Spring Is Here! Brush Fires Rage Firemen Kept Busy By Blazes in Outlying Sections

Firemen were kept busy Tuesday by a true sign that Spring is here when a number of brush fires broke out in town.

The first fire started in Bloomfield avenue, Nutley, and was beyond the control of the single Nutley fireman who answered an alarm. The Belleville department spent two hours in quelling the blaze after it spread over the town line. The fire menaced large quantities of hay belonging to August Plenge, but firemen succeeded in saving the feed.

Returning to the headquarters, the firemen were just sitting down to a delayed dinner when they were called out again to quell a blaze in the Belwood Park section. They had barely returned to the engine houses when they were again summoned to another fire in the same neighborhood.

Other members of Belleville officialdom will be members of the bridal party. The groom hasn't been selected yet but committee members have pointed out the groom never counts anyway.

Bell Close will do a Greta Garbo—from the feet up. James Metz will double for Governor Hoffman, while other impersonations will include President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

New Bookkeeping Attracts Interest Distant Cities Write For Information on Tax Record System

Wide interest has been aroused by Belleville's new system of municipal bookkeeping, designed to clarify tax and assessment records, officials of the department of revenue and finance announced this week.

Letters seeking information on the new record system, recently installed, have been received from cities as far away as Nevada, Kentucky and Florida. Inquiries followed an article on the system published in a recent issue of a magazine issued by the Municipal Finance Officers' Association.

The new system, for which a modern bookkeeping machine was purchased last year, keeps a record of all taxes, liens, assessments and other charges against a given parcel of property on a single sheet.

In operation, sheets are filed by street and number and eliminate the need for costly tax searches. Attorneys seeking tax searches are enabled to receive reports in a few minutes, as the town employee seeking the information can find it at once without recourse to numerous books and files.

The town was forced to appropriate $2,150 last week to cover losses suffered by a building and loan association through a faulty tax search by a former town employee. The new system is designed to make such costly errors impossible.

Wreckers Remove Two Houses Here Residences Stood in Washington Avenue Near Town Hall

Nathan M. Ohrbach, president of Ohrbach's Affiliated Stores, has announced the leasing for twenty-one years of the building at 147-149 Market street, Newark, adjoining the present Ohrbach store, formerly occupied by Bamberger's.

The expansion will double the present Ohrbach store front and, according to J. M. Kane, general manager of the store, will make Ohrbach's the largest women's and children's wearing apparel store in New Jersey and create new employment for several hundred persons.

The premises leased from the estate of Robert F. Ballantine extend from Market and Halsey streets to Library court through to Bank street. Harry Thoens and Co., Inc. was the broker. Attorneys for the lessor were Pitney, Hardin & Skinner.

The present move by Ohrbach's is the fourth substantial expansion since the Newark store was opened in 1930. At that time Ohrbach's leased a part of the old Bamberger building. In 1932, and again in 1934, additional floors were opened up and now Ohrbach's will occupy the entire former Bamberger store. However, while the building formerly served as a complete department store, it is the intention of Ohrbach's to use it entirely as a specialty store.

Ohrbach's store in New York in Union Square also has had a rapid growth since it was founded by Mr. Ohrbach in 1923. At that time Ohrbach's occupied 20,000-square feet of space. Recently, Ohrbach's in New York made the last of a series of expansions increasing the store to twelve times its original size in a period of fourteen years.

The new Ohrbach building is seven stories high with a 52-foot frontage in Market street and 192 foot depth. The first floor and basement are now occupied by Woolworth's. The present Ohrbach store is slightly larger than the new addition.

Extensive alterations are planned for the enlarged Newark store. In addition to many interior changes in fixtures and decoration, new and additional elevators and escalators will be installed and a new store front erected.

Start Development Of Lake Property "All-Year-Round" Houses To Be Built Twenty Miles from Newark

Development of Intervale Lake as a residential community in Parsippany, Troy Hills Township was started this week, following formation of the Intervale Lake Corporation with offices at 25 Halsted street, East Orange. Officers of the corporation are Charles M. Weber, president, and J. I. Hetzner, secretary and treasurer.

The eighty-three acre tract, formerly the property of the Ball estate, contains a beautiful lake in its center. The site is less than twenty miles from Newark and less than a mile from both the Mountain Lakes and Boonton stations of the D. L. & W. Railroad. There is a hard road frontage on Intervale road, between Parsippany boulevard and Bloomfield avenue, directly opposite the Jersey City reservoir.

