Belleville Tax Rate Jumps Highest In Essex County

Nutley Has Highest Rate But Only Jumped Seven Points

Nutley has the highest rate in the county this year, $4.62 per $100 of valuation, an increase of seven points over 1931, when the town was second only to Livingston which, by a coincidence, also was high with a rate of $4.62. Belleville, which had a twelvepoint rise, was second with $4.46.

Roseland Rate Lowest
The $3,500,000 increase in Public Service valuations, which enabled Roseland to calculate anticipated revenue of $78,000 in excess of the budget appropriation last month, limiting the sum to be raised by taxation to $11,930.37, gave that borough the lowest rate, sixty-five cents. This was a record drop of $2.95 from the $3.60 rate of last year.

The table of rates follows:

Unemployed Deliver Poll Tax Bills Here

Tax Assessor J. F. Coogan Gives Job To Three Persons

Poll tax bills, numbering 2,700, have been delivered personally this year instead of through the mail. The work of delivering the bills was given three unemployed men of the town at the suggestion of Tax Assessor John F. Coogan, Jr.

Only the amount appropriated for postage, $50.80, was used. This was divided among the three according to the number of bills each delivered during the five or six days he worked.

There are 13,000 real estate and personal property tax bills to be made up. Director Williams of the Department of Revenue and Finance has not decided whether these will be delivered by messenger.

Wemec Show Promises To Eclipse Previous Attempts Of Thespians

Seventh Production By The Group Will Feature "Cock Robin"

A special meeting of the Wemec Dramatic Club was held this Tuesday when reports of the various committees of "Cock Robin" were heard. From the reports given, the seventh production of the Wemecs will be as much a success as its predecessors if not more.

"Cock Robin" promises to be the most interesting play ever attempted by the Wemec Dramatic Club. No little thought went into the selection of that play by Elmer Rice and Philip Barry, and without a doubt the Wemecs deserve a great deal of praise for willing to undertake such a difficult play. It is hoped that the followers of the theatre in Belleville will not miss seeing this unusual and novel play which was a decided hit on Broadway. Tickets may be obtained from any of the members and reserved seats are on sale at Kaden's Drug Store. Also, there will be dancing after the performance.

Bus Company Gets Action On Request Sought To Have Board Get Reduction On Fares

The possibility of a reduction of the bus rate between Belleville and Jersey City was discussed by the town Commissioners at their meeting, Tuesday night.

A communication from the Garden State Bus Company, informed the Commissioners that the directors of that concern favored the suggested reduction, but, they could not act without the consent of the Public Utilities Commission. The matter was laid over pending the Public Utilities Commission's decision.

Action on the rate, was taken by the town governing body several weeks ago, when it was learned that by walking across the Passaic River bridge, a person could ride to Jersey City for fifteen cents, while the rate from Belleville is twenty-five.

If the Public Utilities Commission grants the Bus Company permission to reduce the present fare, the following table of rates follows:

Minstrels Of Erin To Furnish Music At K. of C. Affair

Irish And Scotch Night Will Be Held Tomorrow At Home

The well known minstrels of Erin, who broadcast weekly over radio station WHOM, have been engaged to provide the music Saturday evening, April 2, for the Irish and Scotch night to be held by Belleville Council Knights of Columbus, at the home 43 Rossmore place. These young men have become very popular in Hudson County and it is expected that their first appearance in Belleville will extend the sphere of their musical influence. Irish, Scotch and American dances will be featured and several vocal selections will be given by Phil O'Toole, Gilbert Howley and others. Refreshments galore will be served so there will be no excuse for any one going home either hungry or depressed.

This will be the first opportunity in some time for the boys and girls, young and old to display their prowess at reels, jigs, hornpipes and sets. For those feeling the approach of rheumatism or stiffness of the joints the music to be heard will be of such a nature as to induce them to throw all discretion to the winds, abandon their crutches and wheelchairs, and take to tripping the light fantastic, for we have it from a local sage of great antiquity, that it's the best cure in the world. Tickets may be obtained at the home or from the committee, D. L. Gibbons, Phil O'Toole, Andrew Hughes and Thomas Hanlon.

George Frothlich is another hard-working Knight. An idea of his responsibilities may be gleaned from the fact that he is chairman of the committee arranging the play "Laugh That Off," to be staged at St. Peter's Hall, on Monday evening, April 18. One who was privileged to see a stage rehearsal of this very amusing presentation says its just full of laughs, and the cast would do credit to a Broadway playhouse.

The members of the cast are no strangers to Belleville for they have been seen at previous dramatic affairs. J. Emilio Chartrand is the coach, he will be supported by Miss Agnes Jordan, Miss Greta Kinneally, Miss Margaret Donhauser, Mrs. James McCabe and the Messers William Friel, William McGonigle, Phil O'Toole, James A. Leonard and Joseph Kearney. Mr. Frothlich has asked that those wishing to attend make reservations as early as possible. James Kinneally is chairman of the patrons committee.

Belleville Council is one of the most active in the state. A fine spirit of co-operation exists among the members. The younger Knights are active workers and are directed by the older and more seasoned men. It may be of interest to Belleville people to know that William Herkness a veteran in the Council and a past grand Knight is still one of the most active and interested members.

Police Aid Needy With Food Barrels

Not Only Give Part Of Pay But Collect Food In Town

Police have taken it upon themselves to aid their unemployed and needy residents. Voluntarily they decided to contribute a percentage of their weekly wages to a fund to purchase food and clothing, and organized an investigating committee to study applications for aid.

Barrels have been placed in food stores bearing signs telling of the plight of hundreds of Belleville's unemployed. Storekeepers and patrons have been responding wholeheartedly to the appeal, and nightly hundreds of cans and packages of foods are bought to police headquarters for distribution.

Areme Chapter Meets On Monday, April 11

Rainbow Girls Please Nutley-Belleville Membership

The regular meeting of Areme Chapter, O. E. S. will be held at Masonic Temple, April 11, when officers for the coming year will be elected. Mrs. Stella Kroesen, Worthy Matron is nearing the end of her year, and the meeting at the Temple Monday night was one of the feature events of a successful year.

Roseville Assembly Order of Rainbow Girls, under the leadership of its Mother Advisor, Mrs. Helen Proven exemplified the work beautifully — without a flaw. What this order means to Belleville and Nutley can hardly be appreciated as yet, but the many petitions received already certainly shows its popularity for the group from thirteen to twenty. J. C. Kroesen, presented each of the officers, twenty-one, with a coconut cream Easter egg, and the girls appreciated the kindly thought.

Newark Paper 100 Years Old; Began In 1832

Star-Eagle Marked The Anniversary With A Special Edition

The Newark Star-Eagle, the oldest daily newspaper in New Jersey, is 100 years old and published a centennial edition Wednesday to mark the anniversary. The Star-Eagle began publication as the Newark Daily Advertiser in 1832, five years before Samuel F. B. Morse discovered telegraphy and forty years before the telephone was invented.

Publication was started in the year the old Morris Canal was opened and while Andrew Jackson was the country's president. In the long span of years since that time the paper has recorded the assassinations of three Presidents, the rise and fall of empires, the news of four wars in which the United States participated, as well as important happenings that have changed the whole aspect of civilization.

The anniversary edition of the paper was replete with stories of a century ago — of "skullduggery"

Robert Nebrig Gave Talk On "Recreation" In Town

The "Civic Forum," Belleville's outstanding group of colored citizens held their regular public meeting on Thursday evening, March 24, at the Little Zion N. A. M. E. Church, where approximately 125 people filled the church to the doors in order to hear Mr. R. A. Nebrig, director of Recreation, town of Belleville speak on "Recreation" in its true meaning. A very interesting musical and literary program made up the balance of the evening's program.

We feel that Theodora Wells, one of Belleville's own products should be very highly commended for the remarkable work this organization is doing. The Civic Forum was organized by Mr. Wells last April and with the assistance of a committee of ten, has progressed to the point where today, is considered one of the most influential and capable groups in the town, county or state. Rendering service to the needy, distressed and welfare work are some of their noteworthy attempts to elevate their race.

Funeral Services Held For H. S. McIlvain, Formerly Of Town

Brother-In-Law Of Homer C. Zink, Passed Away Friday

Howard Smith McIlvain, a former resident of this town, died March 25, at Mountainside Hospital, Montclair, to which he had been removed for treatment. Death was caused by anemia.

He came to Belleville in 1919 and lived at 235 Joralemon street until 1931, when he removed to Upper Montclair because of the ill health of a member of the family.

Mr. McIlvain was born in New York City in 1889, the son of David H. McIlvain and Charlotte Hart. At the age of nine years he moved to Montclair and thereafter he lived in New Jersey except during the World War, when he was stationed at Frankford Arsenal and abroad. He attended the Montclair schools and graduated from Stevens Institute of Technology in 1911 with the degree of Mechanical Engineer. In 1912, he married Amy Chapman, sister of Mrs. Homer C. Zink of this town.

During the World War, Mr. McIlvain was associated with Canadian Car and Foundry Company, supervising the manufacture of munitions. Later, he was transferred to Maxim Munitions Corporation as plant and equipment engineer. When America entered the War, he was immediately made captain and was for some time Chief Inspection Officer, Small Arms Ammunition, Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia, where he devised and organized the inspection of ammunition to such a degree that Frankford ammunition was considered the best in America.

In July, 1918, he went to France as head of the Small Arms Ammunition Branch, Engineering Division, Ordnance Department, A. E. F. and was in charge of all technical work in connection with the design and use of small arms ammunition by the American Armies in Europe. He was overseas for seven months.

After the war, Mr. McIlvain served as consulting engineer, manufacturing engineer and research engineer for various organizations. In 1927, he joined the pioneer solid carbon dioxide company, The Dry Ice Corporation of America, and devoted the last five years of his life to research and engineering work, important in developing the manufacture and use of dry ice, or solid carbon monoxide. He was engineer in charge of construction of the first large plant ever built exclusively for the production of solid carbon dioxide, which plant is located at Elizabeth, N. J. At the time of his death, he was in charge of all the research and development activities of the corporation.

Mr. McIlvain was a member of American Society of Mechanical Engineers and Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States. He attended Christ Church in Belleville.

He is survived by a widow, Amy C. McIlvain, and by four children, Howard Hyland, and David Hart, Amy and Marilyn. The eldest son, Hyland, graduated from Belleville High School in 1931, and is a freshman at Stevens Institute.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Peter Deckenbach of Christ Church at 7:45 o'clock sharp. Chief McIlvain will have a message that will be of interest to all. Everyone is invited to attend.

GOOD CITIZENS

CITIZENS are directly responsible for the local and National state of affairs in our Country today. What can they do about it? They can make use of the franchise at every opportunity.

Today scarcely half of the people bother to vote. It means nothing to them that they have the right to say who shall or who shall not govern them. Is there any wonder, then, that so many of the unfit have that privilege?

They can be sufficiently interested in local, state and national affairs to keep themselves thoroughly informed so as to act intelligently when the chance is presented.

