Feuding and Fussing

The feuding and fussing between Commissioner Elmer S. Hyde and Commissioner Harry J. Sullivan as heads of the Recreation Department and of the Police Athletic League, has reached a stage where it is no longer funny. There is absolutely no need for disagreement between the two organizations. There are plenty of recreation fields that neither has even explored, and while they fiddle, the children of Belleville and sports of the town suffer.

We don't exactly know where things started this year, but they definitely are a carry over from last year. We have known for some time that the harmony we had hoped could be effected, is about in the same state as the discussions between the steel mill owners and the union. There is no such thing as harmony.

Police Chief George Spatz told us yesterday that the Little League had requested a policeman early last year and was furnished for games up until a time when the vacation schedule made it difficult to do so without hiring men for an extra tour of duty. This year when the Recreation Department asked for a man for the opening game, a man was assigned. Members of the department in patrol cars however have been advised to look in on the games when passing Clearman Field, and so far there has not been a single instance where officer of the league or a representative of the Recreation Department reported trouble or the gambling mentioned in Mr. Knight's statement.

On the other hand the PAL charges Commissioner Hyde with lack of co-operation. Early in the season when the PAL made plans to be represented in the State PAL League it applied to Commissioner Hyde for the use of the Municipal Stadium for games on Sunday. Mr. Hyde replied that because the field would be used every day of the week for games scheduled in his various leagues, he had decided to give the turf a rest on Sunday and would lock the stadium gates that day. This action came soon after the PAL gave up its plans for a Junior League to embrace the age group of from 13 to 16 because it was felt that it might be an encroachment of the Recreation Department's activities. The Recreation Department's announcement that such a league would be formed met with little co-operation on the part of the boys-in that age group and there is no league.

The Recreation Department's job is to provide activities Recreation and PAL in Belleville, as long as the PAL work is carried on by police officers doing a regular tour of duty and not spending 100 per cent of their time on this form of a recreation program.

The Recreation Department's job is to provide activities for Belleville boys and girls within the limits of Belleville. So any intra-Belleville competition in the form of Little League, Grammar School, Softball Leagues, etc., belong in that department and in no other. But intertown competition is of a different nature and can only be sponsored well by an organization with counterparts in other towns. For the most part recreation activities here and elsewhere are designed to give their enjoyment through participation. While intertown rivalry has more spectator appeal.

The unfortunate aspect of the situation is that recreation should not be used as a political tool. Both parties to the present situation should sit down with their respective aides and work out a comprehensive program of mutual cooperation and an expanded program which will provide outlets for the energies of those youngsters who right now are not particularly interested in baseball, basketball and soccer. The field is so wide open, that if each organization would attempt only a few new things, he so busy that there would be no possibility of overlapping.

The matter was brought to a head this week when it was announced that the Little League plans to move its activities from Clearman Field to the Municipal Stadium, as soon as a new Little League field can be laid out, because of the lack of police supervision at Clearman Field. The announcement was made by Warren Knight, president of the Little League who said,

"Due to the unruly behavior of many boys over and beyond the Little League are limits, all league games at Clearman Field will shortly be transferred to Municipal Stadium. The transfer will take place as soon as arrangements are completed by the Recreation Department for building an official Little League diamond at the stadium."

"Clearman Field is a perfect location for Little League, but older boys have made it virtually impossible for the league to continue there. One of the prime sources of complaint from league officers and various managers is the continual gambling that goes on at the field every evening. In addition, boys in their early teens steal baseballs and rove the field at random to often disrupt the game."

"Little League has been without any police protection at any time since it started to function, except the day of the opening parade. The gambling at the field has been wide open, boys sitting openly in the stands playing cards for money, attracting the younger element to stand around and watch the play, instead of the ball game."

"A request was made at the start of the season for policing of the field by the Auxiliary Police. A member of the Auxiliary was present one night and never returned."

"There will be strict control of youthful spectators at the stadium where Bun Berdeshire, a special policeman can effect undesirable. The league regrets the move, because Clearman Field was more centrally located. However, the gambling and ill-behavior of some elements has made it impossible to carry on in the manner and principles of Little League."

