A New Gold Field in California.

The discovery of gold in this country is not a matter of wonder. The existence of the precious metal has been known for several years; but it has been the general belief that it could not be found in paying quantities. The recent developments indicate that this belief is erroneous.—Some very rich specimens have been taken out, and the miners are sanguine that the parent ledge will be found, from which the dust and nuggets now being panned out have been washed. It is to be hoped that their expectations will be realized to the fullest extent.

A correspondent of the Tribune writes as follows: These placers were discovered about the latter part of September last by Miguel Trujillo, a miner of considerable experience. He was hunting in the vicinity, and, water being scarce, proceeded to dig in the bed of the creek. Reaching water at the depth of two feet, and scraping the sand from the bedrock, he found several pieces of gold, weighing from ten cents up to one dollar. Being satisfied of the richness of the gulch, he secretly notified a few friends and returned to the mines, where, for two months and a half they have been quietly dry-washing and throwing up the dirt preparatory to the rainy season. Recently parties living in the San Jose Valley having their suspicions aroused by observing Trujillo's party taking out supplies, followed them, and made their discovery public.

As yet gold in paying quantities has only been found to exist in Trujillo Gulch and one tributary. From the forks of the creek where the discovery was made, gold has been found and claims staked off extending down the ravine a distance of three quarters of a mile, and up the north and south forks each for perhaps half a mile near their sources, where they debouch from the main sierra. The character of the gold is what is generally termed coarse, ranging from a color up to chunks of $20 and $25. A nugget weighing $25, with some particles of quartz attached, and containing perhaps $20 of pure gold, was found a few days prior to our arrival there. Some mystery appeared to prevail among the miners as to the exact locality of finding this nugget, the lucky hombre averring that he had picked it up in his claim on the main gulch, while a majority were of the opinion that he had found it elsewhere, suspicion being aroused by his action in wandering off alone among the chapparel hills several days before and after that find.—[San Luis Obispo (Cal.) Tribune.

Caleb Cushing's Working Power.

Caleb Cushing was one of the most extraordinary men of this age, for this reason: He had a memory probably unequaled by any man now alive. He could read sixteen hours a day for a month, and never forget an important fact obtained in that time, and this faculty made him the profoundest authority on federal law in this country. His memory and his power of work were the secrets of his success. As an illustration of this the following anecdote is told: In 1863, or thereabout, he was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Bench of Massachusetts. He was out of practice and, to use his own words, "very rusty." He set to work, however, and in nineteen days had read sixty volumes on different laws—questions of precedent, laws of contracts, laws of exchange, etc. About seventeen volumes [illegible] twice as many more were made up of reports, and the reading was altogether extremely varied. Now for an example of his power of work: Between the ages of twenty-seven and fifty-four he never knew what it was to be sick. He was accustomed in Washington to get to work in the evening at 5 o'clock and labor tremendously through meal hours, and without taking a rest, until 11 o'clock at night. Then he would smoke a cigar, get into bed and read history until he fell asleep. In one winter he finished in this manner thirteen octavo volumes of scientific travel and recent history. While Attorney-General he would have his meals brought to him and laid on his writing desk. His custom often was to eat the entire meal without looking at it or resting from his work. Friends [illegible] during the time when he was trying to adjust the Hudson Bay Company's claims, and often on ordinary occasions, would find him buried in writing paper or law books at 4 o'clock in the morning, he having been at his desk for twenty-three hours without rest.—[Boston Herald.

Jack Frost's Corner in Oysters.

The cold wave which has swept over the Atlantic coast within the last few days will virtually put an end, if the present cold weather continues, to the occupation of the oysterman, giving him a season of rest from the arduous toil of gathering the luscious bivalves for market. From all parts of the country come reports that the oyster grounds are frozen over. The supply on hand is limited. In Baltimore the price advanced on Friday morning to one dollar a gallon. On the oyster grounds of Virginia thirty vessels are frozen in, with few, if any, oysters stowed away in their holds for northern markets. In New York, dealers are holding on to what they have in stock, getting high prices for all they sell compared to what was received a week ago; and they talk of fabulous prices if the Ice King retains his frozen grip upon navigation.

Among our coal dealers in Fair Haven the cry goes forth "save us from our customers." The supply among them is very limited; many of them are out. The prices have ranged from seventy to ninety cents a gallon, and advanced on Friday to one dollar, some dealers asking one dollar and a quarter. An offer of one hundred dollars for one hundred gallons was refused, and they predict if the cold weather keeps on that the price must go up to one dollar and one dollar and a quarter. One lucky dealer upon whom fortune smiled in a similar manner two years ago had on hand twenty-four hundred bushels in the shell. This same identical dealer during the recent strike among the oyster openers in Baltimore sold and shipped to a firm in that city $3,700 worth of oysters in one week. He told our reporter on Friday last that he had bought up every oyster he could get.—[New Haven Register.

Uncomfortable Shave.

Says the Whitlaw (N. Y.) Review: A certain eccentric barber is nobody's enemy but his own. He drinks like a fish, and confesses to periodical delirium tremens. The other day he shaved a friend of mine. As he finished [illegible] the lather, and took a clean sweep with his razor down my friend's cheek and throat, he said:

"The worst of the drink is that it makes you feel so jumpy in the morning. You feel as though you'd like to cut your own throat, or some one else's, you does."

My friend sat still in horror, and wished himself safe out of the shop.

"Ah, sir," continued Figaro, "it's downright pleasure to shave real flesh and blood like this, and [illegible] cheek with [illegible]."

"What do you mean?" exclaimed the customer in terror, feeling sure that the barber had homicidal intentions.

"Well, sir, the last job I had afore this was a stiff 'un."

And he wiped his razor meditatively as he spoke.

"And this is the razor yer used?"

"Well, yes it is, [illegible] you was the [illegible] one you has to shave a corpse, and, excuse me, sir, your beard's stiff, so I keep my best razor for you."

My friend dashed off the napkin and bolted for his life out of the shop. I met him with the remains of the lather still on his face.

Choate's Irony.

