REVIVAL OF GREGORIAN MUSIC.

In introducing the modest little church streets, we are in a position to obviate any necessity for apologies or excuses as regards the truthfulness of its history. The report is from the pen of the Rev. Mr. Sword, the efficient pastor, and that is all the voucher we deem it necessary to furnish our readers. Without further ado, we will give the career of the church and its many fine features as recited by the reverend gentleman before men-

The Church of the Holy Innocents was built and endowed by Mrs. Edwin A. Stevens as a memorial of her daughter, Julia Augusta, who died in Rome, Italy, December 26, 1870. The Rev. Robert J. ature painting. The silk and embroid Nevin, American Chaplain in Rome, laid the remains of this child aged seven years and seven months, in their temporary resting place in the cemetery near the Porta St. Paulo, on the Feast of St. John, 1870. Mrs. Stevens afterward made conveyance of certain property in Hoboken to Dr. Nevin for the purpose of erecting a church in the memory of this child, to be dedicated to the Holy Innocents.

It was under the direction of Dr. Nevin that the present church was built. The trust was afterward put into a more a body of incorporated trustees, now numbering five, of whom Dr. Nevin is President. These Trustees have the entire management of the property of the church in place of the usual vestry.

the Feast of St. Bartholomew, August 24, 1874, the building, as it at present stands, was consecrated by the same Bishop, assisted by the Bishops of Kentucky and New York. Dr. Nevin preached the sermon at the consecration. After speaking of the circumstances under which the church was built, he said concerning the church itself that it was first of all to be a free church; that neither the founder, nor the trustees, nor any man could claim an ownership in it; that it was only God's house, into which all His children might come with equal rights whether they have much or little of this world's goods. The trust under which the church was built requires that it shall be free, and that daily services shall be held in it. Both these requirements have been complied with. Service has been held in the church every day since it was opened and the seats are entirely free. It is seated with chairs; there are comer is at liberty to take whatever seat

Last Easter there was presented a very handsome cope made of the richest silks and embroidered cloth of gold. It has been the aim of the clergy of this church from its first beginning to restore the services of the church in matters of vestments, ritual and music to that condition of beauty and dignity in which they believe it was the intention of the English Reformers these services should continue, formal shape and the property vested in but from which they unfortunately declined in the times of Seventeenth Century Puritanism and Eighteenth Century deadness. Such a development is necessarily gradual. The taste of the people must be formed and educated; they must be led to appreciate and enter into

On its highly developed ritual, its choral services, its hearty singing, its frequent daily worship and its work among the poor is following in the wake of those churches which in the poor districts of London and other large cities in England have for thirty years been showing such evidence of renewed life and vigor in the English church.

The choir consists of twenty men and boys, vested in cassocks and cottas, all giving their services freely. It was organized in 1874, shortly after the opening of the church, and ever since has rendered the full choral service at least every Sunday. The music used in the church is almost entirely the ancient plain chant of the church. More has been done here in the way of restoring this ancient traditional music than in any other church in this country, or, perhaps, even in England. This plain chant, or, as it is more commonly known, Gregorian music, is the music which was exclusively used in the services of no pews or benches. The suit brought by the Town of Union against the bondsmen of Wurtz, the defaulting treasurer of the town, has been decided by Judge Knapp, who ordered judgment entered for $9,000 and interest, against Daniel Bennes and others, the latest sureties of the defaulter. Wurtz had been treasurer for a number of years, and each year was obliged to file his bonds anew. The bondsmen of one term did not all go on the bonds for the next year. When Wurtz "lit out" the deficiency of $9,000 was discovered in his accounts. The embezzlement had spread over many years and was not confined to the last year of his term. The question arose as to which set of bondsmen were responsible. The bondsmen for the several years asked for an apportionment of the loss, but Judge Knapp rendered the decision above. Allen McDermott was counsel for the Town of Union and Gilbert Collins appeared for the bondsmen.

