THE INTERNATIONAL FAIR.

One of our greatest drawbacks, as a people, is in a disposition to fight against fate. In no particular is this more amply illustrated than in the rivalry of American cities. Boston, for instance, claims to be the "hub of the universe;" Philadelphia wants to be considered as, par excellence, the great American city; Washington rushes to the front because the folly of a good-natured and prodigal set of citizens permit it to remain the National Capital, and so on. This rivalry does no one any good, and is more of a decided injury to everybody, for the reason that ours is the country of the future, and all nations are anxiously awaiting our fullest and best development. It is a well-settled fact that there can be but one metropolis in the United States, and it is equally a fact that New York City is that one metropolis and will continue to be so until supplanted by a far Western city. There is hope and opportunity for a Western city, such as Chicago or Omaha, for example. There is no hope whatever for either Boston or Philadelphia, though both are undoubtedly fine cities. The effort, therefore, of Boston and Philadelphia to rob New York of its prestige, only serve to impede progress generally. A vast amount of confusion arises, many people are temporarily distressed, but the position of New York is not seriously deranged. It is still the metropolis, only it is less of a great city than it would be if other cities were ruled by common sense in these affairs. The false growth imparted to those cities by endeavors to change the regular and legitimate channel of progress is severely lamented during the reacting periods that are sure to arrive. Let us then strive to fatten rather than starve the only goose that can lay golden eggs. One of our finest opportunities will be in the forthcoming World's Fair, in New York, which should be made the largest and grandest in the history of such exhibitions. If Americans were as active and enterprising in the matter as hundreds of intelligent foreigners are, there would be little room for doubt upon the subject. Our warmest friends are often people from abroad. This was abundantly shown during the Centennial. Even Englishmen did much, very much, to augment the success of that exhibition. We have no foes across the water. The inhabitants of Great Britain are, for the most part, glad that we acquired our independence. The rivalry there is only such as is dictated by necessity. The whole of Europe, in fact, would be glad to see America thrive, and many Europeans wonder at our stupidity in failing to work together harmoniously and in the right direction. We were cajoled by the sheerest rubbish into allowing the Centennial to be held in Philadelphia. It is too late now for idle regrets. Let us improve the future and make our experience profitable. The sooner New York surpasses London, Paris, St. Petersburg, and other European centres, the better it will be not only for us but the whole world. "Let the dead bury their dead." New Yorkers themselves should look after these matters more than they do. They are too liberal to other communities. The time for such a metropolis as New York to be diffusive is when its position is so firmly established as to leave no room for doubt in the minds even of the most ignorant and rapacious as to the comparative merits of other places. The World's Fair project is in the hands of a committee, but that is no excuse for indifference on the part of the public generally. It is gratifying to know that the members of this committee are resolved to have a brilliant World's Fair. It cannot be too brilliant. The humblest tradesman as well as the wealthiest banker or railroad king should interest himself personally in the enterprise and do something toward pushing it forward. Let it be settled this time, permanently, that New York is the metropolis.