The Bellboys did well in the opinion of track coach Wilho Winkka, who said that for a green team they certainly showed lots of spirit and spirit. Mignone was the best runner on the squad with the 100 and 220 yard dashes as his specialty. Nathan Vaccaro, William Lock, Gilbert Stout, and James Morse spearheaded the team. These boys are to be given letters in track which comes under the status of being a major sport.

Following him across the finish line were Clark Albee, Ray Prate and Angelo DeBacco. The mile handicap was won by Alby Shomer, by Prate, Geddis, and Douma. The only lap race for boys on stock wheels was won by Dave Brundies with Tom Quikley and Bryant Albee following.

Included in the trip will be visits to the Ford Mansion and National Museum, in Morristown's residential area; Fort Mifflin, in the center of the town; and the Wick House and John's Hollow, about eight miles outside of Morristown. At Jersey Hollow the youngsters will go through the reconstructed Army Hospital and the soldiers' barracks. Trips will be made every Saturday until further notice. Members from 10 to 15 years of age will be allowed to make the trips.

Home-Coming

The City's sound still haunts my inner ear—the shriek of siren, horn, and racing wheel; But now a greater tide of silent sound Comes flowing back: the sounds that steal Upon the country night—the peepers' song, Brook-water rushing down its rocky course, One last bird calling from the darkened woods, My small clock's whispered welcome in the house.

Halt That Invasion At Any Cost

The advance guard of the most massive mosquito invasion in 30 years has hit town. The worst is yet to come.

Bred in pools caused by the recent rains, in the 1,500 acres of Newark Bay meadowland, the buzzing, biting, blood-sucking Culicidae rise in steady clouds and are borne by the winds. Here in the cool dampness under our trees, they thrive. Beside the ill comfort they create, they are a definite menace to health.

The responsibility is divided. Some of it belongs to the New Jersey Turnpike Authority which rushed its highway across the meadows, filling in as it pushed its sandy roadbed westward, without attempting to keep open the drainage canals that were the work of a decade.

Some of it belongs to the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commission whose disposal plant blocks other drainage ditches and allows the rainwater to collect into breeding pools.

Some of it belongs to the Port of New York Authority which has blocked other drainage ditches in building the two new runways across the meadows which will permit the reopening of Newark Airport.

But the real responsibility lies with the Board of Chosen Freeholders and they cannot duck it.

Who but the Freeholders could have compelled the Turnpike Authority, the Port Authority and the Sewerage Commission to respect the vital network of drainage ditches which had accomplished so much in such a short time? Who but the Freeholders could have the authority, through the Essex County Mosquito Extermination Commission, to force the guilty groups to repair immediately the damage due to their negligence?

Cost must be no factor. Essex County is the ninth richest county in the nation. It is the home of nearly one million people. The health and comfort of those million people must outweigh any consideration of cost. The full responsibility lies with the Freeholders.

The Korean War in Men and Money

The Korean War ties down more than 800,000 men of our Armed Forces and has cost us more than 3 billion dollars a year.

Incredible. Here are the figures to prove it.

At the outbreak of the Korean War, that military operation which President Truman has called a "police action," the Army was severely criticized because a military establishment of more than 600,000 men, maintained at a cost of some 2 billion dollars a year, could muster only 10 combat divisions. Of these 10 divisions, several were on duty in Europe, several constituted the home reserve, and so for several months the Korean War was fought by the occupation troops of Japan, four combat divisions. The result was a frantic call-up of Reserves, principally veterans of World War II, and the conscription or enlistment of hundreds of thousands more.

In explanation of this apparent meager proportion of combat divisions to total Army strength, free use was made of the term "Division Slice." "Division Slice" in men represented total Army strength divided by the number of combat divisions, and amounted to $189,000,000 per division per year.

Those are the figures used to defend the Army position in 1950; 60,000 men per division; $189,000,000 per division per year. And those figures were for peacetime operation!

