

RESURFACING OF WASHINGTON AVE. IS RECOMMENDED

One Of Three Suggestions By James R. Golden Meets With Approval Of Commissioners

James R. Golden of Tappan Avenue, whose frequent suggestions to members of the Board of Commissioners seem to fall on deaf ears, had one of three suggestions on Tuesday night accepted as worth trying in the opinion of Acting Mayor Patrick A. Waters. Mr. Golden called attention to the Belgian block paving in Washington Avenue from the Newark line to Kings Point. He pointed out that in wet weather the Belgian blocks are slippery and dangerous. He recommended that the Board of Commissioners adopt a resolution calling upon the resurfacing of Washington Avenue from curb to curb from the Newark line to Kings Point and between the car track area and the rest of the length of the avenue.

Promises Action
Acting Mayor Waters promised action on the request by Mr. Golden.

Two other suggestions for family treatment. One was that the Commission delegate someone to represent the town on discussions of routes, entrances and exits and toll gates on the Garden State Parkway. He suggested that Belleville have a state-of-the-artway if the suggestion by Town Engineer Matthew Sheehan for the route of the East-West Turnpike along the Public Service right of way were adopted. Mr. Sheehan pointed out that his suggestion has already been discarded by the Highway department and the Turnpike Authority.

Wants Election Board

His other suggestion was that the Board of Commissioners adopt a resolution calling for a referendum for an elected Board of Education. Mr. Golden pointed out that such a resolution must be passed forty days before an election in order that the question be placed upon the ballot. He pointed out that if the Commissioners do not act, a referendum called by the Governor into law, provided that if the Board of Education or the governing body of a municipality does not place the question on the ballot at the request of citizens, then it is possible for those citizens to circulate a petition. If enough signatures are obtained to equal 15 per cent of the total vote cast in the last general election, and the petitioners are filed with the Clerk, then the question can be put on the ballot. Mr. Golden declared that at least that many citizens with the question to be placed on the ballot, but the time is too short to do anything about it this year. He suggested that the Commissioners cut the red tape and delay by passing a resolution now.

After the meeting Acting Mayor Patrick A. Waters declared that he has gone through two attempts to change the status of the Board of Education, one to create an elected board and the other to organize a Board of School estimate. He declared that he did not want to go through another such attempt originating with the Commissioners.

Knows When "Looper" Riders Are Having Fun

William Konrad's "Looper" Ride At Olympic Park Delights Crowds Daily

By Jean B. Powers

"Ohs" and "ahs" and "gups" are the delight of William Konrad while he operates his "Looper" ride at Olympic Park. For as many as 10 hours a day, he will stand and watch and listen to the crowd riding for amusement or thrill on the looper.

The "Looper" is a strange looking ride. You aren't quite sure just what is going to happen to you as you climb into the circular car and are strapped into your seat by Mr. Konrad's able hands. When the wheel to which the ten circular cars are attached starts to revolve, you push on a lever on the floor of your individual car. It starts to hold you, you're spinning around too. Then comes the noises and squeals from the riders. It attracts attention and before you know it you have all the spectators standing in line with tickets ready for the next ride.

Interesting Business
It is an interesting business according to Mr. Konrad. "You need all kinds of people and funny situations," he says.

Although Mr. Konrad has only been operating his ride for five rad was able to buy out the last partner and became the sole owner of the ride.

1,000 To 1,400 Ride Some Days
Operating the "Looper" for 20 cents a ride on a good day gets him as many as 1,000 to 1,400 riders and on a slow day averages between 200 and 300 riders. Week-ends and picnic days, which are every Wednesday are the busiest days for the "Looper" and for his work.

Both Konrad and the "Looper" are on the go from early morning until the park closes at 10 p.m. On picnic days all rides cost 13 cents. "Believe it or not," says Konrad, "females are my best customers. They are more than the male population. Bedecked in slacks or shorts or blue jeans, the girls will ride and ride again. Looking over the riders each time Konrad can spot very quickly those who are enjoying themselves and will be back for more. He says that good riders can stay on as long as an hour at a time, but poor riders want to get off at the end of the first minute.