The corporation has started erection of four, five and six room "all-year-round" houses with oil burners,

ALASKA is a country that has been under three flags. First owned by Great Britain, it was ceded to Russia in 1825, and that country sold it to the United States for $7,200,000 in gold in 1867. "Seward's folly," the deal was called at the time. Although seventy years have passed since then, visible traces of the influence of Old Russia are still to be seen in Alaska. The Russian church in Sitka, pictured above, of interest to the thousands of tourists who visit Alaska annually at the old block house, also at Sitka, is another favorite spot with visitors.

THE BRANDED PRODUCT IS ALWAYS MORE DEPENDABLE

As early as the sixteenth century, Andrea Ferrara, Italian sword maker of great renown, distinguished his blades from all others by signing his name to them. His product was superlative, and being recognizable by its trademark, was eagerly sought by all men.

The custom of identifying worthy articles by a distinguishing mark grew rapidly as soon as the benefits were understood. In the complexity of the present day with its numberless sources of supply the trademark has become an essential institution in commerce—a protective device for the buyer and the honest manufacturer alike.

In the footwear market famous footwear brands abound, many of them known and respected for generations, others of more recent origin, but equally dependable. Futile attempts to create good reputations for unworthy merchandise have demonstrated the acumen of accepting branded products of reputation as more dependable and stable.

No greater guarantee of stability in business exists than that given by the product which bears a recognized, respected trademark. It is always dependable.

TOO BAD

For Ray Woods, who jumped 186 feet from the San Francisco bridge and now faces living the rest of his days in a wheel chair, there can only be sympathy. He made the attempt only for the sake of publicity and the dubious honor of being the first man to so risk his neck. Yet if he succeeded, what? People would say he was brave or foolhardy and perhaps even pay money just to look at him. But such silly stunts are not appreciated by the general public and there might be fewer of them if the stunters only knew that the general reaction to them is, "So what?"

DESTRUCTIVE

It is little wonder that a New York editor was astounded when someone told him that telephone directories last but four days at some telephone pay stations. Of course, he did not believe it. But his shock was the greater when inquiry was made of the New York Telephone Co. The company said that at some of the busiest places, like in Times square and at the Grand Central Station, telephone directories have to be replaced every 48 hours. Of course, the answer is that there are quite a few people who have no regard for property. They are wasteful and destructive. In this case, they cost the telephone companies a pretty sum.

MILK BARS

Plenty of good American money has been lost seeking to popularize soda, sundaes and ice cream soda in England. The idea never caught on. It is possible to get these American concoctions in London, but they have made no hit with the British public, which does not like cold drinks.

Recently the "milk bar" was introduced to London and its success has been amazing. Milk bars are now as common in London and other British cities as hot dog stands here. The bar's chief stock in drinks is plain milk, but gradually the idea of mixing fruit juices with the milk, as in our milk shake, is becoming very popular.

These milk bars are becoming a very serious rival of the liquor bars. London has never been a great consumer of milk. It is rare that a customer is noticed ordering milk in a luncheon or restaurant in London, for tea is the universal drink, with beer and ale second.

The new fad has given the dairy business a huge boost.

GOOD COUNSEL

The government has never been niggardly in awarding pensions to the widows of warriors who fought for the United States. But Commander Robart of the American Veterans' Association gives good advice in suggesting Congress set a limit on the date of marriage in setting up pensions for widows and dependents of the World War. What an amazing revelation Robart made, that in 1906 the government was still paying a pension to a widow of a soldier of the War for Independence. Why, that was 125 years after Yorktown. Even now a pension is being given to a widow of the War of 1812, 123 years after the British burned Washington. It is a known fact that very young women have married very old veterans just for pension purposes. So, if a World War veteran who was 21 in 1918, married a 20-year-old girl in 1937, when he was 90, the government would, if she lived to be 90, have to support her until 2057. Anyone who thinks that is just and decent must also think that Uncle Sam is Uncle Sap.

NOVEL WITHOUT "E"

The story that a man has written a 50,110 word novel without the use of the letter "e" shows that about anything can be done with time and persistence. Of course we do not know if the novel is worth reading or if such a stunt is worth having been attempted. But it shows one thing. That a man 66 years old has exhibited a tenacity of purposes which might well be used in other occupations with more chance of immediate gain.

