OUR CHICAGO LETTER.

A Through Route from Chicago to "Kingdom Come" for $100 --- Building Pullman City---Interesting Facts About the "Furthest City from Heaven."

CHICAGO, October 16, 1881. To the Proprietors of the Advertiser:

I still linger, but only for a few days after this writing. I am quite anxious to be on the move; but circumstances of a rather serious nature interfere just at present.

I thought a few of the Chicago happenings might prove interesting, and, in my perambulations, just took notes as naturally as if I was meandering around old Hoboken on election day. About the greatest sensation of the past week was a grand advertising scheme, introduced by A. J. Nutting & Co., the extensive clothiers of Madison street. It consisted of no less an undertaking than a grand balloon ascension by Prof. King and a party of amateurs, who have contributed $100 apiece for the pleasure of being "all among the little stars and sailing 'round the moon''-to say nothing of the excellent chances of never coming back. The immense air-ship went up on Thursday afternoon about 4 o'clock from the old White Stocking Base Ball Park, on the lake shore. Fifty cents admission was charged to witness the start, so I waited on the outside with about 100,000 other idiots until Mr. Ballon got above the fence, and consoled ourselves with the reflection that we were not half as foolish as the fellows who "went up." It was a grand sight, however, and revived very unpleasant recollections of the late Prof. Donaldson and young Grimwood, the Chicago Evening Journal reporter, who went up from the same park in 1873 and never returned. The reporter's remains were found some weeks later on the east shore of Lake Michigan; but Donaldson or the balloon, as you remember, were never heard from. There was a strong nor'easter blowing, which carried the aronauts in a southwesterly direction, and they were later heard from in the southern part of Illinois. The ascension was intended to be daily, so I am informed, but heaven only knows when the trip will be repeated, heaven alone ought to know since, when last seen, they were as near etherial space as they could conveniently get without blowing long way from heaven. The grand annual exposition was in full blast at the old exposition building, them in the wagon. The nature of their adjoining the base ball ground, and, as many grangers are attending the "balloon snap," it was not a bad idea of Nutting's. Hotels of all grades are crowded, and the city generally unusually lively. If I hadn't the good luck to have a claim to a snug little room on the West Side, I guess I would be camping out ere this.

A very funny sight for a civilized city presented itself a few days ago, and I prise, and candidly confessed he had think it worth recording. The North Chicago Rolling Mill Company, the heaviest concern of its kind in the United States, if not in the world, have one of their large works located some distance from the heart of the city on the north branch of the Chicago river. They have another large establishment on the south branch. At the former institution nearly 2,000 men are employed, and their salaries, ranging from $20 to $100 per week, foot up a very large sum semimonthly. The money is entrusted to two employes, who carry it in a buggy from the down town office. This buggy is followed by a wagon containing six or seven others, all armed with carbines, and, as I before stated, the sight, in a civilized community, is novel, to say the least. This precaution is taken owing to the collector of the Gas Company being relieved, a few months' ago, of a large sum of money.

ahead of New York, or in fact any other quietly without a word or look in the American city, in their arrangements for direction of their trouble. It was a great handling drunk or disorderly cases. Boxes not unsimilar, though somewhat results were as flattering as Lightning smaller, than the old style of English sentry boxes, are erected on prominent corners in every precinct. Wires from said boxes connect with the nearest police station. If a drunken man happens around and becomes too troublesome, a spring in the alarm-box is touched and in less than four or five minutes a long two-horse wagon, not unlike the New York postal wagons, ap- to-day are filling a large place in the pears and Mr. Boozer or Pugilist, as the case may be, is "fired" into the vehicle sans ceremonie and is a few minutes or at farthest, a few years after the grave later, behind the bars. Every precinct has closed upon their remains. We are has one or more such conveyances al- shedding tears above a new-made grave, ways in readiness. The horses are very and wildly crying out in our grief that fast and the "crew" of the machine not our loss is irreparable; yet, in a short slow by any means. They have just finished decorating, papering and frescoing their house, and there is not a job in the city to equal it. General Grant, on his last visit to Chicago, was invited to inspect the Patrol, but declined, stating he had seen everything in that line all over the entire globe worth seeing. Some of Chicago's magnates, however, insisted and assured the General that it would surprise and interest him. He submitted; the boys went through their drill, leaving their beds at the strike of the gong and entering their wagon, which is already hitched up. The same power that strikes the gong also pulls the bed covering up, and the men are necessarily reach a tire before the engines, and never fail. From the alarm to the time their wagon reaches the street, is something less than five seconds, and seems incredible to one who had not witnessed the performance. Gen. Grant expressed his utmost surnever witnessed such a performance. When asked by a friend how long it re quired the boys to get ready, he smilingly replied, "less time than I can tell FINE WINES AND LIQUORS, you," and he told the truth. Around the door of the patrol house used to be a great place for crowds to gather, and Captain Bullwinkle decided in a very quiet way to put a stop to this business.

poses to do---Probable Chances of the People's Approval.

