Public Hearing on Amendments To Zoning Ordinance Set for Dec. 8

Amendments to the zoning ordinance, recommended by the Planning Board, were introduced Thursday at the Township Committee meeting in Township Hall. A public hearing is scheduled for Dec. 8.

The amendments would:

1. Eliminate the neighborhood business zone on Hamilton Street, from Brookline to Franklin Avenues, and on Somerset Street from Brookline Avenue to Berry Street.
2. Increase the depth of the business district on Hamilton Street from 100 feet to 350 feet.
3. Establish a business district on Somerset Street from the New Brunswick city line to Franklin Boulevard and increase its depth from a maximum of 140 feet to 300 feet.
4. Increase the depth of the light industrial zone on Somerset Street from 140 to 300 feet, while changing the Voorhees-to-Franklin Avenue industrial zone so that it reaches from Voorhees to Franklin Boulevard.
5. Change, from a Class A residential to a light industrial zone, property located between the Kingston Presbyterian Cemetery and the Delaware & Raritan Canal, 100 feet back from Lincoln Highway in Kingston.
6. Allow the Building Center in Middlebush, owned by Samuel Pillsbury, to continue in its present location despite the new ordinance which changes that land from a heavy industrial to a neighborhood business zone.

'War' Declared To Cut Traffic Toll on Highways

Local directors, county coordinators and the State Bureau of Traffic Safety will close ranks Monday in an all-out war on traffic accidents.

County Prosecutor Leon Gerofsky, Somerset's director for the safe driving campaign, Saturday ordered strict enforcement of motor vehicle laws to keep the county's death toll below last year's record of 28. Twenty-four people have been killed on Somerset County roads thus far in 1955, he said.

A two-week statewide campaign starts Monday, preceding a nationwide traffic safety drive that begins Dec. 1 and continues through New Year's Day.

The national drive will be highlighted by National Safe Driving Day, Dec. 1, when a try will be made for a 24-hour period free of any traffic deaths.

Leo Welch, Acting Director of the State Bureau of Traffic Safety, and Mr. Gerofsky explained the campaign in a "council of war" in the prosecutor's office.

Local officials assigned to the S-D drive include Police Chief John J. Jasinski in Manville, Edward Lindstrom in Hillsborough, Mayor Arthur Kirk in Montgomery and Ladislav Vesely of North Branch in Branchburg.

COUNTY GETS STATE FUND FOR ROAD, BRIDGE WORK

An allotment of $292,420 from State Motor Vehicle receipts to Somerset County, for road and bridge programs in 1956, was authorized today by the State Highway Department in Trenton. Total allotments to all counties amounted to $9,155,040.

3 Runaway Boys Return to Homes

Robert and Thomas Wychoff and H. John Van Cleef, high school students, returned home Tuesday after a non-stop, cross-country automobile trip which resulted in police teletype alarms being sent out to points as far as California and Florida. Robert Wychoff is 15 years old. His brother and the Van Cleef boy are 17.

The trio left on Nov. 8 in "Jack" Van Cleef's 1955 green and white Chevrolet. Mrs. J. H. Van Cleef of Blackwell's Mills Road, his mother, told The News that Jack "had been talking of going to California for some time to think things out," and he told her he was leaving. The boys reached San Diego after three days of continuous driving. Mrs. Van Cleef said. They stayed overnight in that city and started back the next morning, returning here Tuesday.

The alarm was sent out by request of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wychoff of Ann Street, Millstone, who at first did not know their sons went with young Van Cleef, grandson of County Freeholder C. I. Van Cleef.

Checking with New Brunswick and Somerset high schools, which Thomas and Robert attend, respectively, they found the boys had not been to classes and put "two and two together," according to Mrs. Van Cleef.

She also said Jack had "about $120 with him which he had saved" from working on the Van Cleef farm.

The Wychoff boys are back in school. Van Cleef, who was a senior at New Brunswick High School, is working on the farm pending his parent's decision on his future.

