TOWN COMMISSION WILL BE KEPT BUSY TUESDAY

Kraus Liquor Hearing, Parking Meters and Pay Rise
Will Be Studied

Tuesday's Town Commission meeting may end on into the wee small hours if all matters on the calendar are taken up for discussion. Most important among the items scheduled for the evening is the hearing of Max Kraus, Union avenue retail liquor dealer, on charges preferred by the State Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control.

Next in importance will be the appearance of a number of merchants for an airing of opinions about the parking meter question, and if time allows, the board will probably get around to such routine matters as considering for introduction an ordinance which would permit the question of a $300 pay raise for the members of the police and fire departments to be placed on the ballot at the November general election.

The State ABC alleges that Kraus's twenty-two-year-old son, Edward, had sold a bottle of liquor to Frank Kriz, seventeen, of 132 Overlook avenue on the evening of August 4. Two department investigators, Frank Carlin and Frederick J. Best, apprehended Kriz and a companion, John Petro, eighteen, of 298 Greylock parkway as they left the Kraus store. They stated that they purchased the liquor from Kraus's son, the agents said in the report which was placed on file by the Town Commission. Under questioning the agents declared, Edward Kraus admitted selling Kriz the liquor, claiming that the youth "appeared to be over twenty-one."

Town Attorney Lawrence E. Keenan will prosecute the case for the town and will call the two youths and the investigators from the ABC as his chief witnesses. The Merchants' Association has requested the opportunity to appear before the board so that all can express their opinions about the parking meter question. It is expected that within the next month the Town Commission will approve a plan of Commissioner Clark to install the meters at certain points along Washington avenue. Clark said last week that he was still debating which type of meter would be best for Belleville's proportion.

To Introduce Ordinance
At the last meeting of the town board, Town Attorney Keenan was instructed to draw up the ordinance which would pave the way for the police and fire pay raise question to be placed on the November ballot. The board members at that time indicated that they were in favor of putting the question before the public. Keenan was requested to make the phraseology as concise and as simple as legally possible so that it would be easily understood by all of the public.

FERRARAS TAKE SENIOR CROWN

Haffners Shut Out 2-0 In League Final; Play Double-Header Saturday

The Ferrara Association softballers were crowned the Senior League champions last night when they shut out the strong Haffner club 2-0 in a twilight tilt played at the Municipal Stadium. It was the rubber tilt of a three-game series. The Haffners had won the first tilt 10-5 while the Ferraras took the second 4 to 1.

A softball doubleheader leading toward the crowning of a town champion will be played at the Stadium on Saturday afternoon. At 2, St. Peter's, winners in the Church League, will meet the Carson-Newton team, Industrial City victors. In the nightcap scheduled for 4 p.m., the Ferraras will be pitted against Art Mayer's West Ends, victors in the West Belleville loop.

Winners in these games will clash in the championship final at the Stadium on Saturday afternoon, September 13, Recreation Director Ed Lister announced last night.

The Haffners were kept well handicuffed in last night's battle. Pat Tortorella on the hill for the Ferraras limited the candy boys to three hits.

Ringi's first inning home run was the margin of victory for the Carson-Newton team in downing the Federal Leather ten for the Industrial crown. Although the Federals outbit the winners five to three, Aronis was more effective on the mound in the pinches. (Continued on Page 8)

PAPER PROCESSES ROTARIAN TOPIC

Harry C. Specht, Eastwood-
Neally Official, Tells Members
About Manufacture

Processes employed in the production of paper were described and illustrated with slides for members of the Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon meeting yesterday by Harry C. Specht of Eastwood Neally Corporation.

Tracing its fabrication from the forests, through the mills and through the finishing departments, Specht also outlined the interrelation of paper making to other industries. He gave specific examples of local plants which have a part in the manufacture of the finished product.

Some are Wallace & Tiernan Company which makes the chlorine control equipment essential to one phase of the process; Sonneborn & Company which contributes oils and waxes; and the American Dye Works whose dyes are used in coloring the stock. Yerg & Company and Sweeney Lithograph Company are local examples of the eventual users of the finished product, the speaker pointed out.

William S. Conklin, secretary and director of public relations of the New Jersey Unemployment Commission, will be next Wednesday's speaker at the Rotary luncheon meeting to be held at Forest Hill fieldhouse. He will discuss new laws enacted pertaining to unemployment in the state. The joint picnic with members of the Newark Rotary Club will take place on Tuesday.