Nobody at the bar ever equalled him in paying ironical compliments to the judges who blocked his way to the hearts and understandings of juries. Judge Shaw was specially noticed for the gruff way in which he interposed with obstacles, and Shaw's depth of legal learning was not more conspicuous than his force of character. "'Tisn't so, Mr. Choate," was a frequent interruption, when Shaw was on the bench, and Choate was arguing a case before him. Choate's side remarks on the judge have passed into the stereotyped jokes of the bar, and are now somewhat venerable. One is, I think, not commonly stated in the exact words. "I always approach Judge Shaw," he said, "as a savage approaches his fetish, knowing that he is ugly and feeling that he is great." Of Judge Story he once remarked, "I never heard him pronounce a judgment in which he did not argue the case better than the counsel on either side; and for which," he added, with a twinkle in his eye, "he might very properly have been impeached." He delighted in gravely joking. Thus he once asked that a case might be postponed, owing to his engagement in another court. The judge replied that the case was one in which he might write out his argument. With a mock solemnity, which it always seemed to me no other human countenance could so readily assume, he replied, "I write well, your Honor, but slowly." As his handwriting resembled the tracks of wild cats, with their claws dipped in ink, madly dashing over the surface of a folio sheet of white paper, the assembled bar could not restrain its laughter. Indeed it is affirmed, that he could not decipher his own handwriting after a case was concluded, and had to call in experts to explain it to himself. He congratulated himself on the fact that if he failed to get a living at the bar, he could go to China, and support himself by his pen, that is by decorating tea chests.—[Edwin P. Whipple in Harpers' Magazine for November.

The Inconvenience of Silver.

A good story is told of the experience of one of our banks and manufactories resuming specie payment. The stock of silver dollars in one of the banks was getting to be pretty large, and a director proposed that if the bank would put with them enough gold to make up his monthly pay roll, he would pay them out. Agreed. A youthful messenger from the shops stepped lightly into the bank one day and called for "that silver," the amount of which was about $7,000. He was somewhat surprised on attempting to lift the bag of metal, which weighed about four hundred pounds avoirdupois. An expressman was required to convey it to the counting room; it took a day's work of all the clerks to count it out, the unusual gravity of the procedure was thought to require the presence of the leading partners, the workmen have been distressed for fear of losing the gold pieces, and finally the story is all around the shops that the employers made about two hundred dollars by the operation! It will be the last time probably that the dollar of the daddies gets a lift from that office.—Springfield Republican.

Can't God Count?

This was the question a tiny little girl asked her brother. It occurred in this way: the little girl and her brother were carrying a basket of cakes to their old grandmother. As often happens with children, and sometimes with grown people, they were very curious to see what was in the basket; and so they carefully raised the cover and looked in. When their greedy eyes saw the tempting cakes, their mouths fairly watered to taste them. After counting them over several times, they almost made up their minds, they might eat just one of them. Nobody would know it, and it would taste so good. While they were gazing at the cakes, and just ready to take one, the little girl looked up in her brother's face, and asked the matter-of-fact question, "Can't God count?" This settled the matter, the lid was shut down and all the cakes were carried to their grandmother.

Prurient Preaching.

Some years ago a minister in New York City made a great sensation by advertising a sermon to thieves and harlots. The house was crowded, of course, with people who wanted to get a good look at the wicked people, who, for their part, did not come. This kind of prurient interest is easily excited by any discussion of social evils that is trumpeted. It is only the minister of firm but delicate touch who can advantageously treat such topics at all, and he will not use them as baits to catch gudgeons with. Such themes are sure to excite curiosity, whether they be treated in the pulpit, or the daily papers, or the weekly dreadfuls; but the chief purpose of the moral reformer should not be to excite evil curiosity. A certain kind of pathological information a reformer needs; but it is not information to be generally disseminated. About all such evil a pure spirit will say, "O my soul, come not thou into their secret!"—Edward Eggleston, in Midwinter Scribner.

DAILY JOURNAL.

Official Organ for City and County
the Daily and Weekly Editions Reaching all Classes of City and County Readers, with the Largest Circulation of any paper in this City.

THE FRENCH MINISTERIAL CRISIS has ended in the consolidation of the Republic. The Ministry in substance stated that they intended to bring the official force into harmony with the Republic, and this led to a vote of confidence, which included this statement. This is encouraging for French business interests which were disturbed by the excitement as well as for the political future of France.

THE MOST AMUSING TRAVESTY of minority representation that we have heard of is the bill introduced into the House by Mr. Springer (Dem.) This bill provides:

> That when more than two members are elected in a State the State shall be divided into districts of three members each as far as possible, and when there are two odd representatives (that is, over three or six or nine, &c.) there shall be one district consisting of five members. In districts consisting of three members every elector shall vote for only two members of Congress and in districts entitled to five members every elector shall vote for three members.

Mr. Springer claims by this that the negro minority in the South will thus be represented as well as the Democratic minority at the North. But if the negroes cannot elect their Congressmen in districts where they are in a vast majority, on account of bull dozing operations, how can minority representation help them any. The whole thing is an amusing effort to increase the Democratic representation in the North.

ONE OF THE largest fires Elizabeth has been visited with of late years, broke out in the Arcade, about the middle of the forenoon, and but for the energy and skill of the Fire Department, it would have proved more destructive that it was. In no part of our city are there so many valuable and compactly built edifices as in that locality. On the north corner was the First National Bank building four stories high whilst adjoining it on the south was a continuous string of three and four story buildings, extending down as far as Kean's iron front, and had it not been for the almost super human effort of the fire department the whole block would have gone. It was a fortunate circumstance that the fire did not occur in the night, but at a time of the day when it could be grappled with the more easily. Notwithstanding the cold, the men stood at their posts like heroes although some of them were wet through to the skin. The police, too, deserve a great deal of credit for the excellent order preserved by them; and our citizens generally for the careful manner they handled the goods removed from the buildings in danger. What might have proved the heaviest calamity our city ever suffered, was confined to the Arcade—the immense building in which it orignated. Mr. Amos Clark, jr., the owner, will have the sympathies of all our citizens. In his behalf, and in behalf of all those whose property has been saved, we tender thanks to those who have aided in saving it. Our local columns give the [illegible]

