Cold Morning

This morning my breath went puffing before me like a little engine pulling me on to the frozen pump and the frozen padlock over a snapping lawn.

I went to unfasten the morning, with hatchet and axe, and a kettle, steaming hot. The cattie watched to see if the crib door would open or not.

Tight were the haps of the freeze, but winter began to crumble, began to give.

My fork found the hay, my bucket the water. The farm started to live.

Lesson Of A Victory: Reform Or Ruin

This time, the Republican Party's entrenched "old pros" should be able to read the handwriting on the wall: reform or ruin.

The defeat of Senator Mark Anton by Donald C. Fox was a punitive action. The election of the remainder of the Republican county and state ticket, here in Essex County, was accomplished with such a small margin of victory that it should be evident to even the most blind among the "old pros" that unless the party leadership on a town and county level undergoes the reforms demanded by the masses of suburban voters, Tuesday's slim margin may turn next into a deficit.

With the Presidential election coming up next year, the need of reform is urgent. The "old pros" must get out. The Republican party must be taken out of the hands of those who make a fat living out of politics and its leadership must be vested in the hands of Republicans of the Eisenhower stamp — concerned only with the national, state, county and town good and not with what political campaign can bring in spot cash.

The Democrats failure to gain control of county affairs must have come as a shock to Carey leadership. In fact, Republicans defeated Anton and Republicans elected Fox. It might be termed a Republican victory and a Democratic defeat across the board, despite the success of Fox in breaking a stranglehold of 47 years. It was the Republican sublimity which defeated Anton, for he came out of Newark in much better status than he could have hoped.

Anton paid for two major mistakes — his vote for night horse-racing which he tried to explain away, in an exclusive interview a fortnight ago with The Times-News, as being due to his alphabetical misfortune of having to cast the first vote and his very clumsy but obviously sincere effort to help settle the waterfront strike without thinking out the significance of his action.

Anton, and Mrs. Magee with him because statements were issued jointly in their names, made another mistake in trying to win re-election on the fallacious charge that a vote for the Democrats was a vote for a state income tax and a state sales tax. Senator-elect Fox is very definitely pledged in an interview with The Times-News, to oppose both taxes. We believe him to be honest, a man of his word. We are convinced that he never will support either a state sales tax or a state income tax while he sits in the Senate.

As a matter of fact, the GOP will continue to control affairs of the county and of the state. Since next year is a Presidential election year, a Congressional election year, in Essex and since we must elect a County Sheriff, in November, 1956, it behooves the Republicans to make such a good administrative record in Newark and in Trenton that nothing will deprive the nation of Republican executive leadership in Washington.

It is, alas, a sad commentary that the GOP may have bought Tuesday's victory in Essex. Preliminary statements of campaign expenditures filed yesterday with County Clerk Russell C. Gates show that for every dollar spent by the Democrats in the county, during the campaign, the Republicans spent $20. The GOP spent $43,666, while the Democrats spent only $2,021. Incidentally, William Ricigliano, who opposed Mrs. Magee's re-election, spent very sparingly. In his entire campaign, he spent only $351.

One Man's Opinion

Russia Is Making A Bold Bid For A New Sphere Of Influence In The Middle East

By Ralph Eric Heinzen

El Auja is a tiny little crossroads hamlet in a demilitarized zone in the Negev desert, along the frontier between Egypt and Israel. You could count its population within a hundred. Its entire physical assets would not bring much more than $100,000 in the open market, and yet El Auja is today, not only the hottest spot, militarily, in the world but it may be the Alsace-Lorraine and the Sudetenland of World War III.

El Auja is interesting not because of the too-frequent border clashes between troops of Israel and Egypt. It is symbolic of a new challenge by Soviet Russia, a swift move by the Kremlin into the vacuum of the Middle East created by the withdrawal, a few months ago, of the British army from Suez and Egypt. The Kremlin is adept at moving into vacuums, just as it did in North Vietnam when the French pulled out and as it did in Germany when the collapse of Hitler and the Nazi armies left Germany helpless. Nothing has proven harder than expelling Soviet Russia from any vacuum it has chosen to occupy.

