SPRING SALVAGE, CLEAN-UP WEEK BEGIN MAY 17

Combined Drives Will Emphasize Collection of Metal Of All Kinds

The Spring Salvage Drive in conjunction with annual Clean-Up Week, will start off with a bang on May 17, taking tally on who is helping to provide the most armaments for our fighting men.

This drive is strictly a metal drive and will include no other kind of scrap. No rags, paper, tin cans, or rubber will be acceptable. The committee is only after metal at this time. The drive has been scheduled for May 17, since that is officially Clean-Up Week and Commissioner King of the Department of Public Affairs, along with Eugene Berry of the Health Department, are working in conjunction with the Salvage committee, by permitting metal to be collected at the same time that refuse is collected.

Householders are asked during this week to separate their metal from the refuse so that the town trucks, under the supervision of James Waters, road superintendent, may collect it separately. Each of the collection areas in town will be covered by town trucks. These trucks will pick up metal on the first collection day of the two collections made for refuse. Hence, if refuse is collected Tuesday and Thursday, metal must be placed at the curb separately from refuse on Tuesday which is the first collection day for that area.

Clean-Up Week is devoted not only to clearing out houses and yards so that the town will look better but it is also for the purpose of finding the needed metal which must be available if we are to make a dent on the enemy. Last year's spring housecleaning pretty well cleaned up the attics of most homes but there are still many cellars with contents that would be fit for seizure if the salvage committee were able to see into them.

Attics, which haven't already been stripped of every vestige of material which would be dangerous in an air raid or which would be useful as salvage, should now be given the once over.

Cellars can be havens of salvage materials too. Perhaps there are ash cans which have seen their day or there may be old stoves, and worn boilers in the cellar. The cellar is an excellent hideaway for all sorts of metal and more can possibly be dug out yet.

Commissioner King asks that it be done. Air raid wardens will assist the block leaders in distribution of pamphlets next week which will explain what, when, where, how and why this metal drive is important. The leaflets will be to householders and it is hoped that they will be read thoroughly. Since there may not be enough to go around those who receive to their neighbors when they have finished reading them.

The lot for dumping the metal has not yet been decided upon but an attempt is being made to choose one which will not be in a residential section so that the appearance of surrounding property will not be destroyed.

The old lot at Cortlandt and Little streets will be discarded and other salvage materials and the tin cans collected will be dumped in the new lot along with the metal but other materials will be kept separate from the metal. The metal drive is under the supervision of Charles Nutt and Daniel Kelly, aided by the Departments of Public Affairs and Public Works.

"Trip the Light Fantastic" For B.H.S. Juniors After All

After much consideration on the part of the faculty and student members it was decided that over and above the high school throughout the year, a Junior prom could be held, after all.

In order to keep up the recreation facilities of the students the High school faculty will permit the event. Morale building, they call it, and the students think that is a good name for it.

The prom will be held as usual in the Boys' gym on May 21 and tickets will go on sale next week by members of the Junior class and the Junior prom committee.

CANNING GROUP WILL MEET SOON

High School Economics Room Will Be Location of Work Shop Demonstration

A group of 24 women under the Nutrition committee of the Defense council will meet in the High school Economics Department on May 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to take part in a work class and demonstration in canning.

The demonstration and work program will be under the supervision of Mrs. Margaret Shepard of the Essex County Extension service, who will demonstrate the various types of canning and the foods which are most economical and suitable.

The government has asked that every housewife can at least 100 quarts of food per person so that the victory garden produce will not go to waste and the fresh fruits and vegetables available for the ration point will be used to the greatest extent.

Fifteen women have already enrolled in the course and as it is possible to accommodate only 24 for a work group, those interested are asked to register as soon as possible to accommodate only 24 of the nutrition committee.

Much food goes to waste because housewives are ignorant of how to preserve it for future use. If every housewife was competent to can the amount urged by the government, growing food shortages would hold no fear for families and they would be assured of enough food to last them in any emergency.

Many of the victory gardeners who are now so earnestly attempting to grow fresh fruits and vegetables, should learn how to can their produce so that when they have succeeded in getting a crop they may benefit from it by putting some of it aside for future use.

Many housewives find that produce which they have canned was not done correctly and is not good by the time it is taken from jars for use. These mistakes and ways of correcting them will be pointed out by Mrs. Shepard who has given many demonstrations before. Work classes are a beneficial way of learning how to can with no mistakes and it is urged that more women apply for the class.

Physical Education Show At School Number Nine

In keeping with the trend of the times for emphasis on physical education, School No. 9 is giving a show made up of dances, games, tumbling, and boxing bouts, tomorrow evening, at 8:15, in the school auditorium.

This year's innovation is a girls' tumbling team made up of 12 young girls. Since there are no teachers who can teach tumbling, the girls were taught by an upper grade boy, Wilho Winika, who introduced tumbling at No. 9, is now in the U. S. Navy.

There are three tumbling teams made up of small boys, girls, and upper grade boys respectively. The boxing bouts, which created a great interest last year, will be on the program too. Herman Wische, High school physical education instructor, will referee the bouts.

