King Votes With Hyde And Smith; Residents Speak; Appears Board Must Look For New Land

The Town Commission this week put the crusher to a Board of Education request for town property on the west side of Municipal Stadium.

The property would have been the proposed site of a new high school and would have been brought before the voters in a second special election.

The Commission rejected the request 3-2. Mayor Isadore Padula and Commissioner Harry J. Sullivan voted yes. Commissioners Kenneth Smith, Elmer Hyde and Joseph King voted no.

REV. HOURIHAN NAMED DIRECTOR OF DEAF CENTER

Commissioners put the matter to a vote at the start of a meeting packed with residents interested in the schools and rent control questions.

Many residents charged the Commission acted in bad faith in voting the matter before permitting discussion.

A petition presented by Ralph Josack of 254 Greylock Parkway, who said there were 918 names, and 200 more would be given later in the week.

Vote Has Surprises

The line-up on the vote had its surprises.

Sullivan, who had expressed his thoughts on the transfer two weeks ago, and Hyde and Smith voted as generally expected.

King, who had suggested study of the site at the first joint meeting of the board and commission two months ago, appeared to have been leaning toward the transfer, although he had stated it seemed to be two questions, one of recreation, the other of education.

King, questioned about his vote during a recess, said the amount of town land the board requested was so small, it would not make much difference.

King also praised Hyde and the recreation program, stating "I have to give him credit."

King said he certainly had suggested it for study as a committee, but for one, he had studied it.

Mayor Surprised

The mayor, who had expected a stalemate on the matter, he voted later.

In a short statement, read at the meeting, he said:

Public Life Still Is Lure - He's On Board Of Education In Florida

By Regina Snafide

Former Mayor William H. Williams and his wife, Lucille, stopped off here this week to visit friends before leaving Wednesday for a three month stay in Europe.

Mr. Williams, who served 20 years in office here, 12 of them as mayor, has made his home in Clearwater, Fla., for the past six years. He is the Republican party candidate for the county committee there and serves as vice chairman on the Pinellas County board of education.

"Our 1956-57 education budget is $10 million dollars," he said in an interview at the home of Mrs. Christine Gebhardt, where he and his wife were luncheon guests Tuesday.

"There is a six and one-half million dollar building program underway, with three and one-half million already issued. The other half is already on the drafting board."

"Pinellas County takes in 61 schools, including St. Petersburg."

"Real Estate Men Want Buck And Kids Pay The Price." Resident Tells Commission

Spencer S. Muller of 8 Beech Street charged this week to General Motors bying little to its youth.

"The real estate men want the buck and your kids are paying the price," Muller said, in an impassioned outburst at the Commission meeting.

"It's not a safe, a decent place to bring a boy up," he leveled at the Commission. "Ask how many have moved out of town. I'm going to."

Muller, bouncing a baseball to emphasize his point, said the town had done little by way of planning to create proper play areas.

And he charged that the juvenile delinquency rate here was higher than in the kids of Belleville are being locked up," he said.

"They threw the key away on that boy here recently," an ob- case, where Korney got a 20-30 year term for the fatal beating of Joseph Pecora.

Commissioner Elmer Hyde took exception to Muller's statement that Belleville's recreation

PARENTS CAUSING CHILD PROBLEMS

So States Psychologist Here, At Vet's Meeting, Urging Them To Tighten Reins

A school psychologist this week laid the root of juvenile delinquency squarely at the door of the parents.

"It's urgent for parents to tighten up the rein on their children and give them an opportunity to learn right from wrong," Dr. H. L. Silverman, old chief of the Veterans' Affairs Juvenile Delinquency at a meeting of Joseph C. Taitz post, Dr. Silverman also is assistant superintendent of Nilesy schools.

Dr. Silverman also stressed the need for better instruction in the elementary school grade as one of the ways for preventing a further increase of juvenile crime.

He recommended splitting the summer vacation into three different periods.

"This way," he said, "school life will be kept continuous from being idle for such a long interval."

Dr. Raphael Russomanno of the Newark juvenile system, said the juvenile problem stemmed as a result of children being imitators.

