

AN ARMY SKETCH.

Mrs. Judd's Last Trip--How a Female Rebel was Outwitted.

The Confederacy as well as the Union service during the war of the Rebellion had in its secret service some women smart enough and pretty enough to have deserved a better lot in life.

On the 16th of December, 1862, while the Confederate army was at Murfreesborough and the Union Army of the Cumberland at Nashville, a lady of middle age and fine personal appearance was walking along the road from the former to the latter place.

"If they don't let you in you can go across the country, about four miles rich back of that range of woods you see yonder, to my father's house, and there they will run you through the lines anyhow."

This aroused Blythe's suspicions and he determined to report her case at the army police headquarters as soon as he reached Nashville, with his ideas of her character and business, and with a suggestion that a bright lookout be kept upon her movements.

The next afternoon she was brought in and at once sent to headquarters. There she gave her name as Mrs. Clara Judd, and claimed to be the widow of an Episcopal clergyman who had died about a year previous, leaving herself and seven children without property and considerably in debt.

The examination ended and a pass was given her to go to Louisville, and she was allowed to depart in peace. From the police office she made her way to the Commercial Hotel, Nashville, where she said she expected to meet an old friend, but finding that he was out of the city and that the hotel was too full to afford her lodgings, she went to a sutler of her acquaintance named Becker.

Early in the evening Blythe called at police headquarters and asked if Mrs. Judd had come in, and was told that she had just gone, and that a pass had been issued to her. He seemed disappointed, and had no hesitation in telling headquarters that it had been most egregiously fooled; that he had every reason to believe that her whole story was false, and that she was a bad woman, whom it would be well to watch.

and designs. He did so, and found her at Mr. Beaden's, as stated. After some unimportant conversation she said to him:

"Are you loyal?" His decidedly affirmative answer she construed to mean that he was a friend to the South and favorable to the Confederacy. It may here be stated that, though Blythe did not at their first meeting recognize her, she at once remembered having seen him in Murfreesborough, where he had been detained some eight or nine weeks before he was allowed to proceed to Nashville.

Completely self-deceived, she at once took him into her confidence, and entered upon an explanation of her business and her plans. She was, she said, going to Louisville for the purpose of purchasing quinine and other medicines for the Southern Confederacy, together with a considerable amount of dry goods and groceries for herself and others.

"You know," said he, "if anything should happen to you it would get me into trouble, and that would make you feel bad, wouldn't it?" He asked if she was not afraid of being watched; if she did not think she was already suspected--seeking to prepare her mind for the arrest which was soon to occur, and at the same time to allay any suspicion she might have of his complicity therein.

"I believe, or at least I feel, that there is a person in this very car watching me now," and for a little while she seemed quite anxious, but she soon fell into her usual careless mood. At Mitchellsville she took on board two more large trunks of goods and clothing left there on her former trip, because she had too many to get through the lines. Just after leaving Mitchellsville Blythe said to her:

"Now, this is a dangerous business you are in, and you may not get through safe. At Gallatin I shall leave you and go straight through to Murfreesborough. If you have any word to send I will take it to any one you may name." "If you see Lieutenant Hawkins," she replied, "tell him I have reached Gallatin safely with my goods; but the force is much larger than I expected, and I may have trouble in getting out. If Hawkins is not there tell any of Morgan's men, and they will tell the General, who will soon devise means for my relief."

Throughout the entire journey to Louisville she was ever on the alert for the smallest scrap of information. At every station, out of the window, would go her head, and the bystanders would be pried with guarded questions concerning the strength of the place, means of defence, number of troops, names of regiments, and everything else that could be of use to the rebels. Blythe was much annoyed, and time and again pulled her dress, begging her "for heaven's sake to sit down and keep quiet," or she would attract attention and ruin both herself and him. She only replied that it was a most important part of her work to observe, to make inquiries and to take notes--she must do it.

At Louisville Blythe paid her every attention, assisted her in her purchases, introduced her to some of the dry goods houses in the city, and went with her to New Albany, Ind., where she purchased several hundred dollars' worth of drugs and medicines. Here she seemed to be well acquainted, a fact which she explained by saying she made purchases there before. These drugs she intended to pack in a trunk with a false bottom, but was told by Blythe that would not be necessary, as he would see that her trunk was passed without examination.