Two Major Wins Scored By Nereid Boat Club

Eight-Oared Boat and Junior Four-Man Gig Win
In Middle States Rowing Regatta at Camden;
Will Row in Washington on Sunday

The Nereid Boat Club scored two major victories in the Middle States Rowing Association regatta on Sunday at Camden when the eight-man boat rowed to victory over two favored opponents and the junior four-man gig copped its event.

Victory in the eight-man event would have been sweet enough for the Nereids but not own an eight-man boat and their triumphs this season in this race have been in borrowed boats. It has only been by excellent pairing of men and conditioning that the Nereids have been able to put eight men in a strange boat at race time and row to victory.

The club's triumph in Sunday's eight event was singular for the rowed into the water the Penn Barge Club of Philadelphia and the Virginia Boat Club of Richmond. The Virginians were highly touted for they had defeated the New Orleans B. C. in the New Year's regatta in Louisiana and since then have been practicing most of the year. Most of the Virginia oarsmen are younger than those rowing either for Nereid or the Barge Club.

There was a close finish to the race, with only one boat length between the first and third boats at the finish line. The Virginia boat was second for most of the race, pulling up to the front at the mid-distance and holding it until the finish. Nereid stepped its beat up to thirty-eight strokes a minute and pulled away to a three-quarter boat length lead.

Fortunately for the Nereids, the finish came when it did for the Penn boys, starting late, came up fast near the end and might have overtaken the tired Nereid oarsmen had the race gone much longer.

COP'S DAUGHTER SECOND VICTIM OF PARALYSIS

Berry Urges Parents Not To Be Panicky and To Discount Rumors

Health Officer Eugene T. Berry last night urged parents not to become panicky or to listen to the many rumors which are flooding the town since two infantile paralysis cases have developed. The health department has been swamped with inquiries from anxious mothers this week about the number of cases in town, some claiming that they heard there were "ten or fifteen," while others inquired to verify the report that the schools would not be opened yesterday. Superintendent of Schools Parmer said yesterday that numerous inquiries about the police scare had been received at his office.

The second case of poliomyelitis was discovered over the weekend. Stricken by the disease was seven-year-old Jane Lee, daughter of Patrolman and Mrs. James Lee of Bayard street. Berry also released the name of the first victim, Sea Scout Edward Tasney, fifteen, who was stricken on Saturday, August 23. Both young patients are in the Soho Isolation Hospital.

Is Non-Paralytic

The health officer said that the Lee girl's case had been diagnosed as acute poliomyelitis and that it was non-paralytic. He stated that her condition was good and that young Tasney was also reported to be improving.

Berry's investigation showed that during the past week, the Lee child had visited at Lake Hopatcong and Coney Island.

A number of parents have become worried because of the outbreak in epidemic proportions of the disease in Bergen and Passaic counties.

"I can only repeat what I said last week," Berry stated. "They should keep their children from crowded gatherings and they should not travel. The first symptoms of poliomyelitis," he continued, "are usually a sore throat, upset stomach or pains, and if a child shows any of these, the family physician should be called immediately."

Only one case of infantile paralysis was reported in town last year.

Baby Stations Open In The Afternoon

The three town baby stations resumed their afternoon hours this week. Conducted under the supervision of the public health nurses, the stations will be open from 2 to 4 in the afternoon.

Mothers may take their children to the Town Hall on Thursdays, No. 2 School in Mill street on Tuesdays and on Wednesdays at the Silver Lake Community House.

During the summer months, the clinics have been held during the morning but with the opening of school, the shift in hours had to be made.

In the absence of Miss El-len Smith, head nurse, who is ill, the State Department of Health has assigned Miss Margaret Mulholland to take charge of the staff of local nurses.

Education Must Be Kept Free, Parmer Tells Staff

Teachers Must Work to Keep It Free If There Is To Be a Democracy, Superintendent States
At Pre-Meeting Talk with Employees

So long as this nation has free books, free courses, free minds and free children, it will have a benevolent democracy, Superintendent of Schools Parmer told more than 200 teachers in a pre-school opening gathering Tuesday morning at School No. 8 auditorium.

But, he quickly added, it will take the best efforts of the teachers to keep it, warning that there are individuals and forces which fail to recognize the importance of keeping the schools free and individually controlled and operated.