CLERICAL ETIQUETTE is as obligatory we suppose as any other sort. The "cloth" should even set an example of good manners, and Dr. Fulton can be no exception to the general rule. At a meeting of the Baptist Ministers' Conference in New York yesterday, the discussion ran upon the essay read a week ago by Dr. Sampson on the "Beast of the Revelation," which that able and scholarly gentleman construed to mean the persecuting spirit. Others wanted to make a more specific application to the Church of Rome, despite of what Brother Porter had said at a previous conference of the charities and many decencies of that church in Europe. This whole controversy and especially the moderation of Dr. Sampson seems to have enraged Dr. Fulton beyond the bounds of propriety and he not only made an argument to show that the "Beast" was the Church of Rome and nothing more or less, in which, of course, he had a right to his own opinion, but he went out of his way to be rude to Dr. Sampson. Not content with attacking the theories of the latter, upon the matter of the "Beast," he undertook to drag on him about his record during the civil war, as if that made any difference as to his ability as a commentator. Dr. Sampson listened very quietly to the abuse and for all answer referred him to the records of the War Department during the trying times. But the conference was very properly not so easily satisfied, and insisted that Dr. Fulton should apologize for the insult, but this the latter refused to do. Perhaps the most sensible thing said at the conference was the utterance of Rev. Mr. Gessler of this city. On the main subject matter of discussion, he had stated that he "believed it was an unknown land of prophecy that can be understood only in the light of fulfilled events," but on the question of good manners he took even stronger ground. After Dr. Fulten had in vain been pleaded with by his clerical brethren, and continued defiant. Mr. Gessler gave notice that unless Dr. Fulton apologized for his insult both to Dr. Samson and to the Conference his (Gessler's) membership in the latter would cease. He would not be a member of any organization that could not protect itself from such insults. He protested most earnestly against Dr. Fulton's conduct. Mr. Gessler did exactly right. Vigorous measures must be taken with men who have no manners.

A HOME FOR THE MIDDLE CLASSES.

"The stream of tendency," as we have in substance remarked before, is for the middle classes, whose workers do business in New York to make their homes in Elizabeth and other semi-rural cities. This statement receives fresh illustration from some carefully prepared official figures concerning the growth of New York during the last ten years. From these it appears that during the past 11 years—a sufficiently long time to furnish sufficient data to draw conclusions from—the average estimated cost of each building has been $14,300, but as cost always considerably overruns the estimates, because many things are never included in them or more expensive substitutes are afterwards made, it may be assumed that $16,000 would be nearer the actual cost. Now it should also be considered that these eleven years embrace the five years that have elapsed since the panic, and therefore furnish a safe standard for comparison—and it should be further stated that it also includes every structure made of wood, even the shanties upon the rocks. The figures also show that the cost of dwellings is about 70 per cent. of the whole amount, stores and office buildings, and that more money has been paid to erect public buildings than for manufactories and workshops—a fact which does not argue well. An odd fact noted in the Times is that the expenditures of the whole eleven years for churches and stables is about the same, the public schools, which so many people here cry out against as such an extravagance, only costing 7-10 of one per cent. for buildings. That politics can affect even real estate speculation was shown by the damaging effect upon such operations caused by the fall of the Tweed "ring." It is further suggested, and no doubt truly, that one cause of the declining price of structures of various sorts is not only the immense fall in labor and materials, but the increased simplicity and inexpensiveness of style. In the era of high rents, it seemed to make no difference what was paid for the erection of a building, it always earned the interest on its cost.

But what is especially worthy of attention is the popular style of buildings, for this is of course the feature of the demand. It seems then that of dwellings the largest number is that of tenement houses which, of course, furnish accommodation for the poor—the can't-get-aways—whose labor begins so early in the morning or continues so late at night that they cannot afford the time to live in the country, or else where the whole family, including the nearly grown children, are at work, in which case the railway fares would be too great for economy. But this is not the only class of people who stick to the tenement house. There are those who have not ambition, energy or brains enough to make a move, and who accept what luck seems to have sent them, and make the best of it. Gregariousness has a great charm for many people of the lower order. They want to be where their brothers, sisters and especially where their countrymen are. It is a curious fact that even the farm laborers who come from the "Ould Sod," and this is so of some other countries, prefer to hang about the cities to rural or even semi-rural life. The statement in a servant's advertisement that she "will go into the country," is supposed to indicate an unusual condition of things. All these and other considerations fill the tenement houses. Their second cousins—the French "flats"—very few of which, by the way, are of the French style, most of them being little more than respectable tenement houses, have not thriven so well proportionately, although there has been a considerable increase in the number of these houses of late years. Their principal objection is that they give the scantiest accommodations for the money. One can live far cheaper in [illegible] Paris, dear as it is, gives quite as good accommodations for the money as do the New York "flats." As might be supposed, next to the tenement houses in number and but little less numerous, come the "first class dwellings," the cost of which, with the lot, is estimated at over $16,000. This, counting ten per cent for interest of money, taxes and repairs, gives a rental of $1,600 per annum—a figure which absolutely and finally excludes the middle classes. Houses which afford the same amount of comfort, can be had or rented in Elizabeth for from $500 to $750, and the dweller in them has all the advantages of fresh country air, and the disappearance of most of the nuisances which affect him in city life. Incomes of salaried people and of the middle class, generally range from $1,000 to $2,500 a year, the latter sum being considered an excellent salary now a days, and so if the householder wants a house to himself, he must necessarily leave the city unless he can secure a lower class house in New York. But the average number of second class dwellings erected in New York during the eleven years aforesaid, have been only 174 annually, and this at an average cost of $3,700, (this figure does not include the lot.) Now it is clear this number is but a drop in the bucket, and that the immense and growing number of families that need second class houses would be utterly unprovided for could they not surge out into the country, as they have done and will continue to do.

The explanation of the paucity of these cheap houses is clear enough, the land is too valuable, and it must continue to grow higher as it becomes more scarce. The question therefore is not will New York retain her middle class but where will it go? Westchester county will, of course, receive an added benefit from the completion of the Elevated Roads, but the immense city traffic upon them render them uncomfortable. Even now and in their infancy the passengers are badgered about at the certain loss of their time and patience and the risk of their lives. Along the narrow streets it will be almost impossible to make as many elevated tracks as will accomodate the passengers comfortably. On the other hand, our roads can carry ten times their present loads without difficulty, because they can and will increase their tracks to meet the demand.