No; she could not stay. Morgan's men had made a positive engagement to meet her that night at Gallatin, and she would not disappoint them for the world. She was to tell them there and then all that she had seen and heard down the road, and advise them where to stop at. In return, they were to assist her in getting her trunk through the lines, which could easily be done by putting it in the bottom of a wagon bed and covering it with fodder. Seeing that she could not be induced to remain, Blythe determined to accompany her. Flattered by this mark of attention and appreciation, she was highly delighted and more affectionate than ever.

On the return journey Mrs. Judd was in the best of spirits, and could hardly refrain from frequent exhibitions of her elation at the success of their schemes. Blythe begged her to be careful or she would expose herself and him to ruin.

"You know," said he, "if anything should happen to you it would get me into trouble, and that would make you feel bad, wouldn't it?" He asked if she was not afraid of being watched; if she did not think she was already suspected--seeking to prepare her mind for the arrest which was soon to occur, and at the same time to allay any suspicion she might have of his complicity therein.

"I believe, or at least I feel, that there is a person in this very car watching me now," and for a little while she seemed quite anxious, but she soon fell into her usual careless mood.

At Mitchellsville she took on board two more large trunks of goods and clothing left there on her former trip, because she had too many to get through the lines. Just after leaving Mitchellsville Blythe said to her:

"Now, this is a dangerous business you are in, and you may not get through safe. At Gallatin I shall leave you and go straight through to Murfreesborough. If you have any word to send I will take it to any one you may name." "If you see Lieutenant Hawkins," she replied, "tell him I have reached Gallatin safely with my goods; but the force is much larger than I expected, and I may have trouble in getting out. If Hawkins is not there tell any of Morgan's men, and they will tell the General, who will soon devise means for my relief."

Throughout the entire journey to Louisville she was ever on the alert for the smallest scrap of information. At every station, out of the window, would go her head, and the bystanders would be pried with guarded questions concerning the strength of the place, means of defence, number of troops, names of regiments, and everything else that could be of use to the rebels. Blythe was much annoyed, and time and again pulled her dress, begging her "for heaven's sake to sit down and keep quiet," or she would attract attention and ruin both herself and him. She only replied that it was a most important part an innocent man, and that the blame of the whole transaction was hers alone; and she finally wrote to headquarters, saying that she would bear any punishment that might be inflicted, but begging that Blythe might be spared, because he was an innocent man. Blythe had been at once released, but she, of course, did not know this, and to this day remains ignorant of his fate and location. Her baggage on being examined was found to contain many hundred dollars' worth of contraband goods--ample evidence of her guilt.

Her crime was the highest known to the military law, and the penalty was death, but her sex pleaded for her and her punishment was commuted to imprisonment in the military prison at Albany during the war; and Blythe is now, we hear, a peaceful country storekeeper in Hunterdon county, this State.

The World's "Cosmopolitan Spot."

There is no place in the world so cosmopolitan as San Francisco, Cal. The world's "cosmopolitan spot" is just here in this great city; the two squares bounded by Vallejo and Union and Stockton and Kearney streets, will be found inhabited by Chinese, Japanese, East Indians, Africans, Portuguese, Spanish, Greek, Italian, Russian, Polish, Scandinavian, German, Hungarian, English, Irish, Scotch, Welsh and Persian.

Dangerous Wounds.

President Garfield's case adds one more to the long list of instances in which the severest shot-wounds have failed to inflict death on the instant, often, indeed, proving powerless to inflict it at all. Col. James Gardner, one of the most distinguished officers of George II., was shot through the mouth in France, the ball passing out through the back of his neck, without killing him or even destroying his speech. Napier, the famous historian of the Peninsular war, was hit in the face at Bussaco by a bullet which was extracted a month later from a swelling behind his left ear. The ball that disabled Major Heros Von Boreke, the right-hand man of Gen. J. E. B. Stewart, during our late war, actually carried away a portion of the windpipe. A French soldier of Gravelotte is still living part of whose skull has been shot away, leaving the brain visible, and a Crimean veteran of advanced age still carries in his body a Russian bullet, which troubles him little except after violent exercise.

Treading Water.

