Poetry.

The following lines were written by an English gentleman, the father of a lady residing in our town, when he was 73 years of age. We were so pleased with the sentiment that we requested the privilege of publishing them, which was kindly granted. (ed.)

The Parted Spirit.

By sea.

Mysterious in its birth,
And viewless as the blast;
Where hath the Spirit fled from earth,
Forever past?

I seek the grave below—
It keeps the secret well;
I call upon the heavens to show—
They will not tell.

Of earth's remotest strand,
Are tales and tidings known;
But, from the Spirit's distant land,
Returneth none.

Winds waft the breath of flowers
To wanderers o'er the wave,—
But bear no message from the bowers
Beyond the grave.

Proud Solonoe scales the skies,—
From star to star doth roam;
But reacheth not the shore, where lies
The Spirit's home.

Impervious shadowy folds
This mystery of Heaven;
But where all knowledge is denied,
A hope is given.

Watts' Infallibility.

A story is told of an old clergyman, who had the most unbounded faith in Watts' hymn book. He was fond of saying he could never open any passage without finding an appropriate hymn. A mischievous son thought it would be a good joke to test his father's faith; so he took an old song, and pasted it over a hymn on one of the pages of the book, so nicely that it could not easily be detected. At church, on Sabbath morning, the minister happened to open at that very page, and commenced to read: "Old Grimes is dead." There was a sensation in the audience. He looked at the choir, and they looked at him, but such was his faith in Watts' hymns that he undertook it again, commencing with the same line. There was another sensation in the audience. Looking at it again, and then at the congregation, and then at the choir, he said, "Brethren, it is here in the regular order in Watts' hymn book, and we will sing it anyhow."

AN ENTHUSIASTIC ADMIRER.

A countryman at a New Orleans theater, the other night, as the escort of some ladies, retired at an intermission and returned with a pound or two of peanuts wrapped in a paper, and two huge bananas sticking from his pocket. Just then, however, and before he had time to take his seat, one of the actresses who had especially won his admiration, came to the footlights and warbled a beautiful melody. The full, rich voice, exquisite in intonation and breathy strains almost divine, completed the conquest of the countryman's heart, and unable to restrain his delight, he heaved on the stage his peanuts, bananas and pocket-handkerchief, as a tribute to the fair enchantress. There was a momentary astonishment visible upon the faces on the stage, a single interval of hesitation, which was removed by the countryman's voice, full and clear: "Take 'em, gal; by jingo, you're welcome."

A NOVEL COMBAT.

FIGHT BETWEEN SEA-GULLS AND A SEAL.

Parties who had occasion to cross the bay, on the ferry, between Oakland and San Francisco, on the morning of the 30th. inst., were entertained with a novel combat between a flock of gulls and a seal, when off the island of Verba Deena. No military leader could have planned a better attack than was made by the gulls. Advancing with great precision and in single file, they would swoop down on the seal, and then immediately retreat to the rear. The seal would receive a few attacks and then leap the water, diving under the surface and coming up again soon after. His reappearance, which seemed to be eagerly watched for by his assailants, was always the signal for a renewal of the combat. They were engaged in the warfare till the ferry-boat got out of sight.

The Tattler.

There can hardly be a more dishonorable return for hospitality of a family than to go about afterwards rattling to others the private matters of the household, which common honor would have kept concealed. There are greedy gossip who assail such a visitor eagerly, especially if she has had the fortune to visit in a family which is suspected of owning "a skeleton closet."
"Now, do tell us, is it really true that Mr. B. is in the habit of taking too much wine? Is he sharp and disagreeable in his family? Are they as vexed as people say they are, because young Arthur is so attentive to London Heaven?"

And then when a satisfactory (that is an unfavorable) answer is given, what an evil light is kindled in the listener's eyes—what mock words of pity are spoken merely to cover the real exultation at a neighbor's misfortune, particularly if that neighbor is in a higher or more prosperous worldly condition. If you have the misfortune to number among your intimate acquaintances one of those intolerable tattlers, drop her acquaintance as soon as you can. She will surely bring you into trouble if you encourage her visit, and worse still for manner of speaking of others. You can rest assured that you are served up in a similar manner for the entertainment of other friends.

Thrilling Incident.

