and look around you. Come on, look!! Now, what do you see? Things sure do look differ-ent, don't they? They even feel different!! Like in the high school, there's that fancy new wallpaper in the front lobby and all that fresh paint on the walls with its own "color coordinated" flecks. And what about those lockers that seem to keep springing up? No doubt you've even noted a brand new radio in the cafeteria.

What about outside, in the "real world?" Well, as you've seen, the A & P on St. Georges' Avenue is out and Shoetown and Friends are in. As bad as times are, however, people aren't down to eating their shoes, are they? Of course not! Instead, they all ride down the street to the new Mr. Burger, where "Big Daddies" and business are both booming.

and business are both booming. But enough of these "minor" changes, because something really big is going on, something completely different from what you have seen or will ever see again. You can feel it spreading over this land like a whirlwind, plucking up everyone in its path. Folks in other parts of this country call it a "Bicentennial," but around here, people just say "Happy 200th Birthday, America!"

What do you think of when some-one says the word "Bicentennial?" Do you picture the Liberty Bell, the Amer-ican Eagle, or perhaps "Mom and Apple Pie?" Well that's just it!! The Bicentennial means different things to different people, a situation which certainly makes for both an interest-ing and deeply individualized celebra-tion of the occasion. If you look real ing and deeply individualized celebra-tion of the occasion. If you look real close, though, you can find unity an all that diversity, because in what-ever they did, from fire hydrant paint-ing to finger knitting, the people of Linden displayed the "grass roots" heritage they share with all the Amer-ican people ican people. It brought about a drastic change in attitude, a need in people to be themselves and to exhibit their unique brand of independence. Diversity has become the name of the game, and, suddenly, everyone wants to play. So lets . . .

student life: SPORT and SPIRIT

Few realize that behind the sweat and strain of an athlete's tough exterior lurks an artist. Like all means of personal expression, sport is an art form, and the sportsman, in skillfully coordinating bone and sinew into a concert of harmonic motion, brings us the graceful beauty of athletics.

Competative by nature, man feels the need to vie for the top spot, and the athlete packs a lot of power behind nearperfect symmetry in order to get there. To even consider participating, however, requires a rare combination of ability, confidence and selfdiscipline. Heavy physical and mental demands eventually do take their toll in the form of injury and personal anguish in defeat.

But why personal? Because, when one gets down to it, every team effort, whether by rule or reason, is really a solo performance for the individual. Winning becomes not only the team objective, but a personal one as well, and there's no better feeling than that of victory when it's one-on-one.

All That Rain Couldn't Dampen Our Spirits

Cheerleading co-captains Jackie Peters and Tammy Kirkup announce and applaud the arrival of the 1975 Football Squad.

Strained by the excitement of the evening, Tiger Mascot Mark Gallo relaxes while observing the students he has been chosen to represent.

Water, water everywhere, with no end in sight. Then, suddenly, the familiar roof-top patter stopped, and Linden began pulling itself together after five days of torrential rain. Linden fans, however, did not allow the rain to get them down; promptly at 7:00 P.M., beneath clearing skies on that soggy night of September 26, the gym bleachers filled with over 400 exhilarated football followers. Without a doubt, the annual Kick-Off Dance and Pep Rally went off as scheduled.

The opener with Cranford, postponed till Monday the 29th, allowed the submerged Cranford playing field to dry out. Students, charged by the news that the 2:00 game meant a short school day, loudly welcomed the cheerleaders, who began the program by clapping hands to their rendition of "Be True to Your School." They later conducted a number of cheers, supported by a vocal student body. "Get Down Tonight" set the mood for precision drills by the color guard and twirlers. Gloria Patrowitz, as feature twirler, brought the crowd to its feet with the skillful flourish of her baton. In addition, tigerettes set shakers in motion to their newest routine, while the flag twirlers executed their latest maneuvers.

Pandemonium ensued with the appearance of Linden's first male Tiger mascot in recent years, Mark Gallo, suited and caged for all to see. His most fervent supporters, the football squad, soon quieted however, in anticipation of the announcement of the starting lineup by Coach Ted Amo. The team joined the heartening applause given to starting players, who made the traditional jog through a mini goalpost.

With curfew cancelled by Coach Amo, the team still departed at 9:00 P.M. as has been the custom. Those they left behind danced away the hours to music provided by the band Odin.

Amid rousing cheers, Frank Golad and Mark Gergich depart through rows of wellwishers.

Soaked to the skin, Tom Nufrio, Joey Minarchenko and Andy Holup make efforts to dry out before the program begins.

Divided We Fall

Spotting a receiver downfield, quarterback Jeff Martin sets up at the Jefferson game. Linden lost 27-0.

Injury, inexperience, and indifference—the three big factors which hindered the LHS Varsity Football Squad throughout the season and, together, worked to create the biggest problem of all a lack of unity. And this was how it went:

The season opened September 29 with a 28-6 bow to Cranford. End Bob Stagich took the ball 53 yards on a pass by Mike Schreck in the second quarter for the touchdown.

In the next game, Rich Kushner scored early to give Linden a 6-0 lead over Scotch Plains. In a seven play scoring combination in the second quarter, Barry Dawkins ran eleven yards on a third down to put the ball on the Scotch Plains fifteen. In two plays, the Tigers advanced to the one, where fullback AI McCall went in to score. Linden led 12-0 at the half.

A victory did not come, however, for in the fourth quarter, Schreck was hit from behind. The Raiders recovered and scored. The rally continued and Scotch Plains thwarted Linden 14-12. Rain, as well as clipping penalties and multiple turnovers caused Linden to fall to Rahway and Camden on successive Saturdays.

At the Plainfield game, Linden missed five key starters, all suspended for skipping practice. Plainfield blanked the Tigers 12-0, though Linden's defense held in the second half.

A fourth shutout occurred at the matchup with Jefferson.

The losing tide almost turned on November 8 in the game against Madison Township. The Madison team led at the half 14-0 and increased their lead with a field goal in the third quarter. The familiar Saturday shutout looked certain when, suddenly, the Tigers came to life. Dawkins brought the ball in from the five yard line, and Kushner scored the two point conversion on a Martin pass to make the score 17-8 as the final quarter began. Linden repeated, with a McCall touchdown and a Dawkins two point conversion to make it 17-16. Ken Gries recovered the Spartan punt on the 20. The Tigers brought the ball up to the one, where Martin failed on a quarterback sneak attempt. The game ended here.

After the Madison defeat, Westfield easily rolled over the Tigers 42-0 in the next game.

In the final effort, Linden faced traditional rival Union on Thanksgiving Day. Rain and muddy fields kept both teams back for most of the game. Linden, however, looked better than usual in the first quarter, as McCall put the ball in the end zone. Martin made a successful quarterback sneak, and Dawkins completed the two point conversion. Union scored in the second period making it 14-6 at the half.

In the fourth quarter, something big happened. The sun, hidden for most of the season, came out and the Tigers rose to the occasion. Defensive end Leon Devero quickly recovered a Farmer fumble and carried it 45 yards for the touchdown. The defense tightened up to crush Union's scoring attempt. Finally, before a happy hometown crowd, the Tigers won, trimming the Farmers 22-6.

... Injury, Inexperience, and Indifference.

These straight facts, however, are not enough, for the football story truly unfolds behind the scenes. It took a whole season for the Tigers to finally get it all together with a Turkey Day triumph, but it was a season filled with surprise and disappointment.

Injury devoured the Tiger lineup, with as many as 8 starters hurt at one time during the season. It became a familiar sight to see five or six first-string players in street clothes at each game, most notably Danny Nagorny and cocaptain Glenn Gutkowski, who were lost very early in the year.

With last season's winning quarterbacks Belchik and Beriont lost to graduation, the '75 squad relied on Mike Schreck and Jeff Martin to call the signals. As many players noted, their inexperience played a major role in the lack of offensive strength this season (as the stats showed, only 18 points in 9 games).

In a surprise move, Coach Ted Amo announced he would finish the season, but would resign his position as head coach and leave Linden High in January.

The Superintendent's Search

Committee, whose members included board members, supervisors, and Mr. Mopsick, named Mr. Nicholas A. Metrokotsas as head coach for next season. Mr. Metrokotsas, an offensive guard for three years at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, came to Linden as a mathematics teacher in May of this year. His own twelve years on the gridiron included two years playing for the A.C.C. Tigers (affiliated with the Baltimore Colts) of the Minor-professional League, in addition to eight years of coaching experience in New Jersey schools. Mr. Metrokotsas has also authored a number of books and articles on the sport. and his overall won-lost record of 47-27-2 attests to his knowledge in this area. His arrival brings hope for improvement with the coming season.

But for this season, the football squads suffered. With no established lineup, the J.V. went the entire season without a win. And the Varsity? Well, with so many problems both on and off the field, the big machine of the recent past just couldn't get built, much less get moving.

There's Just Something About a Girl in a Uniform

Soaked in her saddle shoes, Fran Riggi cheers on through the downpour.

"Have you got the spirit?" Well, the Linden High cheerleaders sure did, and proved it at the A.C.A. camp at Monmouth College, which they attended in August. There, in addition to learning new cheers, the girls placed first in camp competitions and were named "Most Spirited Squad."

This wave of enthusiasm carried over into appearances at football and basketball games, sustained by an energetic new adviser, Mrs. Marie Cacioppo. With her help, the 18 girl squad made the changes necessary to comply with new guidelines set down for them by the American Cheerleading Association while continuing their development of an "unmilitary-like" manner in which to deliver their rallying messages. The new regulations disallowed downgrading of the opposition at all sport functions. Co-captains Tammy Kirkup and Jackie Peters directed and devised a variety of new cheers, especially for basketball season.

In a reversal of roles, Amy Kauchak takes the field and attempts a long pass.

Wet and Muddy, But Still Smiling [?]

Twirling in strict military formation, Carolynn Nalwasky skillfully handles her rifle.

Business probably improved for local dry cleaners due to the misfortunes of the Linden color guard this year. As crisp military drill stepping turned to mud treading, this twelve girl squad, outfitted in smacking white, suffered most at four consecutive football games played in pouring rain.

There were other problems, too, which caused the girls to miss their pre-game and halftime drills at three football games. They also lacked funds necessary to attend camp at Shippensburg Stage College in Pennsylvania. Available resources permitted only cocaptains Tracy Lospinoso and Terry Hetem to receive training in the newest and most difficult twirling maneuvers. The rest of the squad learned the new techniques in vigorous practice sessions throughout the summer and after school.

In spite of all their difficulties, this precision group found the time to: make refreshments for the visiting color guard at home football games, appear in parades, serve as Host Color Guard in the Home News Competition, and present arms to the National Anthem at each home basketball game.

All that glitter and flash: Scoring 32 points higher than her nearest com-petitor in tryouts, Gloria Patrowitz became Linden High's first feature twirler. As such, she gave a solo performance at each appearance of the twirling squad, making use of difficult and daring moves in her routine routine.

A slight mishap while performing her twirling routine only serves to brighten Pat Carpenter's smile.

The sound of silk ruffling in the breeze could only signal the arrival of the flag twirlers, whether it be on the football field at halftime or at any one of several parades in which they participated. The 12 girls who bore the familiar orange and black began practice during summer vacation, a procedure that increased to four times weekly in preparation for the Kick-Off Dance and the football season that followed.

Co-captains Jackie Hemmings and Shelley Reid attended camp at Shippensburg State College where they learned twirling maneuvers which they taught to squad members. Mrs. Barbara Muccia, the adviser, noted her satisfaction with the girls' progress, cooperation, and attitude. FLAG TWIRLERS — FRONT ROW: R. Kirkland, A. Armstrong, M. Holmes, co-captain J. Hemmings, co-captain S. Reid, D. Rodgers, M. Sullivan, D. King. BACK ROW: C. Carson, K. Manos, J. Campbell, P. Carpenter.