HAPPY HOME OWNERS

In connection with the lively activity in the building field, the president of the United States Building & Loan League reveals that at least 60,000 homes in the nation were cleared of mortgages last year. These mortgages were held by savings and loan associations, and it is believed that when complete figures are available they will show 70,000 homes with mortgages paid in full in 1936. The average person buying a home looks forward to paying on a mortgage for quite a few years. But time passes quickly. The family with a paid-up home should be a happy one.

SCIENTIFIC TRAP

Science is developing aids in the fight against crime which ought to show results. Although criminals have a habit of finding ways of overcoming the newest law enforcement and crime detection devices, new inventions are gradually forging ahead to put an end to certain types of crime. The latest is a barrier of "black light," an invisible beam which can be spread over a large area by means of hidden mirrors and can set off alarms without intruders being aware of it. The ray automatically telephones to police. Burglars will find that it is an effective trap.

OUR FUTURE

We point to our mighty cities, our grand inventions, our magnificent mass education. We dream our day and generation will go down in history as the greatest of all time. But future historians will weigh not only our greatness and grandeur. They will consider things like 82,000 hostages slain in nine months fighting in Spain, the millions starved and slaughtered in Russia, the persecutions in Germany. What posterity will think of us is thus open to question. It is safe to say we shall not be rated as highly as we think we will be—unless we grow less savage and more civilized.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Prepared for The Belleville News by Russell VanNest
Black, Director-Consultant New Jersey
State Planning Board

The Coming Building Boom—Are We Prepared?

Building, both residential and non-residential, is proceeding again at a rapid rate in New Jersey and a building boom may be expected. The extent of recovery in building activity is indicated by marked advances in the average daily volume of building contracts. In the New York and northern New Jersey area, total contracts in January, 1937, were more than 30 per cent higher than in January, 1936. Contracts for residential work were more than two and one-half times as large as the corresponding month last year.

Among non-residential types of construction, the volume of contracts for factories was over three times that of January, 1936, and commercial building showed a gain of 55 per cent.

The question arises: Is New Jersey prepared for a building boom? During the depression years it has become obvious to many municipalities trying to collect taxes that if unregulated growth and its attendant maladjustments are to be avoided, certain governmental controls must be adopted and enforced. These controls protect property values and community development both for the benefit of the individuals concerned and the municipality as a whole.

First among these measures are adequate building codes, effective zoning ordinances, and comprehensive plans for future municipal, county, and state development. While all of these controls are available to the people of New Jersey, they have not been used as widely nor as effectively as they should be.

A survey made by the State Planning Board in 1936 showed that 180 of New Jersey's 564 municipalities had building codes. But a study of these codes showed that over half of them were more than ten years and a tenth of them were over twenty years old. In very few cases had efforts been made to amend or change the codes to keep them effective.

Another survey of zoning ordinances showed that 180 municipalities in New Jersey were zoned. These ordinances covered 68.6 per cent of the population. These facts may not be read as fully satisfactory progress, however. Much of the zoning was done before the 1928 Enabling Act and many ordinances have been so changed as to be cumbersome and in many cases largely outmoded and of little real value. Some ordinances are deficient in administrative machinery and most of them provide excessive areas for business and industrial uses. Zoning properly comes after, or is a part of, comprehensive planning.

Although a survey, by the Planning Board in 1936 showed that there were forty official planning boards and seven unofficial planning agencies, only three municipalities in New Jersey were found to have established an official city map. A fourth has an official map partially prepared. Only eight municipalities had established a master plan, while nine reported master plans in process. Few municipalities are exercising their full authority in the guidance and regulation of new land subdivision activities.

These facts, among others, reveal a woeful lack of preparation. If, however, property values are to be protected for the prospective investor who is becoming constantly more aware of the need for planning and zoning; if servicing new subdivisions is not to be excessively costly; if municipal tax revenues are not to be impaired through blighted or declining districts, municipalities must avail themselves more fully of the controls which are possible in this state.

These measures are described fully, and the laws have been reprinted in a digest recently issued by the New Jersey State Planning Board, "Municipal and County Planning Legislation and Procedures in New Jersey." This manual should prove of much value to any municipality wishing to prepare itself for the coming building boom and to safeguard its future through much needed protective measures.