In recalling the time he has been going to Olympic Park, Konrad hates the change in the people who own the amusement park. He says that the older crowd was a family crowd, mother, father, and children. Now the people are more indifferent to the goings on about them. They are faster moving. The family element is not as much in evidence. "More and more children are allowed to go to the park without their parents, and it is amusing to watch how they split up their day's cash allotment in favor of food and their favorite rides. Konrad, who also had a partnership one time in the boat ride and the coddle, lives at 38 Garden Avenue, with his wife who incidentally has never ridden on the "Looper." He is the father of an Episcopal minister who is now attached to Syracuse University. He is a grandfather three times over. In summing up his job, Konrad is very pleased. He likes the association of the people who own Olympic park, he works 17 weeks during the season plus three week-ends in May and has winter season to travel to Florida or California, and he always has time for a walk with a fellow townsman or stranger.

Deputy Police Chief Is Unhurt In Airplane Crash

Deputy Police Chief Kenneth Smith and John Robert King, editor of the Independent Press of Bloomfield, escaped injury on Wednesday when they crashed their airplane while attempting a landing at a private airport operated by "Red" Crowhurst, a Belleville manufacturer and aviation enthusiast, near Fort Jervis, N. Y. Smith and King own an "Aircop," a winged fast flying plane which lands at high speed and therefore needs a long runway. Trying to take the runway at its fullest extremity they came in over a hill and were caught in a down draft which caused them to hit with a bump which tore off the landing gear. The next jump, on the 19th, the engine misfired and one wing. Both flyers climbed out physically unhurt but belabored the podestook. The plane was dismantled and trucked to Mr. Smith's garage in DeWitt Avenue, to await repairs.

BELATED FINISH OF CANCER DRIVE HAS GOAL WITHIN SIGHT

Commissioner Elmer S. Hyde Reports $7,000 Raised; Less Than $3,000 Last Year

In a belated windup of the 1953 campaign for the American Cancer Society, Elmer S. Hyde, chairman in charge of the fund drive, announced that the local committee has turned $7,000 over to the Essex County Chapter of the American Cancer Society. "Although this is $500 short of the quota assigned Belleville, I expect to raise the balance within the month, so that the city's obligation will be completely fulfilled," declared Hyde, who is also director of the Adult and Public Policy in Belleville.

Last year, the local drive raised only $2,900, and Cancer officials in Essex County were anxious to have Belleville make a better showing. They enlisted the aid of Hyde, who had led two previous Cancer campaigns here with a considerable success. "It marks the third time, under Hyde's leadership, that Belleville has achieved or bettered its goal."

The chairman lauded his committee for their fine work in ultimately reaching the goal. He said: "Cancer Month is usually the best time to raise money."

Richards was last seen by his wife about seven when he was working in the store. He had been known in Belleville because of his hardware business which he has operated for 31 years.

Trackless Transit Buses Roam While Turnabout is Built

National Yeast Takes Over Original Turning Space for Parking Lot; Town Leases Another Lot To Firm

Monday morning buses of the Trackless Transit Company, deprived of their turnaround on Mill Street, by notification of the National Yeast Company, started a loop through streets in the Soho section, and brought numerous complaints to Commissioner Elmer S. Hyde, head of the transportation committee. Tuesday night Judge W. Eugene Turton, representing the company appeared before the Town Commissioners, pressing for action on a lease of part of the canal at the corner of Mill Street and Harrison Street, which had been discussed at previous meetings of the Board of Commissioners.

Judge Turton spoke to the Commissioners in caucus and it was agreed that a lease drawn up by Town Attorney Lawrence Keenan, with blank spaces for the National Yeast term, was satisfactory. It was finally agreed that the annual rental of the property be set at $100 and that the lease be for five years.

Action was deferred on the lease last month because Public Works Commissioner Harry E. van wanted an opportunity to have a study made of the position of feet on traffic at that corner.

