Brotherhood Is Essential

Next week is Brotherhood Week.
Maybe you're tired of "weeks," but this is one we'd better pay some attention to, if we want to save ourselves from the fate that befell Germany and many other lands where blood stood over brotherhood.

America today is a little like Noah's Ark.
It's sailing some uncharted and dangerous seas. And the passengers are an assortment of folks from every land in the world.

For America, the promotion of brotherhood is a necessity. With our heterogeneous population we must actively try to be tolerant, to see others' point of view, or we will all be in peril.

What can the average citizen do about this?

A vast amount of progress would be made if every American would make a point of saying one kind word to or for a fellow citizen who is "different" because of race, creed or ancestral background.

Even refraining from unkind deeds and words would help considerably.

If each of us should make such an effort this week, we would feel a lot better for our kindliness, and patriotism, and America would be that little bit stronger, that little bit closer to the ideals our ancestors defined for us in the preamble to our Constitution.

Taking Stock of a First Month

It is now a month since General Eisenhower was inaugurated as President. In that brief span of time he has defined a policy which is crystal clear—a firmness in treating not only with the Communist bloc but, also, with our allies who have been wont to treat their ties with us with disin-volute, and a swing back towards conservatism in domestic policy.

It has been a month in which the new administration has done the dictating to Congress as well as to our Allies. If the honeymoon, born of the Republican victory last November, lasts long enough, the administration may feel the legislation which it needs to enact the policies so carefully defined. There is nothing, however, to indicate that Congress is inclined to prolong the honeymoon too long.

As we see it, Eisenhower's first difficulties, on Capitol Hill involve tax reductions.
Congressmen who must stand for reelection next year are already feeling the pressure back home for the tax cut which the Republicans, in their campaign speeches, promised rather too glibly.

Eisenhower has made it clear that he intends to keep his promise to cut taxes, but with no date fixed. It cannot come, he insists, before administrative costs have been cut and before he is able to balance the budget. In that he has the support of the Senate, including "Mr. Republican," himself. In the House, he has less support and if the honeymoons split, it will be over taxes.

In that, Congress seems to us to be making its usual short-sighted mistake. Surely Congress read the same lesson in the defeat of the Democrats last November that we did.
The Republican victory was a personal victory for "Ike" Eisenhower, not for the Republican party or even for the Republican campaign promises. The heavy Eisenhower vote, in our opinion, was an expression of disgust with too much Congress, with waste and inefficiency, with the red tint in high places, with the general lowering of governmental morals. It was not a mandate to Congress to cut taxes.

It is a fact that never before, since the days of Woodrow Wilson, has a new President and his Cabinet had less experience in the ways of Capitol Hill. The President is new. Congress has been doing business at the same old stand for a century and a half.
It is to be expected that there will be friction, but Congress must be careful, because of next year's elections, and must not rough up the President.

In the first month's relationship, Congress could not help but approve the directives which came from the White House.
After 20 years of creeping paralysis, commerce and industry suddenly found its fetters sliced. The Eisenhower decision to end economic controls took Congress by surprise.
There was nothing Congress could do about it, but if prices rise as a consequence of the end of controls, Congress rather than the White House will feel first the public protest.
If prices do not rise, Eisenhower will get the credit.

In this first month, at least, Congress finds itself in that unaccustomed, unhappy state of affairs where you're damned if you do, and you're damned if you don't.

One Man's Opinion

By Freeing Chiang Kai-shek's Hand On Formosa, Eisenhower is Setting the Stage to End the Korean Stalemate

BY RALPH E. HEINZEN

Although I never knew one to skin a cat, the farmers out in Ohio, in my boyhood, used to have an expression: "There's more than one way to skin a cat." Ike Eisenhower must have heard it, if the saying spread out as far as Kansas. In his first moves to end the Korean stalemate, he is applying that apt lesson in cat-skinning.

There are more ways to win a war than to smash head-on into a fortified wall. Hitler proved it when he called signals to go on and run through the lowlands rather than back up against the Maginot Line. As United Press war correspondent with the French armies in 1939-40, I had spent that wonderful winter in the Maginot Line, often sleeping in warm comfort, 200 feet below the surface of the frozen Lorraine plains, and I knew that as far as man could make it that fortified line which bore the name of France's great dead war Minister, Sergeant André Maginot, was impregnable. It took Hitler only a few days to send Von Reichman-schaeff down the Somme river valley where there were no forts because when you dug six inches you raised water.

So "Ike" Eisenhower, who, too, knew the Maginot Line forts and who saw for himself in Korea that the Chinese Communists had had too long, during the phony peace negotiations which were dragged out for the express purpose of giving the army time to dig in on the mountains, is skinning the cat in another way. As John Foster Dulles said last week, Eisenhower has found many ways of making the Korean war so unprofitable to the Chinese Reds that they will want peace.
This is the first, but not the last move as Eisenhower outlines his tremendous experience against the static strategy of the Communists.