The Indians on the Missouri River, when they have occasion to traverse that impetuous stream, invariably tread water just as a dog treads it. The natives of Joanna, an island on the coast of Madagascar, young persons of both sexes walk the water carrying fruit and vegetables to ships becalmed, or it may be lying-to in the offing miles away. Some Croonen whose canoe upset before my eyes in the seaway on the coast of Africa walked the water, to the safe-keeping of their lives, with the utmost facility; and I witnessed negro children on other occasions doing so at a very tender age. At Madras, watching their opportunity, messengers, with letters secured in an oil-skin cap, plunge into the boiling surf, and make their way, treading the water, to the vessels outside, through a sea in which an ordinary European boat will not live. At the Cape of Good Hope men used to proceed to the vessels in the offing through the mountain billows, treading the water as they went with the utmost security. And yet here, on our own shores, and amid smooth waters, men, women, and children perish like flies annually, when a little properly-directed effort--treading the water, as I have said--would happily suffice to rescue them every one.

Artistic Skill.

Two artist-lovers sought the hand of a noted painter's daughter. The question which of the two should possess himself of the prize so earnestly coveted by both having come finally to the father, he promised to give his child to the one that could paint the best. So, with the highest skill his genius could command, each strove for the maiden. One painted a picture of fruit, and displayed it to the father's inspection in a beautiful grove where gay birds sang sweetly among the foliage, and all nature rejoiced in the luxuriance of bountiful life. Presently the birds came down to the canvas of the young painter and attempted to eat the fruit he had pictured there. In his surprise and joy at the young artist's skill, the father declared that no one could triumph over that. Soon, however, the second lover came with his picture, and it was veiled. "Take the veil from your painting," said the old man. "I leave that to you," said the young artist, with simple modesty. The father of the young and lovely maiden then approached the veiled picture, and attempted to uncover it. But great was his astonishment when, as he attempted to take off the veil, he found the veil itself to be a picture. Plainly he who could so veil his canvas with the brush as to deceive a skillful master was the greater artist.

Oh, July! where is thy heat! Oh, Verror! thou art a heat!

Hoffman sails for Europe to-day and the comet has split in twain!

The Mayor returned from Long Branch in time to write his editorials for this week's Democrat (Rep.)

We have cabled Bismarck in regard to Hoffman's departure and the Prince will meet the editor (?) at Bremen.

Alderman Timken, in a few words, gave some good advice to the Council on Tuesday night, which they will do well to heed.

A very large number of suicides and unsuccessful attempts at self-destruction have been reported in this State during the past week.

If the report concerning Col. Drake, of Elizabeth, is true, the mob would not have been very severely censured if they had taken him in hand instead of his image.

Forty-eight divorces were granted at the last term of the Superior Court of Hartford County, Connecticut.

Gen. Grant desires to convey officially, through the columns of the ADVERTISER, his regret at being unable to attend the "send off" to be given to "Polly" Hoffman to-day.

Some persons pretend to disbelieve in the insanity of Guiteau, explaining that there is too much method in his madness.

The telegraph companies, and the newspapers who published so many "extras" this week, having made money in the business, should subscribe liberally to the fund now being raised for President Garfield and his family.

Nearly all the newspapers in the country have contained little outside of the terrible tragedy at Washington since Saturday last.

Cyrus W. Field, of New York, is busy raising a fund of $250,000 by subscriptions, to be presented to President Garfield and family.

Veto market quiet and steady. No change since last week. Quoted at 2. This, it will be remembered, is a drop of 1/2 from two weeks ago, and the market has not yet recovered this lost ground.

There is marked improvement in the Hoboken news reported in the New York States-Zeitung since Mr. Paul Loebel has taken charge of that department.

In relation to the Conking farce, still going on in Albany, a leading Republican paper says: "It is a good sign, an omen of good luck, that the more reasonable members, when they are not talking in groups, admit boldly that they are heartily sick of the foolishness of voting day after day for a man who has clearly been doomed to defeat from the first."

The Mayor has "returned without approval" the claim of the Corporation Attorney for expenses to Trenton on business for the city.

A WEEK OF SORROW.

One week ago to-day, throughout the length and breadth of the land, the report that was flashed over the wires from Washington, stating that President Garfield had fallen at the hands of an assassin, struck the heart of every citizen of this great Republic with the deepest grief.

The reports from Washington continue of the most encouraging nature, and there is now more hope than ever of his ultimate recovery.

The President and Mrs. Garfield have borne up nobly in this terrible crisis, and there is not a man in the United States to-day who is more popular and universally beloved than James A. Garfield.

A COMPARISON.