The original turn around was purchased from the town by the National Yeast Corporation, and the portion of the canal left adjacent, leased, as an additional parking lot for the Yeast firm.

Andrew Ostapko, of 44 Belleville Avenue, led a delegation to the meeting to complain about the buses looping through that and other streets. He was informed of the negotiations, which took place previous to his arrival, and when Judge Turton assured him that work would be started on grading the corner property, Wednesday morning, the delegation was reassured. He finished in less than a week, Mr. Ostapko and his neighbors were appeased.

Reduced Fees
Originally the vending machine ordinance provided for a fee of $10 per location plus an additional fee of $1 per machine, where more than one machine was installed in a location. The vending machine ordinance provided for the definition of location and objected to the annual fee per machine. Mayor James J. Fally, as chairman of the revenue and finance department under whose jurisdiction comes all legislation, was anxious to get an agreement between all interested parties, so that the ordinance and its related fees would not be a hindrance to the vending machine operation. It was finally agreed that a location is a street address, and that the annual fee be reduced to $5.

A resolution amending the ordinance was adopted and then the amended ordinance was passed unanimously.

Colorado Plateau Formations Are Uranium Country

Pictured significantly in front of one of the rock formations on the Colorado plateau is Joseph Morris, Walter Kidde employee. It is from this point that Mr. Morris began his search for uranium. He now has five claims of his own and an interest in 15 other claims in the vicinity.

Michael Albertine, of 163 Joramelon Street, annoyed by a recent statement from the Independent Voters League that he had been replaced as an officer of the League, takes exception to a statement made to a Newark newspaper by Charles Rossi, president. Mr. Albertine in a statement this week said: "The recent fiasco engineered by Charlie Rossi, Kurt Krueger and company, poses some very serious questions before the independent membership of the Independent Voters League. The fumbling and inept explanation offered by Mr. Rossi, regarding the high handed methods used to replace me as publicity director, only serves to bring certain questions into sharper focus. As I have previously stated, my primary concern is the atomic energy situation."

Picks Up Partner
He joined up with another prospector and set out in the rented jeep on a three and one half day trip to the Colorado River. When the country became too rugged for the jeep they climbed to their objective on foot. They returned to the jeep each night to rest and to refill their canteens and otherwise replenish their supplies. His claims are on Government owned property. The claims give him working title to the land. He has another prospective uranium real uranium find in the immediate vicinity and starts a wave of claim buying. Mr. Morris has to take another vacation to Utah to conduct further tests to determine the content of the uranium. Besides the actual value of the uranium itself the Atomic Energy

He determined to learn more about the mineral so read every available book on the subject. He corresponded with the Atomic Energy Commission office at Grand Junction, Colorado, and subscribed to the Denver Post to keep abreast of happenings in the uranium fields in the West. Encouraged by the Atomic Energy Commission he made up his mind to use some of his profits from his stock venture to finance a trip to the Colorado Plateau on a prospecting venture.

Equipped with a Geiger counter, a battery-operated portable fluorescent light, a mortar and pestle for pulverizing ore samples and a complete set of camping equipment, he set out for Denver, Colorado. There he rented a jeep and drove to Grand Junction for a talk with officials of the Atomic Energy Commission. He advised them that he wanted to go to the northern part of the Colorado Plateau.

Two Daughters Of Neighbors At Mantoloking Are Burned To Death In Station Wagon
Freelholder Elwood P. Russell of Greylock Parkway, on Saturday was a witness to a horrible catastrophe when the summer home of his neighbor at Mantoloking, burned to the ground and burned to death the two young daughters of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Cosgrove, of Jersey City. The fire started about 7 o'clock, so Dr. Cosgrove drove into the house, along the split-level driveway, and found the fire. In his station wagon were the two children and a can of gasoline. He used it in the family car-burned motorboat.