In many cases, he said, children acquire their wayward habits through radio, television and lurid comics.

Mr. Ann Robinson asked if he would serve. Ilean McDonald presented him with a bouquet of flowers.

Fred Och of 61 Centre Street asked the Town Commission why playgrounds were locked up on Sunday, particularly that in front of the stadium.

Commissioner Elmer S. Hyde said the playground was closed in the morning not to detract children from attending what ever religious service they attended.

Ochs also asked about the lack of parking on Franklin Avenue during races, and the lack of enforcement of overnight parking laws.

Commissioner Harry J. Sullivan said the Traffic Safety Committee was studying the park Franklin Avenue situation and that there were just not enough garages in town.

Officials Joyous At Court Acquittal

Scene Is Jubilation As Friends, Wives Embrace Defendants After Jury Foreman Renders Verdict: "Not Guilty - All"

Ralph Varga, Hugh W. Welsh, Patrick A. Waters and James Waters were acquitted this week of public bidding law accusations in a dramatic climax to the nine-day-old trial.

Patrick Waters, 79, was overcome by emotion as a jury filed in after two hours and 45 minutes of deliberation, and shook at the announcement: "Not Guilty-All!"

Walter D. Van Ripper, counsel for the Waters brothers and Varga, embraced him. Wives of the defendants rushed over and embraced them and they were mobbed by a crowd of friends and relatives.

It was the second time that a jury had acquitted defendants of grand jury indictments handed up in April, 1949, after an investigation of Belleville's municipal purchasing practices.

Four months ago, Varga, Mrs. Anna Waters and the Waters brothers were charged with a conspiracy charge.

Says Contractor Favored

Assistant Prosecutor Sanford Freedman summed up the state's case, maintaining that the alleged conspiracy on public bidding laws was designed to favor W. Howard Lee, Denville contractor, with contracts which could not have been awarded to him under competitive bidding laws. Freedman argued that Lee's prices were higher than those of other suppliers.

The state charged that the defendants conspired to circumvent public bidding laws by a system of splitting vouchers for purchases into amounts less than $1,000. The statute holds that municipality must advertise for bids when negotiating a contract of $1,000 or more, unless an emergency exists.

The impassioned plea for acquittal by Walter D. Van Ripper highlighted the conclusion of the trial.

Van Ripper, his every gesture dynamic, brought tears to the eyes of jurors several times as

GAS STATION REQUEST DROPPED

But Attorney Says Commission Should Dispose Of Matter

A request to permit alteration of a gas station at Franklin Avenue and Hilton Street was dropped by the applicant in Town Commission meeting this week, but the matter apparently is far from over.

Maximilian Moroff, attorney for Mrs. Peter Pedalino, was summoned to the regular meeting after he attempted to get the Commission to dispose of the request.

Here is the way the legal maneuvers went:

In the caucus meeting, Mr. Moroff told the Commission he wanted to withdraw his permit, that he didn't fulfill the requirement of letting every person in the 200 foot area surrounding know about the proposed alteration.

Moroff at this point asked dismissal of the commission's earlier stating they could do nothing because there was nothing to act on, and with the permit being withdrawn.

In the regular meeting, Moroff got up, asked about plans being filed.

Commissioner Kenneth Smith said he knew nothing about them. Town Attorney Keenan said the Commission was not a

Controls Die Today; Tenants Fear Landlords Will Boost Rents; Cry They've Been Steam-Rolled

Rent control died here this week. In line with a resolution adopted in December, the Town Commission killed controls in one of the fastest actions on record.

The vote was 4-1. Commissioner Harry J. Sullivan voted to retain controls.

Sullivan, in a recess, said he cast the "no" vote because he feared that a grievance committee set up in the same resolution was of no legal status. Sullivan said also he feared some tenants would be helped and a gouged. He explained he favored continuation of controls until some measure could be drawn with both sides.

Schwartz, Mrs. Witke On Grievance Board amazed, some in the rear of the hall not having heard the vote nor had understood the action.

However any Commission intention that the decision would eliminate argument went begging.