The only thing now in our way is the ferry nuisance, but this is only a nuisance for a short part of the year. During the pleasant season, "crossing the river," becomes a positive luxury and inspiring draughts of sea air are thus "sniffed" in. But the ultimate solution of the whole question will be one or more tunnels, which the magnitude of the traffic will entirely justify.

But Elizabeth will get more of the middling classes than her share, of the overflow of New York on account of her fine manufacturing opportunities. There is no city in the State that has better water carriage, and capital cannot fail to be permanently attracted here as soon as our affairs are more settled. Indeed, if it had not been repulsed in years gone by this branch of our business would have taken much larger proportions.

There can hardly be any doubt that in spite of the present gloom, the time will come ere long when the doubting Thomases will recall with confusion of soul the time when they despaired of the fortunes of our beautiful city.

LETTER FROM TRENTON.

TRENTON, Jan. 20, 1879.

After a quiet from last Wednesday noon Trenton begins to put on again an appearance of activity. The members began to return as early as noon to-day, and by 7 o'clock in the evening nearly all were present, ready to resume work. Among the effects of the late hanging in Camden is a bill introduced into the Senate this evening which requires whenever judgment of death is passed upon any person, the court appoint a jury of twelve men, two of whom shall be physicians, who shall witness the execution of such judgment and report the manner in which it was performed to the Court. The Sheriff shall appoint twelve deputies, and as many officers to protect the peace as he may think necessary, but only twelve in all beside those appointed by the Court, with the members of the family of the condemned, shall witness the execution. The bill was referred. As usual at the beginning of the week, a large number of bills were brought in, each member comes with one or more, but oftener "more."

The one of more interest, perhaps, to your section than any others is the bill to equalize assessments and establish a uniform system for the valuation of real estate; it provides for the appointment of commissioners by the Governor and Senate for that purpose. Also, a bill to make taxes a first lien on real estate.

The numerous exposures of unequal taxation in different parts has called attention to the mode of assessing the same, and the lately announced idea that in some townships they were not a first lien, has set the Legislature to work to remedy the evil. No doubt the bill will become a law, so friendly is the feeling towards the bill.

A number of nominations were sent in this evening by the Governor, none of which were acted on save that of W. H. Morrow for law judge of Warren county. He belongs to a family of lawyers; there being six in the family, several of whom practice in Newark.

In the House a bill was introduced to authorize the appointment of county visitors to the insane asylums; another, to reduce fees in the Court of Chancery. A resolution to inquire into the expediency of putting the public printing out by contract, and a resolution relative to the charges of the prevention of persons visiting the State Prison were adopted; also to appoint for each county three commissioners to govern the affairs thereof, instead of chosen freeholders. All the bills were referred. Also bills to exempt parsonages from taxation; to abolish the Bureau of Statistics; to reduce the compensation of the presiding judges of Essex County from $7,000 to $5,000, and lay judges from $2,700 to $2,000; the Prosecutor of the Pleas from $6,000 to $4,000. To reduce the compensation of the Chief Justice to $3,200, and of the associate judges from $5,000 to $3,000.

A. Seligman of New York, diamond dealer at 423 Broadway, started last Saturday evening from New Orleans to Louisville, and yesterday when he arose from sleep, he discovered that a package containing diamonds valued at $3,600, together with $900 in money, was missing.

Miss May Marshall, of Chicago, began at Washington, Monday, a walk of 2,700 quarter miles in 2,700 quarter hours. She said that O'Leary, a Chicago man, had beaten England's best walkers, and that it was her purpose to show that a Chicago woman could beat Mme. Anderson. She will conclude the feat, if successful on the evening of Feb. 17.

There was another explosion of dynamite yesterday in the Gunpowder Water Works, a few miles from Baltimore. It is said that nine cartridges were placed in the boiler house for the purpose of being thawed out. Shortly afterward the cartridges exploded, tearing the boiler shed into fragments, knocking the boiler fifty feet, and fatally injuring two men.

A locomotive, perhaps the largest ever made, is now en route for work on the long, heavy grade on the Rocky Mountains of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. It has ten wheels of paper with steel tires, and the fire box is ten feet long. When in working order it weighs 118,000 pounds. Its weight is so great that the Western roads won't let it go over bridges, and it will have therefore to be dismantled. It ran, however, over all the bridges of the Pennsylvania road.

THE THEORY OF
USE THE NEWSPAPERS.
KEEP AT IT.

Some advertisers think that because an advertisement which appears to-day is not followed to-morrow by an appreciable increase of sales, the advertisement has done no good and the theory of advertising is false. Though it is perhaps impossible to insert a notice that shall not be read—let any Didymus put a three-line card, "Wanted—A Dog," in the obscurest corner, and be convinced of this—it is not to be expected that the moment a person casts his eye upon an advertiser's announcement he sets out for the advertiser's store. He may not at the time need any article in the merchant's line, or he may deal with another house. But if the representation is attractive he will almost inevitably, whenever he needs anything of the kind announced, turn to the paper where he saw the card and give the advertiser a trial. The merchant should regard his outlay for advertising as he would that for painting his building or putting up his signboard—as a necessary charge upon the whole year's business, the effect of which is not to be perceived immediately. Men do not sow wheat one day and harvest it the next.

The man who has begun to advertise must keep on advertising if he desires a continual increase in the volume of his business. He may keep a steady clientele of satisfied customers, but the chances are that some of these will be detached by seeing the advantages of other dealers persistently advocated. He will certainly not attract new patrons. They will go elsewhere, just as they would seek another store than his if, on coming to his door, they found it locked.

Intelligent advertisers are learning to beware of the catchpenny illegitimate mediums of advertising so much affected hitherto by dealers who thought that cheapness always meant economy, and that in the advertising department of any business the principles governing the conduct of the other departments no longer obtained.

"Of all the methods open to the merchant for advertising his business, an experience of nearly a quarter a century enables us to unhesitatingly declare in favor of the newspaper. It is, without exception, the most economical, persistent, painstaking and successful canvasser any business firm can secure for the purpose of bringing their goods to the attention of the consumer."

