The overall total of $1,513,298 is an increase of $134,888 over last year. The fact that the Board had a surplus of $48,646 left over from a previous budget, indicates that the elimination of over $27,000 from the 1951 budget will not exactly hamper the business activities of the schools.

UNLICENSED DRIVER PAYS FINE OF $53

Newark Man Was Driving On Expired Learner's Permit; Two Speeders Pay $66

Henry Morgan of 180 Newton Street, Newark was fined $53 by Magistrate Edward Abramson last week for driving without a license. Morgan showed an expired learner's permit when stopped after a minor accident, that even the most skeptical officers found themselves enjoying it.

One of the most outstanding numbers of Miss Hillman's performance was her rendition of the "Music Box" in various styles ranging from Bach to Benny Goodman. She was so well liked that she was called back to stage for an encore. For this she related a brief story of her life and of her musical progress from when she was a child to the present, accompanying herself with the harp.

By the way, Mr. Kittle's plan for more attentive assemblies, which consisted of including one subject from each program, evidently didn't appeal to the students. It certainly didn't appeal to us, because we don't want to miss out on any of these programs.

You Might Know

It's that notorious '62 Chemistry class that is making history again! Due to a case of mistaken identity, things were really popping.

Janet Rudin didn't want to be outdone by Bert Rosenberg's popping a mere test tube, so she Schup up her whole experience.

As an anti-climax, George Piosa got into the act through a busted test tube. The class, when the experiments finally worked, afforded an unusual view as all dived for the windows and fresh air.

Does anyone know where gas masks can be bought cheap? If you do, please let Mr. Correll know so that he can supply all of his classes with them.

The Future Teachers of America Club has been busy making plans for its members to observe classes of their choice in the grammar schools. This will give them an idea of what to expect from the teachers' point of view.

C. of Bloomfield, won his first bout in the Newark Glove Tournament, Friday night with a sensational knockout of his opponent, Manuel Almira of Elizabeth, in 43 seconds of the first round. Shell Fund Still Needs $320

"Mac Lamb, chairman of the Varsity Club's "shell fund" reports that donations made recently have amounted to $64 but leaves a balance of $320 to be raised before the boat is delivered here in about two months time. The gift list is led by a $20 donation by Harold Crane. Five dollar contributions have been made by Edgar McCall, John Dailey, and Yudin, a three dollar donation by the Ideal Milk Bar, and two dollar gifts from Ed Schwager and Mrs. E. Hahn. Dollar contributions have been made by Crescent Press, Walter Spinning, Dreyers Drug Store, Nikashian Cleaners and Dryers, Belleville Paint and Wallpaper Co., Hahn's grocery, Belleville Floor Covering Co., Barner's Esso Service, and Ditty Claire Shoppe. Mac also has received $13 in anonymous contributions.

Writing on Mr. "W"

Mr. "W" at Belleville High School holds a high place in the athletic schemes of the town, and this year more than most others he is proving his real worth as a basketball coach of highest standard. Starting the season with two boys who went along for the ride with last year's otherwise victorious club, the Belleville High court mentor has put the Golden Boys right up among the better teams of the county and state before the half-way mark in the regular season has been reached.

His reputation as a court coach is by no means confined to us amateurs, but is a by-word among the gentlemen in his profession. So much so that last year the alumni of Panzer College of Physical Education recognized him as the alumnus of the school who has contributed most to the physical education as a career, and in the school of his employment. Ours came upon the heels of the exceedingly successful court campaign last year when not only once in the regular season and in two tournaments.

Some coaches have learned all they know about basketball out of books written by the masters of the game and play according to the rules of defense and offense as laid down by Phog Allen, and other college bigwigs. But Belleville's Wische got most of his tough way, playing in tough leagues almost every night of the week and twice on Sunday during his high school and college days.

In his own high school days at South Side, Newark, Jitty was a member of several Newark City League championship teams coached by Guido Cavallaro, whose theory of basketball was to throw up a million in hopes of making a thousand. Those South Side teams year after year entered the state tournament but, usually retired about the quarter final round when they had to meet the Pacific Wonder Five.

It was at South Side that Jitty first came in contact with Belleville, and in a state tournament game played at the Stanley Gymnasium at St. Benedict's Prep. The game ended at 2:30 in the morning with two players on the floor from each school, Les Armour at center for Belleville and Jitty Wische opposing him for South Side. "Armour had a sore leg and I was having a field day running away from him and scoring baskets," the coach recalls.

It seems there was a power failure somewhere along the line and on four different occasions during the progress of the game the lights in the gym went out for half hour or more. In the second half the Belleville players kept fouling out until there were only four players still eligible to play. With that Cavvie took one of the South Side boys off the floor. Another Belleville player fouled out and another Sunnysider left. It was really one for the books.

Wische would not recommend his own basketball to the youngsters of today, even though it did not seem to hurt him any. He played with a different team and a different group of players every night. In Hudson County he played one dribble and pass, with several other teams, such as the Newark Hebrews and the National Turners, and pro double dribble and in the Y. M. C. A. games the present dribble rules. He would represent the Young Men's Christian Association on Saturday night at Hackensack and the Young Men's Hebrew Association on Sunday night, playing with a variety of teams, including the Belleville Moose Club, the old pro team now occupied by the Spring Neckware Manufacturing Company on Washington Avenue, on other nights.