Restraint Doctor
Freelholder Elwood P. Russell was sitting on the porch when the station wagon entered the garage. A moment later there was a flash of fire. Dr. Cosgrove ran from the house, his clothes in flames, and rolled in the sand. Russell and his son went to Dr. Cosgrove, to the house, and Dr. Cosgrove cried: "There is there," and ran back into the ward where he was called.

Everyone Invited to Get Into Act In Playground Shows

Singers, Dancers, Musicians, And Actors Will Hold Forth Wednesday; Gay Nineties Parties Were Success In All Playgrounds Last Week

Everyone will have a chance to get into the act on Wednesday, all playground children that is, when each playground will stage its own Talent Show. The event is open to all youngsters of between 5 and 15 years. Children who can sing, dance, play an instrument, impersonate TV performers or famous persons or who have talent of any sort are invited to compete. There will be winners and prizes on every playground.

About 300 children took part in the hunt for about 150 prize-winning cards at the Treasure Hunt at Municipal Stadium on Wednesday. Friendly House brought a delegation of more than 50 by chartered bus and the No. 1 School Playground was represented by about 40 children.

About 21 boys including sixing members of the Belleville Bicycle Club went on a bike ride and swimming excursion to Laguna Beach on Route 23 at Mountaintop. The racing members of the club acted as the advance guard and rode the 15 miles up to the swimming beach in less than three quarters of an hour. The other 15 youngsters, accompanied by Superintendent John Cook, made the trip up in a little less than two hours. The boys enjoyed about four hours of swimming and then rode their bikes back to the Municipal Stadium, the starting point and dispersal area for the activity.

Skating At No. 1 Last Wednesday evening about 150 boys and girls had a grand time at our "Gay Nineties Show." At least 35 boys and girls were in various costumes. Belleville Has Its Share Of Smiths, Clarks Plentiful Too

Belleville is a normal American town—one out of every hundred families here is a Smith, and a Schmidt according to the new telephone directory just published. The Smiths dominate here, just as they should by the law of averages as applied to the land as a whole, and they are followed in order of numbers by the Millers, the Johnsons in various manners of spelling, the Clarks and the Williamses. For some reason, the Joneses don't keep up with their neighbors in Belleville. The Jones once followed the Smiths in frequency; now they follow the Ferraros and the Davises.

There are 64 Smiths and 6 Schmitts in the Belleville telephone directory, 35 Titters and 36 Johnsons and Johnsons. There are 18 Clarks, 9 Jones, 24 Andersons, Andersons and Andersons. In the United States, for example, one out of every 100 is a Smith, according to the latest statistics of U. S. Census Bureau. The census takers find the name John Smith has topped lists ever since Captain John set foot ashore at Jamestown, Va., in 1607. The Veterans' Administration rolls have had as many as 13,000 John Smiths at one time—8,000 with no middle name or initial.

The Smiths are ahead in England, too, with 18 in every 1,000 so named. Even Scotland's largest clan is not the MacDonalds or the Campbells. It's the Smiths according to the Scottish Post Office Department. Johnson, Brown, Williams, Jones, and Miller have long been leaders among common United States surnames, but none ever has threatened to supplant Smith. A Czechoslovakian named Kovar, a Hungarian Kovacs, a Syrian Hadad, or a Polish Kowalczyk, all could, and often have, translated their names into the English "Smith" when they emigrated to America. From Germany come the Schmidts, from Scandinavia the Smeds, from Finland, the Seppans— all Smiths.

Many nationalities derive their surnames not from ancient professions like those of smith or miller, but from regions, tribes, religions, or from fathers' first names. So with Ivan Ivanovich, Perez and Garcia in Spain and Spanish America, Chinese in the United States have only about 80 different family names. Chan, Wong, and Lee are the most common.

The Census Bureau notes that the name Smith is the most common in the United States.