Though batons seldom sparkled as cloudy skies prevailed, the twirlers still caught attention as they made their weekly field entrance in a flash of bright orange and black. The look created by new two-piece uniforms lifted spirits for this squad of eight and livened the execution of flag and baton routines during pre- and halftime game programs, parades and band competitions.

Mrs. Alice Topoleski, the adviser, cited fellowship as the girls' main asset. The girls, in turn, commended their adviser for her efforts and abilities as they practiced throughout the summer in preparation for a busy fall season.

Have You Got the Spirit?

"Here, There, and Everywhere" could perhaps be the best description for that huge squad of girls known as the Tigerettes. They performed to such music as they marched 24 strong onto the field each Saturday at halftime. In addition to this, they also formulated a dance routine to honor the Bicentennial, as well as presentations to complement the rhythmic beats of "Scorpio" and "Leroy Brown."

Practices four times a week ensured co-captains Debbie Trubilla and Shari Wakefield the chance to introduce and later finalize the new numbers for this season. Many of the innovations resulted from a three day visit late in June to the All-State Camps at Upsala College for six of the girls. Rising costs were another problem which the squad encountered. Aside from having to buy the usual jackets, shakers, and flowers for both the first and last football games, each Tigerette also had to buy a new shirt for her uniform. Entirely new uniforms are expected next year, as are raincoats, which were sorely missed amid the showers of football season.

TIGERETTES — FRONT ROW: Co-captain D. Trubilla, R. Renna, S. Clement, B. Reavis, K. Costello, D. Lapira, co-captain S. Wakefield. BACK ROW: C. Zimmerman, D. Fabrizio, J. McGhee, N. Lima, L. Pom-poms swishing in time to the music, Rose Renna concentrates on her performance.

Surveying the stands for potential customers, Susan Koenig and Cindy Johnston make their rounds at halftime.

To the tune of "Scorpio", Cindy Zimmerman, Valerie McNeil, Kathy Costello, and Donna Zacharkiw follow the beat. The stomach knows no loyalty, and even during the most exciting contest, a persistant growl can turn any fan's thoughts from sport to food and drink. Ready to accomodate such needs, twentythree smiling Boosterettes made sales all during a wet football season, and the basketball season as well.

Personality, however, did not alone mark membership decisions by adviser Mrs. Jane Popp and last year's club officers. Talent in the areas of billing and selling also received consideration.

The Boosterettes along with the Booster Club sponsor the Sports Award Dinner for athletes in June, and their objective was to accumulate enough money to again finance this function. In devoting time and energy to this goal, the girls had the opportunity to meet new people, enjoy parts of the games, and even to go on an outing with surplus funds at the end of the year.

Easin' On Down the Road Ain't So Easy

Not roses, but rather grass, mud, and rocks paved the way for long distance runners who paced themselves while training in and around Wilson Park. These men and women of the Cross Country team covered several miles each day in preparation for upcoming meets, and remained devoted and optimistic throughout the season. In fact, all but eight of those who tried out stuck with the team from beginning to end. And still, though runners gave their best efforts, the team could only muster a 1-9 log by seasons end. Coach Gerald Imbriaco worked diligently with the team members and encouraged them. Speed work and faster starts were emphasized in practice, which began early in August.

Junior Donnie Gries, team captain, returned for his second season as a cross country runner. Larry Miranda, another junior member, said of him, "Donnie is a good leader and largely responsible for the one victory that came late in the season. Speaking for the rest of the team, I think everyone had a lot of respect for him and what he tried to do as team captain."

Jumping-jacks are just part of Captain Donnie Gries' premest warm-up exercises.

New uniforms were not to be the only thing that looked sharp on the playing fields this fall. Linden's Soccer team had finally come into its own, receiving recognition in a genuine wave of student enthusiasm. Devoted fans flocked to cheer on Linden High's battling booters as they ripped through one opponent after another. With all this encouragement, it came as no surprise when Coach Paul Garrett's Tigers blasted their way to the top of the Watchung Conference with an outstanding regular season record of 9-3-2.

The Tigers launched their campaign with a loss to Bayonne (0-2) only to come right back in the next game, downing Union Catholic 6-0. Completely dominant throughout the game, the Linden booters exhibited a style of play that not only would bring victory, but would keep goalie Gary Robbins secure with a total of eight shutouts for the year. To make victory all the sweeter, Jan Macik treated the crowd to a "hat trick" (three goals in a single game), his first of two this season.

In the next match-up, Linden upset Union 2-0, the first time a Linden squad had ever beaten Union, only to be stopped by Kenilworth 3-2 in double overtime the following game.

Coming off a loss, the Tigers still managed to defeat Roselle 3-1, a game in which co-captain Tom Tracey scored two of his five goals for the season. As momentum picked up, the Tigers rallied to hand Scotch Plains a 2-1 loss, scoring two goals in the final two minutes of the game.

Victory became the rule as Linden showed fine form in blanking Union Catholic 4-0. Again Macik "hat-tricked," but it was the strong show of defense, led by the hard kick of Mark Morro and plugged up the middle by Ed Piascik, that held the team together then as well as through much of the season.

After a brief tumble to Pingry, the Tigers quickly recovered, and the pace began to accelerate. Linden plowed through most of the remaining opposition to reach the County Tournament. In the first match of the Union County Tournament, a powerful defense, headed by seniors Morro, Robbins, and Howard Wise helped Linden to nip Kenilworth 1-0. But a loss to Clark in the semi-finals put the Tigers out of the Tournament.

Linden still qualified for the State Tournament. There the booters wiped out Scotch Plains 3-0, with senior Macik controlling the Linden offense with two impressive goals. In their next contest, a controversial call of offsides ousted the Tigers from the Tourney as they bowed to Livingston 1-0.

With the injury-free 11-5-2 season completed, senior Ed Piascik, with seven assists, earned a spot on the first team of the All County Soccer Team, while co-captain Tony Faria, team leader with sixteen goals and ten assists, was elected to the second team.

Both Varsity and J.V. squads paid recognition to proud Coaches Garrett and Jim Iozzi with trophies. Each Player of the Week, highlighted in the Chronicle, received honors at a luncheon held for the entire team. <text>

Soccer—serious business at any level explains why the J.V. team though not as popular as varsity, succeeded in compiling an equally impressive log of 9-3-1.

Coach Jim lozzi, in taking on many experienced players from the junior highs, found himself at an advantage, as the squad adapted easily to high school play.

A hard-hitting defense, led by Stan Slivinski, as well as goalie Karl Zajac and halfback Mike Perkowski, held Linden together much of the season. In the first six games, the Tigers scored 14 goals, while limiting their opponents to only one. Heading that offensive attack were junior Tommy Clarke and sophomores Hernany Silvaand Dennis George.

Ousted early from Union County Tournament matches by Union, a team they had previously beaten, the J.V. booters still ranked fourth in the county for the regular season, the highest seating ever attained by this squad.

 Center Howard Towler pulls up for sont. The time!. Linden 76. Jefferson 66.

Amazing skill and agility were only two of the many assets exhibited by the defending Sectional Champions of this year's Linden Varsity Basketball team. Under Coach Wayman Everly, the cagers ended a thrilling season with a record of 18 wins and 8 losses.

After a slow start in which the squad bowed to third-ranked Trenton, the Tigers breezed past their next two opponents, Westfield and Cranford, to enter the annual Hillside Christmas Tournament with a 2-1 log.

In the tourney opener, Linden edged Ferris of Jersey City 55-53 to face Roselle in the semi-finals. Leading 36-26 at the half, Linden cagers still had to break a Ram press in the final quarter with an eight point run (four by Butch Burns) to slip past the opposition 69-65. Howard Towler was high man for the game with 25 points.

This win catapulted the Tigers into the final round, where they took on Snyder, also of Jersey City. Forward Dana Chapman pumped in 24 for the day to help give Linden the Tournament Championship for the first time ever. Chapman and Towler, named Tournament All-Stars, received trophies after the game.

Downing their next three opponents, the Tigers brought their winning streak to eight before facing undefeated Plainfield. The Cardinals, who dedicated the game to Nokey Johnson, led for the first three quarters before Linden ran off 25 consecutive points while holding Plainfield scoreless for nearly ten minutes. With 4:05 left to play, the Cardinals whittled down the Tiger's ten point lead with a fourth quarter rally to tie the score 58-58. In the last 32 seconds however, Linden passed up a scoring opportunity and bowed to Plainfield 60-58. Center John Cunningham netted 21 as high scorer.

Utilizing a full-court press, the Tigers came from behind in the following match-up with Union to take a four point lead at the end of third stanza. This lead changed hands throughout the final quarter, but a Union rally made it 62-56 at the buzzer to hand Linden its third loss in ten games.

After soundly defeating Scotch Plains 64-52, Linden clashed once again with powerful Plainfield. Before a sellout crowd, the Tigers took a commanding lead at the half (48-31, only to watch the Cardinals pull within three points of a tie (56-53) as the fourth stanza began. With little scoring in this quarter, every point counted. As both teams slowly inched ahead, Linden managed to take a one-point lead with two minutes remaining through a Cunningham clutch shot. The pressure was then on Howard Towler, who went to the line with ten seconds to go and sank two foul shots. Though the Cardinals hit a jumper in the final seconds of the game, that just wasn't enough, and Linden got the upset 67-66. High scorers were Chapman (17), Cunningham (15), and forward Jeff McCloud with 12.

Ranked eighth in the state after a follow-up win against Scotch Plains, the Tigers took a nose-dive as the flu hit town. Linden dropped three in a row with the loss of key players before the last two matchups of the regular season. One of these, the Ewing game, tied as time ran out. In the three minute overtime, Cunningham, Chapman, and McCloud scored to give Linden the victory 74-68. McKinley Mitchell also had a good day with a personal high of 25 points.

Coasting by Westfield in their final effort, the Tigers entered the Union County Tournament fourthseeded with a regular season log of 13 and 6.

"....Amazing Skill and Agility...."

In the opener of the County Tourney, Linden throttled St. Pat's 71-57 with a seven point run by Butch Burns in the final quarter, which gave the Tigers a 13 point lead with six minutes left to play.

In the quarter-final matchup, Linden had to go against undefeated Kenilworth. The Tigers trailed in the second quarter until a 14 point rally put them ahead at the half. A Bear comeback was crushed by the Linden cagers, who rebuilt a seven point lead and went on to take the game 62-54. This broke Kenilworth's unbeaten string of 20 and sent Linden into the semi-finals against Union.

Returning from bouts with intestinal flu, Dana Chapman and Burns did not enter the game until the beginning of the second quarter. Nine points by Chapman cut the Union lead and gave it to Linden 27-22 at the half. The lead then changed hands three more times before the Farmers froze the ball with 5:24 left to play. Though McKinley Mitchell held Union star Len Horton to only five points for the game, the Tigers just couldn't get back on the pace and fell to Union 58-46, ending their bid in the County Tournament.

In the State Tourney Linden used J.V. talent and the bench to swamp Westfield in their third meeting. John Cunningham had 19 points while J.V. player Darryl Devero pumped in 15.

A strong show of defense plus pin-point shooting accuracy was the key to jolting seventh-ranked Union after losing on three previous occasions. Burns, hitting jumpers from 15 and 17 feet, paced the team with 21 points and opened up the game in the final quarter. Though Union held a one point edge over Linden at this point, the Tigers managed a nine point run with scoring from Towler, Burns, Chapman, and McCloud to sting the Farmers 57-50.

Following this, Linden faced Scotch Plains, who locked-up the score 68-68 with 36 seconds left in the game. At this point, McKinley Mitchell was fouled going in for a layup. John Cunningham got the rebound after Mitchell missed both foul shots when he too was fouled. Cunningham, however, hit two from the line to give Linden the win in this 70-68 thriller. Dana Chapman scored 13 of the team's 20 points in the last quarter.

Linden then surged ahead into the finals for the North Jersey Section 2, Group 4 Championship, where they again confronted mighty Plainfield. The Cardinals outran Linden in the first two stanzas to take a narrow lead, 36-34, at the half. A ten point streak in the third quarter, however, put the tired Linden cagers away and gave Plainfield the title 77-65. Plainfield went on from there to win the Group 4 Championship in overtime against Neptune.

