Columbia Cougar

This year the Mirror is dedicated to the Cougar, that feline who for so many years has been the symbol of the athletic prowess, the school spirit, and all the other things that Columbia means to all of us. He is important not just because he represents our school, but also because he represents the spirit that throughout our three years at Columbia has bound us together, and made us as one in anything that relates to school. He is our tie with all those who have long since graduated from Columbia, for the spirit that he symbolizes was the same in 1928, and 1938, as it is now in 1948; the one thing that we have in common with everyone, everywhere who ever went to Columbia, is the Cougar. He is the spirit of Columbia, and he represents for all of us all the happy memories, the good times, the hard work, the joy and sadness, the football games, the baseball games, and the other athletic contests, which will forever recall to us our high school years, and remind us that these were, indeed, the "best years of our lives".

Senior History

Our last year in Columbia High School is rapidly drawing to a close, and soon the joys and sorrows that we, the members of the class of 1948, have known here, will become memories. Even now, though the past war is remote to us, we are to be remembered as the first full class to enter and graduate from Columbia in the initial three years of peace following the war. Many Columbia students whom we did not know died in order to secure for us that peace; and now, at last, we are ready to repay them, by preserving it.

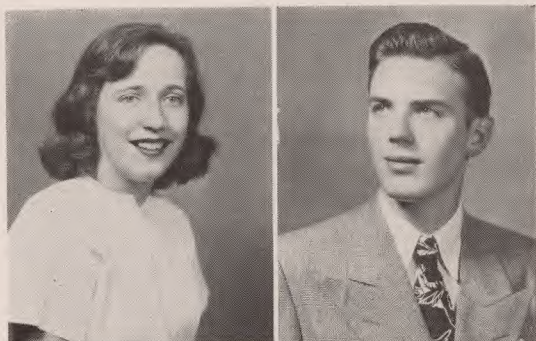

These past three years have been filled with unforgettable experiences. We are not likely to forget that first year, our sophomore year, when we finally "hit the big time." We were easily recognizable by the trusty Highlights we carried with us constantly, and by our awed and bewildered expressions, so characteristic of sophomores. We immediately joined clubs and committees, our talent manifested itself in the Sophomore Dramatic Club productions, and when, for the first time, we sat in the cheering section at Underhill Field, we became an integral part of Columbia. We viewed with equal enthusiasm the basketball and baseball games which followed until, before we knew it, exams were upon us. The long awaited summer vacation passed quickly and we returned to school assuming the role of the studious junior.

No longer lowly "sophs", we immersed ourselves in studies in order to attain that seemingly unattainable average which would assure our acceptance in college. Our talent was again displayed in that off-spring of the Pre-Junior Night Committee, "Time and Tide", which broke all previous records by demanding a third performance. With a wonderful musical score, a French girl, and an American boy, "cherchez la femme", plus many complications, the show was worthy of its acclaim. Then, after weeks of spirited campaigning, came the school elections which were followed in June by the graduation of the senior class and many sad farewells to graduating friends.

Finally, September, and we were seniors! We easily acclimated ourselves to this lofty position, and soon were busily engaged, in contrast to our junior year, in a multitude of obligations and extra-curricular activities. Appointments had to be made for yearbook pictures, the planing of the Mirror began immediately, the Senior Play Reading Committee assumed its responsibilities, applications had to be sent to the various colleges, College Board Examinations taken, and college conferences attended. As our last class production, we offered Edna Ferber and George Kaufman's Stage Door, and the show, with its comparatively large cast and complicated plot, was extremely well received. Finally, in this, our last year, there have been many innovations in Columbia; the acceptance of girl cheerleaders and twirlers, the procurement of new band uniforms, and lastly, the introduction of music into the cafeteria during lunch periods.

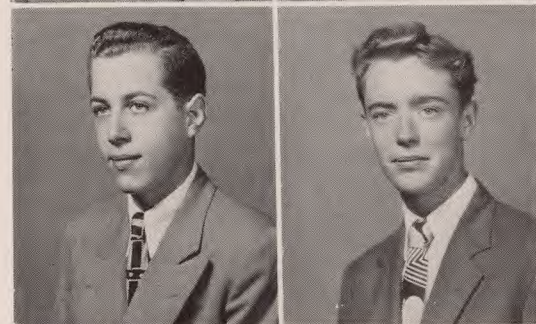

The activities mentioned on this page cannot accurately reflect the spirit of these past three years. Before the picture is complete, consideration must be given to the friendships that have been cultivated, the knowledge gained, and the happiness that has been ours here.