No comment upon this recital of experience is needed, further than to note that the firm who wrote this have taken the sound scientific view of advertising—that they recognize the necessity for persistence, and understand that the newspaper has done its duty when it has brought the advertiser's goods to the attention of the consumer.

That service will be rendered in the most attractive and effective manner by

for all enterprising advertisers who will avail themselves of its advantages as an advertising medium.

The Council.

ANOTHER UNSUCCESSFUL ATTEMPT TO ORGANIZE.

When Clerk Coleman called Council to order last night the following gentlemen answered to the roll: Messrs. Bauer, Cory, Crane, Dawson, Dunn, Faulks, Forbes, Franklin, Grier, Little, Reeve and Walter.

On motion of Mr. Reeve, Mr. Walter was chosen President pro tem.

James P. Crane and J. Harvey Cory were nominated for permanent president.

Mr. Reeve moved a recess till 8 o'clock.

Mr. Dunn asked the reason.

Mr. Reeve said he asked at the request of his colleague, Mr. Crane.

The recess was taken and at 7.50 o'clock Messrs. Kellam, Liddy and Connelly arrived, Mr. Ryan came in just before the Council came to order, at 8 o'clock—so that there was then a full Council.

When the recess was ended, Mr. Connelly asked who were the candidates for president, and was told.

Messrs. Bauer and Forbes were appointed tellers.

The first ballot gave Cory 7, Crane 8, blank 1. But by a little mistake Mr. Bauer counted nine for Crane, and quite a little hurrah was raised in the lobby, but it subsided in a moment, and Mr. Bauer apologized, saying he didn't mean it.

Second ballot—Cory 8, Crane 8. Third ballot the same. 4th ballot—Cory 7, Crane 8, Reeve 1. Fifth ballot the same. Sixth ballot—Crane 8, Cory 7, blank 1.

Mr. Dawson moved that when Council adjourn, it be to meet Thursday evening.

Mr. Dunn amended that it be Friday evening. Adopted by a vote of 13 to 3.

Mr. Connelly moved to adjourn. Lost—7 to 9.

Mr. Dunn could not refrain from a little speech, in explaining why he voted no on the motion to adjourn. The people of which he was a representative, had decided at the ballot box that there should be a change in the financial policy of this city. They were tired of the old policy, and rightly, and they ask, why don't Council organize. But there is something wrong, and the voice of the people as expressed at the ballot box, that palladium of our liberty, is being stifled. He said that he wanted the blame to rest where it belonged. It was not upon those on his side of the house who did their duty, but on the recalcitrant one who formed a combination for personal motives.

Seventh ballot, Cory 8, Crane 8. Eighth Ninth and Tenth the same. Eleventh, Cory 7, Crane 8, Franklin 1. Twelfth, Cory 8, Crane 8.

Mr. Forbes moved a recess of 15 minutes. Adopted.

At the end of the recess (9 o'clock) balloting was resumed. 13th ballot, Cory 8, Crane 7,—because Mr. Crane was out of the room. He returned after the ballot, and the 14th stood 8 to 8; 15th and 16th the same. In the 17th Reeve got one. The 18th, 19th and 20th were 8 to 8. In the 21st Mr. Reeve got another vote. The 22d returned to the original figures.

Messrs. Reeve and Liddy were appointed tellers to relieve Messrs. Bauer and Forbes, who had got tired.

Ballots No. 23 and 24 were 8 to 8.

Mr. Reeve moved a recess for half an hour. Lost, 8 to 8.

Mr. D[illegible] the Council chamber.

Twenty-fifth ballot, Crane 7, Cory 8.

Mr. Dawson moved to adjourn. Carried, 11 to 4.

New Jersey Editorial Association.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Editorial Association was held yesterday at the American House in Trenton. The attendance was much larger than usual, embracing representatives of the press from all parts of the State. In the absence of the President, Daniel Porter, of the Somerville Unionist, who was detained by what is believed to be his last sickness, E. Gardner of Bayonne, one of the Vice Presidents, presided. The ordinary routine business then followed. Among the new members elected was Mr. Charles H. Schmidt of the Freie Presse of this city. The report of the Treasurer, Major Yard, showed a large falling off of the receipts, owing to the non-payment of dues. Subsequently a committee was appointed to consider the propriety of striking off the names of those in arrears for dues. The Secretary, John F. Babcock, presented a list of all the papers in the State. From this it appears that there are 22 dailies, 1 tri-weekly, 2 semi-weeklies, 146 weeklies, several monthlies, making in all 178 papers in the State. Of these 58 are Republican, 49 Democratic, 4 Greenback, 63 Independent. Twenty-five papers have died during the year. John Simerson of the Warren Journal, read a memorial paper on the late Eli Cowan of the Hackettstown Gazette; and William F. LeRoy read one on the late Franklin Ferguson of the Burlington Gazette. Both were ordered entered on the minutes. Mr. A. A. Vance, from the Committee on nominations, reported the following who were elected the officers for the ensuing year: Col. Jones of Woodbridge, President, with seven Vice-Presidents, one from each Congressional district; John F. Babcock, Secretary; James S. Yard, Treasurer, and nearly the same Executive Committee as last year. The annual editorial excursion is to be to Cape May in June, to meet a similar association of New York and Pennsylvania editors.

During the session a feeling and timely resolution of sympathy, with the former President Daniel Porter, in his sickness, was passed, and Messrs. Vance, Foote and Chew were appointed a committee to visit him and present the same.

After adjournment, the editors dined together, after which speeches were made by the new President, Messrs. Stahl, Major Yard, Col. Hamilton and Judge Naar.

"Paris Under the Empire."

Rev. J. M. King, D. D., of New York City, will deliver his lecture on the above topic in the Park course this evening, at Library Hall. Dr. King comes a stranger to our city and brings a fine reputation as a brilliant thinker, a charming rhetorician and an engaging speaker.

His subject represents one of the most interesting epochs of modern history and relates to a city unique in many of its characteristics, but of which it can no longer be said "Paris is France." Republican government supplants the empire. The patrons of this lecture will doubtless receive a happy combination of pleasure and profit, in listening to a King discoursing of the royal city of a departed empire.

Lecture tickets, twenty-five cents; single admission tickets for the three remaining lectures of the course, [illegible] twenty-five cents each, or three tickets for fifty cents.