Shooting Stars On the Horizon

Towering over the opposition in both talent and stature, the Linden J.V. Basketball team, top-seeded at the start of tournament play, went on to capture the Union County Conference championship by stunning second ranked Cranford, 102-49.

High off an outstanding 12-4 regular season, the squad, led by rookie coach Mr. George St. Andrassy, Jr., attributed this final victory to the switch from man-on-man to a zone defense, which boggled the Cranford cagers. Offensively, success was assured by such spirited players as Darrel Devero (6'4"), high scorer with 22 points, Gene Armstrong (6'0"), who added 18 points, along with efforts by Roosevelt Peeples (6'3") and Aaron Howard (6'7"). The five starters ran up a total of 65 points before the bench was sent in for the last 14 minutes of the game, to round out the score at 102.

Though the tournament victory capped an already winning season, squad members considered their first matchup, in which the team topped Trenton 70-59, to be their best played game. From then on, the Tigers met with equally tough competition, but an exceptionally strong defense, plus precision passing and shooting brought them through triumphantly.

With the season at an end, four key players, Darrel Devero, Aaron Howard, Roosevelt Peeples, and Byron Stratford, were moved up to the Varsity to assist in the State Conference Tournaments.

After a Cranford miss-shot, Fred Garland and Keith Warren wait under the basket to snatch the rebound.

And Yau Think Yau've Gat Problems?

Without so much as regulation time clock, or for that matter an official stat keeper or scoreboard, the Girl's Varsity Basketball team made it through a second season, toting a final record of 0-13. As if that were not bad enough, the girls, coached by Mrs. Alice Topoleski, received no acknowledgement from local newspapers, suffered through injuries and a steady drop in morale as the season progressed, and could only count on a handful of spectators at each game.

But perhaps the biggest problem of all was the lack of practice facilities. Confined to School #1, and only after 4:00 P.M., the girls sometimes lost even that floor to the Rec wrestling matches, while, in the meantime, all other varsity teams got home courts for both practices and games.

With only four players returning from last season, the girls cited inexperience as their main stumbling block, finding themselves unable to handle the press, aside from poor rebounding and a generally slow team pace, which caused losses by as many as 40 points.

Typically, the team would pull ahead in the opening quarter, only to lose it by the half. In the third quarter, the girls would get back on the pace somewhat and pick up a few more points, but never enough to bring victory. On occasion, the opposition froze the ball, gaining an open shot by forcing Linden cagers to leave their positions. This was again due to lack of experience.

In spite of these obstacles, the Girl's Varsity produced some fine sophomore and junior talent, which has sparked a new enthusiasm for play next year. High scorers included Elizabeth Clark with 180 points on the season, Lisa Carson with 107, and Peggy Wienkowski with 70. Boxed in on all sides, team high scorer Elizabeth Clark scans the court for a pass-off.

Winning Is Right Up Their Alley

Point for point, Linden's Varsity Bowling team raced Union right down to the wire for the championship title of the American Division of the Watchung Conference.

To arrive at this situation, the varsity keglers, under rookie coach Mr. Lawrence Crawford of Soehl Junior High, won their way through a hectic three month schedule, opening with a 7-0 shutout over powerhouse Clark. Strong showings from senior cocaptains Ken Bellero (227) and Barry Kornspan (223) assured this victory.

As the pins continued to go down, up in the standings went the Linden bowlers, who also blanked Governor Livingston, and topped tough competitors from Hillside, Jefferson, and Scotch Plains. The varsity even took one out of three in matchups with the highly rated Union squad, against whom they sustained two of their three losses for the season. When regular season play drew to a close, Union maintained such a narrow lead over Linden that the outcome of both team's final matches became the single deciding factor for the division title. As it turned out, Howie Wise bowled the season's top game of 234 to help the keglers roll over Rahway 5-2, while Union bowed to her last opponent. When all the points were tallied, Linden had won the Conference Championship for the third straight year by a margin of one point.

After this triumph, the keglers became eligible to enter the Union Classic Invitational Tournament, where the team placed second mainly through the efforts of co-captain Kornspan, who received a high individual series trophy with a 1206 for six games.

In the District "A" Sectional Tourney, Linden finished fourth to qualify for a bid in the state finals in mid-March.

Stopping just short of the foul line, Emil Kostelnik awaits the outcome of his first throw.

Splits, strikes, and spares — a lingo second nature to members of the J.V. Bowling squad, which ended its season with an 8-5 record to place third out of eight teams in the Watchung Conference for the second consecutive year.

Also coached by Mr. Lawrence Crawford, J.V. keglers practiced every Tuesday at both Linden and Jersey Lanes, and started their schedule with a win over Clark. This was a real morale booster for a predominantly sophomore team. From there, the season was up and down, though some players did distinguish themselves: junior Kevin McKusker, sophomores Debbie Samer and Jeff Schnarr, all prospects for next year's varsity. Senior Donna Italia had high game for the season with a 234.

Riding on the coattails of two sports squads which at last have come of age, the wrestling cheerleaders have leaped into prominance as a source of team encouragement rivaling any other cheering squad. To gain such recognition, wrestling cheerleaders roused spirits at home matches and Tournament games for the soccer team prior to the start of wrestling season.

In preparation for such a lengthy schedule of appearances, the girls attended cheerleading camp at Upsala College in East Orange for four days last summer. There, the entire squad received instruction in the latest cheers and jumps among other rallying techniques.

Aside from cheering, the girls gave out "Secret Pals" to their assigned booters and grapplers before each game. A "Secret Pal" consisted of some candy (bought by the cheerleader) and a note of encouragement to boost the athlete's morale and confidence in himself and the team. To raise funds to pay for the new uniforms received this year, the squad also sold "Pin 'Em" buttons throughout wrestling season. The use of a guillotine enables Bob Miller (158) to add another pin to his record.

Out on the mats, its every man for himself; wrestling is the sport of the individual. The demands for success are many — personal stamina, strength, skill, and coordination, as well as a positive mental attitude. Coach Ted Thompson looked for these specifics in his twelve varsity grapplers, and fortified their talents with long hours of conditioning and practice. What he came up with was a 9-4 log for the season, the best yet achieved by the Varsity Wrestling Squad at LHS.

Linden matmen entered the Cartaret Invitational Christmas Tournament for the first time this year, and came home with a second place team trophy, the first ever won in pre-season competition. In the individual standings, co-captains Mark Holderbaum (148) and Bob Miller (158) took first place titles. In addition, second places finishes by Chris Lyon (129) and Bart Aslin (135), along with third place wins by Tom Clarke (101), Bob Corduan (122), Mike Chengeri (170), and Mark Gergich (H. Wt.) helped to secure the trophy.

The Tigers opened their regular season with two easy wins over Rahway and Clark, only to miss three in a row when stricken with flu and a series of injuries in mid-January. Within a week, though, the team was back on its feet again, taking only a single loss for entire second half of the season. These contests were highlighted by a string of five victories. Spectacular showings were chalked up when the grapplers trounced Union Catholic 61-0 with six pins and crushed Roselle Catholic 50-6 in their final match.

In the District Tournament, which Linden entered at the close of regular season competition, co-captain Miller became the first LHS wrestler to take a first place title. Also finishing in good second positions were co-captain Holderbaum and Gergich. All three then qualified for the Regional Tournament, the most men Linden has ever sent to this event.

At the Regionals, Linden wrestlers did not win any medals, though Miller managed to advance into the second phase of competition.

second phase of competition. With the year's contests at an end, Mark Holderbaum topped the list of matmen sporting an outstanding personal record with his 15 wins and one loss. Miller, who set a new school record with nine pins, had a 13 and 4 record, as did Clarke and Aslin. Corduan went 11 and 4 for the season.

But the biggest surprise of a l turned out to be the response of this year's spectators. Students, stirred up by the teams winning record and the idea of watching individuals put their talents to the test in a one-on-one challenge, attended home matches in greater numbers than ever before. After many years, wrestling took its place among the fan-oriented sports at LHS.

To break out of a single leg takedown, Chris Konrad (122) uses all his power against a Union grappler.

It Takes Two To Tangle

In an effort to gain two points, Patrick Drake (148) fights for control over a wrestler from Springfield. Linden won this final match 36-25.

Short on points, but long on spirit, the J.V. matmen wrestled their way to a 4-6 season. Hampered not only by injuries of their own, the team was forced to give up key men to the varsity to substitute for the injured there.

Despite these circumstances, the squad, coached by Mr. Edward Paskewich, Jr., managed to take seventh place out of 14 teams in the Novice Tournament held February 13 and 14 at Cranford High School. In these matches, three Linden wrestlers took titles: Matt Zamorski, 4th (108), John Pineiro, 2nd (188), and sophomore Dan Barbarich, undefeated (10-0) up to this point with a total of seven pins to his credit. He settled for a 3rd place finish in the heavy weight class.

The J.V. grapplers considered the Roselle Catholic match to be their most exciting. Six pins were scored in this 41-22 tumble.

Mike Antoniewicz and Tom Olsewski also proved to be outstanding players for the winning team. Fourteen mixed teams participated in the LHS Intramural Bowling League. Competition took place at Lindent Lanes each Thursday from December 3 through March 11. Mr. Anthony Muccia, in his first year as coach, described the experience as worthwhile and rewarding. As the season drew to a close, trophies were awarded.

The intention of the Girls' Intramural Basketball League was to create an enjoyable atmosphere for those who participated and to obtain a better understanding of the game. YOUTH and the COMMUNITY

The youth of Linden — lifeblood of the community. Yet, by comparison, this group makes up a relatively small part of the city's total population. But what a part it is!

Young people have traditionally worked for the betterment of Linden, filling service positions in libraries and churches, as well as taking on part-time work in local businesses. They have joined the city's political and civic groups and have become active campaigners at election time.

Linden, in turn, has realized its responsibility to the youth of the community and caters to it with numerous creative activities and cultural and entertainment events. It also provides sport and game facilities throughout the city.

All in all, it is a nice arrangement; one in which both parties benefit, for together, young and old work to make Linden a source of pride for all its inhabitants. All communities divide themselves into the few and the many. -Hamilton

WELCOME TO LINDEN, NEW JERSEY "OUR LITTLE TOWN"

Linden covers 11.4 square miles, or 7,300 acres in land area, making it sixth in rank among the cities of New Jersey.

The highest point in Linden, located at Wood Avenue and 9th Avenue, has an elevation of 90 feet above sea level.

According to the census of 1970, the total population of Linden stands at 41,409 most of whom are native by birth. Foreignborn citizens came mostly from Poland & Italy.

Did You Know That ...

Indians of the Lenni-Lenape Tribe of the Delaware Nation were first to occupy this area. Presbyterians from New England and Long Island began settling in the territory, bought as part of the Elizabeth-Town Purchase, as early as 1664. They formed the villages of Wheatsheaf, Trembley, Milford, and Upper Rahway, which together constitute what we now know as Linden.

British and American raiders alike used the Trembley (now Tremley) Point ferry crossing for raids between New Jersey and Staten Island, a British stronghold throughout the Revolution.

Ŕ

King George's Highway (now St. George's Avenue) held as great an importance in colonial times as it does today. In 1789, General George Washington rode up St. George's Avenue on his way to New York City to be inaugurated as our first President.

By an act of the State Legislature, the Township of Linden, population 1,146, was created on March 4, 1861.

Traditionally, two explanations have been offered in choosing the name "Linden" for the new township. One story revolves around Mrs. Tenney, who renamed Dark Lane (now Park Avenue) Linden Road, after the many graceful linden trees in the area. Abram Aaron Ward, who saw the new sign hung out at the corner of St. George's Avenue, recommended the name to the township committee. A second explanation is that early German residents suggested the name, as the linden tree appealed strongly to them.

