of its liabilities for debt or for crime.
4. The determination of contract rights between individuals.
5. The definition and punishment of crime.
6. The administration of justice in civil causes.
7. The determination of the political duties, privileges, and relations of citizens.

8. Dealings of the state with foreign powers; the preservation of the state from external danger; or encroachment and the advancement of its international interests.

In addition to these functions are others which most states have attempted to a greater or lesser degree. They are the source of much controversy mainly as to the extent to which the government should go in performing them. Among them are:

1. The regulation of trade and industry. Under this head I would include the coining of money and the establishment of standard weights and measures, laws against forestalling and engrossing, the licensing of trades, etc., as well as the great matters of tariffs, navigation laws, and the like.

4. The maintenance of postal and telegraph systems, which is very similar in principal to 3.

5. The manufacture and distribution of gas, the maintenance of water-works, etc.

AMERICA MARCHES AHEAD

There is ample evidence now that America as a whole is coming back and coming back fast. Out of the mystic maze of figures and more figures comes definite concrete proof that the clouds are lifting and the sun is beginning to look through the disheartening haze that for so long has hung low over our homes and our all.

Business Week in the April 21 issue shows the following gains over the same period last year: Construction, plus 136 per cent; Steel, plus 132 per cent; Automobile Products, plus 100 per cent; Bituminous Coal, plus 39 per cent; Anthracite, plus 54 per cent; Electric Power, plus 14 per cent; Carloadings, plus 21 per cent; 748 items (wholesale prices), plus 21 per cent; Department Store Sales, plus 27 per cent; Stocks (90 key issues), plus 67 per cent; Bonds (40 key issues), plus 71 per cent.

Combined with these pleasantly startling figures is the statement that commercial failures are lower than in any years except 1918 and 1920. Manufacturing pay rolls are up 56 per cent; employment, plus 30 per cent.

Surely we are "on our way"—We can't sell America short.

OUTMODED

It doesn't seem such a long time ago that the steamship Leviathan was the most talked about of ships. She was the "queen of the Atlantic" and the biggest ship afloat. With elevators, swimming pool, etc., she seemed fixious, to say the least.

But her owners say she is now outmoded. Idle at Hoboken, they wish to turn her back to the Shipping Board and in her place build a new liner—one with outside staterooms with bath for every first class passenger. The new ship would be faster and better every way than the old Leviathan. And the Leviathan was built only in 1904. Not a long time—but it is true, she is outmoded.

A CHEAP TRIP

For years American tourist parties have visited Europe, and Europeans must have thought all Americans wealthy. But the rates of exchange, favorable to us for so many years, had much to do with the great traveling desires of Americans, and now that the rates have turned in favor of the Europeans they are taking advantage, and a large influx of tourists will probably reach this country this year. The first large party arrived in New York last week, when 122 Europeans came in on a Dutch vessel. The trip, including all expenses of a four days' stay in New York and sight seeing excursions around the city, cost but $144 each. At the old rate of exchange the cost would have been only $85.

