Evaluation Head Says Community Resources Used Advantageously; A Few "Soft" Spots

Social Studies

The committee commends the school for a very good program in this area. The staff is well prepared, experienced, cooperative. Community resources are used advantageously. Effective use of audio-visual aids and other instructional helps enhances the work and provides a variety of methods of presentation. Basic instructional material is excellent.

The division of pupils appears to be advantageous since it places the capable pupils from other curricula fields with the college preparatory pupils for an enriched program. Integration and co-operation with other departments have been provided for. The staff uses evaluative techniques to measure outcomes which generally are in keeping with school objectives and the needs of the pupils.

The committee recommends that the staff continue to study the need for additional offerings and to work for their inclusion in the program. There appear to be a few "soft" spots (e.g. economics, geography) in the curriculum and the additional offerings would strengthen these.

The committee suggests that when courses of study are varied to include items of a controversial nature, discretion would dictate the desirability of securing prior administrative approval of such material.

Miss Wharton, On South African Safari, Dines On Ostrich Eggs; Visits Snake Park

[Ed. Note: Miss Agnes Wharton, off on a safari in South Africa, recounts the highlights of her experience.]

Earlier Sunday... We docked at Cape Town, the oldest city in South Africa, March 20. As we approached the shore, "Table Mountain" stood out clearly against the cloudless sky. No "tableland" adorned its peak as her clouds were too high in the heavens. Our program called for an all day marine drive through the vineyards of Constantia and Tokai; past the Rhodes Memorial; the Cape of Good Hope and Cape Point where the Atlantic and Indian Oceans meet.

Cape Town... On our second day here we had a one-half day drive through the city, visiting Town House, and the museum.

History life-size figures depict the history of South Africa from the period of the Bushmen and Hottentots to 1952, when the Dutch settled here. Next, on the cableway for the ascent of Table Mountain, but high winds prevented us from having this thrilling experience. The evening was spent with friends.

Safari Starts

Starting our safari, we took the African Car Hire, Ltd., and took the garden route, motoring through magnificent flower gardens which are brilliant with color. Autumn is unusually warm here this year.

After leaving Albertina, we visited an ostrich farm at Oudshoorn. We learned that the ostrich belongs to the bird family but is really part dog, as it sweats through its tongue; part camel as it can go without water for many days; part human, as it has joints in its wings identical with human elbow; part crocodile and snake as evidenced by similar markings on its legs. It has no brains, as it jumps six feet in the air but does not have the sense to go forward or backward to jump over a fence.

It is monogamous, being true to one mate throughout its life. The male is black, and sits on the eggs at night; the female is gray, camouflaged for day sitting.

Lunch consisted of ostrich egg omelet, sprinkled with bitonnet, (dried and shredded ostrich meat), choriot of the visitor mounted on a blindfolded ostrich completed this unique experience.

Sizzama, the Hottentot name for Clear Water, was our next stop. Here we visited the Garden of Eden, a beautiful forest where we saw native trees of South Africa, the most important of which is "sunkwood," the national tree of South Africa. It is so called because of its unusable wood, even when it is first cut out it is very hard, very durable and very expensive.

Snake Park

At Port Elizabeth, we were entertained in "Snake Park" by a snake charmer who did stunts with various varieties of snakes, some poisonous, then on through lions and tigers, ostriches, ponies, and finally, the national flower, (to be continued).

"I feel that such a meeting is necessary in order that we may clear the air of the accusations and misconceptions which may come from the defeat of the referendum," he said.

"I believe that no fair minded person in Belleville would want to deny to the children of our town any educational facility that is needed, but I also believe that out of a meeting of the two boards could come some constructive ideas as to location, capacity and cost of the school that is needed."

"From ideas that have been advanced during the recent controversy regarding the proposed high school, I know that the people studied the facts, and therefore feel that a sound program submitted would have their support."

Mayor Padula, in a letter to board members, wrote:

"It is my sincere desire to hold a joint meeting as soon as possible for the purpose of making an unhurried and factual analysis of our schools and town projects, in relation to their necessity and the funds available."

