Mayor Isadore Padula, in answer to questions from landlords and tenants, said the Commission would have to adopt some kind of measure between now and the deadline.

The Commission had set June 30 as the deadline for controls, in a meeting about four months ago.

Turn Thumbs Down On Bog Site For School Purposes

BOARD WILL MEET WITH COMMISSION MONDAY NIGHT

Will Discuss Proposed School And Possibility Of Retaining Bog

The board of education and the town Commission will meet Monday night in the board rooms of School 8.

The conference will be held as a result of letters from Mayor Isadore Padula, requesting a session to discuss school expansion program and needed town projects.

The board is hoping the Commission will extend the deed to the bog site property, which would permit the board to offer another referendum for a new high school.

However, she said, the board would have to hold up any plans until it was certain where it intended to put the proposed building.

Mrs. Rochau said she would welcome any ideas town commissioners might have on a location.

The "bog" site was recommended to the board as the best possible location for a high school, by a Cornelia survey group here.

Commission Declines To Act On Board's Request For Deed; Land Reverts To Town Body

Commissioner Hyde Will Submit Recreation Plans For Area At Next Meeting — Appears Board Must Look Elsewhere For High School Site

The board of education must get another site if it wants to bring the proposed new high school to a second vote. . . . This is the indicated outcome of a decision by the Town Commission this week in declining to extend the bog site deed to the board.

It means that the board must look for another parcel of land, if it continues to plan to get a new high school.

It forecasts the probability of condemnation proceedings and property dealings . . . if the board proposes to build on private property, in rapidly-filling fields.

The Commission declined to renew the property to the board, in the conference meeting before the regular town meeting.

The board had asked extension of the deed through a letter by board attorney Max Schwartz to each of the Commissioners.

Although the Commission took no formal vote, the attitude was obvious that it was reluctant to grant the request.

Commissioner Elmer Hyde urged a formal resolution to "pick up" the deed.

Commissioner Kenneth Smith said such a motion was unnecessary because it was provided the property would revert "when we pick up the deed."

Commissioner Harry Sullivan suggested the Commissioners at least wait until the meeting with the Board Monday, and go to the meeting "with an open mind."

Commissioner Joseph King was absent.

Mayor Isadore Padula had asked a few commissioners for their opinion. During the campaign, he said.

REASSESSMENT OF PROPERTY IN OFFING HERE

County Tax Board Says It Can Carry Out The Job If Town Doesn't Act

A reassessment program for every parcel of property in town residential and industrial is in the offing, Mayor Isadore Padula in a conference meeting this week told commissioners the town must carry it out or the county will step in.

He had already had a proposal for the job from the Clemenshaw company, which he said, had been doing reassessment in other municipalities in this area.

The mayor said Joseph Solimine, secretary of the county tax board, had written Arthur W. Clark, tax assessor here.

Clark, the mayor stated, although this board has the statutory right to direct such a program, we would prefer that it be initiated by the local officials.

The mayor said he would continue to get prices from other re-evaluation groups.

IRKED BY ORCHARD SCHOOL SPEECH

Golden Says Industry Should Pay For Betterment; Asks Purchasing Agent Exam

James R. Golden, past town Commission chairman, said in a letter to the town this week, that he was irked to hear that William Orchard, former general manager of Wallace and Tiernan Co. spoke to school officials, apparently as a spokesman for industrialists.

Golden informed the Commission also, that he had written the State Civil Service examination head urging a date be set for an examination for the job of central purchasing agent here.

Golden, concerning Mr. Orchard's talk before school officials, said: "A juvenile jill" here? he said. Golden urged that if industries wanted a better educational system they should help pay for it, through establishment of a business school.

Life in a Necktie Mill Has Its Knots

Egg And Ketchup Styles Giving Way To Conservative Wear, Softer Designs

By Regina Smaridge

Life in a necktie factory has its knots, but it also has its angles.

It's a constant shift from the old Hawaiian sunset, and ketchup styles to the more conservative designs on the longer slimmer styles in vogue today.

It's where that neck Christmas or birthday gift is born, the mainly a group of 25 workers, mainly women from town; the instruments, high speed machines and hissing steam iron.