SENATOR VS. PRESIDENT.

The position assumed by Senator Conkling towards President Garfield is nothing more or less than a natural outgrowth of what might have been expected from an imperious nature pandered to by a vacillating and hypocritical clique of politicians, determined to win by means no matter how dishonorable: and with their quarrels we have nothing to do. But do any of our readers believe that the subserving of the interests of the country is the supreme cause of the hostile attitude assumed by both President and Senator. and the partisans which follow in the wake of each? Bot hGarfield and Conkling are but politicians, whose followers would abandon either to-morrow could they make their minds up as to which would have the parceling out of the perquisites resulting from possession of the fishes," he will be lauded to the skies as in the realm of statesmanship by the rapacious crowd of expectant cormorants who are alternately praising and defaming each of the political gladiators.

But, let the President stand firm in the position which he has chosen to defend. and the over-estimated New York Senator's attacks will prove as futile as are his claims to statesmanship, which are founded upon nothing more stable than the insincere adulations of a rapacious crew of pretended admirers; and, opposed as we are to the questionable methods adopted by the President to carry a point, we unhesitatingly advocate the overthrow of the overweening vanity of the New York Senator. With no perquisites to hold out to the eager grasp of his hungry followers, his popularity and prestige will vanish quicker than have the pretended followers of Hayes abandoned that hypocritical humbug.

ABUSE OF THE "QUILL."

Our neighbors of the ex-official organ have probably discovered by this time that the threat of ex-Mayor O'Neill to vindicate himself, was no political dodge indulged in just prior to election, as they stated. They have also learned to their cost that they were trifling with the wrong man when they attempted to hold him up to disgrace and ridicule. From the numerous and persistent attacks of that most deluded of scribes, Hoffman, t would appear that he has no conception of the value of a good reputation now sacredly some guard this treasure and what a struggle many will make to preserve it untarnished. TREASURY DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12, 1880.

SIR-The Department is in receipt of your letter of the 28th ult., in which you state that Mr. Burton Geel wishes to lease a small island on the Canadian side of the St. Clair river, for the purpose of pasturing his horses during the summer season; that, from working during the winter season the horses will probably be in a poor condition when sent to the island for pasturage, but will have increased in flesh in consequence of such summer pasturage. Under the circumstances you inquire whether the improvement in the animals will operate as a bar to their free entry on return, in view of the statute which directs that American productions to be entitled to exemption from duty on reimportation must be returned in the same condition as exported. In reply, you are informed that the Department considers that the facts stated would not operate as a bar to the free entry of the horses on their return, if the regulations in other respects shall be complied with. OBITUARY.

CAPTAIN SEOAN. We are pained to announce, in this issue the demise of Captain Sloan, which sad event took place at his late residence on Jersey City Heights, last Friday afternoon. The de eased gentleman had been afflicted with paralysis for some years, and it was believe suffered so at times from other troubles as to almost make death a happy release in his case. He was born in New York city about the year 1822, consequently entering upon his sixtleth year. He was prominent among metropolitan mariners in his early days, and when yet quite a young man commanded one of the ablest clipper ships leaving New York, known as the St. George. This was before the introduction of ocean steamers, when the fastest class of sailing vessels were called the 'packets," as they better supplied the place of the latter and were patronized by the commercial and other tourists. The masters of such craft were selected with as much regard to their gentlemanly qualifications as to their knowledge of navigation, and when we note that the deceased stood high among this class, we imply he was a very prominent man in his day. His remains were interred ing, the Rev. Mr. Dennison officiating. A large number of friends were present to wit Olmstead, a well-known lawyer, and one of the most popular members of this county, and a prominent Democratic politician, died very suddenly in Jersey City, of heart disease last Saturday, while undergoing an examination by Dr. Varick, Jr., at the doctor's office. Mr. Olmstead was fifty years of age, and, with the exception of heart disease, enjoyed vigorous health. Probably no man of his profession was ever more re spected and beloved by all who knew him. He was frequently solicited to accept office. but declined. His sudden death is mourned by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The funeral took place from his late residence in Jersey City on Tuesday.