Receipts of the Tableaux.

The net receipts of the Trinity Church Tableaux, given last week at Library Hall, reached nearly $300, a very gratifying result of the careful work and study expended in their preparation and exhibition.

The Arcade Destroyed

BURNING OF THE OPERA HOUSE AND THE OFFICES IN THE IMMENSE BUILDING—CREDIT TO THE FIREMEN—AN IMMENSE LOSS.

The magnificent building known as the Arcade was this forenoon laid in ruins by fire.

The first notice of the fire was from an immense volume of smoke rolling out of the central part of the roof. This increased in size and density till at 10.30 o'clock from every crack and crevice in the upper part of the Arcade, from the Grand street side to Broad street, streams of thick smoke issued in every direction.

The alarm was rung from box 25, corner of East Jersey and Broad street, but it so happened that at the very moment of the alarm, Superintendent Bingham was in the battery room, cleaning the cups, a number of which he had on the floor, and the result was that the bells did not respond properly. But the firemen were not long in learning where the fire was, and hastened to the spot as rapidly as possible, the horses which had been secured for just such an emergency, doing timely and excellent service.

A SCENE OF WILD CONFUSION

presented itself in and around the Arcade after the alarm had been given and before the engines got to work, the post office clerks, letter carriers and all who could assist in any way bundled the letters, papers, stamps, money, mail bags and furniture out of the doors and windows, and hurried with them into the street or into Reeve & Williams' office, just opposite the burning building. The Western Union Telegraph Office was as quickly as possible cleared of all its instruments, switch boards, papers and everything that could be carried, and these were stowed away in the Railroad telegraph office, or wherever they could be placed.

The Arcade grocery man, Mr. Hayes, and his clerks, at once began to carry out all the goods they could handle, leaving them on the sidewalk or at any place it was handy to drop them, and so indeed with all the occupants of the doomed building.

In the meantime the smoke kept rolling from the top of the building, but none could tell just where the fire was. In the hall way leading from Broad street there was no smoke at all, and on the lower floor inside there was plenty of fresh air, but on the second floor and from that up to the very top, the smoke was impenetrable. The passage way in the centre of the Arcade, open from the floor to the dome, acted as and the entrances on Broad and Grand streets were as drafts, and when at length the glass and sashes gave way, the building became at once a burning furnace.

The firemen got to work at last, after numberless unexpected difficulties. After Protection No. 1 had started, a steam pipe froze up, and had to be thawed out by a shovel full of hot coal. But when this engine did get a stream on the fire, it was most telling. Steamers 2, 3 and 4 worked with the greatest vigor. No. 6 followed them, and to every one of the fire companies the greatest credit must be given for their hazardous and extraordinary work. They never worked better at any fire in this city.

When the three engines first named had begun to throw streams of water, the flames had furiously burst from the heavy cornices on the Broad street side, and it was uncomfortably hot to be any where near them. Here, No. 1 did the best work, throwing a stream that went straight to the spot and made its way along the cornices and into the building with telling effect. The other streams assisted, and in half an hour it was evident that if the firemen they could at least check the flames and prevent the adjacent buildings from being consumed.

After driving the fire which had by this time caught in the scenery, wings and woodwork of the lower part of the Opera House, as well as the windows and shutters back of the stage—the firemen boldly raised ladders against the building and began to lift the hose and throw water directly into the windows. Two lines were run up a long ladder to the top of Mr. Faulks' building, joining the Arcade, and from thence streams were poured down into the fire with excellent effect, though the work was dangerous. This was shown by the fact that once the hose slipped with a full head of water running through it, and it was several minutes before the firemen could get it, as the hose, free from restraint, writhes like a living serpent.

The cold during all this time was very severe. Icicles formed on the ladders and on parts of the building wherever the water dripped down, and the firemen were in many instances drenched to the skin with the freezing cold water.

But they worked like heroes, and kept working, till at 2 o'clock the back taps were sounded and the firemen gave over their severe labors.

HOT COFFEE.

Very much to the credit of some thoughtful people, the firemen were served with hot coffee, while they were at work, and they were thus warmed and cheered.

AFTER THE FIRE.

When at length the fire was put out, and the fire companies had taken up their hose, the Arcade was visited by scores of the more curious. It was then found that the damage was chiefly confined to the Opera House, and that the other parts were not injured, except by smoke and water. The stairways leading to the very top of the building were not even scorched, and the offices were intact, except by the water.

The fire seems to have broken out over the Opera House, or somewhere in the topmost rooms of the building, which were occupied by a family of colored people, and while some attribute the fire to carelessness on the part of these people, others (and among them Mr. Clark himself) believe it to have been caused by a defective flue. At all events those who first made their way through the choking smoke found the fire in the forward part of the building near the roof.

On the second floor, the offices, the Conservatory of Music, etc., are but little damaged, and indeed the box office and the doors of the Opera House itself are not burned, but on opening the doors the stage, scenes, roof, part of the gallery, and in fact nearly all the building from the doors forward, are in blackened ruins.

THE LOSSES.

On the third floor is the Masonic Hall, occupied by Orient Lodge, Washington Chapter and other Masonic Societies. There are here a $1,000 organ, a carpet which cost $600 and other very valuable articles. The loss in this hall will probably reach $1,000. This is fully covered by insurance in the Peoples' of New York and the Germania of Elizabeth.

MR. CLARK'S LOSS.

There seems to be very many and very different estimates as to the loss which Mr. Clark sustains by this disaster. He himself does not fix any particular sum. The walls of the building are standing and possibly not much injured. The lowest estimate is $15,000, but considering the damage by water, and all together it will probably reach over twice that sum. There were a few who alleged that a greater part of the building would have to be reconstructed, and that the cost would not be much less than $100,000.

Owing to the fact that the books and papers of his private office were removed in great haste, the exact amount of his insurance is not reported, but it is estimated at about $55,000 to $60,000. At all events it is quite probable that the loss is fully covered by the insurance, and that the Opera House will be rebuilt.

MR. FAULKS' LOSS.