In marked contrast with the sense of shame and regret which the citizens of Hoboken must feel in being afflicted with such a Mayor as E. V. S. Besson, is the conviction that nearly all the other city officials are the right men in the right places.

HOBOKEN, N. J., July 2, 1881.

GENTLEMEN—I return herewith the communications from the Mayor of this city voting resolutions appointing Edward Stack Street Commissioner, Michael McHale Park Keeper and myself as Corporation Attorney.

These vetoes, having no legal authority, can not prevent your appointees from taking office. The appointive power is vested in you, and you alone.

Further comment is unnecessary. The personal tancor which pervades all of these documents is too apparent to require any demonstration.

MALCOLM W. NIVEN, Corporation Attorney.

This communication is short and to the point; severe without being abusive, and, though a stinging rebuke, to the presumptuous Besson, is above all dignified and gentlemanly in its tone.

In addition to this, Mr. Niven makes a point that has never been raised before. The appointive power is vested in the Council alone, and the Mayor has no more legal right to veto any appointment than the Pound Keeper or Night Scavenger has.

By way of celebrating the "Glorious Fourth," the Equitable Social Club, together with a few friends, formed a party of about twenty-five and put in a day at Saltersville.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDES.

An Actress Gets Drunk and Throws Herself into the River.

Some time ago, Gabriella Blohn, a young Swede, engaged herself at Gantberg's Theatre as a variety actress. On Sunday night last, she, in company with three young men, Wm. Schwartz and Fred. Adelburg, of New York, and Aug. Unger, of this city, drank a good deal of wine and beer, and towards morning went for a walk.

When taken to the station house she tore her clothing off, tried to choke herself with a towel and then begged the officer to give her a knife that she might kill herself.

Drowned From a Ferryboat. As the 8:30 boat from Christopher street was about mid-stream, Thursday evening, a well-dressed man, apparently about forty years of age, mounted the guards, and, before any one could prevent him, plunged overboard, exclaiming, "I'm a disgraced man."

Tried to Poison Himself. About simultaneously with the above occurred another attempt, in Third street, near River. Thomas Schaffer, about fifty years of age, who claimed to be a tailor, residing at 26 Stagg street, Brooklyn, was found by Constable Zimmermacher at the above mentioned place, suffering from convulsions, while an empty bottle close by, labeled "poison," too plainly explained the cause of the trouble.

Swindling Darkies. Two well-dressed darkies arrived in this city from New York on Monday afternoon. Entering the shoe store of Hugh Smiley, at 192 Washington street, they purchased a pair of shoe strings and then asked the proprietor to address an envelope for them.

Revising the Constitution. The Commission on the proposed revision of the New Jersey State Constitution, met at Long Branch on Saturday last, Mr. Congar presiding. The meeting was especially to consider the subject of city governments.

Caught at Last. The readers of the ADVERTISER will remember the case reported in our columns some time ago, of Mrs. McGeauley, of Grand street, who by reason of brutal treatment at the hands of her husband, Wm. McGeauley, was laid up for some time in St. Mary's Hospital.

Another Iron Ferryboat. The Hoboken Ferry Company has ordered another iron ferryboat to be built at Newburgh, and to be completed about January 1, 1882.

LAST SATURDAY'S ROWING. Opening Regatta of the Hoboken Rowing Association. The opening regatta of the Hoboken Amateur Rowing Association, took place on the Hudson River on Saturday afternoon, according to the announcement in the ADVERTISER of that date.

Yorktown Centennial. The guardsmen attending the Yorktown celebration in the fall will lose all identity as to regiment or company organization, as the battalion is to be uniformed alike by the State, and men will be selected from Cape May to the Delaware Water Gap.

THE MANDAMUS.

Counselor Job Lippincott's mandamus was not issued in vain. Hoboken and Bayonne have both paid up and are out of the scrape.

HUNG IN EFFIGY.

Public Indignation in Elizabeth at a Remark of Gen. J. M. Drake.

Very markedly and justly, the citizens of Elizabeth were filled with indignation at a remark made by Gen. J. Madison Drake, when he was told of the dastardly crime of last Saturday.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE. A Man Falls Fifty Feet With But Slight Injury. Last Saturday night an alarm of fire was sounded at a late hour, and with one of the companies that turned out in response to the call was Mr. Fred. Rowald, who, although not now a member of the department, invariably accompanies the firemen and always renders efficient aid in saving life and property.