LONG LIFE

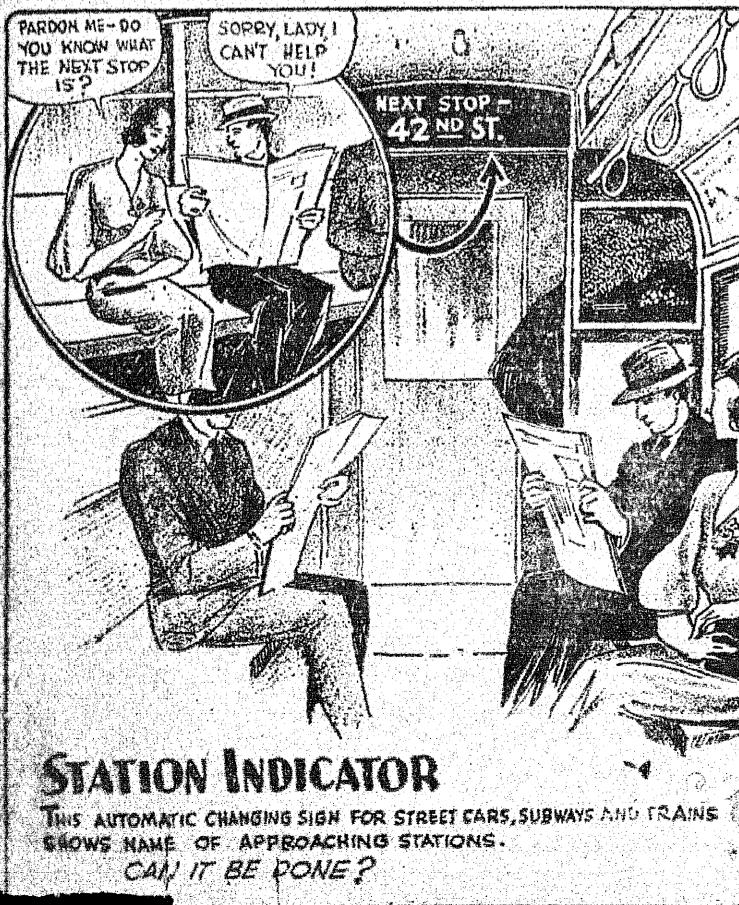

Professor E. H. Baker of the University of Chicago declares that your health depends on your chest measurement. The professor declares that it would be a relatively simple matter to extend the life span to 200 years by proper breathing. He expects to live nearly that long.

Proper breathing must be something provided for by nature. If man has strayed away from natural methods he may be taught to return to them.

But animals must breathe naturally. Civilization can hardly have forced a change in their methods. It is curious that man, with all his faulty lungs, is longer lived than all but a few sluggish animals.

The span of an elephant's life is no more than 50 years, despite the legend that elephants live to fanciful ages.

MEETING MR. CHAPMAN

He was wooing the mice when I walked in or so it seemed to me. Anyway, I found John Chapman, New York Daily News columnist, sitting at a bare-top desk in a spacious room on the seventh floor of the News Building, looking for all the world like a college boy fresh from the university.

He's tall 'n' slim 'n' fair, this fellow Chapman; and he looks English and twenty-five, though he may be German and thirty-one for all I know. Anyway, I felt very uncomfortable in his presence. I always feel uncomfortable before men who impress me favorably, especially young men. You see, I expected to be interviewed by a man of about forty-five, with slightly bald head, wearing a dark suit, horn-rimmed glasses and maybe shifting a big black cigar from one corner of his mouth to another. But Chapman is young, with a nice head of hair — sandy colored — the horn-rimmed glasses were missing, and he smoked cigarettes — not big black cigars.

If Chapman had impressed me less favorably, I might have been able to answer his questions more intelligibly, but as it was, I completely forgot my carefully rehearsed speech. I stuttered and stammered over my words, and I felt very much like a long eaged hick suddenly let loose in Times Square. Once I was about to say "Listen, Mr. Chapman, you're a prince of a guy to take an interest in the work I'm doing for the subsoils but I've never been interviewed by an important columnist like you, so let me out of here, 'cause my inferiority complex is croppin' the surface, and I feel very uncomfortable." But instead of saying all this, I dove into my bag for a cigarette, only to have Mr. Chapman come to the rescue with a cigarette from his own case.

Finally the interview was over. Mr. Chapman walked with me to the door. But I was so confused that, instead of taking an elevator going down, I stepped into one that shot me up to 1-don't-know-what floor.

Later when I hailed a cab to take me to the ferry, I said to myself: "The next time a columnist wants to interview me he'll have to do it by mail, or he'll have to wait until I learn how to act sophisticated like all those Broadway stars."

But as I was sayin', he was wooing the mice when I walked in. And he looks for all the world like a college boy fresh from the university.

Fare Decrease Denied To Erie Commuters

I. C. C. Decides Rates Are Reasonable; Dismisses Complaint

Rates of fare charged commuters to New York by the Erie Railroad were declared fair and reasonable by the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington Tuesday, and the complaint brought against the railroad by the Metropolitan League of Erie Commuters, to which many commuters in Belleville and Nutley belong, was dismissed. The action was brought before the I. C. C. April 4.

The commuters charged that rates were higher than on other lines serving the metropolis. The Erie has increased its rates since 1929, but this was held reasonable by the commission.

7. Education.
8. Care of the poor and incapable.
9. Care and cultivation of forests and like matters, such as the stocking of rivers with fish, etc.
10. Sumptuary laws, such as "prohibition" laws, for example.
11. Postal savings systems.

The ultimate in regulation and control in all of these matters is to be found in the doctrine of the Socialists. We may sympathize with the enthusiasm of these poor deluded soap box agitators but the weakness of their plan to improve the condition of society by destroying competition is so ridiculous as, in the words of Wilson, "to provoke the laughter of children."