N.J.C. Alumnae to Entertain High School Students

Essex County High School girls will be guests of the Essex County Alumnae Club of New Jersey College for Women Thursday, April 15, at a program designed to show the relation which exists between academic and extra-curricular interests on college campuses today. The program will be presented at the East Orange Woman's Club at 8 o'clock and all high school students are invited. The meeting is a regular monthly session of the Essex County Alumnae Club.

According to Mrs. Vernon L. Atkinson of West Caldwell, program chairman, the talks given will help high school girls to understand how student life today supplements classroom work and contributes educationally to each undergraduate.

How to Criticize a Book

"The purpose of comedy is to correct the vices of man."

—MOLIÈRE.

Every palpitating aspirant seeking to reign upon the Zolus throne, and with the regal sceptre separate the good from the bad in the realm of Letters, must needs have five things: a ream of paper, an inkpot, a pen, a box of assorted adjectives, and the ability to wander. The book under criticism should be at the left of the young novice, while on the right, within reachable distance is the box of adjectives and ranged in the following order: Adjectives-heavenly: Adjectives-terrestrial: Adjectives-infernal.

Now every critic (worth the name) first begins by telling of his most recent journeys, his love for flowers, what he ate for dinner, and the color of his socks. By this means he insinuates himself into amiability with the reader, and later on enjoys his confidence. For instance, it is not at all improper to tell of your recent visit to Somaliland, and your amazement upon seeing a tribesman sitting tailor-fashion, and reading "Barnaby Rudge."

It is well also, to firmly impress upon the reader that you are a man of no mean ability; and to support this it is perfectly justifiable to exhibit the length, breath, and depth of your learning. Tell him that yesterday you walked five "parasangs" to your office; that today, you happened upon a delightful passage in a book: "Quam sunt partium jura obscura, re potius favendum est quam actori." (do not under any circumstances translate the meaning in English.); that tomorrow, you are (for the fifth time) going to reread Gibbon's "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

All this will so deeply bestir the imagination of your reader, and give you such an ascendancy in his mind, that you should have no difficulty whatever in getting him to admit of the plausibility of your theme.

Now as regard the adjectives: If the book under consideration greatly pleases you, choose from the group marked "Adjectives-heavenly" some as follows: "masterpiece!" "divine!" "beautiful!" "marvelous!" If the work has only elicited a faint interest, choose from the group marked "Adjectives-terrestrial", some of the following: "droll!" "meritable!" "delightful nonsense!" "Intriguing!" Ever keep from bestowing upon anyone mere puffery. If, however, the book has been difficult to read, too profound for your intelligence, or the work of some unknown author, select from the last group marked "Adjectives-infernal" any of the following: "wretched!" "infamous!" "abominable!"

Using we say, these categorical adjectives, we have no doubt but that your success is wholly assured; not forgetting, however, now and then, to insert foreign phrases, (untranslated) names of French delicacies, and one or two, say—medical terms (just for confusion's sake.) Had we no restrictive agency, we would elaborate further upon instructions which we are sure would be of the greatest helpfulness to young, aspiring literary critics.

The BUSINESS LETTER

By MARTIN COOK

On Monday, after a recess of two weeks, the Supreme Court upheld the Washington Minimum Wage Law for Women, the Railroad labor act, and the Frazier-Lemke act. The effect of these decisions, which is not yet evident, will be watched with interest.

The arguments for and against the Supreme Court bill are as heated as ever with the result apparently as far off as before.

William Green's denunciation of the sit-down strike has injected another controversial subject into the labor dispute.

Most significant, in the industrial world, is the vigor of the present activity, which in the face of some disturbing features is making consistent gains. The steel trade is enjoying a strong sellers market raising the output to 90.7 per cent of capacity. Order backlogs are growing and the prospects for the immediate future is considered good. While it is felt that active railroad orders will cease before long the feeling is general that the loss will be made up by orders for new building.

First reports of the Easter retail trade are good with an approach to the Christmas volume in some localities.

Net earnings from the Mercantile companies are still much better than those of recent years. Manufacturing and producing lines making the best showing. Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. with a gain from $302,473 in 1935 to $5,548,748 in 1936 and Texas Corporation 1936 net of $38,260,341 more than twice the 1935 figure of $17,065,032 are in the first rank.

That the recent advances in wages is being reflected in the earnings of the mail order houses is confirmed by the $6.27 per share reported by Sears Roebuck Co. as against $4.45 a year ago.

