John Stevens about 1804.

A large strip of high land, to the southeast of the mouth of the Weehawken tunnel, known as Deas' Point, is being graded to a level with the tunnel. This upland belonged to the Brown estate, and was leased by a couple of truck farmers, whose roomy dwellings are occupied by Swedish boarding-houses for the laborers. Seventy-five horses are used in carting the excavated earth, and stables for them have been erected on the ground.

There is a fleet of pile-drivers at work marking out the pier-line in front of Deas' Point, where it is proposed to build ferries, etc. A little below the Point is the duel ground, where Captain Deas, still living, at the age of four score years, owned property and lived on the hill overlooking the fatal plateau, which was only six feet wide and eleven paces long. It could only be approached by boat, the bluff, twenty feet above the water, being reached by a rickety flight of steps. The spot was marked and sheltered by an old cedar, which stood there until a few years ago." The ball from Alexander Hamilton's pistol passed through a limb of this tree, twelve feet from the ground. At the first fire Hamilton instantly fell, and his pistol was discharged almost accidentally, going wide of where Colonel Burr was standing. Burr was indicted for murder by the Grand Jury of Bergen in 1804, but the indictment was quashed by the Supreme Court, The St. Andrews' Society of New York erected a monument on the spot where Hamilton fell, to his memory, which was removed when the railroad cutting was begun. By some unaccountable means the tablet escaped from the possession of Captain Deas, but was subsequently found in a New York junkshop, from whence it was released by a member of the St. Andrews' Society and presented to the late James G. King, at Highwood.

"This marble slab, which originally supported the equestrian statue of George III, in Bowling Green, New York, is now, trodden by pedestrians on the south side of Wayne street, below Jersey avenue, Jersey City, where it is lodged in the pavement, and may be recognized by the holes made for the hoofs of the King's leaden charger, which was melted Wolcott of Connecticut Before his fatal encounter with Hamilton, Burr had foughta duet with John B. Church, who said he believed the rumor was true that was set afloat in New York State, that, for legislative services rendered, the Holland Company had cancelled a bond held against Burr for $20-000. They met at sunset, and the ball from Church's pistol passed through Burr's coat; Church apologized, ending the affair. On this occasion Burr's coolness was put to a severe test, as his second, bringing the wrong pistol with him, hammered the balls in with a stone and Burr was obliged to draw them out and load the weapon himself. In the Dewitt Clinton and John Swartwout duel, the latter insisted on fighting until he could stand up no longer, having been shot in both legs by Clinton. I return without approval your resolution of th 22d ultimo, to have partition in No. 1 Engine Hous repaired. As we have since determined to sell the building, there is no occasion for this expense. E. V. S. BESSON, The following communication from his Honor Mayor Besson was presented, read and, on motion of Councilman Quirk, received: MAYOR'S OFFICE, | HOBOKEN, December 1, 1881. To the Council : I return without approval your resolution of the 23d ultimo, on the report of the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, confirming the action of En-gine Company No. 1, in electing Francis McNabb as a member of said company. As Engine Company No. 1 is not in active service; having resolved to do no further duty, it is not proper that their action in this respect should be recognized. E. V. S. BESSON, Mayor. The following communication from his Honor Mayor Besson was presented, read and, on motion of Councilman Quirk, action on the same was laid over one week:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, | HOBOKEN, December 1, 1881. To the Council: I return without approval your resolution of the 9th ultimo, to advertise for proposals for the erec-ion of a fire alarm telegraph, with bell-striking at achievent

tachment. I presume it to be your intention that the tele-graph in question shall centralize as the fire alarm on the bell, in the tower, in the rear of the house of Hose Company No. 3, on Park avenue. If I be correct and the intention carried out, it would be money wasted. That bell, so far, has proved a failure. It was designed to be the sole fire alarm of the city; it cannot be heard over the