At South Side High School he made all-state running guard in basketball and all-star and finished second in the half mile in the state track meet. Besides his outside amateur, semi-pro and professional basketball (all played at the same time) he played end for the Orange Tornadoes in football for eight years, and recalls when at $25 per game he was one of the highest paid men on the ball club, often being paid off in the dark with folded money when the receipts didn't cover expenses.

He played his last football game in 1937 one month after joining the faculty at Belleville High School, against the New York Professional Giants. On one play he thought he had broken his leg and as he was lying on the ground he could see his teaching position going off the field on a stretcher. Fortunately for Mr. "W" and for Belleville High School it was only a severe jolt, but enough of one to convince Jitty that his playing days were over.

Despite the fact that he is head of the physical education department at Belleville High School, coach of basketball and golf and line coach of the football team, Mr. Wische does not exactly take it easy today. He has been a member of the central board of officials in both basketball and football for 20 years, and although since he became Ed Belinski's assistant in football he has not taken any Saturday games, he still works a few on Fridays and holidays. In basketball he manages to work about 35 college and high school games a season. Besides these activities he has charge of the Senior Recreation Basketball League on Mon-

Beirboys Find Hintside Tough, Nutley Easier

The Meeting Place

By Edger Jean Bracco

Do you know what a mapophile is? Well, I didn't either, until just now, when I made the word up. "Phi" is from the Greek, meaning "loving." Therefore a mapophile is a person who loves maps. Or, as in my case, and as my friend Sam once put it—a map-fend.

It rained most of yesterday, a thin steady drizzle that after a while began to make the earth look dreary and miserable. Just after supper I went into the living room and looked around. A man with many interests, on a wet, chilly night when going outdoors is a forbidding thought, can glance around and ask himself, "Now, which of many pleasurable things can I do tonight?" The choice is full of possibilities. But the man of limited interests—he sits in his chair for a while, bored stiff, and finally falls asleep.

I built up the fire in the living room, then scratched my head. There were many things I could do—read, listen to records, go down to my workshop, read poetry aloud to Rose in my expressive voice—which she says has as much emotion and passion as water dripping from a faucet.

I wandered idly to the bookcase. My eyes fell on the leather-bound back of my world-atlas. For the next few hours, I opened the bottom drawer of my desk. They piled out at me—folded maps, rolled maps, squashed maps. I've been saving them for years and have a collection I'm proud of—although that will have meaning only for another mapophile.

The finest source of maps, without doubt, is the National Geographic Society. I've been a member for years, and every few months they issue a new map—a large, well-colored thing that, when opened, makes it necessary to spread it on the floor. I came by most of my foreign maps that way. I have a beauty of Australia which brought home to me that the continent—with all due respect to the Australians—consists of nothing more than a border of cities enveloping a vast and sandy emptiness. The important cities are on the coast, and inland the map is dotted with names such as Gibson Desert, Great Victoria Desert, Sandy Desert. Although it's big, I think I'd rather swim around it than walk across it.

To prove that you can learn something from everything you do, I know now, as I didn't before, that the Australian continent contains the towns of Wooroonooka and Wollongong. Can never tell when I'll be on Information Please, or, to improve others with my culture, I can spring it at some gathering, after a casual glance at my fingerlings. "By the way, has any one been to Wooroonooka lately?"

Reminds me of a well-meaning but not-too-enthralling boy I know. One day he snatched his book, stood up, walked around, then whirled suddenly, pointed a long significant finger at us, and with meaning in his eye, announced: "Do you guys know that the common housefly carries millions of millions of germs?"

The National Geographic issues many other maps which I have—Europe, the United States, the Atlantic and its islands and the continents that border it, the South Seas. For small areas, such as a state at a time, or a group of states, the best maps are those put out by gasoline companies and available at service stations.

Esso, in New York, maintains a touring service where anyone can get road information, directions, and maps. Some of the more interesting they have are of the Northeastern United States, one of the Southeastern portion, and one covering the central and western states.

I've built up my collection in several ways besides those I've mentioned. Whenever I'm in another state, I ask at the first gas station for a map of that state. Of course, there are states you don't go to for a weekend drive. That obstacle is overcome by watching for ads by the Development or Tourist Commission of those states. They appear in travel magazines and in the travel sections of newspapers. A penny postcard brings a map back.

I was looking at a map, a close-up of the coast of California, when a story popped into my mind. John Steinbeck tells it in his book, "Tortilla Flat," which is set in and around Monterey. Teresina Cortez had mothered eight children, and in Tortilla Flat the feeding of eight children is sometimes rough. But they all thrived on beans and tortillas. In school the visiting nurse thought Alfred, one of the children, looked a little worn and asked him if he ate enough.

"Supper," Well, she asked, what did he have for breakfast? "Beans and tortillas." The good woman shuddered but went on: "At noon?" "Tortilla Flat," which is set in and around Monterey. Teresina Cortez had mothered eight children, and in Tortilla Flat the feeding of eight children is sometimes rough. But they all thrived on beans and tortillas. In school the visiting nurse thought Alfred, one of the children, looked a little worn and asked him if he ate enough.

Horrified, the doctor shook his head. Why these children must have every disease known to man, eating nothing but beans, and off the floor at that. He examined the brood, then shook his head again. "I gave them every test I know. They are living on slow poison, and have been since birth. I have never seen healthier children in my life!"

Not very much to do with maps, but I think it's a good story. And it proves the interesting thing that you can get off on by playing with maps.