Daze of the Weak

Once again we pause to review our three-year sentence at Columbia. As we stand outside and gaze at our beloved school, large drops stream down our faces. (It is raining.) However, as we stand here with only a Latin book to cover our heads, we know how little we realized the number of opportunities that were available to us when we first entered these portals. Why, besides the regular curriculum we could enjoy any number of clubs or organizations. Remember those membership-drive slogans? "Get Rich Quick — Join the Finance Committee!" "Learn How to Slander in Four Easy Lessons at the Lyceum!" Or, "Everybody Can Join the G. A. A.!" (This one produced some mighty embarrassing moments.) But now let us review the accomplishments of the class of 1948.

Our sophomore year — how close it still seems to us (because we haven't got mentally very far away from it)! Remember our first year of geometry, when we learned that parallelograms weren't telegrams, and that a hypotenuse wasn't an African animal. There were several dramatic productions, too, and among them was the Sophomore Dramatic Club play, which, of course, all seniors snubbed. How those seniors took it out on us Sophs! That reminds us of a story:

One day a large elephant came upon an undersized mouse.

"Boy, you're small," said the elephant. "Why, you're the most insignificant thing I've ever seen."

"Yeah, I know," said the mouse. "I've been sick."

So let us now pass on to our junior year, and its greater advancements. And what did Shakespeare have to offer now? More people got killed in Macbeth than in Julius Caesar. And remember Junior Night — the only show with three performances? They couldn't believe it the first two times. Then, at the end of the junior year came the elections for school officers. "Elect MacKenzie and he'll tell you why he switched to another brand."

Finally, we arrive at our senior year. In Hamlet more people got killed than in Macbeth. Now that we were seniors, we thought we'd have the best seats at the senior play; if we had been given a seat one more row back we could have helped collect tickets. But the senior year brought innovations: a new coach, new band uniforms, girl cheerleaders, girl twirlers, and — new girls. Then there was the distinction of being in the integrated class (the intelligent group, you know). Take for example, this scene in the library:

One pupil who had been looking in a book of statistics turned to another and said, "Do you know that every time I breathe a man dies?"

"That's interesting," was the reply, "Why don't you try Sen-Sen?"

As we come to the end of our senior year, we are faced with the problem of college entrance. This problem is made more confusing by the required tests. College Bored tests! Some of the questions which appeared have had the most surprising answers. For instance, on the geography exam we found: "Where is Chicago?" Answer: "Nearly at the bottom of Lake Michigan." Or "Where is Denver?" Answer: "Beneath the middle o in Colorado." On the biology exam was the question, "Why is a fish?" Answer: "Because one of its legs is both the same."

So now as we walk away from the entrance of Columbia, and as we balance the NO PARKING sign for the last time, we are reminded of the immortal Shakespeare. As Romeo said in his farewell speech to Juliet, in Act III, scene 2: "Farewell."

That's a joke, son.

Class Will

We, the graduating class of 1948, departing to "tread the path that Columbia has taught us", tearfully discard our Magraders and gym bloomers (which, by this time, are expected to depart under their own power) and, with many a sigh, leave our high school days behind.

Therefore, we do hereby submit, with that superior air of the senior class, our LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT as follows:

Item 1: I, Doug Williams, leave the entire school, the many memories of tinkling on the ivories, a terrific band, and a certain tune called "Doug Out."

Item 2: I, Bob Spiotta, leave to Bud Becker, my azure convertible, splendid for a winter date!

Item 3: I, Carol Whitney, leave my knack of always looking disgustingly healthy to Joanie Taylor.

Item 4: I, Johnny Ward, bequeath a touch of my tall, dark and handsome distinctions to Jack Drury.

Item 5: I, Anne Hankinson, will to Emily Grady, the thought of what chaos we might cause if the man who invented the "Toni Home Wave" saw our naturally curly locks.

Item 6: We, Craig Koch and Art Gustavson, bequeath our handy little beverage containers to that always-thirsty Dough Mansell.

Item 7: I, Dolly Madison, leave to Iris Owen, my never-ceasing and irresistible laughter.

Item 8: We, the senior boys, do hereby bequeath, with all manner of sacrifice, a sharp razor to Mike Sellitto.

