SOMMERS ADMITS TO 'DEAL' ATTEMPTS

Cooperstein Will Head A Proposed Newark Station

A New Jersey television company has been granted the first commercial Ultra High Frequency TV assignment to be made in the metropolitan New York-New Jersey area.

Ed Cooperstein of Belleville, president of the New Jersey Television Broadcasting Corporation, has announced that the Federal Communications Commission has awarded a construction permit to his company to operate UHF Channel 47 as a Newark-based outlet. Cooperstein said that present plans call for broadcasting to start from Newark's Mosque Theatre studios in late 1963 on what would become the first new commercial TV station to go on the air in the metropolitan area in fifteen years.

The New Jersey Television Broadcasting Corporation is composed of a group of New Jersey business and professional people organized by Cooperstein, a former producer-director at Channel 13 for over ten years and a leader in the effort last year to retain New Jersey's only channel. The Cooperstein application for a new station in Newark to replace the loss of Channel 13 was submitted this July with letters of endorsement from New Jersey Gov. Richard J. Hughes, Newark Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio, State Education Commissioner Frederick M. Raubinger and State Agriculture Secretary Philip Alampi.

The new station plans to broadcast New Jersey-oriented and quality ethnic programming in color and black-and-white on a full seven-day schedule, Cooperstein indicated.

In its initial phase the station plans to broadcast from three in the afternoon to seven o'clock in the morning, with an unusual all-night program of music and color art slides.

With the inauguration of a second planned stage, encompassing morning and afternoon New Jersey educational programs, the new channel would become one of the few 24-hour TV operations in the United States.

There are presently six commercial VHF (Very High Frequency) stations on the air, plus educational Channel 13. Also, UHF Channel 31 is operated by the City of New York as a non-commercial station after being given to the city by the F.C.C. which conducted an extensive test of UHF to prove the transmission and reception of UHF equal to that of VHF in urban areas.

There is little hope that the Belleville Library Board will get its proposed $43,829 branch library at Jerusalem Street and Franklin Avenue. In fact, there is none.

"I'm not going to approve it," said Mayor Robert M. Laterza Friday. "I'm not against libraries; it's just that the request is for too much."

$9,000 per year rental would amount to $180,000 in 20 years, he said which must be added to the original $42,000, plus upkeep.

Libraries In Each School? The Mayor also has been investigating the possibility of utilizing vacant classrooms at schools 7, 10 and 4 as branch libraries. He feels the present staff could be stationed at the school for perhaps three days per week.

He is also looking into the matter of using town lands for library uses, he said, and had told the Library Board so.

The proposed branch library is to be located in one of Belleville's fastest growing sections of town, which has gained nearly 3,000 new residents since the last census. The new high school, if

Mrs. Robert Barnes, 56 Wallace Street, has taken out a petition required by all applicants who plan to run for a position on the Belleville Board of Education, but has not yet announced her plans for the February elections.

Two positions are open on the board, both men, Ernest S. Arvidson, 56 of 178 Floyd Street, and Nicholas S. Juliano, 46, 339 Union Avenue, have announced plans to seek re-election to the board. Both have served one three year term.

Mrs. Barnes has a son in the first grade at School 1, and has concerned herself with conditions at four Belleville schools which she claims are crowded, but board of education members took a detached view of her program.

Motivated By Desire To 'Make Government Work,' Explains Ousted Manager

William A. Sommers, ousted town manager, under cross-examination by the town's special counsel, Michael A. Querques of Orange, N. J., admitted that he attempted to induce three Council members to accept different deals involving the office of Registrar of Vital Statistics and a halt to the investigation of the Revenue and Finance department now underway. Sommers offered the "deals" to Mayor Robert M. Laterza, Deputy Mayor G. George Addonizio, and Councilman Vincent T. Strumolo.

Sommers said the three officials refused his deals. He explained his proposed deals were efforts to make council-manager government work. The new form of government came into being July 1 and Sommers became the town's first manager two months later on Sept. 1.

Is the Code Illegal? The audience also heard its newly adopted administrative code called illegal and unable to withstand challenge by William A. Ozzard, attorney for Sommers. The council adjourned at 3:30 a.m., delaying a decision on the Sommers' dismissal for the next regular meeting of the Town Council, Wednesday, December 26, last night.

A last minute "executive session" was cancelled after Ozzard told the members his client sought only dismissal of the charges and had no further interest in serving Belleville.