Jeep Load of Bond "Salesmen"

AS A REWARD for the students and student leaders who did such a noble job on spurring along the purchase of bonds and stamps, this jeep was brought to the High school by Harold C. Dufford, acting principal, and J. Howard Fox of the faculty. A demonstration of jeep abilities was given and several hundred students witnessed the bumping, jumping, transportation of which the jeep is capable in a lot beside the high school. Those in the jeep in the front seat are Betty Cooke, and Pvt. Anderson of the Army; in the back seat, Mary Dailey, Clara Dougherty, Jean Walker and Aran Bruijan, who were leaders of the drive for different classes.

Over A Million Subscribed In Second War Loan Drive

Kids See Sample of What Bonds Will Buy When Jeep Visits Schools

Although the Second War Loan is scheduled to run another two weeks, purchases already have reached a goal of $1,745,122 for the month of April.

The First National Bank held a total of $1,306,050 while the People's Bank reports $347,900. The total for all the schools remained about the same at a $76,000 figure while the High school raised its purchases to total 130,000 for the month.

The High school outfit itself on the drive and managed to double the amount of jeeps they planned to buy in the beginning to reach a total of 28 jeeps. The jeep which came to the High school last Wednesday brought with it an added sale of bonds and stamps. One class in the High school totaled $2,900 alone. The class was room 309 of which Miss Condon has charge. The average per room was close to $700.

The junior class led in purchase of jeeps with eight and a half while the sophomores followed with eight and a third. The freshmen purchased close to six, and the seniors purchased five. The jeep visited a few elementary schools last Wednesday and finished its tour of schools two, three, four, and nine yesterday. The jeep was brought to Belleville for the benefit of those students and student leaders who had led in the bond drive in the High school, Harold C. Dufford, acting principal and Howard J. Fox of the faculty arranged for the jeep to visit the High school while Mr. Parmer took the jeep on a tour of the grammar schools.

The High school purchased

$19,80 worth of stamps at a dance held in the gymnasium last Wednesday afternoon. The schools made a valiant effort in the bond drive and will continue to buy bonds and stamps in their usual proportion for the rest of this month, and the succeeding time.

TIN COLLECTION NETS 20 TONS

Nearly Doubles All Previous Hauls As State Total Continues To Climb

With scrap collections in New Jersey up 107,648,041 pounds for the month ending April 20, Belleville came well along with the state to drag in 20 tons of tin cans last Thursday during the monthly collection date. This figure is nearly double any previous monthly returns with the exception of the haul made in February which did not count since it contained part of January's collection, and amounted to 14 tons.

New Jersey has been leading the country in tin can collections for some time, and Belleville shows signs of following suit now that delivery charges have been adjusted and the weather is better. It was expected that tin can collections would go down this month due to the fact that housewives were not able to buy as much canned food as they might previously have used. They still seem to be spending points on cans however, and as long as they do, they are asked to prepare their tins for salvage.

After complaints had reached the Salvage committee that cans were rusting in the dump lot at Cortlandt and Little streets and that they were strewn over the sidewalk and street due to failure of collection, it was suggested by the committee that the volunteer hauling trucks worked would have to be shelled while the town did its own hauling to the Gutinning plant at Sewaren.

However, the matter was cleared up when two five-ton trucks from one beverage company picked up cans for a trip to the plant last Thursday and it was expected that two or three more would be in Belleville yesterday to clean up the entire lot. The trucks due yesterday were to be sent by Commissioner Waters' department of Public Works.

This was a surprise collection for the committee and it is hoped that the next collection which will fall during the Spring Salvage drive, will result in as large a total.

Belleville's increase in fat and tin can salvage came as no surprise to defense coordinator, Harry J. Sullivan, who traced the rise to recent activity of the Block leaders.

"The American public" said Sullivan, "demands to know the reason why before it will do anything." Consequently, he felt that the distribution of circulars recently carried out by the Block leaders, covering the Government side of the salvage picture, aided in the recent salvage rises and proved that the Block leader is essential to civilian defense.

They are to be congratulated on the manner in which they carried out their assignment," Sullivan said, adding that "I hope the many people who can do this work, will volunteer immediately, in order to give complete coverage throughout the town."

Applications for Block leaders will be received at the Defense Office at the town hall or through George Weston, chairman of the Block leader plan.

FOOD FITNESS DATES ARE SET

Public Service Home Demonstrations Will Be Held During May and June

The Food For Fitness program which has been instigated for the purpose of helping housewives prepare meals for war workers and keep up a balanced diet for the family, will go into operation at school No. 8 on May 18, 25, and June 1 and 8.

This course is under the supervision of Miss Della Cordery, of the Public Service, which is installing equipment to be used in the demonstrations. Anyone interested in preparing better, more economical and more interesting food, is invited to attend these demonstrations. The classes are not limited to women, but men or members of the manufacturers group who wish to observe the means of providing nutritious food are also invited to attend.

The program is not commercial and is put on under the auspices of Public Service to help housewives plan well-balanced meals. The demonstration will concern preparation for the main meal of the day and lunches for war workers.