The Commission appointed to prepare and uggest amendments to the State Constituon will only hold one more meeting, it is understood, which will take place on Novem ber 11th, when their views and suggestions will be presented to the Legislature for consideration. Should the recommendations of the Commission be approved by the Legislature of 1882, they will be submitted to the time he has performed his duties in the can be conscientious, and that is in the Legislature of 1883, and finally be voted on

During its deliberations the Commission has listened to many suggestions from the nost prominent men of all parts of the State. One of the principal questions before the 'ommission is the taxation of corporations. At present the large railroads pay direct to he State, taxes at the rate of one-half of one per cent, on all their property, and no municipality has the right of levying a tax on the railroads. The revenue thus derived from the railroads, over $500,000 per year, has for some time paid all, or nearly all, of the State's expenses. For the past two years there has been no State tax at all, as the inome from the railroads has been sufficient o pay all the expenses of the Legislature, the out, all this is to be changed. He wants to insert a clause in the constitution by which the cities and counties through which the reference to the purchase of a lot from railroads pass are to levy the taxes and the State have nothing to do with it. This, it is claimed, would be of vast benefit to the large rities, as Jersey City, Newark and Paterson, but in other parts of the State the reverse would be the case. The opposition to Mr. Abbett's scheme comes from the country districts, where it is characterized as one by which all the counties in the State are to be taxed for the benefit of Jersey City. If the resolution in the end, and you will have it will probably be killed by the Legislature, or by the votes of the people. Another question is the taxation of corporaions who have no property, but still have large incomes, in other words, an income tax. The settlement of this involves many serious questions, and is another of the Jersey City and Newark schemes. The question of the government of cities will probably be settled by a recommendation from the Commission that the clause relating to special special legislation in regard to cities.

Hobart, President of the State enate, will press his amendment that the Legislature shall hold biennial sessions instead of annually, as at present, and the Commission is likely to adopt it. The public generally favor this project, and it does not seem to meet with any determined opposition by office. Let us not have a repetition of measure compensated for the turmoil and the politicians. Taken as a whole, the work of the Commission will not be so fruitful as was anticipated, and the probability is that the old constitution of Jersey will not suffer "distinguished citizens" and visitors. The Jackson street sewer's outlet is the First street sewer. The Monroe street sewer was not intended for such purpose, and it would be an in-justice to the property assessed for its construction that such use be made of it. Besides, we have no right to put the city to such expense; the Sewer Fund is "for the cleaning and repairing of sewers and the cleaning, disinfecting and repairing of re-ceiving basins."

I return without approval your resolution of the h instant to issue an improvement certificate, in te sum of three hundred dollars, to Denis Eagan i account of the improvement of Madison street, tween Newark and First streets.

between Newark and First streets.

Mr. Eagan does not live up to his contract on this improvement. It was awarded to him August 39, 1880, and was to have been finished within sixty days thereafter; that is, the work should have been completed about a year ago; it is not finished yet. This makes, in addition to the inconvenience which it occasions the residents in that vicinity, increased and unnecessary cost in interest on certificates issued. Mr. Eagan does not pay his workmen. His agreement provides that unless he does pay them we shall retain from him for them. We have on file five claims of workmen on this improvement, amounting to sixty-eight dollars and eighty-eight cents, which are unsettled. These men, if their claims be just, must be paid.

Our business is our business solely, and I do no propose to allow anybody else to transact it, E. V. S. BESSON,

I return without approval your resolution of the 11th instant, appointing Judges, Inspectors and Clerks of Registry and Election for the Fourth Ward.

Complaint has been made to me, and I have reason to believe the same just, that your action in said appointments has not been in conformity with Section 174 of the Statute of Elections, which provides: "That whenever there shall occur any vacancy, from any cause, in the office of judge or inspector of election in any election district, the Common Council or Board of Aldermen of the city shall fill the same; but in all cases they shall provide that no more than two of the members of the Board of Election shall be chosen from the same political party."

In Love with Little Mario.