An incident occurred during a Masonic excursion on the Mississippi, which cool and chivalrous Knight Templarship alone saved from proving fatally disastrous. One of the excursionists tells the story thus:

It was a magnificent sight to see our immense host accompanied by the Lady Gay and the Belle of Alton, their decks crowded with fair ladies and Knights Templars, hands of music, distinguished citizens and invited guests, as they steamed up the Mississippi, then down to Jefferson barracks, where we all went on shore to spend a pleasant hour, after which we again went on board and steamed merrily up the river. I was standing near the captain. The Commander of the Templars came and leaned wearily on the captain. I turned to Reuben Milton and whispered in his ear these words: "That man was born to command." He had the form of a Hercules, the head of an Apollo and the eye of an eagle, and as circumstances afterward demonstrated, the heart of a lion. Although not so very large, he appeared larger than he really was; he was full and athletic, and still every proportion was a symmetry and every movement a grace.

While he was still leaning wearily on the captain, and while I was yet analyzing his fine countenance, the captain of the steamer, with pale lips and blanched cheeks, approached the young Templar, and in a low and trembling voice said:

"Great God, sir, we are sinking! We are unagued, sir, in the bottom, and nothing can save us!"

"How long can you keep her afloat?" carelessly inquired the young Templar.

"She may go down in five minutes; she cannot keep afloat more than fifteen," replied the captain.

"Do not make your situation known to any one except your crew, or we will have a panic, and then all will be lost. Signal the Lady Gay to lay to; soon will notice or understand the signal of distress. Get your crew and hands ready to move; I will manage the rest."

"How, warrior, blow!" said the young Templar, speaking to his ensign, who stood near him, at the same time leaping upon the captain.

Every one was startled by a shrill blast from the warder's trumpet. A hundred Templars' swords leaped from their scabbards at the blast.

"Attention! Sir Knights," shouted the young commander. "The next ceremony in the programme is for the Sir Knights, ladies and gentlemen on board the Lady Gay. As the steamers are rapidly approaching each other, and cannot be kept but a minute or two together, this movement must be a rapid one. You will form in procession at once, and as the boats come together pass over the gangway under an arch of steel to the lower deck of the Lady Gay. Forward, Sir Knights, to the gangway. Music in front. The band will play 'The Knights Templars' Quickstep.'"

In obedience to these orders the Knights formed a double line to the gangway, facing round, with swords crossed above the heads of those forming the procession.

In less than eight minutes the whole precious cargo of human life had passed from the Mississippi to the Lady Gay, even to the colored cook, except the two files of Templars, when the young commander said:

"From the rear right and left, forward wheel. March!" and, filing forward, the Templars rapidly passed over the gangway to the Lady Gay, the young commander being the last to leave. One minute more and the Mississippi steamer sank to the bottom.

A man in Pierce county, Wisconsin, has made a singular piece of work. From a piece of pine board twenty-two inches long, four inches wide and seven-eighths of an inch in thickness, he has whittled seven pairs of dentist's forceps, three pairs of pliers, six pairs of blacksmith's tongs, one pair of horse shoe pliers, one twisted link chain with swivel, one straight link chain, a horn in a stall and two bulls in a box—in all forty-seven distinct joints, all of which will count, and play with the utmost freedom. When closed up, this singular piece of work is the size of the board above described; but when open or spread out for exhibition, it covers a space about two feet square. He was occupied upon this work six weeks.

Chromo printing is said to have been practiced in China one thousand years.

An alarm of fire aroused the people of Matawan, on last Sunday evening. The fire bell rang and the firemen rushed to their pumps and hurried with their gut to the scene of conflagration. Services had just closed in the Presbyterian and Baptist churches; but a prayer meeting was being held in the M. E. Church, and a prayer was being offered at the time of the alarm. The excitement was so great that many did not wait for the prayer to be ended, nor the services to be concluded with a benediction, but started in hot haste for the door. The crowd and firemen got as far as the bridge, known as the draw bridge, when returning messengers halted them by the tidings that it was only a large heap of shavings about a mile out of town and in front of Mr. Simon Arrowsmith's new house. The firemen deserve much credit for the quickness with which they were on hand and had their engine on the road. When they returned and answered to their names at roll-call, but two members were absent.

