SCHOOL BOARD DEMANDS APOLOGY FROM RANIERI

The secretary of Hoboken Board of Education Tuesday demanded that First Ward Councilman Rudolph Ranieri offer a public apology to board members for his recent allegations that $60,000 in school funds is not accounted for in the current school budget.

Louis De Pascale, the board secretary and one of six candidates for mayor in the city's May 11 election told newsmen, "It's unfortunate that a politician (Ranieri) with selfish motives attempted to point a finger of suspicion at members of the education board who are top professional and business leaders of our community."

During recent weeks of the political campaign, Ranieri, who is sponsoring three at-large council candidates in the election, has repeatedly questioned De Pascale about $60,000 in the budget that Ranieri claims is still due to contractors for building the city's high school. De Pascale contends the $60,000 is accounted for in damages due to the school board for expenses incurred due to contractors not finishing the school on schedule.

De Pascale, charging Ranieri with playing politics in reference to the $60,000, said it is both his and board members' opinions that Ranieri is grossly unfair to all board members involved. He pointed out that two city officials on the board of school estimate are Ranieri and Councilman-at-large Stephen Mongiello, the later also a candidate for public office in the election.

"Let's set the record straight and clear the air once and for all on Mr. Ranieri's 'phantom issue' concerning the $60,000 withheld as liquidated damages," De Pascale said. He then submitted an itemized statement, showing "where the funds in question are accounted for in the current school budget."

REMOVING MYSTERY FROM CAPITALISM

A generation or so ago if it had been forecast that by the year 1965 more than 17 million people would own shares in American corporations few would have believed it. And the forecast that more than a million more people would join the ranks of shareholders in 1965 alone would have been received with equal scepticism.

For, in former days, stocks and the securities industry at large were subjects of mystery, even of suspicion, to most of us. Wall Street was a place where men of large means bought and sold shares. There was no room in it for the average citizen.

The change has been revolutionary. According to a New York Stock Exchange study, the median income of shareowning families is $8,600. About half are in the $5,000-to-$10,000 bracket. In number, housewives lead the list. Shareownership has become the province of the many, not the few.

This trend has been given an accurate and fortuitous name -- people's capitalism. And it is a vitally important bulwark to the free enterprise system. The family which owns stock has a direct personal interest in keeping that system alive and strong. It is a family which will turn deaf ears to the blandishments of those who would cripple and even destroy it. And it is a family which has an understanding of the fundamental fact that economic freedom is an essential corollary of all the freedoms.

It is confidently expected that shareownership will grow to much greater dimensions as the years wear on. America will be the stronger, in all ways, because of this.

STILL BASIC

The editor of the Hanover, Kansas, News has performed a public service by recalling certain principles of government laid down by Abraham Lincoln a century ago. He commends them to every legislator in this country, pointing out that they were basic then and are still basic.

Here are some of them: You cannot bring about prosperity by discouraging thrift. You cannot strengthen the weak by weakening the strong. You cannot help the wage earner by pulling down the wage payer. You cannot keep out of trouble by spending more than you earn. You cannot build character and courage by taking away a man's initiative and independence. You cannot help men permanently by doing for them what they could do and should do for themselves.

In this pseudosophisticated age, numbers of people apparently look on beliefs such as these as outmoded corn. A welfare state, they argue, can take care of just about all human problems and relieve the individual of the responsibility of taking care of himself. What they forget is that the result of this philosophy can only be a nation populated by faceless statistics, totally lacking in backbone, purpose and ambition. History tells us what happens to nations that follow this doomed course. The end is oblivion.

INDIGESTIBLE PIE

There's nothing small about the Port Authority's plans for a World Trade Center in Lower Manhattan -- the plans are for two office buildings higher than the Empire State Building.

But it would bulldoze 300 businesses and 30,000 jobs out of existence, destroying the city's largest retail electronics market in the process.

What's more, the Port Authority would be using its public condemnation powers for what is basically a private real estate development, including a shopping center, hotel restaurants and other businesses unrelated to world trade or port activities.

Finally, those two huge towers sound like a pie in the sky idea, because they would dump 10 million square feet of new office space into a market which is already suffering from an oversupply of space.