"The Cana Movement, aimed at doing something about the vacation of marriage, started in St. Louis in 1914," Rev. Hourihan said. "In its gradual development throughout the United States, it has developed into a three-dimensional activity. Initiated for married couples, and intended to make happy marriages happier, the movement has led to the Pre-Cana Conferences for engaged or single couples," he said.

At St. Peter's, the first Conference was held November 9, 1950, around a nucleus group of 25 couples. Since that date, membership has increased steadily, with now 360 couples participate in one or more of the four conferences planned around each phase of family life.

"Sensing the need for something more than an occasional conference," Rev. Hourihan said, "married couples have recently started Cana discussion clubs. Groups meet monthly in each other's homes, under the spiritual direction of a chaplain, to find inspiration and knowledge through prayer and study for the attainment of the full stature of Christian living within their own family circles."

School 7 Principal
Recalls Her 36-Year
Teaching Career Here

Mrs. Catherine H. Hardwick said this week that she hoped her successor to the school principalcy would find it as nice as she had.

"To me it's been the nicest town and the children, teachers and parents were wonderful."

Mrs. Hardwick's resignation was accepted by the board of education last week. She had taught here for 36 years, 32 in School 7.

"Back when I was appointed, this school had only six classrooms and an enrollment of 179. The present school has 23 classes and a 700 pupil enrollment."

"Dirt Roads
"The whole area was undeveloped and there were dirt roads," she said.

Mrs. Hardwick was graduated from Cortlandt State Teachers College, in Cortlandt, New York. She was awarded a B.S. in elementary education from Rutgers University and also took her master's degree there. For her work and standing, she was chosen for a high scholastic achievement group.

She came to Belleville schools in 1919, first teaching under Mr. Shawnee for four years in Shawnee School.

In 1923 she was appointed teacher, later the principal at Passaic Avenue School. She taught under three supervisors, the late George Gerard, Wayne Palmer and Evan Thomas.

She was active in establishing the Parent Teacher Association there in 1928.

Mrs. Hardwick has been spending her summers in Sag Harbor, Long Island since 1932.

Her tentative plans include living in Sag Harbor most of the year and living in Florida the cold winter months.

COCKTAIL SIPS FROWNED UPON BY ABC BOARD

So-called "cocktail sips" or parties held in licensed taverns, featuring a free drink, are prohibited by the Alcoholic Beverage Control board, according to a report issued this week after an investigation by the board showed the practice was being carried out in many Essex County municipalities.

These cocktail sips take one or two forms. In the first form, an individual or group solicits the licensee to permit the use of his premises for the conduct of the cocktail sip and to furnish persons attending the cocktail sip with a cocktail to be served from a bowl of ready-mixed cocktails or a mixed to order.

The promoter then hires entertainment and sells tickets, which entitle the purchaser to attend the affair and be served the free cocktail.

The promoter, after the affair, pays the licensee a previously agreed-upon price for each cocktail served as evidenced by the tickets collected by the licensee. The tickets are so priced that both the licensee and the promoter make a profit.

In its second form, the cocktail sip is promoted and conducted entirely by the licensee who hires the entertainment and has the tickets printed indicating that some person other than the licensee is conducting the affair. The tickets are then sold by agents of the licensee to members of the public and again the persons attending the affair are entitled to a free cocktail upon surrender of their tickets. In this version, only the licensee makes a profit, with perhaps some commission being paid to the ticket sellers.

"The promotion of the sale of alcoholic beverages through the cocktail sip or similar party may be deemed to be a practice unduly designed to increase consumption of alcoholic beverages and therefore a proper subject for the making of a special ruling violation of which is also cause for suspension or revocation of license," the report stated.

RODINO ANNOUNCES SCHOLARSHIPS NOW ARE AVAILABLE

Five university scholarships, each valued at $375, will be available to students from the 10th Congressional District. Congressman Peter W. Rodino, Jr., announced today. Students will be trained for the cultural defense of the United States which require a thorough knowledge of an ethnic area, and the major languages spoken in it.