BELLEVILLE MAN PLAYS AT BEING A POLICEMAN

Investigation Of Suspicious Youths By G. Franklin Lands Him In Jail; Drunken Driver

George M. Franklin, 51, of 217 Greylock Parkway, found himself in trouble Monday night when he attempted to apprehend some youths he thought were robbing a nearby gas station and wound up being charged as a drunken driver when the Belleville Police arrived on the scene. The trouble began, police reported, when Franklin noticed his car and obstructed traffic on Greylock Parkway, near Washington Avenue, while he investigated what he believed to be a robbery. A loud argument ensued and Chief of Police George Snatz, who lives nearby at 182 Greylock Parkway, called Police Headquarters. Upon arrival, Acting Sergeant Denigant and Patrolmen Lister and Sullivan ordered Franklin to move his car to the side of the road and questioned him and the youths. Franklin then became uncooperative and abusive and was taken to headquarters where he was declared under the influence of alcohol by Dr. Donald Brown, of 211 Washington Avenue. Franklin was released in $300 bail for appearance August 26 before Magistrate Abramson. No charges were made against the youths who said they were not robbing the gas station.

flimsy pretext offered by Mr. Rossi? Why was a meeting held in a grocery store with only three executive board members present in order to accomplish my removal? Under what authority did this rump executive board act, since we have never adopted a set of by-laws to define either the duties or the authority of the various officers? Who was not the general membership consulted? Who stands so glibly by my removal from office and my substitution by Kurt Krueger? These questions must be answered.

"We must not permit a few cynical small men to exploit the Independent Voters League into the personal property of office hungry, machine politicians. I call upon the entire membership to attend the meeting on September 3, so that they can demand with a united voice, the answers to which they are so clearly entitled.

"Therefore, I say that honest, independent decent local government can be attained in Belleville and our League can play a major role in accomplishing this goal. However, we will be able to do this only by exposing and defeating the un-American methods of the Rossi, Krueger clique."

Bird Lover's Chant

A tanager for color
Of scarlet feathered flare,
A mourning dove for dolor,
An oriole for cheer,
A whippoorwill for pity,
A screech owl for alarm,
Song sparrows for their flighty
Laughter in a storm,
Meadowlark and redwing
For joy in field and swamp;
And a great blue heron standing
Like a lighted lamp.
A bluebird for wishes,
A robin for a friend,
And oh, the hermit thrush's
Vesper at day's end!

Truce Doesn't Mean Demobilization

The first happening subsequent to the truce of Panmunjom was a cut in the draft of Belleville youths from eight, for July, to three, for August. That was a happy omen even though it was not actually based on the suspension of fighting. The armed forces make known their demands to the national selective service officials two months in advance of the call. The August draft was based on the army's needs anticipated in June.

The first reaction to the Korean truce was a hasty assumption that draft calls would be rendered unnecessary. This impression was encouraged by the statement of Secretary of Defense Wilson that there would be a cut of 5,000 to 6,000 inductions a month in 80 days.

An entirely different picture was painted by General Hershey, director of Selective Service. He said that draft quotas might have to be raised during the year ahead. To the ordinary citizen and to the boy who is trying to plan for college or a job, it appears that the government should make up its mind and should speak with one voice.

The differences are explainable. Mr. Wilson is counting on reductions in the armed forces under the Eisenhower economy plans. General Hershey knows that very large numbers of draftees will be released from service in the next few months and that their places must be filled. But still it seems that the gentlemen in high places should get together.

Of course, some uncertainties cannot be removed from any forecast. The rate of volunteering and the temperature of the cold war cannot be predicted. But the government would do well to explain the prospects and avoid fostering foolish hopes. For the truth is that the draft will continue for years longer. It cannot be abandoned so long as the present world tension exists, unless the rate of voluntary enlistments increases more than double to provide enough volunteers to meet the needs of the army, the navy, the air force and the Marines. In peace time, there is, alas, little likelihood of that, so the draft must continue. R.E.H.

Write Letters To Italy!

The time is ripe for another "Letters-to-Italy" campaign such as Congressman Peter W. Rodino sponsored during the general election campaign in Italy several years ago. Italy has undergone a definite swing again to the left as the political pendulum has favored the Communists and their left-wing Socialist allies. Letters-to-Italy saved Italy from Communism once before; they can again let the Italian electorate know that their future lies with American and not Russian friendship.

