CHANGES IN PUBLIC LIFE.

Contrast Between the Length of Pub lic Service at Home and Abroad.

The deaths of Colonel Forney, in Philadelphia, Colonel Stebbins, in New York, Dr. Shelton McKenzie, and other noted in the last few years how many changes characters, of late, have caused the editor of the New York Herald to indulge in some reflections as to the changes in think of no one who was then conspicupublic life and among public men in the ous in the executive department of the United States during the past few years, and in contrasting the length of public service of foreign statesmen with the comparatively short career of our own to have few remaining representatives. public men. He says:

"The first thought that occurs to us is the short tenure of the careers of public men in America as compared with statesmen in other nations, especially in England and France. We think of Mr. Gladstone, Lord Beaconsfield, Sir Robert Peel, Lord Russell, Lord Palmerston and other English statesmen. We see their public life extending over two and sometimes three generations. Lord Palmerston, who was Cabinet Minister during Napoleon's career, lived to fight the Russians in the Crimea and to direct England's course through the American war. Mr. Gladstone, whose friends would demur to his being called an old man, has been in public life for almost half a century. The threads of English politics, so far as they run through history, repeat the same names from year to year. Young men go into public life, grow up and die in the service. In France we have, notwithstanding the many changes in the political relations of that interesting country, practically the same experience. M. Thiers, who was a Minister under Louis Philippe, became, a generation later, President of the French Republic, and during all that time was a conspicuous figure in French politics, either in the opposition or as a defender of the administration. M. Guizot began his career as an opponent of the first Napoleon and continued in public life for more than half a century. Marshal MacMahon was a supporter of Charles X., a general under Napoleon IUI. and President of the French Republic. In Russia we find examples of the same kind in Princes Gorischakoff and Ignatieff, and in Spain in O'Donnell and Espartero.

A Sunday's Fight.

The vacant lot in the rear of the St. George Cricket Grounds was the scene of a disgraceful "prize fight" on Sunday afternoon last, which, happily, however, did not last long, as a policeman came down on them just as the crowd "took a hand in." The principals were Martin Fergus, of Fourteenth and Willow streets, and Patrick Judge, of 96 Clinton street. Both young men are employed on the Oil Docks, at Weehawken.

There had been "bad blood" between them for some time past, and when they met in a saloon Sunday afternoon, their quarrels were renewed; indeed they were only prevented from fighting it out in the bar-room by the interferance of friends. They arranged that the matter should be settled by a "square prize fight." The party repaired to the above mentioned vacant lot, Edward Finn was chosen referee and the two men commenced hammering each other. After the fourth round, Judge was terribly disfigured and failed to come to time. In the dispute which arose as to who was the winner, the whole crowd engaged in a high as $2,000,000.

On Saturday last a few members of the newly-organized British Foot Ball Team, of New York, met on the St. George Cricket Grounds and played a couple of practice games under strict Rugby rules. The sides were: Reds-Messrs. Vaschel, Inman, Eyre, Orr, Vesey, Simmonds and Dr. Howe. Blues-Messrs. Rankine, Kessler, Hill, Tomlinson, Harvey, Crossley and Roberts. Mr. Clapper ton, Captain of the new club, umpired the games. The sides were well matched and some fine individual playing was shown on both sides. The game was not quite as exciting as the one we are familiar with, which, though not differing materially in rule from the strict Rugby rule, is played in a different style, and is to us more interesting. Perhaps when we become more familiar with the English play our interest in it may increase. We would like to see a match between the English team and Yale or Princeton. Each side secured a goal and a "toy" on Saturday.

The Tammany General Committee for the anti-Kelly Democrats in New York may glean a little cold comfort.

There are vacancies in the Ministership to Austria, Chili, China, Germany, Russia, and Paraguay and Uraguay. So many important positions in the Diplomatic corps were never before vacant at the same time.

Mayor Fiedler, of Newark, has been nominated by the Democrats to fill the vacancy in the Assembly caused by the death of Breummer. The district is Republican, but Feidler is a strong candidate and has a fair chance of winning.

Ex-Auditor Palmer, of Newark, has been giving some further information of his forgeries and says all defaulters ought to be tried by court martial and shot. Like the fellow who invented the whipping machine, he should be the first to give his plan a trial.

The motion for a non-suit will be argued before Judge Knapp one week from to-day, but his decision will not settle the case, as it will be taken to a higher court by either party.