Despite the fact that newspapers, magazines and the radio are ready to perform this service, only a small number are interested. Many pay no attention and others form hasty, prejudiced opinions that are as valuable as none at all.

They can welcome the opportunity to perform public service, of all kinds.

In every community a handful of people carry the burden.

The majority is too selfish. It hides behind personal and occupational excuses, emerging only to criticize those who are doing the work. Men and women whose experience, training, talent, and ability specially fit them for public service rarely are willing to make the necessary sacrifices. What more natural that others, less competent, should serve in their place and that the public interests should suffer?

They can respect the law and enforcement.

Laws are for the common good. If the people decide against them there are legal ways of removing them from the statutes. Americans claim the right to select which ones they will obey. They drive 60 miles an hour where 30 is lawful and sane, but shout for enforcement when someone else does the same thing and forces them into a ditch. They buy from the boot-legger and cry out because gangs terrorize our cities to provide them with liquor. The laws that protect them they champion, but the laws that protect other people they defy.

They can co-operate with all whose duty it is to enforce law, administer government, and perform any of the public services.

Today, people will not help police bring offenders to justice, but want action when their own rights are violated. They dodge jury service but expect just and wise verdicts. They leave snow on their walks but insist that others clear the way for them. They park overtime but want parking space when they want it. They refuse to cooperate but want the benefits of co-operation.

They can be better people.

If each individual would do unto others as he would have done to himself, much of our troubles would disappear.

These are some of the things the people "can do about it." All of them are possible. They are the essentials of good citizenship. They are especially necessary to the success of a democracy, such as ours. With a dictator they can be made compulsory. In our Country they are voluntary. They are the duties and responsibilities which alone can guarantee the rights and privileges our form of government offers to us.

WELCOME APRIL

MARCH must have taken a lesson from the Chinese. At any rate, it surprised the world with its unexpected onslaught the past two weeks. Along with hundreds of others we had been giving lip service to the strength of capriciousness of March, but in light of the mild and pleasant winter we didn't really believe that it would burst forth as it did.

With flowers poking their heads up above the ground, and with buds appearing on the lilac bushes, with pussy willows out in their modest coverings and talk of spring house-cleaning in the air, we have sort of let down. If it is of any comfort to the rest of the world, the word that cold snaps this time of year seldom last very long—three to five days is usually their limit—can be passed along. Philosophical concepts, however, are hardly enough to calm down a man who was commencing to believe that his coal pile would stretch out until the end of the cold weather.

We've had it pretty easy all year.

NO ITEM IN 1932 BUDGET DECLARES LAWYER W. H. K. DAVEY FOR MAYOR'S APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT PHYSICIAN

Prominent Public Spirited Man Frames Five Questions That Samuel S. Will Have A Job To Answer, If He Can

Editor News:

Now that His Honor, the Mayor, has appointed Dr. Goldberg as assistant town physician, at a salary of $1,000 a year, it occurs to me that the 1932 budget contained no item to cover that stipend.

Answering a protest by Belleville Taxpayers' Association against that appointment the Mayor tells the association they don't know what they are talking about.

He also announces that the Board of Commissioners welcomes "Constructive Criticism" and pays his compliments to chronic kickers.

It seems that His Honor has not yet come to a proper appreciation of the fact that Mr. Taxpayer is going to kick and keep on kicking until taxes begin to come down, and he will yet learn that the kicking of an organized body of taxpayers can be DESTRUCTIVE and CONSTRUCTIVE.

I hold no brief for the Belleville Taxpayers' Association. I am not a member of it, but am heartily in sympathy with its efforts to compel a reduction, and prevent an increase in taxes in Belleville.

So before making any criticism, I would be glad to be informed, frankly and fully, on the following matters:

- 1.—Was there included in the 1932 budget any item to cover the $1,000 salary of an assistant town physician?
- 2.—If not, out of what appropriation is his salary to be paid?
- 3.—Will the payment of that extra $1,000 cause the appropriation to be exceeded?
- 4.—Will this $1,000 be raised on an "emergency note"?
- 5.—If any appropriation in the 1932 budget can stand the extra $1,000 to cover Dr. Goldberg's salary, how much more, over anticipated payments, does the 1932 budget carry?

Surely when the budget was adopted the citizens were told that it had been pared down to the bone,—that every appropriation has been reduced to the rock bottom,—that no further reduction was possible.

Please ask His Honor the Mayor to give to the citizens of Belleville definite information as to where Dr. Goldberg's salary is to come from, and why it will not cause some appropriation to be exceeded.

Yours truly,

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed
in the Morning Rin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a nice movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.

About Books by Cyrus Wood

On the jacket of his recent novel "Prison Doctor," Louis Berg, M. D., is introduced as "a psychiatrist, attached to the faculty of a famous metropolitan university," and as a man who has had many years experience as a prison doctor.

His book is an indictment of the present-day penal system, under which convicts instead of being reclaimed to society are mistreated and exploited by ignorant and greedy politicians.

In a chapter headed "Rackets" he tells the story of Buddy, a bright-faced young first offender. He was caught joy riding in a 'hot' car and sent to prison where he is thrown into the company of hardened criminals. Being an attractive boy he becomes a target for the advances of the numerous pervers with whom he is thrown in contact, and from whom he cannot escape. His sensitive nature cannot adjust itself to this morbid environment. As a means of escape he is driven into hysterical paralysis. The doctor considers this physical symptom indicative of an approaching mental breakdown. He suggests that the Warden give Buddy some outside work in the prison gardens. But it happens that these 'soft' jobs are reserved for criminals who can pay for them and it is difficult to persuade the Warden that anything should be done for Buddy. Finally, however, he agrees to have Buddy examined by the lunacy commission. The doctor is much elated at this until the lunacy commission arrives. It is composed of three hopelessly incompetent quacks: a nose specialist, a surgeon and a fake psychiatrist. They ask Buddy a number of irrelevant questions. When he answers they shake their heads solemnly and nod knowingly at each other. After this farcical examination the doctor asks for their decision and is informed that "We can't make a report now. It's only our first meeting." It develops that they are paid fifty dollars apiece for each meeting and usually have four or five meetings for each case. They split fees with the Warden and offer to share with the doctor if he will have them called in once in a while. There is plenty of money with which to pay for this kind of incompetency but the doctor's requisitions for much needed drugs usually come back marked "No allowance in budget."

This is just one of the many rackets which the Warden is expected to practice in order to make the prison profitable to the higher-ups. Should he fail to make the most of his opportunities he would soon be replaced by someone who could show a profit.

In his stories of convicts Dr. Berg makes excellent use of his knowledge of prison dialect. He pictures a wide variety of criminal types, guilty of every imaginable crime. There is lots of conversation. Dope pushers, bank robbers, "junks," murderers, homosexuals and prostitutes tell each other interesting tales of their diverse exploits.

Dr. Berg never loses sight of the fact that these are human beings; misunderstood and maltreated human beings who can be relied upon to repay their oppressors in kindness. They do. In his last chapter he shows their discontent expressing itself in an unsuccessful break for freedom, during which several of these guards are mercilessly slaughtered.

Several years ago Leon Trotsky, the former war lord of the red army, whose "History of the Russian Revolution" has just been released by Simon and Schuster, predicted the following developments, all of which have already taken place: the mutiny in the British navy, the abandonment of the gold standard by England, the economic crisis in America and the coalition policy of the British Labor Party. Twelve years before it happened Trotsky also predicted that the October or proletarian revolution would inevitably follow February or "democratic" revolution in Russia—that, too, in opposition to Lenin. He has predicted every one of Stalin's major changes of policy since Stalin banished him.

Buick-Olds-Pontiac Plans Super Sales Organization For Car Distribution

New Group Organized To Intensify And Improve Operating Efficiency Of Distributing Outlets Of Three Makes

Detroit, Mich., March 30.—Formation of the Buick-Olds-Pontiac Sales Co., a super-sales organization for the distribution of Buick, Oldsmobile and Pontiac cars, was announced here by Richard H. Grant, vice president of General Motors.

Mr. Grant, in addition to his activities as general supervisor of sales, advertising, and service for General Motors, will have charge of the new organization, assisted by W. A. Blees as General Sales Manager, and R. K. White and George H. Wallace, as assistant general sales manager.

Mr. Blees formerly was vice president in charge of sales of the Oakland Motor Car Company, with Mr. White as assistant. Mr. Wallace was formerly General Sales Manager of the Buick Motor Company.

Mr. Grant, in announcing the new executive personnel, stated that R. M. W. Shaw would continue as advertising manager for Oldsmobile; R. H. White for Pontiac; and E. J. Poag for Buick.

"The new organization is planned to intensify and improve the operating efficiency of our distributing outlets for these three lines of ours," Mr. Grant stated. "The present field organizations of the three companies will be combined for the best talent available, and their united efforts under one directing organization will, we feel, form the strongest and most efficient sales force ever assembled in the automobile industry."

The three cars will continue to be merchandised through the present dealer and distributor organizations, and the management expects to increase materially their sales through the new organization.

The new sales organization is being organized with headquarters in the General Motors building in Detroit for greater intensification of effort and more convenient and efficient operation, Mr. Grant said.

Five great sales regions are to be established under a resident personnel at New York City, Detroit, Chicago, Memphis and San Francisco, and sales zones under the jurisdiction of the regions also are to be installed at 33 points in the United States, Mr. Grant announced.

Three hundred picked sales and service representatives will be assigned to the field to work out of the zone offices.

Thirty-three zone warehouses for the wholesale distribution of cars and parts also will be centered at strategic points throughout the country so that immediate service may be rendered to purchasers.

The executive personnel of the new sales organization brings Mr. Grant, frequently referred to as the world's greatest sales executive, back to the active firing line again. His direct responsibility for the sale of Pontiacs, with W. S. Knudsen charged with their production, brings together once more a team who made automotive history when both were actively identified with the Chevrolet Motor Company, and who brought that company from comparative obscurity in the industry to first place inside a decade.

Mr. Grant, a Harvard graduate in the class of 1901, is a native of Ipswich, Massachusetts. In the fall of 1901 he went to work for the New England Bell Telephone Company, and for three years continued with them in various commercial capacities.

He then entered the organization of the National Cash Register Company and after two years of training, joined the sales department. In a short time he was in charge of the company's selling activities. He launched many innovations, and is generally credited with a good share of the brilliant success of that company.