Risoli's Part In Probe The special hearing on the dismissal of Sommers, hinged on three key factors: the Registrar's position, the firing of Ralph M. Risoli, 45-year-old head of the Department of Health and Welfare and a charge of interfering with an authorized auditing of the Finance and Revenue Department.

A third issue was the alleged part of Frank A. Orechio, publisher of The Belleville Times, played in the town's political life. Councilman James R. Gaden attempted to implicate Orechio failed when both the Council's attorneys, Thomas D'Avella and Michael A. Querques told the councilman that Orechio was not the issue.

Editor's Position Clarified

Golden turned to Ozzard for help, but went unsupported when the defense attorneys said that if Ozzard were to be summoned before the hearing, it would be "on a voluntary basis, not a legal basis."

"If I wanted him, I'd get him," Ozzard observed, indicating he thought the publisher had more real influence in the Sommers case, although his name cropped up frequently during the hearing.

During the hearing Sommers admitted he proposed appointing Risoli, Registrar of Vital Statistics since 1957, to a new post of secretary to the Belleville Planning Board at $6,000 a year salary. Risoli now receives $4,700.

The offer was made during the week of September 17.

On the night of September 24 (at the Gallop Cocktail Lounge), according to Strumolo, Sommers tried to induce Councilman Strumolo into an agreement whereby he, Sommers, would appoint Risoli to a non-existent post of administrative aide to the Town Manager.

Sommers would create the job if Strumolo, Addonizio, and Laterza would agree to change the Administrative Code to agree with the wishes of Sommers. The new post would carry a $6,000 salary, representing a $1,300 pay increase for Risoli whom Sommers later termed "incompetent."

Tedesco's Version

Sommers' last approach took place on the weekend of October 26. Charles Tedesco furnished The Times-News with these details after the hearing ended.

Friday, October 26 Sommers summoned his deputy, Charles A. Tedesco, a member of the New Jersey bar since 1937, into his private office. After he entered the office, Tedesco related, Sommers asked him to "pull the door shut because I don't want Marion to hear what I have to tell you." (Marion is Miss Marion Malcolm, a town hall stenographer-clerk then employed as secretary to Sommers.)

Sommers instructed Tedesco to contact Mayor Laterza, Deputy Mayor Addonizio, and Councilman Strumolo and tell them "I will give Risoli job security if they will call off the investigation of the Revenue and Finance Department."

Over the weekend Tedesco contacted the three public officials and told them "Sommers wants to make a deal with you — call off the Revenue and Finance investigation and he will give Risoli job security." All three public officials — Laterza, Strumolo, and Addonizio angrily and heatedly rejected the proposed deal.

Nervously chewing a wad of gum, Risoli detailed his conversation with Sommers that morning. He denied that the town manager had discussed his qualifications for the position he held. Sommers, he said, refused to give his reasons for the sudden dismissal.

Ozzard's Cross-Examination

Ozzard then took over the cross-examination.

He said that Risoli had failed a state Civil Service examination; that he lacked a state certification required of any person who heads a two-division branch of municipal government; and that his two subordinates did the actual work of the department.

"Risoli tried to draw a distinction between the duties of a director who supervises and the workers who carry out his instructions. 'I only administrate,' he said. Ozzard attempted to show Risoli had neither qualification to perform either job under his supervision."

Marion Malcolm Adds Support

Another strong witness for Sommers was his former secretary, Miss Marion Malcolm. It was she, she testified, who suggested Risoli be kept in office. Why? She had once worked with Risoli for nearly two years. She was his friend.

Sommers removal of politics from employees affairs had been welcomed and town employees had been "glad." Under Sommers brief regime morale had been at an all-time high, she said. Now it had sunk to a new low.

"He's the best thing that ever hit Belleville," Miss Malcolm declared.

Antics of a Councilman

Querques' cross-examination was hampered by Councilman James R. Golden, whose conduct during the hearing ranged from good humor to hysterical outbursts of uncontrollable rage.

Golden, who is a driver on the 13 Broad Street bus of the Public Service Coordinated Transport, delights in baiting his fellow councilmen.

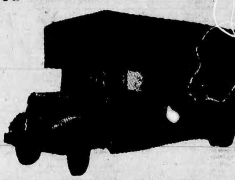

As Querques addressed Miss Malcolm, Golden sprang to his feet.

"What the hell do you think this is!" he demanded. "You trying to intimidate the witness?" He waved a finger at Querques. "It's obvious what your mother is!" he yelled shrilly.

Even Golden's followers were disgusted.

It was shortly after his third attempted "deal" failed that Sommers discharged Risoli as Registrar because "he was incompetent." And that's the man he wanted to keep?" he asked with cutting logic.