Of course it is morally criminal for people to neglect their local interests even for the patriotic purpose of making the metropolis of the New World superior to the Old World. It is good and right for every place to be ambitious and enterprising. But the limit should be distinct and positive. The Centennial was a great success in Philadelphia. It would have been a much greater success in New York. There was plenty of room for it in New York, notwithstanding all statements to the contrary. The upper wards of the city could readily spare a thousand acres to-day for a World's Fair, and there is still more room in the suburbs, with plenty of appropriate sites. It would be a blessing to everybody if a thousand acres of filthy overcrowded tenement houses in New York were demolished and a superb exhibition building erected on the ground. If any secondary locality has capacity to make a local exhibition superior to any general Fair that can be held anywhere, such a locality would be extremely foolish to surrender its prowess, voluntarily, at any time, but such capacity should not be wasted in fruitless attempts to permanently deprive the accepted metropolis of all its peculiar rights and privileges. This should be thoroughly understood by everybody. Let us then listen no more to that lunacy which claims to accord to Boston or Philadelphia a metropolitan position. The fair is to take place in 1883 and the incident to be commemorated is the grandest in our national history. Our achievement of independence has been of the greatest consequence and our centennial celebration of the event is worthy of the highest honors.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Is Chicago content to be buried with the Republican party? That city is accustomed to do great things and to do them grandly, but this time it has done the littlest thing within the memory of man—it has permitted the nomination of De Golyer Garfield, the littlest specimen of a person ever put up by any party for the high office of President. But perhaps the case is not altogether so bad as it seems. Garfield is a minister, and therefore an appropriate individual to perform the final obsequies of the defunct party. He will read the burial service with an unctuousness that could not be imparted to it by any layman. And he can accompany the funeral procession in its journey up Salt River with something like a suitable dignity. Otherwise there is nothing in the nomination to prompt the least admiration. The news was received by Republicans generally with the most dismal acquiescence. Woe-begone faces greeted each other at every turn, and even the cannon fired in the City Hall Park, of New York, refused to boom with anything like vigor. It was natural that an Ohio man should have been nominated, and it was equally natural that the State which more than all others was productive of the birth of the party should have been selected as the banner State to consign the dead body to its last resting place. We shall hear no more of Ohio after this campaign. From Fremont to Garfield is a big jump. It is enough to make Lincoln arise from his grave and Grant drop his cigar. Weak as is Hayes he is a giant compared to Garfield. There is a small modicum of manliness in Hayes; there is not the slightest pretention to manhood in Garfield. It will be the easiest kind of a walk over for the Democrats under any circumstances. Perhaps the flimsy platform adopted by the convention had an influence with the friends of prominent candidates. Such a platform would not of itself carry any man through. All the leading Republican papers have inveighed against it severely, and both Blaine and Sherman must have felt that their chances would be very slim with such a drawback. It is fitting that Garfield and the platform should go down together. No one will mourn the loss of either.

Grant had a large backing of the money power, as did Blaine; the latter had all the prominent railroad men in the country. Mr. Joy, of Michigan, who presented Blaine's name in the convention, and made a sophomorical speech in his behalf, can command his twenty-five millions of dollars, and would cheerfully have spent a third of it for his favorite. Jay Gould put out over two hundred thousand for Blaine, and the New Jersey delegates were also his supporters. They are probably glad that they are saved further expense. No one will invest any money in Garfield. The dark animal is not a horse—he is more like a sheep. In spite of what New York papers may say or have already said, for sensational purposes, no prominent event ever excited less interest in that city than the Republican Convention. The foot races at Madison Square Garden attracted much more attention from the public generally, and the betting on the nomination was very light. This is a little singular, too, for the prospect of a third-term candidate promised to make things lively. But not even the bulletin boards of the newspapers made the streets impassible with anxious people. The great mass of people seemed to move right along, just as though there was nothing going on at Chicago. And indeed there was not much. The only point that has been decided is that the people will not countenance any third-term aspirants, but this was tolerably well decided before. The friends of Grant will now, it is to be hoped, give him permanent rest. The nation cannot well afford to allow a man who undoubtedly holds a very high representative position, who, whatever may be his demerits, has been looked upon abroad as one of the greatest of soldiers, to be made a tool of to suit the basest purposes of the basest politicians that ever disgraced civilization. It is worthy of note that in Grant's obscure days these very politicians were the ones that snubbed him the most, but when he demonstrated a remarkable success they, with characteristic greed, wanted to devour him, body and soul. He would have much better than this if he had remained a Democrat all his life. He would never have been degraded by the Democratic party as he has been degraded by this convention. If his friends had possessed an atom of common sense, they would have known that even Grant cannot accomplish impossibilities. The nomination of Garfield settles the case of Mr. Tilden. There is no need of him now, nor of his barrel of dollars. The Democrats have only to put up a respectable man of any dimensions to sweep the field easily. There is not the slightest danger that Garfield will be as bold as Hayes under any circumstance, and no repetition of the electoral commission can occur now. Good bye, Republican party! You clung to life long and well. But all things must have an end, so must you. Good bye, Grant! Good bye, Blaine! Good bye, Sherman! It is hard to part with such animated foes, but the grave must have its own.

ROUGH ON THE "OFFICIAL."