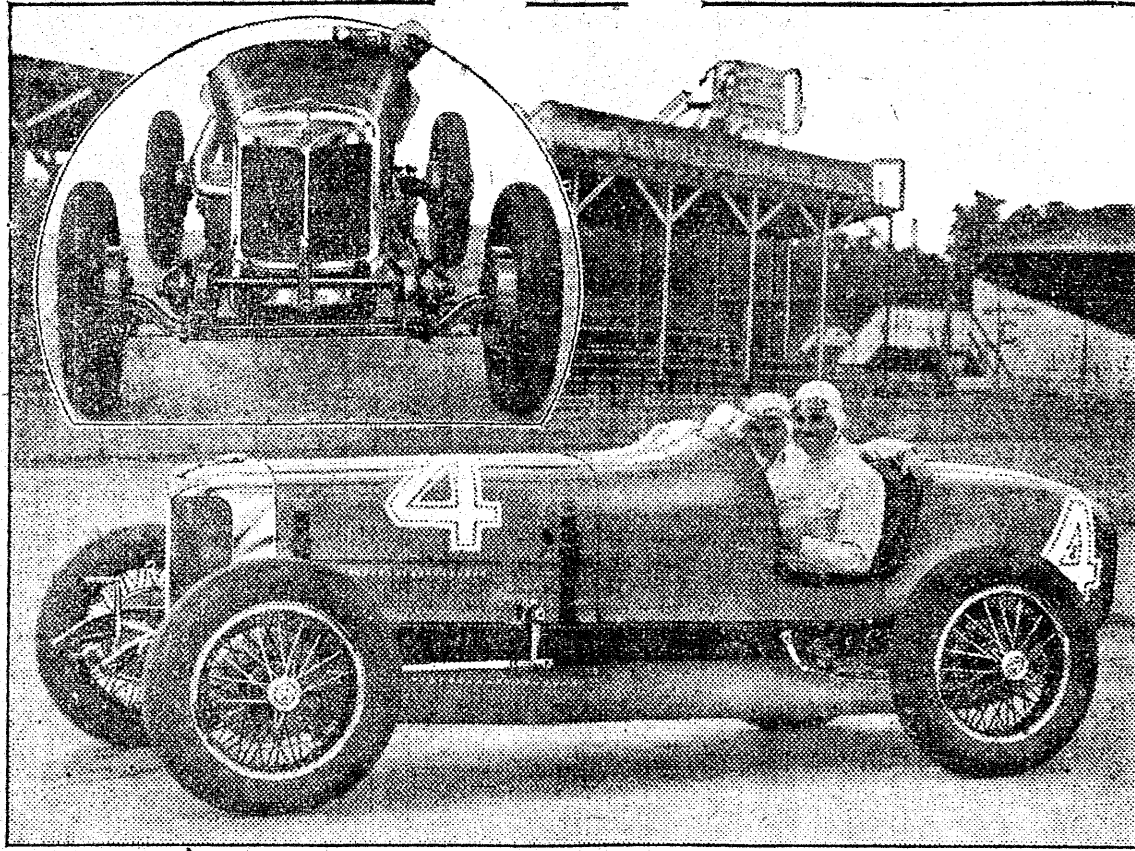

In 1915 he became General Manager of the Delco Light Company, of Dayton, a General Motors subsidiary, and soon had accomplished results there comparable to his achievements with the National Cash Register Co. In 1921, Mr. Grant took over Frigidaire as general manager, and once more duplicated his earlier successes.

His entry into the automobile field came in May, 1924, when he was appointed vice-president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

In 1923 the company had sold considerably less than a half-million cars. In 1927, volume of the company for the first time crossed the million mark, and that year Chevrolet led the industry in sales, repeating again in 1928.

On May 9, 1929, just 25 years to a day from his appointment as sales manager of the National Cash Register Company, Mr. Grant was elected a vice president of General Motors, and relinquished the active sales

Hupmobile Entry at Indianapolis

Russell Snowberger, America's fourth ranking racing driver, will pilot this Hupmobile Eight on the 2 1/2-mile Indianapolis brick speedway in the 500-mile Decoration Day grind. Inset shows Snowberger burning up the track on a trial spin.

Detroit, Mich., March 28.—"Hupmobile will have a car under its own name in this year's 500 mile Indianapolis race."

This statement, made by the Hupmobile Motor Car Corporation, settled rumors of long standing that Hupmobile contemplated entering its product in major race competition.

Driver of the Hup entry will be Russell Snowberger, fourth ranking American race driver. The Indianapolis race on Decoration Day will be the first event of its kind in which the factory has participated. Hupmobile's announcement was the first verification of repeated rumors that several of the more important motor manufacturers would enter cars in management of Chevrolet in favor of Harry J. Klingler, formerly general sales manager.

Mr. Grant then became vice president of General Motors as general advisor on all sales, service and advertising matters of all divisions of the corporation, a position he still retains in addition to his duties.

In this capacity, during the past three years, he has been responsible for the sale of products valued at an average of more than one billion dollars a year.

America's premier racing event.

"Our decision to run a car in this year's 500 mile race was made for several reasons," says the statement. "First, the experience of thousands of owners led us to believe that our engine was fast enough to make a good showing. Second is our belief that the 'staying qualities' of our type of engine naturally fits it for racing competition. We also believe that professional racing competition may furnish us with valuable engineering data."

"In Snowberger, we have selected a capable and thoroughly experienced pilot. He has been racing since 1922, and since 1926 has been a constant contender in racing's Big Time. He not only knows all about racing, but he believes our type of car is capable of making a good showing at Indianapolis."

This car has a special high compression cylinder head for greater horsepower development, while four carburetors, instead of the usual dual unit, provide fuel for its eight cylinders in the high speed ranges. As is customary in racing cars, a magneto replaces the battery-generator system to save weight. Specifications include a fuel capacity of about 35 gallons and 12 quarts of oil.

Snowberger finished eighth at Indianapolis in 1930 and fourth last year. In 1931 he sat on the pole with more than 112 miles an hour—the fastest qualifying time of all in last year's Speedway race. Incidentally this mark is the qualifying record for all semi-stock cars on the Hoosier oval.

America Will Enjoy Normalcy Only When Automobile Trade Revives, It Is Said

Vice President H. J. Klingler Of Chevrolet Say Buying Cars Supplies More Work And Wages Than Anything Else

Detroit, Mich.—America will enjoy normal conditions only when the automobile industry is brought back to normalcy again, H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, declared in an interview here.

Citing the ramifications of the industry into every part of our economic structure, Mr. Klingler said there is nothing anyone can buy which directly supplies work and wages for so many people in so many places and so many different industries and professions as buying an automobile.

The effect of a new car purchase on unemployment relief was illustrated by Mr. Klingler in the statement that a new Chevrolet six represents 71 days of gainful employment to workmen throughout the United States. That means the equivalent of three months of working time for one man on the basis of a five-day week.

"It has been estimated that half of the 44,000,000 people now employed are in a position to buy a new automobile right now," Mr. Klingler said. "Why they have been putting it off isn't important. The fact remains that they can afford to buy, but haven't. Yet if only one out of seven of those able to buy would buy, the automobile industry would immediately be restored to a healthy state of activity—producing three millions of cars a year and employing in direct manufacture more than one million men, and furnishing steady work to an additional three million men in allied industries and trades."

Mr. Klingler commended the various federal and local movements launched to put idle money and idle men to work. He then went on to stress the direct relation of the automobile industry to the economic welfare of the country.

"The business of building and selling automobiles is America's biggest industry," he pointed out. "It is so big that few people even dream of the extent to which it affects every other industry in America."

"The automobile industry consumes over fifteen per cent of all steel produced—53 per cent of all malleable iron—over 68 per cent of all plate glass—over eighteen per cent of all hardwood lumber—over fourteen per cent of all cotton—26

per cent of all lead—thirty per cent of all nickel and almost 83 per cent of all the rubber—to say nothing of paying the railroads hundreds of millions of dollars a year for carrying thousands of carloads of freight.

"Thus, when you buy an automobile, you're not only giving employment to men in automobile plants and garages, but you're putting men to work in every state in the union. You're sending the miner down under ground to dig copper or iron, or nickel, or lead, and he begins earning wages again."

"You're keeping people busy on the cotton plantations down South and in the mills where the cotton is spun and woven. You're calling the steel worker back to his job—and doing the same for the men who work in forests and lumber mills, glass factories and tanneries, foundries and chemical works."

"You're making the wheels of the railroads turn and—well, it's just like the house that Jack built. I could mention hundreds of other kinds of workers whose hands would be busy again. But it can all be summed up in a single sentence: There's nothing you can buy which directly supplies work and wages for so many people in so many places as buying an automobile."

Local Girl Badly Hurt In Collision At Netcong

Betty Bossert, twenty, of 35 Ralph street, was critically injured Sunday night when an automobile in which she was riding with three others crashed head on into another car in Route 6 on King's Mountain.

Miss Bossert was riding in a car driven by Frank Barbera of 33 East Center street, Nutley. The other passengers were Catherine Kolmer, of 115 Main street, and John Kelson of 145 Main street. They were not seriously hurt.

The Barbera car was going east and attempted to pass a car owned by Julius Gleichmann of Irvington. As the Barbera car pulled to the left it collided with the car of Ernest Batson of Netcong. Batson and his wife were cut and bruised. The others were taken to Dover General Hospital.

Miss Bossert suffered head and internal injuries and shock. The others suffered bruises, lacerations and shock.

In fifty-five cities there will be fifty-five exhibits of General Motors Products at the same time. No expense has been spared to produce a most instructive and interesting show. General Motors is presenting this to the public absolutely free in line with its fight for the return of prosperity under the caption "Work for many hands."

As General Motors is the largest manufacturer of cars, supplying more than 43% of all the cars used in America, and as a steady employer of the largest army of automobile workers, anything that this, the wealthiest corporation can do will accomplish something.

Behind the move locally are J. R. Bray, George F. Roehrlie of Hupmobile, Oakland and Pontiac, and G. R. B. Symonds of Buick.

In the manufacture of General Motors Products the quantities of materials used is almost unbelievable. In one year General Motors uses:

1,800,000 Tons of steel.
78,000,000 Board feet of lumber.
5,750,000 Square feet of upholstery leather.
4,700,000 Gallons of paints and lacquer.
14,000,000 Feet of upholstery cloth.
49,000,000 Feet brake lining.
17,900,000 Pounds of hair and packing.
4,300,000 Pounds of nickel.
5,400,000 Yards of top and curtain material.
40,000 Tons of copper.
64,000 Tons of lead.

"We are doing everything we can," said Mr. Bray "to bring better business conditions to this community. We want every prospective automobile buyer—to buy now! No greater values have ever been offered. The newest features—greater power, smoothness and comfort—all are offered at prices which are the lowest in the industry. And most important of all—every person who purchases a new Chevrolet provides seventy-one days of work to help the great cause of furnishing employment."

"The purchase of an automobile is especially effective in bringing about the return of prosperity," said Mr. Roehrlie "because of the widespread use of materials that go to make up the modern motor car. The miner, the cotton picker, the lumberman, everyone is affected when a car is purchased. When you purchase a new Pontiac you will be aiding materially in the supply of work for many hands."

Mr. Symonds was most enthusiastic in suggesting the program and said:

"An entirely new atmosphere, special decorations and lots of activity, will greet you when you visit the show-rooms of General Motors Dealers in Belleville and Nutley." He pointed out that the local dealers were working closely with the Nation-wide Exhibit of the General Motors Products for the week of April 2 to 9.

