

To Build $95,000 Store For A & P

A permit for construction of a $95,000 building to be leased to the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company for its new store at 333 Franklin Avenue was granted yesterday by Building Inspector Thomas Greco, to U. F. Rickard, Elizabeth builder, and owner of the property. Leveling of the ground has already begun.

The plot of ground, which has a frontage of 182 feet and a depth of 360 feet, was purchased from the Plenge Farm at an undisclosed price.

The store itself will be 72 by 136 feet, and the application for the permit indicated that it would be completed within four months. Actual cost of the building may run to approximately $125,000, it was estimated.

Roof of the building will be of a truss type construction, which means that it will not have any supporting columns rising from the floor, thus providing more space and greater convenience for customers. The store will have a modern style porcelain floor.

Area in which the store is located is a residential zone, but a variance has been obtained from the board of adjustment.

Ceremony Sunday To Start Church Drive For School

Announcing that more than $50,000 had already been pledged to the Church of St. Anthony in its building fund campaign for construction of a parochial school, the Rev. Titian P. Menegus, pastor, announced late yesterday that the general drive would be officially launched this Sunday.

A communion breakfast for all volunteer workers will follow the religious ceremony.

The funds already pledged were raised through the efforts of the Advance Memorial Gifts Committee in less than two weeks, and to a third of the $100,000 minimum goal set for the whole campaign. Cost of the school is estimated at $100,000, but the balance of a money will be provided by other means.

Pledges include a $5,000 memorial gift by the Zorro Funeral Home of Bloomfield toward the cost of the school cafeteria; $1,000 by Isidore J. Padula, former chairman of the drive, toward the cost of the main corridor; and $1,200 by the West End Civic League toward the cost of a medical suite. The St. Anthony Field Club and the Guard of Honor are also included among those who have subscribed memorials.

Members of the Memorial committee who have reported the highest donations include Benjamin Maglia, Ralph Rapa, Anthony Christiano, Frank Bechinger, Salvatore Spivella, Anthony Quaranta, Salvatore Pico, Charles Coszarella, Michael Capanera, and Daniel Haria. Committee members said they would redouble their efforts during the next week of solicitation.

The ground on the site has been leveled, and bleachers will be erected for the convenience of those who will attend.

The program will open with presentation of the colors by Newark Post 34 of the Jewish War Veterans, and singing of the national anthem by Miss Doris Cohen. The invocation will be by the Rabbi Arnold Lasker of the Beth Torah Congregation, Orange. The "Mah Tovu" by Cantor Soma Sobeloh.

A member of the congregation, Sisterhood; Judge Edward J. Abramson; and the Rev. Peter Deckenbach, president of the Belleville-Midland Association. A selection will be sung by Cantor Soma Sobeloh.

The program will then be presented by a group of the congregation, to be named later, will then be presented with a gold-plated shovel by Dr. Benjamin A. Jacobson, chairman of the congregation's Board of Trustees, and the ground will then be consecrated by the Rev. Peter Deckenbach.

The ceremony will also include selections by the synagogue choir, as advised by Dr. Rubin, and finally the benediction by Rabbi Leon Yagud of Kearny.

Prepare For Ahavath Achim Ground-Breaking Ceremony

Members of the Jewish community will meet at the Ahavath Achim Synagogue next Wednesday night at 8:30 p. m. to determine who will win the honor of turning the first shovel of earth in a ground-breaking ceremony for the new $200,000 synagogue to be built on Academy Street, near Washington Avenue. The ceremony is to be held on May 30 at 2 p. m.

The privilege of enacting the climatic moment in the ground-breaking ritual will be conferred on the individual who pledges the largest donation toward construction of the synagogue at next Wednesday's meeting. Charles Rosenberg, chairman of the building fund committee, announced.

Spiritual leaders of all faiths in Belleville, and in surrounding communities, as well as public officials and other guests, will attend the May 20 ceremony, to which the public has been invited.

The ground on the site has been leveled, and bleachers will be erected for the convenience of those who will attend.

New Commission Is Sworn Into Office; Next Meeting Tues.

Belleville's new Town Commission will settle down to the conduct of the town's affairs next Tuesday night when it will hold its first formal meeting since its members were sworn in at a flower-bedecked noon ceremony at Town Hall last Tuesday.

Isidore J. Padula, named as mayor and director of the department of revenue and finance, was confined to his home by a virus infection, and was inducted into office in a ceremony at his home.

A crowd that filled the commission chambers and jammed the corridors watched as Public Safety Director Harry Sullivan, Parks and Public Property Director Elmer S. Hyde, Public Affairs Director Joseph King, and Public Works Director Kenneth D. Smith took the oath of office, administered by Town Clerk Florence Morey, Joseph Padula, who was his father's proxy, stood in as proxy for his father, Joseph, a chemist, lives at 91 Liberty Avenue.