This is the impression from the Spring Neckwear Company, right here in 250 Washington Avenue which produces his neckties, each week, plaids, solids, stripes, polka dots, all.

Since 1920, the plant has been turning out neckwear, under the direction of Aaron Thaler of Minkler Place and ownership of Mor-

MAYOR COMMENTS ON NEW ORLEANS CONVENTION TRIP

Mayor and Mrs. Isadore J. Padula and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sargent returned from the 48th Annual Conference of the Municipal Finance Officers Association in New Orleans.

Mayor Padula said: "I went to the Conference with a great deal of skepticism, but I have experienced some very old and unending conference sessions. Furthermore, New Orleans is not just around the corner, and I am not a traveling man. But the subject matter of the discussion groups bore strongly upon our problems here in Belleville; I considered it more or less a duty to go."

It was very good fortune to talk with several experts in these fields after sessions, and I can feel well rewarded in information for the time and money spent, most of the latter coming from my own pocket."

Library

High School Evaluation Head Says Librarian Doing Excellent Job

The committee is of the opinion that the librarian is doing a really superb job, remarkable in light of the handicaps with which she is confronted.

The committee recommends that an administrative study be made of the librarian's load. We are of the opinion that additional personnel in the form of a professional assistant—full or part-time, and a clerical assistant be seriously considered.

In addition, the librarian should be freed from other duties such as homework proctoring and all home-room activities should be removed from the library itself. We suggest that the periodical selection be restricted with special attention to the needs and interests of young adolescents.

With additional help available, the library would be in position to render increased service to teachers and department chairmen in selecting, securing and distributing pertinent instructional materials.

Workable space limitations are probably insurmountable in the present building; but if and when a new building is erected, certain is undertaken, every precaution to the needs and interests of young adolescents.

The Dutch for centuries have known the meaning of relaxation

With the Dutch, perhaps more than with any other people, the good life is a custom of long standing. Nor is this tradition ever more pleasingly observed than in the easy, time-dissolving pastimes of the game deck-or in the cafes, the ballrooms and salons of Holland-America liners.

Added to these pleasures are other Dutch traditions—immaculate shipkeeping, competent seamanship, the gracious amenities of Old World service. All things considered—the active pleasures and the tranquil enjoyments—life here is an art. It is one that seasoned travellers bound for Europe or cruise ports take to, with ease, again and again.

A Song of Faith

I watched a wren in a willow tree
Building her nest today;
Struggling with a tiny branch
And tugging hard away.
Her object was to get the branch
Within her open door,
Perhaps to make a scantling
Of a nesting-fodder.
Mrs. Wren tugged and pulled,
Dropped the branch to rest,
Raised her little head with joy
And sang her very best.
A bigger problem than herself
I thought she reasoned wrong.
But she had faith and gratitude,
And accomplished it with song.
Dorothy de-St. Clement

Memorial Day Honor

Plans are in the offing for another Memorial Day observance at the War Memorial in Union Avenue when the holiday comes up May 30.

According to reports from the veterans' committees, fewer and fewer residents in recent years have been attending the ceremony which honors the veterans of all wars.

Belleville gave a lot of boys to the services in the last one, many of whom paid the penalty it took to keep the Western World free. It's not too much to ask for people to revere them and to honor all the men who gave a good slice of their lives to the struggle.

J. J. H.

Bogged Down

Any hopes the Board of Education had of introducing a second referendum for a proposed high school on the "bog" site appear gone down the drain. The Town Commission this week has declined to entertain a request from the board to extend the deed on the town-owned property . . . so now the site automatically reverts to the Commission.

Commissioner Elmer S. Hyde already has recreation plans for the area and has gotten legal assurance from Town Attorney Lawrence Kennan that he can go ahead with his plans. So it is unlikely that the Commission will change its views; and the proposed "bog" site this is dismissed for good as a possible site for a high school building.

The city of this tug-of-war over the property is that the school board now will be forced to build on private property, if it continues its quest for a new high school with all the legal entanglements, price wars, and condemnations such a procedure entails.

The amount of money the board must spend to get a private site, in heavily-developed Belleville, may well come over the amount it would have cost to use the bog area, a site pointed out by educational authorities as the best possible site for a new high school.