Railroad annual reports also reveal much better returns on the investment, as, for example, the Pennsylvania R. R. Co. with a net income of $38,742,092 compared with $23,962,587 a year ago.

On the other hand the first roads to report for 1937 are showing the effects of the loss of the freight surcharge and the cost of the flood damage.

Car loadings gained during the week 10,726. This was only 1.4 per cent higher but in comparison with 1936 was 33.6 per cent higher.

Electric power consumption holds its recent gains and many of the power producing companies are reporting larger earnings.

While the bulk of the late news has been of a generally favorable nature a few of the prominent items have caused some irregularity in the financial markets. Bond prices have been mixed. Railroads being quoted at moderate advances, while other classes have been selling at slightly lower figures. Governments have continued to recede.

During the past week the trend of stock prices was to a lower level. Commodities, especially the cereals, have ranged at higher figures.

Belleville's Past

As Recorded by This Newspaper

Twenty-five Years Ago

The board of education held its annual reorganization meeting, re-electing the following officers: President, Oliver H. Perry; vice president, John W. DePuy, and district clerk, James J. Turner. William E. Holmes was seated as a new member.

On motion of Henry Mason, the board of health passed a resolution "heartily condemning" Governor Woodrow Wilson for his veto of a bill to prevent the erection of a sewage disposal plant here.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Belleville celebrated its third anniversary.

Ten Years Ago

The town commission refused to follow Newark's lead in changing the name of Washington avenue to Broadway.

John P. Dailey, cashier of the Peoples National Bank & Trust Co., resigned from that institution to take up similar duties at the First National Bank.

A Belleville Chorus was organized under the direction of Mrs. LeRoy H. Bunnell.

Golden Juice for a Golden Voice

Lauritz Melchior, brilliant Wagnerian tenor of the Metropolitan Association, pausing for a final sip of Hawaiian pineapple juice at his dressing table before going on to the opera stage, in the title role of "Tannhauser".

LAURITZ MELCHIOR, the Metropolitan Opera's great Wagnerian tenor, finds that a tall glass of Hawaiian pineapple juice before a "Tannhauser" performance will do a great deal to polish off those full, lyric high notes for which he is famous.

In Mr. Melchior's dressing room, at the Metropolitan there is always a large bottle of fruit juice from which the Danish "konigliche Kammeranger" (singer to the royal court) pours himself a drink before going on the stage as "Tannhauser", "Tristan", or "Siegfried"—the great Wagner hero roles which he has sung more often than any living singer. Mr. Melchior has found Hawaiian pineapple juice effective not only as a thirst quencher that will not harm the voice, but actually as a means of soothing the throat and clearing the vocal passage.

The pineapple juice practice is one of the few precautions Lauritz Melchior takes for his voice. He is, in fact, a notorious disbeliever in the fads and fancies to which many of his operatic colleagues subscribe. A hearty meal, a good cigar, and a midnight hunting expedition when he is in California, Maine, or at home in Chossewitz, are never passed up by this singer, and, as the critics will attest, his voice has never been any the worse for it. "Enjoy life fully and you will want to sing and therefore be able to do it well," Mr. Melchior declared.

Bring Court Action

Against Fort Lee

Bondholders Seek Writ to Compel Payments on Funded Debt

Failure of the borough of Fort Lee to pay anything on the borough's indebtedness since 1933, and the issuance by Supreme Court Justice J. L. Bodine of an order for borough and state officials to show cause May 4 at Trenton as to why they should not be attached in contempt for failure to comply with a judgment of the court ordering them to levy taxes during 1936 for the payment of the bonded indebtedness of the borough and the school district, and to pay the proceeds of such taxes ratably to all the bondholders, will have a sequel in a hearing before U. S. District Judge Clark April 5. This hearing has been scheduled as the result of an application for a writ of mandamus in which non-resident creditors would compel the borough officials to levy an additional tax during 1937 for the payment of all or a part of the judgment on defaulted bonds and coupons held by the non-resident creditors.

Josiah M. Hewitt, who has acted as representative of the New Jersey creditors, the non-resident creditors, and the New Jersey State Sinking Fund in formulating a refunding plan, issued a statement last night in which he reviewed the situation and declared that acceptance of the refunding plan would result in a reduction of the present debt of the borough of over $5,000,000 upon which an average interest rate of 5% per cent is now being paid, to an amount less than $3,000,000 upon which the interest rate would be reduced to 4 per cent. The new bonds would run for a period of 40 years, but there would be a waiver of all amortization requirements for a period of five years from the date of the bonds.