Your General Motors Dealers want to urge everyone to attend the Exhibit. Not to buy an automobile so much as they want you to note the size and importance of the automotive industry in our every day lives. This Exhibit is free and tickets may be had at your General Motors Dealer, at your bank or if you will phone, a ticket will be delivered.

Watch for our parade Saturday afternoon between 2:00 and 4:00 P. M.

Laying Of Gas Mains Under River Nears Completion By P. S.

Engineering Skill Needed To Surmount Many Obstacles

Laying of two gas mains under the Passaic River between Newark and Kearny by Public Service Electric and Gas Company which involved a number of difficulties and entailed considerable engineering skill is now nearing completion. The mains are expected to be ready for service in about a week.

These mains are being installed primarily to furnish gas to the Western Electric Company's plants but will also make gas service available for other industries in that section of the peninsula between the Hackensack and Passaic Rivers.

Because of the importance of the Passaic River to commerce, the mains had to be laid in a trench twenty feet wide and over forty feet below mean low water. Two piles were driven five feet apart laterally every twelve feet across the river and divers spiked beams or caps on the piles to serve as a support for the two lines of sixteen inch pipe. Four lengths of pipe were bolted together on a floating derrick and lowered to the foundation. Another section was then lowered and bolted by divers to the previously laid pipe. From the bottom of the river the pipes ascend behind the bulkheads to a point above water where they are conjoined and extended underground.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Proven of Little street and Mr. and Mrs. John Davis of Jersey City motored to Keyport, Easter where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wagner. Mrs. Proven, Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Wagner are sisters and the reunion was very pleasant.

P. S. Lawyer Tells Senate Interstate

Group Company's View In Favoring Federal Regulation Of Bus Operators

Edmund W. Wakelee, vice president in charge of law of Public Service Coordinated Transport and subsidiary companies, told the Senate Interstate commerce committee March 29, 1932, in Washington his company's position in favoring federal regulation of interstate bus operation. Mr. Wakelee also is director and member of the legislative committee of the National Association of Motor Bus Operators.

Mr. Wakelee declared his company had favored federal regulation ever since the decisions of the United States Supreme Court made it plain that the states, in the absence of federal regulation, could not exercise the same authority over interstate operations as over intrastate business. He said Public Service as well as the National Association of Motor Bus Operators found the Parker Bill, as it passed the House, generally satisfactory but that some provisions of the pending Couzens Bill were objectionable. The Parker Bill failed of passage in the Senate.

On the other hand, Mr. Wakelee pointed out that a bus regulatory bill introduced by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania in 1926 prior to the opening of the Delaware River bridge and the Holland Tunnel passed the Senate but failed in the House. This bill provided for regulation of bus traffic over the bridge by the joint action of the Utility Commissioners of New Jersey and Pennsylvania and regulation of bus traffic through the tunnel by the joint action of the Commissioners of New Jersey and New York.

The bill would have demonstrated, said Mr. Wakelee, "how this kind of regulation worked in practice and the experience thus gained would be helpful to Congress in drafting a law for the whole country. This suggestion still holds good if there is doubt about the passage of a general bill at this time."

One of the main objections to the Couzens bill, Mr. Wakelee said, is the provision, that no operator shall be permitted to remain on duty for more than eight consecutive hours. "Such a provision," he said, "is impracticable, uneconomic and would work hardship on operating companies and their employees as well as the public." Under the coordinated system of street railways and interstate bus lines maintained by Public Service, interstate bus operators work under the same conditions as operators of intrastate lines and street cars. They are all members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America which association is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the working conditions are fixed by contract negotiated between the company and the men. The agreement establishes nine hours as the basic day, for the reason that the ordinary service day for operators is about eighteen hours, thus breaking the shifts into nine hours each. If the maximum working day should be set at eight hours, it was explained, some of the men would work less than eight hours and a great many would be needed for short runs of from two to four hours, which would make insufficient work to provide a living wage and the expense of operation would be unnecessarily increased.

The provision in the bill calling for two men on a bus was objected to on the basis that such a requirement would entail a prohibitive added expense amounting to more than $6,000,000 a year because, while the bill applies only to interstate buses, the two-man requirement might well be extended to intrastate buses and even to street cars, inasmuch as the same operating conditions in all branches of the Public Service transportation system. Such an increase in expenses, continued Mr. Wakelee, would be a fatal blow to the company which now "fails to earn its operating expenses and fixed charges, to say nothing of any return upon the large amount invested and represented by its capital stock, both common and preferred."

Mr. Wakelee declared that the question of increased safety with two men was untenable inasmuch as Public Service experience had shown conclusively that accidents on street cars had decreased since the change by the company from two to one man operation. "On the very first lines changed over the total accidents over a two year period dropped nearly 19 per cent, under one man operation in the face of an 8 1/2 per cent. increase in passengers carried. So far as buses are concerned, it is the unanimous opinion of our operating officials that putting the second man on a bus would increase rather than decrease the hazard."

After telling the committee that one-quarter of all the buses in the Public Service system are operated over interstate routes and that 23,305,315 miles of the 78,829,726 miles operated in 1931 by the company's buses were interstate, Mr. Wakelee explained how the company's interstate operations are distinctly local as compared with the long distance operations between widely separated cities, and that the large interstate bus business in metropolitan areas carried on between Jersey points and New York or Pennsylvania "does not differ in any respect from local transportation in each of these states except that it happens to cross a state line." The speaker pointed out that the committee in drafting a bill should keep in mind these short routes providing mass transportation and that federal regulation applicable to these lines should conform as closely as possible to that imposed by the states over intrastate operations. "Otherwise the natural flow of traffic between these large cities and their suburbs, which happen to be in another state, will be interrupted and the living conditions of many thousands of people will be disturbed."

Mr. Wakelee said he hoped the inclusion in the bill of freight carrying trucks, which provision had caused considerable opposition to the bill as a whole, would not delay the regulation of buses and that the two kinds of transportation be treated separately. He expressed the same thought in respect of the sections of the bill relating to railroads and bus operations.

The speaker branded as a fallacy the belief voiced by many that buses are responsible for the loss of business suffered by the railroads and that imposition of added taxes and expense upon buses would tend to restore this traffic to the railroads. He showed that buses and street railways have also suffered greatly from loss of patronage and that the private automobile was largely to blame for this falling off in traffic.

This Week

by ARTHUR BRISBANE

What Is Coming?
Bad Days in January.
The Core of the Earth.
Happy Lung Fish.

The day's news makes many ask, "What is it all coming to?" Freakish March tornadoes killed at least 350 persons in five Southern States, according to Associated Press. Scores are injured by mysterious "twisters" that cut off the side of a strong building as neatly as a giant knife could cut it.

That represents nature doing what she can to imitate men, organized for destruction.

News that stands next to the story of tornado destruction tells of plague, hunger and remorseless killing in Shanghai. Peasants are eating the bark of trees in their desperation. Smallpox, unchecked, is raging.

In Ohio labor trouble threatens.

But the most serious condition exists in the Congress of the United States, where some small sized men, with no thought in their minds except re-election, are willing to trade everything for votes.

They forget, in their feeble provincial imitation of real radicals, that they may trade themselves out of a job permanently.

The sort of thing that they are imitating, in Russia and elsewhere, does not hire half-baked incompetents at ten thousand dollars a year each.

The average citizen does not know how things stood in this country at the end of January, how near we came to be driven off the gold standard, and what that would have meant.

The Federal Reserve Bank is compelled by law to keep in reserve gold equal to forty per cent of all currency issued, including hoarded currency, which amounted to fifteen hundred million dollars at the end of January.

This country at that time had about two hundred millions only, free gold, to meet demands. It could not, for instance, have paid in full the gold that France had on deposit here. The French knew the situation, and were drawing out twenty-five millions in gold a week.

Ever since the Bryan 16 to 1 campaign frightened "big money" all bonds, mortgages and other obligations have been payable in gold, principal and interest.

If we had gone off the gold standard, farmers, manufacturers and others would have had to sell their products for depreciated currency, while paying mortgages and interest in gold, perhaps at 30 per cent premium, as in England recently.

Financial legislation, absolutely necessary, making Federal Reserve payments "more elastic," creating a great emergency fund, saved that situation.

Fifteen hundred million dollars gold immediately became available. The French and others ceased withdrawing their gold.

What is more important, banks can now get all the credit they legitimately need from the Federal Reserve. And there is no reason why they should not resume banking, giving to American business and industry the liberal credit without which there can be no resumption of prosperity.

The President may call a few of the financial "big shots" together to tell them that the groundhog has come out of his hole and they might as well come out of their holes.

Harvard University, helped by a generous gift of the Rockefeller Foundation, will investigate the "core" of this earth, attempting to reproduce the heat and terrific pressure that exist at that central spot, toward which, as Dante said long before Newton was born to formulate the law of gravitation, all things in the universe tend.

The Harvard professors possess apparatus which has "squeezed water into five different solid forms and pressed air into a substance as dense as water." It is hard to believe that experiments on the surface could produce conditions created by the pressure of four thousand miles of earth bearing down on the "core."

But it is hoped that discoveries will help geologists to locate precious metals.

It is known that the earth is approximately as heavy as though made of solid steel. Imagine the pressure at the lower end of a steel column four thousand miles high!

In the interior of the sun heat rises to fifty million degrees centigrade, according to Jeans, impossible for us to conceive. If an ordinary rifle bullet could be raised to that temperature and you came within five thousand miles of it, you would shrivel up and disappear.

At New York University Dr. Homer Smith studies metabolism, with the aid of a fish that has been asleep for three and a half years, and is expected to sleep eighteen months longer. The creature is called a "lung fish" because it can breathe through gills in the water and through rudimentary lungs on land, an interesting step in evolution. Some of the unemployed might wish to possess the fish's versatility. How comfortable to go to sleep, leaving a call for "1933, 1934, or whenever times get better."

BELLEVILLE, N. J., FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1932

Scenes and Persons in the Current News

1—General Pershing receiving the first of this year's American Legion poppies from Mrs. Louise W. Williams, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary. 2—West Virginia's new capitol building in Charleston, which will be dedicated this spring. 3—Miss Eleanor P. Myers of Youngstown, N. Y., who has been crowned queen of the Niagara fruit belt and will reign over the apple blossom festival of Niagara and Orleans counties.