After the recess, residents, both landlords and tenants, argued before the commission.

What About Committee?

What many tenants wanted to know was what could the committee do to prevent rent gouging in Belleville and what would be its scope.

Mayor Isadore Padula said the committee would be formed within a week, and consist of a minister, a priest, a real estate agent and a tenant.

Max Schwartz, who apparently was what could the tenants' spokesman, led off the talking, immediately after the recess.

"The landlords under no obligation," he said, referring to the grievance committee. "I'm at a loss to understand how you intend to get landlords and tenants to settle."

Paula replied that Bloomfield was successful with its grievance committee. After rents had been controlled there.

"I'll appoint you" as my appointment, he charged, Schwartz paused, then answered he could serve the town more effectively in other ways.

"As it stands," he said, "Belleville is out of control, and the tenants aren't too optimistic."

Paula said the meeting had been so rugged as to prevent tenants a chance to speak.

"No one wants to take the responsibility," he said.

Letters To The Editor

Reader Writes That People Got Bad Deal In Commission Meeting; Other Letters

Says Ill Treatment
Editor, Belleville Times-News:
I have never seen anything so flagrantly unfair in the public face as the town meeting that was held on Tuesday night. The people who were forced to stand in the hall couldn't hear one word that was spoken, nor were they given an opportunity to speak. Having attended other meetings, I know this one was conducted in an entirely different manner.

But even worse than the meeting was the attitude of the Commissioners, excluding Mr. Sullivan. There isn't a Commissioner who has accomplished any great feat outside of having been elected to office, who can afford to ignore so completely the people who elected them.

Since I voted for four of the men now holding office, I deem it my privilege to ask the men exactly how they stood on the extension of Rent Control prior to Tuesday's meeting. Mr. Hyde gave me very straight forward yes, but he changed his mind. Mr. Sullivan also was in favor of an extension. I made a public statement that the Commissioners had let the people down, and Mr. Smith took it as a personal affront. He seemed to make my statement a fact. When I talked to him by phone he told me he could not reason why he should stick his neck out for the people, but I can give him one very good reason. A petition was handed to the Commissioners with 500 signatures, and they are the people who elected him to office. Mr. Padula's attitude was one of complete indifference, and he made it very obvious by turning his back and walking away from the stage.

burg, which was a significant increase in enrollment last year. Educational facilities are the first consideration in our municipal budget.

Mr. Williams cried when he saw for comment on how Belleville appeared to him.

"I'm just here on a visit," he said. The trip to Europe was uppermost in his mind.

"I've spent the month of July in Dublin, at an American party. And when I discussed the trip with the travel agency, I specified that I wanted a native son of Limerick for our driver. We will make a week's trip through Ireland. The order was filled."

"My father came from Limerick. And my mother was born in County Waterford. So naturally these will be the first two places we want to visit."

The rest of the trip will take them to Scotland, Wales, England, Paris, the Netherlands, Italy, Spain and Portugal.

I spent many a night on the porch with Mrs. Williams mapping out this trip. I think too many Americans make a flying trip to Europe and only see the big cities. We want to get into the hinterlands, to see how the people really live, and judge conditions for ourselves.

The Williams left Wednesday for Shannon. They will return at the end of September.

He stressed the character and integrity of the Waters brothers and said that the boys naturally had testified in behalf of the men, and of Lee, who was also acquitted.

"He is a God fearing and devout man whose character and reputation were at stake," Van Riper cried, later quoting Biblical psalms.

"The integrity and character in the heart of these men is on trial. You can only convict them if you find they had evil in their hearts and minds."

Joseph P. Dunn, who represented Welsh, called for clarification of the public bidding statute.

"Hugh Welsh is a good man. Not an iota of corruption has been shown," he said, adding the state had built of a flimsy framework of interferences.

"Political Feud"
Leon W. Kauff, counsel for Lee, said the state's charges were much ado about nothing, and said the allegations stemmed from a political feud.

"If you find the suggestion of fraud in this case, I say to you throw the book at my client and the others."

Van Riper, during his summation, stressed that Patrick Waters lives in the same house in which he was born 50 years ago, and during that time he amassed the respect and friendship of the many character witnesses who testified for him.