2 Men Acquitted Of Morals Charge

Two New Brunswick men were acquitted yesterday of carnal abuse of a 15-year-old Township girl. A jury returned the verdict in County Court after deliberating about one hour. The men, Francesco Primiano and LeRoy Kurtz, had been accused of committing the immoral act in a quarry off Leupp Lane on July 14.

The trial began Monday before County Judge Joseph Halpern and ended at 11:30 a.m. yesterday. Jack Pincus of New Brunswick was counsel for the defendants, Prosecutor Leon Gerofsky representing the county.

Peacos Recount Set for Monday

A recount of the Township Committeeman election between Democrat Michael Peacos and Republican Casimiro Calvo will be held in the basement of the County Administration Building, Monday at 10 a.m.

Held in response to petitions filed Tuesday by Mr. Peacos through his attorney, Arthur S. Meredith of Somerville, the recapitulation of last week's General Election figures will involve reading the totals off the voting machines.

Mr. Meredith told The News Tuesday evening that "We have a two-vote difference. Perhaps there were unintentional errors in transmitting the totals from the machines to paper. We think the people of the Township would like to know definitely if there was an accurate count."

The Absentee Votes

Mr. Peacos asked for a recount after waking up Nov. 9 to find he had not won the Committee seat as supposed the night before.

Soon after the polls closed and the votes were counted, it appeared Mr. Peacos had won over Mr. Calvo by one vote, 1920 to 1919. This included five absentee votes he had been credited with on Election Night. The morning following election, however, the official word from the Adminis-

60 to Lose Jobs At Army Depot

BELLE MEAD—The Army's General Depot here will reduce its civilian work force by approximately 60 employees in the next six to eight weeks, Col. Ralph M. Bauknight, commanding officer, has announced.

The cut will be in the maintenance and fabrication, care and presentation, and depot storage staffs. John Van Marter, of the depot's public information office, told The News that some personnel in these departments are now being shifted to new assignments in an effort to insure that employees with seniority will not be among those discharged, at least immediately.

The reduction follows a cut in the Quartermaster General's appropriations, Col. Bauknight stated, together with a lessened depot workload caused by decreased strength of the Armed Forces since the Korean emergency. Any further personnel reduction will be gradual, although "basic skills and facilities vital to the military needs" will continue to be retained, he added.

The depot now employs more than 1100 persons.

County Medical Society to Give Anti-Polio Shots Without Charge

Making what is believed to be an unprecedented move in medical circles, the Somerset County Medical Society voted late last week to administer Salk anti-polio shots without charge to all persons up to 15 years of age and pregnant women. Other medical societies in the state have refused to set up such a public program.

A society committee yesterday announced it will ask all municipal health officers and school physicians to appear for a conference Sunday at 10 a.m. in the County Administration Building, where details for setting up the "shot clinics" will be offered.

The society had hoped to give the inoculations in one day, but developments indicate this may not be possible, and two or more days may have to be scheduled. With the vaccine being supplied by the State Department of Health through a Federal-State subsidy, The News was advised yesterday that probably the State Department of Health could not supply sufficient vaccine to provide for an all-county, one-day clinic. Also, sufficient syringes and other required medical materials are not available for such a big task.

After a meeting Thursday night, the Medical Society issued the following 8-point program to cover the clinics:

cover the clinics:

"1. The Somerset County Medical Society recommends the following program for the immunization of all eligible persons for 1956:

"1. Vaccination of all children up to the age of 15 years and of all pregnant women with regard to ability to pay.

"2. Cooperation with municipal boards of health to administer the vaccine without fee for professional service at the 'Salk Centers.'

"3. Organization of 'Salk Centers' for vaccination by the local health boards in designated areas and at specific hours.

"4. The vaccine is also available through your family physician.

"5. The vaccine should be administered only under direct supervision by a physician. Contraindications may be present. If a reaction such as fever, sore arm or allergy develops, only a physician is prepared to take proper action.

"6. No child need be denied the opportunity to receive vaccine because the parent or guardian cannot afford to pay for it."