By some gross mistake a report was started at the commencement of the fire, that it had caught from a defective flue in Mr. Faulks' house, next to the Arcade. The firemen placed a ladder against the house, took a hose up it, and threw a stream of water in the top window of his house. The result was a complete drenching of the house, and damaging it to the amount of about $2,500. It is reported to be insured.

THE CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.

The loss here is not so great as was at first feared. Mme. Pupin and the friends who assisted her, removed most of all the valuables there, excepting two grand pianos, and these are not burned.

OTHER LOSSES.

There is comparatively little loss to any one excepting the owner of the building. The smothering of the fire by the dense smoke and the long time that elapsed before it broke out in flames, allowed the tenants time to secure most of their valuables.

The post office is all upside down, and, as is noticed elsewhere, the office is temporarily removed to the store recently occupied by L. W. Sparks.

The Western Union Telegraph office has removed temporarily to the office in the P. R. R. depot, but it is expected that the wires—most of which are intact—will be put in order in a few hours.

The Elizabeth Glee Club, a musical organization among the young men of this city, occupied a room on the third floor, and had just nicely furnished it. Two of the members happened to be in the building when the fire broke out, and they succeeded in saving everything excepting the stove.

THE BANK.

The First National Bank and the entire building in which it is located, though adjoining of the Arcade building, is damaged but little, and that by water. At the alarm of fire the money and valuable papers were collected and taken to the National State Bank. This was not so much a matter of necessity as of precaution, for the bank vaults are about the safest and best and most fire proof place in the city. The doors were then closed and the vaults securely locked.

The Dime Savings Bank does not suffer, but the office of Magie & Cross and of the other gentlemen, occupying rooms over the bank, were somewhat deluged with water. The firemen took a line of hose up the stairways, through the scuttle, and from the roof of the bank building threw a stream on the fire and it was from this that most of the water came.

The other damages are of no special mention so far as heard. Company C had a large number of cartridges stowed in their room, but they were removed.

Of course everything is upside down in all the offices in the building, and it may be many days before they are set to right.

The Arcade cash grocery store, and Mr. S. M. Clark, the merchant tailor, have suffered some from the water, but the extent is not yet reported.

He Played "Grandfather's Clock," and Got Ten Days in Jail.

When Frank Moore, a jolly but rather unfortunate son of the "Ould Sod," was arraigned at police headquarters this morning, he wore a troubled look, albeit there was a half-ashamed smile lurking around the corners of his mouth and in under his eyelids. It seems he had got on the cars at Metuchin, and not having got his ticket had to pay extra and take a ten-cent return slip. This slip looked to be about seven or ten years old, though it was actually given yesterday. When he got to this city he left the train, got more whiskey than he could carry, and in some way or other got dozing in one of the blacksmith shops on Morris avenue. The shop-men, probably some of the mischievous apprentices, blacked him up pretty well, and when he woke up in a half stupor they made him believe he had fallen and bruised himself all out of shape, and needed a whole drug store to fix him up properly. Full of this idea and the still undaunted whiskey, Frank started out to be cured, met officer McCullough and insisted that he should go to the drug store with him, to be near in case anything terrible should happen.

The long and short of it was that Frank got ousted from two drug stores, and at length found himself behind the iron bars. He had some papers and a tin flute with him, and with his ragged clothes and unkempt hair he looked like Con, the Shaughraun, and had just about such a smile.

"What's this?" asked the Chief, as he took up the flute.

"Oh, I play on that. I was just down with some Irishmen, played for them to dance. I play on it, sir."

"Lets hear you"—

Frank took the flute, gave two or three flourishes by way of prelude, and then struck up "Grandfather's Clock"

The Judge looked up in dismay, and the Chief said—"Stop, stop, that's enough"—before the clock had stood half a minute "on the floor."

"You are fined one dollar and costs, or stand committed for ten days," said the Judge.

A Sleighride and a Fight.

Yesterday afternoon at 4.45 o'clock as Frank Kenny of the city of Newark was driving a sorrel horse and a green sleigh across the Pennsylvania Railroad track at the Morris avenue crossing, Edward McTigh snatched the lines from Kenny and struck him in the face with his fist. Kenny's nose and face were soon covered with blood, and a crowd gathered at once. By order of Chief [illegible] officer [illegible] assisted by Captain Darling arrested McTigh, and also took Kenny to headquarters as a witness. The latter was subsequently discharged, but McTigh was committed to jail to answer.

Death of Alexander M. W. Ball.

Mr. Alexander M. W. Ball died of pneumonia yesterday afternoon, after a short illness, in the 61st year of his age. He was taken ill last Tuesday evening, at which time his family were not greatly alarmed; and it was not until Friday that he was thought to be in danger.

Mr. Ball came here from Newark about fifteen years ago and purchased and removed into the fine house in West Jersey street, now owned by Mr. R. B. Thompson, opposite Linden avenue. He afterwards erected several handsome houses in different parts of the city, which he sold to New York parties. He was an enterprising man and took pleasure in every public improvement. He was formerly a partner of the large manufacturing firm of Benedict & Ball, harness manufacturers of Newark, and afterwards was largely engaged in the California trade, but of late years he has held a prominent position in the Custom House in New York. He had more sunshine in his nature than almost any man one meets now-a-days. He was a gentleman of fine culture and extensive reading, and his home was the abode of a generous hospitality. He was very fond of literary pursuits, and was never so happy and so easy as when in his library surrounded by his books. He was formerly a member of the New Jersey Assembly for two years and has held several other prominent official positions. His wife who survives him is a sister of Mayor Townley. He leaves besides a son and a daughter, the latter, Mrs. Wolff, a widow, is residing in Germany. Mr. Ball has written a good deal of poetry, some of which has been published in our columns. He has also a large quantity in manuscript which has been read to some of his most intimate friends.

His end was peaceful; he recognized his friends to the last, and one who was with him says, "that his death was as his life had been, peaceful and beautiful.

Death of Ira Pruden.