Item 9: I, Peter Porter, will to Dick Martin, my remarkable resemblance to a certain radio personality on at seven-thirty, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights.

Item 10: I, Jane Turek, willingly leave the power to run home, eat, change clothes, and be back in a 30-minute lunch period, to any junior without gym the period before.

Item 11: I, Jack Scott, leave to Griff Amerman, that devastating power over the femmes in the cheering section—any cheering section!

Item 12: We, Miggy Elliot and Barbara Oetjen, leave to Dot Christiansen and Julie Paddock, our deft and ferocious tactics on the soccer field.

Item 13: I, Fred Kapp, bequeath my varied repertoire of crazy antics to that erstwhile scholar Fred Stiener.

Item 14: I, June Zwigard, leave my Lilliputian stature to Pat O'Dell.

Item 15: I, Bill Ott, alias "the look," leave "the look" to Bob Wigder.

Item 16: I, Malcolm MacKenzie, will to the president-elect, the worries and tribulations of many weighty matters.

Item 17: I, Carol Borden, leave to Jean Sharkey, my big, dark eyes and long, curly eyelashes that sweep up nothing but envy.

Item 18: I, Audrey Van Allen, leave to Shirley June, the proof that "all men prefer blondes."

Item 19: I, "Zander" Reeves, will to brother Bob, the assurance that he won't have a big brother around to get confused with next year.

Item 20: I, "Fats" Meeder, relinquish my knowledge of the current bookie practice to any junior who can constantly pick the winner and collect without red tape.

Item 21: I, Pat Sickley, leave my endless stream of conversation to Dotty Brun.

Item 22: We, Clark and Mary MacWright (Opps!) leave our hallway rendezvous clear for Sandy Scheller and Mary Ruddick.

Item 23: I, Carol Zwigard, bequeath my cuteness and pertness alike to Nanny Osborne.

Item 24: I, Stu Merz, leave a large hunk of my pulchritude gliding around in the form of Barry Kalb.

Item 25: I, Rosanne Schmidt, leave to Margy Mersfelder, the art room and the hope that she can locate models to sit still long enough.

Item 26: I, Robin Roark, will to next year's captain, the football team and Coach Hoffman.

Item 27: I, Chuck Roemer, leave to any junior with a convenient game room in his cellar, the ability to throw a bang-up party!

Item 28: I, Joan Lindquist, leave with a shrill whistle lustily blown between two sterling front teeth and the assurance that they're still weak from laughter at Senior Night.

Item 29: I, Charlie Kimmel, brush the girls off my weary arm and bequeath them to Bob Stewart.

Item 30: We, Joy Hayes and Joan Timson, leave our college weekends to any junior with a man in every college.

Item 31: We, Lois Sheridan and Cathy Schneider, bequeath our freshness (even at 8:25 A.M.) to Mary Jane Radcliff and "Button" Cooke.

Item 32: I, "Zeke" Dare, leave a touch of my infectious smile to Dick Witzig with the whispered assurance that it will do wonders with the women.

Item 33: We, Winnie Kessler and John Strahan, leave the memory of the "Hessnessners" to linger on with Junior Nights to come.

Item 34: I, "Rube Waldele, bequeath my trend toward "Bachelorism" and a dead eye on the court to Don Campbell.

Item 35: We, Joan Stevens and Pat Norton, bequeath our smooth tastes in clothes, especially that "new look," to Neal Hagel.

Item 36: I, Barbara James, leave my all-around sweetness and charm to Joy Clason.

Item 37: I, Tom Hill.....will.

Item 38: I, Betty Mulligan, bequeath my smiling eyes to Joan Towey.

Item 39: I, Hank Kreuter, leave my sister Cookie.....take care of her fellows!

Item 40: I, Ted Smith, relinquish my most important and honorable position of drum major to Don Satterfield.

Item 41: I, Helen Goodzeit, leave memories of paintings and sketches done for all the enjoyment at C.H.S.

Item 42: I, Evelyn Walter, leave my baton to be twirled by talented Franny Denardo when our blazing band again sets forth.

Item 43: I, Bob "Lightening" Branch, leave to any student studying the art of expression, my own, which is always studious yet thoroughly whimsical.

Item 44: I, Liz Flower, leave my incessant giggle, so familiar to us girls in the gym locker room, to haunt the place next year.

Item 45: I, Lamarr Harmon, sho' nuff do bequeath ma' slight south'n accent to any junior who may have trouble managing the women.