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

The Board of Education will meet Monday at 8 p.m. in Pine Grove Manor School.

Frelinghuysen Requested to Start Action for Raritan Flood Control

Rep. Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen was asked this week to make the first move in a two-point program to begin flood control for the Raritan Valley.

A plan for immediate relief and steps for a flood survey and long range flood control program were worked out last Thursday at a meeting of County Engineer Frank E. Hamley Sr., State Senator Malcolm S. Forbes, Assemblyman William B. Ozzard and Freeholder C. I. Van Cleef with the Corps of Army Engineers in New York City.

Congressman Frelinghuysen can promote immediate help by applying for stream clearance assistance with the Chief of Army Engineers, it was learned at the meeting.

This would give relief particularly in the North Branch, Bradley and Green Brook areas, where flooding occurs or threatens after every heavy rainstorm.

Federal Legislation

Authorization by the Engineers for assistance would enable them to spend up to $100,000 for "snagging and clearing" the river.

Rep. Frelinghuysen can begin long-range flood control by initiated legislation at the next session of Congress to authorize a new Federal study of Raritan flood control, it was learned at the conference. The last such survey was completed in 1939.

Senator Forbes left Monday for Bermuda and will confer with Rep. Frelinghuysen there this week, where both are vacationing.

Mr. Ozzard will contact U. S. Senator Clifford P. Case this week, he told The News to keep him informed of the plan and enlist his aid. Senator Case has said he favors a restudy by the Army Engineers and has discussed the possibilities for a new survey with Army officials.

According to Mr. Ozzard, a flood control study might result in a Federal program, if the cost of flood control is found to be less than the amount of damage resulting from recent floods. If the cost is greater than flood damage, the Federal government might turn its findings over to the State and county governments to devise their own remedy.

The cost of the study would be covered entirely by a Congressional appropriation, Mr. Ozzard said.

With the PTAs

"Families Are Fun" was the program theme for Tuesday evening's meeting of the Phillips School PTA. Members saw a film, "Place Called Home," and participated in a discussion led by program chairman Roy Brookes.

Dr. Samuel Sklar, school health officer; Mrs. Norman Yingling, nurse, and Dr. Bernard Rosenfeld, dental officer, were present at the Middlebush PTA meeting Wednesday evening to answer parent's questions on child health.

Foreign articles from members' native countries were on display at the Kingston PTA meeting in the school Tuesday.

N. J. Rieur, a teacher at the school, showed slides of his recent trip to Europe.

Parents visited the classrooms during an open house period before the meeting.

Hamilton School PTA members have made plans for their children's Christmas party to be held in the school a few days before Christmas.

While the date is not definite,

Mrs. John VanDerVeer announced members will have a movie and refreshments for the children.

A bazaar, at which members were able to buy Christmas gifts, was held before the regular Pine Grove Manor PTA meeting Tuesday. Parents also visited classrooms to confer with teachers. Mrs. E. S. Griggs was in charge of the bazaar.

The next executive board meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. E. H. Pillar, 133 Rodney Avenue, on Dec. 7 at 8 p.m.

Parents whose children attend the East Millstone School are having a chance this week to confer with teachers in the school. Classroom visitations, sponsored by the PTA, are being held by appointment from 2:45 to 4 p.m. until tomorrow.

the somerset SCENE

Already they're chinning about the political future of State Sen. Malcolm S. Forbes and Charles W. Engelhard, the man who almost earned a place at Somerset's desk in the State House.

Only a miracle recount can change the results of last week's election, in view of Somerset's past record in vote counting. In the Howell-Case senatorial race last year, nary a vote changed hands in the re-tally.

But in Trenton, 'tis said they're sneaking respectful glances in Malcolm's direction a little more than they did before Nov. 5.

Malcolm probably will have more than one towel boy in his corner next year when the gong rings for the first round of the G.O.P. battle royal for the gubernatorial nomination.

As for Charley, it's been bruited about that he and wife Jane have their misty eyes on a job like the one neighbor Doug Dillon holds down in gay Paree as U.S. Ambassador.

