THE TALE OF A SERENADE.

The Embryo Genius of Four "Coming," Musicians Nipped in the Bud.

[FOR THE ADVERTISER BY MILLES.]

Once upon a time, in the city of Hoboken, there was an epidemic of tunefulness, a musical craze. Now, it came to pass that four worthies, called, because of their several characteristics, Belisarious, Nimrod, Quatreyeux and Cartridge, being filled with sharps and flats, as it were, resolved to spend their tunefulness upon some person, place or thing.

A happy thought struck Nimrod. Lo! there was his girl, "a maiden half divine." Could they not serenade her? Would she not smile upon their budding genius, and, perhaps, invite them in to have a smile afterward?

The others laughed in flendish glee at the thought of inflicting a serenade upon any one, and readily assented to Nimrod's proposition.

piece. The Cartridge imported, at vast expense, a whistle made of choicest tin, from the wilds of the Bowery. Quatreyeux and Belisarius depended solely upon the talents Nature gave them.

The days came and went, the hour drew nigh when the serenaders would serenade; but, before starting, Quatreyeux, of the mighty mind, addressed

"My tuneful chums, we have worked together well and faithfully for our present purpose, and it is all but attained; there remains only its accomplishment. This is not done without danger and the possibility of it becoming necessary for us to be sot upon by 'twelve men good and true,' but even though the deadly boot-jack should fly, and the stinging hair brush be abroad; though the air should be thick with the slipper and the blacking box and the hair-oil bottle, let us hold firmly to our purpose-and the best side of the fence. Until then! Let us away to glory."

Filled with ardor and ham sandwiches behold them on their way to the classic shades of Pig Alley, where backs the palatial direlling of Nimrod's loved one. The rain is falling gently upon their devoted heads; the slush is squashing softly under their advancing feet; they are variously and picturesquely arrayed. cow pasture. Don't you see the cows Quatreyeux has discarded, for the time being, his gold-bound specs, and replaced them with a pair bound with iron and steel, through which he glares bale- John's. There they stand in the water fully. Nimrod and the Cartridge are all day long, slashing the mosquitoes tastefully dressed in shining rubber and with their tails, while their heads are stout canes. Belisarius, the graceful under the water eating grass. It is a sprite, is unarmed, save with a saw-like strange thing, indeed, to see droves honor and a tin whistle.

After the first piece (Die Wachtamrahtgesungen) is finished, a solo by Nimrod is in order. He has just poured out the first line (Howcanibeartoleaveth-e-e) when a calm female voice comes with cutting distinctness through the musicburdened air "I don't know I'm sure; with becoming meekness. Please tear Boys, what shall we do? If we go, Nimrod, finding his voice.

"But the glory of having faced the music in spite of overwhelming odds nay, the landlord would be compelled to against us," says Quatreyeux.

"Let us unburden ourselves of the melody that is within us."

"We have been insulted. Revenge! finished!"

So they sing until the whole neighborhood is aroused and their fate is almost sealed, when they reach the end of their performance, and then the music all is ground, and

"Silence like a poultice comes To heal the blows of sound."

There is a moment of suspense. Suddenly Quatreyeux with an eye to future profits, proposes to gather up the articles thrown to them in lieu of bouquets, and strike a balance with the expenditures. This is the result:

tjacks. 50 les hair oil, slightly damaged. 75 shels of goal, in chunks. . . . 1 00

'ink," through which he endeavored to look endwise, "boys, we have not succeeded as well as we might have. I fear that the musical taste of this community is not sufficiently developed; but we must e'en grin and beer it," and they

The after-life of these worthies has been uneventful. Belisarius still goes it blind. Quatreyeux has retired to a lonely den and given himself over to meditation and receipts for the removal of hair oil. Nimrod has endeavored to tie a rag around his wounded affections by taking to himself a new love. The poor Cartridge, alas, has become but an empty Nimrod spent a vhole week fashioning | shell, nought remains but the brass, and a flute out of the barrel of an old fowling that is ever present. So they are, so they were; let them rest.

A SUBAQUEOUS COW PASTURE.

A Fish Story About Amphibious Cows in Florida.

The St. John's River is a queer river, says a Florida correspondent. It is about 150 miles long, from four to ten miles wide, and averages about a foot deep. In the centre, of course, the channel gets to be quite deep. Sometimes it has a depth of forty feet. Its current runs about a mile a day. I presume it would take about 150 days for a cork to float from the source of the St. John to its mouth. It is salt for fifty miles from its mouth, and brackish for 100 miles. It is full of shad, catfish, frogs, toads, eels, alligators and crawfishes. I don't know of any fish or reptile that don't live in the St. John's River.

"Call this a river?" I said to an old alligator killer who was fishing for catfish off the pier at Palatka. "Why, it's a great bay. It's no more a river than Lake Erie is. Lake Erie runs faster than the St. John's River."