Item 46: I, Elaine Warden, bequeath my all year 'round tan appearance to Dotty Eccles.

Item 47: I, Bob Bird, would like to leave a certain car but for some reason I can't even get rid of it that way.

Item 48: We, Georgia Ralston and Betty Lorenz, bequeath our tall, blonde, and glamorous looks to ?

Having thus distributed our worldly possession, we hereby bequeath, as a class, the following:

To the Janitors: A much wider broom and smaller refuse cars that won't be big enough to hold fugitive students trying to hide.

To the Lunchroom Committee: A quiet, digestive lunch period.

To the Student Body in general: A post graduate Junior High School course for every incoming Sophomore.

To the Faculty: A Monday morning absence note that presents an entirely revolutionary excuse.

To the Assembly Committee: A more scientific way of producing time killing assemblies.

To the Spanish Teachers: A gum that automatically dissolves upon entering "la clase de espanol."

To Mr. Jackson: A search warrant making it simpler to distinguish the guilty outsider from the student sitting in the cheering section.

To Mr. Fleming: Girls who will look at the French lesson and not at Mr. Fleming.

To Miss Lipscei: One U. S. history class which will surprisingly recall incidents taught us in Junior High.

To Mr. Hoffman: A team next year that will appreciate him as much as the team of '47 did.

To Mr. Sheely: A bulletin board committee with nothing on their minds but the bulletin boards.

To Miss Henderson: Conscientious 7th period monitors who refrain from leaving their posts early merely to avoid the bone crushing and disastrous 2:46 mob.

To the Medical Department: Several new symptoms and a logical reason why one should suddenly develop them — and suddenly recover!!

To the Class of '49 and '50: The sincere hope that your senior year finds you as happy as we are, and — as sorry to leave.

Senior Prophecy

The year 1958 It had been ten years since I had last set foot in Columbia High's hallowed halls. You can imagine my surprise when I received an invitation to attend a "Class of 1948" dinner at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

After donning my light tan pin-striped cutaway and green ascot, I set out, with great expectations, for the Waldorf. When I got there I was refused entrance, because all I was wearing was my cutaway and ascot. After remedying this situation, I once more set out for the hotel. This time I was admitted.

At once I was ushered into the main ballroom by a page boy whom I later found out was Malcolm MacKenzie (his party had lost the recent elections). As I entered, I noticed that Joy Hayes, a famous Conover model at last, was wearing the new 1958 look — saddle shoes, skirt, and sweater. At the bar I was heartily thumped on the back by Chuck "howdy partner" Roemer who had become one of the biggest cattle owners in the West. He told me that his partner, Stu Merz couldn't attend because he was having trouble with a heifer on the ranch.

Music was being supplied by Doug "Eliot Lawrence" Williams and his Sophisticated Men of Rhythm: Skin Meeder on baritone sax, John "slippery lips" Skudris on trumpet, Eddy "thumper" Paul on bass, and Walt Layer on straight pipes, I mean, tenor sax. I spoke to Doug and he told me that Ted Smith was breaking it up at the Onyx Club on fifty-second street.

Irene Guest was not at the party because of the opening of her new show "Follow the Boys". Over in a corner I saw John "Bugsy" Ward and George "I don't ever win!" Wells playing five card stud. I found out that he and John were owners of the blackjack concession at the New Jersey World's Fair.

At the bar again, I met Clark "loose-joint" MacWright. He showed me the business card of his famous law firm, MacWright, Wright, Wright, and Adler. While we were talking, Charlie "the Duke" Kimmel walked by. Clark whispered to me that Charlie was the owner of a chain of nightclubs in Maplewood. He also told me that the Statue of Liberty was going to be replaced by a statue of Liz Flower. The crowd was being entertained by the world famous dance team of Kniering, Van Dorn, Trimble, Pasman, and their managers Al Gaal and Jim Whitelaw; on the other side of the room Ann Barell, Cathy Schneider, and Jim Mehorter were also providing amusement as they performed in a weight lifting contest. Looking on was Steve "high fella!" Cox, who it was rumored, would graduate from Columbia this year — if things went right.

I happened to look up at the ceiling, and there I saw Bob Klein and Don Johnson playing "I got it" on the chandeliers. As I watched, I was suddenly grabbed from behind by Jim "the hand" Harrocks who was now the owner of the up and coming Whizzer Bike Company. He was with Pete "scoop" Porter, who was now a featured columnist on page four of the Daily News.