Specializing in cultural anthropolo-linguistics, ethnic psychology and human relations. Poly-cultural University is a nonprofit institution of learning established in 1946 under the law of the District of Columbia. The university Board of Regents includes 41 members of the U.S. Congress, both from the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Courses offered to high school graduates require five or six semesters of concentrated study, aimed at qualifying PUA graduates for positions in Federal Service and private industry. "Both private industry and government need young men and women who are thoroughly conversant with the languages and cultures of foreign nations," said Rodino. Poly-cultural University is endeavoring to fill that need.

High-Minded

A level land may satisfy and fill
Eyes that are born to it, for all I know.
But everywhere I look I want a hill
Far off, or near, right has somewhere to go
And something worthwhile, every hour, to do
Climbing a dozen ridges to the top
Or searching for them through the misty blue.
I like a land where looking doesn't stop
With flat horizons, where my gaze can roam
Up hill and down, and always be at home.
Jane Merchant.

Election Post-Mortem

By 2,494 to 1,882, approximately a 4 to 3 count, Belleville voters have indicated they were against the high school expansion program for one reason or another.

With the hindsight available to the second guesser, the simple explanation would be that more voters went to the polls against the building program impressed with cost, site, or lack of faith in the board, than those who wanted and were willing to pay that much for a better system.

One unexplained fact was the large vote piled up against the two additions. For a time, while returns came in, board members felt the proposals would be beaten also.

But the germs of defeat in the high school program were sown long ago. They were sown in part by the board itself with its reputation sullied when the grand jury rapped its knuckles over business practices. Although its members serve without pay, the boards of education unlike town governments — where politicking is taken as the natural order of things — must be, like Caesar's wife, above reproach.

They were sown in part by the defeat of former Mayor James Tully in the 1950 Commission. For it was Tully who appointed the majority of the members and generally people who didn't care enough for Tully to vote him into office also didn't care for his appointees.

This dissatisfaction with the board also was unmistakably evidenced in the board's budget election recently, when the three budget questions barely passed.

All this, plus sincere regard as to the cost and affect on the pocketbook, talks before the PBA that the construction would vote against other needed town projects, the vote for an elective board instead of an appointive board, and an executive hour resolution adopted which would have permitted economy changes after the referendum passed, worked against the board.

The sad part of the matter was that the board came up with a sound proposal as a solution to increasing school enrollment and a remedy for a sorely-needed, stronger educational program. But it was vulnerable on too many sides, and the vote showed it. How much influence the Town Commission stand had on the new high school vote is difficult to ascertain. Admittedly the commissioners were not against the additions to Schools 3 and 7. Yet the additions themselves barely scraped through. No doubt, however, their enrolled approval of the project would have helped the board get approval.

As for the purpose of this essay now, well, it might aid in clearing up the debris of the past and helping a clear path ahead for a referendum more palatable.

Besides, as the man said, you can't have a post-mortem without first having the corpse.

The "Old Pros" Win, But They Lose

The "old pros" who run Republican politics on a town and county level missed the chance of their lives to win the state and county elections in November when, this week, they turned their steam rollers loose on the Republican majority here and on half of the GOP's voters elsewhere in Essex County and rode them down, refusing any compromise with the Barnes forces who polled a majority of Republican votes in Nutley, in last week's Primary.

The "old pros" elected their own leaders, on a town and county level, and thus kept the levers of the Republican machine in their own hands but they lost touch with reality, completely, and they failed to learn that many, many Republican voters want new leadership, non-professional, non-office-holding and non-subservient to any entrenched forces. The "old pros" won a "victory" but their "victory" carries the germ of November defeat.

