I honestly believe that terrible leading man, who, at the invitation of Hamlet, visited Elsinore, had his female admirers, and perhaps a tender missive from the girl of the period rested in his hanging pocket while he gurgled and champed through the first performance of the "Rat Trap." At all events, whatever the actor of ancient days might have knew with what a wearied, persecuted air their missives are received, and consigned to pockets, unread, to await their turn; if they only knew in what terms of derision the writers of such letters are mentioned-would they do it?

I suppose they would. The woman who was deeply touched by the golden bang of Rignold's wig, who lived on the curl of Lester's brigandish mustache, who fed her hungry soul on the unhealthy pallor of poor Montague's clerklike countenance, has been going into inky ecstacies over Osmond Tearle's

In those days the pigeon-hole marked "B,' at the back door of the theatre, got full girl realized the fate she was escaping to bursting with school-girl love-letters, to which, from custom and contempt, the young actor was indifferent. Among those letters, one season, the gentleman got daily a little pink note signed

Adele's character was read as plainly in those little notes as one reads that of Biddy in her certificate when she applies for the place of cook. She set forth her condition, qualifications and experiences. She was a school girl, an only and petted child. She was utterly ignorant, although just "finishing" at a prominent female academy. She had fortune and friends-the fresh spring morning of her life was fragrant with its flowers and vocal with its birds, but across that morning sky there shot the little cloud "as large as a man's hand," that breaks into tempest before the sunset. Adele went to theatres. In "captain "this and "young" that, she beheld the conquering hero, and the pink notes fell thick and fast into pigeon-hole "B" at Wallack's old theatre down in Broome street. She told him how she was "cherishing an idol;" how, before its shrine, her heart was on its knees and her soul bowed night and day. The satiated actor destroyed the first batch of letters half read; but one day a passing sentence enlisted his attention, and, as he scattered the note in paper dice along Broadway, he said to himself:

"Poor child. She's worth waking

"I have seen enough of you to-night, my charming friend, to wish, if I can, to do you a great service. In this house is a person I desire you to know. Will you enter?"

Adele would have made an affirmative answer if they had paused at the mouth of a cannon. Therefore, in a few moments more, she found herself in a small sparsely furnished room, beside a narrow bed, on which lay a woman near her undisguised admiration and more gushing epistolary labor than the ordinary evidently expected. As Mr. — withmotioned Adele to a seat beside her, and

> My dear girl, the gentleman who brought you here desires I should tell you my story. All the care and nursing my last days receive, I owe to his generosity, and, painful as it is to go over my sad past, step by step, it is a small return for all his kindness."

> And then the sick woman, with the grim lines of disease and the shadow of the great change resting on her white face, told that startled girl her life's his tory-a history identical with her own up to this point in the listener's career There was a happy home, the guiding relations, the solicitous friends, health youth and beauty, the romantic passion for a popular actor, the clandestine correspondence, and the meeting-culminating far differently from Adele's girlish adventure. The sad history was one of trust on one side, betrayal on the other of broken ties, a forsaken fate and blighted life. Adele's tears flowed fast as the dying woman pictured the lost home, the wretched consequences of a foolish infatuation, and the final scenes in her unhappy experience. The young as this poor creature's career was unfolded in trembling hands before her.

The sad story was ended, and before its closing Mr. ----, in company with a doctor belonging to the hospital, entered (for it was in the old New York Hospital Adele had passed this eventful hour). Again Theodore opened his mouth. He had become desperate. This time he shouted:

"I love you!"

CHAPTER III.

Corinda started as from a deep sleep. Instantly her hand—that hand which Theodore had so long coveted—was raised, and in another second it came down like a farmer's flail on that bull mosquito in the midst of his meal.

It was plain to be seen that Corinda was moved, deeply moved.

But she heeded not Theodore. This maddened him.

"You think I am poor!" he shouted. You spurn my advances because you think I am poor. But though I may be poor now, I have expectations.

Corinda suddenly became attentive. I am a Knight of Honor," continued Theodore; "and my benefit is payable to you!'

"Now you are talking business," said Corinda sweetly.

Up from his knees leaped the impetuous Theodore. He seized her in his arms and imprinted a mellifluous kiss on the ghastly wound that the cruel mosquito had inflicted on her precious nose.

It having been decided to hold no regular Grand Army encampment this year, the equipage, arms, &c. Governor Ludlow has camp at the Schutzen Park on September 12, 13 and 14, as has been previously announced in these columns. All the posts in the State have been invited, and there will be a large gathering of the veteran soldiers of the State. The Fourth and Ninth Regiments will participate in a sham fight on the last day of the ncampment. Governor Ludlow and staff. with a number of prominent generals of the late war, will be present and witness the maneuvers. The occasion will be one of unusual interest and every one should find time o visit the park during the encampment.

JERSEY CITY'S TAXES.

A Shot From the Anti-Monopoly Camp.