Since health and stability are the main requisites for anyone who is working for the nation, food plays an important part in their daily living and Miss Cordery will demonstrate the kinds

RATION BOARD WILL APPOINT NEW PRICE PANEL

Will Have Educational Role In Giving Information To Stores, Consumers

A price panel will be appointed soon for the Belleville, war price and ration board according to Herbert C. Schmutz, local ration head, in accordance with the State OPA request that a panel similar to that of the ration panel, be set up by all local boards as soon as possible.

The price panel is being set up to give the people in each community and aid boards in setting up panels and in training volunteer price assistants. Schmutz has been in conference with the Newark OPA officials this week in an effort to set up a plan whereby Belleville can operate.

It was suggested by the OPA that a five man panel be set up with members selected from representative groups in the community such as teachers, bankers, lawyers, and a representative of the labor union.

According to Schmutz, the OPA is now thinking of setting up a 10 man panel since the work will be so heavy.

Defense councils have been asked to cooperate with the local boards by assisting in educational and compliance work through a group of volunteer price assistants. The function of the panel will be to examine complaints of OPA violations and make the necessary adjustment. The panel would operate on enforcement matters only after a complaint is made from one of the consuming public. The compliance powers of the board are solely those of securing voluntary adjustment.

To Be Separate Panel

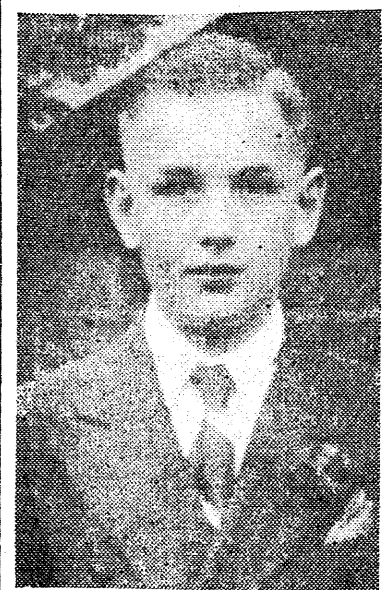

Schmutz stated that the local price panel would be entirely separate from the rationing panel if possible since the work of the price panel would not infringe on that of the ration panel. He said he thought the OPA regulations should be strictly enforced while the OPA felt the panel should operate only in an adjustment capacity.

The mailing of Ration Book 3 containing unit stamps will begin late in June and end on July 21, according to the OPA. With a post card application plan worked out by Price Administrator Brown, every person who holds a Ration Book Two will receive a Book Three. The application forms which are good for an individual or for a family, will be dropped in every mail box by postmen.

There will be no registration in the schools as there was during the allotting of Books One and Two. In order to receive a copy of Book Three, the application form must be filled out and re-

Boy Scout Receives Badge At Rotary Luncheon This Week

George Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart of 358 DeWitt avenue, and member of Boy Scout Troop 350 at Fewsmithe Memorial Church, became an Eagle Scout yesterday when the Eagle badge was presented to him at the Rotary club's luncheon meeting at Forest Hill Field club.

George Stewart

District Scout Chairman W. Douglas Clark introduced Henry Minasian, local chairman of scout advancement, who explained the requirements of an Eagle scout and pointed out the steps which must be taken to attain this rank, the highest a boy can earn. It is seldom awarded to so young a scout. George received his badge from Robert D. Smith, assistant scout executive of Robert Treat Council and advisor to scouting in Belleville.

George, whose 15th birthday will occur this month, has earned the necessary 21 merit badges to gain the Eagle award in three years of scouting. Included are awards for proficiency in camping, canoeing, life saving, cooking, forestry, first aid, personal and public health, basketball, book-binding, other crafts and several nature badges. He spent the past three summers at Scout Camp Mohican near Blairstown.

The young scout is completing his freshman year in high school and was previously graduated from Greylock school. He has spent much free time at zoos and museums of natural history. He hopes to undertake studies which will lead him to a career in natural science.

George was born in Massachusetts. The Stewarts have lived in Belleville for seven years. They have a younger son, Robert, and daughter, Grace. Mr. Stewart is with the W. T. Grant Stores.

Elwood Volpe Graduates As Engineer From Stevens

Elwood Redder Volpe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Volpe of 135 Smallwood avenue, was graduated Saturday with a class of 116 students at the 71st annual commencement at Stevens Institute of Technology. He received his degree in mechanical engineering.

Forty members of the class are in the enlisted reserve corps of the armed forces, principally in the Navy, while the others will take positions with war industries immediately upon graduation.

INCIDENT TESTS IMPROVE WITH MORE PRACTICE

Volunteers Needed For Ambulance Corps to Help With Transportation

Tonight's incident test of the Civilian Defense force will take place in Zone 1, at which time air wardens, police reserves, demolition squads, the decontamination squads at the town garage, the fire reserves, operating from the William Street fire house, evacuation squads, the zone center in St. Peter's school and the casualty station at School No. 1, whose personnel will be amplified by the First aiders from St. Peter's, the Exempt firemen's and School No. 1 will report for duty.

All personnel are required to be on their post at 7:15 p.m. Incidents will start at 7:30 and run until 8:30 p.m. In the event of rain the fire whistle will sound signal 14 at 7 o'clock to call off the test. In such an event, the test would be held on next Thursday evening at the same hour.