Commissioner King, who has served continuously as a director for 20 years, and is now beginning his sixth term, presided at the brief session.

"We will do our very best to fulfill the obligations of our office," he told the audience, which was dressed in holiday attire. "We will try to be a good commission."

As soon as the ceremony was over, members of the commissioners' families rushed to them to exchange and greet them. Kissed by his wife, Commissioner Sullivan was a lipstick mark on his face. When the mark was called to his attention, he smiled, but made no effort to remove it for more than 15 minutes. He wore it proudly, like a badge of honor.

TWO "AID KOREA" DRIVES PLANNED FOR BELLEVILLE

Participation by local residents in two separate drives to aid the people of South Korea and build democracy was announced yesterday.

Commissioner Kenneth D. Smith, named as chairman for a "Day-Long" collection of clothing for destitute Koreans, said June 6 had been set as the day for the drive, but that he was making an effort to have the date changed to June 5.

Harry French, Assistant Scout Executive of the Robert Treat Boy Scout Council, said that local Scouts and Cub Scouts were collecting Scout uniforms, and raising money for new uniforms, which they will contribute to the Boy Scout movement in Korea.

The Scouts will also purchase camping equipment. The public will not be solicited in this case, but anyone may contribute.

Another Step In Unusual Career

William C. North, Jr., of 15 Martz Avenue, who at 15 was the managing editor of a U. S. Army newspaper in Bavaria, and one of the youngest public relations correspondents in the Armed Services, has just been named editor of "Essex Heartbeat," publication of the Essex County Heart Association.

North, 26, is employed as an editor of the public relations department of the Mutual Benefit Insurance Company in Newark.

An associate editor of the Belleville high school paper, Blue and Gold, and art editor of the Monarch school yearbook, he was drafted into the Army in 1945, shortly after his graduation. The war had already ended.

He was assigned to basic training in field artillery at Ft. Bragg, N. C., but on his way overseas he was named editor of the ship's newspaper, and by the time he arrived in Germany he had been assigned to the Third Army's public relations division.

North was stationed in Bavaria, and during his reporting of life in Germany found time to do some articles about the German black market and other currents in Germany.

CHEMICALS AIDED DEVELOPMENT OF FEDERAL LEATHER

Among the Belleville companies that owe an important part of their development to the chemical industry, which is celebrating Chemical Progress Week, is the Federal Leather Company, which began in business as manufacturers and finishers of real leather.

When, early in the 1920s, the automobile industry could not obtain enough leather to cover their ever increasing number of cars, it was suggested Federal Leather consider the manufacture of a chemically made product then known as artificial leather. At that time artificial leather was made from nitrocellulose (gun cotton), castor oil, pigment, filler solvent, mixed into a syrupy paste called pyroxylin, and spread on moving cloth. Soon the company developed this line so thoroughly the real leather processing was discontinued and the new "artificial leather" promoted. Although the company pursued a scientific development of a simulated nature, the concern name was not changed.

As the difficulties in production were conquered, new avenues of development were opened. Embossing designs commonly called grains were varied with the increasing application of a top dressing or finish coat used to design a more expensive leather product of the day. New effects were also obtained by printing shadows or designs on the surface of the coated fabric. Two tones, top dressing, printing, were all made possible only through the scientific development of involved chemical processes.

With World War II, pressure was exerted on the industry to synthetically produce materials that would replace or supplement the artificial leather then made from two basic materials, pyroxylin and rubber. Rapid interest and development soon appeared in a newcomer to the trade called vinyl or plastic, a name more popular today.

By the time vinyls made their entrance into the artificial leather field the material produced by the industry at this time was so different from the original simulated leather that the connotation "artificial" was dropped. The word "vinyl" was dropped and replaced by words like "coated fabrics," "supported," "un-supported," "flexible," "film" and the like, for, in fact, the industry was now producing a product of its own no longer to be unjustly reduced in character by a prefix, artificial.

Vinyl in its many formulations may be in a hard brittle stage, or soft and pliable, or any variation between the two mentioned groups. The basic formulations vary from the pyroxylin. White pigment and filler are used, nitrocellulose is replaced by a synthetic compound called resin made from the basic elements hydrogen, carbon and oxygen. The castor oil is replaced by an oily substance, or plasticizer.

Recently the Harmony Lodge No. 25, I.O.O.F. was host to members of the Odd Fellows Welfare Service, an organization which loans hospital beds and other health equipment to the citizens of Essex county free of charge. James J. Tully was among the guests and gave a brief address congratulating the members on their work.