Next I noticed Jane Turek sitting over in a corner with Anne Hankinson. Jane told me she was taking skiing lessons from a Scotch champ. Anne, on the other hand, was now learning to play the trumpet. Near by a group of boys was clustered around Joan Lindquist who was giving them a few lines from her recent show in which she was the star comedienne.

While patronizing the buffet table I met Dolly Madison, Liz Librecht, Marion Jayson, and Vicki Thomas, who were, as usual deciding what movie they would see the following Friday night. Just next to them, the now world famous bridge club of Anito Nyman, Dolores Cetrule, Jean MacDougall, Pat Sickley, Betty Wise, Nancy Parker, Ginny Green, Judy Veidt, Ann Barell, and Nancy Palmer, was opening its weekly session at the card table.

Sneaking back to the bar I found Robin Roark trying to teach Jack Scott how to make a zombie. Looking on to learn Robin's technique I was kicked by Jack Milnor who was practicing "Giant Swings" on the bar rail.

I noticed a bunch of girls standing not far from me and hurried over to speak to them — only to find Tom Hill in the center of the group. Tom was now employed as a cover model for Health and Strength magazine. Also in the group was Colleen Bradley, now one of America's finest young ballerinas. With her was Joan Johnston, Powers model — she models gloves. Sitting quietly to one side were Joan Rumson, Betty Mulligan, Joan Quinn, and Robin Wood. They were still waiting for the boys to get home from college.

Staggering back to the bar I met Zeke Dare and Bob "How do I do it?" Spiotta. They were in a deep discussion. Bom who now owns the American Shops, was trying to sell Zeke a double breasted pin-stripe; Zeke was desperately trying to find out how Bob was making out with the women.

Suddenly everything went black, and turning, I found that I had wandered into the shadow cast by big Jim White-law now head basketball coach at Columbia. With him was Rube Waldele better known as "Larry Owen" Waldele, sportswriter for the Maplewood News.

As I was reaching for the last bit of free lunch, the hand of Georgia Ralston grabbed it first. Georgia, who was now in league with Lamar "hi! you all" Harmon to move the Capital below the Mason Dixon line, dragged me to a table, and gave me the lowdown on some of my former classmates. She told me that Bill Ott had finally taken out a girl and that he was now one of the most famous Maplewood Casanovas. She also mentioned that Frank Warta was now in the employ of the Alderney Dairy Farms. He moos at the cows to keep them more contented. Pat "my heart belongs to Georgia" Moran had succeeded in swimming the Pacific Ocean at last, she told me, and added that Barbara Reinfelder, Joan Stephans, and Adele Weilert were now starring in the Theater Guild production of Macbeth as the three witches. While gulping down a few more drinks she told me that Lillian Harsch was now featured at the Met. I thanked Georgia for her information, and under her guidance made my way back to the bar on all fours.

Here, hanging next to me was George Petrozello, a product of the Kloetzer School of Fine Arts, who was teaching stage lighting at Columbia now. Parting the haze of my cigarette (given me by Dave "I'm a family man" Noble), I saw Fred Kapp coming through the door. Stanley Amsterdam, who was now running a marriage bureau told me that Fred had become head of Wrigley Chewing Gum Inc.

It was getting late, and I had to leave, so I bade my former classmates a fond adieu. As I was carried out of the ballroom which was now a shambles, I thought to myself that there never had been, and never would be, a class like good old 1948.

Junior Night, "Thumbs Up"

Set in old Rome, the junior class's spectacular production was a combination of colorful pageantry, humorous plot, original songs and dances, and specialty numbers.

The swift-moving plot concerned the amusing adventures of Maximilius, who was running for chariot vehicle inspector; the romance of his daughter, Livia, and her suitor, Paulus; and the adventures of five modern Americans who, by the power of the gods, had been whisked back into the Rome of Caesar's time.

Through the aid of the gods on Mount Olympus, a soothsayer and his stooge, the five Americans are given the choice of deciphering a riddle or being thrown to the lions. After figuring that lions are just over-grown alley cats, and would therefore like cat nip, the five finally receive the "thumbs up" sign from Caesar, Cleopatra, and other spectators.

Don Satterfield and Ed Coleman combined to write four songs, "Am I Yours?" "In My Roman Toga," "Holiday Song," and "Song of the Soldiers." Laura Jane Klein wrote the song, "By Hercules, by Jupiter, I Love You," and Dick Szeremany composed the song, "A Roman Rogue."