Scene in the Tornado-Swept Region of the South

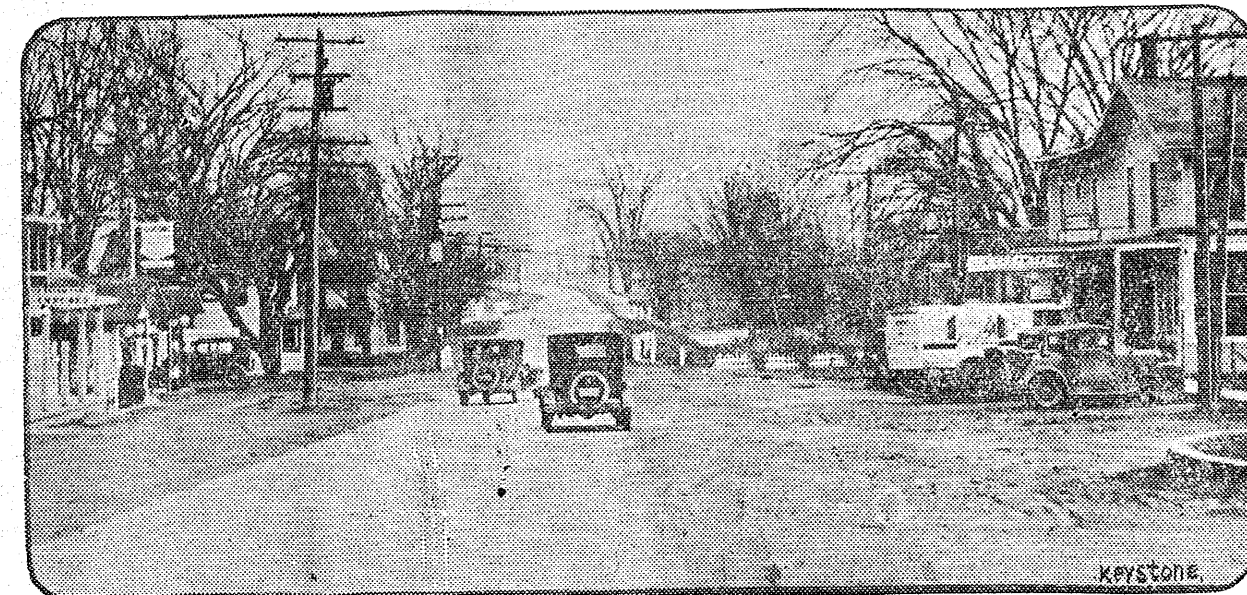

More than three hundred persons were killed by a series of tornadoes that swept across five southern states, most of the fatalities being in Alabama. Our illustration, transmitted by wire, shows the wreckage of Professor Babcock's residence in Athens, Ga.

When the Bank Rate Was Reduced in London

This looks like a riot scene, but it only shows the excitement in London's financial district when it became known that the Bank of England had decided to reduce the discount rate to 4 per cent. The high-hatted bank messengers, some with special guards, are rushing forth to spread the glad news.

This Whole Village Is to Be Swept Away

This village of Honeoye, N. Y., of less than 500 inhabitants, will be swept away soon before the march of progress, when it will be submerged in a reservoir 15 miles long that will be a source of water supply for the city of Rochester, 35 miles away.

TOUCH OF HOMELAND

Although it's a long way from Washington to Finland, Leonard Astrom, Finnish minister to the United States, finds a little bit of his homeland on the snow-clad hillsides of the Congressional Country club, where he is photographed while skiing.

MAY LIVE IN JUNGLE

Col. P. H. Fawcett, famous British explorer who disappeared into the trackless wilds of the Brazilian jungles seven years ago, may still be alive. The British consul general at Sao Paulo has announced a most definite clue as to the whereabouts of Fawcett and his son John, who accompanied him on the trip in 1925. Stephen Rattin, a jungle trapper, told the consul that he conversed with a man who claimed to be Fawcett, at an Indian encampment approximately six weeks' journey from Sao Paulo.

LUCKY BOOTBLACK

When Forbra won the Grand National Steeplechase in England, Steve Boursoukes, owner of a bootblack stand in New York, held a sweepstakes ticket on which he won $150,000. No wonder Steve was smiling when the camera man arrived.

Have You Tried Them?

Over 250 varieties of cheese are made in France. Holland produces 45, Italy 200, and Denmark about 60. The United States produces only a few kinds of cheese.

Learning

The chief art of learning is to attempt but little at a time.—Locke.

Berlin Has the "Dumb" Post Office

This is Berlin's "dumb" post office, which opened recently. An automatic slot machine gives forth stamps in any denomination, and a telephone booth also opens automatically.

Original "Peter Pan" and His Bride

Peter Llewellyn Davies, godson of Sir James M. Barrie and said to have inspired the famous novelist and playwright to write his world-famed play "Peter Pan," and his bride, who was Hon. Margaret Leslie Hore-Ruthven, daughter of Major General Lord Ruthven. They were married in the Savoy chapel in London.

Tunney Looking to the Senate?

Washington has heard the report that Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, is being groomed for the United States senate as Democratic opponent of Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut. Tunney, who is a battalion chief of the Crusaders, wet organization, is here seen with Representative Fred Britten of Illinois, who was quite a boxer in his younger days.

These facts and figures have been se-

J. Dalrymple, under the supervision of the Board of Commissioners of Belleville,
with the idea of informing the citizens of the Town of the official family of the Town Government and some of the past history of the Town.

To those outside of Belleville whom this may reach, Belleville is located outside of Newark, between it and Paterson;
ten miles from New York City, surrounded by other beautiful towns such as Bloomfield and Nutley, and is bounded on its eastern side by the Passaic River. It is partly industrial and residential, being fortunate in having many sites still left for desirable industry to locate. The residential sections are of high type and are protected by a zone ordinance.

These men have served Belleville as Mayors since that office was instituted,
as follows:
C. LYMAN DENISON, 1912-1914.

1914 to November, 1914.

MAURICE SPELLMAN had reached the stage where everything he did was important.

A certain movement of his circulated rumors in Wall Street.
International banking interests watched him.

A real estate buy of his in a given district started fluctuations upward in that vicinity.

The position of his box at the opera
made adjacent ones especially desirable to their owners.

A special body of town coupe became popular because he chose it originally for his own use.

When he decided to dispose of his thirty-eight room Fifth avenue house
and build himself a thirty-room house
in a section of New York hitherto undistinguished, it became quite the esoteric thing to live there. Many Fifth avenue mansions were subsequently deserted for the East River district made suddenly important and desirable by the presence of W. Maurice Spellman.

What actually prompted Spellman
to the move, however, was not a desire to create a new social colony. On the contrary, it was something diametrically opposed to that.

There had been growing within Spellman, as his success mounted and as at forty-six he found himself a power among men, a sense of a need of respite from the growing demands of his position.

Success had not come to Spellman
without grim battle.

For thirty of his forty-six years he had fought for it rung by rung. From the lean days when he lived with his parents and seven brother and sisters in an old water-front tenement, to his days of newspaper selling along lower Broadway, then on up to the still lean
but eager days of his cub reporter ship,
when he shared a walk-up, four-room apartment in Greenwich street with three other fellows, and so on and so on. Through more years of struggle, deprivation, failure, struggle, then
failure again and finally the first glim-merings of success. The foray into Wall Street on the slender savings
out of two years of newspaper work.

Success. A plunge with the winnings. More success. A clever sideswipe into copper. Twenty thousand dollars profit over night. Then the deluge.

From then on, practically everything
Spellman touched turned to gold.

Feature writers had blazoned his story over enough Sunday suppliments to pave the way from his new thirty-room home to the tip of Seattle.
Slogans for success were invited
from him by the bevy of waiting reporters every time he stepped off a train. His arrival or departure any time or anywhere was a matter of national importance.

All this from the man who fifteen years before had been Bill Spellman,
a struggling young reporter who shared a rather dingy down-town flat with three other fellows, two of whom slept on cots in the same room with Bill.

Strangely enough, although in a much less spectacular way, these boys had gone on, too. As if contact with the success-dusted personality of Spellman had cast its power over them.
Spike Quigley, erstwhile police reporter
on the Herald, while Bill had been rewrite man, was now president of a large motor car corporation. Red Dyke, also ex-rewrite man, had recently presented his daughter with a check for fifty-thousand dollars on her wedding day. Even Slow Thompson, special writer for the Town Review,
had since come nicely into his own
as real estate promoter in the land parcel deals.

The old "Greenwich Guys," as they had been pleased to call themselves,
had all come along in the world, so to speak.

Spellman valued those days. Looking back, they sometimes seemed to him to have been the happiest of his life.

They were the days when he had dreamed of writing. Before the moli and the toil had caught him in their clutches and flung him around on the great belt, as it were, of the gigantic wheel called struggle-for-existence.

Bill had been a dreamer back in those days. So had all that particular little nest of fellows. The long, talky evenings over pale red wine and greasy Italian table d'hote dinners in subcellars, dreaming, talking, planning, hoping! And rebelling!

Spellman had been a rebel in those days.

Hating injustice. Crying out against monopolies and against man's inhumanity to man. Spellman had dreamed of writing the great American Com-edie Humaine, only, as he outlined it to the Greenwich Guys, as they sat
talking on and on into the dream-lit nights, his Comedie Humaine was going to show humanity the grim tragedy, as well.

Oh, Spellman had dreams, all right.
They lit the dinginess of the poky
little over-crammed flat.

They lit the days and nights.

They were the dreams of idealism.

Of youth with his head in the clouds.

And then the deluge. The deluge of the material success that made of life
a cyclorama. A success so blinding,
so amazing, that the world clamored
for its recipe.

No wonder that under the stress of
it, the strain of it, there came the time when Spellman, still in love with success, mind you, felt, however, the need of a retreat from the maddening crowd.

At first his family rebelled. His wife, young, a product of the world he had grown into, held back from that move off the Avenue. His children, fiery, spoiled, intelligent, creatures of their kind of environment, shield at first and then capitulated to the novelty of the idea.

In the end, the move turned out to be one of the most brilliantly diplomatic things Spellman had ever done.
It proved his position in the social world which his wife and children craved. Society came flocking over after Spellman to the hitherto obscure section along the East River. A new and old-world looking boulevard began to take shape over there.

Brilliantly successful as it was, in the eyes of his family, and the reality
dealers who profited by the land boom, so far as Spellman was concerned, it was a failure.

He had defeated his own purpose.
In seeking to escape the maddening
crowd, he had only brought it tagging
along with him.

Travel meant no respite to Spell-
man. There were the ship reporters, the glare of limelight even in obscure foreign parts, and once when he sought the desert, reporters with cameras had found him out as he stalked
across the waste place, camel-back.

Spellman wanted leisure now. But his Long Island home was a social rendezvous and his Adirondack camp
that same kind of center all over again. New Mexico became the fad, no sooner he had built an abode but out there, and a private office in the fourth-story of the Woolworth
office building remained private for about two weeks.

Spellman wanted leisure. Spellman wanted to write. The old urge was upon him. The old desire to put into printed, palpitating word the human panorama as it had marched so dramatically before his still young eyes.
Spellman wanted mental peace. The quiet kind of hours that yield up dreams.

One day an idea struck him like a benign flash out of heaven.

Within three hours, secret agents
had been dispatched down to a rickety
little old building in quaint old Greenwich street.

Twelve hours later, the property
had secretly passed into the hands of Spellman.

One week later, and with a degree
of secrecy that only power and money could command, Spellman walked into almost an extra replica of the dingy old flat of days gone by.