The tug-of-war, lack of cooperation and harmony between the two governing bodies, points up the need for a neutral body like a planning board. Such a body, had it been established, long ago would have set aside likely areas to meet population and expansion growth, and held on or acquired other town property vital to Belleville's welfare as the town grows.

Instead, there is a constant friction between the bodies for property, and a constant vying in the town departments themselves, to further their own projects. Who pays for the frictions? Mr. Taxpayer.

An example in lack of foresight is the overcrowded town hall, entailing such an addition as the William Street garage, with some offices in the town being moved to the upcoming addition.

Certainly it is more desirable economically to keep the town's departments together. Yet because apparently no plan was considered to have a civic center here, when Belleville was land-rich, there is a decentralization. We have a Recreation House here, a town garage and public works offices there, a town hall some other place, a public library some place else.

Highway Robbery

The proposal emanating from Trenton to merge the New Jersey Turnpike Authority and the State Highway Authority into a single agency under the direct jurisdiction of the State Highway Department and to put all "excess revenues" at the disposal of the highway department to finance construction and improvement of non-toll public highways is highway robbery, pure and simple.

When the bonds for the Turnpike were sold, they were put on the market with the assurance to investors that the highway would be self-sufficient and that all of its income would be used to liquidate its debt. The investors were promised that it be controlled by an Authority and completely divorced from politics.

When the State Legislature voted the law creating the Garden State Parkway, it put it under a specially created State Highway Authority. We were told that the guarantees to investors written into the bond issue were so drastic that it was impossible to rectify the mistake and remove the tollgate at Belleville Avenue which cuts us off from free travel within Essex County. Now, apparently, those guarantees were printed in rubber type. They are flexible and where it would benefit the State, they can be twisted and turned.

It is our contention that the State has no legal power to tamper with either Authority unless both Authorities have fully refunded the 774-million dollars borrowed from investors to build them. Under the provision of the laws establishing both Authorities, the full income of both highways must be wholly devoted to liquidating their debts or providing for their extensions or enlargements.

It is truly fortunate that Paul L. Troast is chairman of the Turnpike Authority. He is beyond political reach of the Governor and two of the three Authority members are Republicans to back him up. It is very unlikely that Chairman Troast will ever be a partner to such highway robbery even though it is equally unlikely that Chairman Orrie de Nooyer of the Highway Authority would oppose the Governor if the project was ever brought to a head.

As soon as the Garden State Parkway's income exceeds its funding charges, the Highway Authority should remove the Belleville Avenue tollgate whose erection was one of those stupid legislative mistakes for which the Antons, the Ellwood Russells and the Barnes must, alas, all share responsibility.

Reviving The "Courtesy Cards"

A snide attempt is being made to revive the thoroughly discredited police courtesy cards in this state. Last year the State Legislature passed a law, which Governor Meyner signed, outlawing courtesy cards. A measure has now been introduced in the Legislature by Senator Frank W. Shershin, Jr., Passaic County Republican, that would reinstate the police courtesy card racket.

The so-called "courtesy cards" were banned because of the disclosures of unsavory collusion between New York and New Jersey police in an effort to achieve favoritism for the privileged bearers of the cards. Over in Nutley we had a most unfortunate instance where a PBA "courtesy card" flaunted by a speeding motorist, anticipating preferential treatment, and angered when he did not get it, led to a faction of town police ganging up on a fellow policeman, obtaining his discharge through a state civil service functionary who, since, has been suspended.

There is no sound need for any expression of favoritism by the police. They are paid to do a job and they should do it honestly and without fear or favor. They have no more right than have the firemen, or postmen, the tax-collectors or garbagemen to dispense their "courtesy cards" or peddle protection.

The law must be the same for all of us and its enforcement must be with equal loyalty. There is no room in America for a privileged class of citizens, outside the law, endowed with cards to prove their status as specially protected by the police, hence immune to arrest or speeding or other traffic violations. If that is not the purpose of the police "courtesy cards", then there is no other reason for reviving them. And such a purpose is un-American, unfair and intolerable. We hope the Essex County legislative delegation will make short shrift of the Shershin bill.