Linden, chiefly a farming community until the early Twentieth Century, gradually began to draw New York business people to the suburbs. New families coming to the area included the Blankes, Luttgens, Knopfs, Miners, Coles, and Zieglers, who, together with the older residents—the Woods, Winans, Rolls, and Stimpsons—developed that part of Linden surrounding the Pennsylvania Railroad Station. Many of the names sound familiar, having since been lent to the local geography.

A portion of the community withdrew from the agrarian Township of Linden on March 28, 1882, to form the Borough of Linden, a strictly residential area of 900 persons. Located in the present downtown district, the Borough area received civic improvements and became a dignified community surrounded completely by farms. As time went on, the Township turned from agriculture to industry, and threatened to absorb the quiet Borough. By mutual consent, however, the Borough and Township united on January 1, 1925, to form the City of Linden, with a mayor-council type of government.

The first public schools in Linden were the Wheatsheaf School, built on what is today the corner of St. George's Avenue and Roselle Street in 1750; and the Tremley Point School, which went up in 1760 on Morse Mill Road. Modern education in Linden began in 1871 with the construction of Public School No. 1 on Linden Avenue. Destroyed by fire in 1909, a new building, erected in 1912 stands at the present location of Wood Avenue and Curtis Street. Today, Linden has 11 elementary schools, 2 junior highs, and a senior high with a vo-tech annex.

Linden Methodist Church, officially established in 1866, and the Reformed Church of Linden, the city's first church building (1871), are Linden's oldest. Congregation Agudas Achim Anshei Linden began serving the Orthodox Jewish community in 1908. Today, there are 20 churches for all denominations in the city.

By about 1885, Linden's first industries were established, including the Russell Coe Bone Factory, SS Fales Chemical Works, the Grasselli Chemical Company (now a part of E. I. du Pont de Nemours), General Aniline, W. J. Bush Company (a London subsidiary), the Linden Tanning Company, the John Stephenson Company (manufacturers of trolley cars), and, of course, Standard Oil, which today is Exxon, Linden's largest employer.

Linden Borough developed the first local park, located on West Curtis Street, in 1923. In 1924, the Township donated 20 acres of land to the county for the establishment of John Russell Wheeler Park. Today, there are 24 parks in the city.

The first of Linden's libraries started on January 1, 1928, sponsored by the Linden Rotary Club. In December of 1939, the present main building was erected on Henry Street with federal assistance. There are now four branch libraries in addition to the Main.

It's Halloween, but no need for alarm over the ghouls and goblins that normally create mischief on Linden's streets in late October. Foresight and advanced planning on the part of Linden officials and a student committee kept everyone busy and disturbances at a minimum.

The annual Halloween parade attracted a traditionally large number of spectators and participants on the long march up Wood Avenue. The big fall event, however, was the annual Halloween Dance, which took place on "Mischief Night," October 30, 1975. A student committee of ten, after going "band shopping," came up with Take Five, a new musical group that treated the 250 students attending to a fresh sound in high school dance music. The musicians received as much welcome as the 400 doughnuts and 25 gallons of apple cider eagerly consumed.

But the story did not end here. The next day, quite a number of students, still caught up in the holiday spirit, came to school in an amusing variety of costumes and makeup. Though most confined their celebration to a subtle change in dress, styles did at times range from the exotic to the bizzare. School officials sought comfort in the fact that Halloween comes only once a year.

MARGARET PASERBA and MARTY GRANT

Even with the passing of two-hundred years, the people of Linden had little trouble reviving the proud, patriotic spirit of a community rich in historic background.

Designated a "Bicentennial Community," Linden at once set out to look the part. Throughout the summer and early fall, students painted fire hydrants all over the city in either stars and stripes or portraits of colonial characters. Work also began on a number of school and PTA projects (Bicentennial flags, for example).

Highlighting the Bicentennial celebration was "Expo '76," a showcase of Americana held March 2 at McManus Junior High School. The program included a presentation of the music of this country, both vocally and instrumentally, by young people from pre-Kingarten (Title One) to grade 12. The newlycreated Linden Bicentennial Orchestra also made an appearance, as did secondary school students who executed dance routines from the Revolutionary period, as well as contemporary.

A display of Early American crafts lent to the colonial flavor of the event. Demonstrations in everything from candle dipping to finger knitting to even sand casting and wig making contributed to an understanding of the hardy (and resourseful) pioneer spirit. Exhibits also included finished leather articles and colonial household items of wood and metal.

A panoramic slide presentation, featuring scenes of the community, as well as Bicentennial programs going on in the Linden School System, capped the evening.

On Arbor Day in April, students planted linden trees at each of the public schools, while a community parade down Wood Avenue on June 27 gave bands and orchestras at all grade levels a chance to perform.

All through the Bicentennial year, Lindenites could be heard voicing the joys of independence and their pride in American tradition. There was one tradition, however, that the citizens of Linden could not claim. For some reason, George Washington did not sleep here.

> Be always employed in something useful -Benjamin Franklin

"One thing that band definitely did not lack this year was spirit. Everyone pulled together and played their best at performances. I'm proud of it." One reason for this statement could be traced to actions by Mr. Charles P. Haase himself, band director. Mr. Haase this year introduced the demerit system to marching band at Linden High, in hopes of having "better attendance at practices and games, more discipline and to make individuals responsible." more Many marchers saw it as an inevitable, but positive change. some still felt its presence to be more of a "scare tactic" than anything else.

Whatever influence the new system might have had, the marching band continued to perform at full strength in halftime routines at all football games and marched as well in the Columbus Day, Halloween, and Memorial Day Parades. Their most important performance, however, occurred on the evening of October 14, when Linden marchers played host to the Home News Band Festival in New Brunswick.

As Host Band, the LHS participants performed their half-time show, played marches for the presentation of the colors of each school, and took part in the mass band finale. Conducted by Mr. Haase, the mass band included the eleven bands featured, as they executed the melodies to both "March America" and "America the Beautiful" in unison.

Though most musicians expressed their talents in the Marching Band, not all efforts were channeled in this direction.

Accomplished musicians auditioned for the limited number of seats in the Concert Band. This group, which practiced seventh period each day, performed in the Christmas program, the Spring Festival, and a special Bicentennial celebration for Lindenites.

On the other hand, Dance Band, reinstated only a year after its departure, catered to those with a taste for jazz.

In addition to these activities, the Brass and Woodwind Ensembles, which practiced during morning homeroom, performed at the Teen Arts Festival in Trenton.

Like every musical instrument, the voice requires precise tuning and a warm-up prior to any performance. Each of three concerts given by all LHS voice groups began in this manner. Moments before showtime, the singers' many voices rose in a blend of casual discord, filling the backstage rafters with the sweet chaotic sounds of tension-releasing last minute rehearsal.

The Christmas concert, presented December 15 in the high school auditorium, preceded a similar concert held at Woodbridge Center three days later. The Annual Spring Festival provided the company with a third chance to display its talents.

To make such presentations successful, Mr. Paul Koslowski, director of all vocal music groups, insisted upon detailed planning, intensive rehearsal, and a fresh approach to every piece sung.

To achieve his aims, "Mr. Kos" had the vocal music room in constant use. Choir met seventh period each day, and for the first time in several years, boys entered what had been considered a basically female group. "The addition of boys gives us a whole new sound," said Mr. Kos. Glee Club members met both first and second period and combined efforts before each concert, as they sang to a guitar accompaniment. The Woodbridge concert came as their first out-of-school performance.

The busiest of these groups, the Girls' Ensemble, took part in eleven concerts scheduled before Christmas, including those at shopping centers, luncheons, and even on the steps of City Hall. Consisting of twelve select vocalists, the group performed not only the more difficult numbers, but often without instrumental accompaniment.

Seated in the Condomine living room, Mrs. Bradman (Melissa Farber) tinds herself puzzled over the strange happenings of the recent past.

Coming out of a trance, Madame Arcati is bombarded by questions from all sides.

Clearing away the breaking dishes, Edith (Ingrid Heerdman overhears a discussion of t Robert Squillace) recalls the good times they had together.

"I get into my character so much that it becomes a part of me, and sometimes I stop and wonder if, in real life, we are all acting in some way." Such feelings were registered by the seven players who recreated Noel Coward's improbable farce, "Blithe Spirit" as an All School Play presentation on the evenings of March 12 and 13.

Directed by Mrs. Christine Williams, the play concerned one Charles Condomine, portrayed by Robert Squillace, who has summoned Madame Arcate (Lynne Pendergast), an accentric medium, to his home for the purpose of holding a seance to provide information for his latest book. At the seance, Madame Arcate surprises Charles by bringing back the ghost of Elvira, his first wife, played by Joane Halberstadter. She makes herself visible only to him. Frank Rozanski and Melissa Farber, in their portrayal of the sophisticated couple, Dr. and Mrs. Bradman, then see Charles and his present wife, Ruth (Brina Gerenstein), through an ordeal in which Elvira kills Ruth accidently in an attempt to murder Charles and bring him to her as a spirit.

In a turn of events, Edith (Ingrid Heerdmann), the housemaid, becomes the psychic and brings back the ghosts of Elvira and Ruth, who plan to take revenge upon their unappreciative husband. In one great swoop, the two women destroy all the vases and paintings in the household to Charles' sarcastic last words,

"Parting is such sweet sorrow."

As this production came to life before the audience, few actually realized what happened behind the scenes to bring "Blithe Spirit" to the stage.

Weeks before the public presentation, numerous backstage preparations had already begun. Mr. Jack Byrne, technical adviser, and Mrs. Williams set up committees to handle various aspects of the production from start to finish, all under the supervision of student director Arthur Schneider. Fourteen students comprised the technical crew, which completed a variety of tasks including the construction and painting of the flats, the setting up and controlling of stage lights during the performance, and the arrangement of larger props. David Felder, assisted by members of this crew, created the "eerie" special effects that added dimension to the play. The prop committee, headed by Jane Twyford, carefully reproduced the setting of a country home in Kent, England. Sue Koenig, together with the other members of the make-up and costume committee, purchased cosmetics and hunted for each character's wardrobe. For the first time in many years, pancake make-up had to be used to create the "ghosting" effect. An art committee designed advertisement posters while business committee members handled play promotion and ticket sales.

All proceeds were deposited in the Senior Class treasury.

Getting the *I*how on the Road

"The play's the thing," or so it was until the Drama Club officers found themselves unable to muster enough support in three attempts to organize a field trip to see a Broadway stage production. "Most kids had enthusiasm, but they just couldn't come up with the money," explained one member.

Despite this slow start, the club experienced a "highly successful" year, as members decided to divert efforts to school-based projects. President David Felder arranged two mini-film festivals with classic old comedies, as well as a few of his own creations. The Christmas party gave members a chance to sing carols, eat holiday foods, and to be entertained by the impressions of Jim Bethke. As usual, the year ended with the annual club picnic and open air theater presentation.

original stageplay into a one act version. Props and voice changes were employed by the performers to portray as many as ten roles apiece.

LHS stage veteran Robert Squillace skillfully made his way through a number of diverse roles, while in their acting debuts, Robin Israelow, Frank Rozanski, and Barbara Measnikoff offered credibility to the many individuals they portrayed as well.

In a smooth blending of vocal, instrumental, and acting talents, Carol Gasper and James Segal set the mood for each scene with music. As one member of the audience put it, "the music brought the play to life."

Those behind the scenes included Mr. Jack Byrne as lighting and technical director and student director Arthur Schneider. The make-up and publicity committees and the lighting crew also spent long hours in preparation for the presentation. And though the auditorium did not fill to capacity, those who did attend did not leave with a sense of the grim realities of death, but rather a little more insight into what living is really all about.

Old Tongues With a New Twist

Foreign custom and culture do not often receive the classroom attention most language students desire. To accommodate this interest, the language clubs at LHS provided a relaxed atmosphere for such students to become acquainted with the finer points of language study and to have some fun while doing so; "painless education," as one student put it. Gummibers, fruit candies, and advent calendars were among items sold by German Club members in October and January. With profits received, the club and its supervisor Mrs. Brenda Richardson went to see the film Hilden in the original German. In New York City, they lunched and did some shopping as well.