Many Republicans voted for the Barnes ticket, and against the Anton-Magee-Russell ticket, because they were tired of the leadership of those who make their living out of politics. Where, in commerce or in industry, could they earn $13,500 a year? Poor party leadership, against which some Republicans revolted, is sired by such politics-for-pay "old pros". The party in Essex County sorely needs inspired leadership, looking not for fat jobs, no quick profits, no patronage, no pay-offs, from the county payroll but devoted to the principles of the Republican Party without seeking to make a living out of their opportunities and responsibilities.

On a county level, the entrenched Anton forces refused any degree of compromise and rejected the successively proposed candidacies of Assemblyman Barnes and of Nutley Commissioner Robert B. Anderson for county chairman. Shouting the slogan: "To the victor belong the spoils", the Anton-Magee-Russell forces chose to ignore the mandates of half of the Republican voters of Essex County as expressed in last week's Primary. The Anton-Magee-Russell forces are, obviously, in full control of the party in Essex County, but they seem to have forgotten the parable that while you can lead a horse to water you cannot make him drink. They can control the party machinery of Essex Republicans, but they cannot make them vote.

The test of the Anton-Magee-Russell forces' flat refusal to read the handwriting on the wall and to seek, by compromise, to unite the two factions of the party, will come in November. A defeat for the GOP in Essex County in November can very well cost the party its control of the Essex Board of Freeholders and of the State Assembly. Such a loss, in Trenton, to the Democrats might well be reflected in the 1956 Presidential election in New Jersey.

The situation merited serious consideration and compromise. If ever the Republican party in Essex County needed a Vanderbilt or a Becker, it was this week when there was an opportunity to unite the party behind a common ticket and common leadership. Instead, it was given hot-headed, die-hard, non-compromising "old pro" leadership. Instead of a Vanderbilt or a Becker there were only mediocre men, the Yeomans, the Fibers, the Cashes and, not too deep in the shadows, the Van Rippers. Instead of a man with the stature of a true leader, we got another politician-for-pay, a veteran of the county payroll, one of the entrenched forces.

That does not promise well for a Republican victory in the crucial November elections. Right now, the schism appears unbridgeable.

Radar and Reasonable Speed

It is an anomaly that our police should use atomic-age instruments, such as radar, to trap motorists who may have a touch of scuff-law in their blood, and yet, at the same time, continue to enforce horse-and-buggy speed laws. The use, by our town police, of the electronic cop is a step forward in speed control, because radar works two ways: it traps the real speeders with undeniable evidence, and psychologically, it impresses many other motorists into respect for the letter of our speed and traffic laws.

All the more reason, therefore, for an upward revision, realistically, of our speed laws. Throughout New Jersey the speed limit in towns like ours is set by state law at 25 miles per hour. That was the speed limit set back in the antediluvian motoring days when cars had only two-wheel brakes and most of the "horseless carriages" were chain-driven.

With four-wheel brakes, cars can now be stopped in half the distance. Power brakes add to the safety of the road. It is time to be realistic. If 25 miles an hour was a safe speed limit back 25 years ago, 35 miles an hour is safe today. On our Parkway and Turnpike, modern day arteries, the speed limit is either 50 or 60 miles an hour. Even the Holland and Lincoln tunnels increased authorized speeds, this week, from 30 to 35 miles an hour. Those speeds are realistic; they fit modern facilities and conditions.

Since radar is teaching us to obey the letter of the law, let's be fair about it and set the speed limit, here in town, at 35 miles an hour. It would seem more sporting to define the speed limit at a reasonable level where it can be obeyed than to maintain an archaic 25-mile-an-hour rule which is bound to be exceeded with impunity. A change would teach motorists to be honest and would end this contempt for police regulations which an out-of-date 25 mile speed limit can only encourage.

One Man's Opinion

Ten Year Trial Period Is Up, So UN General Assembly Must Decide Now On Charter Revision

By Ralph Eric Heinzen

Just ten years ago this week, out in San Francisco, I was an eye-witness to the gathering of the delegates for the United Nations charter conference out of which, some three months later, grew the Charter — and the veto.