The last communication of His Honor, Mayor O'Neill, to the Council, vetoing the Hefferan appointment, is one of the most terse pieces of composition we have had the pleasure of perusing in some time. A subject of so grave importance so cleverly handled in a few words, gives additional evidence of the intentions of the Mayor to economize in small as well as in great things. This course will not meet the views of the "official proprietors," no doubt, but will just suit the ideas of the tax-payers, who foot the bill. His Honor, had he desired to be humorous, satirical and exhaustive, like his predecessor, or, rather, had he felt disposed to advertise his abilities at the public expense, he could have wasted at least seven pages of foolscap and proportionately benefitted the coffers of the Democrat (?) at the same time. Mr. O'Neill not only performed what he considers a duty, but furnishes good and sound reasons for so doing. He explains, and we have every reason to believe him, that he had no objections whatever to Mr. Hefferan, but that a majority of the public had, and his duty to the public was and will be his first consideration. He also states that complaints had been sent to the Council against the ex-Street Commissioner, and this was his principal reason. None can deny that it is just and sufficient cause for his action. The disposition of this case consumed just one page of foolscap, and proves that His Honor believes in the maxim that "brevity is the soul of wit," and also understands how to apply it to advantage.

A SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY.

The nomination of Generals Garfield and Arthur, two militiamen, by the way, for President and Vice President by the Republicans, it is stated by party newspapers, "gives general satisfaction and no better selections could be made." That's so, but particularly to Democrats does such nominees prove gratifying, who, if at all judicious in their choice, must win at the coming election. If a Democratic Convention had the selecting, they could not favor themselves much more or choose a pair that would be easier to defeat than Garfield and Arthur. The adherents of the latter gentlemen no doubt realize this fact, and probably anticipating a renewal of the 1876 failure, and knowing that an outraged people will tolerate no repetition, intend to adopt a new plan—seat their men at the point of the bayonet. The military aspect of the ticket would suggest the above, and might also suggest the necessity of a warrior at the head of the opposing ranks—General Hancock, for instance, a man who, if elected, would secure his rights or perish in the attempt. It is worthy of consideration that, in spite of the number of Generals placed at the head of the Government by the Republican party in the past twelve years, our streets were never so full of maimed, neglected and pauperized, though intelligent, relics of the late unpleasantness. This is the return made the real heroes by their military rulers, whom they alone made famous. It might be well for the ex-soldiers to consider this subject. It is also ridiculous, to some extent, that the party that consigned Arthur to obscurity should resurrect him as their choice for Vice President. The same course was pursued in the case of Gov. Cornell, and his success was due to recreant Democratic votes, of which there will be an entire absence in the coming struggle, no matter who is the choice. It was a very poor compliment to New York, and will not help the ticket in that State.

The party must indeed be hard pushed for respectable representatives, or, otherwise, anticipating defeat, naturally select the probable victims from among the most unworthy of their party. This is, after all, a desirable as well as decisive means of ridding said party of ambitious, yet disreputable and weak, would-be leaders.

RIGHT AGAIN.

We asked the following question several weeks ago: "When was Al. Hoffman appointed Court Interpreter?" and later on desired information regarding the date of his naturalization. Mr. Hoffman having remained silent, and a number of our readers clamoring for knowledge on these subjects, we were obliged to hunt up the facts on our own account. The result proves that Hoffman was appointed the first or second month in the year 1874 and became a citizen in July of the same year, several months later.

This verifies our statement that the interpreter held office as an alien. There was no excuse for this action, the emergencies of the case calling for no such sacrifice. The appointee was and is incompetent, and an able linguist and citizen offering his services at the time for about one-third of the amount drawn by the present incumbent, makes it a lasting disgrace to the few who perpetrated this outrage.

We would suggest the next time "the crowd" are anxious to reward an outsider that they will send to Jerusalem. It would be a good way off, but then they might find a competent man, which would be some excuse for such a course.

Would it not be far more honorable and less expensive to pension this "ornamental court attachment?"

COUNCILMANIC NOTES.

The usual interest was manifested at the last session of the Council in the Street Commissioner matter by a very large audience, while the antagonism between the members was unabated.

The property owners on First street complained of the condition of their thoroughfare, and petitioned to have the same repaired.

The Hudson County Gas Light Company proposed to furnish light for the ensuing year at $25.15 per lamp.

Mayor O'Neill did not consider Mr. Hefferan Street Commissioner, and accordingly objected to the resolution ordering said official's salary paid for last month. His Honor also vetoed the appointment of Mr. Hefferan in the following communication:

HOBOKEN, June 7th, 1880.