Design Builders, Inc., To Build Nutley Homes

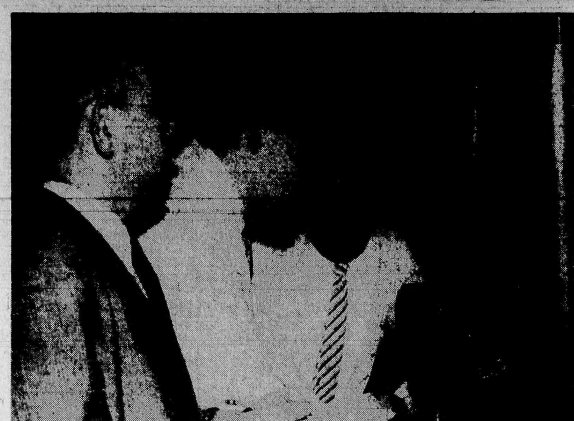

Design Builders, Inc., of Fairlawn, will build eight split-level homes on Washington Avenue and Roosevelt Street, in Nutley to be priced at $16,300 and $17,000. A model home is already completed.

Features of those homes, newly designed for the Metropolitan subdivision, include a full center hallway, large living room with bay window, full sized dining room, Hollywood kitchen with birch or knotty pine cabinets, exhaust fan, and gas stove; ceramic tile bathroom, with a matching vanity and medicine cabinet, and glass tub enclosure; large bedrooms, with sliding door closets; gas-fired hot water heat, full color, laundry room, and oversized garage.

er. The names of these plasticizers vary, but a common one, the same ingredient used in a popular high test gasoline, is TCE (Tricresyl phosphate). Solvents are present only in a few types of vinyls.

In the coated fabrics class the processed vinyl is a pliable plastic as flexible as the cloth it has been processed to. The physical qualities vary according to the requirements of the end products. The garment industry, for instance, requires a material with high tensile strength and capable of being lightly molded to the furniture piece is necessary. Vinyls more vividly possess qualities of long wear and resistance to scuffing, abrasions and peeling, made possible only through a chemical progress. Through the years chemical research has enabled the coated fabric industry to advance into many fields. From automotive, furniture and interior design, luggage, handbag and shoe to surgical dressings, burial shrouds, clothing and millions of other consumer products, the offspring of simulated leather was found.

From the old days of the "artificial leather" look to the present day creations we, as consumers, are able to enjoy in plastic beautiful upholstery reproducing the most expensive tapestries and other fabrics to the finest threads. Bamboos, reeds and other grass designs, reptile skins and hides have been developed and are more durable than the natural product itself. All this has been made possible through the progress of chemistry.

Leo Scanlan Retires At 70 After 54 Years Of Service

After 54 years with Public Service, Leo P. Scanlan, 70, of 100 Continental Avenue, who had been employed by the company for more years than anyone else in its service, has retired on pension.

A special engineer with Public Service Coordinated Transport, he began his career at 16 as a timekeeper in the track department of the Jersey City, Hoboken, and Paterson Street Railway Company, a predecessor company of Public Service.

As one of the montefiores of his long service he was presented with a book signed by all executives of the Transport division and the members of his company at a company luncheon given for him at the Robert Treat Hotel.

When the J.C. & P. became a part of Public Service in 1903, Scanlan was made track master in the Passaic Division of the company. He supervised the laying and repairing of all of the trolley car tracks and bridges in the division. In 1908 he was transferred to Essex Division in the same capacity.

Two years later, Scanlan was promoted to chief inspector of timber and timber products for the transportation company.

During the Herbert Hoover administration, Scanlan represented all of the street railway, electric light and gas companies in the United States on a Federal commission appointed to study the utilization of wood. He has also written several essays on the utilization of wood in the transportation business.

In 1929, Scanlan was appointed superintendent of employment and instruction, with office in the Newark Terminal Building. Seven years later he was made special engineer, supervising the construction and renovation of garages and the laying of track. Scanlan's most recent project was the installation of the new loop at the Franklin Avenue end of the Newark subway.

The transportation business has been in the family tradition for many years. Before Scanlan, who was a descendant of ten children, entered the business, his father, John J. Scanlan, helped organize and manage the old White Line Traction Company which ran between Singac and Hoboken. And even before Scanlan had begun work for the Jersey City, Hoboken, and Paterson Street Railway, the elder Scanlan had already been employed there as superintendent of claims.