Hasbrouck Under Bonds. George P. Hasbrouck, the paymaster of the laborers employed on the Ontario & Western Railroad Tunnel, was in Ripley & Coleman's supply store, on the Hill, Saturday, when Thomas Sullivan, who had been in the service of the railroad company, approached him and demanded his pay.

G. A. R. Notes. Many posts have organized Ladies' Auxiliary Corps, though but two have so reported to headquarters.

A Crazy Incendiary. Theodore Allers occupied, or at least did occupy, apartments at 110 Newark street. He has changed his boarding-house and is now in jail.

Assaulting an Officer. Last Saturday evening Officer Morris Stack, while off duty, and sitting with his family, was informed of a desperate fight that was going on at the corner of Third and Clinton streets.

Accident at Snake Hill. On Thursday morning, as the down freight train on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad was approaching the bridge at Snake Hill, the fastenings of one of the tracks became loosened and the train was thrown from the track.

Three New Corporations. Three certificates of incorporation were filed in the Hudson County Clerk's office last Saturday. The Live Stock Humane Transportation Company, with a capital stock of $2,000,000; the Florida Construction Company, organized for the construction of railroads in New York, New Jersey and Florida; and the Pacific Construction Company, organized to build vessels, wharves, piers and railroads for railroad corporations, with a capital of $100,000.

Wm. F. Somers, the bugler of Gen. Custer's command, lives in Elizabeth, this State. He was left on the field for dead at the time of the massacre and was found by Gen. Terry's dog. He is now receiving a pension from the Government and had his papers fixed up on Tuesday last.

Mr. John D. Wareing, of Wareing's Germania Garden, has been absent for some days, visiting the scenes of former days, and from all accounts is thoroughly enjoying himself.

George P. Hasbrouck, the paymaster of the laborers employed on the Ontario & Western Railroad Tunnel, was in Ripley & Coleman's supply store, on the Hill, Saturday, when Thomas Sullivan, who had been in the service of the railroad company, approached him and demanded his pay.

G. A. R. Notes. Many posts have organized Ladies' Auxiliary Corps, though but two have so reported to headquarters.

A Crazy Incendiary. Theodore Allers occupied, or at least did occupy, apartments at 110 Newark street. He has changed his boarding-house and is now in jail.

Assaulting an Officer. Last Saturday evening Officer Morris Stack, while off duty, and sitting with his family, was informed of a desperate fight that was going on at the corner of Third and Clinton streets.

Accident at Snake Hill. On Thursday morning, as the down freight train on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad was approaching the bridge at Snake Hill, the fastenings of one of the tracks became loosened and the train was thrown from the track.

Three New Corporations. Three certificates of incorporation were filed in the Hudson County Clerk's office last Saturday. The Live Stock Humane Transportation Company, with a capital stock of $2,000,000; the Florida Construction Company, organized for the construction of railroads in New York, New Jersey and Florida; and the Pacific Construction Company, organized to build vessels, wharves, piers and railroads for railroad corporations, with a capital of $100,000.

Yorktown Centennial. The guardsmen attending the Yorktown celebration in the fall will lose all identity as to regiment or company organization, as the battalion is to be uniformed alike by the State, and men will be selected from Cape May to the Delaware Water Gap.

The Mandamus. Counselor Job Lippincott's mandamus was not issued in vain. Hoboken and Bayonne have both paid up and are out of the scrape.

Equitables at Saltersville. By way of celebrating the "Glorious Fourth," the Equitable Social Club, together with a few friends, formed a party of about twenty-five and put in a day at Saltersville.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

At Wareing's Germania Garden there is as usual a good bill on the boards. The cast includes Mr. John Williams, Miss Lavinia, Charles Glidden, the Johnsons, Harris & Woods, Miss Lottie Grant and the Ronaldo Brothers.

Jersey City Heights. To-night Henkel's Pavilion Theatre will be filled with the friends of Miss Lizzie Hayward, to witness the benefit performance tendered to this popular actress.

New York. Bunnell still reigns and the Museum at Broadway and Ninth street still lives. New attractions are added daily.

The Professor, at the Madison Square Theatre, is undiminished in popularity, and will have a long run, notwithstanding the warm weather.

The Wilbur Comic Opera Company are in their third month in presenting "The Mascotte" at the Bijou Opera House, and the opera is finely rendered.

This is the eighth week of M. B. Curtis, as "Sam'l of Posen," at Haverly's Fourteenth Street Theatre, and he is still as popular as ever in his novel life picture.