In last week's test the fire reserves had an opportunity to use the new OGD skid-mount pump, which had been set up on one of the town's older engines and they proved it a success.

An improvement was noted in the time of arrival of the police reserves and much of this improvement was due to the assistance of the evacuation group under Joseph Rauscher, which furnished transportation.

ARP Functioned Well

The warden organization performed in splendid style and, in the case of a new type of incident staged for the first time, in which trench flares were lighted to simulate incendiary bombs, the wardens were disconcertingly prompt in their extinguishers.

The use of first aiders in a casualty station was also praised as it gave the first aiders an opportunity to work under "fire" for the first time.

During the test a defect arose which has already been corrected. These columns, namely, that ambulance drivers are needed. There was some delay at various times during the test due to the shortage of ambulance personnel. A serious condition would exist if this should occur during a real raid. An appeal is again made, therefore, for anyone who is a licensed driver, not now engaged in Civilian Defense, to volunteer for the ambulance service.

Applications can be made to the Defense office in the Town Hall, or to L. McCloskey, 51 Campbell avenue.

Next week, Zone 5 will be tested, at which time the defense personnel of that zone, including the casualty station at School No. 4 will operate. The first aiders from the Silver Lake Community house, St. Anthony's church and the Friendly house will be given a chance to work out of the casualty station and their first aid stations will remain closed during this incident test.

Canners, Kettles, and Jars

By Mrs. Margaret C. Shepard
Essex County Home Demonstration Agent

Are you, as a wise homemaker, planning to take inventory of your canning equipment before early asparagus and rhubarb are ready to can or freeze? On the basis of that check, know accurately what additional equipment if any, you will need for the coming canning season.

Even the homemaker who has never canned before will discover that most of the cooking equipment she needs is already in the kitchen. Besides knives, shears, measuring cups, vegetable brushes, long-handled spoons, ladles, and a shallow pan to hold jars while filling them, you will need a large preserving kettle, a jar funnel and jar tongs. Twenty-four-inch squares of cheesecloth or some similar material are useful as blanching cloths both for canning and preparing vegetables for freezing.

This equipment is adequate for preparing food for freezing, and for the openkettle method of canning — the method by which tomatoes or fruits are cooked completely before packing them in sterile jars. If you plan to use the hot-pack method for tomatoes and fruits, in which they are only heated in hot water or syrup for a few minutes, packed into jars, and then processed or cooked to complete the sterilization, you will need a hot water bath canner. Formerly, such "canners" were available, but wartime restrictions on metals make it necessary to improvise a hot water bath out of a wash boiler, a tub, or a large kettle deep enough to hold an inch of water above the top of quart jars. Provide a rack of wooden slats or of wire to keep the jars off the bottom of the container.

Pressure Cooker Best

The same hot water bath method may be used to process non-acid vegetables which are packed hot. However, a pressure cooker is the more desirable device for processing and sterilizing non-acid vegetables such as peas, beans, corn, greens, asparagus, beets and carrots, and meats. Only a pressure cooker gives positive assurance that harmful bacteria are destroyed. If any foods that have been processed in a hot water bath are boiled for 10 minutes before they are tasted or served, the hot water bath may be substituted for the pressure cooker when no such cooker is available.

At the beginning of the canning season, it is always wise to dismantle the safety valve on the cooker to see whether it is clean and operating properly. Getting all parts back in their original positions is not difficult if you notice the function of each part as you dismantle the valve. The accuracy of the pressure gauge needs checking yearly, also.

Many home canners like to use their regulated ovens to process tomatoes and fruits. But before you use your oven for that purpose, have its thermostat checked by a utilities service man to make certain that it will maintain a constant temperature of 250 degrees Fahrenheit.

If you have old jars, you can plan to use them again after examining them carefully for sharp edges, cracks, and nicks that would interfere with a perfect seal. If you are tempted to supplement this supply with peanut butter and mayonnaise containers, set aside for jelly and jam those that will not accommodate a regular lid of this type that you do save should be treated carefully because they have not been conditioned to sudden changes in temperature, as have those made specifically for canning purposes.

Metal Discs Available

A few companies are now supplying new metal discs filled with a sealing compound, for their own coffee and mayonnaise jars. If your grocery store does not have these discs, write to the company directly. They usually cost a penny apiece.

Contrary to many false rumors, there will be an adequate supply of new jars on the market. That supply is sufficient only if each homemaker buys exactly the number she needs, however. One hundred quart jars filled with vegetables and fruits are ample to provide one member of the family a serving of a vegetable and a fruit every day during the winter. Rather than discover an old lid that will not seal on a jar full of food, it is a good precaution to check the efficiency of your lids the day before the canning is to be done. Discarded ones may be donated to the metal salvage pile. You will not be able to replace them with the familiar zinc tops. Instead, you will probably use a three-piece lid consisting of a flat glass disc-lid, a rubber ring, and a metal screw band. The rubber ring is shipped on the glass disc and then fitted to the smooth top of the jar. The screw band is left on to hold the ring firmly in place on the jar.

Besides this type of lid, the familiar metal disc and metal screw band are still on the market. The lightning-type jar with a glass top held down by a wire coil is also popular. This jar requires regular-sized rubber rings, too. By the way, the new rubber rings have no lips and are not so elastic as the pre-war rings. It is safe to use old jar rings in good condition provided their use is restricted to tomatoes, fruits and pickles.