Letters To The Editor

Golden To Carry On

To The Editor, The Times-News: Congratulations upon your editorial, "The Taxpayers Have Spoken." It is a graphic and intelligent depiction of the sentiments shared by many thinking Bellevilleites and serves as fair warning to the newly constituted governing officials that their actions will be closely watched.

Your admonition that the taxpayers want and justifiably expect a cleaning up of all town offices and the discontinuance of the obnoxious practice of "politics as usual" with its accompanying interests of the citizen, serve emphatic notice upon the new incumbents of their obligations. The people of Belleville have been enlightened and aroused. They will brook no further trifling in the important matters of government administration, and so directly affects their daily lives and pocketbooks.

The indication that the success at the polls of several of the candidates was facilitated by bracket alliances and the seemingly significant accolade of the Waters political office to me, in my opinion, a sad commentary upon the prudent selection of officials to public office.

We as citizens and taxpayers determined to redeem the stigma associated with the soiled political echelon of Belleville's fair name must resolutely resolve to prevent the implementation of any sordid or improper commitments or "deals" which might have been the outgrowth of any alliance based upon any consideration other than the promotion of the best interests of all the citizens of this community. We rightfully regard with suspicion any ties or bonds born of political advantage and nurtured by expediency.

Perhaps the potent force of the fourth estate, the free press of America, may by its vigilance play an important role in bringing about honest and good government to Belleville now. I encourage the continued concern of both yourself and your newspaper, The Belleville Times-News, in supporting such a commendable course.

James R. Golden
62 Tappan Avenue

To The Editor, The Times-News:

I wish to thank the 4,388 citizens who voted for me and beyond their desire to elect me to the Belleville Board of Commissioners. To each of you and to all who worked so hard and diligently for me during the campaign, I am extremely grateful.

Nelson J. Chamberlain, of 213 Joralemon Street, with 44 years service, and Thaddeus L. Thornton of 37 Perry Street, with 24 years, have retired from active service with the Prudential Insurance Company.

Both men are long-time residents of Belleville. Chamberlain for 20 years and Thornton for 26 years. The latter left this week for Harrisville, Mich., where he and his wife intend to operate their farm.

In honor of his retirement, Chamberlain was given a luncheon at the Sun Room restaurant in Newark last week. Thornton was the guest of honor at a dinner at the Savoy-Plaza in Orange the Tuesday before he left the home office.

Chamberlain has been with the ordinary policy department throughout his career, except for his term of service in World War I.

Next fall he plans to spend several months in Florida visiting his father, Benjamin Chamberlain, a retired printer.

In moving permanently to Harrisville, Thornton and his wife will be returning to his birthplace. Mrs. Thornton is the former Edna F. Field of Brooklyn. They have one daughter, Mrs. Marilyn Tarnell of Raleigh, Arizona.

Thornton served with the U. S. Merchant Marine during World War I and for a number of years afterward, and worked for the U. S. Steel Co. and the Western Electric Co. before joining Prudential in 1929.

Little League Starting To Pay Off

The Belleville High School varsity is starting to reap the benefit of the Little League baseball program that is now in its fourth year. Members of Coach Ed Berlinski's varsity squad are Joe Tortorella and Jim Landon. Tortorella, a right handed pitcher, is only a freshman. Landon, a sophomore, has been Berlinski's first string catcher since the start of the season.

Both Tortorella and Landon were teammates during the first year that the Little League program was in operation. The two teamed up as one of the finest battery combinations in the league in that initial campaign. They were members of the Clippers which went on to capture the town championship.

Tortorella and Landon are the first Little League graduates to make good in the varsity program. Within the next two years the Blue and Gold squad will be loaded with players who received their first start in the nine to 12-year-old circuit.

HIGH FLYER — George DeBrowski, six-year-old Belleville baseball bombshell goes after a high one during a recent game. George, who attends first grade at No. 3 School, has been described by big league players as potentially one of the greatest baseball players in the game's history.

Six Year Old Baseball Star Amazes Big League Players

Drawing himself up to his full height of 45 inches, six year old George DeBrowski, of Belleville, stepped into the ball just pitched to him and rified it like a shot down center field for 120 feet.

Hank Bauer, Yankee outfielder, who was watching the demonstration, popped his eyes, and then shook his head. "Holy smoke," he said.

Professional baseball players have been exclaiming like that over the 52 pound child ever since he was 26 months old, when he first exhibited his prodigious talents. They said that in a 12 dozen years or so he may blossom out into one of the greatest players in the history of the game.

George, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank DeBrowski of 12 recent Terrace, pitches, fields, and bats like a miniature star. On the mound he tosses curves, sinkers, fast balls, knucklers, screw balls, and what have you, and sometimes varies his style with an underhand throw that helps to unnerve the opposition.