So WMCA supports the proposal of Senator Thomas Mackell, of Queens, for an investigation. The Legislature ought to find out just whether the city needs this kind of World Trade Center building. Broadcast 8 times.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS AND PRETTY KITCHENS will surely be yours after you make a brilliant collection of cheerful pot-holder mitts. We're showing you the delightful smiling pumpkin of the Hallowe'en mitt but the leaflet also gives you directions and diagrams for two more festive holiday designs.

AND . . . USE YOUR IMAGINATION!

Once you have the basic mitt cut and sewn you can do any number of designs by doing a little artistic drawing of your own or tracing designs from books or magazines. A lovely leafy green mitt strewn with pastel flowers would keep a bit of Spring in your kitchen all year round . . . a black mitt with gold and silver metallic "BOIL-TEX" rick rack might be a charming touch for serving those very special candlelit dinners . . . and a mitt to match the kitchen of a friend could be a much appreciated hostess gift. Or, if you don't feel up to being original, use the other designs which we've already done for you: the red, white and blue Fourth of July mitt and the heart strewn Valentine potholder.

EASY TO FOLLOW INSTRUCTIONS

We've worked everything out for you in the way of cutting and sewing directions and the trim is so easy--simply iron on "BONDEX" after doing the motifs with an extra touch of rick rack. Free leaflets are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Needlework Editor of this newspaper along with your request for Leaflet PPE 821.

JOURNEY TO THE STARS

While Mariner IV speeds through space on its way to a rendezvous with Mars, six experiments are being carried out. If nothing else happens this historic flight would still be considered a success, too, it has already established a few records. One of them is a new record for communications as it passed a distance of 66,000,000 miles, the previous record established by the Soviet Union's Mars probe in 1962. Mariner IV is doing exceedingly well, all spacecraft systems are working normally, temperatures are within predicted limits and the predicted strength of the radio signal at Mars is well above minimum.

The Ionization Experiment is a success. Measurements made by the ionization experiment on radiation entering our solar system from galactic sources are higher than reported during the Mariner 11 mission of Venus in 1962. This experiment weighs 2.9 pounds and is located on the spacecraft's mast.

Another well performing experiment is the Cosmic Ray Telescope. The (CRT) has detected a back scattering of solar cosmic rays caused by their interaction with magnetic field irregularities in the vicinity of the Mariner IV spacecraft. The crt is a solid state instrument designed to discriminate between protons in three energy groups. It will detect and measure cosmic rays by type, energy level and direction of motion.

The Trapped Radiation Experiment conducted by Dr. James A. Van Allen, discoverer of the Radiation Belt around the Earth, and three associates, reported sharp increases in the radiation monitored by this instrument on Jan. 8 and 12 and Feb. 5, recorded the best measurement yet made on the outer regions of the Van Allen belts, and is in excellent working condition to fulfill its primary objective of detecting trapped radiation, if any, at Mars.

The Magnetometer Experiment. Although Mariner IV may have passed near the Earth's magnetic wake last Jan. 28 to Feb. 2, preliminary data indicate that no change in the interplanetary magnetic field was detected by the magnetometer aboard the spacecraft. The spacecraft was 12 million miles from Earth at that time. Large irregular fields were observed, however, on Feb. 7, two days after the occurrence of a class two, or medium size, solar flare. The sudden jump in the interplanetary field can be correlated with observations made by other instruments aboard the spacecraft.

The Solar Plasma Experiment. On the first day of the mission to Mars, Mariner IV detected the shock wave produced by the "solar wind" on Earth's magnetic field at a greater altitude than this phenomenon has ever before been observed. It is believed that the density of solar plasma outside of Earth's orbit decreases as the distance from the Sun increases. Mariner 11 showed that the density increased as the spacecraft neared the Sun. Further data is needed before conclusive analysis can be made.

The Cosmic Dust Experiment. Mariner IV spacecraft was struck by at least 77 micrometeorites during the first 3100 hours of its mission to Mars. There is evidence, however, that the number of hits is increasing as the spacecraft moves away from the Sun. Particle detection on the Mars mission can be compared with only two recorded hits by micrometeorites on the Venus-bound Mariner 11 in 1962 during approximately the same period of time in interplanetary space. Because the asteroid belt lies farther from the Sun than the Earth, it has been suspected that cosmic dust distribution outside the Earth's orbit would be significantly more dense than between Earth and Venus.