Judge Alexander Waugh made a "volter" of this in his charges to the jury, stating that the defendants were entitled to consideration of the testimony of the many character witnesses in their behalf.

Waugh charged the state did not have to prove all 36 "volter" charges that were enough to convict the defendants who testified they avoided the public bidding laws because of material shortages and a desire for quick services were not employing a legal defense.

He will be especially remembered for his work for the Cuba Conference movement which he introduced to St. Peter's parish in 1950. This movement has since developed into one of the most widely active programs in the parish. More than 350 members have united in the movement, which is directed towards the improvement of marriage and family life. It has received national acclaim in both the Catholic and secular press as an ideal Santa parish.

During the past three years Fr. Hourihan was instructor of sociology at St. Michael's Hospital School of Nursing in Newark.

"The question of a suitable location for our new high school has been before us for many months. Apparently, we are no clearer on the matter than in the beginning."

However, since the Board of Education has made its decision, and my material objections and recommendations are a matter of record, I see no point in continuing to improve the arguments for the Washington Avenue site and against the Panama Avenue location. I will, therefore, end this statement by voting 'yes' to transferring title to the town-owned property under discussion, to the Board."

Mrs. McKenna Speaks
Mrs. James McKenna, of 37 Fairview Place, a leader in the drive to secure petitions, here said that the women had covered less than one-third of the streets to get the names. She said that less than one-tenth of the residents refused to sign, and those who refused cited one reason—the tax "boon" occasioned by the new school.

"I'd like to congratulate Sullivan and Padula for voting in the best interests of the people," she said, a statement greeted by applause.

Commissioner Hyde interjected that "any position is neither political or personal, and stated he was sworn to office to uphold objections and recommendations are a matter of record, I see no point in continuing to improve the arguments for the Washington Avenue site and against the Panama Avenue location. I will, therefore, end this statement by voting 'yes' to transferring title to the town-owned property under discussion, to the Board."

Cautions Hyde
Ernest Arvidson of 178 Floyd Street said the people are the higher authority.

"I would caution Hyde against using the property for recreation," he said. He said the Commission would respect us if we show we really mean it and want it.

He urged another resident, who had spoken about moving out of town to stay and fight, to get the names.

He said it wasn't the Commission's job to pull the board's chestnuts out of the fire.

He attacked a Belleville Times editorial as inflammatory and said the writer was a new editor and not the publisher, and "he hadn't been in town too long."

Hyde said the board had had the opportunity to get the land at least three times.

Mrs. McKenna said that from what she had learned, the people voted against it in the first referendum for two reasons: the bog, and the high cost. "These are not factors now," she said.

W. D. Danckwerth said that now with an elective board, there was a two-headed government, both responsible to the people and asked for some kind of a liaison committee.

Martin Benick argued a non-elective board members to resign.

WHY THE BANKS

"The three fundamental reasons for banks appear as follows:

1. To provide a safe place for everyone to deposit money.
2. To maintain the facilities for the exchange of money, to extend credit and to expedite all financial and commercial transactions.
3. To assemble into a large central fund many deposits which would otherwise be scattered and useless.

Consider what these mean to the forward march of civilization. If a man has money concealed beneath his hearthstone, and he is robbed he has lost his money. If his savings were in a bank, and the bank was robbed his money has not been lost because the bank makes good."

Yes, folks, banks are really essential to our well being, and your patronage is just as essential to the well being of your bank.

America's happiest birthday!

This July Fourth, America celebrates its 179th birthday.

Independence Day, we call it, because on this day, in 1776, the thirteen colonies declared themselves a free nation of free men.

But should Americans single out any one particular day as Independence Day? In this great land of liberty, isn't every day Independence Day?

Every day we are free to speak our mind. Every day we are free to read what we want to read.

Every day we are free to worship as we want to worship.

Every day we live in a land of peace and good will—a land that respects the God-given dignity of each human being.

For all our freedoms, for all our blessings, we believe that Americans should be devoutly grateful—not only on America's birthday, but 365 days a year.