The death of Mr. Ira Pruden, of Plainfield, took place at his late residence on Sunday night, at the advanced age of 84. Mr. Pruden has been closely identified with the history of Plainfield from its small beginning. He was one of its successful merchants for a long series of years, and only retired from business a few years ago, when the infirmities of age began to creep over him. He was closely identified with the prosperity of the place, and took part in every enterprise which tended to its growth. Not only as a public spirited citizen, but he was known as a generous benefactor. Many are the poor whom he has aided by his benefactions, thousands of dollars having been loaned out in small sums to those from whom he could expect no return. Mr. Pruden was a member and a liberal supporter of the Congregational Church to which he belonged. His sickness was short; it found him ready and prepared to obey death's summons. He made all arrangements for his funeral, which takes place on Thursday on the arrival of the one o'clock train from New York. He leaves two daughters—the wife of Cashier Thompson of this city, and the wife of the Rev. R. N. Crane of Norfolk, Va.

Sunday School Association.

Last evening there was a very good audience assembled at the Lecture Room of the Westminster Church to hear the Rev. A. F. Schauffler of Olivet Chapel, New York city. Mr. Schauffler came on invitation of the Elizabeth Sunday School Association to talk to the Sunday school teachers, and those interested in the work. Not one who heard the talk but was delighted and was stirred up thoroughly with the importance of the work. Mr. Schauffler is intensely interested in his labors, which was shown in the warmth he exhibited in presenting the cause. His subject was divided into three parts: The Work, The Workers, and the Workshop. At the close of his address he answered questions asked by the audience. Those who stayed away from the meeting lost a great treat. There is no doubt that every worker will go forward with higher ideas and a nobler purpose and that the effect of such a talk will have a stimulating influence upon the the schools represented. All his ideas can be carried out, as he has made a practical test of them in his own school.

Dr. Potter's Lecture.

Last night Rev. D. C. Potter of New York delivered, in the presence of a large audience, the first lecture of the First Baptist Church course, at that church. It was a most excellent lecture, full of wit and as full of truths pleasantly put. His subject was "People, The Latest Edition." We regret that we cannot give at this time the more extended notice which the lecture deserves.

Next Monday evening Rev. Dr. J. D. Herr will lecture on "Expression and Repression."

The Post Office.

On account of the fire this morning, the Post Office has been removed temporarily into the store No. 202 Broad street, formerly occupied by Lewis W. Sparks' grocery. Everything is in such a confused condition, that people must not growl if they do not receive their mails to-night and to-morrow as regularly as is their wont.

The Soiree Musicale.

The repetition of the Christmas Soiree Musicale was given for the benefit of the Orphan Asylum last evening in the Conservatory of Music in the Arcade. The attendance was very large and everything passed off pleasantly, the performances of the pieces being better, if possible, than at the regular soiree.

WM. R. C. COLEMAN,
City Clerk.

Theological students reason that if there be counterfeit money, there must be genuine; so, if there be infidels, there must also be christians. If this be true of money and religion, will not the same rule apply to "put up" medicines? Do not the cheap and worthless nostrums prove that there are genuine and meritorious "put up" medicines? The great popularity of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has resulted in the manufacture of many shoddy alterative and tonic remedies, but one after another these have disappeared, the proprietors having found that, no matter how loud they advertise, success depends upon merit. In South America, as well as in this country, the Discovery is the standard remedy for all scrofulous and eruptive diseases. It acts promptly on the stomach, liver and blood, toning up, regulating, and purifying the system. It speedily allays all bronchial irritation, and cures the most stubborn cough or cold in half the time required by any other remedy.

Baby shows are the fashion now, but as long as mothers continue to nurse their little ones with laudanum or other opiates, they cannot expect their Babies to look bright. If your Baby needs medicine get a good and harmless one such as Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup.

Take Care of Your Health and that of your children, and use no other cure for Colds, Coughs, etc., except the standard remedy, MADAM PORTER'S COUGH BALSAM. Only 25 cents.

International Review
FOR 1879.

This Review, heretofore issued as a "Bi-monthly," will be continued upon a new plan; and every effort will be made and no expense spared to keep it the best Review and of the highest class. With this object, and in order that it may be more fully abreast of current events than is possible with a bi-monthly publication, the "INTERNATIONAL" will be issued as a Monthly on and after January 1879.

With the March Number the editorship will be assumed by Mr. John T. Morse, Jr., author of the "Life of Alexander Hamilton," "Famous Trials," etc., etc., and by Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, formerly editor of the North American Review, and author of the "Life of George Cabot." Mr. Henry D. Barnes, the present editor, will retain his connection with the Review more especially as business editor and manager.

It is intended to make the "INTERNATIONAL" the leading Review of the United States, and the equal of the best English or continental periodicals.

Many new writers will furnish articles to the "INTERNATIONAL" in addition to the already long list of well-known contributors.

The publishers and editors propose to have all the principal topics of immediate interest treated in the Review by those persons who are especially fitted to deal with the various subjects. The "INTERNATIONAL" will not depend merely upon names, but upon the choice of subjects, and upon the intrinsic merit of the articles, in order to command public attention and approval. The proprietors hope to make the Review indispensable to every one who wishes to keep up with the best thought in America and Europe upon the most important subjects.

A unique and attractive feature of the Review is the Department of Contemporary Literature, which embraces a brief, impartial, and comprehensive summary of the literary movement in all the great countries in Christendom. The movement in England, France, and Germany has been carefully outlined in an instructive and entertaining manner, by correspondents residing at the European centres of literary activity. In future like special attention will be given to the leading features of the literary movement in America.

During 1879, articles may be expected from writers of the highest rank on both sides of the Atlantic. While foreign writers may be admitted freely, American writers will in future, as heretofore, have the preference.

All former pledges of the Review will continue to be observed.

The subscription price will remain at $5, notwithstanding the increase in the annual number of pages. Single numbers will contain 112 pages each, and will be sold at 50 cents. There will be no change in the price of back volumes or back numbers.

NEW YORK.

We warrant the following advantages in the use of our Paints

They will PROVE MORE DURABLE, and will present a good appearance after pure white lead, mixed in the ordinary way, has BECOME WASHED FROM THE WOOD.

Two coats of our Paint are sufficient where three coats of other Paints would be required.

The body or covering capacity is superior POUND FOR POUND or BY MEASURE. Our Paints will cover more surface than pure white lead.

The consumer takes NO RISK in using them, as we guarantee satisfaction and will repaint any building with English B. B. white lead or any other, IF OUR PAINTS do not prove perfectly satisfactory.