"Our influence and aim in teaching children," he told the staff, "should be to develop free and resourceful minds. We should not tell them how to think, but we should help them to think. So long as we have this, democracy will be safe."

"You can't teach children to be resourceful and responsible unless you have such a program," he continued. "We must have free and resourceful minds capable of applying logic to any situation."

Taking national defense and the part the schools will play in it as the general topic for his first talk of the season before the teachers, Superintendent Parmer remarked, "If the object of this defense program is self preservation, then there is nothing more important than education."

He told the teachers that they could depend on the fact that they will have to make sacrifices and that they will have to teach the children the necessity for getting along without some things. He used the Junior Red Cross as an illustration of how young boys and girls learn to make sacrifices.

Will Be Affected

Switching to a discussion of the dictator countries and the influence which their policies and aims are having on this country and its life, the superintendent commented that "The threat of totalitarianism will affect no group as it will our own — the teachers."

He reviewed the similarity of the three main types of dictatorship — Nazism, Communism and Fascism.

"They are alike," Parmer pointed out, "in that they believe that they have the one way to Utopia."

He also pointed out that their views on religion, the prevention of free thought and speech, through controlled press, radio and books is virtually the same.

"They are alike in that their educational program is the same in training the young to have implicit acquiescence and obedience to their creed and an intense hatred for all other programs."

"This bold, determined betrayal of innocent minds," the superintendent commented, "must to the most conscientious teacher seem an abhorrent, hideous crime. There is nothing worse than betraying young children as they do in dictator countries."

He contrasted the attitude and teaching under such systems of government with that which exists in this country today and pointed out how locally the educational program has been explained to the public and they have been welcomed to criticize it and make recommendations.

Employers Call School Looking For Workers

School had not been open many hours yesterday when Guidance Director Earl Seibert's telephone in the high school started to jingle with employers making inquiries if he had any young people interested in going to work.

The director sent out a call immediately telling all young people, whether they are high school graduates or not, to register with him if they are seeking employment. Those interested may make appointments to see Seibert by calling the guidance office, Belleville 2-4470.

BOND PURCHASE BRINGS QUERIES

Story About Buying $50,000
Defense Bonds Is Told
In Many Papers

This town's announcement that $50,000 in United States defense bonds would be purchased with surplus cash has received nationwide publicity. The story was picked up by the wire service press associations and flashed to newspapers throughout the country.

Clippings from a number of papers carrying the story about Mayor Williams' plan to buy the bonds are already arriving on his Town Hall desk.

One former Bellevilleite sent a page from the Los Angeles Times with the story on it, while the Mayor said yesterday he has had numerous inquiries from town officials in other parts of the state about how Belleville provided for the bond purchase and other details about it.

Williams had planned to purchase the bonds through the two local banks on Tuesday but he did not return from his shore vacation until yesterday morning.

The Mayor said he is now making arrangements to accept the bonds from B. Thomas Aitken, president of the Peoples National Bank, and Wilbur W. Brooks, president of the First National Bank.

Welfare Budget Committee To Report Wednesday

The budget committee of the Welfare Federation headed by Herbert C. Schmutz met last night and discussed the 1942 financial requirements of the organization.

The group's findings will be reported to the Federation at the trustees' first regular fall meeting next Wednesday night in the headquarters in Washington avenue at 8:30.

Other members of the budget group are John Ray, Paul D. de Hagara, Alvin Buckley and Lester McCorkle.

Henry Vreeland Relief Corps Will Meet Friday Night

Bellboys Open Grid Drills For Game In Two Weeks

Gates and Staff Faced With Big Task; None of Last Year's Line Returning; Will Meet Lyndhurst;
In First Game; Teaneck on Schedule

The dull thud of the pigskin was heard over Clearman Field for the first time this season on Tuesday afternoon as High School Coach Larry Gates sent sixty-five varsity ambitious youngsters through their first workout. Faced with a squad studded with new faces, Gates, and his three-man staff quickly set about the job of whipping their scholastic charges into shape for the first game of the long campaign, on Saturday, September 20 when they will travel to Lyndhurst.

Little remains from last year's eleven for the veteran roster has been riddled by graduation and boys who have left school to take jobs. Not one man is returning from the varsity line that the Bellboys boasted of last season, while in the backfield Quarterback Bill Hunkele and Wingman Johnny Walker are all who remain of the 1940 rear flank quartet.