Commission

Another unidentified resident of 254 Washington Avenue spoke likewise.

The message answered that back in December the tenants seemed to have when the Commission reviewed contract for six months when it appeared the state might not act to extend controls at all.

Another resident said that in Orange, the town was keeping rent controls.

Andrew Temple of 16 Rowland Place then asked "What are you going to get after controls go off?"

Another resident, a Mr. Johnson, asked the committee be established tonight.

Ray Berkheimer of 217 Grevelock Place, asked "What was the talk with the meeting tonight?"

He said he was a contractor working out of town, and had just gotten to town hall when the matter was all over.

James R. Golden, state senator, urged the Commission to take the entire vote all over again if it wanted to do it right and to give people a chance to be heard.

Urges Loudspeaker

Golden urged use of a loudspeaker system in town hall so people could hear what was going on at meetings. He also urged the Commission to move to a school auditorium when the meetings warrant.

Golden said the Commission had acted high-handedly; that the grievance committee was just so much sugar coating and that the committee had no legal status.

Mrs. Theodore Wittek then accused Commissioner Elmer S. Hyde of going back on his word some weeks ago, stating he was then 100 per cent for it (controls).

Hyde answered that he was for it at that time, but that he had said he would study it and he had said "This is absolutely ridiculous."

"Mayor, you know it won't have any effect on the landlords," she said. Mrs. Wittek called Bloomfield "a mess now."

Joseph Annunzio of 67 Brenton Street said that the landlords and tenants should get together.

court of law. Moroff then asked that the commissioners stop the jockeying and asked the Commission to let on his plans "as a member of the Bar."

Mayor Isadore Padula requested a motion to go ahead with the meeting. Smith moved it, and Moroff was denied permission to discuss the resolution.

"If they do things as they have done with my client, they ought to give a thought to others who are following this case," Moroff commented before he sat down. He asked for a written record of the minutes at his expense.

Davy's Caps
Fire Hazard,
Chief Warns

Davy Crockett's "coonskin" caps, popular with the small fry, will be given a careful once-over by members of the Fire Department starting today.

Fire Chief Harry White has been advised to hunt out "extremely flammable" imitations of the frontiersman's coonskin cap and remove them from the market.

The Fire Prevention Bureau will have the job of looking for the dangerous fake coonskins wherever they might be sold.

The men will begin their check-up on novelty and stationery stores and other places that sell apparel supposed to look like what Crockett wore.

The Fire Department made it plain that its target was only the flammable type of hat.

The hazardous headgear, made of shredded paper, was found in tests to burst into flames "in seconds after the most casual exposure to a live cigarette or to any spark." The hats were being sold for 30 cents in several cities.

The dangerous caps are identified by their emblem and color. They have no trade mark but were made by a Pennsylvania manufacturer.

"Spirit Of Nation" Topic

"The Spirit of the Nation" will be the sermon topic Sunday at the Dutch Reformed Church at 10 a.m. by Dr. John A. Struyk.

Summer services at 10 a.m. will begin next Sunday until the second Sunday in September. Rev. Struyk and guest speakers will occupy the pulpit.

"The Day Of Deliverance"

Yesterday, the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states.

The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epocha in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, runs, bells, bonfires, and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward for evermore.

John Adams

(Letter to Mrs. Adams, from Philadelphia, July 3, 1776)

A Thought For The Fourth Of July

Once there was a man named Karl Marx, a brooding man whose sleep was troubled, a man who looked darkly at the world around him. He was, morally, physically and politically a neurotic, but Marx was a thoughtful man and, as he viewed the rise of mill and factory on what had been the German farm land around him, he devised a theory. His theory was simple: Ownership of the mills and of the land was the key to the future. Ownership, therefore, should be vested not in the hands of the individuals, of the few, but with something he identified as The People.