Since some homemakers have equipment for canning in tin cans, an allotment of new cans is available. However, if you sell any of your home-canned foods in tin cans, there is a definite restriction on the number of cans you may have.

In our concern to be ready for canning and freezing, it is easy to forget that there are other ways of preserving food, too. For instance, cabbage and root crops may be stored in a root cellar or pits outdoors. Beans are dried and stored in a dry, cool place along with winter onions. Your grandmother put snap beans and corn down in brine, and you, too, may follow the same procedure. Every alternate way you can find to preserve food will save jars, and frequently it will save time as well.

Clapper, Well-Known Columnist, Begins Another Global Trek

Ray Clapper, won his journalistic spurs more than a quarter century ago. From a cub reporter on the Kansas City Star, after attending the University of Kansas, he joined the United Press in 1916 and after working in Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and New York came to Washington, D. C. in 1918.

For 18 years he watched the Washington scene and interpreted the passing show in terms of the millions of men and women who send the politicians to the nation's capitol. In 1941, Ray Clapper flew to London and observed the war time condition in the British Isles for several weeks. Last year he flew more than 33,000 miles and faithfully recorded his impressions of war around the world. Several days ago he left Washington, and flew to Bermuda, to Lisbon and on to Stockholm, Sweden where he will report the way of life in a Nazi dominated neutral country. He dispatches in the New York World-Telegram

L. Langdon, district equipment superintendent for the company. Manger is a telephone installer, service, and a member of the Telephone Pioneers of America. All of his service has been in Newark and vicinity.

Only a Free Press Can Tell the Truth

FREEDOM to think, to talk, to publish, is a priceless boon to mankind. It is a privilege too many of us take for granted. We do not properly appreciate its importance.

There are those in this world, however, who risk their lives — those who die — that the truth may be told. In enslaved Europe Hitler's Gestapo cannot stamp out Free Press. They may kill men and women but others spring up to carry on their underground journalism. The retention of our Freedom of the Press, as well as Freedom of Speech, of Religion, of Assembly, and of Individual Enterprise, is essential to the preservation of this nation. And when the postwar era dawns we shall appreciate the value of these Freedoms in the rebuilding of a world torn by conflict.

Community Service Bureau Gives Example Of Its Work

THE CASE OF MR. MARLOWE

(The last in this series of articles of the community Service Bureau presents a case which shows the value of the agency's budgeting service, which is used by a great many people. In fact, statistics show that budgeting is part of the plan of assistance in one out of every four cases. Budgeting is much more than the ability to handle figures. Frequently it involves getting and keeping a job and seeing to it that personal problems don't interfere with the job, as they did for Mr. Marlowe.)

Mr. Marlowe's budget was an amazing thing — wonderful as to detail. It was on several neatly bound pages. It included headings and sub-headings for every item and for each member of the family: Mrs. Marlowe, Thomas, Jr., and even baby Marlowe. There were three different colors of ink and the expenditure for the ink was already entered under a special heading called "Ink for Budget."

was to be so meticulously accounted for, was $20.00 a week. The Community Service Bureau case worker examined the budget with some surprise. The week before she had helped the family work out the basis for a budget. They had sat at the dining-room table, covering sheets of paper with figures, consulting each other at every point, until the Marlowes had discovered — perhaps for the first time in their lives — exactly how their income was being spent. They had agreed, when the visit or left, that she would return within a week to see how the family had decided to apportion their income.

Full-fledged System

The worker had not expected to find a full-fledged accounting system. But Mr. Marlowe never did anything by halves — unless it was to earn. He did have some slight difficulty in that direction as evidenced by his record of seven different clerical jobs in three years.

As the discussion inevitably swung around to the question of employment, the head of the house confessed his bewilderment at the way every office manager resembled every other. He called them "bosses" and they were "all alike." "They couldn't take suggestion," he said. Mr. Marlowe had reason to know, he assured the visitor; he had made countless suggestions to countless bosses and the bosses had all reacted precisely the same way; amused dis-interest; followed by annoyance which was followed, in time, by impatience and anger. Somewhere along this line, Mr. Marlowe usually had to find a new job. He had just gone to work for a new company. "Just a clerk," he said deprecatingly.

But already his new boss was acting true to type. A suggestion he had made that day had been turned down abruptly. "He didn't even listen to it," said Mr. Marlowe, aggrieved. "And why? Because he said I was a clerk and didn't know what I was talking about."

Keeping the help with the budget as a point of contact, the social worker stood by the family during the life of this job, which was a matter of a few months, and was on hand when a new job was found. It was not difficult for Marlowe to make new connections, it seemed. He was careful in his appearance, spoke well, smiled easily and knew his clerical duties. "It's just another job as a clerk," he said.

It became increasingly apparent to the case worker that Mr. Marlowe's ideas were not all bad; some of them seemed excellent. The difficulty was that they had no connection with his job as a bookkeeper. He did his work well, but in addition he wanted to run the entire concern.

