THE LEWIS WILL CASE.

A Partial Settlement by Special Act of Congress --- New Facts Presented

The Lewis will case, after "dragging settlement of the estate has been effected net proceeds of the estate has been paid is, under the decree of the Circuit Court be applied to the reduction of the national debt. An important feature of the case for the petitioners was a deed of trust executed by Lewis in 1858, by which he covenanted that the property which he might die possessed of should go to his nephew, to the disposition of part of the property among his relations. He advised Martin Catheart of that deed and invited him to come from Ireland to America to avail himself of it, and Catheart carres according to the city of Hoboken," endorsed "Proposals for official printing."

trust and destroyed it.

It is contended that the deed was not revokable, but that it operated on the property held by Lewis at the time of his death and is binding upon his executors by way of equitable estoppel.

This question was not passed upon by This question was not passed upon by the Judge of the Probats Court of New Jersey (the Ordinary), who admitted the will to probate, nor did he give any opinion as to the validity and legal effect of the bequest in regard to the reduction of the national debt. That has been disputed and legal opinions have been given to the effect that it is inoperative. An appeal was taken from the decision of the Ordinary to the Court of Errors and Appeals of New Jersey, but the case being compromised it was not brought up for argument.

The case presented a legal question of great importance in will cases. Various other claims and assertions, equally absurd, have been hurled at the Council from time to time, so contradictory that it is next to impossible to tell what this brilliant team do believe, and we doubt that they know themselves.

Their last effort at driving the Council into recognizing the claim of the ring organ to a perpetual monopoly of the printing is as crazy as the rest. They assert that there can be no question of the fact that "all the business transacted by the Council since last March is illegal," because the Council failed to designate an official paper during that month. This recognizes the fact that an official paper existed for the year ending last March, which must of course have been the ADVERTISER, since that paper was "designated" last year, and the Democrat (Rep.) was not, for if the Democrat (Rep.) was the official paper up to last March it must be so now, and to be so must have held over since its last designation in 1878, and consequently holds over still. Which ever way it is twisted, that argument is knocked in the head. Men of only ordinary perceptive faculties cannot follow the train of reasoning (?) by which Barney and sion went to Trenton yesterday and his rotund scribe arrive at the remarkable conclusion announced with such a flourish, but even the most obtuse can perceive the fallacy of it and "not half try.'

The anxiety (?) expressed by the ring organ in regard to prospective difficulvegetation would rise up and call them ties arising out of this "open violation of the law"-i. e., the failure of the Council to designate an official paper last March—is groundless, and neither the city work are hereafter to be investi- Council nor these self-constituted guardians of the public weal need pass any

The scheme, as set forth in a circular addressed to the citizens of Rockland. is to commence the fight against the local monopoly, and a boat is now running from Haverstraw, Nyack and Yonkers to New York, landing at the foot of Franklin street, carrying passengers at ten cents a head. Packages of eleven tickets for $1, will be furnished. The "Shady Side" is the boat now in use and the managers declare that five more boats are ready to run should the traffic require it. They announce their intention of running boats all the way from New York to Albany for twenty-five cents, if the first undertaking proves successful, which they feel very confident will be the result. It is also claimed that the society has abundant means at its disposal to insure the faithful fulfilment of the promises made at the outset. The scheme appears a hazzardous one, but the managers of the new line deserve success for their honesty of purpose and the boldness with which they take up the fight in this very practical manner. Firemen Fishing.

The members of No. 1 Engine Company with their friends, making up a party of about forty, went on a fishing excursion last Sunday, to the Fishing Banks, in a steam tug. There was plenty to eat and drink on board, the fish were on the bite, and altogether the affair was very successful and the boys" report having had a glorious time. No official record was kept of the number of fish caught, but the total catch was large, no one hooking less than a fine "mess." The Chief Engineer and his assistant were both of the party, and among the friends who joined in the excursion and the sport were Collector McMahon, Councilman Valleau and other prominent city officials. They returned to Hoboken at 6:30 in the evening well satisfied with the day's sport.

Two Bad Scalp Wounds.