TO THE COUNCIL:

GENTLEMEN—My sense of duty to the people of our city causes me to return to you, without my approval, the resolution adopted June 1, 1880, appointing M. Hefferan, Street Commissioner, for the ensuing year. In doing so I am moved neither by partiality for or prejudice against Mr. Hefferan, but solely by my judgment that the city's affairs need in many cases reforms, and in none more than the street department. Complaints have been frequent and often embodied in petitions to your Honorable Body. Your reply to these just and rightful remonstrances has been to reappoint the person complained of. In this I cannot concur. The city pays prompt and ample remuneration, and has a right to the active and efficient service of her officials. Our influence, as far as it extends, should be exerted for the benefit of our citizens, and while doing injustice to none, we should take care that full justice is done to the city.

Respectfully,

JOHN A. O'NEILL, Mayor.

In spite of the opposition of Councilmen Crissy and Plunkett, his Honor's veto of Mr. Hefferan was sustained and Edward Stack appointed, receiving the full vote of the Board.

Treasurer Rente reported a balance of only $12,350.18 to the city's credit, and suggested economy. Corporation Attorney Niven did not understand the request of the members as to what constitutes a legal folio. City Clerk Alberts reported the receipt of $350. The monthly report of the Recorder was received and referred, and the Chief Engineer's statement was laid over for one month.

Mr. Samuel B. Dod petitioned for and obtained permission to test the pumping process on the sunken lots between First street and the embankment of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad at his own expense. After some routine business the meeting adjourned.

The Great Schuetzen Fair.

The results so far of the fair and festival at the Schuetzen Park are very flattering indeed, and should this state of things continue for another week there is little doubt but the receipts will even surprise the most sanguine. Every day since the opening, novel and very interesting features have been introduced, and no repetition allowed. This does away with any monotony, and a visit could be made daily and be extremely pleasant in each instance. Last Sunday was devoted to a monster concert. Tuesday was reception day, Mayor O'Neill, of this city, and Mayor Taussig, of Jersey City, being present, the former, in a short and brilliant address, distinguishing himself as usual, and meeting, together with the other prominent guests, a most cordial greeting from the genial Schuetzens represented on this occasion, particularly Col. E. P. C. Lewis, Fred. Harenburg, August Ermisch, John F. W. Mangels, John C. Crevier, A. Briegleb, Henry Offermann, Capt. H. D. Busch, Martin Steljes, John Horsman and William Muller. On Wednesday there was prize shooting, reception of visiting Schuetzen corps, and the crowning of the Schuetzen King, which honor fell to Mr. John Mehrteus, Jr., of New York. The ceremony was made quite interesting, the two-year old daughter of Major Aery officiating, assisted by about fifty young ladies and the Schuetzen Cade.s. Thursday, a grand concert, in which twenty-one singing societies took part, shooting, etc. Friday was devoted to bowling, glass ball shooting and a reception to the Hoboken Riding Club, who visited the park mounted. To-day his Excellency Governor McClellan is expected, and a grand reception will be accorded visiting cadets by the juveniles of the Schuetzen Association. Each day next week has its own attractions, and the affair closing on the 20th inst. with a monster concert. The fairest daughters and mothers of New Jersey and New York also preside at the different tables, and when a person decides to do a good act there is great consolation in pleasing a pretty woman at the same time. To view the numerous and costly gifts is well worth a visit alone, and we trust we will meet no Jerseyite, anyhow, in the next ten years who will have to admit that he missed this glorious opportunity of having a good time so near home, at a very reasonable outlay also. Col. Lewis, who is the head and front of everything connected with the affair, is, more than any other one man, entitled to great credit for the success so far.

Official Rowdyism.

A number of young men of this city attended the picnic of the Hoboken Academy, which took at the Schuetzen Park last Saturday evening. At the conclusion of the affair, five of the party, consisting of Harry Boyd, Walter Pritchard, Louis Keeler, Edward Benson and Frank Sonthal, started for home. They had proceeded only a short way out of the gate of the park when they were set upon by three burly ruffians, evidently for the purpose of robbery. The police, or rather the few ornamental guardians of the peace which the town boasts of, made their appearance, and the rowdies took flight. When the officers were requested to arrest the fellows, they objected on the ground that they had no right to follow law-breakers or make arrests in West Hoboken—the direction taken by the fugitives. They decided, however, to make themselves "solid" at headquarters, and accordingly arrested two of the Hoboken boys, Keeler and Boyd, who had already been abused, and were entitled to protection instead of punishment, and left a third one lying unconscious in the street. These inhuman wretches have evidently taken a lesson from the Weehawken clubbers, and a dose of Grand Jury would have good effect. In the meantime, we would advise any of our citizens having occasion to travel Union Hill after nightfall to go well armed, as protection against the assaults of the police, who are liable to commit any outrage at sixty cents a head—the only reward they receive for their services.

