Thought for the Week

By KARL PERLZ BRAND, "Tribune Herald"

There are people who, discouraged and frustrated, surrender themselves to defeat. They then proceed to rationalize their surrender in one way or another. It is not worth the effort, anyhow. Life is cheap and meaningless. "Nihil is caught in a hopeless trap. There have been and still are religious which declared that man is governed by fate, and that it is, therefore, hopeless or even impossible to try to change what has been decreed." These beliefs and philosophies make man subject either to the compulsion of impersonal nature, or to the influence of the stars of planets, or to his own past irrevocable acts or to the unaccountable willfulness of some deity. Judaism denies and rejects them all.

The problem of human freedom was not unknown to the thinkers of Judaism, but they were not in search of the different in reconciling man's freedom of choice with God's omniscience. But the intellectual difficulty which they encountered in their effort to solve this problem did not move them to commit the grave error of denying free will to man altogether.

They realized that there were limitations to human freedom, but they also realized that there were vital areas in which man was free—in which man had a vivid intuition and experience of freedom. Because the boundaries between what was free and what was determined were not clearly defined, man should act as if they did not exist, but in all areas as his moral initiative was concerned. It is man's duty to develop freedom within himself just as it is his duty to develop his mind and reason although they, too, have their limitations.

It is part of recorded history that man, by dint of his will and exertion, increased his physical security on earth and the amenities of his life, diminished want, poverty, and improved health and education—and there are no visible limits to such improvements. Man has within his limitations been able to accomplish much which he never would have accomplished had he accepted the doctrine of fatalism. He has not been able to conquer nature straight and that which is wanting cannot be filled, and there is nothing new under the sun.

Judaism proclaimed to the world the liberating doctrine of moral freedom, and thereby, also, of moral responsibility. "See, I have set before thee this day life and good and death and evil. If thou choose, thou shalt live; you may live, you and your seed."

The curtain may be falling upon a dying world. It may be rising upon a better and brighter world. What religion is trying to tell us is that we alone can determine whether it shall rise or fall, even as we alone must decide the plot, write the words, and act the parts. The whole drama of social life is our own composition.

Presbyterian Talk Topic Announced

"This is Living" will be the topic of the message by the Rev. Robert G. Longaker, pastor, at the 11 a.m. service in the First Presbyterian Church this Sunday.

Our sad-faced friend is Bill McGon

Who thought he'd bought a car brand-new? And while he got a "special deal" His disappointment he can't conceal!

While others drive in Sweep-Wing style Poor Bill just mutters curses vile: "They got new styling, features, too— 'I bought a deal'—hoo-hoo, hoo-hoo!"

Moral: Yesterday's looks and features are no bargain at any price!

No car is a bargain if it's obsolete in styling and engineering features. And the Sweep-Wing Dodge actually exceeds other cars in its field with its low, low look of tomorrow and revolutionary advances like Torque-Air Ride, Push-Button Torque-Shift and Total-Contact Brakes. So don't get "bargain-baiting" into yesterday's styling and features. The same money buys the car that's years ahead. See your Dodge dealer. Join the swing to the Sweep-Wing Dodge.

Adult School Plans to Offer Plane Geometry Again

The Cranford Adult School's first high-school-level course—plane geometry—will be offered again at the fall semester opening October 1 at Cranford High School.

Plane geometry was one of the most popular classes at both the fall and spring semesters last year. Registration was so high during the fall term that two classes were opened.

Driver Errors Cause Traffic Toll to Mount

"No traffic accident can be exclusively attributed to any one single cause," says David Green, president of the Motor Club of America (AAM), "but the driver's fault is usually the most important factor in the majority of cases."

As simple as one plus one equals two, Mr. Green pointed out, "the formula for a simple traffic accident merely is the sum of driver errors."

The driver who jumps the light on the assumption that traffic intersecting road will slow down or stop because of a signal change takes an uncalculated risk.

The pedestrian who assumes that traffic will stop at a red light takes an uncalculated risk.

There are millions of such examples daily in our traffic patterns, Mr. Green said. "It's all these little things, either by drivers or pedestrians, that cause the traffic toll to mount."

Gladiolus Show Slated for August

"A Gladiolus Show" is the theme of the 1957 state-wide gladiolus show to be held in the Rutgers University gymnasium in New Brunswick by the New Jersey Gladiolus Society on August 7 and 8. The show will be open and free to exhibitors and visitors.

The annual show held on the Rutgers campus for the first time last year, is expected to feature over a thousand specimen spikes of gladiolus exhibited by amateur and commercial growers from New Jersey and nearby states.

Theme of the show will be carried out in the arrangements section, which calls for arrangements and compositions to depict family life.

"Watch out—you'll kill an alligator!" said the wife in the back seat clenching the child's arm to her side.

"Oh, shut-up," said the husband as he gripped the steering wheel tighter and pressed the gas pedal closer to the floor.

Just such tableaux are enacted every day as families spin along the nation's highways with "back seat" riders lacking the barest carriage driver with unkind tongue and a horn in the opera house back seat, needing him with a valuable comment, can be a valuable asset according to an Institute survey.