John Cenero, another who saw backfield service last year, has not reported as yet and Gates is dubious about the prospects of his returning to school.

One Goes In Navy

As he reels off the list of those who will be missing this season, it reads like a casualty list. Sadly, Larry noted that Bob Cataldi, an end with good possibilities, has a job working in a defense plant, Johnny Jocher, line mainstay, was lured by the call of the sea and joined the Navy. Three or four others who saw service last season are also working.

Harry Leiss, who played end last year and did some of the punting, is among the missing, but Gates still has hopes that he will report. The mentor had counted on putting the big boy in the center slot.

All is not hopeless, Gates confided, for his grid warrior eye has caught some good prospects among the boys who have reported. For the line there are two big tackle prospects, Russ Flynn and Jim Caruso, both of whom rock the Fairbanks at better than 295 pounds. Counted on as a likely varsity guard is Harry Mully,

Enrollment At Schools Down 241 Students For Opening Day

CHANGE POLICY IN DRAFT EXAMS

Final Physical Checkup Will Be Given Three Weeks
Before Induction Date

Thirty-five draftees—thirty-four white men and one colored—will go to Newark on September 15 for their final physical examinations three weeks before the next scheduled induction date for local youths.

This is in line with the new policy adopted by Selective Service officials to make matters less complicated for draft boards and also to avoid embarrassment for draftees.

Under the former system, the men received notice that they were to be inducted into the service on a certain date. They gave up job, sold their cars and then made the round of a series of parties and fancy dinners arranged by friends who generally loaded them down with gifts. The men were shipped off to Trenton for their final physical checkup before being admitted to the service. Some of them were rejected, and the same day that they had left with the fond farewells of relatives and friends ringing in their ears, they sneaked back into town hoping to avoid the public gaze because they were turned down.

But that's all over now. Those men who go to Newark on September 15 will be examined, returned home and then notified whether or not they have passed. Those who are accepted will be given about three weeks to straighten out their affairs before being inducted.

Instead of going to Trenton from here, the draftees will be sent direct to Fort Dix. Those who are okayed physically, in Newark will be the board's quota for the next call, which, based on the twenty-one-day period between the final examination and the induction date should be during the second week of October.

Draft Clerk Reid said yesterday that those who will go to Newark for the physical checkup will be examined by September 10. Some of the twenty-one-year-old draftees, who registered in July, are included in this group, he said.

In the Army Now

One of the entertainment highlights at Pine Camp, N. Y. which is the headquarters of the 51st Infantry Regiment Armored of the 4th Armored Division is its thirteen-piece orchestra.

They were featured in a radio program presented on Sunday over a Watertown, N. Y. station.

Anthony Androsiglio of this town is a violinist in the musical group.

Earl L. Willis of this town was among the 120 colored trainees who left Fort Dix on Thursday for Augusta, Ga. where they have been assigned to the 7th Aviation Squadron Air Base for training.

"Everything running smoothly" was the report from Superintendent of Schools Parmer late yesterday afternoon after the first day of the new term in the town's public school system had been completed.

Puzzling the superintendent and other school officials is the enrollment drop-off for the opening day. According to figures compiled at the superintendent's office based on classroom totals taken by principals in the various schools, there were 241 fewer children registered yesterday than a year ago.

Reports from the nine elementary schools and the high school showed that 4,848 pupils had enrolled. On the opening day in September 1940, 5,089 reported.

The biggest drop was in School No. 4 in the Silver Lake section where 754 youngsters, ninety-six less than last year, reported for classes. Asked for an explanation of the drop, Parmer said that he attributed it to three things. The present scare of infantile paralysis may have caused some mothers to keep their children out of school, especially since there have been numerous rumors about the number of cases which there are in Belleville. Some people may not have returned from vacations while in other cases, Parmer explained, the pupils either have gone to work or may have switched to the vocational or some other similar technical school.

The enrollment figures by schools compared with last year is as follows:

School No. 1.....	1941	1940
School No. 2.....	288	329
School No. 3.....	96	115

Teacher To Come Here Passes Away Suddenly

A solemn high mass of requiem was offered Tuesday morning for Robert A. McKenna, twenty-two-year-old Newark teacher, who was to have started work as a teacher in No. 4 school yesterday. Mr. McKenna died on Friday in Newton Memorial Hospital after having been stricken on Thursday at Camp Columbus, Culver's Lake, where he had served as assistant director for the summer.