In conclusion, I wish to express the view that we in this country must guard most carefully against governmental oppression which finds its roots in fanatical movements toward reform. To aid in our stand, let us protect the constituent states against an invasion of their rights by the federal government. In state rights we have a valuable weapon against the crushing hand of a central bureaucracy. There may be many functions under state control which could better reside with the federal government such as education and marriage and divorce laws. But each surrender of local rule tends to withdraw control further from the people. To counteract this tendency let us seek a course of action that will give the people a more direct and determining voice in the affairs of state.

The radio, a wonderful boon to mankind, has been seized upon by our congressmen and magistrates alike to tell us what they have done or are going to do. There is a great need for an equally effective contraption by which the people can tell those governmental employees what they want done. It is true the ballot box is for this purpose but its use is largely limited to the mere selection of individuals to perform the governmental tasks. An opportunity should be afforded the electorate to speak decisively on more of the important questions of common interest rather than to leave decisions to the pressure of lobbying minorities. There was a time when means of communication were so slow as to make it impossible for government to consult the people on the moves that were made. But the telephone, telegraph, radio and airplane make it possible for the whole country to express its desires on a proposition in a few hours.

SCOUT NEWS

On Tuesday evening at Christ Church parish house, the newly formed Adults' Auxiliary of Troop 88, held its second meeting. Raymond Patrick was named chairman; Mrs. William Terry, vice chairman; and Miss Bertha R. Mumford, secretary-treasurer.

It was decided to hold the next meeting on Tuesday evening, June 5, at which time there will be an exhibition of Scout work, and an inter-patrol contest, by the troop. Refreshments will be served. All parents and relatives of Troop 88 members, or those interested in Boy Scouting activities are urged to attend this meeting, to become members of the Auxiliary, and to help boost this troop, and put Scouting in Belleville on the high plane it deserves.

The new Sea Scout Ship 588 will be presented with its charter by D. W. Moyer, Chief Scout Executive of the Robert Treat Council, and Commodore R. L. Hatfield Jr., at its meeting this evening in the "ship's cabin" at 10 Oak street. A very successful card party was held by the Ship on Friday evening, at the Christ Episcopal parish house.

There were seven tables in play, three of pinochle and four of bridge. Awards went to Mrs. M. McAvoy, Mrs. Olaf Foss Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tilly, Mrs. R. H. Holst, Mrs. F. R. Smith, Mrs. H. W. Mumford, Mrs. Matthew Geddes, Mrs. H. Bouillette, Mrs. L. Sweet, G. H. Weston, Raymond H. Patrick, M. De Wilde, William Terry, J. J. Oryskik, Miss Bertha R. Mumford, Miss Mae Livingston, and Miss E. Halek.

The committee extends thanks to the following named people for their co-operation: F. J. Carragher, E. J. Abromson, E. S. Hyde, N. J. Burde, P. A. Waters, S. Figurelli, J. E. Donnelly, A. Mayer, Mrs. H. Anderson, Mrs. M. McAvoy, the Jessie E. Armstrong Branch of the International Sunshine Society, and to all others who helped to make the First Sea Scout Ship 588 card party such a success.

The committee comprised of Joseph W. Barnes, chairman; Robert A. Van Voorhis, Lieutenant-commander U. S. Naval Reserve; Alvin E. Brant, Raymond Patrick and Paul G. P. Schatz, skipper of the Ship.

The Silver Fox patrol of Scout Troop 88 held the first of their fortnightly supper hikes on Wednesday to Davey's Woods. Senior patrol leader Harvey W. Mumford was in charge. Patrol business was discussed. These supper hikes are to replace the indoor patrol meetings during the summer season.

Matthew Ryan, Local Tenor, Gives Recital

Matthew Ryan, tenor, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew J. Ryan of 351 Jerusalem street, presented his first concert last night at the high school. Mr. Ryan has appeared in choral and operatic work and has sung over the radio. The Belleville tenor was accompanied by Ethel O'Rourke.

He was assisted by the Lanier Trio composed of Baroness Nina Martin, harpist; Gerald Quiguan, flutist, and Amelio Calvani, cellist. The program consisted of old Italian airs, old English classics and American and Irish folk songs. It included the aria from Semole, "Where E'er You Walk;" the arietta, "Caro Mio Ben," by Gioachini; "Ombra Mai Fu," from Xerxes, by Handel; and the English classics, "Passing By," and "My Lovely Celia," by Munro.

Brightons Dropped

Third Straight Game

Expect To Get In Win Column Against Senators

Brightons dropped their third straight game 7 to 4 to the Newark Orioles in a bitterly fought game. Not until the last out were the visitors conceded the victory Sunday. Herb Foster was in good form, but for one frame, when the Orioles jumped on him for six, failed in timely hitting mixed with a couple of errors. Foster gave fourteen hits, while his opponent, Senno, gave eleven down in the pinches and sent twelve of the bunters wild, six back to the bench via the strike out route.