"Refunding Plan Fair"

"All in all, the refunding plan offered to the borough of Fort Lee is considered by many informed people as the fairest ever offered to the taxpayers of any municipality within the state," Mr. Hewitt said. "Provided the state and the county requirements remain substantially as they are at present, this program could not fail to produce a lower tax rate year by year for a number of years to come, which would benefit the present taxpayers and would attract new residents and investors to the borough. What is more important, the reduction in the amount of the indebtedness and in the interest rates would be secured by straightforward and honorable methods, the plan having come from the bondholders themselves."

The mayor and council approved the refunding plan October 30, 1936, subject to the approval of the Municipal Finance Commission. But after months of needless delay, according to Mr. Hewitt, the mayor and council February 23, 1937, rescinded its action approving the plan, and the Municipal Finance Commission formally rejected the plan three days later, and instructed its counsel and auditors to prepare and submit another plan. Mr. Hewitt said a month had elapsed since the action of the commission "and nothing has been presented to the bondholders to date, either by the mayor and council of Fort Lee or by the commission."

"Needless Delay" Costly
"The terrific cost of all this need-

Masonic Chairman

William A. Braun, first vice president of the Essex County Past Masters' Masonic Association, heads the general committee planning for the fortieth anniversary banquet and tribute to the grand master, Charles

WILLIAM A. BRAUN

B. Foley, in Newark, April 10. The program, which is Essex County's part in the 150th anniversary of the New Jersey Grand Lodge, will consist of a reception and banquet followed by an entertainment in the Essex House, 1048 Broad street.

Less delay must be perfectly apparent to the taxpayers in Fort Lee," he declared. "Since July 27, 1936, when the bondholders' plan was first formally presented to the mayor and the council, the debt of the borough has increased approximately $150,000, represented by accruing unpaid interest since that date, and such interest continues to accrue at the rate of $600 a day."

"Is it any wonder that the holders of the bonds of Fort Lee, after patiently waiting for months for some action on the part of either the mayor and council or the Municipal Finance Commission on the refunding plan proposed by the bondholders have at last determined that it is necessary for them to proceed in the courts for some redress?"

"It would seem that the time has certainly arrived when those taxpayers who have been carrying the financial burden of Fort Lee for years should make some effort to learn what is going on behind the scenes, and that they make their voices heard by their representatives."

Court Order Served

Those served with the show-cause order, which was issued March 24, were the mayor and council, the board of education, the assessor and collector and David T. Wilentz, attorney general of New Jersey; J.H. Thayer Martin, state tax commissioner, and Walter R. Darby, state auditor. The judgment with which it is charged they failed to comply was issued January 23, 1936. The order also required these officials to show cause why all the money now on hand in the borough treasury and applicable to that purpose should not be paid ratably to the bondholders. The action was brought by Wurtz & Plympton, attorneys of Hackensack, and is supplementary to an action brought by a group of non-resident creditors in the Federal Court before U. S. District Judge Clark, which requested the writ of mandamus.

State Sinking Fund, which holds some $800,000 of Fort Lee bonds, is co-operating with the group of New Jersey and non-resident creditors.

Banker Tells Story
Of Clearing HousePresident of National State
Bank Describes History
Of Newark Service

How millions of dollars are exchanged by Newark banks within a few minutes each morning without the removal of a penny of cash from their vaults, is described by W. Paul Stillman, president of National State Bank, Newark, in a booklet distributed by his institution.

Mr. Stillman tells the story of the Newark Clearing House, the foundation for which was laid 125 years ago when his bank and the National Newark & Essex Banking Co. began exchanging each other's paper. The president of the National State, which is celebrating its 125th birthday this year, believes this was the first bank clearing system in New Jersey and among the first in the country. He writes:

"While a group of foresighted, old Newarkers met February 8, 1812, at Roff's Tavern in Broad street, and organized what is today our National State Bank, they did not open for business until June 1. In the intervening busy months, it became evident that it would be necessary to arrange what are known as exchanges, both in local financial transactions and with outside banks.

"There was just one other bank in the city at that time, so that the matter of local exchange was easy. The representatives of these two institutions met May 27, 1812, with Colonel Thomas A. Ward, a distinguished gentleman, representing State Bank as we then were known. Out of that meeting came the first bank clearing system in the state, one of the pioneer arrangements of its kind in the country.

