Mr. Wm. Sturr is a candidate for Assessor. Kaegobeln is exporting bottled American beer to Europe. Frank Herwig, Jr. has announced himself as a candidate for Collector of Revenue.

balance on hand and hopes soon to be in a position to make another remittance. There is, it seems, some little doubt as to Mr. Julius Schlatter's position in the present Ward campaign. At the German Conference Meeting he advocated Mr. Thomas for Councilman, and at the same time was equally anxious to advance the interests of Mr. Kenney. We are informed, however, that Mr. Schlatter will make no mistake when the proper time arrives.

an immense amount of go in them, always do their share in keeping up the conversation—in fact, would be very much missed on all such occasions. Now, those seven friends have gold in abundance, literally as much as they could need; and they are poor—very poor—O'er tooth.

TIBI BOREAS. Tell me, ye winged winds that round my pathway roar. Do ye know some spot where woman weep no more?

Old Boreas, cruel, blowing louder than before; Cold, heartless, answered with a mocking roar.

DRESS DECREES.

Facts in Fashions for the Fashionable Folks.

All the new bonnets have strings. Argent is the new name for silver gray.

Black gloves are beaded high up the arm. Joyeuse is the brightest shade of dark purple.

Evening shoes of plush are richly embroidered. Spanish lace trims silk and satin most effectively.

Large hats in the Charles IX style are becoming popular. Color is the Alpha and Omega in every department of seasonable modes.

"Poke" bonnets are too much of a surprise in size to be a success this season. Steel head embroidery is liberally expressed in spring and summer finery.

Pale pink suits olive complexion and hair of an uncertain brownish-red tint. A very pretty but novel bonnet ornament is in the shape of a large hook and eye of carved and enameled gold.

Evening shoes are still worn very pointed at the toes and cut down very low, so that a great deal of the stocking is shown. Costly elegance predominates in street toilets. Is this as it should be? Aristocratic ladies across the water say, nay.

Ball gloves are trimmed with lace, row over row of insertion being let in, ending in a fringe either just above or below the elbow. The Odalisque slipper of black satin is embroidered with beads, and has a thick, twisted fringe of chenille around the instep.

New style walking boots are of chamois cloth and glazed kid, with buttons and button holes placed perpendicularly on the side. Spanish bonnets are composed of skillfully draped lace, with a long spray of flowers falling from the midst of the folds on the left shoulder.

A specimen of the Dorante shoes is in doeskin, cut in the instep in form of a Maltese cross and closed by a gray silk ribbon of the same shade as the kid. Stockings must match the dress, not only the plain color of it, but must be worked with the same flowers or embroidered to match the trimmings with beads or silk.

Graceful and becoming are the coiffures of white marabout feathers, tipped with gold or silver, or with jet for mourning, and others of white plush ornamented with pearls. A very handsome bonnet was entirely covered with old-gold plush and had a coronet trimmed with chenille lace mixed with gilt steel beads. The strings were in Roman stripes defined by a thread of gold.

English ladies never wear expensive jewelry on the streets; American ladies do. Never mind nationality, let taste decide the question. Is costly jewelry appropriate on the promenade? Refinement whispers, nay. Gloves for dinner or half-dress have often embroidery or old gauze braid let in, and a new freak for these is to have gussets of a contrasting color inserted from the upper edge. Very handsome Egyptian head-dresses are of crimson and gold thread netting, with fringe of gold coins, while for simpler toilet there are Alsatian bows in bright colors of pink, satin and Oriental ribbon, more or less interwoven with gold or silver thread. Gimp garniture, with clair de lune jet, will be much used, but everywhere the popularity of black jet and gold and colored beads will be displayed, black having the preference; some trimmings are tufted with beads a quarter of an inch above the surface.