In the field of labor, the recent Italian national elections seem to have shown that, despite years of efforts and western support, the anti-Communist labor unions have won little allegiance among the working class. The fact that 500,000 workers apparently switched their votes from the pro-West Social Democrats to the pro-Communist Left-Wing Socialists indicates a comparable switch in the labor movement.

When it is remembered that the Communist unions have the support of a great majority of Italian workers, the role of the rightist parties, which also increase their strength at the last election, becomes clearer. The growth of monarchism and neofascism means, on the economic and social level, an effort by the large industrialists and landowners to entrust the maintenance of the status quo to parties which they feel may be more consistently and ruthlessly conservative than Alcide de Gasperi's Christian Democrats.

As a rule the great industrialists have opposed Signor de Gasperi's policies of agrarian reform, business control, improvement of the tax-collection systems, rigid control of the lira, and many other anti-inflationary measures.

The switch of the conservative vote connected with the great industry to the rightist parties has been reflected within the Christian Democratic Party itself. A little notice but significant result of the elections was that the candidates of the Roman Catholic Action organization, in other words, candidates most closely connected with the Vatican, were defeated in great numbers, while the left-wing branch of the Christian Democratic Party gained considerable strength.

Previously the two wings of the Christian Democratic Party were held together by ex-Premier de Gasperi and his middle-of-the-road party collaborators. But if the need to seek the cooperation of either the rightists or leftists in order to form a government should identify the Christian Democratic Party with parties other than the Center, the left wing might refuse to cooperate in case of a rightist alignment, and vice versa.

Signor de Gasperi showed himself well aware of the situation and tried to hold the party together by forming a cabinet in which the two wings were represented. But it failed to satisfy the former allies of the Center, and his cabinet was voted down by Parliament.

The prospect of a split within the majority party, more than any other consideration, is what caused such elation among the Communists and their left-wing Socialist allies, and caused them to do all in their power to defeat a Center coalition that would have averted a crisis.

The unknown factor in Italian politics, therefore is the future of the Christian Democratic Party and that's where our letters, to the clericals and industrialists as well as to farmers and workers can help.

One Man's Opinion

As A Wartime Prisoner Of The Gestapo,
I Believe That Wars Bring Out The Worst,
Not The Best In Any People

BY RALPH E. HEINZEN

I was a political prisoner of Hitler, a captive of the Gestapo for a year and a half in mid-war. My prison was one of fourteen in the Oos river valley of the Black Forest at Baden Baden. I know the strains of captivity, the hours of "brain-washing," the treachery of stool pigeons within your own ranks who would sell you out for their personal gain, a few cigarettes, a double ration or simply the depraved satisfaction of hurting you.

To me the stories of atrocities which the men of the Eighth Army tell as they return under the terms of "Operation Big Switch," while grim and cruel, are but a repetition of the happenings of Buchenwald and Dachau—and Stalag 17 of the Illinois, and Baden Baden of the damp forest. The Chinese and the North Korean Communists may have added a touch of the Oriental to their cruelty, for even normal life in China is bitterly cruel, but nowhere in the world could there ever be cruelty as refined and, at the same time, as depraved as that of the Gestapo, Hitler's corps of sadists who ran the extermination camps and the "diplomatic" camp in which I was interned.

During the long months of captivity, I was too engrossed in living, in survival, to reason things out clearly, but when my personal Gestapo guard broke down and told me his fears of the approaching Red Army, as we rode across France in a locked car on our way to Iran, at the Spanish border, on my way to being exchanged, at the Portuguese frontier, against 11 Germans, I saw clearly that the Nazis were not going to be hard to defeat because they were already defeated and their really came not from any second-class nation, but from an inferiority complex.

Behind their Cruelty: It is the same with the Chinese and the North Koreans; their terrible cruelty stems from their envy, from their racial inferiority complex, from the meanness and jealousy within the hearts of any second-class nation. By being cruel to the helpless, they flatter their own ego. We must insist upon retribution and punishment, as we must insist upon full freedom for all of ours in their hands.