At the instance of Mr. Van Reypen, President of the Jersey City Board of Aldermen and a conspicuous member of the Anti-Monopoly faction, the Board of Canvassers appointed to fix taxable valuations in Hudson county, of which he is a member, adopted a Beach Haven, Brigantine Beach, Atlantic resolution a few days ago, declaring that the City, Absecom Beach, Pecks Beach, Learncause of the annual increase in taxation is owing to the increasing amount of property purchased by corporations, and, in conse quence, wholly exempt from taxation. Accompanying the resolution was the following table of "the smallest estimated values" of such property:

Pennsylvania Railroad.... Frie and Long Dock...... Delaware and Lackawanna lorthern Railroad lewark and New York lorris Canal and Banking Cnmpany lergen Horse Railroad Company..... Personal properties of the several cor rersonal properties of the several cor-porations.

Railroad properties at Harrison

Railroad properties at Bayonne

Railroad properties at Hoboken

Water front Hoboken (estimated) 15.500.000 20,500,000 $69,158,825 Total,

As the entire valuation of property subject to taxation in Jersey City, in which most of the railroad property is situated, has never exceeded about sixty millions of dollars, and is now less than that amount, this exhibit, if correct, demonstrates that the burden of taxation is borne by less than one-half of the property in Jersey City.

In a report of Mr. Chas. B. Thurston, these estimates, as regards Pennsylvania Railroad property are erroneous and exaggerated. He says: "First let me consider the estimate which fixes the value of the Pennsylvania Railroad's property at $9,273 000. In 1873, before the great depreciation in real estate, an estimate was made by persons interested in a movement similar to that of the Anti-Monopolists. It was headed by Hon. Jacob Weart, who seems to be a more care ful person than Mr. Van Reypen. In a speech made in 1873, Mr. Weart estimated the Pennsylvania Railroad property exempt from taxation at $6,693,000.

"I learn from Mr. Weart's published speech that this estimate was made for him Robinson, two experienced city assessors It included an estimate of property purchased lately in the Second, Third, Fifth and Sixth Districts ($700,000), being the property purchased to make the elevated freight tracks to Harsimus Cove. This was the last considerable purchase of real estate made by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. What has been bought since was simply enough to straighten the tracks in the Bergen cut, and, I am informed, cost about $100 000. But Mr. Weart's estimate of $6,693,000 had an ele ment of exaggeration in it. It was unofficial, gotten up to make as big a showing as possible, and it was too high by at least a million of dollars. It assessed railroad property at from $4,000 to $6,000 per city lot, where private lots adjoining were assessed at $2,000 to $3,000 per lot.

"Commissioner Yard's estimate in 1873 showed that the true value of Pennsylvania Railroad property was $5,860,875. How close Commissioner Yard's approximation was to the full values in 1873 will be apparent when I tell you that it is within $100,000 of the estimates made on behalf of the united New Jersev companies of the same property, in view of the sale by them to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. I need scarcely say that people who have something to sell do not usually deery its value."

PURE MILK.

Where it Comes From and How it is Delivered to Consumers.

The funeral took place duced almost without the assistance of the milk (in the city) is interesting merely as a Branch curiosity, to say nothing of its value per se for dietetic purposes. Rarely indeed does 'country'' milk reach the consumer without having first made acquaintance with the skimmer and the chalk barrel, and paid a lingering visit to the pump.

But there is pure milk to be found in this city, milk that is a stranger to pump, chalk and skimmer (the latter have never even been introduced) and this milk is within the reach of everybody. It comes from the Northrup Farm Creamery, in Sussex County, a county noted for its fine dairy farms and excellent pasture lands. The milk from this farm, unskimmed and perfectly pure, is bottled fresh from the cow, put in locked cases, packed on ice, and brought directly to the city. These bottles hold a full quart, are sealed at the farm and cannot be tampered with on the way, and are delivered at the door of the stomer at 8 cents apiece, fresh every day. The bottles being of transparent glass, the customer can always see just what he is buying, and the milk will show an inch of cream

Over 8,000 quarts are sold daily, and Mr F. D. Jackson, of 71 Garden street, who is the proprietor, has customers in New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, Jersey City and Hoboken, and also supplies a number of ocean steamers. Several members of the Faculty of Stevens Institute use this milk exclusively, and Prof. A. R. Leeds, who is a recognized authority on the subject, has de clared it to be the purest milk sold in athis eighborhood. The advantages of this method of delivering milk are evident to all observers, and if other dairymen were compelled to adopt the plan pursued by Mr. Jackson, we would soon be rid of most of the worthless stuff that is palmed off on the pubic as pure milk.

Jersey's Seaside Resorts.

Any one taking a moment's time to consider the subject, cannot fail to be struck with wonder at the number of summer resorts with which the Jersey coast is litterally lined, from Sandy Hook to Cape May, and the marvelous increase of the number within the past decade. "For miles along that breaker-beaten coast." that sometime bleak and barren stretch of sand, where king-crabs reigned in peace and undisturbed, the hand of man has wrought a wondrous change There's scarce a spot where standing now yo could not call a neighbor and be heard. The scene is one of life and gayety, and wealth and fashion mask the wilderness of twenty years ago. There flourish towns and cities, with mammoth hostelries and "bijou" cottages. In short, the list of fashionable and popular summer resorts cannot be equalled lee to prevent their hatching out before the rest of the fund of $20,000 was made by any State in the Union, and no coast in breakfast time. There are other points along the coast such as Bar negat, which are frequented by visitors during the summer season, but are left out of this list as they, at present, lay no claim to being fashionable resorts. It would be interesting information, if it could be obtained, to know how much money had been spent with in the past ten years in building and maintaining the various summer resorts along our coast, and how much is laid out at the hundreds of hotels and boarding-houses with which the villages abound.