"When our bank opened for business, it was necessary to send a messenger to New York at least once and sometimes twice a week. The old Mechanic's Bank and the Bank of Manhattan Co. in New York City were the two institutions handling Newark's out-of-town drafts and notes which were the chief commercial paper of the day. Not until later were checks used extensively.

"The route of this messenger, astride a horse owned by our bank, led him out Market street and on over the meadow causeway to the wooden bridge, built over the Passaic River in 1792. Thence by Paulus Hook, he reached New York.

"Our first cashier, George Charles Herford, was authorized to 'make the said exchanges through the medium of any of the directors of this bank when opportunities offer.' This, no doubt, was in behalf of economy. Also for economy's sake, the horse used by our messenger was stabled in the rear of National State Bank, on our present site at Broad street and Edison place. Not only did the bank provide this stable, but it also furnished living quarters adjoining the bank for the cashier.

"Local exchanges were made by foot messengers, who hurried between the two banks in the town each morning. As Newark grew, other banks were organized, and clearances increased. It was then arranged that the messengers should meet each morning in a corridor of one of the institutions. It took years of effort and persuasion before a modern clearing house could be formed.

"The efficient, well-organized Newark Clearing House, as we know it today, was established fifteen years ago this month, March 15, 1922, as the Roff's Tavern in Broad street, and or-logical successor of the old system of exchanges and clearances of 125 years ago.

"Under the arrangement of our clearing house today, millions of dollars are in transit each morning between Newark's banks. This is so handled, however, that not a penny of cash actually leaves the big, heavily armored vaults. When you and I are settling down to read our morning's mail, representatives of the clearing house, which is known as the Bankers' Association of Newark, are gathering to take care of the day's exchanges of checks and drafts.

"If you do not know how this is arranged, it may interest you: For instance, National State Bank has honored for you a check on another bank. Next morning, we present all such checks to the clearing house. At 9:30 every business morning, the representatives from all member institutions meet in the offices of the clearing house. Checks are returned to institutions upon which they are drawn. The exchange is systematic, speedy and accounts balance to a cent. Again at 1:45 P. M. there is a return item exchange, a second meeting, when banks return any checks 'not good,' to the sending banks.

"The clearing house learns at once from each bank whether the total it received is more or less than the total of checks sent. This report is sent by messenger immediately to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York, a kind of super-clearing house. By noon, local banks must adjust balances with the Federal Reserve Bank. Thus a smooth and steady flow of credit provides lifeblood for commerce, industry and finance in our community.

"Our directors and officers, as we celebrate the 125th birthday of National State Bank, take keen personal pride in the fact that this old institution laid the foundation for the vast financial operations now carried on in our metropolis.

"We hope you will join us in our 125th birthday celebration. It is a big event in our lives and we like to feel that our existence during all this century and a quarter has made a definite contribution to the prosperity of our great community. This bank has grown and prospered because of the loyalty and friendship of its thousands of friends. We want you to feel that it is your bank and that this is your birthday celebration."

Richard Crooks to Make His First
Opera Appearance of Season on Air

By RICHARD CROOKS

The Faust legend, of a man bartering his immortal soul for the return of youth, is old—just how old nobody knows. Certainly it must date from a time soon after sensitive men, beset with the infirmities of age, began longing for the vigor of their younger years. Faust made the trade, and paid the price.

Our own world has its millions of Fausts, bitter with the realization that they have grown old, eager to pay any price to regain the years that have slipped so silently into the past. How many are there who would not do it in reality what I, as Faust, do when I raise high Mephistopheles' draught and my white hair and beard and formless black robe dissolve and, again a young student, I stand brilliant and handsome in my scarlet doublet and hose?

It is easy, this illusion, once you learn to pull the rip cord at the right instant. But in real life, pulling the rip cord means paying the price. And the price is not only the tragedy of the old man thinking himself young, grasping for pleasures beyond reach and disdaining those rightfully his, but the wreckage of his own and the lives of those who love him.

It was this thought, perhaps, that moved Gounod to compose the work we shall give at the Metropolitan Opera next Saturday in the matinee performance to be heard over the National Broadcasting Company by courtesy of the Radio Corporation of America. Let me tell the story and you may judge for yourself.