Having been their prisoner, I know their mentality. I saw them in the hour of their greatest victory, when France fell after 21 years of battle in May and June, 1940. I saw them inside of Germany in mid-war when their armies suffered their first great defeat at Stalingrad, long before the defeat of Rangoon in Africa and the Normandy landing. I saw them in the Russian armies were closing in on Germany in victory nor in defeat were they rational.

I see the same thing happening in Korea; neither the Nazis nor the North Koreans are rational and that is why we should allow time to lapse before we sit down with them to talk peace terms. Any peace we make today would be an irrational peace.

As I look back, I do not regret the experience of having been a prisoner of the Gestapo for a year and a half, even though, at the time, I was very bitter against the Nazis for a flagrant violation of the Geneva Convention. Under that agreement, which Hitler had signed, I, as an accredited war correspondent, should have been taken to the nearest neutral frontier within 48 hours and given my liberty.

It was an excellent opportunity for him to try to indoctrinate me. Instead, he was keenly interested in American history, with emphasis, strangely enough, on our Civil War. In our talks, we seldom spoke of contemporary matters but I had to rack my memory to answer his queries regarding Lincoln and his generals.

For the first six weeks, the Gestapo isolated us and when the Gestapo isolates you, you're isolated. Then, it was at our own request that we were given permission to listen to the new broadcasts on Radio Berlin. They put in a magnificent radio receiver but it was locked on Radio Berlin, and there were no dials.

What the Germans did not know, apparently, was that for ten minutes every night at 11 o'clock, the British, using BBC, broadcast news on Radio Berlin's wavelength. By 11 o'clock, the nightly air raids were on and as Radio Berlin's emissions would have served as a handy beam for the invading planes, Radio Berlin went off the air. That was when BBC came on in the same wavelength, with news in German.

It was our only contact with the outside world, except for the rare, rare, visit of some Swiss diplomat. Switzerland represented the United States in Germany in those days, and the Swiss sent inspectors to see that the Nazis lived up to the Red Cross and Geneva Convention rules for the treatment of prisoners.

Then, as the isolation was relaxed, they agreed, without ever admitting that they were violating the Geneva Convention—as I continued to point out in a stream of letters to Goebbels, Goering and Ribbentrop—that I might see some of the German captives which I could say were prisoners who I could say were immediately subscribed to seven, from all parts of Germany.

The clarity of news was striking, whether the newspaper was the Berliner Tageblatt or the Frankfurter Zeitung, whether it was printed in Köln, or Mainz or München—Every war story was the same from start to finish, and the headlines on the story were the same in every paper.

What they did not know was that these seven daily newspapers gave us, during the following year, a priceless graph of German army losses which served well our intelligence forces.

Mrs. S. Pinkney Tuck, wife of the U. S. Charge d'Affaires, who was interned with us, kept the graph, as during the war, before the war, for families to publish death notices in small newspapers arranged in columns on the back pages. Each paper, each day, would print hundreds of such death notices.

They were pretty much the same: "Wilhelm Schmidt, 21, died at Kanarok, a corporal of Panzer-Granadiers. Heil Hitler, Long Live Germany." All of them, paid tribute to Hitler; some to Germany.

Mrs. Tuck charted those death notices. She kept a record of the age, the arm of service, the rank and where the soldier died. She charted 27,000 such death notices and when she drew her graph she discovered that more than 90 per cent of the German dead fell on the battlefield of Russia. She found that eighty per cent of the German dead were in the age group of 21-25. She found that Germany was losing the equivalent of two Panzer Grenadier divisions a week. Her graphs were the military attaché at the U. S. Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, regularly every fortnight.

She kept similar charts for the German Navy and for the Luftwaffe and her graphs were equally illuminating. It seems unbelievable but she was able to pin down the number of German subs by counting the number of dead U-boat officers of certain grades, knowing how many of each-grade serve on every German sub.