53 Newark street, while out riding with her husband, last Sunday evening, was thrown from the buggy, which collided with a waggon near the gas house, and sustained two very severe scalp wounds. Dr. Elder, who was called, conveyed her to her home. Upon examining her injuries, he found that her scalp had been torn from the scull on both sides, each wound being several inches in length and extending back and half way round the head. He could get almost his whole hand under the scalp on either side. He found on one side several glass beads which had been crushed from her bonnet and become imbedded in the wound. On the other side. the temporal artery had been severed, and the doctor had some difficulty in controlling the hemorrhage. With the assistance of Dr. W. Tell Kudlich, he tied the artery and sewed up the wounds, and the patient is now doing well.

A SEWING-GIRL.

"Now, girls, this won't do!" said Madame Molini, pouncing in upon the six pale sewing girls, like a wolf into a flock of "No, it will never do in the lambs. I don't pay you all exorbitant world! wages to sit and fold your hands, like fine ladies. Miss Sedgewick, we are waiting for that lavender silk polonaise. Lucy Lisle, why do you not go on with those buttonholes? Miss Fox, you will be so good as to change your seat from the window to the middle of the room at once."

"But, madame, I can't see there to lay on these fine bias folds," pleaded Miss for?"

"You mean you can't see the carts and carriages in the street, and the type setters in the windows opposite," retorted Madame Molini, whose true nomenclature was 'Mullens," and who had been a milliner's apprentice in the goodly city of Cork, before she set up on Sixth avenue as a French modiste.

"I stopped just a minute, madame, with that bad pain in my side," she said, begin ning to stitch away with eager hands.

'If you're sick," said madade, severely, you had bette. go home and send for the doctor. While you are here your time is mine, bought and r id for."

red that she had not rough sill gimp to trim the polonaise and was waiting for

"Not enough," shrilly repeated madame not enough! I measured that trimming myself, and I know that there is enough. You may just rip it off again and sew it on higher up, and more economically; and I shall deduct this morning's lost time from your wages. What's that, Flora Fay, the mode-colored silk dress? Finished? And where are the two and a half yards which were left?'

ame," said Flora Fay, an innocent, blueeyed young girl, recently from the country, who stood in an unconsciously graceful attitude before the fat and florid dress-shortly retorted Madame Molini, as she unfastened the parcel, abstracted the piece of glistening, uncut silk, and whisked it away upon a shelf. "Two yards and a half isn't much, but it is better than nothing." Flora Fay opened the innocent blue eyes

"What is she going to do with it?" she asked Miss Fox, in a whisper, as madame rustled off to scold the errand boy for put-pered Miss Fox, laughing. "It's what she cabbages. "Cabbages?" repeated Flora, in amaze

"You will, when you see the mode silk made up into a sleeveless basque for madame," said the other, "trimmed with the gimp that was left from Mrs. Aubrey's dinner dress, and the pearl fringe from Mrs. Ossett's white damasse ball costume."

"But you don't mean," said the breathless Flora, "that madame takes the silk that is left from the customers' dresses ? "

"Goosie!" cried Miss Fox, "don't talk nonsense any longer. It's what every fashionable dressmaker does, and ----" called madame. "Miss Fay, answer it at once!

Drake, plunging headlong into his subject, after the fashion of men in general-" my sister's dress. She is to be married next week, and some of her friends coaxed her to have her dress made hers. Miss Fortesque-she's only my half sister, you know," in answer to Flora's look of questioning surprise; "but she's very nice, and is going to marry well, I hope." "It's the mode-colored dress," said Flora,

And presently madame came smiling in with the bill, and the dress folded neatly in white pasteboard box, and Captain Drake departed with a dim idea that Madame Molini perfectly comprehended the art of high charges.

Miss Fortescue herself came the next day. She was a young lady not lacking in quiet resolution. She knew her rights, and was prepared to defend them.

to Miss Fox, who was in attendance in the reception room, "It is not made up in it be a partnership?" the dress. I had purchased enough for a new waist and sleeves, and it is not all here." "You must be mistaken," said Miss Fox.

with an aspect of polite impassibility. "The bias puffs and folds cut up the material shockingly, and-" ened face, twitched the two yards and half of silk off the shelf, folded it into paper, and handed it to Miss Fortescue muttering something about "a mistake made by some of the young women," and the young lady departed, a little dubious as to whether or not the fashionable dressmaker had intended to cheat her.

Miss Fox colored and bit her lip. Madame Molini, with ominously dark- be square, upright, grand.