For the annual Christmas party, each class worked up a skit to be presented in German. St. Nickolaus, portrayed by Nancy Hirdt, gave out gifts to party-goers picked at random. A select group of German students, chosen for membership in the German honor society, Delta Epsilon Phi, saw the German opera Elecktra in New York City. The club rounded out its year's activities with a trip to the Hofbrauhaus in Atlantic Highlands and the annual club picnic in the spring. Suffering a late start due to the departure of their adviser, Mrs. Jean McKeown, the French Club, under the new direction of Mrs. Ida Nagypal, visited New York in the spring to view a French film and to eat in a French restaurant. Club members also put together a television program in French, using videotape equipment to record it. The annual picnic was held in June.

Italian, though not offered in the high school curriculum, sparked enough student interest to allow Mrs. Marie Cacioppo to formulate the Italian Club. Study of that language, history, and culture through the use of films highlighted regular meetings. In efforts to fully experience Italian lifestyle, members dined on traditional cuisine at the Christmas Party on December 19th. In addition, club members saw an Italian movie in New York City and participated in the Garden State Arts Center's Italian Festival in June.

Hustling For Charity

Determination: a quality possessed by this year's Black Renaissance Club, which thrived under an industrious president, Mark Anderson.

Unable to find an adviser for a proposed Gospel Choir, the group quickly turned to other activities, most of which were for the purpose of raising funds for charitable organizations. Club members, guided by Mrs. Lydia Moore, sponsored a "Disco" as well as parties in their own homes for this purpose. Additional monies were received in the form of proceeds from the annual play May 3 and a car wash in June.

By the end of the school year, the club had accumulated a substantial sum, which club members then donated to a number of charities. The Foundation for Sickle Cell Anemia Research headed the list.

"Researching, Reading, Restoring, Reproducing, and Rendering" — motto of one of LHS' newest organizations, the Jerseymen. Led by its founder, Mrs. Andrea Amabile, and Mrs. Jane Popp, the club, affiliated with the New Jersey Historical Society, met twice a month under President Bill Yersevich.

To learn more about our state's past and its beginnings (an area known to the Indians as "Scheyichbi" through the colonial period) tours were made: to several State Historic Sites, highlighted by visits to Boxwood Hall, the Millicory House in Westfield, and the Towne of Smithville, a restored colonial village featuring antique stores.

In efforts to stimulate historical interest in others, club members set up displays in the Sunnyside and LHS libraries, in addition to having a hand in preparations for a Bicentennial dance and entering a float in Linden's Bicentennial Parade in June.

Other projects under consideration included historical gravestone rubbings and the establishment of clubs similar to this one in the two junior highs.

For those who can always be found with book in hand, the newly formed Literary Club, directed by Mrs. Audrey Wargo, opened a channel for the mutual study of reading matter outside the high school curriculum. With topics ranging from contemporary novels to the English classics, members selected one book each month to discuss and evaluate. Well into the school year, the club's reading list already included the likes of the Diary of Anne Frank, Other Side of the Mountain, A Christmas Carol, and The Bermuda Triangle. A Christmas party and a trip to New York City to see the stage production of Grease and dine at Beefsteak Charlie's January 21 were among the other activities of this firstyear club.

With the Debate Clubs of recent years showing a drastic drop in membership, Mrs. Claudia Craig widened its scope and changed the name to the Creative Arts Club. This "new" club gave members the chance to express their creativity through writing, analysis of prose and poetry, dramatic interpretation, and skit performance as well as oratorical readings and debates. Club members entered various statewide contests throughout the year in these areas. One member, Robert Squillace, even had a few poetic works published in a national literary magazine.

Liaison between student and administrator, the Student Council has had, in recent years, difficulty in accomplishing student-derived goals. This year, however, the council, through successful fund raising, could at last show something for its efforts. A radio, bought by the council and placed in the cafeteria, played the music of stations WNEW and WNJR at each of the five lunches.

Soon after the radio was installed early in the year, council members set to work on the many questions and complaints brought to them. These included the lack of heat in certain parts of the building, unsatisfactory conditions resulting from students eating in the lavoratories, the need for more time before the afternoon warning bell, and the need to reform the policy of locking lavs after sixth period.

In trying to find solutions to such problems, the council participated in a student-exchange program. While visiting Union Catholic, Linden students were immediately impressed with the practice of allowing students to leave the building during study halls and lunch periods.

To help other schools in the enforcement of regulations, Council President Tracy Lospinoso, while attending the State Student Council Convention at Rutgers University on January 19, demonstrated the construction of the Linden High Handbook to representatives from different schools. Armed with a battery of ideas to combat student apathy, the councils of the LHS student government began taking action as soon as positions were assumed in September. Persistance paid off, as council members finally achieved a number of successes.

Mr. Gerry Colabelli, Senior Class Adviser, met with his council second periods. At these meetings, representatives of each homeroom voted on such matters as prom and door-to-door senior class salesmen used "friendly" persuasion in combination with a "don't take no for an answer" policy to peddle thousands of chocolate bars during two major sales. Nearly $2000 in profit resulted from the selling of the chocolate-almond and chocolate-cruch varieties. These funds, along with those of other money projects, such as $1.00 class dues, lowered the cost of Senior Prom bids and tickets for the Senior Banquet in April.

The Junior Council made weeklong preparations for the "down home" atmosphere of a very successful Barn Dance in November. The council also sponsored a film, The Hindenburg, at the Plaza Theater and collected class dues to reduce the price of Junior Prom bids.

A lack of interest on the part of class members caused the cancellation of many Sophomore Council activities. The tradition of selling Cadet Stationary continued, however, as did the year-end car wash.

A blur of demin blue and checkered flannel met the eye on the night of November 7 in a surprising rush of excitement and enthusiasm among members of the junior class. The Junior Barn Dance proved to be a great success as council members, determined to triumph over a lack of student support that cancelled two previous barn dances, roused enough interest in this dance to assure an outcome that surprised even themselves. Caught up in the swinging spirit of the evening, Junior Council President Karen Kakstys boasted "we never gave up hope," as nearly 175 juniors bought tickets at $1.50 a piece to cover the cost of a caller, cider, and the 400 doughnuts consumed.

A pie eating contest highlighted the event. Plunging head-on in the face of unmeasured competition, one volunteer representing each of the eighteen homerooms attacked the Vo-Tech's chocolatecream pies with a gusto that raised cheers from the crowd that flocked about them. Face to face, Mark Smolyn and Donald Hall battle it out on the board.

Floundering in a sea of clubs that "just weren't right," a number of students took it upon themselves to organize the one that would suit their needs and interests. Chess and backgammon have always been popular board games with certain groups, but this year had been the first for a Backgammon Club and the first in many for a Chess Club to form in Linden High School.

The Chess Club, begun midyear under the supervision of Mr. Albert Hoffman, met on Thursdays after school and competed in tournaments with players from other schools.

"I was bored in a study hall; I had to find something to do." Many students with this same feeling decided to put their spare time to good use by joining various committees and crews which performed necessary tasks during certain periods each day. Members not only found practical applications for their skills, but also had an outlet for meeting people with similar interests.

Despite an increased work load due to the greater use of audio-visual materials by teachers, the Audio-Visual Aides Crew still found time to get experience repairing electrical equipment. Mr. Sigurd Thele, head of the audio-visual department, trained his crew in the making of video tape recordings after the completion of projector and film deliveries.

The Calendar Committee, under the supervision of Mrs Florence Casale, brightened up the bulletin board in front of the main office with the colortul calendars they created during sixth period Any student or teacher passing by the calendar could be quickly informed of all important events for the month.

Upon returning to school in September, the Library Aides were confronted with the time consuming task of reshelving hundreds of books removed for the purpose of painting the library last summer. One aide, in summing up the amount of work done, recollected, "I couldn't move my arms for a week after stacking all those books." After the chaos subsided, the Library Aides returned to their regular duties of assisting students in the library and stamping passes and books.

By offering explanation to students on some of the more elementary procedures of the Reading Lab, the Reading Lab Assistants provided Mr. Walter Hagensen with more time to help students overcome reading handicaps. To become an assistant, one must have previously taken a course in the lab Other chores included correcting papers and filing reading comprehension tests.

Working in the most hectic part of the school, the Office Aides never had a dull moment. When not running errands for administrators or office secretaries, the Office Aides sorted mail, answered telephones, looked up schedules, delivered absentee sheets, and typed up various listings. One remarked, "We feel like we're really accomplishing something!," a comment that could easily apply to all students who participated in the aides program

"We just planned the trips to the conferences and the girls did the rest," stated Mrs. Christine Simpson and Miss Barbara Jones, co-advisers of FBLA (Future Business Leaders of America). They were excited over the results of the Central New Jersey Regional Conference Competitions at Middlesex County College February 28.

Crediting their success to the "encouragement and experience of the Linden High School Business Department" and their own last-minute studying, the girls placed highly in the areas of Elementary Accounting, Clerical Practices, Spelling, and as Junior and Senior Stenographers and Clerk Typists.

Immediately after the Regional Conference, club members began preparations for the FBLA State Competitions in Cherry Hill March 26 and 27.

To help pay for transportation to and from the conference centers, participants in the FBLA program, headed by President Lauren Pedersen, held a Christmas candle sale and a car wash in the spring.

With a ring of the cash register, DECA, the Distributive Education Club of America, began another highly successful year. Under the supervision of Mrs. Roberta Specht, DECA members ran the D.E. Store. It was an experience which offered business students the chance to gain extensive practical knowledge in all areas of field marketing and distribution, while catering to the needs of the student body.

to the school year, brought in the funds necessary for a Senior Employer-Employee Banquet, as well as other activities. The club also profitted from the marketing of coloring books, jackets, and steno pads among numerous other items. Anyone doubting the quality of the store's merchandise could find assurance in the fact that DECA members "stand 100% behind every product."

Early in the year, the club took a field trip to New York City, where members toured Burlington Industries, the World Trade Center, and J.C. Penny's Distribution Center. Inspired by these visits, President Joanne Ristau and others began preparation for the State Conferences in Cherry Hill. There, members would compete in the areas of advertising, display and display construction, job interviewing, merchandising, business mathematics, and modeling with students of other schools. "I don't know if we're going to win any of the competitions, but we're going to try our best and have as much fun as possible in the mean time," according to one hopeful participant.

On becoming part of the yearbook staff at the close of their sophomore year, the creators of what would become the 1976 Cynosure developed a quality to supplement any writing abilities or artistic talents. It was "perseverance," an attribute which has remained with them throughout the "yearbook experience" and has often been their most valuable resource while facing the many adversities inherent in Cynosure production.

In the interest of improving such production, staff members, with the cooperation of Mr. Herman Mopsick and Mr. Walter Hagensen, yearbook adviser, designed a new staff structure to be used on a trial basis.

With positions finalized in April, the yearly exercise in fear and frustration for nine senior editors began last spring with production of the 1975 Summer Supplement. Upon its completion, staff meetings turned to choosing a yearbook theme. After much trial and error, the editors hit upon " and now for something completely different," practical for its effectiveness as a transitional element and its ability to present the unique qualities of the Bicentennial year in relation to changes in the school, town, and the students themselves.

Work began after the annual trip to the Columbia Scholastic Press Association Convention in October, where staff members picked up important ideas in all areas, but especially in style and format.

In hopes of making their book "completely different" to go along with their theme, the co-editors met with associate editors to decide upon the various modified layout styles for each section. Innovative and informative copy styles were introduced, as was the use of acetate tape for headlines and borders, which accented each page and served to further unify sections.

To keep up with almost 1800 students on the move, a community section was added to the book to provide more in-depth coverage of the school year. Along these lines, the staff also expanded the year-in-review as well as sports and activities coverage. The Bicentennial also received its share of pages between theme and feature spreads, while being kept in its proper perspective with other happenings.