Found Dead

Mrs. Theresa Lachivill, a nurse employed in the family of Thomas Malcolm, on Marshall street, was found dead in a rear room of the premises by her employer on his return from work Wednesday evening. The deceased was addicted to strong liquor, and her death was probably due to excessive drinking. The youngest of the children died on Thursday, and both bodies were removed to Crane's morgue. Malcolm employed the woman as housekeeper, his wife being an inmate of St. Mary's Hospital, suffering from cancer. Coroner Wiggins will hold an inquest Monday evening.

LACONICS.

—The New York Ferry Engineers' Association go on an excursion to Oriental Grove on Wednesday, July 28th.

—The Merry Twelve—and a jolly lot of fellows they are too—will hold their second annual summernights' festival at the Otto Cottage on Tuesday evening, June 22nd.

—The long-announced picnic of the John W. Barnitt Association, at Otto Cottage Garden, on Tuesday evening next, promises to be one of the pleasantest affairs of the season.

—The Rev. D. B. F. Randolph, pastor of the M. E. Free Tabernacle, will preach, tomorrow morning, on "What is Truth?" and in the evening a sermon to young men, "Is not this the Carpenter?"

—The sail up the Hudson with Professor Wallace and his pupils and friends on Wednesday, we are informed, was extremely pleasant. We would say more on this subject only for the fact that we "got left," the barge and steamer getting the start of us about ten minutes.

—The steamer Marion, Captain Carnie, begins her regular trips to Rockaway Beach to-morrow. This delightful seaside resort has been made second to none during the past winter, and the enterprise of Captain Carnie in furnishing the Hoboken public direct communication should, and we trust will, be appreciated.

—The match at cricket between the Columbia College and Pennsylvania University teams on the St. George Cricket Grounds yesterday resulted in a victory for the latter in one inning and 57 runs, the score being as follows: Pennsylvania University, one inning, 197 runs; Columbia, two innings, 134. The Staten Islanders play the St. George's next Wednesday.

—The National Clothing Company, a concern which is prepared to offer inducements to the public which will compare favorably with even the New York dealers, open their new premises, No. 92 Washington street, to-day. Messrs. Frankford & Weinthal, the proprietors, are experienced clothiers, and a glance at their stock and prices will prove that they intend to keep up with the times.

—The following delegates were elected by the Second Ward Club last Wednesday evening to nominate a Councilman to fill the seat vacated by the resignation of Herman Schmidt: Ramon M. Cook, Herman Schmidt, John Sturges, Max Durlacher, and Henry McCann. Alternates—Henry Huster, Jr., and William Kreutzman. The only men in the race are Chas. Gross and Chas. Kaufman, with the latter many laps ahead, and likely to win. No better selection could be made. Mr. Kaufman is a life-long and reliable Democrat, has done much for the party and asked nothing in return. Mr. Gross, whatever his claims are, or have been rather, they have been substantially recognized in the past, and the Democrats of Hoboken owe him nothing—particularly at present.

SMILES

- A pair of slippers—two eels.
- Dead reckoning—counting gravestones.
- A cuff on the wrist is worth two on the ear.
- A tack points heavenward when it means mischief.
- Starched ruching is ruff on a young lady's neck.
- What is a home without a dog? A paradise for cats.
- While being wise, keep straight. Never be crosswise.
- Madam, never bang a door, if you do adore a bang.
- It is in a bass drum that two heads are better than one.
- Sweating for one's daily bread is a pore way of getting it.
- Clocks are awfully dissipated; they keep all kinds of hours.
- When are flowers out of breath? When they are fully blown.
- Cheating never prospers, except, perhaps, in trading horses.
- A draft will bring on a cold; cure a cold and pay the doctor's bill.
- If your lamp is heavy, a bit of long, narrow paper will make your lamplighter.
- The price of "Virgin Leaf" has been raised. You can buy it or not, just as you chews.
- "Honesty is the best policy," but too many people claim that they cannot afford the best of anything.
- A friend explains how a young lady yields her heart to a rough-looking sailor. He says she is carried by a salt.
- The man who sends an editor a box of cigars in return for a newspaper puff, thought that one good puff deserved another.
- "By George!" shouted a traveler, staring at the calendar card hanging up in the depot, "if they haven't got to playing the blamed puzzle on the walls"