Celia Logan recalls the visit of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts to America, whither she once followed the once famous tenor, Mario. At that time the baroness was not a young woman, nor was she even handsome. She looked from thirty to thirty-four years of age. Her features were thick and irregular her complexion muddy and of thick texture. She was of medium height and exquisitely molded, having especially fine, rounded, sloping shoulders, over which she invariably wore a truly regal camel's hair shawl. She always dressed plainly in a dark silk or cashmere dress, and every night that Mario sang Miss Coutts sat in the stage box entirely alone. She was dressed so simply, her manners and appearance being so unassuming and the reverse of striking, that opera-goers of that day took little notice of her beyond an occasional surmise as to who she was. She would sit half concealed by the curtain the whole performance through with a wrapt ex pression on her face, as if she were fairly enchanted by the tones of the heavenly

The performance over, she would stand a few moments as if waiting for the recall, and as Mario would near the stage box she would bend on him a look full of admiration, which he returned, while Grisi's black eyes flashed fire on them both. Then Miss Coutts would glide away to her carriage.

Miss Logan continues: To those behind the scenes in those days their romantic story was well known-the ties that kept Mario fast chained to Grisi, even when he had wearied of her, and would gladly have exchanged his lyric honors to become the husband of the rich Englishwoman who had come so far not to lose one note of that heavengiven voice. Apart from his divine gift of song, Mario was one of the handsomest men ever born, although he was Flour, Grain a trifle undersized. Grisi, too, was a perfect type of a lovely Italian-eyes and hair like his, dark as midnight, and in person beautifully formed, although at this time she was stout and somewhat | Cor. Clinton and Second Streets. passe. Although the trio seemingly on the most friendly footing, Miss Coutts admiration for the great singer being supposed to be merely that which she might feel for any wonderful artist, such as she has lately shown for Irving, the actor. Grisi was terribly jealous, and it was said at the time nothing but the fear of losing Mario altogether caused her to put a restraint upon herself. I remember, however, one night there had been a domestic scene between the singers, and Grisi came to the theatre in a pent up fury. The opera was Norma. Grisi, as well as Mario, was in splendid voice and they seemed as if trying to outdo each other. At length Grisi reproaches her betrayer. Stretching forth her arm to the fullest extent she pointed directly to the box in which the lone lady sat, and thundered forth: "Thou yet shall feel the anguish which has broken this poor heart!" Mario turned his back on Grisi, and Miss Coutts drew further behind the curtains. The words being in Italian were not generally understood by the audience, but the verdict was that a more splendid piece of acting had never been given by any lyric artist. The Trip to Europe. To make a trip to Europe was once considered quite an achievement on the part of a private citizen of this country, but has at length become one of the most ordinary circumstances imaginable Elaborate books are no longer written about it, and the society man who has visited Europe is no longer a temporary here. It is much cheaper to cross over and pass a few months at Paris or Vienna than it is to spend the summer at an Eastern watering place. During the first six months of 1880, 16,650 saloon passengers sailed from New York for trans-Atlantic ports, and the statistics for the corresponding time of the present year indicate an increase of 2,269. The exodus during the past two months has been heavier than for the same time of last year, and it is estimated that the total number of passengers will aggregate 32,000 before fall weather sets in. May and June seem to be the favorite months chosen for the ocean voyage. 'That great benefits are derived by the nation at large from this disposition to observe life and civilization in older lands there is little question. Many who go return as frivolous as they went, and perhaps more insipid. The majority are improved by the expedition. The contrast between Republican institutions and the aristocratic institutions of Europe is a favorable one. On the other hand we are far surpassed in art, culture, antiquities, and perhaps inefficient government. There is much to learn ; provincialism receives a severe blow, and lib- the capacity of his old place, has removed eral ideas are engendered. A nation of travelers can never be far behind the rest of the world. The only unpleasant feature of the business is that the average price of tickets each way is $100, and the thirteen steamship companies that carry these 32,000 passengers are all foreign corporations. The mere expenditure for ocean fare represents the sum of $6,400,000. Presuming that the average expense of each tourist for the whole trip amounts to $500, the total expense rises to the dignity of $16,000,000. The probabilities are that European trips annually drain this country of at least $20,000,000, for every touristusually endeavors to bring back all the plunder he or she can safely get through the wide portals of the Custom-house. An offset exists, however, in the considerable sum of money annually brought into this country by European immigrants. On the whole the disposition of our people of means to travel abroad in such unusual numbers is not to be severely deprecated. The real cause of regret is, that there are no lines of American steamships to partially accommodate the tourists.