The Democrats have found a new demigod in Somerset, but the chances of him entering another scrap at the polls are small.

Now that Charley has let the secret out, and has more or less disavowed his former compassion for Republican candidates, a change in the nation's political condition in 1936 could well catapult him back into politics. But this time, 'twould be by the more genteel route of appointment.

Wife Jane, the daughter of a diplomat, knows the ins and outs of ambassadorial life in Paris, and the gossip in the drawing rooms in Somerset Hills is that she'd give an eye tooth to replace the Dillons and to once again glide along the Champs Elysee.

Back to Somerset. As usual, it was the bedrock of Republicanism in Somerset Hills which spelled defeat for Engelhard and almost every other Democrat who ever has dared to tread the sylvan campaign paths up that way.

This time it was Charley's neighbors who stomped to the polls to smear him. If he had done as well in his own two home towns, Far Hills and Bernardsville, as Malcolm did in his own little Bedminster, the 370-vote margin would have been solidly in Democratic fists.

But, Cholly's fellow sillionaires in Far Hills and Bernardsville's mountain district knocked him down by a neat 3-to-1. It was not strange that he dropped a tear or two on Election Night, when he compared his hometown figures with his fabulous performance in the far-off towns of Somerville and North Plainfield.

One of Charley's fatted heart-breaks was in Washington Valley, the site of the Chimney Rock reservoir he hated so much.

In Warren Township's 4th District, the eastern tip of the proposed pond and one of the centers of oldtime anti-Forbes sentiment, they swamped the reservoir. But the ingrates also swamped Charley by almost 2-to-1!

And in Bridgewater's 10th where the Spring Run crowd voted, they squeezed Charley in by only 390 to 238. The Democrat was really expecting better treatment from the valley folk he stumped for.

But Charley made a lot of new friends in the south county. And when he becomes one of President Stevenson's trusted aides, they can say, "We voted for him once."

For Malcolm, it'll be more sweat and blood, and probably more than a few more tears. It's because he likes this voting system and the happy misery that goes with it. It's the hard way, but the only way he'll ever become governor.

As for the field of Republican gubernatorial material, this will be narrowed before the deals are wheeled in Trenton, but the names they're trotting out these days are a bit more than formidable.

got such illustrious names as C. Doug Dillon, whose P.O. box is in Bedminster. And there's Bernard Shanley of Bernardsville, who last week picked up his brief case in the White House and returned to Jersey after a career as one of Ike's top advisors.

Also being weighed in is Rep. Peter B. Frelinghuysen of Morristown, Somerset's representative in Washington. Feetah's letting the tongues flap around him, but he'll definitely be in a position to move up into contention for governor. That's if a seat in the U.S. Senate doesn't look better to him.

But don't touch your dial. There are a few other would-be boy governors who have made life easy for New Jersey Republicanism.

Over in Hunterdon, we have Sen. Wes Lance, and up in Warren there's Sen. Wayne Dumont.

And then there's G.O.P. chief Sam Bodine. He's supposed to referee the coming brawl, but Sam will have his sneakers ready at ringside, and some of the fat money says he'll be in the middle of the ring when the main bouters start spitting teeth.

There are two others who have done nice things at the polls for the Grand Old Party. They are Gloucester County's Sen. Harold Harrold and Bergen's Sen. Walter H. Jones, a pair of boys who must be watched in the upcoming sweepstakes.

Getting back to Somerset and Engelhard again, the dispatches from Trenton claim that Archie Alexander, another of Somerset's bright political stars, will leave Gov. Meyner's cabinet later this year to join the campaign camp of Adial Stevenson.

Which certainly shapes. Should Archie move his baggage into the Stevenson tent, Gov. Meyner certainly would have a strong supporter in high Democratic ranks who could push him for the No. 2 slot on the national ticket. And should a Stevenson-Meyner ticket roll into the White House, there might be a big appointment for Engelhard, whom Alexander lured from the Republicans to run on the Democratic ticket. And, of course, there could be a Cabinet seat for Archie, too, should the G.O.P. be dispossessed from 1800 Pennsylvania Avenue. Doesn't sound unreasonable, does it?