We have in Korea seven full combat divisions and a number of separate Regimental Combat Teams, a total of eight combat divisions. Two divisions are currently on a rehabilitation status in Japan, bringing the total for the Korean theater of operations to ten divisions. The Korean War, therefore, requires the services of 10 x 60,000 men, or 600,000 men. The yearly maintenance cost in money figures at 10 x $189,000,000, or 1 billion 890 million dollars, for the Ground Forces only.

We still must add the Navy and Air Force cost in men and money. In consideration of the vast water distances involved and the emphasis on air power, 200,000 men and 1 billion dollars a year for both Services is a conservative estimate.

The total amounts to more than 800,000 men, and 3 billion dollars a year. The build-up of Communist troops continues and if the armistice negotiations fail and all-out war resumes, our contribution to the U. N.'s Korean jackpot may well require the services of 1 million men of the Armed Forces and the expenditure of 5 billion dollars a year.

The cost in tears, agony, blood, and death cannot be estimated in terms of sweat and dollars. They are a cost which cannot be equally apportioned; many contribute 100%, many contribute nothing.

Is it any wonder that the Communists indefinitely prolong the Korean armistice negotiations? Is there any doubt that they will continue to do so until their next ambush is fully prepared, Korea is in fact a most successful Russian concentration camp, staffed, manned, and maintained by some 1,000,000 men of our Armed Forces pinned down there. Another "Korea" in French Indo-China, another in Iran, and America will have precious few blue chips to call the big bet, the threatened showdown in Europe with Communist Russia.

Communist Russia was and is the deadly enemy of America. There could be no Korean War without her active support of the Chinese Reds. Communism listens only to words backed by naked power, and with so much of our strength committed far from the decisive area our voice receives little attention. The decisive area was and is the continent of Europe, which includes the heartland of Communist Russia. Until our full power is free for use in that decisive area we invite continued Communist aggression. Nowhere has Communism been able to maintain itself without direct support from Russia. Neutralize Communist Russia and World Communism will collapse in short order. That is the sum and substance of our continued efforts to negotiate an armistice in Korea; of our insistence on no other "Koreas".

The neutralization of Communist Russia is the prerequisite to world peace. R. E. H.

ONE MAN'S OPINION . . .

Electoral Figures Show Communism Is On The Wane in France, But One Voter in Every Four Still Votes As The Kremlin Dictates.

By RALPH E. HEINZEN

When you realize that one voter in every four in France is an avowed Communist, you get a true idea of the enormity of the decision the government of Premier Antoine Pinay took when it ordered the arrest of Jacques Duclos, secretary of the Communist Party, the No. 2 man of the party in France. Clearly the Kremlin, agast at the temerity of the French government, was caught flat-footed. Its reaction can be expected in the early future and since France's General Confederation of Labor is a Communist captive trades-union organization with full Communist control, the reaction can be expected to come from labor.

Since its birth in a secession from Socialism at the Angers conference in 1923, French Communism has been a problem child of every government—except that of Marshal Petain and Pierre Laval, in Vichy, who simply decreed that the Communist Party was illegal and drove its vigilants into the French underground. It was, for the most part, of "professional rioters" who are well-trained in the strategy of "spontaneous demonstrations," carefully organized in advance and anything but "spontaneous".

I have seen French Communism in action all during the troubled days of the Popular Front, back in 1936, and in the darkest days of the war when Duclos and the party's Number 1 leader, Maurice Thorez, deserted from the ranks of the French army at the front and took refuge with the Germans, who gave them safe passage to the Russian frontier, at a time when Hitler and Stalin were blood brothers in deceit under the Molotov-Ribbentrop Moscow accord of August 23, 1939. Later when Hitler turned on Russia and invaded the Ukraine, those same French deserters—called "Frenchie" by the Germans—walked in far-off Moscow, for a French underground uprising against the Nazis.

Role of Communists The share of Communism in the French underground has been grossly exaggerated, although they did, undoubtedly, help, and they threw into the underground a few thousand "internationals", the remnants of the Spanish International Brigades who had been living in camps in the south of France since their defeat by Spain. In the weeks just before my arrest in Vichy by Pierre Laval, in November, 1942, I had spent a week with one of the first units of the French underground in the mountains of the Massif Centrale, near Lyons. The leader of that unit was a young priest who professed the most ardent monarchist sympathies in many conversations with me. His associates were, for the most part, young French youths who had fled from their homes to avoid labor conscription service for Germany. There were true patriots, as there were a few shady figures who would seem to fit best into an underground life.