To further interest readers in the theme section, which often goes unnoticed, the editors used spot color (full color being too costly) and an amusing second person copy style.

At the Linden station, Co-Editor Abe Felngold awaits the train that will take him to the Columbia Press Convention.

Others lent their time and talent to this year's Cynosure production. Mr. Hagensen gave senior editors more time to finish their assignments by taking on the task of teaching Junior Staff members many of the yearbook basics. When not attending these classes, the juniors did the legwork prior to each deadline and completed monotonous, but essential detailwork. Members of the Photography Staff also made themselves available to the editorial staff to cover assignments as well as develop pictures upon request.

With the arrival of spring, another yearbook had at last come full circle. As the seniors came to grips with the trauma of final deadline, the juniors looked forward to assuming various editorial positions. Traditional doubts and anxieties will again plague these new editors, as they discover for themselves that a yearbook doesn't just "happen." The process is slow and tedious in fact, even on good days, the pace never changes, because for quality, nothing beats "one page at a time."

Adviser's Note:

Were it not for the consuming interest and inspirational efforts of Abe Feingold this yearbook would not be what it is. He acted in fact but without title as Editorin-Chief much to his credit and the quality of this book. With "all the news that's fit to print," the Chronicle continued to be a monthly highlight at LHS, drawing student interest with its coverage of school events as well as its coupons for free "frosteds" at Mr. Burger.

According to News Editor Kathy Humenanski, the activities and interests of the students were of the greatest importance to the Chronicle staff this year. In keeping with this philosophy, the staff decided against entering any out-of-school competitions, judging them to be a waste of money and of little interest to the hundreds who read the paper each month. These students' opinions rather than those of any outside agency, mattered the most to staff members.

The Chronicle, under the direction of Mr. Alex Shipley, profited from the many contributions of his journalism students. Along with the regular staffs, these students offered their time and talents in the writing, advertising, and circulation of the paper.

In the spirit of the Bicentennial, a new feature, "Sports Stars of the Past," made an interesting addition to the already extensive sports coverage given by the Chronicle. Outstanding athletes of Linden High's past became the subjects of these columns produced by students at LHS. Guided by the experienced hand of second-year editor Robert Squillace, the editorial staff, predominantly seniors, met every other week to discuss and evaluate various literary works submitted by students. Staff members paid special attention to both style and language, as well as considering the author's intentions in composing a particular piece. Later in the year, a final choice was made as to the contributions that would constitute the actual publication.

Though In Tenebris remained a chiefly poetic offering, this year's staff shifted emphasis to prose writing in an effort to create a more balanced display of talents.

With the printing completed by Mr. James Richardson's graphic arts classes, distribution by staff members took place in May.

Students try everything from sex-appeal to being pushy to sell an ad, basically because the feeling of accomplishment is tremendous. In addition to business advertisements, members of the Cynosure Advertising Staff, under the guidance of Mr. Stanley Haiko, sold three types of boosters: student, alumni, and the new senior parent variety.

Another innovation was to have co-student chairmen Cheryl Beluch and Donna Zacharkiw, attend the Columbia Press Yearbook Convention in October. Through training received there, they were then able to instruct their staff in various advertising techniques, such as greeting the customer, persuasion, drawing up a contract, and billing. Early in December, the Cynosure Circulation Staff, under the direction of Mr. Robert Bunce, began accepting orders for the '76 yearbook. In late May, staff members distributed the books to those who had purchased them.

In an effort to teach his staff all aspects of the newspaper business, Mr. Alex Shipley combined the Chronicle Circulation and Advertising Staffs into one unit. This staff then proceeded to solicit ads in the fall, and continued these efforts until the deadline of each Chronicle edition. The staff also spent long hours folding and inserting the center page of the paper upon its arrival. While distributing subscriptions and selling the Chronicle, staff members reluctantly accepted the harsh reality that many people have no respect for the amount of work put into the Chronicle or what running a newspaper is really all about. This has been perhaps the hardest lesson for enthusiastic staffers to learn.

- Mar. 9—Irving Gutkin and Michael Villano were elected to three-year terms on the Linden Board of Education in a light voter turnout.

But the story doesn't end here, for as of March 15, when this record ended, many of the key news items from this time period had not yet been resolved. For instance, the fate of Jimmy Hoffa remained a mystery, though speculation splattered the front page now and then. In San Francisco a decision in the controversial Patty Hearst case hung on closing defense testimony and the attorneys' final arguments, while across the country, New Jerseyites awaited finalization of a state income tax. And, as can be expected in an election year, Presidential hopefuls looked forward to the state primaries that would thrust one of them into the foreground as a clearcut favorite in the November election.

Will the end results of these events also be crucial in shaping our lives in years to come? And what about the news that has yet to happen? To answer these questions, time for reflection is necessary, for only through reflection can one ascertain which events of apparent importance in the present will actually constitute the history of the future. Styles & Thends

What were the styles and trends for the schoolyear '75-'76? That's a difficult question to answer, but in general, these were the most talked-about innovations in the areas of fashion, music, motion pictures, and television.

The Tube — Avid T.V. watchers met a host of new characters this season: the "Sweathogs" — Juan Epstein, "Boom-Boom" Washington, Vinnie Barbarino, and Arnold Horshack, and their teacher (Gabe Kaplan) in the hit series "Welcome Back Kotter;" "Starsky and Hutch;" the "Not Ready for Prime-time Players" on "Saturday Night;" Fonzies friends "Laverne and Shirley;" the Lassiters of "Beacon Hill;" and, of course, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," which bursts onto the screen uncensored at 11 P.M.

The Sights — The biggest on the "big screen:" Jaws, Three Days of the Condor, Tommy, One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Dog Day Afternoon, Mahogany, Barry Lyndon, The Sunshine Boy, Let's Do It Again, and Nashville.

... and Sounds — The "Disco" sound emerged and the nation bumped and hustled to The Silver Convention and Van McCoy; "Sedaka was Back" with a string of hits and the Captain and Tennille saw to it that "Love Will Keep Us Together;" Judy Collins sang "Send In the Clowns," Joan Baez, "Diamonds and Rust," and young and old alike relaxed to the gentle country rock of John Denver and Olivia Newton John; Jefferson Starship rode a "Red Ostopus" to the top of the charts and Paul Simon was "Still Crazy After All These Year;" And then there was "The Wiz," Glen Cambell's "Rhinestone Cowboy," The Eagles, Morris Albert with "Feelings," Barry Manilow, Natale Cole, and Janis Ian "At Seventeen."

The "Look" - The casual trend continued for both sexes, as students looked for comfort and easy care in clothing and hairstyle. Those styles featured included "perms" for men and feathered haircuts for women on top, "Exersoles" or workshoes on the bottom, and the middle filled in with Corduroy straights, carpenter pants or fatigues, personalized tee-shirts, and sweaters and tops of every conceivable type, all in earthy shades of khaki, brown, rust, grey, blue, and the year's newest color, white. Though "denim, denim everywhere" had remained a wearing tradition, this season's fashion statement proved to be a personal one. The key to "dressing up" or "dressing down" came in the form of hats from derbies to berets, leather wear and quilting, toe-socks, scarves and liquid silver jewelry.

An then, of course, there were this year's "unclassifiables:" "mood rings," "pet rocks," and "Monty Python."

EDUCATORS

When that bell rings at 2:45, students are not the only ones who try to forget the trials of a busy schoolday. Teachers, those individuals trained to readily take on the challenge and responsibility of the classroom, meet even greater personal demands outside of school. Their interests run the gamut of expense and degree of accomplishment and are as diverse as home gardening and flying airplanes. As a group of professionals, teachers share the enjoyment of their work with young people, but when the time is their own, they differ from one another as much as the students they teach.

March of 1975 saw voters cast their ballots in Linden's first election for membership to the Board of Education. The new balloting method gave citizens a greater voice in educational matters and extended the board from the mayorappointed panel of five members to a popularly chosen council of nine.

Mrs. Lucy Kiseli, already a commis-sioner for six years under the mayorappointed system, took another three year term along with Mrs. Bernice Davis.

Mrs. Anne Fortuna, one of the original petitioners for an elected board, and Mrs. Mary Lou Lystash, a member of the P.T.A., both won two year terms.

A single year term went to Mr. Edward Ciemniecki, currently a senior at Princeton University.

The newly elected board, after installing Mrs. Davis as President, set out to tackle major concerns of a number of Linden residents: budget revisions, open enrollment, action on whether to close down School Seven, and ways of curtailing an increase in student suspensions.

School evaluations happen only once every ten years, and March of 1977 has become the target date for the arrival of the Middle States Evaluation Committee at Linden High. The evaluation is conducted to assure the availability of quality education to all students. Accreditation of a school can only occur after it meets standards set up by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Observation of classes in progress, interviews with faculty members and students, examination of the curriculum and inspection of facilities number among the key interests of the committee.

In preparation for the upcoming evaluation, Mr. Mopsick O.K.'d the painting of hallways and classrooms, as well as other renovation work completed over the summer. In January, he also began to organize various committees to participate in a comprehensive study and self-evaluation prior to the actual event. To these committees fell the task of reviewing each subject area offered and making revisions in subject matter to meet the needs of students, the community, and to uphold the philosophy of the school in regard to a proper education.

The constant flow of students in and out of the guidance office attested to the counselors' continued efforts to help and advise everyone from incoming sophomores to career-minded seniors. Aside from these duties, Mr. Floyd Booker found the time to continue his annual survey of L.H.S. graduates. With a response rate of over fifty percent, the information gathered from cards sent to each graduate concerning his current status forms the basis for a special state report.

Mrs. Angela Ganci, with ten years experience in counseling at Soehl Jr. High, moved up to the high school to fill an opening in the department left by the retirement of Mrs. Julia Creitz.

Faculty

English

The introduction of many new books and films, aimed at seniors in particular, marked recent improvements in the English Department.

Contemporary Lit classes received the novels All Quiet on the Western Front and The Bermuda Triangle, while Art of Film classes studied the newest film acquisitions of the department, as diverse as The Good Earth and Goodbye Columbus.

Poetry of Rock and Reflection of American Values, made available to all English teachers, numbered among progressive films offered for the first time this year.

With the popularity of journalism and film appreciation courses, planning began for a new course entitled "The Media and You," to be offered as a half-year elective next year.

Outside of school, Mr. Mark Mohr's Elizabethan Lit classes ventured to Stratford, Connecticut and the Shakespearean theater there. A Bicentennial essay contest sponsored by the Kiwanis Club also met with favorable student reaction.

Finally, a micro-film machine, used for viewing past issues of magazines and newspapers and producing copies of such materials, made its appearance in the school library also through the work of this department.

Mathematics

By utilizing such films as Center of a Circle and Triangles, in addition to providing pocket calculators for all instructors, the Mathematics Department developed a more sophisticated approach to the teaching of subject matter than in previous years.

With an emphasis on useful skills in the computer programming course, multiple revisions were made in an effort to increase its popularity among juniors and seniors. Likewise, the metric system received more than superficial treatment in all classes through books and projects as measurement in America gradually moved in that direction.

In curriculum, plane geometry became available to juniors as a result of those who had taken the two-year Algebra I course (A and B) in their freshman and sophomore years rather than the singleyear course in ninth grade alone.

Social Studies

With perfect timing, the Bicentennial ushered in new additions to the curricular and extracurricular offerings of the Social Studies Department.

"The American Legal System: 'Justice for All'," a half-year elective conceived and taught by Mr. Michael DiMicele, offered seniors the opportunity to become familiar with basic legal concepts, constitutional rights of the citizen, types of lawsuits, and criminal justice. With the popularity of this course, plans were soon underway for the expansion of consumer education courses and the opening of them to all students next year.

In keeping with the educational trend of being constantly updated in subjects, the department made full use of cassettes, films, and videotape recordings.

Interest in New Jersey's role in early America prompted the formation of the Jerseymen Club by Mrs. Andrea Amabile, in affiliation with the New Jersey Historical Society. The club visited historic points of interest, particularly those of a colonial nature, which dominated field trips in the entire department. Destinations included the Liberty Village in Flemington, the Old Village in the Towne of Smithville, and Philadelphia.