He had even managed to have reproduced the mangy old carpet sofa
upon which he had slept those eager nights, away back.

There was the ink spot on the wall
left from Red Dyke having good naturally hurled a bottle of the stuff at Bill one night after an altercation on the subject of Nietzsche's philosophy.

The first night that Spellman spent in his new retreat promised to be one of the greatest peace he had known in years. A long quiet evening before the tunnel-shaped little old grate in the dingy flat. Books. Memories.
Dreams. Ideals.

But, of course, it was hard to concentrate. By eleven o'clock, a hundred details were crowding into Spell-man's mind, making it difficult for him to use his well-earned leisure.
There was no telephone. There had been none in the old days. One had to go to the corner drug store. That made it difficult. In the last year, Spellman had developed a slight heart leakage. Unimportant, but he required a certain amount of restraint to his activities. By eleven, Spellman, accustomed to chilled mineral water at his bedside, was thirsty. There was only the hydrant. And no ice in the leaky refrigerator. There had never been any in the old days, unless one of the fellows ran over to Grody's saloon and brought back a nickel's worth. Of course there was no Grody's saloon any more.

When finally Spellman turned in,
the magic to the old couch was all gone. The old couch hurt! It shot into his ribs with a cruelty that kept him wide awake and concentrating upon his discomfort rather than any of the old dreams he had used to enjoy, with his eyes staring wide open
into the comfortable blackness.

The blackness annoyed him now.
He had the sensation that vermin might be crawling around and about him. The stiff blanket irked. The air from the shaft was foul.

At eight o'clock the next morning,
Spellman, who had fallen off into a brief hour's sleep, awoke stiff and unrefreshed. A blurred mirror gave back his lined and weary image.

The little old room of his memories
was a dirty smear.

The old Bill was gone. Spellman was in his place.

Emerging from the rickety little building that morning, eager for a taxi and a trip uptown to his warm
and mellow bath, he found a battalion of reporters and photographers lying in wait for him who leaped into action
at sight of him.

"Mr. Spellman, have you anything to say—click—click—click—on the subject of—"

"Yes, fellows, I have," said Mr.
Spellman smiling, as he hailed his taxi. "He who would seek for his lost youth, must find it in his heart. There is no going back."

Conflicting Beauty Theories

AT LEAST once in every day of a beauty editor's life comes the cry: "What's a body to do—So and So says do and So and So says don't—
and how can one avoid being bewildered by so many conflicting beauty theories?"

The answer invariably is: Study yourself, your own needs, accept the theory that appeals to your best judgment as being good, sound, sense. Give that theory a chance, be persistent,
have faith and your efforts should bring results. Beauty experiments should be thorough, not haphazard, fly-
by-night affairs.

No one hears more conflicting beauty
theories than beauty students themselves. In quest of the reason for being of feminine loveliness, one finds that successful exponent number one observes every fundamental beauty
rule on which most beauty experts agree. Her daily ritual consists of exercise, a faithful eye to balance in her diet, sufficient fresh air and restful sleep, a daily facial with all the preparations of the same brand, careful hair
brushing and similar beauty details.

But exponent number two, equally as young looking and equally as beautiful, points with pride to the fact that she observes nary a beauty rule. No sir. Not she.
But—she beauty students bewildered? Just as emphatically—no
sir. For they know that there must be a catch some place.

It may be that the beauty under discussion is just naturally healthier and lovelier than the average.

Then there's the owner of a beautiful
figure who never exercises. But every day she walks two miles, and every evening she swims in the pool in her apartment hotel. As though these aren't the two best all-around exercises. Furthermore, she keeps her muscles under splendid control by perfect posture.

A screen star I know, says: "Diet—bab—I eat anything I like," but evidently from what I've seen of the lunches I've had with her, she has no desire for rich, fatty foods.

The moral of these stories, is:
don't be bewildered and don't attempt to imitate. If your favorite actress thrives on a mixture of cosmetics,
that is no indication that your skill
will stand the same kind of treatment.
Or, if your latest crush seems alive
and alert a notch three hours of sleep,
that is no clue for you to start staying up nights. Know yourself, know your system, your resources, just what you can stand and what you can't, and work only for what will be becoming
to you.

Importance of Health

WOMEN are tired of Pollyanna talks and skeptical of the sermons "beauty is as beauty does" and
"to be beautiful you must be in love."
Vibrant beauty depends on many things for support. The very first in the line of important contributors is physical health. For without health beauty can at best be only temporary
—it may last for a fleeting moment
or for a month, but it cannot live long.

You cannot be beautiful if you are not healthy. Have you ever seen a man or woman suffering from ill health who did not wear the
"give aways"—dull eyes and a heavy skin? Sooner or later "the skin will show." For the signs of ill health are not confined to inner aches and pains.

You cannot be beautiful if you are fatigued, for "that tired feeling" does damage in many ways. Allow it to become chronic and it is sure to dim
the sparkle in your eyes, rob your step of its spryness. Fatigue can claim more credit for "premature age" than all the calendars and chronological records man ever invented to mark time. As you value a smooth, young skin and sparkling eye, avoid fatigue.
Two of fatigue's busiest assistants are overwork and nervous strain and tension. So steer clear of these, too.

Boredom is another arch-enemy of beauty. Be it but the mood of a moment it is bad enough. But perpetual boredom is dynamite to bubbling, interesting beauty. When life goes blase, when there's no joy in living,
no thrill of anticipation or hope, nothing to anything, then the luminous, vivid quality of the skin is suddenly shut out and all bodily beauty goes "smash."
Akin to boredom is a gloomy aspect. People who have hobbies to concentrate on, usually find the fates quite kind to their beauty. I think that is why they say people in love
are lovely.

The actual cultivation of external beauty—silky skin and glossy hair—
is simple—particularly in this day and age when science is contributing so lavishly. But that inner peace and contentment, the beauty within that seems to shine right through the outer covering is often difficult to hold on to. But with courage—with interest and enthusiasm—with hope—beautiful and optimistic thoughts—in a word
a healthy mind and a healthy body one has a big bid for "that lovely look."

SYNOPSIS

Exhausted, ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morrison. Bat comes after him, but his new friends conceal him. Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy, who gives his name as Shad (Sheridan), is sent on his way to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. The colonel secures him a situation in the village of Amity Dam. He becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinker, considered by the straitlaced people of Amity Dam as a drunkard because of his periodic lapses from strict sobriety. Bat Morrison comes to Amity Dam to take his son back to his own dissolute life. Morrison, known lawbreaker, is overpowered by Colonel Blake, who is the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. With Bony, he pays a visit to Bumpy Brown.

CHAPTER III—Continued

There was a rap at the door. Shad opened it. A well-dressed, handsome young lady about twenty years old stood looking at the boy with an expression of astonishment in her face. She uttered no word of greeting. Her manner was haughty when she said: "I want to see Mr. Brown."

She turned away as she spoke. Bumpy changed color. With a look of surprise and embarrassment he said: "All right. I'll be with you in a minute."

The girl descended the steps and disappeared. Bumpy put on his coat and hurried out-of-doors saying:

"Set down, boys. I'll be with you soon."

He closed the door behind him and followed the young lady. Through a window the boys saw them walk together into the edge of the thicket where they stood talking.

"Who is that?" Shad asked.

"Darned if I know," was Bumpy's answer. "But I'd like to set an' look at her for a week."

"She is pretty—no mistake," Shad agreed.

Soon the girl went away.

Returning Bumpy stopped in front of the shack. The boys went out to him. He did not speak of his mysterious caller. He finished his work. He put some tools and clothing in his pack basket.

"Well, boys, we'll go along with ye," he said cheerfully. "Dick an' me are goin' to Bolton tonight so we can begin work in the mornin'."

Two small green sticks having four crochets were lashed on either side of the basket. They sloped upward and backward. A lashed rod lay in the lower crochets. This was Dick's saddle. The rim of the basket helped the bird to balance himself when necessary. Released from his cage, Dick leaped joyously and shouted, "Come on, and flew to his perch behind the pack basket now on the back of his master. In a moment, settled on his perch he soberly declared:

"Money makes the mare go."

The boys laughed. It was indeed an outfit as curious and as amusing as any that ever took to the road. Bumpy stopped suddenly and turned to his two companions and said:

"By Jeedix, boys! We've had fun an' we'll have some more. I like you. If any one of you ever needs a friend er a home, come to me."

When he had returned that evening Shad succeeded in writing a letter to Ruth Blake in which he felt a sense of pride and satisfaction. It told of his day with Bumpy Brown. Its spelling and grammar would later have made him wince but not in his best days could he have improved its humor.

CHAPTER IV

Foreground of the Mystery.

Shad spent a year and a half in the little village. It was enlivened by many visits to the Fun Shop in Brown's cove. The mysterious young lady had thrown a glamor of romance upon it. Once Bony had spoken playfully of their admiration and of their wish to see her again. Bumpy Brown looked serious and quickly changed the topic. He never spoke of her. The boys had jolly times with the tinker and his bird. He entertained them with quaint jests and thrilling tales and good food. His good-natured, merry talk, not like that of any other man, had made them fond of him. They were keen-minded boys. They suspected that his stories were not all true, that his alleged friend "Muggins" was a fiction. In spite of all this, they loved to be with Bumpy Brown.

Shad had now begun to find himself. He was growing in strength, stature and wisdom. He had learned how to study. He had acquired an almost sinful longing for good clothes. Still he liked not less good books and good company. His friend, the village doctor, had lent him the novels of Deane and Dickens and the poems of Longfellow and Tennyson. His best creditors were the doctor, the grammar and the dictionary. He had begun to enjoy his letter-writing. He had a sense of pride in the long letter that he had written to Mr. Converse.

Mr. Converse was so pleased with the letter that he sent a check of fifty dollars to the boy and bade him do as he pleased with the money. Shad went to Ashfield and bought fine raiment. That day he wrote a letter to Ruth Blake in which he said:

"At last I can come to visit you without being intimidated and oppressed by soiled garments. I hope that you will like my new clothes and me. We have gone into partnership and our business is to make a good impression on you. If we fail I shall not blame the clothes but I shall think that I am in very bad luck."

It must be said that the undertaking was successful. On three Sundays that autumn he and the new clothes were engaged in this romantic enterprise. The handsome lad and the girl went canoeing and rode about the countryside together. The boy succeeded in getting himself deeply in love. The last of these visits was on a Sunday late in October. The colonel was not at home. Shad ate a midday dinner with Ruth and her mother. The girl left them for a time to go out on an errand. This was a purely strategic move. The friendly gentleman and the boy talked together.

"Amity Dam is no place for you," said Mrs. Blake. "I'm going to try to help you out of that mire of rusticity. You must come to Canton and go to school. The colonel and I have been laying plans. I have no boy and I could be a kind of mother to you."

"I should like that. I would be very proud."

"You need a mother or a father to whom you could bring your troubles. You are so young."

"Well, my greatest trouble is the fact that I am so young."

"Do you call that a trouble? I wish that I were back at your age. I was in love at seventeen. It was the beginning of a great happiness."