Sommers on Stand

At 1:57 a.m. Sommers took the stand in his own defense.

He categorically accounted for all his actions since being employed by the Town Council September 1, until his suspension six weeks later.

Why no Belleville residence? He had three children in school and couldn't move on such short notice. The Council, he said, had given its tacit approval of the arrangement.

Had he changed the Municipal Code before it went to the printers? Yes, but with the knowledge and approval of the Council. There were no objections from the Councilors.

The Risoli firing and his subsequent offer of a "deal" First, Risoli was not qualified, as second, although he had no confidence in Risoli, he would keep him if the Council dropped the auditing of the Town's books. His reasons were that an audit was unnecessary after the A.M. Hart auditors had gone over the books last year.

Strumolo Intervenes

He said Councilman Vincent T. Strumolo had made two efforts to persuade him to keep Risoli in office. Strumolo, in a rare speech before the Council table, denied the alleged interventions on Risoli's behalf.

Strumolo said he had approached Sommers and asked that he abide by the administrative code. That was not to be construed as "pressure," said Strumolo.

The "pressure" from the Council majority bloc and Ozzard increased, he claimed, with each edition of the newspaper carrying more anti-Sommers editorials. He also had observed, he said, that Ozzard had a foreknowledge of the Council's actions.

No Immediate Reaction

The three councilmen he had had Tedesco contact regarding Risoli, did not express any reaction after being turned down by them. He said, it wasn't until nearly a week later that he learned, via the Belleville Times, that the majority bloc was "indignant."

Ozzard Summarizes

Ozzard gave this summary of the hearing:

The "interference" of an investigation of the Finance and Revenue department was a delay of several hours while Sommers checked the cost of an audit. Risoli was unqualified by his own testimony.

"These are not grounds for the dismissal of a clerk, much less a town manager of a municipality," he said. "Now, I have some news for you. Mr. Sommers doesn't want to work in your town." He said that Sommers' continued employment here would be under adverse conditions.

"And no newspaper yet has ever run a town efficiently. These allegations have not been substantiated. There is no justification for this indignity. I move that the charges be withdrawn."

Mayor Laterza suggested the council members discuss the matter in executive session, but agreed to adjourn five days until the next meeting of the council before delivering a verdict.

In a brief summary, Querques said that in view of the admissions made by Sommers and their subsequently invalid explanations, he felt there was no need for a lengthy recital of the charges and their proof by the plaintiffs.

Girl Scouts Inspect Candy Factory, Fish Hatchery

Girl Scouts of three Belleville troops made a cross-country jaunt recently which included a brief stop at various business places and a close look at the candi piscatorial and fowl producing business. The trip was made to Hackettstown.

First stop was a candy factory, where Mr. Becks, the personnel manager welcomed the troops. Charles Stillwagon and Mrs. May Kukman took the girls on a tour of the plant where everyone was issued white paper hats and adults were given white coats to put on.

The troops started in the receiving room, where the chocolate is brought in, in large bags, they followed the chocolate through each state of its processing. First the chocolate is melted down, then beaten smooth and hardened and pressed into sheets.

Dots are made for "bain candy," and chocolate coating is put over peanuts. The candy is then coated in different colors, polished and the colors are mixed together. An initial is put on each candy, packaged, and sent to the shipping room.

After the tour, the troops went to the cafeteria for a soda or hot chocolate. Before leaving the plant, everyone was given a large box of wafers.

Charles O. Hayford State Fish Hatcheries, was the next stop for the troops. They saw pools with different sizes of brown and rainbow trout, which are used to stock streams and rivers of New Jersey. Pools of brown trout, hurst, formerly of Belleville, are receiving congratulations on the arrival of their first child, a son, David, born December 11 in East Orange General Hospital. His birth weight was six pounds, 4 ounces. Mrs. Albagli is the former Maureen Bellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bellis of 25 Fairway Avenue. Mr. Albagli, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor J. Albagli of 21 Ligham Street, is a draftsman with the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

The girls participating in the days events were: Brownie Troop 487, Leader Mrs. D. Costello, assistant leader Mrs. N. Vitiello, Donna Alliesi, Nancy Black, Donna Carglio, Peggy Costello, Carol Di Blase, Diane Drury, Barbara Kaponick, Anna Kaponick, Carol Masi, Karen Smith, Dolores Sorroche, Beatrice Tully, Karen Walker, Robin Whipple. Adults with troop: Mrs. M. Drury and Mrs. Whipple.