Compulsory Auto Insurance

At the present time one motorist out of every five is operating a vehicle on New Jersey streets and highways without any form of financial responsibility. When applied to accident statistics, this means that an uninsured motorist is involved in twenty-nine out of every one hundred accidents.

A bill, A-118, now pending in the State Legislature would correct this situation by requiring motorists to establish financial responsibility before an accident happens rather than after. The bill should be made into law because more bad accidents are caused by the careless than by the careful driver. A careless driver saves a penny by carrying no protection but, in his case, the risk is shared by every other driver on the road.

One Man's Opinion

New Military Alliance Of Red Europe, To Be Signed In Warsaw, Is Communist Answer To Bonn's Rearming

By Ralph Eric Heinzen

A ten-year period of probation for Germany having ended, the battle-lines were redrawn across the map of Europe this week with greater clarity than ever before. The admission of West Germany to North Atlantic Treaty Organization councils as a sovereign equal was countered by the Soviet Union's unilateral action in scrapping its treaties of friendship with France and Great Britain.

As Secretary of State Dulles, Harold MacMillan, British Foreign Secretary, French Premier Edgar Faure and Chancellor Adenauer sat down with the delegates of Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, Molotov prepared to go to Warsaw where the Soviet bloc of red satellites are to sign, with Red Russia, a mutual assistance treaty in answer to the arming of West Germany.

Never have the battle-lines been more defined, yet never did the outlook for war appear more remote. The balance of power in Europe appears too loose for either side to run the risk of war. If war is to come, it must come from the alignment of forces outside of Europe in the Far East, most likely.

Comparison Of Strength

Militarily, however, the Russians can find little satisfaction in the alignment on both sides of the political front. Against Communism is aligned all the might and the potential of the United States, Britain, France, Italy, the three nations of the low lands and West Germany, with Spain close behind. The East, on the other hand, has the Communist side, there is Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Rumania, along with the Red Army of Russia. The contrast is all in our favor.

A major difference lies in the fact that in the West armaments have been placed under control and standardized. Each nation produces its part under the aegis of coordinated production in the East, Russia produces and Russia arms her allies. They are not to be confused with arms plants of their own.

Marshall Plan Succeeded

The Marshall Plan was responsible for increasing the potential in the West as, with American aid, the industrial and economic Western nations were reestablished. In the East, there has been no counterpart of the Marshall Plan.

Russia has ordered her satellites to reestablish their full production but she has no credits of her own to share and she has had much difficulty in building up her own potential to keep pace with the expanding potential of the West.

The major political problem ahead is the union of a divided Germany. This union the future of Europe and the future of the world. The division of Central Europe into two hostile bands of Germany, the Federal Republic of Bonn and the Democratic Republic of Berlin, constitutes the most dangerous heritage of World War II.

Both Dr. Adenauer, in Bonn, and Premier Otto Grotewohl, in East Germany, the sponsor to reduce the need for union, but in speeches last Sunday, marking the tenth anniversary of the final collapse of Hitler's Germany, Herr Grotewohl laid down conditions which, he surely must know, make union impossible.

Herr Grotewohl said that East Germany will sign the Warsaw Pact this week but still holds for the unification of Germany. He laid down as a condition for all-German elections the acceptance of a treaty of mutual assistance and peace pact which Molotov offered to Austria—a pact which would require for the future Germany the status of a neutral.

A solution along the lines now being applied to Austria, he said, would be possible if West Germany regains her independence and scraps the Paris agreements.

Want Paris Pact Scrapped

Prerequisites for a relaxation of tension, he asserted, are: alignment of the Paris pacts, talks between East and West Germany to prepare for nation-wide elections, a total East-West German appeal for a peace treaty and withdrawal of occupation troops, and creation of an all-German council to deal with military problems of the divided country.

On Paper, West Germany now has an army of twelve divisions.

The Germans are adept at mobilizing and training troops, as he proved, but most military observers believe it will take two years at least for a efficient 12-division German army to be in the field. During this time, Russia can be expected to do everything it can to prevent those divisions from materializing.