She had hardly closed the door behind her, however, when Madame Molini turned upon poor Flora Fay, with a scarlet spot glowing in each cheek and lips closely compressed.

"Young woman," said she, "you are discharged. "Discharged ! " echoed Flora. " What "I want no one in my service," said madame, "who is too conscientious to fulfil my wishes. You have intermeddled unwarrantably in the matter of that silk, and I repeat that you are no longer in my employment." So poor little Flora went home crying, with a vague comprehension that she had been discharged because she had spoken out the truth.

It was nearly a fortnight afterward that Captain Drake noticed the absence of Miss Fay from the table at the boarding house. "Is your little blue-eyed lodger ill, Mrs. Dodds?" he asked. "I don't think I have seen her of late." "No, she's not ill," said the landlady. That is to say, not exactly sick. But she will be if she don't look out. She is boarding herself, Captain Drake, on bread and crackers, and such like, poor dear, and wasting away like a little shadow, because she's lost her situation at that dress-making place, and don't see her way clear to an other. And she won't run in debt, she says, other. And she won't run in debt, she says, not even for a meal of victuals. Ah!" the good woman added, "I can remember when she was the pet and darling of the old folks a sunbeam. "But how did she come to lose her place?" asked Captain Drake. And Mrs. Dodds, who liked to hear the sound of her own voice, told the whole "It's a shame!" cried the captain. " Just what I say myself," nodded the landlady. And the next day, Miss Fortescue (who was Mrs. Arkwright now) came to see Flora

Fay. "It was al' my fault," said she, with affectionate vehemence, "that you lost your situation-and, oh, if you would only come and stay with me, and help me with the sewing for my new house, I should esteem it such a favor! Would you, please?"

" Are you quite sure that I can make myself useful?" said Flora, a little hesitatingly. "Yes, quite," said Mrs. Arkwright.

And, in the sunny atmosphere of the bride's pretty home, the young country-girl seemed to expand into a different creature. Captain Drake, the most devoted brother in the world, came there nearly every day; and little Flora, all unconscious of her own feelings, began to watch for his daily visit as a heliotrope-blossom watches the sun.

Until at last, there was talk of another long voyage to Japan, and then Flora grew pale and nervous again.

"I-I have been here long enough," she said. "If I go to the Exchange Bureau, they will perhaps tell me of a new situation. And I need a change."

But Captain Drake went straight to the root of the matter. "Flora," he said, "are you unwilling that I should sail to Jeddo?" "I always had a horror of the sea." whispered Flora, hanging down her pretty Flora came in-Harry Drake, the young head. "But, of course, Captain Drake, you

"Yes, of course," he answered, absently, and when he had gone, Flora shed a few all ov quiet tears over the table linen she was hemming for Mrs. Arkwright. "How bold and unmaidenly it is of me," she thought, "to let myself care for a man who does not think twice of me! If he had cared one iota for me, would he not have said so then?" But the next evening, at dusk, Captain

Drake sauntered in with that swinging gait of his, as if he were still treading the deck of an outward bound vessel. "Dou't run away, Flora," said he, as the girl caught up her work and prepared for a precipitate retreat, "Did-did you want to speak to me?"

she faltered, with downcast eyes. "Don't I always want to speak to you. Sit down, Flora," said he, "and hear what I've been planning."

"Now it is coming," thought Flora, with a sick feeling at her heart. "He is going to be married, and he has come to tell me

"I have decided to give up the seafaring business," said Captain Drake. "Have you?" fluttered Flora, faintly. 'I am so glad."

"And I've bought a farm in Connecticut," he went on; "the old Berkshire farm, Flora, where you were born and brought up. I'm going to be a farmer." She looked at him, the rose and lily following each other across her cheeks, "Oh," she cried, involuntarily, "If could only see the dear, old place once more!"

"But I won't go there to live," said the captain, determinedly, "unless you'll go there with me, Flora, as the farmer's wife! What do you think of it, little girl? Shall And when Mrs. Arkwright came in, the papers were all sealed, signed and delivered, and the partnership was a foregone conclu-"I don't know how I shall succeed as a farmer," said Captain Drake to his sister; but if little Flora here is only with me, there's nothing in all the world that I haven't courage to undertake." And when Mrs. Arkwright took Flora's