Written into the Charter is provision for overhauling the UN machinery after its first ten years of existence, during which, the San Francisco delegates anticipated, bugs will have been worked out of the Charter machinery. Under those provisions, the General Assembly must put Charter revision on its Autumn agenda and must decide next fall whether or not to call a conference to revise the Charter. If it fails of that opportunity, it will be too late.

Surely, even the most devoted supporters of the UN will agree that, thus far, it has failed to become the power for peace which it might have been. As good as are many of the UN related satellite organizations, such as UNESCO, the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, it would be foolish to deny that the veto power as exercised 54 times by the Soviet Union against United States proposals has deprived the Security Council of its true effectiveness.

Fault Of Yalta

There is little doubt that the Soviet Union, which won its veto power at Yalta, as shown by the recently published record of that conference, will use that very same veto to prevent any important amendments to the Charter — including any effort to do away with the veto.

The United States in recent years has tried in vain, repeatedly, to induce the Soviet Union to accept minor amendments to the veto clause. We asked, for instance, that Moscow agree to waive the veto right over the election of new member nations and over the designation of the UN Secretary General.

Red Russia, which wants to admit Albania, Red China, Hungary, Bulgaria and other Communist satellites to the UN, refused categorically to give up its veto power which enables it to keep out the nations we want to see enter the UN, such as Iran, Spain, Japan and, eventually, a unified Germany.

Better Than Nothing

Nevertheless, with that inherent weakness due to the Yalta grant of veto power, the United Nations, in this "One Man's Opinion" is better than nothing. It is better for the United States to stay in the UN than to drop out, or to try and force Soviet Russia out.

As a foreign correspondent, I sat in at the birth and the death of the old League of Nations just as I sat in at the birth of the UN in San Francisco, ten years ago, and watched Red Russia make use of the veto for the first time out at Hunter College when the Security Council, in Russia's absence after Gromyko walked out following his exercise of the veto power, ordered Russia to evacuate her "railroad guard" troops from Iran.

Having watched both in action, I am convinced that, in many respects, the old League of Nations was better conceived and functioned more courageously than the veto is one of the symptoms of the greatest impotence of the Security Council. At all the more so because the Soviet Union has recently started using it in the Charter, arising within the free world, as in Palestine, after having seriously withheld her veto on all matters which did not directly concern Russia or her satellite.

The efficacy of the attempt to get around the veto by using the General Assembly has yet to be tested but, the preliminary moves are not too encouraging. The abundance of Soviet statements in the Assembly have led to the further complaint that the United Nations is not only powerless but has become a sounding board for Communist propaganda.

Big Powers Broke Up

The basic difficulty, of course, is that the United Nations was established on the premise that the five Great Powers would act as policemen to keep the peace. This did not happen, but up to 1950 the Soviet Union did not abstain from overt aggression, but permitted the United Nations to act in intra-Free World disputes.

All this was changed by the invasion of South Korea by a Soviet satellite. The Soviet Union's return to the Security Council forced the United States to rely more and more on regional defense alliances against new aggressions.

Although the United States is fundamentally as strongly committed to the veto as is the Soviet Union, it would certainly help if the veto could be eliminated in disputes that have not reached the point of hostilities, in the election of new members and in the appointment of the Secretary General.

But since no structural change is possible, whether or not a Charter revision conference is held, the important thing is to make the United Nations work better "as is".

The organization being the sum of its parts, the United States, as the leading member, can restore much of the lost effectiveness by giving more support to the non-political, as well as the political phases of the UN's work.

Limited UN Impossible

This would be extremely risky, since the neutralists of Asia, Africa and Western Europe would almost certainly refuse to join an organization from which part of the world was barred.

The criticism of the United Nations most heard among most of the free world's centers on the fact that the United States not only had to bear most of the burden of defending South Korea, but — partly as a result of objections by other members of the organization — did not bomb Communist bases in China.

A second major complaint is the Security Council veto. Rather the fact that since 1946 the Soviet Union has used the veto more than fifty times to defeat action, supported by the United States.