Response varied greatly in each foreign language course. Enrollment increased as a whole in all beginner courses, as well as fourth-year French and German classes. Spanish III Advanced and Spanish IV had to be combined due to a lack of student interest. An exceptionally large enrollment in lower level Spanish, however, prompted the hiring of Miss Margaret Burke, a junior high English teacher, to assist as a parttime Spanish instructor.

With the departure of Mrs. Jean McKeown on a maternity leave in November, Miss Ida Nagypal received the position and conducted all French classes.

In other developments, the German Consulate in New York City provided German classes with video-tape recordings of television programming seen presently in West Germany. Also, despite student rejection of a no credit course in Italian for the third straight year, enough interest developed in the country's culture for the creation of an Italian Club by Mrs. Marie Cacioppo.

Science

Caught up in the Bicentennial spirit, the Science Department made a point of showing America's contribution in many scientific fields. Activities included the preparation of an anthology of American scientists and their accomplishments by a committee of science students and the creation each month of a bulletin board depicting Bicentennial themes and their relationship to the sciences.

After four years, the cost of having two teachers conduct a single class proved to be too much of a budget strain. Therefore, the two-year bio-chemistry course, spanning the sophomore and junior years, had to be discontinued in an effort to reduce spending. The course, however, will become available again in two years to seniors who have completed studies in both "honors chemistry" and "honors biology" respectively (a reversal of the usual course sequence). The feeling prevailed that, with interests firmly established, only those students with a true desire to take the course would receive it, thereby reducing the number of classes and ultimately the expense.

Other faculty changes occurred in the department. Chemistry II classes received a cut in teachers from four to two. With the departure of Mr. Lester Barr, Mr. Michael Gaines opted to drop all but one of his regular chemistry classes to teach physics for the first time this year. A newcomer to L.H.S., Mrs. Dolores Menzaco, taught biology to fill a vacancy in that realm of the sciences.

Many biology teachers took advantage of a new series of film-strips and cassettes dealing with ecology to incite student interest in this area and to assure the success of an environmental science course planned for next year.

As far as field trips, advanced biology classes trekked to a professional laboratory while oceanography classes held research outings at Sandy Hook as usual.

Since the immediate future offered a bleak outlook in terms of employment in business-oriented fields, the Business Department tried to provide instruction in the newest skills required to succeed in today's tight job market. To do this, an advisory council, scheduled to meet twice a year, formed in September to make provisions for use of the latest in training techniques.

Courses entitled "Office Occupations I and II," designed to give students a more thorough understanding of office policy, became part of the curriculum. Other innovations included the acquisition of a mini computer for machine bookkeeping and recorded tapes concerning interview procedure and proper telephone usage, plus an updating of dictation topics for stenography classes.

Throughout the year, field trips to J.C. Penney stores and to the Prudential Life Insurance Company in Woodbridge helped to demonstrate the practical aspects of a business education.

"Jhis Sub is Here to Stay"

Miss Fran Malik, a familiar face in halls and classrooms throughout the school, took the position of regular substitute teacher at L.H.S. this year.

Miss Malik, herself a graduate of Linden High, received her Bachelor of Arts degree at Kean College and has gone on to attend courses at Seton Hall.

Playground directing and the influence of those English teachers who instructed her at L.H.S., led Miss Malik to the teaching profession. Intrigued by the performing arts, Miss Malik was one of two chosen candidates who continued studies in Europe with the National Council of English Teachers after completing her work at Kean. There she attended lectures at a number of universities in her study of the theater.

Soon after her return to the U.S., Miss Malik began substitute teaching in Hillside and Linden. The following summer, she went back to Europe on a Seton Hall program to continue her theater studies, do research, and attend various play performances.

In her spare time, Miss Malik enjoys reading, film, theater, handicrafts, and also Sunday School teaching. Presently, she directs activities at the Gregorio Recreational Center and holds membership on the Linden Bicentennial Committee.

File Under Missed Persons

Mrs. Lillian Winetsky, head of the Business Department, retired early this year after forty years of teaching at L.H.S. Under the influence of an ele-

Under the influence of an elementary school teacher who instilled in her the desire to help others learn and understand, Mrs. Winetsky decided upon the teaching profession. Due to a lack of openings in the English Department, her chosen field, she began instructing bookkeeping classes in January of 1934. After 28 years of service in the Business Department, Mrs. Winetsky became the Departmental Head in 1962, the position she held until her retirement in November.

On departing, Mrs. Winetsky remarked that she would now like to pursue the things she enjoys most: theater, bridge, and reading. She also planned to take in a few English Lit and writing courses, do volunteer hospital work, and travel to Canada to visit relatives in the near future.

Jeachers Strike

As the single out-of-school activity made to accomodate a mixed faculty, the Teacher's Bowling League attracted a large number of participants from L.H.S. Regular faculty members, secretaries, and even past board personnel headed for Linden Lanes each Wednesday afternoon from September to May for a bit of healthful exercise, relaxation, and socializing with faculty members from other schools. Bowlers who distinguished themselves throughout the season received recognition at the banquet held at its conclusion. For many teachers, however, the social function of the league proved to be more important than the sport itself.

Au revoir

In early November, French students bid farewell to Mrs. Jean McKeown as she departed L.H.S. to give birth to her first child. Numerous parties and gifts marked the occasion, as well as a letter of goodbye from the French IV class published in the Chronicle. Anticipating an extended leave of absence, Mrs. McKeown expressed a desire to resume her teaching position in September of 1977. Until that time, Miss Ida Nagypal, who took over instruction of all French classes and the advisership of the French Club, will fill the vacancy.

Hoop-la!

"Point us in the right direction and we'll shoot, pass, and rebound with uncanny grace and skill (during the first two minutes)." These words by Mr. Mike DiMicele typified the attitude taken by a group of men who enjoy a good game of basketball.

For ten years, Linden High has produced a squad of teachers to participate as one of seven teams in the "B" Division of the Linden Rec Basketball League. With no coach, no practice sessions, and a record of 6 and 4 last season, this year's faculty team faced new and unmeasured competition each Wednesday night they played. At these times, the "Iron 5" took to the court with the confidence of men who play the game by "instinct" and depend on teamwork rather than individual talents.

Mr. 'D'., who acted as team manager, joined cagers Mike Gaines, Bill Martin, Ed Kushner, Tom Hoagland, Wayman Everly, Gerry Colabelli, and George St. Andrassy among others in play each week.

Kooky Slaying on My Mind

To many, the words "truant officer" conjure up thoughts of "juvenile delinquents" being dragged off to school by the "long arm of the law." "Not so," say Mr. Tony Olivieri and Mr. Joe Soban, truant officers with five and twenty-three years of experience respectively.

Working out of Special Services, whose personnel receive instruction in the handling of students with personal problems, today's truant officer has taken on a new image. Since truancy proves very often not to be a matter of choice, an officer's duties have expanded to include the offering of both help and advice to those who require it and when necessary, the free services of the department (i.e. psychological counseling).

Students with high absentee records receive immediate attention from these men, who put them under observation. If any action need be taken, it comes only after careful analysis of the situation, for as Mr. Olivieri noted, "each case is different."

In Memorium

"I enjoyed working with her; she was very helpful and had a wonderful sense of humor."

Mrs. Patricia Roquemore, Nurse

Having retired only last May after serving 25 years in the capacity of nurse for the Linden school system, Mrs. Shirley Fleishmann, age 53 and a lifelong resident of this town, died suddenly on August 23, 1975.

Wedding bells rang on November 12 for Miss Barbara Sibilski and Mr. Anthony Muccia, both members of the L.H.S. faculty. Married in a candlelight ceremony at the Linden Presbyterian Church, the newlyweds dined at Don's "21" before departing for a short honeymoon to Washington, D.C. Mrs. Muccia commented that "Washington was a super, beautiful city" and that "she and her husband are very happy."

So Do J

In similar fashion, Miss Muriel Cahill changed her name to Mrs. Alvino Feniello with a small church wedding in Union Beach on November 22. Mr. and Mrs. Feniello honeymooned on a cruise at Eastertime.

Physical Education and Health

With more than two hundred students sharing gym facilities each period, overcrowding hampered plans for the physical education curriculum. The coed gym, now open to all, relieved some congestion. Golf clubs and a game of "ball darts" comprised all the new equipment for the coed gym, while in regular gym classes, girls received increased instruction in folk dancing.

With a new health curriculum firmly established last year, educational slides shown in the Senior Family Living course constituted the only additions made by the department.

Industrial Arts

Marked by a high student interest level, industrial arts classes continued to flourish.

After preliminary experimentation with a number of new woods received, wood shop classes turned out a variety of items to commemorate the Bicentennial, including American eagles suitable for hanging, reproductions of classic pieces of colonial furniture, and rustic log carvings.

The use of films enhanced the quality of learning in metal shop classes run by Mr. Anthony Muccia.

Male and female students alike registered for auto shop classes to beat ever rising costs in car repair. The use of such equipment as a new air-operated tire machine eliminated the need for tire removal by hand.

Fine Arts

Classes in the fine arts increased as more students preferred creative pursuit over crowded study halls.

Art students prepared works in many mediums for display at the Bicentennial Teen Arts Festival as well as a municipal exhibit.

Mrs. Frances Katzenberger, in her first year at L.H.S., taught home economics classes about many individuals and their contributions to finer cooking. She also helped students to create traditional Early American favorites along with famous international dishes.

Sewing students fashioned items for a Bicentennial display and completed an additional project of their own choosing. An informal survey showed a majority of male students at all levels in favor of a course aimed at the bachelor and his problems. With little male student involvement in the fine arts, action may be taken on a course of this type.

A few young men, however, did participate in vocal music classes. Singers received training prior to performances at local clubs, hospitals and religious organizations, the Spring Festival, and a hometown parade held in late June.

In its third year of existence, the Vocational-Technical School opened its doors in September as more of an integral part of the high school system than in the previous two years. Though problems still had to be ironed out, including the combination of three student levels in the same course simultaneously, the school experienced a progressive and fruitful year. With a majority of the equipment recently acquired, the changes at Vo-Tech occurred mainly in curriculum and teaching technique. Student interest in subject matter also rose.

Individual instruction, especially on the workings of complicated machinery, became the objective of graphic arts teacher Mr. James Richardson, who also reduced lecture time while turning to audio-visual aids as a source of information for his students. More girls have also taken part in the course this year.

In January, seniors in Auto Shop received grades as they rebuilt engines for Mr. Vincent Savoca, who made use of transparencies, library books, and films in teaching his course.

With an emphasis on independent study, Mrs. Adelle Dapkus led her commercial art classes in the creation of Bicentennial paintings and drawings, as well as a mural which now hangs in the St. Elizabeth's gymnasium.

Mr. George St. Andrassy's carpentry students cut backings for string sculptures made by drafting classes under Mr. Thomas Fiorillo, as efforts combined to produce commemorative Bicentennial projects. Advanced drafting students also made use of drafting machines, as opposed to the conventional straight edge, while all students worked with new transparencies and pipe drafting, a shortened form of regular drafting procedure.

Bake Shop students prepared Bicentennial orders for the Board of Education, under the supervision of Mr. Donald Raiger. This popular course featured an increased use of films and other audiovisual aids.

With the addition of spelling, word structure, and alphabetizing to the curriculum by Mrs. Emily Kubas, special projects in the cosmotology classes included the arrangement of colonial hair styles on manikins.

Mr. Walter Jedwabnik underscored the importance of blue-print reading in his welding classes, reenforced by a strong program of films and cassette recordings.

Audio-visual equipment also highlighted the Heating, Ventilation, and Air Conditioning course, taught in sequence by Mr. Philip Okun.