The Windsor Theatre is now presenting a border drama, "Pioneer Abe, Mad Hunter of Arizona," and "Yankee Jack; or, The Buccaneers of the Gulf," to good houses.

THE STOLEN MONOLITH.

DEDICATED TO LEUT.-COM. GORRINGE.

Was it for those who own so fair a land, So fertile, broad and rich as this of ours; Where art and genius flourish, hand in hand, And have achieved almost creative powers— Was it for men whose mission is to guide The car of Progress in a mighty age, To watch improvement on its swelling tide, And write its triumph upon History's page— Meantly to flinch from Egypt's voiceless dead The old, time-honored monuments which stand— Each to her ancient glory closely wed— Like lonely sentinels above that land—

Gough and Spurgeon—An Affecting Incident.

A beautiful day it was for London as we rode together, chatting all the way. The history of the Orphanage is intensely interesting. The commencement was a sum of £30,000 to Mr. Spurgeon, from a lady to commence an orphanage for fatherless boys. All the money that has been expended has been raised by voluntary contribution, and the £30,000 is invested as an endowment. When we entered the grounds, the boys set up a shout of joy at the sight of their benefactor.

I asked, "What are the requirements for admission?" He said, "Utter destitution. Nothing denominational. We have more of the Church of England than of the Baptists. We have Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, Methodists—all sorts." After the boys had gone through their gymnastic exercises and military drill, I spoke a few words to them. Mr. Spurgeon was like a great boy among boys.

He said, "There are two hundred and forty boys—only think! How many pence are there in a shilling?" "Twelve." "Eight. Twelve times twenty, how many?" "Two hundred and forty."

"That's a penny apiece for each boy." "Here, Mr. Charlesworth," handing him a sovereign, "give these boys a penny apiece;" when a shrill, hearty hurrah was given, as Mr. Spurgeon turned away with a laugh of keen enjoyment.

"Will you go to the infirmary? We have an infirmary and quarantine; for sometimes the poor creatures we take in need a good deal of purifying. We have one boy very ill with consumption; he cannot live, and I wish to see him, for he would be disappointed if he knew I had been here and had not seen him."

We went into the cool and sweet chamber, and there lay the boy. He was very much excited when he saw Mr. Spurgeon. The great preacher sat by his side, and I cannot describe the scene. Holding the boy's hand in his, he said: "Well, my dear, you have some precious promises in sight all around the room. Now, dear, you are going to die, and you are very tired lying here, and soon you will be free from all pain, and you will rest. Nurse, did he rest last night?" "He coughed very much."

"Ah, my dear boy, it seems very hard for you to lie here all day in pain, and cough all night. Do you love Jesus?" "Yes."

"Jesus loves you. He bough you with his precious blood, and He knows what is best for you. It seems hard for you to lie here and listen to the shouts of the healthy boys outside at play. But soon Jesus will take you home, and then He will tell you the reason, and you will be so glad."

Then, laying his hand on the boy, without the formality of kneeling, he said, "O Jesus, Master, this dear child is reaching out his thin hand to find thine. Touch him, dear Saviour, with thy loving, warm clasp. Lift him as he passes the cold river, that his feet be not chilled by the water of death; take him home in thine own good time. Comfort and cherish him till that good time comes. Show him thyself as he lies here, and let him see thee and know thee more and more as his loving Saviour."

After a moment's pause he said, "Now dear, is there anything you would like? Would you like a little canary in a cage to hear him sing in the morning? Nurse, see that he has a canary to-morrow morning. Good-bye, my dear; you will see the Saviour precisely before I shall."

I had seen Mr. Spurgeon holding, by his power, sixty-five hundred persons in a breathless interest; I knew him as a great man universally esteemed and beloved; but as he sat by the bedside of a dying pauper child, whom his beneficence had rescued, he was to me a greater and grander man than when swaying the mighty multitude at his will.—From John E. Gough's new book "Sunlight and Shadow."

Six Months' Failures.

The number of failures in the United States in the first half of the present year is given by Dun, Wiman & Co. as 3,962. In the first six months of 1880 the number was 2,497, and in the corresponding period in the previous year, 4,018. The liabilities for the first six months of this year are stated to be $40,000,000, as compared with $38,000,000 for the first half of 1880, and $35,000,000 for the corresponding period in 1879.