Vast Optimism

The expansiveness of his own ideas and his confidence in himself led to vast optimism as to his ultimate success. Mr. Marlowe was positive that some day he would encounter a boss who would recognize his true worth. On the strength of this confidence the family forever was using refrigerators, living room suites and similar expensive items — and forever losing them by repossession.

Mrs. Marlowe was quite patient about it. She told the social worker once that "Tom wants to be a big shot, that's what the matter with him. Maybe he could be too — but he won't serve his apprenticeship first." A pretty clear-headed grasp of the situation!

There came a day when the budget discussion, dealing as it did with incontrovertible facts, penetrated the barrier of Mr. Marlowe's optimism. "It could all be worked out if I could only earn a decent salary," he said, plaintively. "But clerks don't ever make any money. All I ever get is clerk's jobs. Why can't I ever get to be somebody?"

The case worker finished adding up her column of figures before she answered. Then she said "Clerks have a pretty big job to do these days, it seems to me. With all the information business has to get for the government, all the records that have to be kept that were never kept before, I should think business would be in an awful mess if it weren't for good, dependable clerks."

A New Idea

The budget discussion continued for some time, but Mr. Marlowe's attention was not really on it. The worker could almost see him turning the new idea about in his mind. He was unusually quiet until just before she left. Then he said: "You know, that's true, what you said a while ago. About how important those records are that we clerks keep."

"We clerks" was a big new word to him. He had to roll it around a little, reflectively to be sure he liked it. "We clerks," he repeated, with more confidence, and went on, "We have to get things right. We can't afford to be careless. So much depends on our figures, these days. Why, you take the P & S ledger now."

Mr. Marlowe, of course, is an excellent clerk. His responsibilities on his new job will not increase very rapidly. But his income will expand a little as time goes on, for his nature is better suited to doing a job thoroughly and meticulously — as witness his first budget — than it is to the broader complexities of the boss's job.

His trouble had always been a deep-seated need to win the respect of his superiors. Until such respect was granted him openly in the form of reiterated praise, he was not able to grant respect to himself. So often his superiors had told him that he was "only a clerk," that he had come to believe that clerical work itself carried some special odium, that adhered to anyone who came in contact with it. In the only way he knew he tried to set himself apart from his fellow clerks — and apart from the work itself — by offering suggestions connected with work that was not his responsibility.

Once he became aware that the work he did had a genuine importance in the scheme of things he accepted that importance for himself, he began to respect himself. And he could then turn his considerable experience to the work in hand and do it well, and find satisfaction in the doing. Such men are valuable!"

Over-burdened Long-distance Lines

The greatly taxed facilities of the telephone company are continuing to be over-burdened with long distance calls. Typical of war-time conditions when business activity breaks all normal bounds, is the situation in which the phone company finds itself and which it is helpless to remedy.

For, in order to meet the heavy demands of civilian businesses put to war-time production as well as Army and Navy requirements, great amounts of new equipment would have to be installed. And, because of priorities and general scarcity of the very materials which would be necessary for expansion, the phone company is unable to adjust to the new load.

It is making another appeal to all users to avoid making long distance calls to centers of military, governmental and industrial activity unless the calls are absolutely necessary. "Circuits to war-busy areas have become so crowded," the company reports,

"that delays on calls are more and more frequent. The best way to make room for the rising volume of war messages is for everyone to avoid unnecessary calls and to be brief when making necessary ones."

In spite of the fact that last year's traffic was record-breaking, calls from New Jersey to Washington, Norfolk, Richmond, Atlanta, St. Louis and Cleveland have all increased more than 50 percent. More than 1,500,000 long distance connections were completed for New Jersey telephone users in the first three months of this year, nearly half a million more than in the first quarter of last year and over double the number in the first quarter of 1941.

All of which is proof that cooperation is needed. A letter can often convey the necessary information in time, and thus leave the lines open for the more vital messages that are now being delayed because of over-burdening of available facilities.

Jeeps and More Jeeps For Victory

If patriotic young America is typified by Belleville's students in their April war bond and stamp drive, the country need not question the fate of the coming generation.

Although the kids from the knee pants stage through high school have been systematically converting their allowances into the kind of stuff that will beat the Axis, their showing during the past month has been well worth bragging about. In order to get their families and their friends more vitally interested too, the kids have been allowed to include adult purchases in their totals.

If they stopped to do a little mental arithmetic the other day when that Army jeep was cavorting in front of the high school, they would have discovered that they have been responsible for the purchase of over 83 of the modern puddle jumpers in thirty days.

Doubtless the teen-age boys, mindful of the not-too-distant day when they may be driving the same conveyances, did a whole-hearted job in swelling the total. For they and Belleville's representatives already in service realize more than most, how much it takes to provision an army for victory.

Home Front Casualties Serious

Although the casualties are growing on the battlefronts, those among workers at home have rolled up an even more alarming total for the country since Pearl Harbor. The National Safety Council has announced that casualties at home since that well-remembered December 7 are 10 times as great as those sustained in battle.

The total accident toll here including workers and others, has reached 128,000 and about 13,000,000 injured. This, compared to the figure of 78,235 in the war zones, which includes 12,123 reported dead, 15,049 wounded and the remainder declared either missing, prisoners of war or interned in Axis nations.