Brownie Troop 488, Leader Mrs. A. Torsello, Joyce Catala, Susan Mack, Linda Martine, Laura Porcelli, Carol Reed, Janice Rosania, Joyce Torsello, Michelle Vitiello, Maria Zarra. Mrs. W. Macek accompanied the troop.

Intermediate Troop 967: Leader, Mrs. A. Spooner, assistant leaders, Mrs. V. Lovall and Mrs. P. Vecchiarelli, Doris Bergamini, Lorraine Lovall, Lucia Malata, Linda Miller, Diane Massimino, Sandy Pasquariello, Judy Sorrentino, Trudy Spooner, Patty Vecchiarelli, Diane Walker. Mrs. Malata accompanied the troop.

The Charges Are True

A majority of the Town Council suspended William A. Sommers on November 20. The suspension resolution cited four reasons for the action. After a seven-hour hearing which Sommers requested, by his own admission Sommers stood guilty as charged.

The charges?

1. William A. Sommers willfully, deliberately and knowingly failed to recognize and follow the Administrative Code. Sommers admitted guilty to an attempt to change Section 24 (c), Rule III and Article I of the Administrative Code.

2. William A. Sommers was insubordinate. Sommers pleaded guilty to the charge that he attempted to stop the probe of the Revenue and Finance Department authorized by the Town Council on August 28, despite the fact he had no authorization to do so.

3. William A. Sommers displayed conduct unbecoming a public official. Sommers pleaded guilty to attempts to make deals with three members of the Town Council.

4. William A. Sommers ignored ordinance and resolution provisions passed by the Town Council. Sommers confessed he attempted to reduce the off-street parking requirements for future apartments from 150 per cent to 100 per cent despite the fact that the Council had passed upon first reading an ordinance requiring 150 per cent. He pleaded guilty to attempts to change the ordinance involving the Administrative Code.

One thing should be noted for the record — for the most part, Mr. Sommers did not volunteer any of his admissions — they were obtained by the town's special counsel under cross examination.

Attempts to change ordinance: after their first reading and approval by the Town Council represent illegal acts on the part of Sommers. Defying provisions of the Administrative Code represents an additional illegal act on the part of Sommers.

Trying to make deals with three members of the Town Council may or may not be illegal — but it is certainly unethical. Public officials are expected to act ethically at all times.

From the testimony introduced at Friday night's hearing Sommers made three deal attempts — he wanted to give Ralph Risoli, Town Registrar, a job as secretary to the Planning Board at $6,000. And as the town's special counsel properly emphasized, the salary would have represented a $1,300 boost in pay for Risoli who Sommers now claims was incompetent.

The second attempted deal involved Risoli's appointment as Administrative Aide to the Town Manager at $6,000 — again a $1,300 raise with more authority and responsibility. In both cases the proposed jobs would be traded for Risoli's Registrar position.

The third deal involved calling off the Revenue and Finance Department investigation in exchange for giving Risoli job security in the office of Registrar and recognizing him as head of the Department of Health and Welfare.

It is clear that Sommers failed the Town Council and the people of Belleville. The charges filed against him have been proven.

In his testimony Sommers made certain statements relating to this newspaper and its editor-publisher.

When Sommers said "Mr. Orechio told me 'we want Risoli'", Sommers simply wasn't telling the truth. The statement was a malicious libel — and from Sommers we had every reason to believe he would tell the truth.

As for Sommers' charge that The Times-News applied pressure upon him — again Sommers states a falsehood. The Times-News never applied pressure upon Sommers or any other public official. Nor will we ever do so.

The integrity of our editorial and news policy is not for sale at any price — and this includes Risoli and Sommers.

As for the personal integrity of the editor-publisher of The Times-News we would point out that the Orechio family took up residence on the Belleville-Nutley line at the turn of the Twentieth Century. The Orechio family has been part of this area since 1904. And in 58 years it has a record of which it is proud and a family name which we cherish and protect.

Mr. Sommers' belated smears cannot change that record or reputation. Politics has been said to be dirty business. Sommers has made every effort to prove it.

Imposters

Recent thefts and unlawful entries by men posing as employees, repairmen or representatives of Public Service Electric and Gas Company, have led officials of the company to issue a warning to the public, particularly housewives, against indiscriminately allowing such persons to gain entrance to their household.

According to Public Service, the best precaution against these imposters is to require proper identification before admitting any caller, unless the individual is known by the occupant of the house.