The Security Council's decision to defend South Korea was possible only because the Soviet Union was absent. That tactical error is one that Moscow is not likely to repeat.

Minus Of Veto

There is no doubt, of course,

Letters To The Editor

Reader Writes Regret At Result; Another Calls For Reforms In School Elections — Other Letters On Election, Silver Lake Precinct

Regret At Result

Editor, Belleville Times-News:

On Tuesday night the people of Belleville and tight their purses and denied the grown children a High School, and the growing children a Junior High, all for the cost of approximately $28 a year.

I sincerely feel they will soon regret it, and will be spending that amount on other projects less educational.

I doubt if any one of these people hasn't purchased something in the last five years that did not cost more than they had intended paying. House, car, TV, you name it, but they got it, figuring they could swing it because they really wanted it.

By this same logic, then, we can assume that a house of learning was not worth a mortgage of $28 a year for 30 years, and that our children then are our cheapest commodity.

Why then do we buy them good clothes, fancy bikes, the best of everything, and yet the worst of educational facilities? We are second from the bottom in New Jersey now; and the next survey will see us last on the list as Livingston is going ahead with a school program now.

And that is a young, new community, while Belleville has had ample time through the years to keep abreast of things.

But to all the people who worked so hard for the school, and then waited at School 8 for the returns to be read, tired, fearful, yet daring to hope that the people would see the real need, one can only say that our

Just last night as we stood waiting, and one woman proudly remarked that the district in Silver Lake had come out in favor of the school, a man from the opposing group came over and remarked clear and loud that she had nothing to be proud of, because "75 per cent of the people in Silver Lake are illiterate anyway, and only 25 per cent know how to write."

I could not believe such ignorance had I not witnessed it myself. I then began to understand why we could lose. Education in the all-around sense would mean little to so bigoted and unthinking a person as he, and unfortunately there would be more than one.

A friend who used to live in Belleville called later in the evening and said something which gave me pause; and I pass it on to you. That "unity" is just a part of the spelling of the word community where Belleville is concerned, not the true meaning. If our neighbors so judge us, should we not try for better?

AGE COMES ON AFACE OR
WE WERE YOUNG AGAIN

... good as ever still, by Jim.
Uncle Henry Peck
... he tried to do a hand spring,
... nearly broke his neck.
... watch me swim," said Uncle
... Ben.
... 85, about;
... took a few short strokes and
... then,
... had to pull him out.
... grandpa at 85 thought that
... still could play the game.
... tried to catch behind the ball,
... but never he the same.

Tennis

Uncle Reuben, one hot day,
... like this tennis game.
... show you young folks how to ... play.
... I wasn't quite so lame.
... kicked great field goals for
... my side.
... one 50 years ago.
... Uncle Ike, again he tried
... and almost broke his toe.
... punched the bag," said Uncle
... Jack.
... real good, in days gone by."
... hit the bag, it bounced right
... back.
... and gave him a black eye.
... "At shooting pool," said Uncle
... Hugh.
... "You like to hard to catch
... I'll shine yet with the cue,
... providing I don't scratch."
... Now, you just watch how I play
... one day said Uncle Paul.
... He took his stance, tried to show
... off,
... then moving ... and missed the
... ball.

Skating

"I'll show you small fry how to
... skate."
... One day said Uncle Zeph:
... He tried to cut a figure 8,
... and landed on his back.
... "When I was young," said Uncle
... Lem,
... "I was a great girl setter;
... they like me yet, and I'd like
... them."
... "I could see them better."
... "I used to sing," said Uncle Jim.
... He led the village choir.
... He tried to sing a gospel hymn,
... it sounded like satire.

So ... FATHER TIME keeps
... coming on.
... Our sands are surely run;
... And, though we sigh for pleasures
... gone,
... It's been a lot of fun.
... And, so it goes, oh what we do;
... We ... who were once young
... men.
... We'd build this sad old earth
... anew.
... If we were young again.