Cancer Is Curable But $$$'s Are Needed

The following letter was received by this paper from Gerard A. Marra, Sr., General Chairman of the Cancer drive in Secaucus:

"As General Chairman of the American Cancer Society, Secaucus Division, for the past 20 years, I appeal to the people of Secaucus who have always been so generous to continue your personal interest and support of the 1965 Crusade Cancer Fund Drive. We need your contribution now, more than ever before.

This fund money is allocated for research in medical schools, education, care and proper treatment of cancer victims and maintenance of cancer clinics in hospitals in Hudson County.

"The American Cancer Society reports the cancer cure rate has been rising throughout the nation during the last generation. Doctors are united in the opinion that the fight is no longer hopeless. The miracles of recovery are within the reach of all who need help - but doctors cannot do the job alone. You are half the battle.

"As cancer-cured movie actor John Wayne reported, 'I caught it early. Get a check-up from your doctor and be as lucky as I was. Your very life is in your hands.'

"Please give when the cancer volunteer worker knocks at your door, or mail your contribution in the return envelope you receive in the mail.

"May I assure you of my sincere appreciation and the grateful thanks of the Secaucus Division of the American Cancer Society for your kind generosity and support."

Enrollment in District of Columbia public schools is now 37.6 per cent negro.

Plan To Eat In The Northern Valley

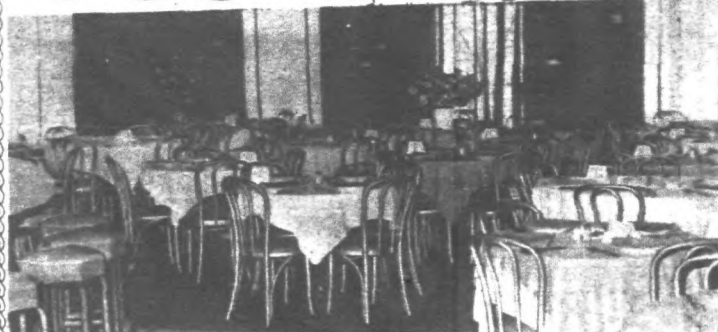

By M.M. (Bill) Yarrington

MOTHERS DAY in the Northern Valley is bound to be a great event. This is the time of the year when nature lavishes her freshness and color upon the landscape. It is the time of the year when you'll just want to take the family out for an enjoyable day, because no matter where you roam, the beauty you will behold will make the event more than worth while. There are fine eating establishments, as you will see by this page, and you can arrive at a time to suit your convenience. Just a word of caution, however.

Reservations are highly necessary in this popular area. At Easter, the fine restaurants in the Valley were swamped by those who wanted to eat in the area, and as a result, almost every place reported that they had to refuse almost as many patrons as they were able to handle. So don't let Mother be disappointed on her day. Have a family conference, using this page as a guide. Decide where you want to go, and the time, and call in. It will make the day complete.

WHAT ABOUT EDUCATION?

THOMAS GANGEMI

Do YOU want better educational facilities for Jersey City? You can get them by supporting the candidacy of former Mayor Thomas Gangemi. He's the man who authorized the construction of four new public schools in Jersey City during his 27 months as mayor. He's the man who proposed a salary schedule that was designed to attract qualified teachers into the city school system -- and keep them here. He's the man who only a few days ago took the position that vocational and technical high school facilities are desperately needed in the city, and said he would apply for federal and state construction aid for such facilities immediately after his election as mayor.

* * *

The federal government has made $2,609,000 in aid to vocational education funds available to New Jersey communities this year under an act of Congress that was implemented last year. The state itself has appropriated an additional $1 million for vocational facilities.

* * *

And still the Whelan Administration conveniently ignores the availability of these funds. Jersey City, the second largest city in the state, has made no attempt to obtain a share of this money. The Governor has called for construction of more vocational facilities. But Jersey City hasn't even asked the state to survey its needs in this area so it can get in line for the money. Other communities have beaten us to the punch, and this money is limited. We have surveyed the need for these facilities and found it to be so pressing that the administration's failure in this regard amount to outright neglect.