The locals tried hard to bag their first win, playing heads-up baseball throughout practically the entire game and made several difficult plays to eat down the enemy on the baselines. Matthews distinguished himself in this respect.

Bonny, Peacock and Matthews grabbed two hits apiece. Smith got a double for the longest drive of the game. The locals clicked off a neat double play, Matthews to Storken to Bonny to cut down an uprising.

Orcianni, Acciardo and Lanza were thorns in Foster's side, driving out timely swats for the winners.

Next Sunday at 3:15 P. M. the Brightons will try to annex their first win when they face the Newark Senators for the fourth consecutive year.

Art Patrick Kayes De Cale In Second

Sensational Bantamweight Scores Ninth Knockout Of Season

Art Patrick, sensational Newark bantamweight, scored his ninth win by the knockout route this season when he polished off Jackie DeCale of Paterson in the first fifteen seconds of the second round of a bout at the Arlington A. C. arena last Wednesday.

Art ascribes his victory to his use of the "DeCale Shift," by which he avoided a few fast ones. DeCale went his way to plant the winning blow.

Patrick was floored by a terrific left hook in the first minute of the first round. He remained down for a count of nine, and then annoyed his opponent for the rest of the round with a straight jab to the face.

Having felt out his man, Art finished him off in short order with a right and left hook to the jaw in the first few seconds of the second round.

Georgetti Races Again At Local Saucer

Italy's Motor-paced Champ Demonstrated Ability Last Week

Francesco Georgetti, motor-paced champion of Italy, who drew the largest crowd of the season to the Nutley Velodrome last Sunday afternoon and who performed in an auspicious manner by winning his first race will be the outstanding star riding at the Nutley saucer again this Sunday. Georgetti will ride in a 25-mile race against Tino Roboli, the popular Italian-American youngster from Newark. Gerard Debarts, the Belgian bear-ent who is living in Paterson; Victor Hopkins, the Iowa farmer boy who now makes his home in Nutley and Paul Crowley of Brooklyn.

Georgetti demonstrated, last Sunday that he will no doubt be the outstanding contender for the motor-paced championship of America this season and that Alfred Letourneau, the little French star and holder of the title for the last two years will have to look to his laurels.

Roboli and Hopkins are confident they will beat Georgetti this season. Roboli says he has started too late in the last race but this Sunday he will get all the way up to succeed in blowing Georgetti up. Roboli made a great showing last week and is confident he can win this Sunday. Hopkins says it was very windy on the track and he had too small a gear, this week he will be prepared for the Italian star.

Woods, Gelshen To Be Battery In Inaugural On Sunday, May 13

Johnny Lawlor's Belleville team in the Essex County Baseball League will officially open its season Sunday afternoon, May 13, travelling to Glen Ridge, to help that club inaugurate its campaign. Belleville fans should be particularly anxious to witness resumption of this rivalry which resulted in so many close battles last season, notably that 13thinning affair.

The first home game to be played at the Gleman Field diamond is slated for the following Saturday, May 19.

Manager Lawlor has announced a tentative starting lineup for the opening game as follows: Johnny Woods or Carl Gardiner, pitcher; Gene Gelshen, catcher; "Butch" Kastner, first base; Nick Fazzini, second base; Charlie Christell, third base; Harry Horlick, shortstop; Tommy Dunn, left field; Jim Mallack, center field; and Jim Sullivan, right field.

Fans should be particularly pleased with the acquisition of Fazzini, the game-winning slugging slugger from Caldwell.

Several college players have also signed up and will report at the conclusion of their terms.

Nutley, Bloomfield, Caldwell, Vernon, Orange and Montclair are in the lead in addition to Belleville and Glen Ridge.

Many Persons AtDonnelly Party*Playing Capacity Taxed At*St. Peter's Auditorium

One of the largest gatherings held recently at St. Peter's School auditorium was the John E. Donnelly card party held on Saturday evening, April 28. The playing capacity of the large auditorium was overtaxed. More than 400 people played while approximately 200 more attended or paid their respects during the evening. The crowd was a very enthusiastic one.

Mr. Donnelly briefly outlined his program in a ten minute talk and made a very noticeable impression on the more than 500 in the hall at the time. Mr. Donnelly stressed the necessity for proper distribution of town bonds, economy and consolidations with preservation of adequate schools, police fire and health departments. Mr. Donnelly stated that harmony was a missing element in the town government for some time and that its absence was detrimental to the town at large.