The Communists, their expansion halted in Vietnam pending the elections early next year and checked in Egypt by NATO, now see an opportunity to gain the Mediterranean foothold they have long desired and another warm-water all-weather port.

They are involved in reorienting their trade and strategic positions in the Middle East whence they had been barred since the United Nations, in its first action when it was still sitting up at Hunter College, ordered the Red Army evacuated from Iran at war's end. The sale of arms to Egypt, to provoke a war in the Negev, is, therefore, more strategic than commercial.

British Created Vacuum

As responsible experts in Washington now analyze the situation, the major factors in the new Middle Eastern situation are as follows:

First, the Russians are moving into the vacuum created by the withdrawal of British forces from Egypt and the prolonged hostilities between Israel and the Arab states. Second, Moscow is disturbed by the Turkish-Israeli pact and the addition of Iran to the Western alliance along the Soviet Union's southern flank.

Third, Egypt, which has always regarded herself as the leader of the Arab states, is in a quandary. Her alliance with Iraq and sees the possibility of playing off the Communists against the West, and vice versa.

Red Strategy Bared

This does not mean that if the Russians could make a deal on the Middle East for the larger part of Germany or even for the dissolution of the Western alliances along their southern border they would not do so. But the general feeling in Washington is that Soviet policy in the Middle East is now moving into a much more active phase for more ambitious strategic goals.

At first there was a tendency to see the Egyptian-Egyptian arms deal and the subsequent Soviet offer to help build the High about of prerequisites for the unification of Germany as a peaceful and democratic state.

Keeping Germany Red

The meaning of the above is clear enough.

Molotov, in suggesting that the Communist-shaped economic and social structure of East Germany be maintained in perpetuity, is proposing that there always be a Soviet East Germany regardless of whether there be a nominal reunification.

This is a bitter blow to the West German people who have not so long ago with high hopes that they would encounter there a new and softer tone, and it is a hard setback to the Western theory that the incorporation of Germany in NATO was the road down which we would find a final Western victory over Soviet purposes in Germany.

Two Opposing Viewpoints

The Western purpose has long been to secure a true reunification of Germany. Such a true reunification would mean, of course, an end to the present social and economic system in East Germany, where mines and industries once held by private capital, have been nationalized.

The only way Molotov's formula could work would be in the context of a German federation in which the union would be only at the governmental top, and which there would be two separate states as different socially and economically as they are today.

In effect, he is proposing that Germany continue to be two-thirds free and one-third Soviet — an obviously intolerable condition.

Tactics Same As Korea

Without question such a proposal is unacceptable to the West. It follows too closely previous Soviet proposals at the 1954 Berlin conference. It also bears striking resemblance to Communist proposals for Korean unification advanced in Geneva in the middle of 1954.

Thus whatever the Geneva summit talks of three months ago did to improve the atmosphere for negotiations, the election of the new German government fact emerges that these "lower summit" or "second stage" sessions now are encountering all the old familiar Soviet roadblocks.

The Russian tactics at Geneva recall those employed by the Communists at the Korean armistice talks between July, 1951, and July, 1954, during two years of fruitless negotiation at Kaesong and Panmunjom.

We Had Our Warning

The first official hint of such a new and intractable Soviet position on Germany came when Khrushchev and Bulganin stopped off in East Berlin on their way back from the summit conference last July. At that time they assured the East German leaders they would not be abandoned.

At the time some Western diplomats clung to the illusion that this was a wronged position which could not be meant seriously. However, the Western embassies in Moscow warned that it was probably very serious indeed.

How right the embassies were! Not only did Molotov place this Soviet position on the table at Geneva, he even added to it another new feature. He said, in effect, that Moscow would not agree to the reunification of Germany in any form.

In other words, he proposes to deny to West Germany the military power to secure a restoration of German unity, and would have the Western countries help the Soviet government establish a permanent division of Germany into two distinct social and economic systems.

Readers Give Different Views Of Vote; One Criticizes Junior High School Plan

On School Needs

Our citizens have just shown how they feel about the location of a new school. Perhaps the decisive vote on the question of acquiring certain town property for such a school indicated something more than mere opposition to the proposed school. It may have expressed disapproval of overall policies of the Board of Education.