We all know the sadness and heartache which accompanies news of those killed in defense of their country, for Belleville has had her share considered in ratio to the towns' population. But the alarming and unnecessary loss of lives and war production through accidents far from battlefields is something over which we have or should have more control.

Also, we TEMPORARILY will be unable to accept any NEW BUSINESS. As soon as possible we will again take new trade in our FAMILY SERVICES, and an advertisement announcing that fact will be inserted in this paper.

Service To Youth

No less an authority than F.B.I. Chief J. Edgar Hoover reports this week on the alarming increase in juvenile delinquency and attributes this increase to the lack of recreational facilities and decreased home influence because of the numbers of parents engaged in war industries.

We agree with Edgar Hoover that there is a definite job for every community, to not only evince some interest in, but to do something about, combating this ever-increasing delinquency.

"The devil finds time for idle hands," quote the sage and we might add that if those hands be those of the youth in our community it behooves the adult generation to see that such hands and minds be healthily employed.

As important as post-war planning may be, it should be subordinated to the plans that confront us today with regard to the recreational education of youth.

The Township of Teaneck has taken a step in this direction with the Council signifying its intention to employ a year-round recreational director. The ground-work for this move has already been laid with a comprehensive program for summer and winter recreational activities among young folk.

The cost of continuing such programs and enlarging upon them should be secondary. The price of housing a juvenile delinquent in an institution of correction is almost $1,000 per year. If we're thinking of dollars and cents, that is a lot to pay; to say nothing of the fact that the majority who find their way to the school of reform could be reclaimed if the proper recreational facilities were made available to them.

To the crime-free communities that we like to think our neighborhoods to be, the talk of juvenile delinquency may seem like idle chatter. If there are any doubts to be entertained in this regard the police will banish them.

The responsibility for the actions of youth in these abnormal times is the responsibility of older minds. Let us do something about it and consider the price cheap, no matter what it may be. To again quote an authority, Mr. Hoover: "If we forget the moral needs of the next generation we have not fulfilled the trust placed in us."

What Price Governorship

When Morgan F. Larson was elected governor, he had spent his last cent for his campaign. When Harold G. Hoffman was elected governor, he too, went nearly bankrupt. Hoffman helped many, before and after and during his service as chief executive, did much charitable work and when his term expired, he hadn't saved a dime.

When A. Harry Moore ran for governor the first time and was elected, he couldn't save a cent. Private charity, helping this and that needy cause increased more and more when he was elected governor the second time and after this term expired, he couldn't save a cent.

When he was elected the third time, thousands of people were hit by depressions, many mayors, aldermen, commissioners, business executives, rich and poor were dead broke and rushed to him for jobs and he got most of them on WPA or relief jobs, equally divided among Democrats, Republicans and independents.

He helped many needy cases without any fanfare. Many people wrote letters to him even after his third term expired still seeking help and co-operation and jobs and he answered each and every letter which runs to thousands of dollars in postage stamps. He even had to drain from the fund of his law practice to help spread good cheer to all.

The result is that governors are so much besieged by people for jobs that their departments become glorified employment bureaus and the governors do not have the time to do other constructive work, to watch and supervise the workings of the various state agencies.

Part-Time Work

"Hats Off to Our Part-Time Workers" is the slogan of an advertisement of the Public Service appearing in the newspapers. It is a deserved tribute, and the employer of these part-time workers is also deserving of appreciation for bending with the time and changing employment policies in order to maintain service to the public.

Part-time work offers the greatest potential source of untapped labor power. Employers who have thoroughly surveyed their enterprise with a view to making maximum use of available part-time labor are altogether too few.

The failure of business and industry to make maximum use of available part-time labor is due, in part, to the exaggerated distinction popularly made between "war work" and "civilian work." The terms are misleading, because all useful work is helpful to the war effort. Essential civilian activities cannot be abandoned or unduly slighted without an adverse effect upon war production and the war services.

Because this exaggerated distinction is made, the great numbers of women and older people who have been recruited to the ranks of labor by patriotic appeals seek work only in war industries. Many of them are physically or emotionally unfit for full-time employment, and most of them find full-time employment in high-speed production too taxing.

These new workers, as a matter of fact, could be most useful to the country if they obtained part-time work of a nature less taxing on their physical and emotional well-being. Yet they do not feel attracted to enterprises that are not labelled "war work." Nor have managements in so-called civilian enterprises organized their operations for the employment of such part-time workers.

Everyone in this crisis should be doing something useful for his country, but opportunities appropriate to the capacities of each person should be provided by resourceful managements.

"YOU'VE DONE YOUR BIT NOW DO YOUR BEST!"

DURING the first year of our toughest war, we—

Trained millions of fighting men — made millions of dollars worth of fighting tools — built millions of tons of shipping to carry these men and tools to the fighting fronts.

And to help pay for it all, we bought War Bonds. Altogether, 50 millions of us bought War Bonds and nearly 30 millions of us started putting, on the average, 10 percent of our pay into War Bonds every payday through the Payroll Savings Plan.

That was a good start — a whale of a good start. But every American knows that it was only a start. Nobody would contend for a single instant that what we did in '42 is enough for '43!