A century later, today, here in these United States, something that Marx had not figured on was happening. Ownership by the people? Yes indeed; ownership by the millions of people. Millions here owned the homes they lived in, millions owned the land they tilled. Millions owned millions of shares in the possession which Marx valued highest, the tools of production. Young people, old people, rich people, people of modest income. An intelligent, saving couple right here in Nutley. A stenographer in Manhattan. A widow in Virginia tending the roses at her doorstep. A steel puddler in Gary, an oil-driller in Texas, a lobsterman in Maine, a farmer out on our prairies. People by the millions, the people of the United States. They own our tools of production; they invest in our present and in our future. They are capitalists by the sorry definition of Marx and his Marxian heirs, the Socialists and the Communists of our generation.

By his own definition, Karl Marx' prophecy has been realized, but only here in the United States, in the "capitalistic America" so abhorred by the Socialists and Communists of the successive Internationals. How odd a quirk of fate that in Russia, where Marx is revered, his dream should have been shredded on the jagged shards of "state" ownership. How odd to find that it is here in the United States, in the land of the capitalism he abhorred, the tools of production, the land are owned by the people, the masses of American people, and that in Russia ownership of the mills, of the land and, in fact, ownership of any kind, is denied to the people, to the masses whose defense he proclaimed as his mission. Only in the lands dominated and governed by Socialism and Communism has Marx' promise of the tools for the masses been denied; only in the capitalist lands has Marx' promise been fulfilled.

An Assignment Of Roles

In a statement of understanding published in Trenton this week, the Red Cross, in Belleville as elsewhere throughout New Jersey, is assigned a definite role in civil defense and in disasters. The agreement ends a rivalry and terminates a parallelism of disaster action which was unnecessary, costly and could only have contributed to confusion if Nutley and New Jersey had been struck by an enemy or by a natural cataclysm.

The Red Cross has, traditionally, played the role of America's big sister, providing first aid, temporary hospitals, food kitchens and shelter whenever disaster struck. We know of the organization's quick and generous response when casualties have occurred or families have become homeless due to explosions, floods, cyclones or other disasters.

Civil defense, however, is organized on a national scale directly under the federal government. The survival of the nation depends upon the effective organization of the defense of its urban centers of production. The organization and direction of national civil defense is too complex, too wide for any humanitarian organization which must, by the nature of its creation, restrict its activities to non-military. There is need, however, of the trained personnel and of the resources of the Red Cross in disaster and civil defense, and that is why the Trenton meeting was held.

There is now a total agreement on the role of the Red Cross which has its responsibilities within the scope of action of the organized civil defense. There will be no overlapping of functions or responsibilities. Here as elsewhere in New Jersey, our Civil Defense Council has unrestricted and undenied total responsibility and authority for the defense of the community. R. E. H.

Bordertown For Mentally Retarded

Politics and racial prejudices apart, there is much reason to support the efforts of Governor Robert Meyner to substitute a state training center for the mentally retarded for the present Bordertown Manual Training School. Times have changed since the manual training school was created in 1886 and there is no doubt that one of the most urgent social and educational problems today concerns our mentally retarded.

There are long waiting lists and few centers for the care of the mentally retarded. By transforming Bordertown, it would be possible at comparatively small cost to develop a center which could substantially reduce the waiting lists of mentally retarded, while creating an indispensable training and research center where staffs could be trained and where we might find answers to many of the questions which concern us most in that important field.

New Jersey has, today, but four training schools for the mentally retarded — at Totowa, Vineland, Woodbine and New Lisbon. The urgent waiting list today numbers more than 800. Bordertown could be converted before the end of this year to provide 500 to 600 beds, which could materially reduce the waiting list.

It is the duty of the state to care for these unfortunates. Few of the 800 homes where such patients await care can provide it. The presence of these mentally retarded persons in those homes is a crushing burden on the parents and families, a source of daily tragedy and profound psychological damage to normal children in those households.

An effort is being made to present the abandonment of Bordertown as a matter of racial intolerance. It is true that Bordertown was attended solely by negroes, as it is true, also, that the State Constitution and the 1954 decision of the U. S. Supreme Court outlaw segregation in public educational institutions. The problem should be examined, not in a light of racial desegregation. The need of immediate facilities for the mentally retarded is such that all else should be ignored in striving to provide those sorely needed accommodations. R. E. H.