"Thar you's wrong agen; stranger. She's neither a river nor a bay; she's a standing all over the river?"

The man was right. All the cows in Florida seem to congregate in the St. of cattle feeding along a river with They arrive at the place appointed, the their heads under the water. They Cartridge draws forth his instrument of torture, but Nimrod discovers, to his horror, that he has left his cherished under when the grass lays deep, and flute at home, so the Cartridge becomes keep them under sometimes two minsole accompanist—a place he fills with utes. They get to be as amphibious as the crocodile. A submarine cow pasture is an institution only enjoyed by the State of Florida.

Wages.

A false basis of labor and wages is that which assumes that a man must be paid but I think I could bear the separation for his work, not the market price, but whatever is necessary to make him and yourself away at once." Nimrod wilts, his family comfortable. "A fair rent," and his song stops. He is dumb, for it says one of the Irish philosophers of this is lovely Mary Ellen who has spoken. agrarian sort, "is one which enables a tenant to live and thrive." The trouble our purpose is not accomplished; if we here is that there is no fixed standard. stay we become but a mark for reproach A quick and intelligent tenant, with no and chunks of S. & C.'s coal;" so speaks family, could pay a ten pound rent, while a lazy and stupid tenant with a family of ten children could pay no rent whatever pay him fifty pounds a year to stay and 'Stay be it then," remarks Belisarius; impoverish the land. The theory that wages should be "whatever will make a man comfortable" is every way pernicious; for it puts a premium on idleness revenge!" shricks the Cartridge, wildly; and improvidence, and a penalty on skill "let us sing loudly, longly, horribly, till and economy. They cannot drill in the dark, and it is rather unreasonable to expect them to pay any more than they do for the pleasure of being "sojer boys."

The city is under slight expense for the maintenance of the militia, and the least she can do is to pay its little gas expired terms. bills. Happily Hoboken has no work for the militia at present, and we hope it will be long before the fighting qualities of the Ninth are put to the test.

But it must not be forgotten that if we had no militia its services would be needed. The very presence of the "boys in blue" in our midst, ready at any moment for active duty, makes such duty comparatively unnecessary. In other words, their presence is, in a measure, a guarantee of peace. A single act of mob violence, where there is no militia, might cause the loss of more money than it would cost to keep a regiment for fifty years.

The short Democrat was upon his pins in twinkling, and stood like a gladiator in striking attitude, balancing a heavy chair over his head. Perhaps we were in the back room taking notes-and perhaps not. At any rate, we see the whole tableau before us as plainly as it appeared to the small but select audi citizen of Hoboken, one of the managers of ence that night. We didn't crawl under table, but we decline to give any reason for not doing so. There stood the two adver saries, the T. R. towering over the S. D. A Monument to Alexander Hamilton

HOBOKEN, February 11, 1882. Editor Advertiser:

Can you inform me through the columns of my friends. Hoping to hear from you, I re- for N. Johnson, on River street.

Sincerely yours, JAMES O. SEXTON. 320 Bloomfield street.

The spot where the celebrated duel was ought was indicated by a monument, surounded by an iron railing, but both have long since been removed. The monumen consisted of a white marble tablet 34 inches ong by 36 1-3 inches wide and 2 1-3 inches thick, on which was inscribed the simple fact that here the soldier had fallen and that the tablet was placed there in his memory.

It was erected shortly after the duel by the St. Andrews Society, of New York, of which Hamilton, just previous to his death, was President.

The marble and railing were both removed about sixteen years afterwards, after having been much mutilated by curiosity-seekers and relic-hunters. It then disappeared and was not found again until three years later, when Hugh Maxwell, then President of the St. Andrews Society, discovered it in a New York junk shop and presented it to James G. King, the New York banker, who had about this time purchased the Deas estate, upon which the duelling ground ground is located The site still belongs to the family, Mr. James Duerr, a son-in-law of James G. King, owning it, and the tablet is also in his pos

This was covered all into the soft stone by visitors. When the bank was cut away about fiftee years ago, the stone was dislodged, and what was left of it—a piece about as big as a flour barrel-was taken up and placed on the edge of the Palisades (King's Bluff), which rise above the spot on the west, and if tumbled over the cliff would fall almost directly on its old resting place. It is told of Lewis, the miser millionaire who died in Hoboken a few years ago, that he claimed to have been an eye-witness to the duel when he was a boy. He was frightened when he saw the shots fired and ran away. There are many interesting stories and traditions connected with the vicinity of the old duelling ground, and at ome future day we may relate them.

Assemblyman Casey is interesting himsel in the erection by the State of another monu-ment to Gen. Hamilton on the old site, and will shortly introduce a bill in the Legisture with that end in view.—[En.