FATHER ALPHONSE ZOELLER. Father Alphonse Zoeller, for seven years astor of St. Joseph's Church, this city, died yesterday morning from pneumonia, contracted the Sunday previous. The deceased gentleman had la red strenuously to advance the welfare of his church and is universally regretted.

Work of an Incendiary.

At one o'clock Thursday morning an alarm of fire was sounded at West Hoboken. Flames were discovered in a large quantity of hay stored in the yards of the North Hudson County Horse Railroad Co. The fire spread with wonderful rapidity and threatened to destroy the immense stables of the company, which contained at the time over two hundred horses, besides a large number of street cars. The light from the flames of the burning hay could be seen for miles around. The entire force of the Fire Department of West Hoboken and Jersey City Heights were soon at work on the burning nass, and, after indefatigable efforts, suc ceeded in extinguishing the flames. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary

CAPTAIN BRANDT'S SUICIDE.

The Only Statement Yet Publishe Slightly Exonerating the Decensed -Pain, Pride and Anxiety for Others Causes the Sacrifice.

NOBLE SENTIMENTS WITH SAD RESULTS

For nearly two weeks the daily papers have een teeming with accounts of the death of Captains Brandt and Meyer, old friends, former shipmates, and for many years in the mploy of the Hamburg American Ste Company. In treating of the subject, Cart. Brandt was forced to the act through a disgraceful occurrence in the old country, for which he was to be punished on his return to Germany. Later, this statement was corrected, and one brilliant "scribe" attributed his rashness to intemperance, for which he was to be dismissed the service, and another knight of the quill" killed him off owing to a combination of the above misdemeanors and grief at the death of his associate. Cant Meyers, who was also made to share his friend's disgrace. It would appear that all these stories were written only to satiate the nublic's hunger for sensation, entirely regardless of truth, the feelings of remaining riends and relatives, and with no consideration for the memory of the unfortunate though respected victims, who were beyond indicating their acts or contradicting their defamers. Captain Meyers was, both by New York and Jersey scribes, made a suicide even before any authentic reports of his death, were received, and, of course, it can be eadily seen what a delightful "yarn" that would make for the unscrupulous story teller-two friends for years, in misfortune sympathizing with each other, simultaneous ly commit suicide.

Though no foundation existed for this beyond the fact of the strong friendship between the men, yet the temptation was too great, and each scribe killed off the pair in any style his gifted imagination might suggest. It is now proven beyond any doubt that Captain Meyers breathed his last at his home, surrounded by his family and sympathizing friends, and sincerely regretted as a great loss by the managers of the concern who were about to discharge him for intemperance." It is also known that paralysis of the heart was the only cause of death. This should set at rest for all time the rumor relating to Captain Mevers.

As regards the late Captain Brandt, he did we are pained to state, take his own life, but under such circumstances and for-to his troubled mind-such good reasons as should be sufficient to induce the considerate public o draw the mantle of charity and leave his case to a better Judge of the enormity of the act than we can ever be. The unfortunate gentleman was for a number of years a victim of a disease in the head, which at times produced the most excruciating torture These sufferings were becoming more frequent, and at times rendered him entirely rresponsible for his acts, besides almost driving him mad with pain. He was in constant dread of one of these attacks at some when thousands of lives would be in his keeping. He, no doubt, brooded over this to such tirely ignored, which resulted in angry words an extent as to make him, an otherwise strong and finally blows. The woman was struck and courageous man, fearful of the terrible consequences which might ensue if pros trated or attacked by his terrible persecutor ander those circumstances. Besides, the daily development of the disease made such an accident more probable. He was, furtherpermanent relief from his sufferings. We are informed that in a communication just prior to taking his life he argued in justification of the sacrifice about to be made that he would willingly die himself rather than live to be instrumental, perhaps, in the destruction of many; at $2,500 per year. His terrible sufferings Kelsey, Edwards, Swift, Dwyer and Munn. had much to do with a diseased mind and induced the latter to dwell almost continuously upon probable future misfortunes, but particularly his dread of exposing others to danger caused in a moment of dispair the committal of the rash act. Let us, as sensiole and "smooth sailing" Christians, put Feldmeyer, Shea and Parslow. ourselves in the place of this man of checkered experiences, and-what then? His remains were not removed to Germany because it is contrary to law to inter the body of a suicide in consecrated grounds, and the placing elsewhere of the remains would only revive the circumstances and expose the memory of the deceased to additional comment. The family wisely concluded to avoid all this, even though they must in connection suffer the one they loved and respected most on earth to be laid away forever without one last sad look. We mention these circumstances owing to some of our charitable friends accusing the bereaved widow of lack of affection in not having her husband's body brought home.