He was the nephew of Rev. Joseph M. Kelly, pastor of St. Peter's Church, who served as sub-deacon at the mass which was offered at St. Michael's Church in Newark. Burial was in the family plot in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery.

Mr. McKenna was a graduate of the grammar and high school of our Lady of Good Counsel in Newark and was also graduated from Newark State Teachers College. He also attended Seton Hall College extension school.

BACK-TO-SCHOOL BOOK

SCHOOL DAYS

School days should be happy days. But to many children they are not happy, because faulty sight makes lessons hard to learn.

Such youngsters get lower marks. They develop a feeling of inferiority. They are shy. They play hooky. They do not mix well with their playmates. They fall back in their classes.

Be sure that your youngster is not being handicapped by faulty sight. Have his vision examined—now. Make school days happy days.

Gas Dealer Is The "Goat"

Labor Day may mark the end of the summer motoring season but there are still many who must use their cars to get about in business. And then, there's the group of "Sunday drivers" whose only weekend enjoyment comes from just riding around the countryside for a few hours.

Like most local gasoline dealers, motorists are in a quandary about what is going to happen during the next few weeks. Those who pump the gas are wondering how they should dole their supply out so that the pumps won't run dry before the month is out.

There have been a score of suggestions advanced but none seems to add up to the right answer. Inquiries at automobile association headquarters and the offices of some of the leading gasoline companies do not shed any more light on the situation than a chat with the neighborhood gasoline station operator. They don't know any more about it than we do, and the only thing we know is that the gas dealer now scowls at us instead of smiling when we drive in and say "Fill 'er up."

The gasoline reduction plan, which has been fathered by Petroleum Coordinator Ickes, may go down as another one of the New Deal "busts." Claims and counter-claims of success and failure of the plan are being heard daily. Charges are flying about Washington that the reduction is not necessary and that the government has not used all of the available sources for transporting fuel to the Eastern states. One of the most unfair results of the present plan is that it has made every station operator a "gasoline policeman" and has placed the burden of the success of the effort on the little men.

Many gasoline dealers are being cursed and damned by their customers because they refuse to give them all the gas they want. Some people, who are unreasonable and do not understand that it is not by choice but by necessity that the dealer must take such a step, will not take any more of their business to the man whom they feel has offended them and deprived them of service to which they believe they are entitled.

The government has created the situation — through its desire to ship more oil to Great Britain and because it has not made available the facilities to fill the gasoline needs of the Eastern seaboard and still be of assistance to those across the water. Washington has made the decision and it is Washington that should regulate and control it.

Such is not the case today. It has been a haphazard, unfair plan in which the flow of oil to certain markets has been cut. There has been no legislation to regulate the plan and its inconsistencies and the penalty which it has inflicted upon some operators is such that they do not know how to operate their business from day to day. In one breath they are told that their allotment will be cut ten per cent, in the next it is fifteen per cent and then the gasoline company which serves them says they won't get any more gasoline for so many days.

This may become one of the famous bonehead plays of the defense period and it will be unless government officials set up a systematic and equitable plan which will be fair to all. The federal authorities have declared the emergency. They say that it exists. They should control it — by rationing if necessary. The dealer should not be made the "goat" and that is what is happening in today's present muddled situation.

Good Time To Talk It Over

Since our comments last week that parking meters for Washington avenue would be a step in the right direction but that a municipal parking area would be the real solution to the problem, we have had numerous comments from merchants. Some have agreed, others have violently disagreed. They are even against the meters.

This, in a small way illustrates the variance of opinion among those along the Avenue. Few are those merchants who will say that nothing should be done, but the majority are hesitant about making any move, fearing that it might take business away from them.

Now is the time for a meeting of the minds and since a group of the merchants have taken the initiative to ask the town commissioners for the opportunity to confer with them, it might be well for all of the merchants to join in and express their opinions so that the board can learn how far the merchants are willing to go in easing the condition which is currently the plague of business in certain sections.

Some business men intend to appear before the board next Tuesday night. We think as many of them as possible should attend so that the commissioners can hear their opinions and they can learn what is in the minds of the board members.

The merchant who says that nothing should be done harkens back to the gas-light era. Business progress and expansion demand that the town keep in step through maintaining the best of facilities. There can be no more building and greater ratables without a demand for an increase in service. Such is the situation that is presented by the parking problem. Local business has boomed and attracted more customers. There must be the facilities to handle this increase or it will be lost and the town will slip backward instead of continuing ahead.