FIRE-PROOF BUILDINGS.

Mr. John Reid's Testimony as to the Construction of the Park (Potter) Building.

Our townsman, Mr. John Reid, it appear vas a builder before he was a reven lector. On last Tuesday he was called upon to give testimony at the Coroner's investigation in New York in relation to the recent fire in the Park building. Mr. Reid was a member of a building firm in 1857, and was presen during the construction of the burned struc ture. He was examined very particularly in regard to its construction, and described the timbering, which was heavy and well secured At the Church of the Holy Innocents, cor- The beams throughout were 4x14 inches, with trimmers and headers two inches thicker The framing was thoroughly secured with bridle irons, as called for by the fire laws. struction, 6:40 A. He also proved that the building inspectors M.; matins, 10:00; litany and miserere, and were regularly on hand during the time of choral celebration, with sermon, 10:30 A.M.; building, and had everything done which

Mr. Reid was also examined as to whether the building, at the time of its completion ranked as a good building of its class. He answered that there was no better building of its class in New York; that no newspaper M.; evensong, 3:30 P. M.; evensong, 7:30 P. at that time had a better building, and many of them not near so good, and that to-day at least two daily newspapers occupied buildings not near so good as the Park building He said that the Times had made the first attempt at having one of the so-called fireproof buildings: that it was built at the same time as the Park building, under the superintendence of Jack Trimble, the well-known theatre builder. One of the jurors inquired of Mr. Reid what he meant by using the words "so-called fireproof buildings." He said he did so purposely, because he believed there was no such thing in New York as a really fire-proof building ter of Past Worthy Chief Templar Silas War- He was asked what he thought a fire-proof ner, of Success Lodge, died after a brief ill- building was. He answered that a fire-proof ness. Funeral services will be held at the building was one that would be fire-proof in First Baptist Church, Third and Bloomfield the same sense as a fire-proof safe. A safe is filled with papers and books and comes through a conflagration with its contents undamaged. If the same safe is pierced with openings to correspond with the openings in a building, the contents would be at once destroyed. The same reasoning would prove that a building, with the openings necessary in all buildings, would be destroyed and also that its contents would be burned in a general conflagration of the neighborhood. This was proved in the cases of the Chicago and Boston fires, when not a single building, fireproof or otherwise, withstood the flery element. The only superiority was that one of the so-called fire-proof buildings would not burn so quickly as the ordinary buildings with wooden floors and beams. The Coroner remarked that the escape of the Times building proved that Mr. Reid was wrong in his theory. Mr. Reid replied that the fortunate escape of the Times building was owing to the fact that the wind was blowing a furious gale at the time and carried the fire and heat away from that building. If the wind had been blowing in an opposite direction the Times building would not have stood an hour. 'Let no one deceive himself," said Mr. Reid, "in relation to fire-proof buildings. Such a thing as an absolute fire-proof building does not exist. The very material gets destroyed. The granite blocks in the Park building went to pieces in the fire just like burnt lime under water. Nothing stands fire so well as brick.'

Miser Lewis' Will.

The Lewis will case, which has been in the courts for nearly five years, was brought up again on Tuesday in the United States Circuit Court, at Trenton, in the form of a demurrer, filed against the claim of the city of Hoboken. This claim is that the bequest of Lewis of his million and a half to the United States Government is invalid and as there is no next of kin the money should go to this city. The claim is made by Andrew Miller, the Poormaster, in behalf of the city. The ease is set down for argument in March.

The second annual surprise of the Gramercy Social Club was given at Lyceum Hall, Thursday evening, and was one of the pleasantest of the season. Miss Pauline Bose was the young lady "surprised." The affair was a success in every particular.

Dennis O'Reardon, a Jersey City man, was arrested Monday for drunkenness. He at first refused to give his name and address, but finally gave both, and said that he was employed on the Weehawken tunnel. A night in the station house sobered him and he went home after paying a $3 fine.

On the arrival of the steamship Westphalia from Hamburg last week, the U.S. Customs authorities made an unusually thorough search for dutiable goods among the effects of the passengers and erew. Over $700 worth of small articles, in the way of liquors, segars, atc., were discovered.

The evening of readings at the First Pres byterian Church Tuesday night was a very pleasant entertainment. The music by the choir was good, and some of Mr. Roberts' readings were very amusing, insomuch that if there is any truth in the adage, "laugh and grow fat," there will be an alarming increasin avoirdupois in some Hoboken families

The second masquerede ball of the Schles-wig-Holsteinishen Verein took place at Weber's Winter Garden on Thursday even-ing. The attendance was large, the supper

Wm. Senior was before the Recorder Monday in a suit brought against him by his wife for abandonment. It seems that he has a mother-in-law who was an expert in the use of her tongue, and the young man was obliged to leave the house; his wife "tlave unto her mother." He is a man of good habits and is fond of his wife and child. The Recorder required him to furnish a bond of $300, to supply his wife with $4 a week for her support.