A significant part of the Vo-Tech, Mr. Bryan Wall's Employment Orientaiton Program for the Handicapped, prepared such students for employment in any one of several trades. With the accent on student teaching student, this group published a Bicentennial calendar given out at Christmas, in addition to cookbooks and a newspaper for School #1.

Services

Light humor breaks up a typically busy morning for Mrs. Weissbraten.

Vital to the preservation of order and efficiency, all the following men and women made possible each school day by providing their services to the faculty and students of L.H.S.

Mrs. Wesh and Mrs. Ross, as head librarians, opened their doors for the convenience of students promptly at 7:45 A.M., in addition to having hours during and after school each day.

Office secretaries checked student excuses, issued late slips and detention notices, and did general office work essential to organization in the school.

In cases of illness, Mrs. Brod, as Supervisor of Nurses, made available to students the services of a trained nursing staff.

Mr. Thele and crew provided the audio-visual equipment used increasingly for a wide variety of courses to complement regular classroom instruction and provide a welcome change of pace for many students.

At each of five lunches, cafeteria workers satisfied many a student's hunger with the preparation and serving of a large assortment of foods, drinks, and snacks.

After school hours, custodians and matrons performed the minor miracle of clean-up, supplemented by the little things they did during the day to keep the high school and Vo-Tech running smoothly.

Matrons—Maria Swiontkowski, Anne Frazier, Edith Carney.

With Mrs. Ross to personally show the way, Debbie Froehlich soon arrives at materials that suit her

Mrs. Smugeressky, Mrs. DiLeo, and Mrs. Schillinger begin unboxing the staggering amount of food consumed each day prior to beginning actual preparation.

STUDENT BODY

To be different, and more importantly, to leave behind a mark of one's uniqueness, gives worthwhile meaning to each page of the Cynosure. That part of one's make-up that withstands the weathering of time makes living memories of those who might be forgotten in the pages of a dusty, yellowed yearbook.

In striving for originality in a situation that too often breeds uniformity, students were not afraid to let go in expressing themselves. In these actions, many were taking their first steps in finding out what makes them individuals. Once they do, they have unlocked the secret to being different.

every great man is unique. - Ralph Waldo Emerson

The Senior-before him the world stretches out in a maze of sound and color. Around and around it goes, a whirlwind of ever changing thought and attitude. Sometimes, it may even turn upside down when revolution occurs in political, economic and social spheres.

At life's threshold, the Senior, who will soon embark on a road far from the security of home and family, may find it difficult to really understand both himself and his place amid the confusion of a world in constant transition. At these times, advice is most welcome, and what better source than the words of men who lived through times not unlike our own; words that gave strength to the multitudes and built a mighty nation.

The thoughts and feelings of America's early authors, statesmen, and philosophers that follow span a century of worldly political, economic, and social revolution. Their views, the building blocks of America's heritage, are as appropriate today as the day they were written.

Brimming with optimism, Nancy Lima and Ava Willensky anxiously await the start of their bus ride to the Camden game.

With an apparent victory in danger, Melissa Farber takes the foreground in the closing minutes of the Scotch Plains game. The Tigers did lose 14-12.

But first, a look at some students whose varied concerns make life just a little more interesting . . .

GETTING INVOLVED:

From among the many talented students of Linden High, one in particular, Danny Lemberg, has risen to a sort of celebrity status with an interest in magic that has led to a successful performing career. Within the short span of three years, the "Mysterious Daniel," as he is billed, has refined his technique to the point where he now appears regularly before audiences of all types. His most recent engagements have been with the Raritan Yacht Club, the Elizabeth Town and Country Club, the Hillside P.B.A., the Roselle Ladies' Club, and many church and synagogue functions. His talents and showmanship have also earned him a contractual status with Rahway Hospital, where he often performs in the pediatrics ward. Although he is still a student of magic, Lemberg even gives private lessons to those who share his interest.

What began as a hobby turned to a semi-career for the "Mysterious Daniel" after meeting the "Amazing Jimmy Brown," a professional circus clown who began giving him weekly instruction in the magician's craft. Soon after his first performance, arranged by an aunt before a youth organization, Lemberg saw the beginning of a highly profit-able business venture. Though he receives payment for the services he provides, the "Mysterious Daniel' has also been known to frequently offer his talents to local charities and benefits.

To keep up with the latest developments in the field of magic, Lemberg has joined the Magicians Round Table in Elizabeth, and has been attending meetings of the International Brotherhood of Magicians in East Brunswick.

An eerie glow surrounds the "Mysterious Daniel" as he performs for the children of Rahway Hospital's pediatrics ward.

THE ATOMIC BOMB CLUB — Robert Equillace, Robin Israelow, Arthur Croucher, Walter Rozdilsky, President David Felder, Adviser Mr. Michael Gaines.

"You asked for it, and you got it;" this year the Atomic Bomb Club became a reality at Linden High School.

Brainchild of President David Felder, the club was founded in the name of advancement through "scientific speculation." To gain entry into the club's rank and file, each prospective member had to submit a plan of his own design for some sort of atomic weapon or device. Plans were then scrutinized by club officers, and subsequently received the approval of adviser Mr. Michael Gaines. Those who became regular members as a result of complying with such rigorous requirements included Arthur Croucher, Robin Israelow, Tom Pienciak, Walter Rozdilsky, and Robert Squillace.

To enthusiastic cries of "Fight Genetic Conformity," (the club slogan) budding mad scientists endeavored at each meeting to perform a vital service to the scientific community by contemplating solutions to the world's many problems through the use of atomic power.

The success of such an unusual club proved to be a direct result of the dedication shown by each and every member. Knowing that great scientific breakthroughs come to light from such mere speculation, the hope is that this trend toward student interest in world problems will eventually result in the discovery of practical ways to benefit life in years to come.

"Search" — a program to develop Christian maturity, has, in the past two years, taken LHS by storm in terms of involvement among students in the eleventh and twelfth grades. The "Search" weekend program, founded

The "Search" weekend program, founded in San Francisco and affiliated with the CYO, is a "deeply moving religious experience aimed at helping the confused find themselves through Christ." Under the local (Union County) leadership of Father Ed Eilert of St. John's, known affectionately as "Fred" to those who have been involved with "Search," Linden High has the largest number of participants in this program of all high schools in New Jersey. Though a "Search" weekend unfolds spon-

Though a "Search" weekend unfolds spontaneously to meet the needs of the candidates, the typical weekend follows a basic outline of events and activities.

The first night, Friday, is entitled "Self" and allows participants to "take off their masks" and be the person they are. On Saturday morning, the topic is "Friends," at which time a discussion of relationships takes place with reference to the story of Christ. This talk continues into the afternoon, when love at home is emphasized and the weekenders receive letters of encouragement (palancas) from fellow Searchers. The climax of the entire weekend occurs Saturday night, when a summation is made of all matters discussed. Afterwards, stations of the cross are performed, followed by a mass which concludes the major part of the "Search" weekend.

On Sunday, the candidates gather together to relate to one another what has been learned through the experience and what effect it will have on life from then on. Sunday afternoon, searchers and friends form a circle and join in song at a welcome home party.

After the weekend, participants in the "Search" program can continue religious involvement by attending Bible Study meetings one night a week.

Breaking bread with Father Ed Eilert are Mark Szollar and Joe Boyko.

A solitary moment gives Bruce Manganiello time to read palancas.

"I have learned to respect people for what they are and the things they do" — Jay Earl

"Many people find it hard to show both their feelings and their love for others. The 'Search' weekend seems to help many to start expressing themselves and begin the maturing process through understanding and communication." — Kathy Lindsay

"'Search' isn't meant to change your life. It's just a weekend to get your head and heart in tune to what is meaningful in life." — Kevin Kinsella

Capturing the attention of the "Search" candidates, Mark Evan delivers an inspiring message.

HABON JON

The Junior-middleman of Linden High-often is denied the attention given to those other student levels. No longer can he claim to be the novelty which he was only the year before; already the incoming Sophomore has grabbed that distinction away from him. Nor can he be considered the seasoned favorite of the high school scene. He soon learns that, at least for now, he must live in the constant shadow of his elder, the Senior, who captures the limelight with continual reference that this is "his year" at LHS, and his alone.

A stigma sets in, verging to the point that anything with "junior" before or after it is considered a watered-down version of the "actual event" and unworthy of notice. Confronted with this sort of "identity crisis," many Juniors make every effort to set themselves apart by active participation in all facets of school life. A number of others prefer to bide their time, knowing that next year, the Sophomores will be in their shoes, the Seniors will be off to greater glory, and it will at last be their turn in the spotlight.

DEBBIE WOZESNIEWSKI

The Sophomore-no one can know September's insecurity better than he. Faced with the prospect of spending the next three years of his life in this place, he must quickly adjust to humanity and its influences, both good and bad, pressing in on all sides. Soon, he comes to grips with survival in these surroundings, really not so much different from life itself, and begins to make the most of his days here.

A first step is to take the offensive, to attack every new situation with a "youthful enthusiasm" many claim never to see nowadays. Learning the ropes can be both fascinating and frustrating. The total effect, however, is a good one. By the time June rolls around, the new Juniors emerge like butterflies from Sophomore cocoons, each with his or her own personal design, a most colorful addition to life at LHS.

In an original recipe, Roberta Allen, Jeanean Chapman, and Mary Harrell make laughter their main ingredient.

Crowded conditions at the first Drama Club meeting this year force prospective members Joanne Fusilli, Brena Gerenstein, and Karen Gunther to make their own seating arrangements.

ADVERTISEMENTS

Anyone who has purchased as little as a pack of gum these days knows that skyrocketing inflation has hit this country where it hurts most—in the money belt. In sweeping proportions, Americans have become price conscious consumers, looking for ways to make their dollars go further. As a result, manufacturers, who have geared themselves to this market that demands higher quality and better buys, have turned increasingly to sophisticated advertising for promoting their businesses.

Advertisements—an important part of not only our daily lives, but our culture as well. Certainly, the potency of today's successful advertising campaign should not be overlooked, as the effects are mind-boggling. One only has to consider the ad man's influence over Americans who are still trying to figure out what else is between the "two allbeef patties" and the "sesame seed bun" to know that this is true.

But how much have things really changed? Oh sure, the walls have a fresh coat of paint, but can that ever erase the memories that have been painted on them in years gone by? There's music in the cafeteria, but do these songs sound any better than the tuneful hum of friendly voices that's always been there? Certainly, things may look different, or even feel different, but the question is, are they really different? The answer is no. Life around here stays pretty much the same from year to year. You may see some minor "alterations" now and then, but in general, those that will last are not those that are immediately obvious. Permanent change takes place slowly, from within. These are the only real changes, and they take longer to develop than the life of any one schoolyear.

OPPOSITE TOP: When a lab problem arises, Glenn Korman, Jan Laird, and Denise LaVista turn to Mr. Kaplan for help and guidance. OPPOSITE BOTTOM: Towering over three generations of Linden students are these immortal words etched in stone. LEFT: A morning ritual for Mr. John Derkach — hoisting the stars and stripes. BELOW: Junior Willy Christian finds it hard to stay awake with a case of the traditional "Monday morning blahs." BOTTOM: While making monetary arrangements for the Senior Prom, Treasurer Liz Hegy reflects on the big night to come.

OPPOSITE TOP. Decisions. OPPOSITE BOT-TOM Contemplation. RIGHT: Gaining knowledge that could lead to a better tomorrow. Robert Giberson sets current flowing in an electronics class. BELOW: Future pharmacists Amy Horowitz and Thurman Kilgore discuss plans to enter Rutgers in September.

The immediate results may have been spectacular, but the ideals that grew from these humble beginnings give this Bicentennial year a quality that will live on long after the last bit of fanfare. The Bicentennial has served to reinforce the basic American values so highly held, one of which is particularly important to students: the freedom of choice. In a world where many peoples are not free to run their own lives, it is nice to know that the future can be your future, one in which you will be the one making the decisions and benefitting from the wealth of resources America has to offer. A life filled with promise stands before you; opportunity is waiting for you to grab hold, so don't wait a minute!! Go out right now and