The boy's father is a mason contractor, who played New Jersey semi-pro baseball for a number of years. His mother, Florence, was a basketball star in her school days, and as captain of Newark's Good Counsel High School team led it to the state parochial school title for two years. The boy's 13 year old brother, Dennis, batted an average score of .322 in the town's Little League baseball circuit last year. So you can see that George doesn't lack background.

The baby bombshell, who blinks his long eyelashes in real modesty when anyone praises his exploits, has more than one talent. He is good at football, archery, and basketball, hucks duck pins for an average score of 100 in the alley that his father has fixed up for home, and can sink a golf ball at 25 feet.

George doesn't appear to have any fixation about a baseball career, but one thing is certain. If he ever becomes a professional player, he'll aim for the Yankees. He's wearing a very small version of the Yankee uniform already.

The elder DeBrowski says it all started when he saw his son toss a rubber ball.

"He was only about a year and a half at that time, but the way he handled it I knew he had something that doesn't happen too often in a lifetime," Mr. DeBrowski said. "So I gave him every opportunity to develop his talent. I didn't have to tell him a thing. He just has it."

George, standing nearby but not listening to the conversation, had nothing to say. He just looked contentedly at an all-day sucker.

High School Takes 4th Place With 2 Wins In Big Ten

Times ... High school ... ETAOINETAOIN ... ETAOIN

Belleville High School's baseball team moved up into a tie with Montclair for fourth place in the Big Ten this week by winning two games after a three-game losing streak.

In the first contest on Tuesday it clipped East Orange, which hasn't won a conference contest all season, by an 8 to 2 score at Municipal Stadium.

Its second win Wednesday was a 14 to 9 score over Irvington in an out of town date. It meets Kearny high today at Kearny.

The Blue and Gold took the Wednesday game with ten hits against 15 for Irvington, but the local lads bunched the hits when they counted. Irvington errors also helped. Belleville won the ninth inning leading, 10-9.

Then, with the bases loaded, Joe Orlando made it official with a triple, which added another three runs. Orlando himself came in for the 14th run when Irvington's pitcher, Bob Dickie, muffed Joe Long's Bouncy hit to the pitcher's mound.

Joe Prieto scored one of Belleville's three doubles in the first inning, accounting for two runs. Bob Vieth hit the other two, one of them in the sixth driving in a run ahead of him.

For Irvington, Ralph Currie got five hits out six times at bat, two of them doubles. It was Currie's double in the eighth which shaved the score 10 to 9 before Orlando burst Irvington's hopes for good.

Joe Tortorella, on the mound for three innings, and Harry Gouth, who pitched three, allowed East Orange just three hits between them.

Joe Tortorella, on the mound for five innings, allowed East Orange just one hit, and Harry Gouth, pitching the last three, gave up two hits in the ninth. Belleville managed to ring out three hits against the pitching of Armento and Colvin.

May Kite-Flyer

A brown boy with a home-made kite
Assures us that the world is right
For who can fear a single thing
When sky is tied to earth with string?
A thousand years have come and gone
And still a Maytime kite flies on Through cotton clouds that spring has ginned,
Using the fingers of the wind.
Trees break to bud and thrushes call
And timelessness is over all
The constant kites and boys who try
To reach the zenith of the sky.
And timelessness is on us who Choose to ride green wind skyward, too.

"Tax Monger" Meyner Set Back

"High Tax" Bobby having been rebuffed by both the Republican and Democratic state conventions which went on record, last weekend, as being opposed to any state sales tax or state income tax, the Meyner demand for $82,600,000 in new and increased taxes appears in a coma, except for the $31,000,000 which both Republicans and Democrats in the state legislature have decided it is necessary to add to the state subsidy to public schools.

That $31,000,000 is to be raised by a three-pronged tax pitchfork — an increase of one cent to raise the tax on gasoline to four cents, an increase on the state's "take" of pari-mutuel betting to 15 per cent, and the doubling of the corporation franchise tax from .8 of a mill to 1.6 mills. Respectively they would produce 14, 8 and 9 millions. In supporting the $31,000,000 school aid tax plan, the legislative majority gave its approval to the new formula proposed by the Commission on State Tax Policy in its seventh report. The Commission framed its proposal on an educational cost of $200 per pupil, based on average daily enrollment.

The minimum amount of state aid is set at $50. On top of that will be piled additional state "equalization" aid, calculated on the individual capacity of each school district to raise the difference between $50 and $200, the per capita educational cost.

Some school districts are rich, some are poor. Some will receive the bare $50, such as Glen Ridge. Others will receive state aid to the extent of $180 per pupil, such as Camden County. Cumberland County, for example, as a whole will receive $126.62 per pupil; Essex County, as a whole, will receive $68.25 per pupil.