The Rev. George G. Carter, of New York, will preach in Trinity Church to-morrow evening. This will be the first of a series of sermons to be delivered in that church by clergymen from New York. Some of the members of the Alumni Association of Stevens Institute, have presented the college with a large, handsomely framed photograph of Prof. Rankin, who was the foremost mechanical engineer of this century. The picture, which hangs in the reception room of the college, is enlarged from an engraving. Usually a photograph enlarged from an engraving brings out the imperfections, the lines of the latter looking coarse when magnified. It is therefore difficult to get any satisfactory result from such work, as the expression of the face is generally ruined. This picture of Prof. Rankin, however, is a wonderfully true copy of the original engraving, retaining the expression perfectly, and is quite a triumph in the photopraphic line. It is the work of our towns-

Odd Fellows' Hall was crowded on Wednesday evening on the occasion of the sixth annual ball of the A.O. H., and if there had been any more present the dancing could not have been carried on. There were thirty-five sets on the floor before supper. The balcony was full of visitors who took no part in the festivities beyond watching the dancers. Many beautiful toilets-and faces-were noticed. Prof. Mulligan admirably sustained his reputation for good music, and the supper was sumptuous. Mr. Thomas Sloyan, Chairman of the Reception Committee, devoted himself exclusively to the guests, and to his efforts are due, in a large measure, the success of the evening. The officers of the association headed by the genial President Anthony Mullen, and aided by Messrs. Jas. McMahon and Jas. Finn, managers, were also untiring in their exertions to enhance the pleasure of their friends. The sixth annual ball was one to be remembered. It ended about 5 A. M.

K. of H. Concert and Hop.

Owing to the storm Thursday night, the audience at the Knights of Honor concert was rather light, but the affair passed off very smoothly and pleasantly. The singing of Mr. Fred. Harvey was, of course, the feature of the musical entertainment and, though it was very fine, he appeared to have a slight cold and was not in very good voice. He sang "Cujus Animam" (Stabat Mater), "The Sailor's Grave," and an encore to the former. He was enthusiastically applauded. Mrs. Schoenfeld, Mrs. Collins, Mr. W. J. Livingston and Mr. W. J. Collins were also encored. There was some excellent singing by a fine quartette composed of Mrs. Collins, Miss Livingston, Mr. Collins and Mr. Lewis R. Mc-Culloch. Mr. Henry Firth Wood gave some good recitations, which were heartily enjoyed by the audience, and he was obliged to do more than the programme called for. Mr. Charles Adolphi was the accompanist. The hall was cleared about 11:15, and dancing octhose present were Grand Dictator Dickinson, of Paterson, and Grand Reporter Mayhew.

A Book That Had to Be Sold.

A week or two ago a bright and chatty young woman called at a house on Cass avenue and endeavored to make a sale of a book entitled "Home and Mother." The lady of the house received her in the usual ten degrees below zero fashion. and, utterly refusing to look at the book, she said :

"I haven't any money, and I know that my husband wouldn't pay for it." "It is a book highly spoken of by the loesn't even treat them civilly when they call at his office." "Is that so?" mused the girl, and when she left the house she, for some reason or other, started right down The lady of the house might have forgotten the incident in five or six years but for a sort of climax. When her hushand came home to dinner he handed her a copy of "Home and Mother," with

"Yes-ah-but, Henry, a girl was here trying to sell me this very book not over two hours ago," stammered the wife. "Was, eh? Well, she probably got discouraged, sold out to a second-hand dealer, and has skipped the city. Is dinner ready !"

Dinner was ready, but somehow the wife had no appetite, and since that she has fits of abstraction, glances suspiciously around at times, and has been en going in and coming out of secondhand bookstores.—Detroit Free Press.

The Way to Stop a Newspaper.

You have an undoubted right to stop a newspaper when you feel so disposed, upon payment of arrearages. Do not hesitate to do so on account of tenderness of feeling for the edite Don't suppose he would stop buying sugar of you, or meat, clothing, dry goods, etc., if he thought he was not getting his money's worth, or desired to patronize some other concern? And when you discontinue a paper do so manfully. Don't be so spiteful as to throw it back to the postmaster with the contemptuous "I don't want it any longer! "and have "refused" written on the margin, and have it re-turned to the editor. No gentleman ever stopped it that way no matter if his Branch office opposite the Monashead is covered with gray hair that should be honorable. If you do not longer wish to receive a newspaper, write a note to the editor like a man, saying so-and be sure that the arrearages are paid. This is the way to stop a newspaper.-Englewood Standard.