I wonder what can be the matter, With all the young men of our town; From this young man to young men faster, All wear silk hats with lofty crown. Go ask John Hawkins what's the matter, His stand is at the old Hotel; He is our enterprising hatter, Give him a call, he'll please you well. I heard a lady coughing dreadfully the other day, and thought "that lady needs to take Water's Balsam of Wild Cherry." We know it to be a superior remedy.

Mr. Cortlyou's new residence will be a very great improvement to the upper suburbs of Matawan, and reflects much credit on the designer and builder. It is, without doubt, one of the finest houses that have been erected in this section.

Mr. Morgan, who agreed for the purchase of the Matawan House, failed to meet the terms of sale, and the property is still occupied and owned by Mr. John H. Farry.

The trial of Thomas Patterson, indicted for atrocious assault and battery with intent to kill Constable Dismore, is set down for Dec. 20. Meanwhile Patterson has been put under $3000 bail.

Steamboat Disaster.

On Tuesday morning, 1st. inst., as the steamer Mattewan was on her way to New York, when near Robbins' Reef she came in collision with a large schooner, which swept away the entire side of the starboard cabin of the steamer and broke the pilot's bell wire. Attempting to enter the slip, at Barclay Street, the signal could not be communicated to the engineer to stop, and the steamer ran into a Hoboken ferry-boat, injuring the Mattewan quite badly. Great excitement existed among the passengers, and several ladies fainted. Mr. John Dismore, of our town, was thrown down with such force as to injure him severely in the kidneys and thigh. The report of the Standard that some bones were broken was, however, incorrect, and we are pleased to announce to his friends that he is now able to go around a little and hopes he can attend to his usual business next week. Capt. Joseph Hoff was also thrown down and slightly injured. Mr. Wm. Simpson was thrown overboard, but swam to the wharf and was taken out, minus his hat. A crowd of policemen, earmen and dock-lifers followed him back to the steamer anxious to learn his name, and reminding us forcibly of the saying of the old Irish woman, "May ye's never have loss to yer funeral."

The Long Branch News sees fit, in its issue of the 27th. ult., to advise us as follows:—

"The editor of the Matawan Journal says that correspondence of a moral character will be welcome to a place in its columns, but does not wish to be held personally responsible for them. Bro. Bell: We thought you would be willing to endorse morality anywhere."

And so we are willing to endorse "morality anywhere," but we are not willing to say to the clergy of our town, and to others, that we endorse all the sentiment of "One of the order." The correspondent takes occasion to censure the clergy and others, for not allying themselves with the temperance orders of our place, and asks two of them why they have not pronounced sermons on the subject, as they promised. We consider that there is much difference between morality and judiciousness, and while a correspondence may be moral as a whole, it may lack proper judgment in some of its parts. In the article referred to, the writer would seem to desire to take from man his free will, and say to him, as a minister, you should ally yourselves with our orders, whether you approve of them or not. There are many who would not connect themselves with the orders because of their secret character. We know not whether our clergy are of this class or not; but if they are, or if they have some other reason for not becoming members, is it judicious, is it right for a writer to single them out in the community and aim his shafts at them? Aside from their strict clerical duties, have they not a private social position as sacred as any other citizen's?—We are opposed to this behind-your-back way of censuring persons that do not agree with you. If they wish to condemn, let them go in person and do it openly, and not seek a retreat behind a nom de guerre, in a newspaper correspondence. Either our friend did not read the article referred to, or else the anticipated alliance, in wellnigh a few days later, had added his brain a little.

The Matawan Binge Can.

The shades of night were falling fast,
 As through our merry village passed
 Four youths, whose hearts had served to my,
 For Binge, who had clear the way—
 Binge.

Their brows were gay, their eyes were bright,
 Caused by the star-bow's silvery light;
 And with each joyous yell was rung,
 The word from off each licker tongue—
 Binge.

From Washington Hall they came all right,
 For there was singing school that night;
 And happliest all around them throng,
 As they passed, singing all alone—
 Binge.

O, shame! the ladies fair all said,
 There must be something ails your head;
 But mischief beamed from out each eye,
 As yet they answered, with a sigh—
 Binge.

Break not the peace, you'll feel it sure
 If beat within the prison door
 You find yourselves ere morning light;
 Each voice replied, with an "all right"—
 Binge.

Beware the peace disturber's doom,
 It soon on you may cast its gloom;
 Thus did the admonition ring,
 As up the street the can did sing,
 Binge.