Dr. Adenauer's fundamental approach to a four-power conference is that it is better to wait and prepare carefully than to walk precipitate and fail.

He does not share the eagerness of the British and French governments for an early meeting.

The Chancellor also is convinced that time is working for the Western powers.

The Soviet Union must make a reasonable settlement in Europe in the end. This opinion is based on the Chancellor's conviction that the Soviet Union is primarily an Asian power and that Communist rule in Russia will inevitably result in conflicts of interest between Moscow and Peking.

China As Problem

Dr. Adenauer is satisfied that the United States will not permit the forces in Europe in order to deal with China.

The Chancellor is expected to urge Mr. Dulles, British Foreign Secretary, Harold Macmillan and French Foreign Minister Antoine Parry to stand for a four-power conference to deal with the demand for free all-German elections and second on the right of the reunited German state to join the Western alliance.

Now that West Germany has its sovereignty and its army, many Germans appear doubtful of their future. As long as both halves of Germany were unarmed, except for powerful police forces to preserve interior peace, the Reich served as a useful vacuum in the heart of Europe. Now that vacuum disappears.

Times Have Changed

A criticism often heard from Germans who are opposed to rearmament is that not only will the 12 divisions which the Federal Republic is to supply to Western defense be too small for effective action against a possible aggressor, but so also will the 12 divisions which will remain in Germany. Further, these latter will probably be withdrawn from Germany in case of an attack from the East.

It is interesting from this point of view to note what has happened to those Allied forces in Europe in recent years, particularly to note how much stronger they are now as compared with even five years ago. These improvements are not only in the number of troops but also in their equipment.

The sum of these changes and developments adds up to a remarkable total of progress.

said Gen. Anthony McAuliffe, commander of the United States 7th Army recently.

American Strengthening

The position of United States ground forces in Europe in 1950 and today is a good example. Five years ago these consisted of one brigade of combat troops strong along the zonal border and one Infantry division, the Skyward.

Today the United States 7th Army consists of one armored and four infantry divisions, three cavalry regiments, an armor group which includes three medium tank battalions, an anti-aircraft brigade together with a number of reinforcing artillery battalions of different types, and all these are at full combat strength.

With these increases in strength have come outstanding improvements in weapons of almost every kind. Today, the European anti-aircraft weapon, and the H-13 and H-19 helicopters.

These weapons have been tested and have recently been used in the Korean War. The U.S. Army, and such tests have supplied information which has been the basis of new tactics.

Overcoming Red Numbers

Long ago, military commanders in the West realized that the numerical inferiority of their forces compared with those of the U.S.S.R. and the Chinese, marked superiority in weapons, airplanes, transportation, and communications.

Today, the West has achieved not only in the United States Army but also in the armies of the other allies in West Germany. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther recently stated that Allied forces in Germany now are three to four times as strong as when Dwight D. Eisenhower left Europe four years ago.

Their significant changes have had their effect upon the general military outlook. Further, strategy has been radically changed. Instead of the concept of having to retreat to the west bank of the Rhine, and holding on there as long as possible.

Stand And Fight

This was understandable, since five years ago there were neither the troops nor the weapons to do anything else but to wait out the Russian advance. Now, however, the concept of having to retreat to the west bank of the Rhine, and holding on there as long as possible.

This now has admitted that present Allied forces are still not so strong as to be able to fend West Germany against an all-out attack, nevertheless they could, as General McAuliffe has stated, make an aggressive attack against the Russian advance.

Increased strength has brought a new tactical concept—that of fighting for every inch of ground at present held. This development has not had any effect, upon the Germans who nowadays talk much less than formerly about Allied retreats.

But such is the nature of

Chameleons and Seals

Editor, Belleville Times-News:

Now that the crisis has passed and it won't cost anything to say so, the five chameleons who inhabit Town Hall are again in "favor of public education in Belleville."

It is also good to know that Belleville industry is in favor of a good school system, according to its spokesman, William D. Hard, and that cheap education is to be deplored.

I, for one, would like to know where I know of Belleville's "located, because, from the record, it is not in Belleville. Mr. Hard has made only one attempt that I know of to add to Belleville's educational plant.