For instance: Forty-two per cent of the children who enter high schools in Jersey City drop out. This drop out rate is expected to continue upward until it reaches 65 per cent by 1970, unless something is done to offer these children education in the trades and skills they will need to get jobs.

Only five per cent of those who graduate from our high schools go on to college. Only two per cent complete college courses. On a national level, 14 per cent of children entering high schools go on to college, and six per cent finish.

* * *

These figures tell an impressive story. The great majority of our children are not pursuing academic careers. Yet there are practically no facilities in Jersey City to train them for useful and productive careers in the trades, the mechanical arts or the technical skills. This year, our city could be in line for a major share of some $3.9 million in federal and state construction help. Next year, that amount will go even higher-- to $5 million. And still, the present administration make no move.

Mr. Snitch He's Here--
He's There--He's Everywhere

A LOCAL political leader was approached by a young legal beaver looking for advancement. The young mouthpiece was adamant in his request. However, the oldtime leader was doubtful about this young man's integrity and he said: "Young man if you promise solemnly that you will not be tempted and steal when you get to the state capital, I'll see what I can do for you and try to help you get there." The young man who had more sense in his diploma than in his head replied with all the dignity of a beggar "Sir, I go to the capital absolutely unpledged, or I don't go at all." This remark not only floored the boss but as he walked up the steps of city hall he soliloquized: "I'm sure that boy would change the spelling on this building to City H-A-U-L."

THE FORSYTHIA was in bloom. The yellow bell-shaped flowers indicated early springtime. But, at this particular house in a nearby community, the forsythia bush was the mailbox for the butcher boy. He was in love with the lovely lady of the house and he left the love notes in the bushes. She cherished the notes but there was one drawback to this affair of the heart. The lovely one was married and her husband was paying the meat bills. The butcher boy is pleased with his accomplishments. But he has better beware because the husband is now interested in gardening and he is planning to trim the forsythia bush. He will surely find those billets doux and the butcher boy will then be mince meat. Let this warning suffice - stick to your cold cuts and forget the hot romance butcher boy.

MEMORIAL -In London, England, Mrs. Rosina Hardy, a wealthy 63-year-old widow, left $56000 in her will to build a memorial "in memory of my cat, Dritterling." When alive Mrs. Hardy build a three room cat house for her pet and had it completely furnished. Her pet would only eat the best calves liver and fresh fish. Actually, the pussy is ill ever since the widow passed on and it looks as though the memorial will not be ready in time for the pussy before it takes its final catnip. Believe it or not, the catnip was a nip of the best imported brandy. Talk about leading a dog's life. In this case, it was better to meow through life.

Lost - In Chicago's Loop, Antanas Barzdaitis, 77, walked up to a policeman and asked to be taken home - but he didn't know where home was. He was carrying two loaves of bread, a World War I draft card and $5,339 in cash in his pockets. He told the cops a half a loaf is better than none and he would give the loaf and a half away if they found his house for him. As for the cash, he said he carried that just for an emergency such as this. If it is carfare, his home could almost be on the moon 'cause that dough could carry him a lot of miles.

THE FATHER was complaining that this "young fellow" comes here almost every night. The mother opined that it was better that they-the kids-use the parlour instead of the park bench. Finally, when the old man was about to squawk, the young suitor approached him and said: "Sir, your daughter has promised to be my wife." The old man looked at him and sneered: "It's your own fault - what else did you expect after hanging around here night after night?"

HE'S A shoeshine kid. Yet, he is more than that. After he polishes the shoes, especially of those under the weather, there is always something missing. Nobody but nobody suspects the kid. He is so young looking and has such an honest face. However, he is far from a kid. He is a young midget and is well trained in the art of going through the pockets of his drunken customers. Last, week an alert tavern owner caught on to the act and warned the kid "Keep out." How did he know? Well, this bartender used to be with a carnival and remembered the midget with the sleight of hand tricks. He was run off the midway from his habit of keeping his hands warm in other people's pockets. This is how he got the shoeshine kid idea. But now he is moving to greener pastures. No more shines in these parts.