The boy was quick to take advantage of this opening. He was lashed for it. He blushed as he looked at her and said:

"I guess that I know how you felt. You loved to lie down at night and be alone with your happiness. In the morning the birds sang of the love in your heart. Even the flowers in the field knew your secret. They looked at you and nodded their heads as if they would give you encouragement. That is the way they treat me."

"You?"

"Yes, they are always reminding me of the colors in her hair and eyes and cheeks. I think that the sun and the moon and the stars shine only to show her face to me."

"My child! Are you in love?"

"Yes, but I am not a child."

"Whom do you love?"

"Your daughter."

Mrs. Blake took the boy's hand and laughed.

"In love! and getting one hundred and fifty dollars a year!" she exclaimed with good-natured amusement. "I suppose that you and your wife could get along on bread and water."

"My school days have scarcely begun."

"I learn fast. I shall get along."

"The time to fall in love is after you have got along, not before."

"It comes when it comes. Nobody can tell when he will fall in love."

"I wouldn't take this so seriously. You'll get over it."

"Never! You don't know how bad it is. I would rather die than give it up. I want to be engaged to Ruth."

"It is impossible. You are both far too young."

"But you were only seventeen when you fell in love."

"True, but those days things were different and I was not engaged for a year after that. The colonel was then three years older than I—old enough to be sure of himself. Now, Shad, I must ask you to promise me on your word of honor as a gentleman that you will say nothing to Ruth of this until I give you permission to do it. We'll see how you get along and we shall do everything that we can do to help you. If you keep your love for her and if she should be fond of you we will have another talk about it by and by."

"I will make the promise and keep it, but if I see that some other fellow is trying to get her it would be hard for me to keep myself from jumping in."

"Don't worry. You have the inside track. We are all fond of you. Let's see what happens."

Shad returned to his task in Amity Dam a bit depressed. Soon after that an unexpected trouble came upon him. One of the gold rings had been missing from its showcase for a week. Since the loss had been discovered Shad had observed a difference—slight but unmistakable—in the manner of Mr. and Mrs. Smithers. Indeed, he thought that other people had begun to treat him coolly.

The next Sunday afternoon Shad and Bony went down to Brown's cove. Shad told Bumpy of his trouble.

"Folks are just nat'rally cussed mean," said Bumpy. "They're made that way. By Jeedix! They can't help it no more'n a toad can help havin' warts. I heard t'other day in a house where I was tinkerin' that you an' Bony was wild. I says: 'Them boys are all right. Till they've learnt their lesson be easy on 'em. They'll come out as straight as a loon's leg.'"

Boys are quick to detect the note of insincerity. They knew that Bumpy spoke from his heart in spite of his own bitterness.

Suddenly he came to Shad. "Boy, I forgot yer trouble," he said. "Tell me about that ring. When did you see it last?"

"When I was showing it and some other trinkets to a girl the other day."

"What girl?"

"I don't know her name. She was about eighteen years old—light-colored hair an' blue eyes. She had pretty teeth an' a turned-up nose. There was a scar on her left cheek. Wore a blue dress."

"I'm afraid she's rather light-fingered," said Bumpy. "I know her, an' what folks say in her neighborhood—a few miles south o' here. I'm a-goin' up there in a day or two. I'll see what I can do. Not worry."

As they were leaving Bumpy said: "Come down next Sunday. I may have some news."

The next Sunday, to avoid criticism, they went to meeting and promptly set out for Brown's cove.

Bumpy was standing by the door. He waved his hat as they came up and called out:

"By Jeedix, boys! I'm happy! See that?"

He held up the gold ring between his thumb and forefinger. Shad trembled with excitement. "How did you get it?" he asked.

"Oh, I went an' see that gal an' I jus' scared it out o' her. Told her she'd have to give it back or go to jail. She broke down and handed it over. It was kind o' pitiful. I told her nobody would even know her name an' they won't—not from me. I'm a-goin' to take it to Smithers and tell him how I come by it."

The sat down to their dinner of roasted partridges and baked potatoes and pumpkin pie.

"There's just one fly in my ointment," said Bumpy as he began to carve the birds.

"What's that?" Bony asked.

"I've been drunk ag'in. Met an old comrade. We got to talkin' 'bout the second day at Gettysburg. There's suthin' cur'us 'bout Gettysburg. It's slippery ground. He had a bottle, we walked to Brown's cove in the cool o' the night an' got drunk on the way. We set down here an' fit the Confeds till daylight. If I could fer-git Gettysburg an' some other things, I'd be respectable."

They ate a moment in silence. Then Bumpy added:

"One drink will put the devil in me. The old sores begin to bleed. But I'm through—by Jeedix! Never no more whisky fer me. I'm through. The woman has looked purty solemn since then."

He carved the birds and loaded their plates. It was no time for idle words. Talk was not resumed until each had dined his appetite on the bones. Then Bumpy began his tales of thrilling and improbable adventure.

When the boys thanked him and bade him good-by the sun was low. They left with a most friendly feeling for the old man.

Spring Coat Fashions Go Military

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION'S followers are sure going "on parade" this season, all dressed up in red, white and blue with brass buttons and epaulets 'n' everything that's military. It's quite exciting, this patriotic gesture of the mode.

Even the very fabrics which go to make our apparel have been designed to commemorate the George Washington bicentennial celebration, in that the motifs of the newest silk prints center about the famous cherry tree incident, while stars and stripes and tricorn hats and kindred items enter the scheme of things.

But that is another story which has to do with spring weaves. What we started to talk about is the latest, smartest coats which have such a military bearing they quite overawe one, being so broad shouldered and all a glitter with nickel or brass buttons and the like.

Perhaps the most outstanding reaction to this martial spirit which is pervading the style realm is the importance of blues in the color range, very keen blues some of them, for the spring coat. Most military in matter of color and all other details as well, is the coat shown to the right in the picture. It's color combination is bright navy lined with military red, the huge shining nickel buttons contributing their share of pomp and glory.

You should see the coat pictured to the left in its original color, for it is bright red—red corduroy, if you please, for corduroy has come back and there is no mistake about it. In a more conservative color, say the new beige, it would be wearable for any age. Designers are using corduroy for most everything, for the swagger little bellhop jackets for pajama costumes, for sports dresses and suits with lots of white corduroy in prospect for summer wear. As to the coat mentioned, the diagonal lines of brass buttons dramatize its broad shoulders, while its trim, narrow waistline emphasizes the military mode that is scheduled to lead in the Easter style program. Note, too, its collarless neckline which is a style feature worthy of comment, since many coats are sans collars so as to make way for these "lifty" separate fur neckpieces which fashion has planned for us.

A new treatment inspired by the general trend manifests itself in the use of considerable military braid, applied in rows, or perhaps for epaulet shoulder effects as well as many other attractive expressions. So, if you like braided trimmings, the hour has come to indulge your fancy. Suits as well as coats show this ornamentation.

It is very evident that the military spirit has pervaded every realm of fashion, from knitted wear to furs. The former adopts, for instance, the tri-color schemes which are so exceedingly popular, with double-breasted treatments employing flashing metal buttons. Then there's the new scarfs flaunting their reds, whites and blues via all sorts of whimsical stripes, stars and other design.

The little short spring jackets developed of gray kidskin accented with nickel buttons are a possession to be coveted, seeing that they blend with current fashions of military aspect.

And have you seen the detachable military capes which are of fur or of cloth and which boast of buttons in rows according to the latest dictate of fashion.

Dresses are military minded also in that many of them are fashioned of blue sheer woolen with trimmings of red and white print silk.

DOUBLE DUTY FROCK FINDS WIDE FAVOR

The time seems to be over, for the present at any rate, when we had a different costume for each occasion. Now, our frocks have to do double duty and be just as good looking at tea as at a smart restaurant or night club.

For this reason we now dress in layers, slipping on over a decollete gown a bloused effect, jacket or bolero to make it perfectly presentable when the bright lights are not yet gilding the blue of night. This is an extremely practical and workable fashion and no matter how much the great houses may charge for such a model, the purchaser feels virtuously happy that she is effecting an important economy by buying a two-in-one frock.

Ensembles of Shoes and Bag Add Chic to Suit

It seems to be that although the shoes and the handbag are of necessity so far apart from each other, they are really soul-mates. But at last this fact is receiving proper recognition, for nearly every smart shop here now shows ensembles of shoe and bag and rare it is nowadays to find a shop without several examples of this smart combination.

For smart it is, guaranteed to dress the simplest spring coat or suit and give it new charm and chic. More and more, we are co-relating our accessories and doing away with slipshod methods of selecting things that are totally unrelated and have no reason for being worn together.

Lacquered Hair New for Evening Coiffures

Lacquered hair is a new note in coiffures for feminine heads. The hair is treated with a lacquer which does not change its color, but which makes each hair almost twice its normal size. It is then arranged in ringlets and swirls and allowed to dry. The lacquer, which is used only in the evening, may be easily washed off next morning.

CHIC LACY MESH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

No, this very pretty and very chic afternoon dress is not lace. It's a young and extremely popular first cousin to lace. The technical name is dune cotton lacy mesh. This knit weave of softly lustrous dune is of diagonal construction. The designer of the frock has furthered the diagonal feeling through clever handling of the stripes. A dull suede belt contrasts the subtle luster of the material. The scarf is tied to give a cowl neckline which to slender faces is amazingly becoming.

The New Cottons

In material, cotton has been raised from humble rank to high favor. Printed cottons are shown for dresses, blouses and coat linings. Cotton day dresses are found in open weaves. Pique, wool and some boucle are seen in daytime costumes.

Advertising a Sale!

YOU don't leave your rig in the middle of the road and go to a fence-post to read a sale bill do you? Then don't expect the other fellow to do it.

Put an ad in this paper, then, regardless of the weather, the fellow you want to reach reads your announcements while seated at his fire.

If he is a prospective buyer you'll have him at your side. One extra buyer often pays the entire expense of the ad, and it's a poor ad that won't pull that buyer.

An ad in this paper reaches the people you are after.

Bills may be a necessity, but the ad is the thing that does the business.

Don't think of having a special sale without using advertising space in this paper.

Temple Built to Honor Great Egyptian Goddess

The temple at Denderah is one of the most famous temples in all Egypt. According to the historical facts which the scientists have been able to dig out of the hieroglyphic records, it was restored by Pharaoh Ptolemy I, who lived four thousand years ago in the Sixth dynasty.