They Must Teach Democracy

It was back to classrooms and schoolbooks for the town's 5,000 public school youngsters and back to work for more than 200 of their instructors yesterday. Each September prior to the opening of school the teachers are reminded of the sacred trust and obligation they hold in moulding the lives of our young people. In light of present day events their duty seems more important.

The three R's and their antecedents in the students' learning cannot be de-emphasized, but it must by necessity not only because of juvenile inquisitiveness and knowledge but because of a pedagogic oath to keep them well-informed, be relegated to a secondary place.

Demanding greater attention, a more thorough knowledge and understanding is this country's position in the world of today. We need not teach factionalism nor a creed of hate. We need only teach of democracy and its greatness. That and that alone is the axiom by which this nation is being guided — and it is that rule that should be the guide for our children.

In times when adults find the world difficult to understand, it is certain that it must present a complex problem to young minds. No country can remain a dominant power unless its people believe in its principles. We are sacrificing today to preserve this nation that it might further prosper and be great. It cannot be done without inculcating into the minds of the young the greatness of democracy — and when in present or past time has there been a more urgent need for emphasis? Teachers must teach of what there is in books, but more than that, they must teach of this nation.

Maybe We Met The Wrong One

You can only judge by what you hear, but from the conversations which we had over the weekend with twenty-five or thirty young men who were home from the army camps, we are inclined to think that the stories of poor morale and wholesale threatened rebellion which have been appearing in newspapers and magazines have been overplayed.

Of the young soldiers with whom we talked and asked about the things which have been read about in the press ever since the draft extension measure was passed, there was not one who said that the men in his camp were ready to bolt out of the Army. To a man, they summed it up with the opinion that what has to be will be and that's all there is to it.

Sometimes we think that newspapers are inclined to take an isolated condition and make capital of it. Maybe we just happened to strike the men with the right attitude, but we're just as entitled to our opinion that they have a job to do and are going to do it, as others are that the Army is ready to fall apart.