Wm. Wright Heads Accountant Group

Also elected were James E. Lamb of DuPont, vice-president, and Morgan O. Smith of Johnson & Johnson, director.

Somerset's Doctors Come Through

Providing evidence that there is a difference between the fear of socialized medicine and community service, the Somerset County Medical Society has defied the straight-laced approach of too many medical men and will join with municipal boards of health to give free inoculations of the Salk anti-polio vaccine.

Medical services will be provided without cost by the doctors, the vaccine to come from a Federal-State subsidy. All children up to 15 years of age and pregnant women will be eligible for the free shots without regard to their ability to pay.

This is as it should be, for many reasons. First, it was the public's contributions, through the March of Dimes, which provided Dr. Jonas Salk with the opportunity to compound the vaccine for inoculation. Secondly, the nation's medical men need something to tie them more closely to the communities in which they live and practice. These professional men have no more right to set themselves apart from the community than any businessman or industry.

After much discussion, the Somerset Medical Society finally decided to participate in free anti-polio clinics to be set up around the county, and the organization is to be praised for assuming this local responsibility.

To underscore how refreshing is this approach, one only has to look to nearby Union County, where late last week the Medical Society there turned down the free-shot clinic idea. Without mentioning the socialized medicine bugaboo, the Union group decided that injections should be given in physicians' offices. Magnanimously, Union's medical men promised to reduce or waive the doctor's fee for needy individuals.

Somerset's Medical Society members are to be commended for their action. They have helped remove a lot of starch from stuffed shirts.

The Water Crisis Still Exists

At a press conference in Trenton several days ago, Gov. Meyner declared he favored immediate purchase of Round Valley in Hunterdon County as a reservoir site.

Which is very consistent and very nice of the Governor, especially since he made the statement after the $100,000,000 water supply referendum was defeated and Senator Malcolm Forbes was reelected to the State Legislature.

It was very consistent of the Chief Executive, really, since he always has desired Round Valley for a site, though he signed the "Chimney Rock" referendum bill and then refused to support the measure. It was very cordial of him to start talking about Round Valley again since he now knows he had better do some fact-stuffing, or else Senator Forbes will be bird-dogging him about the State's shortage of water resources. It was Republican Forbes who fought for the referendum, which Democrat Meyner knifed, a predicament which almost cost Senator Forbes his political career.

It's time for the Chief Executive to put an end to vacillating tactics and get down to fundamentals. New Jersey needs water, and we should not have to wait 25 more years for another referendum. And Trenton cannot look again to Chimney Rock, for this would be double jeopardy. If Round Valley is as suitable as the governor thinks, let's get it. If the Delaware River supply is available, as many believe, let's get it.

But one thing must not be forgotten: If water supply is to be drawn from the Raritan River, we must have a compensating reservoir to protect the downstream flow.

The Microscope On Communism

By Dr. Alexander S. Balinsky
Specialist in Russian Affairs and Economics, Rutgers University

Last week saw the 36th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution. It was, as usual, the occasion for an important policy statement from the Soviet leaders. This time it came from Lazar Kaganovich, first deputy premier.

The essence of Kaganovich's statement was that the 20th Century belongs to communism. He reaffirmed what we all know and fear: that the Soviets have no intention of abandoning the conquest of the world by communism. It was what he did not say, except implicitly, that is far more important.

Soviet leaders are trying to make two propositions clear to the world: (1) that they intend to spread communism to the entire world and (2) that they do not intend to do it by war. That leads right into the really vital question: How does the Soviet Union expect to bring communism to the whole world (including the United States) within the 20th Century if not by war?

Prophet and Architect

For an answer to that question we have to go back to the doctrines of Marx and Lenin.