Did we make 48,000 planes last year? Believe it or not — we did. But we've got to make 100,000 this year! Sure! We broke every record in the world last year, building 8 million tons of shipping. But everybody knows have either disappeared or are as "scarce as that the 18 million tons we're building this year isn't enough!

We've got to do more fighting this year. We've got to do more building, more training, more shipping—and more saving.

We've got to buy more War Bonds.

Is that too much to ask? Many of us are making more money than we have made for years. The things we'd like to buy with that money aren't there. So, why not put that money into War Bonds at good interest—$4 for every $3 when the Bonds mature? Money to help pay for the war — keep prices down — provide peacetime jobs and peacetime goods and a generally decent world for all of us when the war is won.

Chances are, you're already in the Payroll Savings Plan — buying War Bonds — doing your bit. But don't stop there. See if you can't boost your ante! Do your best!

How Millions of Americans Have Done Their Bit—and How They Can Do Better:

Of the 34 million Americans on plant payrolls, nearly 30 millions of them have joined the Payroll Savings Plan. (If you aren't in yet — sign up tomorrow!)

Those Americans who have joined the Plan are investing, on the average, 10 percent of their earnings in War Bonds. (If you haven't reached 10 percent yet—keep trying!)

BUT ....

America's income this year will be the highest in history: about 125 BILLION dollars! In spite of all taxes and price rises, the average worker will have more money than last year — more than ever before!

That is why Uncle Sam has a right to ask us, individually, to invest more money in War Bonds, through the Payroll Savings Plan. He asks us to invest not 10 percent or 15 percent or 20 percent, but all we can!

Writing letters to men in service has been a subject under discussion most frequently and yet one of the things, which the writers of such articles fail to stress, is the fact that letters to service men should and must include the ordinary details of living, as well as friendly gossip.

It is very nice, to write a newsy, homey letter, ignoring any unfavorable aspect of the war or of the boy's life in general, and ignoring your own problems, too. YES! Maybe the boys do like those letters. But if I were a boy that is not the kind of letter I would like to receive as a steady diet.

And since I am not a boy in service but only a correspondent with one, I must certainly shall not follow all the copy book maxims about writing letters to men in service.

After all, a man is fighting so that he can come back to what he left, or at least to come back to the same sort of life. That is, he thinks he is fighting for that reason. And maybe he is. But if he is, and he expects to come back to the same life, he will readily change his ideas if he hears from me.

Boys mustn't be allowed to think that they are fighting to protect their homes and their womanhood from change. They mustn't be allowed to expect no change. Any woman worth her salt is going to change with the war, as well as the man who is fighting for her. Women aren't going to sit back and continue to look demure and sweet while their men are protecting them. The women will start fighting in their own way and protect the men on the home front. They already have.

And protecting men on the homefront is not as simple as it sounds. Boys must understand that when they return from war there are going to be drastic changes taking place on the homefront and I think they should not be spared any of the unhappy details of the problems which are confronting all of us on the home front. Certainly a man has his own problems too and maybe we shouldn't burden him down anymore, so the articles say, but for the very reason that men have problems of their own, they will understand and sympathize with ours. I think too many of our fighting men, are spoiled; spoiled by doting friends, and relations, who are scared to death of telling Johnny any but the best news.

Well, if Johnny isn't a dope, he knows, and long ago found out, that life is no happy skimming from one cloud to another. You don't fool him much when you tell him that every thing is rosy back home. In fact, he is probably much more worried when you do than when you don't. Tell him the nasty facts.

When Johnny comes home he must not be allowed to think for a moment that he is through fighting. His fight will only have begun; for he has to pitch in and help bring the situation back to normal or better than normal.

Only through the sharing of problems can one expect to find a happy solution and if you don't tell your problems to Johnny he will return home to find that things have changed while he was gone and he will be hard pressed to keep up with the new ideas.

I firmly believe that Johnny should be told of every change taking place whether bad or good, so that he will not lose sight of the affairs of his country while he is fighting for that country in a different vein. The tremendous difference in the status of the nation between the time he leaves and the time he comes back will be enough to swamp him unless he is put in touch with that change.

For my part, Johnny will be told some of the struggles of civilian life and I shall not spare him the details of the good and the bad being done in the country he is fighting for. I'm fighting along as hard as Johnny is, even though I am not in mortal danger, I'm trying my best, and don't you think that I am going to pretend that he is protecting me in all my femininity. I'm going to tell him what I, and several million other people face, while he is off there with all the other men, fighting in another land.

I'm going to let Johnny know that I appreciate his efforts and I am also going to see that he thinks that he is the only one doing a good job, he is wrong. And I don't want Johnny to be wrong.

None of this "Mary got married, and Jo left yesterday" stuff. Ten to one, he has forgotten Mary and Jo anyway. I am going to ask him, what he expects to do about the post war world and if he doesn't answer, you can bet the fur will fly.

Social news can wait till I see Johnny personally, and when I set pen to paper I am going to make Johnny think, and that is what he wants to do. How can he respond to social news, when you don't know any of the men he knows? He can't. But if you ask him, what he expects to do, it will take him the rest of the war to answer it, and that's just what I'm aiming for.