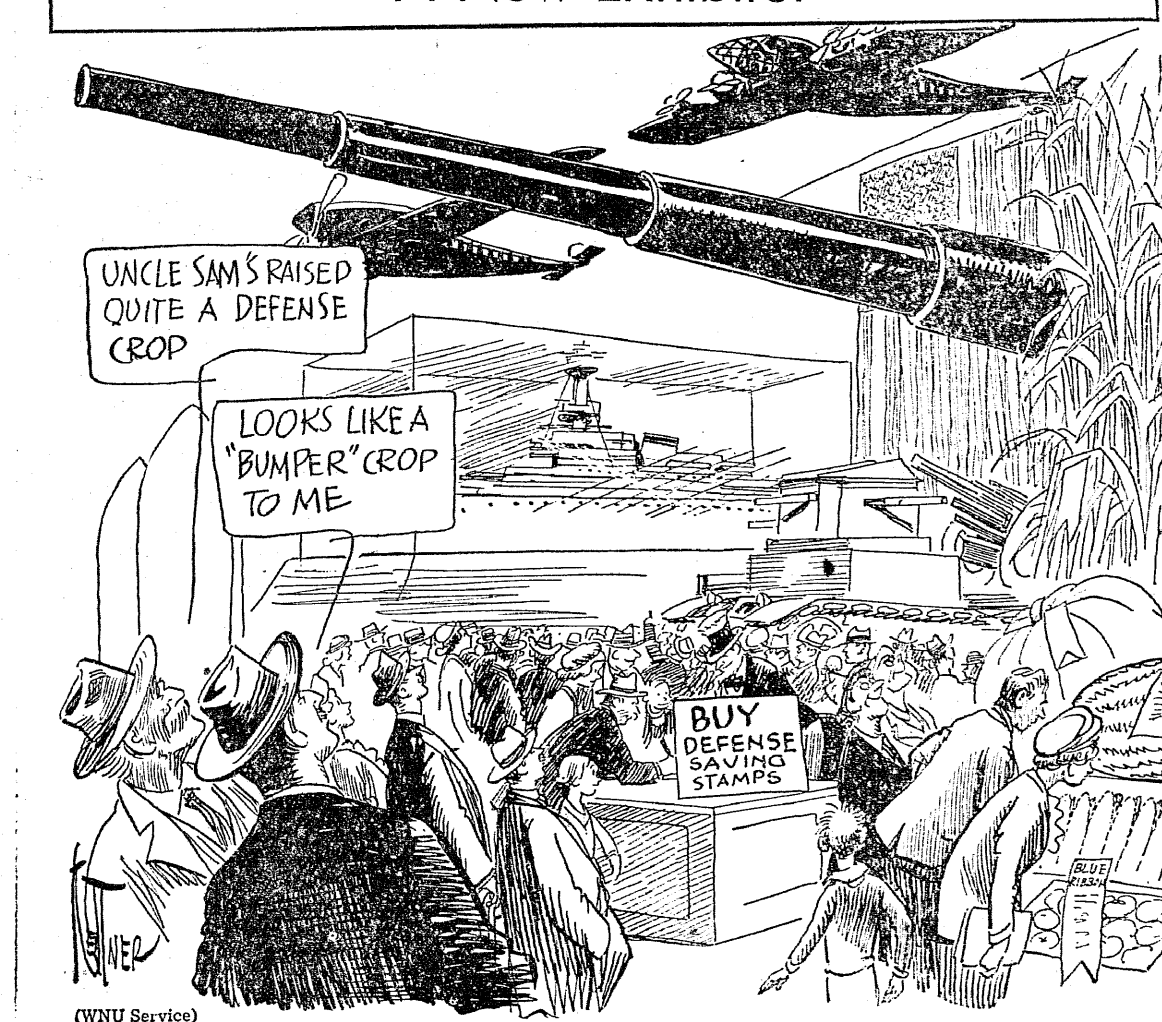

Keep Up The High Standard

When the end of the year rolls around it will go down in the record books as one of the best for the town real estate department. Property sales have exceeded the fondest expectations of those at Town Hall, but all past performances were capped last week when five prospective bidders kept raising the price on twenty town-owned lots until it finally reached the $9,200 figure. The town had set $6,643 as the minimum price.

The property will be used for building and emphasizes the desire of builders to secure property in good residential sections for erecting homes. The action of the town board in demanding a good price for property is wise for it not only brings more revenue into the town treasury but it prevents the town from falling prey to the speculative builder of low-priced homes which have been mushroomed recently in a number of nearby communities. While the town is not in the real estate business, it should not give property away and it is good to see that the board has adopted the policy of making buyers pay a fair price.

A New Exhibitor

ESSEX COUNTY POLITICS

The views expressed in this column, are entirely those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Publishers or Editors of the Belleville News.

by Meador Wright

"Poor visibility with impending storms" is the way a weather report for New Jersey's government would read. Most spectacular thing on the horizon is the investigation of the State Highway Department by a committee headed by Roger Hinds of South Orange. This column for the past year or so has commented repeatedly on the vicious political alliance between Highway Commissioner Sterner and the New Jersey legislature, particularly the Senate.

At the risk of tiring readers by repetition it has pointed out that the department was being run on a basis of political perpetuation rather than business efficiency. In this, the highway department is not unique. Other departments of the government have a similar complexion. But the highway budget of more the fifty million dollars makes such a practice much more serious.

Here is a vast organization that has almost irresistible means for corruption at its disposal if it chooses to so use them. That it has used those resources at least subversively was shown when the Senate in plain and brazen violation of both constitution and precedent not only refused to confirm Governor Edison's nomination of William L. Dill to succeed Mr. Sterner, but announced that during the "present emergency" no other nominee would be confirmed no matter how worthy.

To hard-boiled realists this Senate declaration was nothing less than that body's payoff to a political racket, and I still marvel that public opinion took it as calmly as it did. Now there are rather sinister intimations that more than political pressure has been exerted within the highway department. Certainly Mr. Sterner and his assistants are acting as though there is a great deal that they would like to hide from the public. Hinds is a relentless inquisitor and what dirty linen there is will no doubt soon be hanging on the Trenton clothes line. Whether this will come out early enough or in sufficient volume to influence the November election is problematical. But there is enough potential dynamite here to blow the lid completely off New Jersey's archaic and politics-ridden state government.

Distinguishing Is Hard Just how such an explosion would react as between the two tion of the response. But Edison's hands will be tied then by an archaic constitutional provision that no governor can succeed himself in office. As I have emphasized again and again, there is no hope for genuine governmental reform in New Jersey except by the difficult road of a constitutional convention.