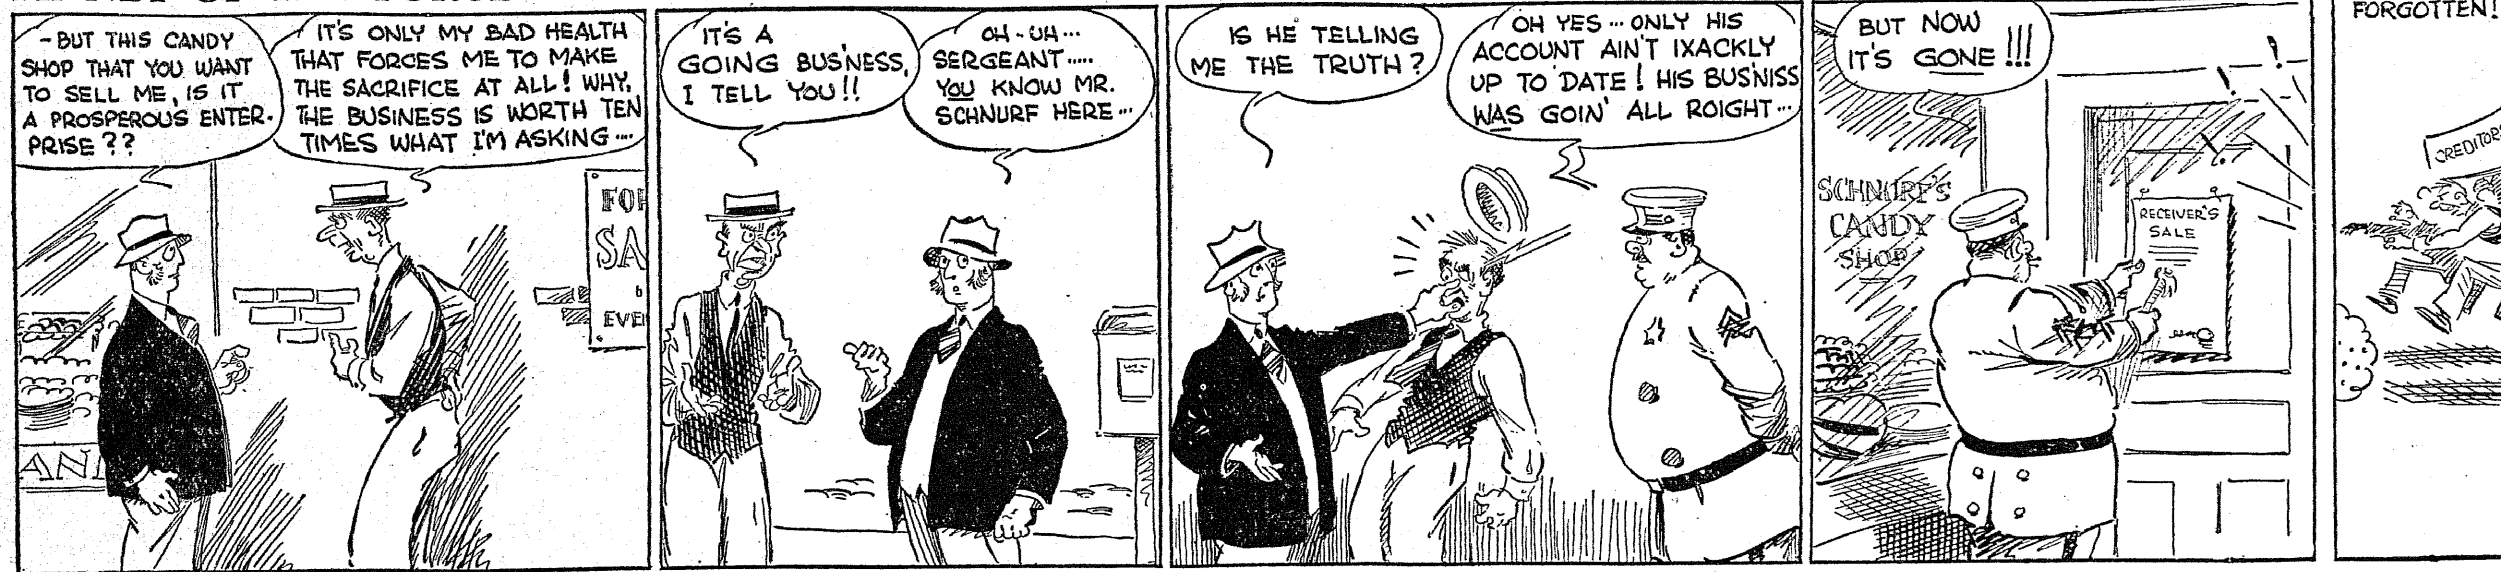

There is a high wall round the temple, with a majestic gateway, and to walk through this gateway is to be awed by the majesty of the columns of the entrance hall. The capitals of these columns are graven in the image of Hathor, the goddess to

SUMMING UP A CAREER

"Your experience in politics has not greatly rewarded you."

"Not greatly," answered Senator Sorghum. "I have found many anxieties and very little pecuniary benefit. It is now being suggested to me that as new conditions are developing, I may find it more comfortable to retire."

"But what do you get out of it?"

"Nothing—except the privilege of getting out."

SOME DULLNESS GONE

Mr. Dubb—This party is horribly dull. I guess I'll go home.

Miss Sweet—That would remove some of the dullness, I'm sure.

Guarded Response

Little Sister had been helping herself rather freely to some of Big Sister's expensive perfume.

When cautioned whether she thought Big Sister would approve, she coyly acknowledged:

"Oh, sister don't mind, but you needn't tell her about it."

Diplomatic Approach

"By the way, old man, I want to see you next Saturday at 3 p. m. it's something important."

"Yeh! And what do you want to see me then for?"

"I want to pay you back the $5 I'm going to touch you for now."

The Urge to Gossip

"Why do women so often gossip about one another?"

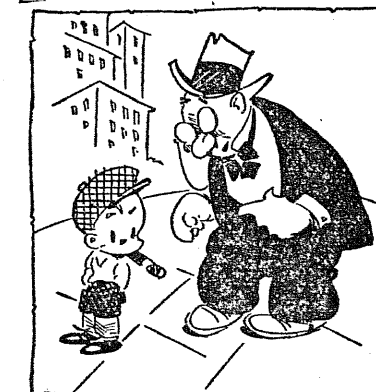

"I never could decide," answered Miss Cayenne. "Sometimes they sound to me like a group of men who are discussing some one of distinguished prominence in public office."

Professional Billing

Garage Owner's Assistant—Hey, boss, your doctor's out here with a flat tire, and he wants to know what it's going to cost him.

Garage Owner—Diagnose the case as flatulency of the perimeter, and charge him $5.

HAD SEEN EVERYTHING

"Don't you know that smoking will shorten your life, my boy?"

"Aw, I don't care. I've seen everything here is."

Neighborly Exchange

Wife—John, that couple in the next apartment have had a quarrel every day for over a week.

Hub—Well, since you have enjoyed listening to them, I suppose now we ought to reciprocate.

Slight Mistake

The patient was complaining.

"They do not feed us much at this hospital. Look at that slice of red meat. Who gets that?"

"That," responded the attendant icily, "is a postage stamp."

Seeking Privacy

He—What would you say if a man kissed you here, in front of all these people?

She—Don't talk of such things—come out on the veranda!

Something Else

First Comedian—The last time I appeared in pantomime the people could be heard roaring with laughter a mile away.

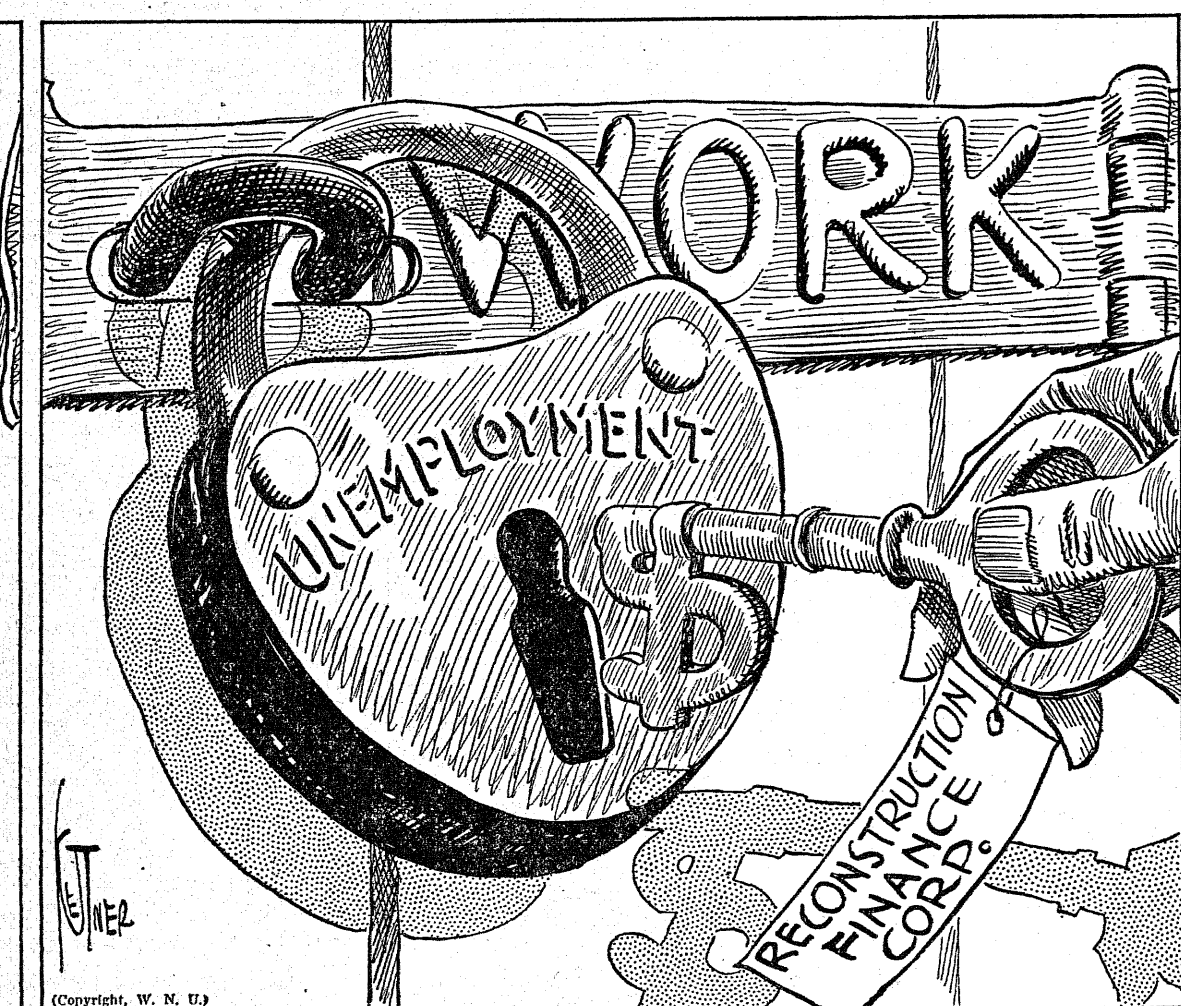

Second Comedian—Really? What was going on there?—Montreal Star.

Too Trite

"Nora," said the mistress, "I wish you would be more polite in your conversation."

"Okay, ma'am, but I hate to be a yes ma'am."