Marx believed that capitalism would destroy itself—that it had within it the seeds of its own destruction. It was his theory that by exploiting the working classes, by making it difficult or impossible for them to buy back what they produced, capitalism would bring on a series of increasingly severe depressions. During each period of crisis, the lot of the working man would become progressively worse, until it reached a point beyond endurance. Then, under the leadership of the Communist Party, the workers would revolt and overthrow their capitalist oppressors.

Marx taught that communism would spring up within each capitalist country—that it would follow on the heels of the collapse of capitalism. He said nothing at all about spreading communism externally and by war. Nor did Marx envisage a Socialist fatherland from which communism would then be spread to other parts of the world. He rested his entire case on the conviction that capitalism would produce its own gravediggers.

Communism by Intimidation

Lenin, who adhered and accepted Marxism, carried it a step or two further. He recognized that communism's greatest chance of success came in those areas of the world where poverty was the greatest. A practical man, Lenin realized that communism could be sold most easily to those people who have the least to lose—to those who are already frustrated, demoralized, hungry and confused. But Lenin, less patient than Marx, suggested giving that inevitability a push.

Soviet leaders today seem to be giving up the notion of war as a way to spread communism. They realize that atomic or hydrogen warfare would destroy all civilization. And while they desperately want to spread communism, they want a world in which to spread it. That leaves them with only the ideas of Marx and Lenin. With Marx, they have faith in the belief that capitalism will destroy itself. With Lenin, they are trying to push the inevitable wherever they can.

Marx made his prediction in 1849, more than 100 years ago. No one is certain just when Marx thought capitalism would destroy itself. But it's a certainty that

Of Books, Plays & Sundry Things...

"The Chalk Garden"

As has often been said, if everyone liked the same horse there would be no horse races. Thus, it is perfectly possible to recognize a piece of art and still be unable to enjoy it. The important thing always, of course, is not to permit one's private prejudices to spoil the attempt to arrive at critical objectivity, for though critical objectivity is impossible, a fair critic tries to employ some standards so that his judgments will consist of more than the simple statement, "I liked it," or "I did not like it," which, however meaningful it may be to him is far too subjective to have any real meaning to anyone else.

Looking objectively at "The Chalk Garden," the new play by Enid Bagnold in the Ethel Barrymore Theatre, one must admit that it is full of the brilliant, intellectual wit rarely found on the New York stage. The best of the American theatre is musical comedy or stark realism. It is only in imports, like this one from England, that we are apt to get the glittering conversation which no one pretends really occurs but which, nevertheless, is amusing and stimulating.

The play is full also of the eccentricity of an extended shaggy dog joke. Almost everyone in the play is more than a little daff, and the daffiness has more purpose behind it than simple amusement. All the charmingly un-germane remarks which the characters keep making fit into the deeper, subtler revelation Miss Bagnold is building beneath the surface of her play.

The Story

Perhaps the reason why we were never quite able to come to a full enjoyment of the production is that the T. S. Eliot-type revelation and the Oscar Wilde-type dialogue never quite came together into a cohesive whole. The story commences as Marx would not have given capitalism another hundred years or even another full generation. Capitalism has survived Marx and Lenin. It may yet survive Khrushchev, Bulganin, Kaganovich & Company. The 20th Century, Comrade Kaganovich, belongs to those who will help the world attain economic security while preserving human dignity.

a mad comedy about an old English gentlewoman of more than middle age who keeps a strange household inhabited by an ex-convict man servant and her frighteningly precocious granddaughter who delights in shocking people at any cost, be it by setting fires or announcing that her father committed suicide while she was in the room (untrue). The house is ruled from above by a very old, unseen butler who has had a stroke. And the lady spends most of her time worrying about her garden, which, in spite of all her care, is not a very successful one.

Into this menage is introduced the young girl's new governess. The symbolism begins to emerge when this strikingly capable but no less strange woman announces the fact that the garden is planted in chalk in which flowers have no more chance to grow healthily than does the youngster in the arid and decadent household of her grandmother. Things begin to thicken when it emerges that the governess herself has a somewhat shady past, but all ends well with the girl safely in her mother's hands and the grandmother ascending on the road from decadence.