If the person cannot show the necessary credentials, which are provided all Public Service employees, the proper authorities should be notified as soon as possible.

Broad Wing

American retailing has broad wings. They are reaching out over much of the civilized world.

A traveler in England, for example, will notice how the concept of mass distribution has crossed the seas. Supermarkets, American-style, are appearing in ever-increasing numbers. So are variety and other types of stores. Some of these, in fact, are owned by American chain companies with overseas subsidiaries. Others are locally-owned. But all follow, one way or another, the American pattern and they are proving enormously attractive to consumers.

This does not mean that old ways of retailing have vanished. The ancient system of shopping where the housewife went to one store for meats and vegetables, another for meat, still another for bread, and so on down the list remains. But it is gradually giving way to the new. So big-volume, low-unit-profit mass distribution is bringing about a gradual retail revolution abroad, precisely as it has done here.

American exports consist of more than goods. Ideas — the kind of ideas that help to improve living standards for all — are among them.

Warn By Flares

New Jersey's Director of Motor Vehicles should be commended for issuing a strong appeal to the State's motorists to equip their cars with flare-type warning devices to help prevent nighttime rear-end collisions between disabled and moving vehicles.

Director Ned J. Parsekian notes that this type of accident is becoming increasingly prevalent on the State's highways and adds that winter driving conditions greatly increase the danger.

Often motorists are disabled at a place where there are no shoulders on the road, and in such a situation on a dark night, it is probable that an accident would result. Even the ordinary device of leaving one's tail lights on could in some circumstances lead to a serious accident. A driver who is unfamiliar with the road or who is tired or drowsy will often follow a set of tail lights appearing on a parked car under the false impression that the car is in a lane of travel and moving ahead. Serious accidents have resulted from this type of situation. A flare, on the other hand, is universally recognized as a sign of danger and commands immediate attention.

Many a needless tragedy could have been avoided with a flare type device. An example is the case of a woman driver who stopped to assist an injured man lying in the roadway and was struck down and killed by another driver who did not perceive her in time. The use of a flare could have saved this life.

Purchase a flare and store it in the trunk of your car against the possibility that you may be in need of the warning device during the hazardous winter months or will be in a position to assist another motorist in need.

National Insurance Group Names Rooney To Post

J. Dewey Dorsett, general manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies, today announced the appointment of a 10-member New Jersey Advisory Committee to the association to promote the interests of member companies writing casualty and surety insurance in this State.

John B. Rooney of Nutley, assistant secretary of the America Fore Loyalty Group, has been designated as chairman. Similar advisory committees at the State level have been set up throughout the country.

"The association headquarters here in New York and our branch offices in Washington, Chicago and San Francisco," Dorsett said, "work with these advisory committees in looking after the legitimate interests of our member companies and in the public interest."

"The individuals serving on the committees live on the home grounds. They know local conditions and are at all times in a position to advise with us as to what needs to be done to improve the image of insurance, to serve the public better and more efficiently, and to look after the proper interests of the casualty and surety companies in matters of industry legislation and insurance regulation."

"Other areas of attention in which advisory committees are helpful to the public, insurance and policyholders involve safety education and cooperating with state and local government agencies in any matter affecting casualty insurance and surety bonds. I have complete confidence in the ability of the New Jersey committee."

BECK'S COLUMN

By MAX BECK

Many customers who come to our store to purchase a new TV set after the old and cherished "machine" finally gave out for good, are surprised to find that the old set has no trade-in value. Sure they paid good money for it years ago. Today there is no market for these old sets and anybody who tells you different is just pulling your leg. In many places, the price tags have been raised first in order to give a trade-in allowance. The truth is that old TV sets these days are a "hoax." Nobody knows what to do with them and usually it costs money to dispose of them. (We hear often that the old parts could be used for repairs. No repairman in his right mind will take a condenser or resistor that costs him 15 cents new out of an old set, and to speak of tubes, which are not even used in today's sets — any more.) We have a job doing away these old sets and the same goes for everything else. If you read ads listing a price "with trade," you can be pretty sure that this is a "hoax" or "bait." Really, you can get anything for your old set, the price for the new purchase is "doctored up." Just sell the same day and they steal it. You would like to keep the old set after all and the seller will be too glad to let you keep it. If it would be worth anything to him, he sure would want it.

We service what we sell.

Beautiful Bucolic Belleville

The Holiday Season In Belleville In Bygone Days

By FREDERICK J. PIXLEE

In the last two issues, I have touched but lightly on Winter Sports and Christmas. In the more or less humdrum and uninteresting long winter days of those times the Christmas holidays were looked forward to as a time of rejoicing.