Constant Menace

The Seventh U. S. Fleet, which formerly served only the role of an MP to keep Chiang Kai-shek penned up on the island, is now our recent ultimatum to the Chinese Reds to decide either to blockade the China coast despite the Kaesong decisions, or to let the British to such a move. It would be available, too, if naval strength ever needed to back up our recent ultimatum to the Russians in the Kuriles whose fighter planes shot down one of our bombers in the Japanese archipelago.
The Russians have subs but they have no Far Eastern fleet and they must know how vulnerable their whole position has become with our Seventh Fleet once more on the loose.

The Chinese cannot ignore now the constant threat of a Chiang raid on Amoy or on the rich ports of the China coast from British-held Hong Kong up to Shanghai. They will have to keep pools of troops in readiness south of the Hankow river in an area which they were able to demil-itarize as long as the Truman order to the Seventh Fleet kept Chiang's Nationalist armies away.
The Chinese Reds will have to divert part of their air force from its bases in Manchuria behind the security of the Yalu and keep an air watch along 500 miles of our coast. Nor will the remains of the Chinese air force in Manchuria feel safe in its haven—beeswax—with Eisenhower on the move, the Truman order forbidding our pilots to bomb those Red air bases may also be withdrawn. If the Red Mies had to be based several hundred miles deeper in Manchuria, they would not be able to swoop out, attack and rush back to safety as they do now.
Chiang has had three full years to train his armies, and to build up an air force. We have been merely supplying him with

Nazis Had Jitters

I know from experience that the raids gave the Germans the jitters. Watching traffic on the French railroads through the free zone, I saw troop movements day and night. It took Hitler six months to get over his jitters about the St. Nazaire air base.
I saw troop movements, too, in shifting divisions, north to south, east to west. His whole army was in a state of nervous tension. Raids went off against the Nazis; the Communists can be so more immune to nerve.

Despite the presence of the Seventh Fleet, Washington knows full well that since the end of 1950 Chinese Nationalists have raided not only islands off the coast but have hit spots along the Chinese mainland. These were written off as "training exercises," but someone in the Seventh Fleet must have been looking the other way.
American intelligence has informed the Pentagon that at a consequence, the Communists have strung a chain of radar stations, and anti-aircraft batteries along the coast. Intelligence has reported, also, a build-up of Communist strength in that sector. They are young recruits, but if the Pentagon's information is correct, the build-up of the Reds has kept pace with Chiang's own expansion.

Sizeable Army

It is no secret to the Pentagon that the Chinese have been building up steadily—and now have more than 3,000,000 men under arms. The Pentagon never has been favorable to the proposal to use Chiang's troops in Korea and the possibility now at the Pentagon argues now that it would take at least a year to organize a major landing on the China mainland from Formosa.
They point out, too, that in the meantime, the Communists would be just as able to organize an invasion of Formosa, or a series of raids on the undefended capital island.

It is to be expected, however, that there will be early raids, even if they are minor ones.
They would have a specific purpose of easing the strain on Korea. To reach that railroad, Chi-ang's army would have to drive inland several hundred miles after landing on the mainland.

Anything like a full-scale invasion of the mainland is out of the question at present. Such an operation would require vast sea and air support by the United States, which it is not prepared to provide for the moment.
But this demoralizing of Formosa would allow the Nationalist troops to take as active a part in the struggle against Communist forces in Asia as they feel they can sustain.

Reason for Neutralization

By interposing the Seventh Fleet between the island and the mainland, the Communists were warned that they faced American as well as Chinese Nationalist power should they attempt to invade Formosa. At the same time, the Chiang regime was warned not to try to return to the mainland, thus involve American sea and air power beyond its capacity to support any such operation.

Now that American strength in all services is greater than two years ago, and now that Chiang's troops have been trained and armed, Eisenhower's order would seem, in effect, to turn the two-way embargo on battle between Formosa and the mainland into a one-way street.

Phantom Fleet

The Seventh Fleet will cruise around for the present. Its presence is expected to make clear to the Communists that this green light to Chiang troops to harass the mainland does not decrease in any way America's determination to keep Formosa out of Communist hands.

Actually, it can be reported, much of the Seventh Fleet has not been in Formosa waters for months. Most of it has been engaged in operations around Korea. The task force recently kept in Formosa waters has been only two to four destroyers and a couple of cruisers.

Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander of the United States Pacific Fleet, is arriving in Washington for a week's top-level talks on Pacific operations.

The question of a blockade of the Chinese coast is also being reconsidered, though this has its drawbacks, for to be effective it must be a sizeable operation.

The immediate congressional reaction to Eisenhower's proposal on the neutralization of Formosa was favorable. It is a standard policy which the Republicans in Capitol Hill had been urging for some time and which Eisenhower, too, approved. It generally is believed that any new dan-