Teachers' Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Hobo ken public school took place Wednesday afternoon. In spite of the thermometer being up in the eighties the attachees of our educational department seemed pleased at the reunion-which is always made so pleasant and instructive as to prove attractive under any condition.

Senior Principal Rue opened the meeting by a short address, explaining the subjects to be discussed, etc. Upon inquiring if any member had any motion to put or desired to make any remaks, the reply came " Move to adjourn," which was promptly seconded, but as promptly ruled out of order by the chairman. This action proves more clearly than anything we can write the interest that must have been entertained throughout the ses

A gent, styling himself John Johnson and esiding at 181 Garden street, has been following a rather peculiar calling up to a few days ago. John was very ant to dream of figures, and these he arranged and furnished to a Mrs. Matilda Warren, an inveterate policy player. It would seem from John's statement that when his "gig" or "saddle" was successful he was entitled to a share of the winnings. A few nights ago he had a most peculiar dream, in which certain numbers played so prominent a part that he furnished them the following morning to his patron to be played as a "gig." Mrs. Warren did as advised by her "dreamer," and trying or awful moment on the high seas was fortunate enough to strike $150. John approached her for his share, but was enmuch heavier in this instance than she 'struck" the policy, and not even her recent good fortune could allow her to excuse her assailant. A Probable Suicide. Charles Neilson, a young German resident of this city, was betrothed to a young girl in the Fatherland. On Thursday of last week he received a letter with the sad news that his sweetheart had committed suicide by opening a vein in her wrist. Neilson was very much depressed by the news and acted so strangely for several days after that he excited the suspicions of Constable Simmer macher, who watched him. He went out to the Elysian Fields and, sitting down under an umbrella, pressed a edcked pistol against his head. The Constable had followed him and came up behind him in time to seize the pistol before he pulled the trigger. Neilson promised not to attempt to kill himself again and Simmermacher kept the pistol. next day, however, Neilson left his hotel and disappeared. No trace of him has since been found, and it is feared that he has accomplished his purpose of committing suicide.

It is understood that an iron pier will be onstructed at Cape May before the opening f the season, by Philadelphia capitalists.

The accommodations for the boarding eason are greatly multiplied at Ocean Grove. They are almost doubled since last season and many families have already occupied their cottages.

Workmen are actively engaged at Long Branch and Coney Island in preparing for the opening of the season. At Coney Island the iron pier is being extended out into the sea so as to afford better landing facilities.

Opening of the Schutzen Park.

The Schutzen Park was opened on Sunday last, for the season of 1881, and was visited by a vast throng of people. The Park is under the superintendence of Mr. H. W. Nolte, who has brought it into most excellent condition, and as he controls all the principal stands, including the shooting range and the boats on the lake, visitors will find the Park one of the pleasantest and most attractive pleasure esorts in Hudson County, or, indeed within many miles of New York, and is the particular pride of our German citizens. The Park is now engaged ahead for several large festivals during the season.