Nutley received $116,506 in state aid this year, at the rate of $28.39. Under the new plan, Nutley would receive $271,022, or $66.05 per pupil.

Belleville would receive $488,974, or $95.10 per pupil — the largest amount of aid received by any of the 21 Essex suburban communities. Why the difference?

Why should Hunterdon County, one of the richest in the state, receive state aid on a basis of $113.30 per pupil? And why should Lyndhurst draw $109.20, Lodi, $115.36 or Passaic County $139.90 per pupil for a regional high school? Or what about Paterson, in Warren County, which has only three pupils but will draw the record amount of state aid — $1,222.65 per pupil? Why, when the Commission announced that the state average cost of educating one pupil, per annum, is $200?

The Commission's proposal is chock full of such asinities. The whole thing should be thrown out in favor of an equal distribution, shorn of all vote-getting political potentialities, on a fair basis of so much state aid per enrolled pupil, regardless of all else. Or better yet, eliminate the state aid entirely and compel all those towns which have failed to modernize their tax assessments to revamp their tax structure at its base and pay for their own school costs.

What are the taxpayers of Paterson going to pay toward school costs when it costs $600 to educate the town's three pupils and the state is going to send a check for $3,667.95? Will the surplus be distributed to the town's taxpayers as a bonus? Is a three-pupil public school economically reasonable? Wouldn't it be better, cheaper and more sensible to send the three pupils to a regional school?

One Man's Opinion

Red China Called Our Bluff In Indochina, So We Are Back At The Stage Of Improvising A Policy To Contain Communist Aggression

BY RALPH E. HEINZEN

The staggering defeats which we suffered at Geneva and at Dien Bien Phu, around the conference table and in the rice paddies, have brought us face to face with the belated realization that in our power struggle with Communist aggression our foe is worthy of only our best effort. We tried too little, too late in the Red River Valley and, apparently, our military intelligence was as bad as that of the French. The Chinese Communists, far from being worn out in Korea, are at the peak of their efficiency, militarily, and that bodes ill for the immediate future in Southeast Asia where, once again, we have been compelled to improvise and have come up with a proposal for five-power military consultations in Washington, at the end of the talks in Geneva, to implement any agreement about Indochina.

It is, alas, only too true that we have had to add Indochina to the long list of "unfinished business" along with ratification of the European Defense Community treaty, the formation of the European Army, peace in Korea and the reunification of its two zones.

The tendency is to place the blame for failure on the instability of French politics and the possible overthrow of the Laniel Cabinet with a subsequent letdown of French resistance in Indochina as the likely consequence of the advent of a new French government.

In this "One Man's Opinion", the blame is as much ours as it is France's. We talked too loudly about "immediate, all-out" reprisals if the Communists joined the war in Indochina. The Chinese Communists did step in with both feet, furnishing radar-controlled artillery, experienced officers to man it and blew the French stronghold of Dien Bien Phu off the map. We backed down. There were no reprisals, immediate or not, all-out or ill-in. Red China called our bluff.

Britain Swings Over

The five-power talks in Washington have been made possible by Britain's begrudging agreement to take part, along with France, Australia and New Zealand. Britain's wavering ended when it became clear at Geneva, this week, that France was disposed to go ahead without her. At best, though, any such defense pact for Southeast Asia, as indicated in preliminary arrangements for the conference, would be of no military value without Britain's wholehearted participation.

There is evidence that the Communists are in no hurry. Molotov took the lead, yesterday, in injecting a wholly new Communist demand for the widening of the Indochina peace talks to include Laos and Cambodia as well as Vietnam. The purpose, obviously, was to stall.

Advantage Of Delays

The purpose of stalling the conference by endless debate and the injection of new issues is to give the Vietnamese Communist rebels time to regroup their forces after the Dien Bien Phu victory and build up supplies for a full scale assault on Hanoi. Dien Bien Phu was but an outpost in the Red River valley, to the south and west of Hanoi. Thus far, the great city on the river had not been threatened. French losses in the surrender of the fortified position in the rice paddies have been so great, however, that now the safety of Hanoi is questionable. The Vietnamese rebels have plenty of supplies, all furnished by China, and they need only move their troops and pile up stocks. They face an imminent monsoon season and the heavy

TEEVAN'S GROVE CHOSEN FOR BOY SCOUT CAMPOREE

Harry Nees, chairman of camping for Belleville, reports that 142 Belleville Scouts have already signed up for Camp Mohican, the 40th of Belleville's Troops yet to be heard from.