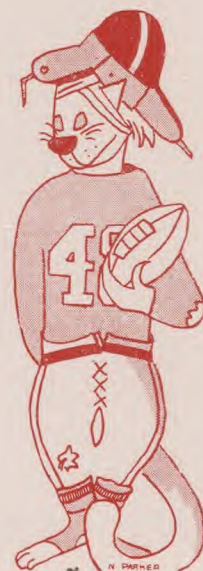

The Pre-Junior Night Committee consisted of Dick Wookcock, Bob Agman, Lee Beck, Victor Berent, Sue Conkling, Bob Daniels, Jeanne Darrell, Barbara Dieter, George Drake, Emily Grady, Shirley June, Connie Kidner, Laura Jane Klein, Bill McBurney, Ralph Miller, Bob Morris, Ann Nelson, Bob Redpath, and Anita Steinberg.

The whole production was under the direction of Miss Mary F. Clutton.

The dances, all of which were given for the entertainment of men in the play, were under the direction of Miss Ita Hoxsie and Mrs. Dorothy Horan.

The leads of the juniors' extravaganza were as follows:

Maximilius	Jack Bain
Asa Welchum	Bob Claus
Livia	Nancy MacDonald
Paulus	Fred Gaukstern
Senator Boppet	Don Winston
Ptolemy	Pete Rommel
Mrs. Dinwittle	Emily Grady
Schmovius	Fred Marengi
Bobby Gordon	Pat Odell

Girls' Sports

The girls of the graduating class of Columbia take with them many pleasant memories of three years of participation in the athletic events of the G. A. A. Each of our three years in Columbia held many high spots in the G. A. A. but the last year was by far the best.

We started the year with a big initiation and welcoming party for the sophomores. The first sport of the year was rough and tumble soccer, and then we were soon in the swim with the ever popular swimming team.

"Time out" was called for the big Christmas party. With two Santas, the party could not help being the success it was.

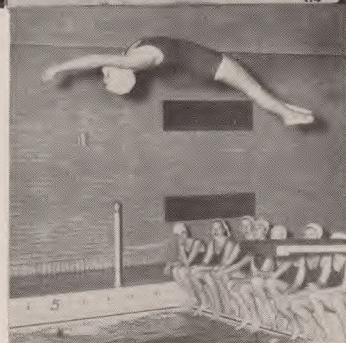

Then we turned our attention to the badminton tournament, which lasted for several months. This new tournament proved popular and produced champs in each of the three classes.

Soon we put our hands on the basketball and turned our eyes to the baskets. Then we moved on to the next sport, which was volleyball.

In the spring, we went into the pool again for life saving and then into the fresh air, batting and catching softballs.

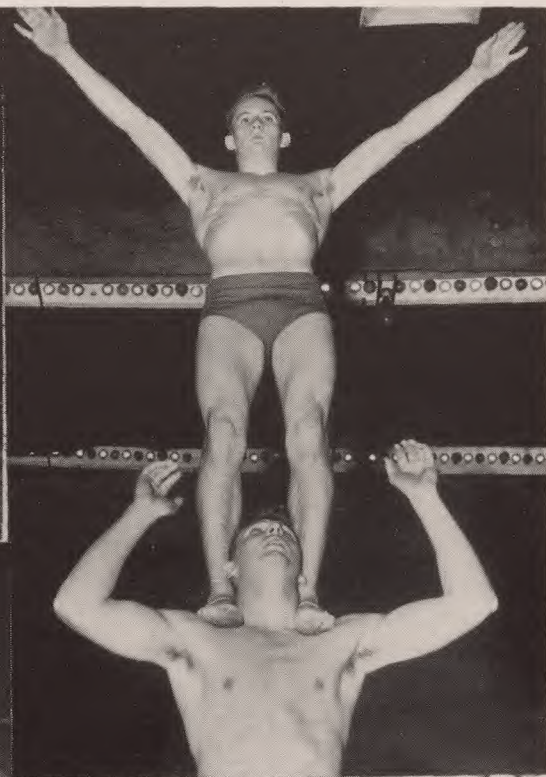

Once again this year the Dance Club contributed largely to the success and popularity of the G. A. A.

The biggest and best event of the year, the Awards Party, toward which we had all worked, brought to a close the finest of three grand years in the G. A. A.