It is night and Faust, old and weary of life, pores over an immense tome. Baffled by the riddle of existence and depressed with the emptiness of learning, he sams it shut and raises a cup of poison. "With this draught," he declares bitterly, "I am still master of my destiny!" With the coming of dawn, a group of happy laborers and maidens pass his window and, filled with the joy of living, raise thanks to God. "What can God do for me?" sneers Faust, then bursts into a curse upon heavens and earth. "For me, give me Satan!"

In a flash the Evil One stands re-appearing before him, announcing himself at the philosopher's service. Is it gold and glory he wishes? "A treasure which contains all others," replies Faust, "I desire youth!" Very well, he shall have it for practically nothing—his soul. Faust hesitates until Mephistopheles conjures up the vision of a beautiful and innocent maiden, then eagerly signs away his soul. He raises a goblet to his lips and immediately is transformed into a radiant and impetuous youth, elegantly clad and eager for adventure.

He soon meets up with Marguerite, whose vision he beheld, at a village celebration. Prayer book in hand, she wends her way rather timidly through the merry-makers. Faust offers to escort her, but with a touch of coyness she refuses. He stands as one transfixed and forgets his previous eagerness for the joys of the flesh.

They meet again in Marguerite's garden. Her brother, Valentine, has departed for the wars, leaving her in the protection of Marthe, a well meaning but foolish matron, who soon is beguiled by Mephistopheles' flattery Faust and Marguerite, in transports of ecstasy, wander about the garden, but she refuses his advances. Mephistopheles, anxious to gain yet another soul, raises his arms and calls upon night to envelop the lovers in its voluptuous folds, and upon the flowers to quicken, with their subtle perfumes, the pulse of Marguerite. She naively plucks the petals of a daisy in the age-old game of "he loves me—he loves me not," ending with a cry of joy, "He loves me!" Faust folds her in his arms, but Marguerite is frightened by the passion he has aroused and begs him to leave her.

Mephistopheles appears and rails at Faust for letting Marguerite gain the safety of the house. He bids him wait and hear what Marguerite tells the stars. From the window of her chamber Marguerite breathes, "Haste thee to return! Come!" Faust rushes to the window and clasps her in his arms. The lovers are enveloped in the blackness of night, silence broken only by the sardonic laughter of the fiend in the garden.

Marguerite is filled with shame at her betrayal, even though she and Faust are still deeply in love. She, whom all revered for her purity, is now jeered at for her love affair. Valentine returns from the wars and learns of her shame and swears vengeance upon his sister's seducer. Mephistopheles, close behind Faust, sings an insulting serenade in her garden. Valentine rushes forth, but is mortally wounded in his duel with Faust. Dying, he curses the unhappy Marguerite.

Broken in mind by the tragedy of her life, Marguerite kills her child when it is born. She is condemned to die. Faust, with the help of Mephistopheles, enters the prison to urge her to escape. Her heart is filled with joy at the appearance of her lover and she sings faintly of their first meeting. Then she notices the fiend in the shadows and prays for protection. "Marguerite!" cries Faust; but Marguerite has fallen dead. "Condemned!" gloats Mephistopheles, but he is answered by a chorus of celestial beings. "Saved!"

Gunboat Williams Gets Braddock Papers

Served Wrong Boxer in Suit By Garden, Deputy Marshals Admit

Eddie Lee "Gunboat" Williams, veteran heavyweight boxer and former resident of Belleville, thought he was the victim of a kidnap plot Saturday when four men seized him outside of the home of James J. Braddock, world's heavyweight champion, at Woodcliff, and dragged him into a nearby auto.

His astonishment increased when the men merely pushed papers into his hands, thrust him from the machine and drove off in haste.

The mystery was solved Monday when U. S. deputy marshals, after studying photographs, conceded they had served papers intended for Braddock on the wrong boxer. The papers are in the suit of Madison Square Garden to restrain Braddock from meeting Joe Louis in Chicago June 22, the Garden holding that the champion agreed to fight Max Schmeling in New York June 3.

Williams had gone to Braddock's home to apply for the position of sparring partner and was leaving, after finding Braddock out, when served with the papers.

The Gunboat, an Alabama boy, rose to prominence in the sport world several years ago when he served in the Navy and won the heavyweight championship. Returning to civilian life, he was a luminary in boxing for a number of years. Recently he has served as sparring partner for Luis Firpo, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney and other headliners.