Last year 121 Scouts attended Camp, a record. It is expected that at least 150 will be at Camp this summer and that everyone of Belleville's 16 Troops will be represented.

Troops which have already made reservations are 301, 302, 305, 306, 307, 309, 313, 375, 387, 388, 392.

There are openings in all four periods at Mohican, yet it is important to note that 72% of the Camp's seasonal capacity has already been reserved — a situation that was not reached until June 23rd last year. There is every indication now that this will be a banner season at Mohican.

The annual Council Camporee will be held at Teevan's Grove this coming week end, May 14-15-16 and 1200 or more Scouts from the Robert Treat Council will attend. Inter-Troop challenge events, and adventure trail and a Council wide campfire Saturday night will be the features of the Camporee.

A Living Page Of History:

When 20 Miles Of Open Water Frustrated Hitler

Col.-Gen. Heinz Guderian, Who Died This Week, Was Tank Genius Of World War II

By Ralph Heinzen

It was just 14 years ago this week that Adolf Hitler suffered the greatest frustration of his life.

On May 20, 1940, just ten days after Hitler ordered his armies to strike west across the Meuse River, three of the Fuhrer's top generals stood together on the stony beach at Boulogne-sur-Mer and looked across the blue waters of the Channel at England, 20 miles away, — so near and yet so far.

Too much water.

Those three generals were Von Reichenau, Rommel and "Hurrying Heinz" Guderian, the best of them all. They had just drawn up their tanks on the beach, their end of the road after a smashing dash down the Somme Valley to the coast. Dunkirk still lay ahead of them.

They stood there they did because Colonel-General Guderian had conceived a wholly new tactic for tanks and it had worked. He had built out of nothing the Nazi Wehrmacht's formidable Panzer Corps and had smashed his way through all the Dutch, Belgian, and British and French defenses which tried to bar his way.

They were to stand there frustrated, as Napoleon had stood more than a century before, because the 20-mile-wide Channel

The handicap was that the barges were built to carry heavy loads on the network of canals in the lowlands of northern Europe. They were not designed, with their scant armor or their inch clearance, to risk choppy waters or the heavy waves of the Channel.

Von Nazis Perish

Von Reichenau tried, however, to comply with Hitler's demand and did experiment with a few laden barges in Channel waters. They sank swiftly and silently. Then he tried out boats whose sides had been raised by wooden walls. One of them, for a reason which is still a mystery, caught fire about a half-mile off the coast of France, during a storm and hundreds of Germans died of burns or drowned in their heavy equipment. Their bodies washed ashore for days afterward. It was in Vichy at the time and the French underground brought news of the disaster.

It was only in July, after the surrender of France at Compiègne, that Hitler risked a trip to Boulogne-sur-Mer where he joined Von Reichenau, Rommel and Guderian, a forlorn foursome, as they stood on the shore and tried to think up some way of crossing those 20 miles of water. On a clear day, from the top of Cape Gris-Nez which he had climbed to inspect a German rocket station in process of construction, Hitler was able to see the cliffs of Dover. That was his only look at England.

Hitler continued to toy with the idea of invading England, and Sir Winston Churchill, in the second volume of his war memories, reports that he expected Hitler to make the attempt that summer — and was all set to smash the Nazi invasion.

Churchill Organizes

"Sea-power, when properly understood, is a wonderful thing, but the passage of an army across salt water in the face of a superior fleet is an almost impossible feat," Churchill said in his memories.

He knew that Hitler had been an apt student of Napoleon's campaigns and his strategy. So he anticipated that Hitler would take a page out of Napoleon's book and try to float a fleet of laden barges across the Channel, taking advantage of a favorable summer wind which would blow from the south and would, by the same token, raise a heavy fog from the cold waters of the Channel, pouring out into the North Sea, which would hide the operation.

Churchill respected the strength of Goering's Luftwaffe so he gave orders that no British battleships or heavy cruisers were to venture out of Plymouth, but he massed his destroyers and small auxiliaries along the south coast — from Harwich, from the Nore, Dover, Portsmouth and Portland, the British fleet maintained a tireless vigil, day and night.

Churchill's Reasoning

Facing Parliament on June 18, 1940, in the darkest days of that summer of set-backs, Churchill said: "The British Navy has never pretended to be able to prevent raids by bodies of five or ten thousand men flung suddenly across and thrown ashore at several points on the coast some dark night or foggy morning. But we must remember that even five divisions, however lightly equipped, would require 200 to

Hitler Had England At His Mercy But Had Failed To Dream Up Simple LST

Colonel-General Heinz Guderian died this week, at Fussen, in Bavaria, at the age of 65.