Drive Safely And Live

Half of the fatalities and injuries feared likely to occur on the nation's streets and highways over the long Fourth of July weekend will result from excessive speed.

Despite the fact that the holiday weekend, which begins Friday and ends at midnight, Monday, will give motorists better than three days for travel and relaxation, 154 motorists and passengers will face death and 9,100 may suffer injuries as a result of driving too fast. An additional 72 are likely to be killed and 1,860 injured while driving on the wrong side of the road.

Other fears are for 50 deaths and 2,000 injuries from reckless driving, 42 deaths and 5,000 injuries from failure to yield the right-of-way, 26 deaths and 1,100 injuries from fatigue or falling asleep at the wheel. Accidents from all other causes will account for 41 more deaths and the balance of injuries.

If these estimates hold true, 385 people will be killed and 21,000 injured in Fourth of July holiday traffic accidents. In addition, 3,000 pedestrians will suffer personal injuries. Drinking will be a factor in one out of every four fatal traffic accidents.

If motorists would not try to pack too much activity into the 78-hour holiday, much of this needless tragedy could be avoided. The time to begin being cautious is when planning the trip. Don't try to cover too much ground; begin your trip, and your return home, so as to allow a little extra time for traffic congestion and emergencies. The tunnels and Routes 3, 46 and 17, as well as the Turnpike and Parkway are certain to be congested. The rest is simply adhering to the basic driving rules and exercising a little courtesy and self control when you drive. These simple things could mean the difference between a safe trip and tragedy for every motorist on the road. R. E. H.

One Man's Opinion

The Cold Truth Is That Russia Has Not Changed; Kremlin Offers Peace At Same Old, Impossible Price

By Ralph Eric Heinz

The San Francisco honeymoon is over and we face the same old cold war. The tenth anniversary celebrations at the United Nations served one useful purpose, at least. They cleared the air of any doubt as to Russia's real intentions. Molotov took care of that, pricking the peace balloon of those optimists who, forever, are trying to see a softening of Russian policy. We can have peace, but at the same old Russian price. There is to be no bargain counter peace, at this time.

Russia's terms, as voiced by Molotov in San Francisco, are exactly the same as we have faced ever since the cold war began:

1. The suppression of NATO and the substitution of an All-European security pact;
2. The neutralization of an unarmed, reunited Germany;
3. Admission of the People's Republic of China (Communist) to the United Nations, replacing Nationalist China on the Security Council;
4. The return of Formosa to the Peking government;
5. The withdrawal of all armed occupation forces from Europe, Japan and Korea.

Peace, at such a price, is unlikely. Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay made France's position very clear: "West Europe cannot be isolated from the Atlantic world." France rejects flatly the Soviet proposal to substitute an All-European security pact for NATO. We already have refused all of the other Russian demands; we are not abandoning Chiang Kai-shek on Formosa, we are not pulling out of Okinawa and South Korea, we are not willing to neutralize Germany which now is a full partner in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"Peace Through Strength"

Since Molotov made it so clear at San Francisco that Russia has not changed her demands, the timing of the Big Four meeting in Geneva on July 13 seems bad.

It is interesting that Sir Winston Churchill, who had been demanding such a meeting "for the summit" ever since Stalin died, voiced a warning this week: "We must not count upon complete and immediate success at Geneva. Whatever the outcome, we must persevere in the maintenance of peace through strength, for that is our theme. A period of relaxation of tension may well be all that is now within our grasp. Even so, such a phase would not be sterile."

No Threat Of War

There has been, undeniably, a relaxation of world tension in so far as the risk of a hot war is concerned. Since there is no immediate war risk, the statesmen at Geneva will not be working under pressure. President Eisenhower stressed, in his masterful speech at San Francisco asking a "new kind" of peace, with the atom as the "productive servant" of all, that he is looking ahead and is not concentrating on the simple solution of today's problem.

These problems are with us, alas, and, happily, there is no sign that the Western Allies are relaxing their strength. The reverse was the case during the recent visit of Chancellor Adenauer to the United States. The reverse is the case in the Defense Department appropriations by Congress in Washington last week. But we, too, are becoming less truculent in our relations with the Communists, as they become more polite to us.