Work of Patriots That unit was charged with receiving the first deliveries of arms from the Western allies, delivered at night by RAF planes which dropped the supplies by parachute in designated isolated spots. Already they had a two-way radio communication with London and by using a pictograph code, messages to the underground were relayed by the British Broadcasting Corporation at the end of every evening news broadcast. "Pierre tells Paul the violets are blooming," BBC would say. "A dispute will be made near Lyons tonight," the underground would interpret the coded message. That night a small band of patriots would light four bonfires on a hillside in the mountains at a designated hour. In a few minutes the hum of motors announced the coming of the RAF planes. In silence, except for the thud of a crashing package when a parachute failed to open, the drop was made. The bonfires were immediately extinguished because the Germans were ever watchful and sought to trap the underground. On their backs, the patriots would then carry off the heavy cases of arms and ammunition, and parts, explosives and hide them in barns or caves, forests or the attic of some other patriotic's home.

Organized Murder It was only later that the Communists, who were driven to the hills by the Petain-Laval order making the party illegal, joined the underground. It was the Communists who brought murder to resistance. They were courageous in their attacks on isolated German garrisons and they went far out of their way to wreck and to kill.

The Communists took the credit for everything the underground did and as a result, at the end of the war most Frenchmen believed the Communists had fathered the resistance. After my exchange, following a year and a half in a Gestapo internment camp in Germany in mid-war, I brought out a number of magazine articles written around what I had seen in France and in Germany. One of those stories, the first authentic article about the French underground, was published in "The Saturday Evening Post" in June, 1944. At that time, the Communists had not yet stolen the underground's control from the patriots.

Party's Decline As a result of that stolen glory, French Communism profited. Party membership jumped to a million. In the November, 1946, general elections, the party polled 5,475,000 votes, or 28 per cent of all the votes cast. That was in the hectic days just after the liberation, the days when Pierre Laval was tried and shot as a traitor, the days when the venerable Marshal Petain was thrown into prison at 90 years.

The party held most of that strength and even though the party membership has fallen from 1,000,000 to 600,000 card holders and its strength in Parliament has been cut out from 168 Deputies in 1946 to 98 today, the Communists polled about 5,080,000 votes 24.1 per cent of the total votes cast in the elections last June.

The Communists are so firmly entrenched in the CGTU, the General Confederation of Labor, that they hold all the levers of command. Yet when the Kremlin ordered a swift general strike last week to protest the arrest of Duclos, hardly 5 per cent of the workers responded and walked off the job. There is an interesting explanation of that fact.

Question of Distress The Communists' greatest ally in France as elsewhere is economic distress. A recent public opinion survey indicated that 50 per cent of the French Communist voters supported the party at the polls in the hope that it could improve the conditions of the workers, increase salaries and lower prices. Only 25 per cent of the poll showed, took seriously the Communist claims to leadership in the "fight for peace."

Premier Pinay's Cabinet, conservatively oriented and apparently strongly based, can count on parliamentary support for stern measures against the Communists even though some Deputies may have doubts as to the legality of M. Duclos' arrest in view of the parliamentary immunity he theoretically enjoyed as a member of the National Assembly.

Fight Facing Pinay If, at the same time, Premier Pinay can succeed in his current effort to lower prices, stabilize the currency and grant labor a sliding wage scale tied to the price level, he could cut deeply into that half of Communist support based on economic grievances.

Events of the next few months in the international sphere also will exercise a major influence on French Communist strength. If the West holds firm before the Communist war of nerves and if its capabilities for physical defense increase, the Communists will lose support. Conversely, if the conviction is permitted to grow that a Soviet attack is imminent and unstoppable, the party probably will reap a windfall of new members and fellow-travelers among opportunists seeking insurance for an uncertain future.