I cite that merely to show that does not only cause a lot of discomfort to humans but also seems to affect the receivers.

We experienced a number of breakdowns directly to our senses. One reason is the pressure of much heat. Normally, the heat in the set is too much for the human condenser, which are impregnated with heat. When temperatures are normal there seems to be no ventilation, but when the room temperature is 80 or more, the heat in the set is too much for the human condenser, which are impregnated with heat. This melts and the condensers short. Several manufacturers use only molded condensers which are not affected by the heat.

The second trouble is caused by the excessive humidity. Slight amounts of condensation on the very thin copper wiring of the tubes are sufficient to set up a corrosion which will in time destroy the wire. The humidity also will enter the paper condensers and destroy them. Here again molded condensers are better, because they are hermetically sealed. These things are not taken into consideration when people buy TV sets. The dealer who knows his merchandise intimately is in a position to advise his customers accordingly. This is only one reason why you should buy your TV set preferably from a local dealer who operates his own service department and thus becomes familiar with the pitfalls of the different sets.

prisoners of war do not have to stagnate. You do not have to sit back and be indoctrinated. You can capitalize on captivity. If, among the several thousand returning Americans, any of them bothered to keep score of Communist losses, air raids, food supplies, transportation facilities, public temper and attitude towards the war, then their captivity will not have been in vain. A soldier can be a soldier, even as a captive. More battles are won with traps and military intelligence than with bullets.

Wants Thought On Problems

To The Editor, Times News:

Sir: I would like to call to the attention of the people the excellent Editorial written in the August 2nd issue of a Newark newspaper as a tribute to the late Senator Robert Taft. Among other worthwhile statements was this: "He insisted with unrelenting determination that people think about public questions."

Like Taft, I have great confidence in the soundness of public opinion, once the people have been alerted to a public problem, and given the opportunity to study it through in cooperation with the authorities involved.

It has been my observation for many years that the greatest need in the physical facilities of our public school playgrounds. There is an appearance of incompleteness not only in my district but throughout the town. Schools do not spring up. Their placements are planned to meet the educational needs of the greatest number of children in a given area. It is logical to suppose that the planning would include surrounding grounds to meet the play-time needs of the same child.

Where land may be obtained without seriously impairing, commercial real estate, placing greater tax burdens on property owners, provisions should be made for the working individual, who might not want to commit himself or herself to a schedule, but enjoys outdoor activity when desired. However, program planning is not the issue as regards these physical improvements.

As an interested citizen, I mention these observations to you, and you were kind enough to pass them on to the public through your newspaper. As a means of provoking healthy public thinking, and not individual haste, inasmuch as constructive criticism by taxpayers residents is a tonic to the growth of any community. Furthermore, it is generally conceded that he who pays the piper may call a tune. Cordially yours,
Isadore J. Padula

In N.Y.U. Summer Band

John Riordan, student at Belleville High School, was among 12 young musicians from the New York City metropolitan area who are participating in the New York University School of Education Summer Band.

A tuba player, Riordan joined the other band members in rehearsal sessions from 2 to 3 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays during the summer session which opened August 27 and continued through August 7.

The band is organized for a graduate course in "Band Repertoire and Techniques." The teenage musicians form a complete orchestra so that graduate music students at NYU School of Education may do actual group work with a typical high school musical unit.

Consequently, many people have been reached for contributions for other worthy causes and find it difficult to dig any deeper for another charitable gift. However, our committee worked vigorously and with the cooperation of Belleville's citizens—who are aware of the wonderful work being carried on by the Cancer Society—we have reached our quota.

Every person who contributed to this fine charity will share with me the feeling of a job well done."

Meanwhile, Dr. Cosgrove's wife ran from the house as the flames spread, and became hysterical, after she learned the girls were still in the car. The bodies of the youngsters were recovered from the remains of the station wagon, after the debris had cooled on Sunday morning. The fire not only consumed the Cosgrove home but reduced the house next door to a shell.