United Front At Geneva

The plans for the Geneva Conference show the Western Allies in a strong position. It is proposed to present a firm united front to the men from the Kremlin. Thus, President Eisenhower will handle the subject of Germany for the group; Premier Furst will discuss disarmament, and Prime Minister Eden will treat world trade problems.

This show of agreement and confidence between the three Western chiefs is very impressive: in my recollection it is the only time the allies have divided subjects among themselves in this manner. It makes them members of a cooperative team, and it is an excellent stroke in the face of the propaganda values of the Communist peace offensive.

All the powers at San Francisco aligned themselves with the expressed more eloquent and moving dedication to the cause of peace than President Eisenhower.

Long Way Back

This is the enormous distance we have come since the dark days only a few months ago when the outbreak of serious fighting in the Straits of Formosa or at Quemoy seemed an imminent possibility.

The UN anniversary sessions, with solid argument banned by the Soviet and the Dutch chairman, Dr. van Kieffens, were useful because they afforded the western powers an opportunity to explore the latest Soviet thinking, as expressed by Molotov.

Soon after the passing of Stalin, Churchill urged a Big Four meeting of heads of state to sniff out the new Soviet leadership. Obviously a change of Soviet policy was in the wind. What did it portend?

Now, two years later, a shift in Soviet policy has become unmistakable. But its inner, ultimate meaning still is obscure. Is the Soviet Union merely using new techniques to gain its old ends of infiltration and world domination?

Or is it merely sufficiently anxious for a detente, a relaxation of tensions, so that it will agree to end minor irritants and provocations?

Or is it prepared gradually to see major shifts in the world balance of power, and larger restrictions of Soviet aims and ends?

No one can yet be sure.

That is why, at summit sessions short as they may be, the Western statesmen will be scrutinizing every statement of the Soviet representatives, every proposal put forward by them, every hint of new tactics, every reaction to Western proposals.

No Real Settlement

Obviously, the meeting at the summit will not produce concrete settlements, or even the beginnings of settlement. But it should disclose somewhat to President Eisenhower and Sir Anthony Eden and Antoine Pinay where lie the areas of possible conciliation, and what can later be achieved at lower-level parleys, and how much "will to agree" is present.

And Soviet Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin will be similarly apprised.

A great many pressures are today bearing down on the Soviet Union, and pressing the Soviet leadership toward a shift in policy. For one thing, the arms burden is exceedingly heavy. A Soviet diplomat recently remarked with some asperity to an American official that the atomic arms race was a serious drain on the Moscow treasury.

Plenty Of Troubles

For another thing, the Soviet Government knows its own people want more consumer goods. The Kremlin may well feel that Stalin hit off more than his country could digest and manage in his postwar grabs for power.

On the other hand, there are warning signs, advising the West not to expect an easy breakthrough at Geneva or later.

Surprise Attack Power

On the military front, the U.S.S.R. is very nearly even with, and perhaps ahead of, the United States in airpower and long-range capabilities for attack. Now, significant articles

Opinion
In Soviet Army publications are drumming up the Soviet potential for surprise attack—the capabilities of long-range bombers carrying atomic weapons.

The effort undoubtedly is to turn Soviet military thinking from its old preoccupation with conventional weapons and arms—in which, be it noted, a program of reequipping with the most modern types has been going rapidly ahead—to the new concepts of the atomic age.
The very fact that the Soviet Union parades its new air power before Western eyes, as manifest by the brutal shooting down of a U.S. plane in the Behring Straits by a MIG, would suggest that Moscow is saying: "Don't expect us to be a pushover at Geneva. We can handle NATO, even with Germany joined into your Western alliance. You are talking with a military equal when you meet at the summit, and perhaps with a military superior."

Those are some of the many reasons why a six-day meeting of the Big Four may, in itself, be sterile. Geneva will be a time for sounding and counter-sounding. The diplomatic activity, the lower-level sessions and conferences and task forces, which Geneva sets in motion may extend two years and more into the future.