The Rise and Fall of Grease

At about half-past five o'clock on Thursday afternoon, pedestrians in the vicinity of Washington and First street, and the resi dents and storekeepers of the neighborhood were startled by an explosion in the porkpacking establishment of C. Hirtler & Sons. No. 69 Washington street. A column of steam and hot grease rose in the air and the latter fell in a shower to the pavement, covering the sidewalk on both sides of the street with melted lard. Whoever was unfortunate enough to have been passing at the time was completely coated with the unsavory mess Ladies dresses were ruined, and men carried off enough lard on their hats and coats to lubricate the wheels of an old-fashioned oxcart. The fire alarm sounded and the companies turned out, but were not needed.

The top had blown out of a lard-rendering tank. Julius Miesmer, who was tending the ta: a. was badly scalded. His injuries are said to be more serious than has been reported, and the true state of the patient is kept back on account of the peculiar circumstances attending the accident. He is under the care of City Physician Helfer and has been removed to his home. The sidewalks. down to the corner of First street are still greasy, and the lard was even blown over as far as Bloomfield and Newark streets. The damage to the room and building is said to be $1,000.

Some sects of Christians believe that man is a responsible creature; but with all due reverence for the upholders of the doctrine of Free Agency, we respectfully submit that when a man is full of gin and beer he is not a responsible creature. It was at a late hour on Sunday night when we mounted to our 'sky parlor" to woo the drowsy. We had scarcely dropped into the partial oblivion of our first nap, when our sweet dream of the absent editor (?) of that "poster," yelept the Democrat (Rep.), was rudely interrupted by the discordant yells of a dozen "young men about town," dismally howling forth the miseries of "Genevieve," "Grandfather's Clock," and others from Moody & Sankey's collection. Maddened by the loss of sleep and the insult to Harmony, we felt around the room for possible beer bottles or available boot-jacks. Loudly and defiantly rang out the chorus of "We Won't go Home 'Till Morning" in answer to the first missile, when suddenly the noise from a dozen drunken throats ceased, and, as the echo from twenty-four flying feet died away in the distance, we heard a policeman remark sotto voce 'The lying villains will go home non," and with a sigh of relief, we dropped into the "arms of Murphy."

Burns added another ingredient, the boy knew not what, and, tearing off the label wrote a new one calling for a larger dose and put it on the bottle. Farrell took one dose and was seized almost immediately with cramps. He became very sick, and at his own request was removed to his home in this city, where Dr. Chabert attended him and brought him around. Farrell made a complaint before Justice Streng on Monday, and warrant was issued for the arrest of Burns.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

"Let There Be Light!"

Editor Advertiser :

In a very recent issue of your "enlarged and enterprising "organ," you alluded to a calamity which had occurred on a Canadian excursion steamer, through the mismanage ment or incompetency of the captain, where by over two hundred lives were lost, and nourning overshadowed the land.

We scarcely need to look beyond our own vicinity for similar very condemnatory pro ceedings on the part of some of those having the management of excursion boats which are too often crowded beyond their capacity. That no very serious accident has occurred is certainly not so much due to the efficiency of those in charge as to good fortune, or rather an overruling Providence.

It is not an uncommon occurrence for these overcrowded excursion boats returning from watering places to reach the dock at Fifth street late in the evening, and the landing of passengers effected in comparative darkness. and you may imagine the danger of accomplishing this over a gang plank at an angle of forty-five degrees, bending like a spring board in a gyrnnasium, and when is added to this the necessity of having to make a jump of say two feet in order to reach terra firma, and that too in the absence of wharf lights you will think with me that there is indeed danger and that the remedy should be ap-

Another most reprehensible practice should be promptly checked—that of men and boys bathing in the vicinity of our docks in full view of passengers. The arrest of a few such people would soon put a stop to this violation of all rules of deceney.

[Note-Our correspondent does not exagerate the facts in the slightest, nor does he overestimate the danger of landing hundreds of people in the manner described. The Fifth street dock, the upper end of which is partially covered with lumber, is about four hundred feet long and practically in darkness all night. The nearest lamp-post or gaslight is in the lower corner of Hudson Square Park. There should at least be a sufficient number of lights to make it safe for the excursion steamers and barges to land their gers. Who ever is responsible for this neglect will find it cheaper to remedy it by providing the necessary lights, than to pay for any damage that might ensue from an accident.

As to the swimmers alluded to in the letter we would refer the writer to our loca columns, where he may read of the arrest of a number of these offenders. Such arrests are of common occurrence at this season and the practice can only be stopped by making the penalty for the offense more severe.-Ed.]