Oh gracious! what a noise they make,
 They'll keep our pillows awake;
 We cannot have this more than once;
 But from their lips came the response,
 Binge.

Two ladies walking rather late,
 Came hid themselves behind a gate;
 Frightened as down them passed that night,
 This four who sang with all their might—
 Binge.

Don't be alarmed, one of them said,
 We're not affected in the head;
 We will protest; you're not alone;
 To which they added with a groan—
 Binge.

These were not all they did affright,
 As down the street they passed that night
 Another lady, young and fair,
 Was frightened by that noisy air—
 Binge.

And she could not her fears o'ercome,
 But, in one corner of the room,
 She took herself in busy flight,
 From fear of those who sang that night—
 Binge.

But Summer-time is past and gone;
 The chill of Winter's coming on—
 Yet still the voices of the four,
 Sing on, down at the cigar store,
 Binge.

A week or two since, one day when the tide was unusually low, Capt. Cornelius Emmons, bather at the Pavilion Hotel, discovered on the beach in front of the hotel, below ordinary low water mark, the stump of a large tree, proving conclusively that at some period in the past the forest extended considerably beyond the present line of the bluff. The sea has always covered the point where this stump was found, within the recollection of any person now living.—Long Branch News.

Michael Gerrity, who has been missing for some time, was found dead, and very much decomposed, in the woods near his residence at Halestown. He was buried on Tuesday. He was subject to epileptic fits, and it is supposed that he was attacked with one of them, and died without being able to call for assistance.

The Freehold and Jamesburg Railroad Company are making extensive alterations and improvements around their depot in Freehold. A new locomotive house has been erected, and the old unwholesome one taken away. A new turntable has also been erected.

The new bell for St. Peter's Church, Freehold, will be placed in the steeple of the Church, in a few days.

Tom's River is to have a fine hotel, to be built by a joint stock company. Some $21,000 of stock has already been taken.

Save Your Doctor's Bill.—When Dr. Winter's Balsam of Wild Cherry will cure coughs, colds, bleeding at the lungs, and arrest the fall dropper, Consumption, it does more than most physicians can do. The use of a single bottle, costing one dollar, will satisfy the incredulous that they need look no further for the required aid.

ELECTION.

The election in our town passed off with the usual animation, but no disturbance. In the afternoon two men gave proof that they had found some whiskey somewhere, and they were soon gotten out of the way, and all passed on as usual. The workers at the two parties could be seen endeavoring to persuade the doubtful ones to vote for their candidate, and the hearts of some were so diseased that it required the application of greenback salve to enable them to reach the ballot box. We give, as far as we are able the result of the vote:—

JOURNAL AND ADVERTISER.

Mrs. Partington says she gets up every morning at the shrill crow of the chandelier.

Beer drinkers will be pleased to anticipate a choice, new flavor in the lager made from this year's crop of Wisconsin hops.

In proof that Dickens was always in sympathy with the United States, it is said his manuscripts were always written with blue ink, on white paper, and his published works were universally read.

A Wisconsin Sunday school desired to purchase musical instruments for the use of the school, and intrusted a commission to a business man who was going to Milwaukee to buy goods.

A contemporary, evidently overcome by the errors, says that on Friday night last "the lambent pastimes of boreal corrugations" were realized in full.

"Pa, are cannibals people that live on other folks?" "Yes, my dear." "Then, pa, Uncle George must be a cannibal, for ma says he is always living on somebody."

A lady in Oskosh amused herself in church, on Sunday, by counting the different styles of doing up hair, and found fifty-one.

A Christian was brought before a magistrate for an unprovoked assault on a Jew. "What has he done that you should knock him down?" asked the Judge.

How Webster Worked.

In the spring of 1824 Mr. Webster was much concerned in the discussion then going on in the House of Representatives at Washington upon the tariff.

He brought his speech on the tariff to a conclusion as speedily as he could, and hurried home to make such preparation for the great law argument as the shortness of the notice would permit.

He sent for the barber and was shaved; he took a very slight breakfast of tea and crackers; he looked over his papers to see that they were all in order, and tied them up; he read the morning journals to amuse and change his thoughts, and then he went in court and made that grand argument which his Judge Wayne said about twenty years afterward, "released every crack and rive, every lake and harbor in our country from the interference of monopolies."