Stringfellow Plan

George E. Stringfellow, who tried hard to get the heterogeneous elements hostile to Clean Government into an effective opposition, and who was mainly responsible for withdrawing opposition when he saw it would not be effective, has in mind to plan a program and perfect an organization that in some measure will match those of Clean Government. The biggest problem he will have to face is in getting unified support even for such a research organization as he visualizes.

As a matter of fact, opposition to Clean Government in Essex is almost as badly disorganized as is the opposition to Hague in Hudson County, although for different reasons. I doubt that it will be possible even in a year to build any organization that can seriously challenge Clean Government. What can be built is a critical and civically conscious nucleus that would serve as a potential rallying point for certain elements now within the Clean Government fold.

But such a group would lose its effectiveness if it set out to build an opposition. Then it would only be bidding against Clean Government for the support of various factions not now definitely identified. Since it has patronage and power, Clean Government could out-bid. But this very patronage and power is a liability as well as an asset. The new organization should play for the independent voter and never mind the professional leaders. They will all go to the side than can offer them the most milk and honey, anyway.

The Woman's Desk

by PEGGY PATTERSON

This is the week that opens one of the most familiar phases of the year. Strange, isn't it, how even adults mark time by the opening of school? Even though they may have become accustomed to the merciless demands of adulthood they still, interiorly, have a feeling of release during vacation time. Club activities cease, trade changes its complexion and amusements reach a low ebb.

"Oh, it will be different when vacations are over — when school opens again," they say. And the thought is weighted with solemn import. For this formal method by which we strive to aid nature in forming rugged men and women where carefree children once stood, to create generations especially fitted for the burdens which we can see will be theirs, this schooling is one of the most compelling forces of our existence. Of sufficient weight, moreover, to control the material "seasons" of our lives.

The fact that the subjects of education are not very early aware of the aims and ideals of the regime puts an even greater stress on the adults under whose authority children enter upon their period of grooming. It is lamentable that many of them are still without positive motivation even at the conclusion of their formal schooling. But this is a problem which is the constant challenge of parents and teachers everywhere and even while a painstaking crusade is forming to solve it, there are other items, within the power of all parents, which should come up for consideration now.

In fact, we are more and more convinced that the various phases of a child's school days which are peculiar to the home — and over which the parents have complete control — are even more important than what is accomplished by the teaching staff. It will do no harm at any rate to make sure that these things are efficiently supplied to the best of one's ability before laying any of the blame for a wayward or uninspired student solely on his teacher.

Sympathy For Child

Some mothers, more than others, suffer pangs of sympathy for the little child first starting school or for the child who starts back without enthusiasm or even with rebellion and whom she believes to be the "misunderstood" child. And who would deny a child this maternal solicitude? For it is the bulwark of a child's existence and seldom, fortunately, oversteps the bounds until it has become the groundwork for a condition of helplessness.

However, at least a part of the energy devoted to it could safely be used by the mother in a campaign for the child's better health, better social instruction so that he would feel at ease with his fellows and a thorough examination of the scheme of things in her home to make positive that the child goes forward each day with the confidence in his family which cannot be replaced as one of the major items in his ultimate success.

The little child who has not attended kindergarten may be fairly content and easily acclimated in school if he knows that his brothers and sisters inhabit other classrooms and would be his protection, if necessary, against the formidable group in which he finds himself. The only child, however, has not this comfortable feeling and experts express the opinion that if such a child is unduly terrified his parent stay with him for a part of the school period until he sees, at the end of a few days, that he will be released without fail to the security of his own home.

Don't Take Him There

The older child, of course, about whom there may be some difficulty, should never be subjected to the humiliation of being accompanied to school. Conferences with his teacher and principal or vocational guidance instructor should be arranged without his knowledge and parents at these times, we believe, should make a supreme effort to look upon the

In a ladder chess tournament staged by the Belleville Chess Club among its members, Archibald MacIntyre was declared the winner, which gives him the current title of being the club's No. 1 man. He was trailed in the tourney by Peter Ventola, Harold E. White, Alfred Scattergood, George Kerr, John C. Alpaugh and George G. McSweeney.

Others who competed but did not play the required number of games were T. Kinsey Stevens, Harry A. Neilson, Edward Terwiller, Fred W. Ochs and Alfred Beecher. Although they took part in the tourney, Beecher and Terwiller are not members. Neilson is the club's youngest player, having been graduated from the high school in June.