That was the time he brought a group of trained seals to a meeting of the Belleville Park Homeowners' Association, and attempted to leave a reform-school on our doorstep.

Silver Lake Railroad

Editor, Belleville Times-News:

The Commissioners of the Town of Belleville should realize that to improve the town they must improve the bad conditions which represent a danger to the citizens of Belleville.

I am speaking in reference to the antiquated railroad crossings in Silver Lake. This crossing presents a clear and present danger to us. It presents a danger to the children as well as adults by having the property line facilities over the tracks.

It is in such constant disregard that the town would be justified in having it abolished.

The way it looks to me is that the town fathers are much more interested in this railroad than large-scale warfare, especially in this nuclear age, that nobody can guarantee that Germany might not become a battlefield. Withdrawal of armed forces might be necessary as the prelude to later victory. This is what causes so much concern to millions of Germans who have fresh in their memory the tremendous destruction rained from the skies, ten years ago, by Allied bombers.

Police and Youth

Badge 42, this is the story of a cop. Not a T. V. melodrama, an inspiring account of a real live police officer, one of Belleville's finest. A flesh and blood story of service above and beyond the call of duty. It is interesting and with poignant revelations of the exploits of a smiling Irish lad, a dedication of neighborhood youth, and the beautiful influence of guidance and inspiration extends upon their thinking and everyday conduct.

Harold O'Reilly, badge No. 42, is a cop; As his name indicates he is as Irish as "Pat's" potatoes. He is one of the most admirable properties which make the Irish not only great police officers, but also great people and understanding humanitarians. Harold, as his boys affectionately call him, epitomizes all those insatiable attributes that lend, apothecized greatness to the hero of any red-blooded American boy.

Officer O'Reilly comes by his role as a man of distinction by no mere coincidence, he has earned his title by conducting an almost one-man P.A.L. organization by himself. He stands idolized and respected by his young charges within whom he is implanting in their impression.

Take a look at the want ads in the big Sunday papers and you will find hundreds of companies — large and small — bidding for Engineers.

Never has there been a time in our country's history when the demand for Engineers has been so great. Never have there been so many fine opportunities for our Engineering school graduates.

America is becoming more and more dependent upon machines, and as we advance towards the future the country will need more and more Engineering brains.

You who are considering continuing your education by going to college this Fall would do well to give thought to Engineering.

Within our state — or close by — there are a number of institutions with sound courses in Engineering training. It would be well to write them for information, concerning preparation for Engineering degrees.

These are but a few of the evidences of why policeman O'Reilly who wears badge No. 42 is, to the kids, at least, one of Belleville's most popular cops.

One never hears the mad roar of a motor, the sickening screeching of tires as a madcap hot-rodder careens and races crazily through the quiet streets of our suburban town, weird thundering blasts striking distastefully from its noisy exhaust, the red hot spring lay air. The Board of Directors of Fidelity Unit Trust Company has declared a quarterly dividend of 60 cents a share on the 500,000 shares of capital stock of the bank outstanding, payable May 2.

Indignation becomes the driver's sentiment. Officer O'Reilly holds for those, such as this, who wantonly endanger those children it is his duty to protect and whom he so dearly loves.

Miss Wharton's Tour Of South Africa Brings Her An Introduction To Gandhi's Son; Gold Mine Visited; Tribal Dance, Other Wonders

(Ed. Note: This is the last of a series of letters from Miss Agnes Wharton, who arrived home Sunday after a two-month tour of Africa.)

March 26. Crossing the Kei River from Okeke to Tlokele, we saw the natives in red blankets, dyed from the red dust found in that region.

In Tlokele we visited the "Bunga," native parliament house. There we drove through lovely green hills and wooded valleys of pondoland, where we saw the "Pondos" in their native dress and undress. They are glad to pose for a photo for a "tickle," i.e., a sherepenca.

The point of interest in Kokstad was the Voortrekker Museum where the clothing, cooking utensils, dishes, books and records of the early Dutch settlers are on display.

In Durban, the colorful suburban resort where "Africa meets the Orient," we had a rare opportunity to visit the Indian settlement which is directed by Manilash Gandhi, son of the late Mahatma, who started the work 50 years ago.