The Brittle

But it is from the decadence and falsetto, of course, that the considerable wit which the play possesses arises. Therefore, one often wishes during its course that it would just be a witty, decadent comedy, and let things go at that. On the other hand, the kind of wit decay inspires is just a little hard for us to take for three hours—just a little too crystal-clear and brittle. Toward whichever pole the play veered we found ourselves somewhat discontented.

The play is worth seeing, if just for the brilliant performances of Gladys Cooper as old Mrs. St. Maughan and the young Irish actress Slobahn (Shi-vaun) McKenna as the governess, Miss Madrigal. Miss Cooper is brilliant and still beautiful, while Miss McKenna's quiet acting does not hide her underlying intensity which is extremely attractive.

That the play has quality and originality is undeniable, and undoubtedly there are those among you who are better able to appreciate it than we.

Zone Amendments To Be Aired Dec. 8

According to Township Attorney R. E. Gaynor, "The Planning Board has recommended these changes to allow for future business growth."

In other business, Township Engineer R. P. Wilson recommended payment of $15,172.31 to the A. D. Excavating Co. Inc. of Hopelawn for work on Blackwell's Mills Road, now completed except for some shaping, and this was approved.

Mayor Joseph Staudt said the Committee was considering work "on the lower end of DeMott Lane, near Easton Avenue" as its next road project.

The Committee also approved the following appointments to the Youth Guidance Council: Mrs. C. E. McClure, the Rev. Merle W.

"You won't let me!..."

says Reddy Kilowatt.

"I've got a job to do in your home - 24 hours a day! But how can I work when you won't let me?"

You keep adding to your electric load by plugging in more and more lamps, motors and appliances - but how about the wiring? Are you bringing it up-to-date? There are times I just can't get through to all the places I'm needed at the same time. Fuses blow, appliances don't work properly and so on. The wiring is at fault - but I get the blame!

Shucks, I'm always "reddy" to work. But for your own safety and convenience it's up to you to supply modern wiring. Won't you call your electrical contractor today? He'll give you a free wiring modernization estimate and all the information you need to know.

JOHNS-MANVILLE "Close-Ups"

Man From Mars?

THIS IS NO creature from outer space, but a modern man protecting himself from scorching temperatures. He is swathed in an asbestos suit while transferring a crucible of hot metal from an electric furnace.

Johns-Manville people, with almost a century of experience in use of asbestos, developed asbestos cloth 60 years ago for protection of those in fire rescue work and in industries requiring contact with extremely high temperatures. Asbestos textiles have been adapted to many industrial operations and products—in fact, J-M textiles are ready to go to work wherever asbestos is needed to protect life or property.

Asbestos cloth is only one of many products for better, safer living produced by the J-M team of research scientists, production people and sales representatives that have helped man control heat, sound and motion and protect himself and his property against fire, weather and wear.

tration Building was that Mr. Peacos had won only two absentee votes.

A "mystery" still surrounds the five votes—where there should only have been two.

In Township Hall, after the votes were tallied, a telephone call was made to County Clerk Robert B. Bergen's office for the absentee totals by a bystander, and this man—still unidentified—announced that Mr. Peacos had won five votes, to give him a 1-vote victory. These absentee votes were not included in the totals submitted to Mr. Bergen by Township Clerk Fred Bascom, as The News inadvertently reported last week. Mr. Bascom, as required, submitted only the totals brought in by the eight Township election boards. Military and civilian absentee votes are received by the county, not the municipal clerk.

Totals Changed
 Next morning, Wednesday, Mr. Bergen said Mr. Peacos had only two absentee votes, making Mr. Calvo victorious, 1919 to 1917.

The two-vote difference, plus the confusion surrounding the absentee ballots, resulted in the recount petition.

Mr. Calvo's election gave the Republicans a clean sweep of municipal contests. He and his Democratic opponent were seeking 3-year terms on the Committee. The other winners were James G. Maher, 3-year term, and W. Eugene Leland, 3-year term. Mr. Peacos' running mates were