Skates and sleds were popular Christmas presents. The sledging was described in detail in a recent issue, but the skating was not mentioned at all.

For those who lived near Joram Street the small pond in the swamp known locally as "Hogan's Alley" was a fairly good place to skate. This was located in the black bounded by Joram Street and De Witt and Hornblower Avenues and extended South almost to Holmes Street. The only time that it was possible to go in there without getting covered with mud, was in the winter.

Best Of All

Other small ponds, the elusive "Kay's Pond," or "Solear's Pond," which might have been in the territory bounded by Division, Tappan, De Witt and Linden Avenues, was also used. Of course, the people who lived in "Grestock" used the pond at Hillside Pleasure Park, which was by far the best of all.

According to information supplied to the author by Dr. Edward H. Crystell, one of the co-owners of the bob-sled mentioned in a previous issue, this bob-sled was used once or twice on the steeper and more dangerous

Holmes Street Hill, but this was before the trolleys were running on Washington Avenue. This run was from New Street to Main Street. While not as long as the Joram Street run, the hills were a lot steeper and it was considerably more dangerous. This hill was not used for this purpose after 1896 when the electric street cars were installed on Washington Avenue.

It must be remembered that the bob-sled was probably the fastest mode of transportation in those days excepting, of course, the railroad train.

The youth of today, whisked along in fast cars that they take for granted, scoff at anyone who would spend three quarters of an hour dragging a heavy bob-sled up a hill for a three or four minute fast ride. Even looking out the car windows at the scenery is a forgotten pastime. One must read a comic book while riding in a car.

Gloomy Days

Of course, there were many gloomy and cold days when it was impossible to enjoy the outdoors also. I will relate a small anecdote of an incident that happened during the Christmas holidays when I was a small boy. Since some of the people involved are still living in Belleville, I will use the cloak of anonymity.

One day during the Christmas holidays my mother suggested that I visit Mrs. X, whose little girl had been ill all winter. Mrs. X had specifically requested this, because the child wanted visitors during her long confinement in bed.

I was about nine years old at the time and the child was about six, so I did not take very kindly to the idea. However, parental authority was insistent and I went along to Mrs. X's home, grousing about a day being spoiled going to see a "gurl" and a baby in the bargain.

Mrs. X welcomed me with enthusiasm and brought me quickly to the little one's bedside. I am afraid that I was rather belligerent at first, not wanting to play dolls with her at all. Then my eyes fell on a profusely illustrated story book and I asked her if she could read. She replied in the negative.

Childhood Tales

She was delighted when I offered to read a story for her. Then commenced an idyllic time when I became lost in the tales of the Brothers Grimm and also the doings of King Richard and other heroes of olden times. What I thought was going to be a boring afternoon passed too quickly and I regretted when it came to an end.

I followed it up with several more visits and at one day I received my first and only proposal from a member of the female sex!

The carefree days of vacation were over all too soon and the long struggle of going to school during the dead of winter set in. Alas for Romance! The girl I had been visiting had an older sister who was in my class in school. In no time every member in the class knew that I was going to see a baby for a girl friend.

Romance Ends!

That stopped the budding romance forever. I was hurt. The child was hurt and the mother could not understand why I never came again. I did not believe in "snitching" on anyone, no matter how they hurt me.

There have been many holidays since then, but I can look back on this season as one of the nicest times that I have ever had. Why? Because I was doing something for someone else.

If we think about it, we are either doing something to others or for others. Often we get the vicious satisfaction that lasts momentarily when we do something to others. This is fleeting and very often we lose a valuable friend or acquaintance.

When we do something for others we get infinitely more satisfaction and can go our way in peace.

I have done plenty to others in my day, but I try to do something for others as much as I can. I expect to gain nothing more than the feeling that I have helped someone else along the pathway of life.

Scratched The Surface

The purpose of these articles is not the writing of a cut and dried chronological history of Belleville. I have rambled over a period of nearly 300 years in the series that started last May and have only scratched the surface of the real history of our town. I have tried to do something for others, and in doing so have made myself happy. I know that these articles will not go down in history as great classics, let alone great literature, but I have the satisfaction of knowing that a great many people of all faiths, creed and color feel that I am doing something for Belleville.

In this Holy Season, whether it be called Christmas or the still older Feast of Lights, I wish all of my readers the best of health and happiness.

As the year draws to a close, I also hope that the Year of 1963 will be a Happy and Prosperous one for all.

Wishing you a