Leading military authorities now generally agree that General Guderian was the foremost World War II armored force commander and agree that he exerted tremendous influence on the military events of this period.

One of a handful of military men who believed that tanks could be organized into highly mobile armies to revolutionize ground warfare, General Guderian translated this belief into reality in the face of opposition from the military leaders of his own country.

Imaginative Commander

Heinz Guderian was a rugged, imaginative and highly skilled, combat commander, whose troops gave him, his nickname, calling him "Hurrying Heinz" among other things.

As Acting Chief of Staff toward the close of World War II, he sought in vain to bring his experience and reason to Hitler. He had no part in the plots to assassinate Hitler, negotiate peace behind his back or depose him.

He could never forget that it was Hitler who had had sufficient imagination to support him in seeking enlarged armored formations when less forward-looking officers of the German high command clung to older conceptions of war.

An Army Boy

General Guderian, the son of a career lieutenant in an obscure light infantry regiment, was born June 17, 1885, in Kulin, then in Germany, which became part of the new Poland created in 1919.

After studies in Berlin's Gross-Lichterfelde cadet school in 1907, he served as a signal communications officer and later as a staff operations officer in World War I.

After Germany's 1918 defeat he commanded motorized infantry in the Weimar Republic army, which the Allies had limited to 100,000 men. Through handling motorized units he became interested in armored motorized units — tanks in other words.

Development Of Tanks

Both sides had used tanks in World War I. They had even been used in a remarkably successful manner by the British of more than 300 by the British at the Battle of Cambrai in November and December of 1917.

After World War I, however, the prevailing military view of tanks was that they could be used to greatest advantage as infantry support although a few men such as Col. Charles de Gaulle of France believed that they should be used as an independent striking force. De Gaulle wrote a book about it in 1935.

The Riom trial brought out, however, that even the display of German tank strategy in the Spanish Civil War, in 1936-38, had failed to convince Marshal Petain and other French strategists that the tank was a separate attack arm.

General Guderian made a thorough study of the new theory and practice of tank warfare and persuaded his superiors to create an armored troop command, of which he became chief of staff as a colonel in 1934.

Tryout In Poland

Although the Panzer units showed a high rate of mechanical defects when General Guderian took them into Czechoslovakia and Austria as occupation forces in 1938, they were battle ready for the September, 1939, campaign against Poland.

In the Polish campaign General Guderian's Panzer units cut through the Polish Army with a speed hitherto unknown in war. Mainly under the direction of General Guderian, a combination of air and artillery support of mobile tank operations was developed to a high degree.

The armored break-through planned, released and carried out by General Guderian against the French at Sedan in May, 1940, was one of the most skillful operations of World War II and revolutionized modern warfare.

Tanks Spread Chaos

The Panzer units of General Guderian and Gen. Erwin Rommel, later field marshal, broke through into France, spread chaos behind the French and British lines and knifed through to the English Channel in a few days. The British were driven from France and the French surrendered.

On July 19, 1940, General Guderian was promoted to colonel general. He was named commander of the Second Panzer Army on the Russian front on Oct. 5, 1941. In Russia the Panzer units nearly duplicated the victory against the French and the British but time, space, mud, and Hitler's momentary uncertainty were against them, just as 20 miles of open water had stymied him, and his chance never came again.

After a succession of German defeats Hitler called General Guderian on July 21, 1944, to act as Chief of Staff. He attempted to persuade Hitler to modify his orders forbidding German troops to make the withdrawals necessary to give them tactical maneuverability. Guderian tried, usually in vain, to persuade Hitler to withdraw the more insulting remarks and orders made to the professional soldiers.

Hitler trusted General Guderian more than his other commanders. However, on March 28, 1945, he suggested that the general needed treatment for a heart condition and sent him on sick leave. It was the end of General Guderian's army career.

Guderian did have a heart ailment, for which he was under treatment when the staff of the Inspectorate-General of Armored Troops, to which he was attached, was captured by United States troops near Munich on May 10, 1945.

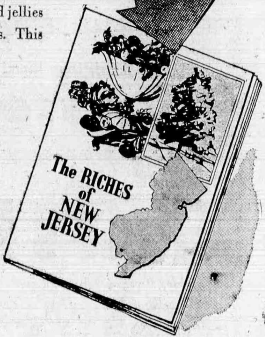

General Guderian was held a prisoner of war for a time but to reason was found to bring him to trial as a war criminal and he was released. His memoirs, entitled "Panzer Leader," were published in 1952.

General Guderian married Margarete Goerne on Oct. 1, 1913, and by special order of Hitler, as proof of the great affection and respect he held for the tank master, Frau Guderian was permitted to accompany her husband