It is unfortunate that the proponents and opponents of the plan to build a new High School became personal in their discussion of that plan. Now that the voters have spoken, perhaps we can, without heat, evaluate our entire school system in Belleville.

Of course, the buildings are old. It is generally conceded that many of them are in need of additions and that all of them should be made as safe, as up-to-date and, within reason, as attractive as possible. This includes the present High School, whether continued or converted into a Junior High School, as has been suggested.

The necessary improvements should be planned with care and common sense, from a practical point of view, for the good of the pupils, above all else. There must also be proper regard for the taxpayers' means. Dwellings of some of the school authorities and others should be thoroughly analyzed, without consideration for the ambitions of any person or group.

We have lately been told that the way to advance education here is to establish a junior high school. The statement is misleading. Junior high schools have not yet been accepted as ideal by some well informed educators. Indeed, it has been asserted that the growth in the number of such Junior High schools may result, in part, in an increase in juvenile delinquency. I do not know this to be true, but I do know that trained observers who say it is so.

The heart of education lies in the teacher and his pupils, not in the physical buildings. We have been fortunate in having a loyal, intelligent, business-like and generally well-trained staff of teachers. It is an unjust reflection on them to say that they will not give out any more than they can give out through our system and on to work, college, professional schools and the Armed Forces with real credit to themselves.

and to the teaching and training received in Belleville.

Lost Struggle, Not Cause

Editor, Belleville Times-News:
The election lost last Tuesday is a clear indication of the tremendous job that yet remains to be done to acquaint the people of this town of the crisis facing them in their educational program.

This question was of course put on the ballot by the opponents of better education because they knew they would be on their own home ground where they would have many paid workers whom they could use to oppose the question.

Having selected the best time and place which in their opinion was most favorable for their selfish interests they every means at their command to prevent better education for our children.

To the many selfish people who worked so diligently to promote a misunderstanding of our educational problems I wish to express a sincere thank-you. While we have lost one struggle, we have not lost the cause. We shall redouble our efforts and we shall acquaint all people of this town of the magnitude of our poor educational facilities.

We cannot let this matter rest. We can derive no satisfaction by saying that in two years when we are faced with a severe shortage of space and our children are part-time students at which school, we shall point to the leaders of opposition of better education and place the blame upon their shoulders.

Let us clear our conscience in the knowledge that in an election with everything at stake against us, nearly half of the good people of this community who voted are already aware of the need of better schools.

Polling 40 per cent of the voters in such an election is no accomplishment. But we have not even begun to do the job at hand with millions toward more, but with honest men for the leaders of the opponents of better education, knowing our course is right we shall win the ultimate victory.

My thanks and appreciation go to the Belleville Times-News for the impartial coverage of the issues involved in the question.

Ernest S. Arvidson
Chairman of Better Schools Committee

"Backlogging"

Editor, Belleville Times-News:
H. L. Menckes has said "Democracy is the policy that the common people know what they want, and deserve to get it good and hard."

Can this formula, however possibly be true about Belleville people and their schools? Certainly it is true that many people who know what the politicians want and vote it down the line. However, let us hope that when the majority of people in Belleville recognize the very real needs of our educational system they will vote to correct its deficiencies.

Otherwise, with the backslashes and guffaws of the politicians concerning one or another on their "great victory" in denying a piece of town-owned property to the school, the children, for they are truly the ones who will "get it good and hard."

Editor, Belleville Times-News:

Permit me to express through the pages of your publication my deep appreciation to all those who were considerate enough to have cast a ballot in my behalf for the office of State Senator from this County.

Notwithstanding my failure to overcome the characteristic power of party machine politics, I regard the outcome with enthusiastic gratification since it demonstrated the growing tendency among the voters to evaluate candidates upon their individual merit rather than upon party designation alone.

To this newspaper for its fair and impartial treatment in handling the coverage of my campaign I extend my acknowledgments. It is unfortunate that the art of fostering better government is not promoted in a similar publication.

It is sincerely hoped that the victor of this heatedly contested campaign will conscientiously accept the incumbent responsibilities of
